touching an inquiry into the knowledge of Divine Myſteries, which in our own time we are ſo far from promoting and improving, that ſeveral of the Learned make it their buſineſs, totally to ſufflaminate and ſtifle it. For the extravagant Author of Chriſtianity not myſterious, is thus confuted. (i) Though we may be ſaid, to have Ideas of God and divine Things, yet they are not immediate or proper ones, but are Conceptions that we frame of them from the things of this World by Analogy and Similitude. So that all the Ideas we at preſent have of the things of another World are no other than a ſort of Types and Figures of things, the real Nature of which is totally obſcur'd from us, and we have no more Notion of them, than a blind Man hath of Light. We may turn and wind all theſe Ideas we have into Ten Thouſand different ſhapes, and yet never make up any likeneſs or ſimilitude of the real Nature of thoſe Objects of another World. But thus to confute an Adverſary, is really to confute and contradict one's ſelf; for if our Ideas of divine things are form'd by Analogy and Similitude, we have otherkins Notices of them than a blind Man hath of Light, and without any turning or winding our Ideas are a Likeneſs and Similitude of the real Nature of the Objects of another World. Τὰ αἰσθητὰ τῶν νοητῶν μιμήματα.

(i) Anſwer to Chriſtianity not Myſter. p. 31, 32, 40, 41, 43.

To make Chriſtianity as myſterious, as the Scholaſtic Theology would have it, this Hypotheſis (touching our Ideas) proceedeth to ſay (k) that we have no Notion at all of the myſterious things of the Goſpel, as they are in themſelves. After they are revealed, they are totally obſcur'd both from our Sences and our Reaſon, as to the real Nature and Properties of them as they are in themſelves. As to the internal Eſſence and real Properties of theſe divine things reveal'd to us from Heaven, we are wholly ignorant of them. We have no Ideas, no Conception of the real Nature and Properties of them, know nothing of them. An attempt therefore to explain them is cenſur'd (l) as the greateſt Folly, becauſe it is impoſſible; and as the greateſt Boldneſs, becauſe it is ſearching into what is hidden from us, and a talking of what we have no Idea. That part of the Chriſtian Myſtery which is intelligible and plain, was ever ſo; and that part which is myſterious (notwithſtanding all vain endeavours) will ever be ſo, till we come to another World. Thus as Controverſies, ſo Myſteries multiply upon us every Day. This way of defending the Scholaſtic Myſteries (inſtead of explaining Myſteries) createth the greateſt Myſteries. For theſe are the greateſt Myſteries of all other; the Chriſtian Religion is the knowledge of the Truth, but doth not give us to underſtand the Truth of divine things (which is totally obſcur'd from us) we have only a ſort of Types and Figures of them. It giveth us, to underſtand the Myſteries of the Kingdom of Heaven, but without giving us to underſtand any thing of their real Nature and Properties; and therefore giveth us ſo to underſtand them, as to be in the main wholly ignorant of them. It copiouſly deſcribeth things of an intelligible and conceivable Nature in the moſt plain intelligible words (as for inſtance, the Kingdom of Heaven) but we can have no Conception of its real Nature and Properties, which yet our Saviour expected from his Diſciples, when he ask'd them, Have ye underſtood all theſe things? By the expounded Parables and Similitudes of the Goſpel (which open the Eye of the Underſtanding) we underſtand nothing of the real Nature and Properties of divine things, nor did the Prophets and Apoſtles underſtand any thing of them, as they are in themſelves by their Apocalyptick Viſions and Repreſentations of them. Divine and humane things, the things of this and of another World, are of one general Nature (ſuch is an earthly and an heavenly King and Kingdom) but we cannot ſo much as underſtand the general Nature of the things of the other World, that cannot at all underſtand their real Nature and Properties. We are not capable of underſtanding the Remiſſion of Sins (or Juſtification) Adoption, Sanctification, Redemption, the new Covenant, the new Creation, the divine Nature, or any other Goſpel-myſteries, at all, as they are in themſelves; and if the Apoſtle ſpendeth a Chapter in deſcribing the real Nature and Properties of a Reſurrection-body, yet we are incapable of forming any Conception of them, as they are in themſelves. There are methods of inveſtigating the true Ideas of things, that are hidden from us, but not of theſe divine things, which muſt be unknown till another World, their real Nature being totally obſcur'd from us in the Chriſtian Religion, which therefore can have no deſign of enriching us with Divine Wiſdom and Knowledge. That Wiſdom which it is in it ſelf, we are not capable of underſtanding, nor is it unto us a comprehenſion of the true Ideas of things, and therefore to us it is no Wiſdom. As it is in us (conſtitutively) it is the Light of intellectual Knowledge, and yet we are in the dark; for the real Nature of divine things is totally obſcur'd from us. It is the Knowledge of the Saint of God-kind of Goods and Excellencies, which cannot be known by us; for unleſs they be known as to their Kind and Quality (their real Nature and Properties) they are not known. It is the Divine Science, the Spiritual Man's Science of divine things, yet the Spiritual Man is of the ſame Character with the Natural Man, He cannot know them. It is a knowing the divine things, ſo as not to be in the main Alien from them and from knowing them, yet every one muſt neceſſarily be ſo far Alien from knowing them, till he cometh to another World. It is a knowing the divine things (not by remote Notices, but) by acquaintance with the things themſelves, which yet cannot be known as they are in themſelves. Although Heaven cometh down into us, and is begun in us, yet the real Nature of the things of the other World is totally obſcured from us. Although God cometh down from Heaven, and converſeth with us in humane Fleſh (ſo that he that hath ſeen him hath ſeen the Father) yet in this World the real Nature and Properties of God are not to be known, no not by his own Kind and Family. They know God, ſo as to know him who is God, who and what he is, that is God (and therefore the Characteriſtick Notices of him) they know God, as he is the Saint of God-kind of God, and the Saint of God-kind of Goods and Excellencies in himſelf and to us, yet as to his real Nature and Properties God is not to be known. His real Nature and Properties being totally obſcur'd in their Religion, it is properly the ignorance and neſcience of God, yet it deſigneth, to give us an underſtanding, to know God, it is fam'd for its excellent noticing God (in all reſpects) and it calleth it ſelf by this venerable Name The Knowledge of God. Theſe are great Myſteries, which have more of Folly and irreligious Boldneſs in them, then there is in truly Zealous and laborious Attempts, to explain thoſe Myſteries, which the Scholaſtic Theology repreſenteth and celebrateth

(k) Ibid. p. 56, 113, 116, 124.

(l) Ibid. p. 55.

celebrateth as unintelligible. Which yet is not ſo bad a Theology, as always to harp upon this harſh String the Unintelligibleneſs of God; oftentimes it magnifieth above all things, and as the root of all Goods (m) τῆς θεωρίας τὸ χρῆμα, the Buſineſs of contemplating and knowing God, and pretendeth unto (n) the certain Knowledge, the ſubtil and accurate Theory of him.

(2.) The Scholaſtick Theology is deſtructive of the due Intelligibleneſs of the Chriſtian Religion by attributing to it ſuch Unintelligibleneſs, which deſtroyeth its being a Science. Every Science is in the main by us clearly intelligible (otherwiſe it cannot be a Science;) if therefore the Chriſtian Theology is both a Science and a Myſtery, it muſt be ſuch a Myſtery, which is in the main clearly intelligible. But ſuch a Myſtery it cannot be, if ſome Scholaſtic Divines rightly define a Myſtery (o) It is a Truth, of which we know ſomething at preſent, though very imperfectly: But are ignorant of a great deal more belonging to it. If the Myſtery of Godlineſs is of this Nature, it cannot be a Science; much leſs can it be a Science, if the real Nature of the divine things that are in it, is totally obſcur'd from us, and we have no more Notion of them than a blind Man hath of Light. If our Light it ſelf is Darkneſs, how great is that Darkneſs? If in the main we are unacquainted with the Myſtery of Godlineſs, how great is our Ungodlineſs? And what becometh of the Nobleneſs of the Chriſtian Theology and the tranſcendent Excellency of it above other Sciences, if in the main it is unintelligible? A Debate there is indeed amongſt the Scholaſtic Divines, whether the Chriſtian Theology be properly a Science or not? The Thomiſts maintain (p) that is is properly a Science, but not perfect in this imperfect State. Others will have it called a Science in the ſtrict Senſe of Ariſtotle, but ſome of them ſay (q) it is a Science of another Nature than Ariſtotle was acquainted with; and others ſay (r) it is a more perfect Habit than a Science. Notwithſtanding therefore this Debate amongſt the Schoolmen (which is no better than a Logomachy) the Chriſtian Theology and Religion in its general Nature muſt be look'd upon as a Science, and in its Specific Nature it is The Knowledge of God as he is the Sanctity Imperial, and in like manner it is The Knowledge of Chriſt as he is the Chriſtianity Imperial. He muſt be conſider'd as he is the Imperial Eſtate of Chriſtianity Imperial, and he is ſuch, not ſingly and ſolitarily, but as a Perſon of the Chriſtian Trinity, in Conjunction with God the Father and the Holy Ghoſt; and conſequently the Knowledge of Chriſt as he is the Imperial Eſtate of Chriſtianity Imperial, is the ſame thing with the knowledge of the Chriſtian Trinity (which is the Imperial Eſtate in Chriſtianity Imperial) and that not only virtually and implicitly, but as being it identically and in reality the ſame thing with it, the acknowledgement of Chriſt (as the Imperial Eſtate of Chriſtianity Imperial) being nothing leſs, nothing elſe than the acknowledgment of the Chriſtian Trinity, which is the Eſſence and Summary of the Chriſtian Faith, as Divines generally ſuppoſe, and as appeareth from the form of Baptiſm (s) and from what ſome Criticks have diſcours'd concerning it. The Chriſtian Theology therefore is of definitive Notion The Science of the Holy Trinity (which is the Chriſtian Creed;) from whence it followeth, that the Chriſtian Trinity is not in the main by us unintelligible, as the Scholaſtic Theology hath made it. And this will further appear, if we compare the Chriſtian Trinity with Trigonometry in Mathematicks; for as if we ſuppoſe Trigonometry, to be in the main unintelligible, there can be no ſuch Science as Geometry or Aſtronomy: So if the Chriſtian Trinity is in the main unintelligible, there can be no ſuch Science as the Chriſtian Theology. In the Exiſtence of God from Eternity there is a great difficulty (becauſe it involveth an Infinitum) yet this Eternity is not in the main unintelligible (for we have a clear Notion of neceſſary Exiſtence and of Duration without a beginning,) but if we ſuppoſe it ſo to be, yet this is only a little exteriour Branch of natural Theology, which (like the Angle of Contact in Geometry that doth not ſpoil the Intelligibleneſs of the Science) doth not hinder Theology from being a clear intelligible Science. But if (the Chriſtian Trinity) the Summary of the Chriſtian Faith is in the main unintelligible, the Chriſtian Theology cannot be thought a clear intelligible Science. God may require of us the belief of that which is by us incomprehenſible in a twofold Senſe: For he may require of us the belief of that, which we cannot have a clear and ſatisfactory Notion of; and he may require of us the belief of that, of which we can have no adequate comprehenſive Knowledge: But it cannot be ſuppoſed, that the Subject of his Science (which we have by his Divine Revelation) is in the main by us unintelligible. Such an Incomprehenſible is inconſiſtent with his Divine Science, and Clemens thinketh it inconſiſtent with the Divine Goodneſs. (t) The Gnoſtick (the wiſe Man) of whom I ſpeak, comprehendeth thoſe things, that ſeem to others incomprehenſible; believing that nothing is incomprehenſible to the Son of God, and therefore nothing is untaught by him; for he that ſuffer'd out of love to us, could with-hold nothing that maketh for the teaching of Knowledge.

(3.) The Scholaſtic Theology is deſtructive of the due Intelligibleneſs of the Chriſtian Religion by making the great Articles of it unintelligible to all that are not School-philoſophers, (u) others cannot have any diſcernment of them. Whereas the great Articles of Chriſtianity are intelligible by all, that underſtand Politicks, Morality, Nobility-learning, Imperial and Subject-eſtates, Government and Laws (which all are naturally adapted to underſtand) if withall they have an holy diſcernment of the Saint of God-kind of Goods and Excellencies. But theſe great Articles as they are repreſented in the Scholaſtical Theology, are not tolerably intelligible by any, that are unacquainted with the Terms and Notions of the School-Doctors, who are (ſurely) much fitter Perſons, to initiate Men into theſe kind of Myſteries than Fiſhermen and Tent-makers. They muſt have the Honour of being the only Myſtagogi, to inſtitute us into ſuch high Myſteries, which are unintelligible without their Terms and Notions, and are as unintelligible with them as without them. For although they pretend (w) to a light in their Theology, which irradiateth and manifeſteth things, yet really they obſcure them by their heterogeneous Notions and Subtilties, and Darkneſs is upon the face of their Deep. They ſay of their

Theology

(m) S. Cyr. c. Jul. l. 5. p. 157, 158.

(n) Περὶ αὐτοῦ γνῶσις ἀπλανὴς, καὶ θεωρία ἰσχνὴ καὶ ἀπεξεσμένη. Ibid.

(o) Animadverſ. on Dr. Sherlock. p. 4.

(p) Gonet. T. 1. Diſp. Proem. Art. 1.

(q) Petav. T. 1. Proleg. c. 8.

(r) Valentia T. 1. Diſp. 1. Qu. 1. Punct. 3.

(s) Voſſ. de Symbol. Diſſ. 1. n. 29. Eraſm. ad Cenſ. Pariſ. Tit. 11.

(t) Ὁ γνωστικὸς δὲ ἐκεῖνος περὶ οὗ λέγω, τὰ δοκοῦντα ἀκατάληπτα εἶναι τοῖς ἄλλοις αὐτὸς καταλαμβάνει· Πιστεύσας ὅτι οὐδὲν ἀκατάληπτον τῷ υἱῷ τοῦ θεοῦ· Ὅθεν οὐδὲ ἀδίδακτον. Ὁ γὰρ δι' ἀγάπην τὴν πρὸς ἡμᾶς παθὼν, οὐδὲν ἂν ὑποστείλαιτο εἰς διδασκαλίαν τῆς γνώσεως. Strom. l. 6. p. m. 458.

(u) Petav. de Trin. l. 6. c 3. S. 1.

(w) Gonet. ſupr. Art. 11.

(x) Ibid.

Theology (x) obſcuriſſima fidei myſteria explicat, (divinæ naturæ relationes & attributa, auguſtiſſimæ Triadis miranda, & Incarnationis ſecreta aperit :) But we find them far better at making than explaining Myſteries, and that after all their brangling Altercations and diſputative Rencounters their Myſteries are as far from being duly explained as at the firſt. He that will take the pains to Conſult theſe obſcure Oracles, to obtain an Explication of Myſteries, it will fare with him, as if he ſhould take pains to climb up an high Hill, in hope to touch the Stars at the top of it, and when he cometh thither, he findeth himſelf as far from touching them as before.

(4.) The Scholaſtic Theology is deſtructive of the due Intelligibleneſs of the Chriſtian Religion by ſpoiling the Intelligibleneſs of Holy Scripture and the reaſonableneſs and congruity of the Chriſtian Religion. For both the Old and New Teſtament are perverted to an Alien ſenſe by Scholaſtic Interpretations, and in great degree Chriſt is not objectively the Wiſdom of God in this Theology. For was it wiſe and reaſonable, that our Saviour ſhould make Prayers to himſelf? Make Satisfaction to himſelf? Take great Care of his Soul, when his Soul was not himſelf? It is highly reaſonable, that the Creator of Man ſhould take care of the Redemption and Recovery of the fallen Man by a Mediator : But that this Creator of Man and the offended Party ſhould himſelf become the Mediator, is a monſtrous incongruity. A mighty aptitudinal reaſonableneſs and congruity there is in oppoſing the Son of God (according to his true Idea) as the Second Adam to the Firſt Adam and to the Prince of the Kingdom of Darkneſs: But there is no ſuch aptitude, reaſonableneſs and congruity in oppoſing one that is the eternal Almighty God to old Adam and the old Serpent. It is highly reaſonable and congruous, that our Saviour-king ſhould be God's High Prieſt; God muſt be the Object of his Miniſtration ; to God he muſt make Oblation and offer a Propitiatory Sacrifice for his People ; and on their behalf he muſt deal with God as their Patron and Advocate ; which ſacerdotal Officiary Dignity is hugely agreeable to the Son of God according to his genuine Idea, but not to ſuch a Son of God as cannot have God for his God or his Imperial Head. In our Redemption there is a duly equal regard to the Glory of God and the Salvation of Men; and ſo in our Saviour's Oeconomy God had a duly equal regard to the advancement of his Son and to our Welfare; which ſort of Oeconomy is hugely agreeable to the Son of God according to his genuine Idea, but not to ſuch a Son of God, that was incapable of any advancement (y) οὐδὲ αὔξησιν ζητεῖ τελειότατος ὤν, nor doth he deſire any increaſe being moſt perfect. But hath the Apoſtle reſpect to ſuch a Son, when he ſaith; Though he were a Son, yet learned he Obedience, by the things which he ſuffer'd : and being made perfect he became the Author of eternal Salvation. And with what Congruity can it be ſaid of ſuch a Son, he was made Perfect through Sufferings? In the Scholaſtic Theology our Saviour's Oeconomy is made to conſiſt of a multitude of Incongruities (many of which will be remark'd hereafter) which ſpoil the Wiſdom and Reaſonableneſs of the Chriſtian Religion.

(y) S. Cyr. c. Jul. l. 8. p. 280. Heb. 2. 10. and 5. 8, 9.

(5.) The Scholaſtic Theology is deſtructive to the due Intelligibleneſs of the Chriſtian Religion by introducing into it ſuch Dogmata that are Contradictions (as unintelligible as a Triangular Square ;) for ſuch is Tranſubſtantiation, the moſt Sacroſanct Dogma of the Church of Rome, and the Myſtery of all her Myſteries, which yet is deſtructive of the certainty both of Sence and Reaſon, involveth in it numerous Contradictions, and is ſo prodigious an abſurdity, as is not to be parallel'd in any Religion. The Romaniſts are ſenſible of its repugnance to their Faculties, and therefore in one of their Manuals this is part of a Prayer at Holy Maſs (z) herein I renounce my Sence and all Man's Underſtanding. It may ſeem immodeſt, to ſay, that in the Scholaſtic Doctrine of the Trinity there are Contradictions, and I am loath, to ſay it : But it is manifeſt, that this Maxim, Quæ ſunt eadem uni tertio, ſunt eadem inter ſe, cannot be deny'd without a Contradiction. Yet the Scholaſtic Theology ſaith, (a) the three Properties (Relations or Perſons) in divinis, are not really diſtinguiſh'd from the Eſſence, but are one and the very ſame thing with it, yet they really differ from one another ; which in this Myſtery is ſingular and wonderful. For infinite and created things this Maxim holdeth ; Quæ ſunt eadem uni tertio ſecundum rem, ſunt eadem inter ſe ſecundum rem : But not in God an infinite Being. Our Minds indeed are diſproportionate to things infinite ; we are ſo far from adequately comprehending them, that we cannot ſo far comprehend infinite number, magnitude, littleneſs, as to have clear and ſatisfactory Apprehenſions of them. Whence we meet with ſeveral ſurprizing difficulties in Geometry (which have their riſe from the infinite diviſibility of Quantity :) But thoſe ſurprizing difficulties involve in them the conſideration of an Infinitum : Whereas in the real diſtinction of the divine Perſons from one another and their Identity with the Eſſence (although that Eſſence is infinite) no ſuch conſideration of an Infinitum is involv'd ; and therefore the difference between finite and infinite is not pertinently alledg'd, to invalidate the truth of this Maxim in Divinis, Quæ ſunt eadem uni tertio ſecundum rem, ſunt eadem inter ſe ſecundum rem. But we will ſuppoſe, that in this Scholaſtic Doctrine of the Trinity and in thoſe ſuprizing difficulties in Geometry there is the ſame conſideration of an Infinitum, yet there is manifeſtly this difference between theſe two Caſes. In thoſe ſurprizing difficulties (the Doctrine of Aſymptotes, incommenſurable Lines and ſuch more) we plainly diſcern, that there is no ſufficient ground for the Charge of a Contradicton, which cannot be ſaid of this Scholaſtic Doctrine of the Trinity.

(z) A Man of devout Prayers fit for all Perſons and Occaſions at Gant. 1670.

(a) Proprietates (vel Relationes) cum eſſentia ipſa una ſunt eademque res, etſi invicem re ipſa diſcrepant ; quod in hoc myſterio ſingulare eſt ac mirable. Petav. de Trin. l. 4. c. 10. S. 5. & l. 3. c. 9. S. 14. Vaſqu. T. 2. Diſp. 122. c. 2. in 1. Thom.

(6.) The Scholaſtic Theology is deſtructive to the due Intelligibleneſs of the Chriſtian Religion, by introducing into it ſuch Dogmata, which we plainly diſcern, not to be of an intelligible Nature, but to be above Reaſon in the ſame Senſe with the Myſtic-platonic firſt Principle. In Theology, Geometry and natural Philoſophy there are ſome things (b) that may be called things above Reaſon, not in the Myſtic-platonic Senſe, but becauſe at a peculiar rate they ſurpaſs our Underſtanding, and are ſo far above Reaſon, that ſome of them are too immenſe for our Underſtanding, others are by us inexplicable, and others of them ſeem to be inconſiſtent with the Body of other Truths. Such are the divine Preſcience, compoſitio continui, Time,

(b) Mr. Boyle of things above Reaſon.

Motion, the Rota Ariſtotelica, the Angle of Contact, and the manner of the Soul's moving the Body. But although theſe Heteroclites (and ſome others of like nature) do at a ſtrange rate perplex and poſe our Underſtanding, and are in great degree to us unintelligible, yet any Man that attentively conſidereth them, may plainly diſcern, that they are of an intelligible nature; and he may as plainly diſcern, that this intelligible nature is wanting in ſeveral of thoſe Objects, which the Scholaſtic Theology propoſeth to our Underſtanding. (c) That there is one (Scholaſtical) Divine Nature or Eſſence common unto three Perſons incomprehenſibly united and ineffably diſtinguiſhed, united in eſſential Attributes, diſtinguiſhed by peculiar Idioms and Relations; all equally united in every Divine Perfection, each different from other in order and manner of Subſiſtence; that there is a mutual inexiſtence of one in all, and all in one, a communication without any deprivation or diminution in the Communication; an eternal Generation and an eternal Proceſſion without Precedence or Succeſſion, without proper cauſality or dependence; a Father imparting his own and the Son receiving his Father's Life, and a Spirit iſſuing from both without any diviſion or multiplication of Eſſence: theſe are Notions which may well puzzle our Reaſon in conceiving how they agree —— upon which we ſhould meditate, not with hope to comprehend, but with diſpoſition to admire, veiling our Faces in the Preſence, and proſtrating our Reaſon at the Feet, of Wiſdom ſo far tranſcending us. (d) By one Subſtance many do underſtand a numerical or individual unity of Subſtance; and by three Perſons they underſtand three diſtinct Subſiſtences in that Eſſence. It is not pretended by theſe, that we can give a diſtinct Idea of Perſon or Subſiſtence, only they hold, it importeth a real diverſity in one from another, and even ſuch a diverſity from the ſubſtance of the Deity it ſelf, that ſome things belong to the Perſon that do not belong to the Subſtance; for the Subſtance neither begetteth, nor is begotten; neither breaths nor proceedeth. This carrieth in it ſomewhat that is not agreeable to our Notions, nor like any thing that we can apprehend. Thoſe ſeverals in theſe Schemes of the Scholaſtick Trinity (which muſt be underſtood Scholaſtically, and as things are underſtood and ſtated in the Scholaſtick Theology) which are not like any thing that we can apprehend, may reaſonably be counted ſuper-intelligibles of the ſame nature with the Platonic firſt Principle, they are not the Objects of any Conception or Intellection (Humane, Angelical or Divine) ſuper-eminent genus intelligibile. This Theology (e) regionem intelligentiæ excedit, tranſcendeth the Region of Intelligence.

(c) Dr. Barrow, a Def. of the B. Trinity on Col. 3. 2.

(d) Biſhop Burnet on the Articles, p. 37.

(e) S. Hilar. de Trinit. l. 2.

XVI. The Name Myſtery (which is the laſt thing remarkable concerning it) implieth, that the matters of the Chriſtian Religion are extraordinary mirandous things. For a Myſtery is τὸ ἀπόῤῥητον ϗ θαυμάσιον, that which is arcane and wonderful. Agreeably whereto the Apoſtle ſaith, Behold, ye deſpiſers, and wonder and periſh: for I work a work in your Days, a work which you ſhall in no wiſe believe, though a Man declare it unto you. The Text ſpeaketh not meerly of the Excæcation and Reprobation of the Jews, but both of their Sin and their Puniſhment (to ſignifie both theſe the Apoſtle accommodateth the words of an ancient Prophet:) their Puniſhment was, wonder and periſh: but their Sin was their Incredulity, they believ'd not the wonderful work of God, which the Apoſtle declared unto them, which was God's raiſing up our Meſſiah, which ſeem'd to the Jews ſo ſtrange and wonderful, that they thought it incredible. The ſame Prophet, that foretelleth their Incredulity, ſaith of the Meſſiah, Iſa. 9. 6. His Name ſhall be called (he ſhall be) wonderful. So the conjunction of his two Natures is called by S. Auſtin, admirabilis mixtura (a wonderful mixture of God and Man) his appearance in the World and in a mean and contemptible guize is wonderful to the height of Miracle; and in reſpect of his miraculous Conception and Birth, his deſcent from Heaven, his Unction, agency of Miracles, his typical and prophetic Atteſtations, his Wiſdom and Sanctity, his Pulchritude and Precioſity, his officiary Dignities, his new Creation and Religion, his Paſſion and Reſurrection, his Excellencies and Benefits, his Humiliation and Exaltation, he is the great wonder of Heaven and Earth. His Love to us was wonderful, they are wonderful things that he hath done for us, his Teſtimonies are wonderful (as the Pſalmiſt ſpeaketh) in his Religion there is a marvellous pleonaſm of Grace (that ſuper-aboundeth) the Immunities and Priviledges, the Dignities, Safeties and Felicities which he hath provided for his People, are ſuperlative to the height of wonder and aſtoniſhment (1 Cor. 3. 21. 23.) his Inheritance overpowereth (f) τῆς ἐν ἡμῖν διανοίας τὸ μέτριον, the mediocrity of our Mind, and is above all that we are able to ask or think. Nor is the Sanctity, to which he calleth his People diſproportionate to their Felicity; for they are called to Glory and Virtue, and from a benighted condition into marvellous Light. Of their heroic paſſive Virtue we have (g) ſuch and ſo great Precepts and Examples, that the greatneſs of them maketh Infidels call in queſtion the truth of our Profeſſion, but with us they are a ground and foundation of Faith. The matters of our Faith are things of Creature-tranſcendent agency, miraculous and wonderful, (h) παράδοξα οὐ μὴν παράλογα, things ſtrange and wonderful, but not abſurd or irrational.

Act. 13. 41.

(f) S. Cyr. c. Jul. l. 8. p. 279.

1 Pet. 2. 9.

2 Pet. 1. 3.

(g) Talia tantaque documenta quorum magnitudo penes nationes detractio fidei eſt, penes nos verò ratio & ſtructio. Tertull.

(h) Epict. Diſſ. l. 4. c. 1.

CHAP. VIII.

1. The Chriſtian Religion is call'd, The Myſtery of Godlineſs, to ſignify that it is the Diſcipline of Univerſal Holineſs and Godlineſs in all reſpects. 2. All things requiſite in the Diſcipline of Univerſal Sanctity and Godlineſs are in the Chriſtian Religion. 3. Inferences from this account of the Chriſtian Religion. 4. Of a great Excellency of this great Myſtery, the Tranſcendence of its Godlineſs. This illuſtrated and proved from certain deſcriptive Notices of it. 5. It is illuſtrated and proved from the general Nature of the Chriſtian Religion. 6. It is illuſtrated and proved from the State of Regeneracy. 7. It is illuſtrated and proved from the Chriſtians good Life. 8. It is illuſtrated and proved from the tranſcendent bad Entertainment which Chriſtianity met with in the World. 9. It is illuſtrated and proved from the Sentiment and Behaviour of the Chriſtians in their Sufferings. 10. It is illuſtrated and proved from the Virtue and Godlineſs requir'd by our Saviour in his Sermon on the Mount.

1. EVery one of the Popular Pagans religious Myſteries, to which the Apoſtle alludeth, was a Pagan Myſtery of Godlineſs; for it was a Myſtery, ſo as to be an Inſtitution of Pagan Holineſs and Godlineſs. Anſwerably whereto the Chriſtian Religion is a Myſtery, ſo as to be the Diſcipline and Inſtitution of real univerſal Sanctity and Godlineſs, and therefore it is denominated The Myſtery of Godlineſs. So Chriſtianiſm conſider'd as conſtitutive is defin'd by ſome, (i) the acknowledgment of Godlineſs leading to Life Eternal. Conſider'd as inſtitutive it is denominated, (k) the Divine and Godly Diſcipline, which is its true and honourary Character. But to be a Myſtery, would be ſmall honour to it, if it was not the Myſtery of Godlineſs: nor would its being the Truth be any great honour to it, if it was not the Truth which is after Godlineſs, Tit. 1. 1. The Doctrine which is according to Godlineſs, 1 Tim. 6. 3. To be the Truth in any Caſe (although there are many inſignificant Truths) is a degree of ennoblement (for Truth recommendeth things, gaineth them reſpect and credit, whereas Falſhood, Error and a Lye is their diſparagement and reproach:) To be a more than vulgar and ordinary ſort of Truth, is an higher degree of Ennoblement (which ſort of Truth the Pagans magnify'd, building an Altar to Truth, (l) ſuppoſing Souls to be fed in the Field of Truth, that the greateſt of the Gods Oromaſdes is in his Body like unto Light, and in his Soul like unto Truth (as the Perſians ſuppos'd) that nothing is more delicious to the Mind of Man than the Light of Truth, intituling Truth the Daughter of Jove (as Pindar) a Queen and the beginning of Virtue, a Fellow-citizen of the Gods, the greateſt of the Gods, ſo great a gift that God can give no greater to Men, a divine thing and the beginning of all Goods to the Gods and Men:) But to be the nobleſt kind of Truth, is the far greateſt Ennoblement, (m) Veritas ſine quâ Vanitas (the Verity without which all things are Vanity) the one truth whereby holy Souls are illuminated, which is the true Daughter of God (Light as He is, pure and uncorrupt, of unſtained Beauty and enraviſhing Pulchritude) and as vital Food to the Soul, without which ſhe droopeth and languiſheth in a famiſh'd condition, but which ſhe taſteth with a delicious reliſh, and whereby ſhe reviveth, hath her new Life, Strength and Vigour, her growth and improvement in the Holy Life. Such is the Truth which Godlineſs is in the conſtitutive parts of it (its Credenda and Agenda, or as it is πίστις καθαρὰ καὶ ὀρθὸς βίος, the holy Faith and the holy Life) that are the ſame with the conſtitutive parts of the Chriſtian Religion, which therefore in this reſpect is the Diſcipline of univerſal Holineſs and Godlineſs. And ſuch it is in many other reſpects. For,

(1.) In the entrance of it it initiateth into univerſal Sanctity and Godlineſs (the turning from all Sin and Wickedneſs to the faithful ſerving God in a Life of Holineſs) whence the entrance into Saving Chriſtianity is not without both laborious and afflictive difficulty, which muſt attend the change of our nature and our whole courſe, and which the Philoſophers found at an extravagant rate in the change of their courſe of Life. (n) For when Sextius the Roman had abandon'd his Dignities for Philoſophy, at firſt he found ſo much trouble in it, that for meer vexation of Mind he had like to have thrown himſelf into the Sea. So Diogenes at his firſt embracing his ſtrict Philoſophic Life, when he ſaw the Athenians revelling, banquetting and making merry, and reflected upon that courſe of Life which he had undertaken, how diſconſolate and troubleſome it was, began to repent himſelf, that he had become a Philoſopher, and was ready to relapſe to the common way of living. All excellent things at firſt are difficult and unpleaſant, and ſuch is the beginning of Godlineſs (which is the Godly Man's kind of Virtue) Habits are not eaſily chang'd, there is no death (nor dying to Sin) without ſome pain. (o) A Man becometh not a Chriſtian ἀκαμάτως, without labour. There is difficulty therefore in the Chriſtian Initiation, becauſe it is an entrance into Godlineſs, anſwerable to the Gentiles Initiation into the Eleuſinian Myſteries, (p) Aditum prius cruciant, they make the entrance difficult and full of trouble. So the entrance into Godlineſs and the emerging from under the domination of Sin is by a bleeding Repentance (which doth not leave Men in their Sins and in their Blood) by Sorrows and conflicts with ghoſtly Enemies and violent Temptations, by breaking through many Difficulties and Impediments (from within and without) by breaking with Sin entirely and for ever and duely parting with this whole World, by rectifying crooked Nature, ſubduing unruly Luſts and Paſſions, by ſerious Devotion, Care and Circumſpection, a religious ſtrictneſs and ſeverity of Life, and a diligent purſuing Holineſs notwithſtanding all Inclinations and Reluctances of the Fleſh, and all ſollicitations and provocations to the contrary.

(2.) In the Eſſence of it, It is the Diſcipline of univerſal Holineſs and Godlineſs. (q) Learn and obſerve the Evangelical Converſation, the exact government of the Eyes, the bridling the Tongue, the ſubjugating

(i) Ἐπίγνωσις εὐσεβείας εἰς ζωὴν αἰώνιαν ὁδηγοῦσα. Phavorin.

(k) Ἔνθεος καὶ εὐσεβὴς παιδεία. Euſeb. pr. Ev. l. 1. c. 4.

(l) Plotin. En. 1. l. 3. c. 4. Gothofred. Exercit. in 1 Tim. 3. 15. Veritatis luce menti hominis nihil dulcius. Cic. Acad. 2. Θυγάτηρ Διός, Pindar.

(m) S. Aug. in Pſal. 11. & T. 9. Soliloq. c. 13. Pabulum animæ incredibili quadam jucunditate perfuſum. Lactant. l. 5. c. 1.

(n) Plut. de profect. p. 77.

(o) Macar. Hom. 27.

(p) V. Herald. in Arnob. p. 130.

(q) Μάθε, διδάχθητι εὐαγγελικὴν πολιτείαν, ὀφθαλμῶν ἀκρίβειαν, γλώσσης ἐγκράτειαν, σώματος δουλαγωγίαν, φρόνημα ταπεινὸν, ἐννοίας καθαρότητα, ἐγγὺς ἀφανισμόν. ἀγγαρευόμενος προσίθει, ἀποστερύμενος μὴ δικάζε, μισύμενος ἀγάπα, διωκόμενος ἀνέχε, βλασφημύμενος παρακάλει. νεκρώθηλι τῇ ἁμαρτίᾳ, συσαυρώθηλι τῷ Χριςῷ, ὅλην τὴν ἀγάπην μετάθες ὅπὶ τ̃ κύριον ἀλλὰ χαλεπὰ ταῦτα· τί ἢ τῶν ἀγαθῶν εὔκολον; Τίς καθεύδων τρόπαιον ἔςησε; τίς τρυφῶν κ̀ καταυλύμενος τοῖς τ̃ καρτερίας ςεφάνοις κατεκοσμήθη; ὐδεὶς μὴ δραμὼν ἀνείλετο τὸ βραβεῖον. πόνοι γεννῶσι δόξαν, ἱδρῶτες προξενῦσι ςεφάνυς. S. Baſil. Hom. 13. p. 484.

jugating the Body, the lowly Sentiment, the purity of Thought, the extinction of Anger. If any compell thee to go a Mile, add thereto; if any defraud thee, make not uſe of a Court of Judicature; being hated, love; being perſecuted, ſuffer it; being reviled, intreat. Be dead to ſin, be crucify'd with Chriſt, transfer thy whole love upon the Lord. But theſe are difficult things you will ſay. And what is there of Mundane Goods that is eaſie? Who is there that ſleeping ever rais'd a Trophee? Who ever deliciating and making merry was adorn'd with the Crowns of Tolerance? None but he that runneth getteth the Prize. Labours produce Glory, Pains uſher in Crowns. Through many Tribulations we muſt enter into the Kingdom, but theſe Tribulations the Felicity of the Kingdom of Heaven ſucceedeth, whereas the labours of Sins the pain and ſadneſs of Hell ſucceedeth. Such a (r) διδασκαλεῖον τ̃ θείας ἀρετῆς, School of Divine Virtue is Chriſtianity inſtitutive in the Eſſence of it; and Chriſtianity conſtitutive conſiſteth in being (s) ςρατιώτης Χριςῦ, ἀθλητὴς ἐυσεβείας, a Soldier of Chriſt, a Champion or Wreſtler of Godlineſs. He that pretendeth, to be a Chriſtian, pretendeth, to be a Diſciple of the Diſcipline of univerſal Sanctity and Godlineſs, to learn and follow it; and if in the main he doth not learn and follow it, he is in the main an Alien. (t) Si & aliud jam non Chriſtianus. (u) They that live not as Chriſt hath taught, γνωριζέσθωσαν μὴ ὄντες Χριςιανοὶ, let them be known, to be no Chriſtians (no Diſciples) although with their Tongues they profeſs his Doctrine.

(r) J. Mart. Apol. 1. p. 42.
(s) S. Baſil. ſupr.
(t) Tertull. Apol. c. 44.
(u) J. Mart. Apol. 2. p. 63.

(3.) It is the Diſcipline of univerſal Sanctity and Godlineſs in the ſubject-matter of it, which is all Godlineſs (the comprehenſion of it and of what belongeth to it) nothing that is not ſo. For in this reſpect it tranſcendeth all Humane Inſtitutions of Virtue and all falſe Religions, there is no allay or embaſing mixture of Wickedneſs and Ungodlineſs in Chriſt's Religion.

Quicquid tam ſancta condidit manus, cœlum eſt.

Nor doth it inſtitute Men, to place their Religion in notional knowledge, in empty profeſſion, in diſputative Opinions (and mighty Animoſities about them) in things of little value, frigid humane Inſtitutes, little Singularities of Sects and Parties, enthuſiaſtick heights and heats of Fancy and Paſſion, Humane Morality, Superficial Formalities and outſide Obſervances, but the one thing that it inſiſteth upon, and concerneth it ſelf about, is, (w) γεωργεῖν τὴν ἐυσέβειαν, to plow and ſow and till Godlineſs.

(w) Gr. Naz.

(4.) It is the Diſcipline of Univerſal Sanctity and Godlineſs in the efficacy and effect of it, that which was eminently conſpicuous in the firſt times of Chriſtianity, when all over the World (x) Chriſtian Churches were planted conſiſting of thoſe that were converted ἀπὸ μυρίων ὅσων κακῶν, from Evils innumerable, from Uncleanneſſes, Injuſtices, Intemperance, Superſtition, contempt of God and a colluvies of Wickedneſs. Philoſophy was of little avail for the due reforming the Souls and Lives of Men, one Phædon and Polemo were reclaim'd by it from a luxurious Life, who yet remain'd Heathen Ungodly Sinners, as they were before. And ſuch would the Philoſophers have been, if they had liv'd according to their own Precepts; whereas for the moſt part (y) cum eorum vita mirabiliter pugnat oratio, their Doctrine and their Life were marvellouſly repugnant. But Chriſt's Religion is productive of the Godlineſs which it teacheth, at the riſe of it thouſands at once were converted by it from a bad Religion and an evil Life and chang'd into other kind of Men. (z) Since Chriſt appear'd amongſt Men, they began to forſake the worſhip of Idols, the Oracles ceaſed, the Poets, Gods and Heroes began to be contemned, Magick became out of requeſt, Mankind were ſet free from the Domination of Demons, multitudes of Societies of Men are perſuaded to deſpiſe things temporal and look at the things eternal, the Fornicators become Chaſt, the Man-killers wear Swords no more, the Timerous become Manly, the barbarous Nations lay aſide their Inhumanity, become pacifick, have forſaken their Country-Gods, abandon'd their ferine and barbarous Cuſtoms, and when they hear the Doctrine of Chriſt, turn from War to Agriculture, from Swords to Prayers; the Greeks and Barbarians are no more in War and Hoſtility, but they that are diſcipled to Chriſt, maintain a virtuous Warfare againſt the Devil, that they may be chaſt in their Youth, patient in Trials, hardy in Labours, bear Revilings and Defraudations, and (which is marvellous) they deſpiſe Death and become Martyrs of Chriſt. His Apoſtles with great power (a) changed the Dead into Living, Sinners into the Juſt, the Blind into Seeing. His Religion maketh Men alive unto God, ſetteth them free from thoſe fleſhly Luſts, that bear ſway over the reſt of Mankind, maketh them holy at the very Heart, whence they naturally abhor that which is evil, and affect that which is good, the love of God is the inmoſt conſtitution of their Soul, their care and their courſe is to ſerve him, and out of dutiful regard to him, to practiſe univerſal Righteouſneſs and to ſin no more.

(x) Orig. c. Celſ. l. 1. p. 21, 53. l. 3. p. 128.
(y) Cic. Tuſc. 2.
(z) Athanaſ. de Incarn. Verb. T. 1. p. 73. Com. Euſeb. pr. Ev. l. 1. c. 4.

(a) Μετετίθεσαν νεκρὺς εἰς ζῶντας, ἁμαρτωλὺς εἰς δικαίυς, πηρὺς εἰς βλέποντας. S. Chryſoſt. T. 6. p. 627.

(5.) It is the Diſcipline of Univerſal Holineſs and Godlineſs in the End, Deſign and Buſineſs of it, which is to ſave ungodly Sinners from all Ungodlineſs and Wickedneſs (the Sin of it and the puniſhment of it) and to make them truly Holy and Godly initially, progreſſively, conſummately and in perfection. Throughout the Goſpel of God the Voice of Godlineſs is heard, injoyning, inculcating, admoniſhing, exhorting, to repent and be converted, that your Sins may be blotted out, to awake out of ſleep and ariſe from the dead, to caſt off the Works of Darkneſs, deny all Ungodlineſs and Worldly Luſts, lay apart all filthineſs and ſuperfluity of naughtineſs, depart from all Iniquity, to cleanſe, purifie, mortifie, crucifie, to abhor that wich is evil, to be dead unto Sin, and to live unto God, not to be conformed to this World, to ſow to the Spirit, to abſtain from fleſhly Luſts, to reſiſt the Devil, to be the doers of Righteouſneſs, to do and ſuffer the Will of God, to be obedient and to pleaſe God, to have a good Conſcience, to walk in the light and honeſtly as in the Day, to ſhine as Lights in the World, to walk in all good Works, not to defile our Garments, to glorifie God in Body and Spirit, to purſue Holineſs and to be holy in all manner of Converſation, to live godly in Chriſt Jeſus and to be his faithful followers, to grow and thrive in the holy life, to be vigilant, zealous, diligent, fervent in Godlineſs, and to perfect Holineſs in the fear of God. The end of publiſhing his Goſpel to the Gentiles was, to open their Eyes, to turn them from Darkneſs to Light, and from the power of Satan unto God, that they may receive forgiveneſs of Sins and inheritance among them which are ſanctified. So God will have his Goſpel and Chri-

Act. 26. 18.

ſtian Churches every where in the World (b) ὑπὲρ τῆς τῶν ἀνθρώπων ἐπιστροφῆς καὶ διορθώσεως, for the converſion and reformation of Men. So Chriſt came into the World, to ſave ungodly Sinners (to ſave them from being ungodly Sinners in ſtate and in fact) Godlineſs is the Subject-matter of his Sermons and occaſional Diſcourſes, his holy Life was deſign'd to be a perfect pattern of Holineſs and Godlineſs, the End of his conditional Promiſes and the threatnings of his holy Law, and of his Sacramental Initiations is Godlineſs, which was alſo deſign'd in his Paſſion and Crucifixion. For his death was deſign'd, to be the pattern of ours and the cauſe of ours, that we ſhould die to Sin, as he died for Sin. And who will not kill the Sin that killed his Saviour? and forſake Sin that was ſo exemplarily puniſh'd in the Son of God? who will not anſwer prodigious love with love again, or refuſe to be his Servant, that hath over-bought him, and paid for him more than he was worth? who can find in his Heart, to fruſtrate the End of Chriſt's Sufferings (to make his Blood to be ſpilt in vain) or crucifie the Son of God again? Gal. 1. 4. Luk. 1. 74. 1 Pet. 2. 24. Tit. 2. 14. He gave himſelf for our Sins, that he might deliver us from this preſent evil World (by calling us out of the World and ſaving us from the Sins and Puniſhments thereof) that we being no longer under the Domination of our Ghoſtly Enemies might ſerve him in Righteouſneſs and true Holineſs; that we being dead to Sin might live to Righteouſneſs, therefore he bare our Sins in his own Body on the Tree; and that he might redeem us from all Iniquity (as being no longer unregenerate Sinners under the condemning and the commanding power of Sin) and purifie unto himſelf a peculiar People. Eph. 5. 25, 26, 27. He gave himſelf for his Church, that he might ſanctifie and cleanſe it, and might preſent it to himſelf a glorious Church; that there might be no blemiſh in his Spouſe, not any Freckle in her Face, or any Mole in her Body, not any Defilement or Deformity. His Reſurrection and Aſcenſion alſo were deſign'd to promote Godlineſs; for all that will be his Religioniſts, are thereby oblig'd in ſociety with him and conformity to him, to riſe to newneſs of Life, and to dwell in Heaven in Mind and Affection; ſo that Godlineſs is deſign'd throughout the whole of our Saviour's œconomy. The Grace of God alſo in the Goſpel-œconomy is deſign'd to excite Gratitude, and is a mighty obligation to an holy Life. And the End of a Chriſtian's calling is Godlineſs, 1 Theſſ. 4. 7. All things in Chriſtianity conſpire in a ſubſerviency to this great End and Deſign, to promote Godlineſs.

II. In the Chriſtian Religion there are all things requiſite, to conſtitute it the Diſcipline of Univerſal Holineſs and Godlineſs. In ſuch an Inſtitution (becauſe of the degenerate ſtate of Mankind) there muſt be,

(1.) An Expiation of Sin. For the ſtate of Holineſs and Godlineſs is the ſtate of Remiſſion of Sins and of Society with God, with whom according to the Senſe and Inſtitutes both of Jews and Gentiles no Communion is to be had by Sinners, nor is his Favour to be obtain'd without a purgation, luſtration and expiation of their Guilt and Defilement. Heb. 9. 22. Lev. 16. 30. and ch. 12. 7. Amongſt the Jews almoſt all things were purged with Blood, thereby they were made clean from their Sins, that they might be the holy People and the holy Worſhippers. The Gentiles Expiatory Sacrifices were called, (c) ἁγνιστικὰ & καθαρτικὰ, cleanſing and purgative, and by theſe Luſtrations they ſuppos'd themſelves (d) to gain the Society and Benevolence of their Gods. Agreeably whereto an Expiation is provided for Chriſtian Believers, in their Religion, a purgation from all their foul Criminality, a Laver for Sin and for Uncleanneſs (the King's Bath of Chriſt's Blood, as ſome call it) an Expiatory Sacrifice that hath made an end of Sin, Dan. 9. 24. ſo that nothing more remaineth to be done for the expiation of it: Whereas the Legal Sacrifices could not cleanſe from Sin at all as to the Soul-eſtate, nor as to Externals ſave only for a time. For every Prieſt ſtandeth daily miniſtring and offering oftentimes the ſame Sacrifices Heb. 10. 11. (they were frequently to be repeated) therefore they did not make a full and final Expiation of Sin as to Externals. Whence the Apoſtle inferreth, that they can never take away Sins. Heb. 10. 1, 2, 3, 4. Spiritually they can never take them away at all; and as to Externals they cannot take them quite away, nor make the Religioniſt perfect, for the Expiation of Sin by the Legal Sacrifices being hugely defective, the Religioniſt could not be perfect (but muſt be lamentably defective) as to the buſineſs of having his Sins expiated. Thoſe Sacrifices which were offered Year by Year continually, could not make the comers thereunto perfect. For then would they not have ceaſed to be offered? becauſe that the Worſhippers once purged ſhould have had no more Conſcience of Sins (in the legal way of ſucceſſional ſinning and ſucceſſionally expiating Sin.) But in thoſe Sacrifices there is a remembrance again made of Sins every Year. For it is not poſſible, that the Blood of Bulls and Goats ſhould take away Sins. But by Chriſt's Sacrifice his Believers are cleanſed from Sin as to their Soul-eſtate, from the guilt of deadly Sins, from the puniſhment of thoſe deadly Sins, from the ſenſe of that guilt, from the fear of that puniſhment, and he hath made a full and perfect Expiation of the Sins of his People, his Sacrifice cleanſeth them throughout all Times and Ages (needeth not to be reiterated, nor do they need any other Expiatory Sacrifice) they are in the uncondemnably ſinleſs eſtate, and are not in any reſpect defective (but are perfect) as to the buſineſs of having their Sins expiated. For by one Offering he hath for ever perfected Heb. 10. 14. (as to the Expiation of Sin) them that are ſanctified, or made Saints.

(2.) In the Diſcipline of univerſal Sanctity and Godlineſs there muſt be the perfect rule of Righteouſneſs; which may be denominated Perfect in various Senſes, and in various Degrees: But in this place by the perfect rule of Righteouſneſs; I mean, a rule of Righteouſneſs, that is perfect, ſo far as is requiſite, to inſtitute us to true and perfect Righteouſneſs and Holineſs. Such a perfect rule of Righteouſneſs is not to be found in the Philoſophy of the Gentiles, nor in the Law of Nature, nor in the original Law of God, nor in the Inſtitution of Moſes and the Prophets, nor in any Inſtitution ſave only in the Chriſtian Religion, which therefore is peculiarly of this Excellency, It is not in any reſpect partially and defectively, but in all reſpects plenarily the Diſcipline of Sanctity and Godlineſs. Such a Rule it is (as to all religious Faith and Practice) as ſome have defin'd (e) a Rule is not capable of addition or diminution. But of the Law of Righteouſneſs as it was delivered by Moſes and the Prophets, the Fathers ſay (f) that Chriſt doth, adimplere (ἀναπληροῦν) extendere

(b) Orig. c. Celſ. l. 3. p. 128.

(c) Grot. de Satisf. c. 10.

(d) Jambl. de Myſt. l. 1. c. 13.

(e) Ὁ κανὼν οὔτε πρόσθεσιν, οὔτε ἀφαίρεσιν δέχεται. S. Chryſoſt. Hom. 12. in 3. Philip.

(f) V. S. Chryſoſt. in Matth. p. 107, 110, 111. Grot. de J. B. ac P. l. 1. c. 2. S. 6. Dr. Ham. Pract. Cat. l. 2. S. 3. Mal. in Mat. 5. 21. Bp. Tayl. Duct. Dub. B. 2. c. 2. r. 4. Suar. de Leg. l. 10. c. 2. n. 15.

extendere, dilatare, ampliare, ſupplere quod minus habet, perficere, augere, fill up, extend, dilate, enlarge it, ſupply what was deficient, perfect, increaſe it; and in ſuch Senſe they underſtand the words of our Saviour, I am not come to deſtroy (the Law or the Prophets) but to fulfil. So our Saviour's giving of Laws is called πλήρωσις, ἐπίτασις, τελείωσις, a filling up, extending, perfecting the Moſaic Moral Precepts; as the prohibition of Anger, of an unchaſt Look, of ſwearing and the Commandment of loving Enemies, are a Completion and Perfection of the prohibition of Murder, Adultery, Perjury, and of the Commandment of loving our Neighbour. So in reſpect of all other Laws this is μειζόνων ἐντολῶν καιρός, a ſeaſon of greater Precepts than were before; we have καινὰ ϗ νέα παραγγέλματα καὶ φιλοσοφώτερα, new Commandments and of an higher Philoſophy. The Law of Chriſt (ſaith Tertullian) is the neceſſary Supplements to the Diſcipline of the Creator. All which Sayings of the Ancients touching the imperfection of the Diſcipline of the Old Teſtament are unexceptionably true, if they be underſtood reſpectively to the inſtituting us; if the imperfection of it be ſo interpreted and to this Senſe: That notwithſtanding the holy ſpiritual Law that is in it, yet it is far from being ſo perfect, as is requiſite, to inſtitute us to true and perfect Righteouſneſs and Holineſs. For the Letter of the Law doth ſufficiently inſtitute Men to the Civil-religious, but not to the Spiritual-religious obſervance of it; nor is it ſufficient, to inſtitute Men to the Spiritual-religious obſervance of the Law as ſuch, but they muſt be inſtituted to the Spiritual-religious obſervance of it, as the Spiritual-religious obſervance of it is the Religion of Saving Grace. Nor is it ſufficient to inſtitute Men only to that Spiritual-religious obſervance of it, which was the Religion of Saving Grace in the Old Teſtament-times, but they muſt be inſtituted to that Spiritual-religious obſervance of it, which is the Religion of Saving Grace in the New Teſtament-times. And thus our Saviour (g) τὰ τῦ νόμυ προςάγματα πρὸς τὴν εὐαγγελικὴν πολιτείαν μετερρύθμιζε, hath transform'd and chang'd the Precepts of the Law into an Evangelical Inſtitution of Life, which is a new Religion, and as to the inſtituting us a new Law (a Law of Chriſt-like Sanctity and Benignity) which inſtituteth us to ſuch high and holy Duties and degrees of Duty, as no Diſcipline of the Old Teſtament doth inſtitute us to, ſo far as is needful for our Sanctity and Salvation. For ſo it doth not inſtitute us unto any of thoſe high and holy Duties and Virtues, which our Saviour requireth in his Sermon on the Mount, nor to become Citizens of the new Kingdom of God, to abandon the Kingdom of Darkneſs, to be faithful new Covenanters, to paſs from Death to Life, to be regenerate into vital Sanctity, to live the life of Faith, Hope and Charity, to godly Sorrow, to Mortification, Self-denial, bearing the Croſs, to be crucified to the World, to love Chriſtians as Chriſtians (a Branch of duly extenſive Love to our Neighbour which Chriſt only teacheth) to lay down our Life for the Brethren, to manage the holy Warfare, to avoid Scandal, to bear with the Infirmities of the weak, to do every thing in the Name of Chriſt, to glory in his Croſs, to wait for him from Heaven, to pray for the Holy Spirit and to bring forth the Fruits of it, and to be the holy Worſhippers of the New Teſtament; whereas the Old Teſtament is in great part an Inſtitution of a luggage of external Ritualities, which is one of its great Imperfections. (h) Ἐν τῇ καινῇ νόμοι μυρίοι ϗ περὶ πολλῶν μειζόνων πραγμάτων, in the New Teſtament there are innumerable Laws and touching many higher and greater matters then in the Law. The Chriſtian way of good Practice therefore is the perfect way, as perfect is oppos'd to the culpably deficient (in ſome reſpect ſuch) and therefore it is the perfect, becauſe it is not the culpably deficient. For that is accounted perfect (i) cui nihil deeſt. So in Scripture Perfect is oppos'd to that which is lacking and deficient. Jam. 1. 14. 1 Theſſ. 3. 10. 1 Job. 4. 18. Perfectum is oppos'd to that which is ex parte. 1 Cor. 13. 10. So when a young Man ſaith, What lack I yet? Our Saviour anſwereth, If thou wilt be perfect (not lack any thing neceſſary to Life eternal) Matth. 19. 20, 21. ſo perfect is oppos'd to that which is culpably deficient, when our Saviour requireth of his Diſciples τὶ περισσὸν, that which is more than others do; others love thoſe that love them, but his Diſciples muſt love and do good to Enemies; the former is the culpably deficient way, the latter is the perfect way of good Practice. Be ye perfect (of the Chriſtian way of good Practice) even as your Father which is in Heaven, is perfect. Matth. 5. 48. So in J. Mart. (k) τέλειον γενέσθαι, to be made perfect, ſignifieth, to be made a Chriſtian, the Chriſtians way of good Practice being the high and perfect way, as their Religion (in this and every other Senſe of the word Perfect) is the perfect rule of Righteouſneſs.

(3.) In the Diſcipline of univerſal Sanctity and Godlineſs there muſt be duly perfect Notices of what is Virtue and Godlineſs, of the Objects which it is converſant about, and of all things requiſite thereto. For the general and generally ruinous Diſeaſe of Mankind is the criminal blindneſs of their Mind in miſtaking Vice for Virtue, ſinful for lawful and laudable, Superſtition for true Religion, the ſhews and appearances of things for the Truths and Realities, and the ſemblance of Righteouſneſs for the true Righteouſneſs and Holineſs. In Errour and in Evil there are ſome glimmerings and appearances of Good (elſe they would not be choſen or deſired) and ſo folly is entertained, becauſe it carrieth a ſhew of Wiſdom. Col. 2. 22. (l) As the way of Wiſdom hath ſomething like to Folly: So this hath ſomething like to Wiſdom; and as it hath manifeſt Vices, ſo it hath ſomething like to Virtue, a certain ſemblance and ſhew of Righteouſneſs. To contemn Religion and the Fear of God (ἐκ φαυλισμὸς τῶν θείων, as Joſephus calleth it) carrieth a ſhew of Wit and Gallantry (whence many are tempted to Atheiſm;) Chriſtian Patience and Magnanimity (in loving and forgiving Enemies, bearing Injuries and turning the other Cheek to the ſmiter) carrieth a ſhew of Puſillanimity; a Laodicean lukewarmneſs and neutrality carrieth a ſhew of Prudence and Moderation; in ſhew and appearance there is weakneſs and ignominy in Chriſt's Croſs, his Perſon is contemptible Humanity, his Life is meanneſs of Spirit, his Sacraments are mean Elements, his Goſpel is the fooliſhneſs of preaching, his mortify'd Followers are the forlorn and miſerable, the mundane Bravo's (in their ruff and gallantry) are the only happy Men. And as the Heathen took the Sun for the great God, becauſe he appeareth in mighty Splendor and Bravery: So for the ſame Reaſon Mankind are the World's Admirers and Lovers. By ſhews of a worldly Happineſs (g Jobius ap. Phot. Cod. 222. Col. 584.

(h) S Chry- ſit.

(i) Petav. T. 1. l. 6. c. 7. S. 1. perfectio linguæ noſtræ ſanctæ requirit, ut in illa nihil deſideretur. Coſri p. 426.

(k) Grot. Not. in loc.

(l) Sicut via ſapientiæ habet aliquid ſimile ſtultitiæ: ita hæc habet aliquid ſimile ſapientiæ; & ut habet vitia manifeſta, ſic habet aliquid quod ſimile eſſe videatur virtuti, imaginem quandam ſpeciemque juſtitiæ. Lactant. l. 6. c. 7.

(which is but Gullery and Impoſture) by ſhews of Sanctimony (fallacious Specioſities) they are deceiv'd to their Prejudice; for (m) the origine of all their Tragedies is their following τὸ φαινόμενον, the ſhews and appearnces of things (n) and therefore the principal buſineſs of a Philoſopher (a wiſe Man) is δοκιμάζειν τὰς φαντασίας, to examine ſhews and appearances (as people examine Money to diſcern what is genuine from counterfeit) ἔσω βλέπειν, to look within them, ἀπογυμνῦν τὰ ἀξιοπιςὰ τὰ πράγματα, to ſtrip naked the things that ſeem to deſerve great reſpect; for (o) as the King of Egypt cheated the Philoſopher with a counterfeit Pomegranate (made of Wax) ſo Mankind cheat themſelves (as Paul did in his Unregeneracy) with an illegitimate kind of Virtue, Goodneſs and Righteouſneſs. (p) Umbra eſt & imago juſtitiæ, quam illi juſtitiam putaverunt. Humility doth not ſignifie the ſame thing to a Chriſtian and to a creeping Phariſee (q) that placeth his great Humility in not lifting up his Foot clearly from the Ground in his going. Chriſtians ſay (r) as any Man is holier and fuller of holy deſire, ſo much he is the greater weeper in Prayer: (s) But from the Virtue of a Stoick and a Pythagorean nothing is more Alien, than to be a Mourner. (t) If the People that get their livelyhood by their Labour, did leave off their Calling, to learn of a Philoſopher τί ποτέ ἐςι τὸ δίκαιον, what is juſt and unjuſt, ſuch People would die and periſh by Famine, before they could learn it: But it is not thus with us Chriſtians, Chriſt hath taught us, what is Juſtice (and every other Virtue) ἐν βραχέσι καὶ σαφέσι ῥήμασιν, in ſhort and clear Expreſſions. Himſelf is the only accompliſh'd Teacher of the Science of Sanctity, that throughly inſtituteth his Religioniſts, to diſcern the things that differ and to approve the things that are excellent, furniſheth them with duly perfect Notices of Vice and Virtue, Sin and Sanctity, of God and his Service, of Satan and his Kingdom (the inviſible Objects that Virtue is converſant about) of their Diſeaſes and their Cure, their Way, their Work and their End (things requiſite to be known in Order and Virtue to Godlineſs) and of the final iſſue of Godlineſs and Ungodlineſs.

(4.) In the Diſcipline of univerſal Sanctity, Righteouſneſs and Godlineſs, there muſt be the mightieſt Motives and inducements to Godlineſs; ſuch as may reaſonably prevail with all Men, to chuſe it, purſue and practiſe it at any rate (notwithſtanding all its Incumbrances and Impediments) to part with all things that come in Competition with it, their Eaſe and their Pleaſures, their ſenſitive Paradiſe and their ſecular Glories, for the Cares and Labours, and Sorrows and Sufferings (a Fleſh-diſpleaſing courſe of Life) which it requireth, accounting all things Vanity but Sanctity and Piety. So the Stoicks inſtitute Men to Virtue by ingendring in them an high and rapturous Eſtimation of it and Affection for it. (u) Hujus quadam ſuperſtitione teneantur: hanc ament: cum hac vivere velint, ſine hac nolint. If their Virtue had been Godlineſs, their method of Inſtitution and their rapturous Elogies of Virtue had been Rational and Religious; for Holineſs and Godlineſs is the choice Saint of God-kind of Good, that differeth toto genere from other Goods (the ſorry, common and external kind of Goods) is the only Good in compariſon and the only Good that maketh Men good, the Good that cannot be bad, but is neceſſarily and univerſally Good as to God and Men and their own Souls (whereas the common Goods may be common Miſchiefs to themſelves and to the World) the Good without which nothing elſe will be eventually good to them (all will be Snare and Sin and Ruin) the abſolutely neceſſary Good (without which there is no Being, no deſireable, no tolerable Being) the Good that turneth all things into Good, that maketh Loſſes Gains, Croſſes Comforts, and Diſgrace Glorious (it turneth all things into Gold) the Good that vanquiſheth the deadly Enemies and the World's Evils (maketh the Poſſeſſors of it Conquerors at a ſublimer rate than any worldly Conquerours) the Good that ſaveth from all the deadly Evils and the real Evils, and ſetteth Men beyond the Power of being hurt (for all things co-operate for their Good and Welfare) the pure ſinleſs Good, wherein there is nothing of vileneſs or villainy, of turpitude or deformity, of foul ſenſuality or ſelfiſh baſeneſs or crooked partiality (but the whole of it is irreprehenſibly amiable, pure and clean, ennobling and felicitative to the Soul) the Good that is perfectly oppoſite to the criminal Evil of Sin and Wickedneſs (which is the true Evil, the direful atrocious Evil, the only Evil in compariſon, and the All of Evil in it ſelf and the effects of it, the Evil that maketh the evil Ones, and the World the evil World, that is the true infamy, beggary and ſlavery, that polluteth and undoeth the Soul, and maketh her poor and miſerable, and wretched, blind and naked, and in the Nature, demerit and penal Effects of it is an infinite Evil) the Good that ſaveth from all the criminal and penal Evils (and from the momentary Labours, Sorrows and Sufferings which it requireth) the Good that is the prime fundamental Good, to which all ſpiritual and eternal premiant Goods are conſequent and all promiſed temporal Goods, (1 Tim. 4. 8.) the Good which if it took place would be the ſource of immenſe Goods to the publick, and the cure of its Evils, would make holy and happy Societies, holy and happy Times (a golden Age in the World) the Good that entitleth to the whole Eſtate of God and the immenſe Felicities of his People, to an inviolable Bleſſedneſs here and hereafter (as there is an Hell for the Ungodly, who are depriv'd of theſe unfathomable Goods and ſubjected to the contrary Evils) the Good in the comprehenſion whereof is that vaſt variety of Goods, which are the true and Divine-kind of Goods, the true Learning, Light and Life, Health and Pulchritude, Eaſe and Reſt, Safety and Liberty, Peace and Friendſhip, Nobility and Honour, Treaſure and Pleaſure (the ſolid and ſubſtantial Goods of which ſenſitive Goods are but ſhadows) the Good whoſe affluence and variety of Goods are ſuch as know no want of Good nor any diſparaging Properties (for the Riches that are here, are the Goods of the Kingdom, the Honour that is here, is Alliance with God, a divine Nature and a Name written in Heaven, the Pleaſures are the holy Vital, the Pure and unmix'd, the ſolid everlaſting Comforts) the Good which is not an underling and undergraduate, but the Sovereign and Peerleſs, the boundleſs and immeaſurable, the ultimate and final Good (as being the Good of Conformity to and Communion with God) which all things muſt be ſubſervient to, and which muſt ſet them their Bounds and Meaſures. And who is not

(m) Epict. Diſſ. l. 1. c. 28. & vid c. 7.

(n) Ibid. c. 20. M. Ant. l. 6. S. 3, 13.

(o) Laert. in vit. Sphæri.

(p) Lactant. l. 6. c. 6.

(q) Buxt. Lex.Talm. col. 1852.

(r) Qnanto quiſque eſt ſanctior & deſiderii ſancti plenior, tanto eſt ejus in orando fletus uberior. S. Aug. de C. D. l. 20. c. 17.

(s) Stearn Medel. An. l. 3. c. 2. Jambl. de vit. Pythag. c. 32. p. 191.

(t) S. Chryſoſt. T. 2. p. 5.

Omne virtutis officium eſt non peccare. Lactant. l. 6. c. 5.

(u) Sen. Ep. 95.

not awaken'd, who is not enraviſh'd, who is not inflam'd with ardent Deſires after Sanctity and Godlineſs at the thoughts of ſuch tranſcendent things as theſe? It appeareth therefore from this one Conſideration the Excellency and Importance of Godlineſs (beſides which there are many more of like Nature) that Chriſtianity is not wanting in mighty Motives and Inducements to Godlineſs.

(5.) In the Diſcipline of univerſal Sanctity, Righteouſneſs and Godlineſs there muſt be mighty helps and aſſiſtances thereto. For the moſt perfect rule of Righteouſneſs back'd with the mightieſt moving Reaſons what will it ſignifie to them that want ability to underſtand, embrace and practiſe it? The ancient Writers and Counſels argue (w) the Scripture is expreſs, that none
(w) Voſſ. Hiſt. Pel. l. 4. Par. 1. Anti Theſ. 1. become Chriſtian Believers meerly by natural free Will, but by the Gift of God and by Grace (whereby their Minds are raiſed to apprehend and diſpoſed to embrace Chriſtianity) which in ſome may be only ſufficient, but is effectual in them that are duly prepar'd by preventing Grace. Joh. 6. 37. Act. 13. 48. Agreeably whereto Plato (in his Meno) looketh upon Virtue as θεῖόν τι κτῆμα, a thing that cometh from the Gods, and ſuppoſeth, that Men are made Virtuous by Inſpiration. One of his School ſaith (x) that the
(x) M. Tyr. Diſſ. 22. inclination and manuduction of Souls to the better things needeth ξυναγωνιςοῦ θεοῦ ϗ ξυλλήπτορος, a God concertator and coadjutor. For it is an eaſie thing, to talk virtuouſly, but (ſave only to them that have made progreſs in Virtue) it is not eaſie to
(y) Iren. adv. Her. l. 3. c. 19. live ſo. (y) As the dry Earth doth not bring forth Fruit, unleſs it receiveth Rain: So we being at firſt dry Wood ſhould never fructifie life without the ſupernal voluntary Rain. The Law-religion therefore is weak and impotent; for it diſpenſeth no ſpiritual Aids, or ghoſtly Strength, no ſupernatural Life, Virtue or Efficacy: But in the Religion of Saving Grace Supernatural Grace is diſpens'd, to make Chriſtian Believers, and ſanctifying Grace is diſpens'd, to make thoſe Chriſtian Believers Holy and Spiritual kind of Men, that are inabled and inclin'd to do thoſe holy things, which the unſanctified are altogether indiſpos'd to, and unfit to meddle with. And as Hippocrates ſaith, νούσων φύσιες ἰητροί, Nature is the Phyſician that cureth Diſeaſes: So the Introduction of any Grace into the Soul is a cure of the
(z) S. Chryſoſt. in Hebr. p. 493. contrary Vice (z) divine Affections quench ſinful Affections, the new Nature conflicteth with indwelling Sin in regenerate Believers (as Nature with a Diſeaſe) and by degrees expelleth it. They have the Holy Spirit, that illuminateth their Mind, to diſcern the ſupernatural kind of Truths and the true Countenance of things, (that they be not deceiv'd) in his Light they ſee the odiouſneſs of Sin, the vanity and fallacy of the World, and the dangerous By-paths which they eſcape, and by his conduct and animation they are led and guided in the Paths of Purity, Peace and Righteouſneſs; are filled with an holy Ardor and Alacrity, an holy Reſolution, Conſtancy, Fortitude, Patience, Magnanimity (whereby they contemn Death and Dangers from Men) are reſtrain'd from Errour, Vice and Wickedneſs, ſupported and comforted in their holy Courſe, in their Doubts, Difficulties and Diſtreſſes, are aſſiſted (by his Auxiliary Grace) to reſiſt and vanquiſh Temptations, and to ſubdue their Corruptions, nor is there any ſtrong-hold of Satan, which they are not able to pull down, or any ſpiritual Enemy which they are not able to conquer, or any holy Duty which they are not inabled to peform by this Principle of might and ghoſtly ſtrength. They have an Unction from the Holy One, who is a Magazine and Storehouſe of Grace, whoſe Office it is, to be a liberal diſpenſer of Grace and Holineſs to his Church, the Members of his Body derive Life, nutriment and growth from this their Head, he is a merciful High Prieſt, apt to ſuccour them when they are tempted, and they are commanded never to diſtruſt his aid, which is ingag'd for their aſſiſtance. Prayer openeth the Treaſury of Heaven, where they have an Advocate that taketh care of their Affairs with God, and that their Wants be ſupplied; who is their faithful Patron in all Exigences, and who reſtraineth Satan and defendeth them from his Aſſaults. They have his divine Example, to inſtruct, conduct and ingage them, the help of continual Inſtruction and Exhortation, the Holy Sacraments that preach to their Eyes, the Communion of Saints, and the Miniſtry and Guardianſhip of the Holy Angels. They have alſo the Love of God ſhed abroad in their Hearts (as that ſignifieth both his Love to them and their Love to him) and Love keepeth the Commandments, maketh every Burden light and every bitter thing ſweet. Such are the Helps of Grace which Chriſtians have towards Godlineſs.

III. The Nature and Character of their Religion inferreth, that all Doctrines repugnant to Piety (any Branch of it) are repugnant to Chriſtianity; that it is infinitely abſurd, to do any Wickedneſs, to promote Chriſtianity (as it is infinitely abſurd, to perpetrate Villainy, to promote Honeſty;) that God is hugely intent upon the buſineſs of Godlineſs; for Chriſtianity is the Voice of God calling Men (a) from Uncleanneſs (a) S. Chryſoſt. in 1 Cor. p. 287, 289. to Chaſtity, from the Love of this Life to ſuffer Deaths, from Drunkenneſs to Faſting, from Laughter to Tears and Compunction, and to the greateſt exactneſs in all things. Filthineſs and fooliſh talking and jeſting let it not proceed out of your Mouth. God hath ſo diſpoſed matters, as if he intended, that there ſhould not be left a Relique of Ungodlineſs. All Men ſhould be intent upon Godlineſs as their chief buſineſs (b) ἔργον δὲ ἡ θεοσέβεια, making (b) Conſt. Apoſtol. 2. 61.
it more than a By-work, ſubordinating all things to it, and accounting them Good or Evil as they are Helps to it or hindrances from it. The Profeſſors of Chriſtianity ſhould be infinitely careful by their holy Lives to repreſent their Religion as the Diſcipline of Sanctity and Godlineſs, to recommend it and the holy Author of it as Good and Excellent (for ſuch that Religion will be thought, that maketh Men Good and Excellent:) But by their ungodly Lives their Religion will be miſrepreſented as a bad Religon (or at leaſt as ineffectual to ſave Men from Ungodlineſs) the holy Author of it will be repreſented as Unholy, if his profeſs'd Followers be wicked; Chriſtianity will become deſpicable and odious, and a Muhammedan will be tempted to ſay, Ecce quales ſunt qui Chriſtum colunt? The Lives of multitudes of Chriſtians marvellouſly contradict the Nature and Character of their Religion; for they are Aliens from the Life of God much what at the old Heathen rate: many do not pretend to Godlineſs, and many that pretend to it defame it by their ſcandalous Vices. They will be called Chriſtians, yet are no ſuch kind of Men. They pretend to Chriſt's Religion (which conſiſteth in being Holy and Religious according to Chriſt's Inſtitution) but deny and deſtroy his Religion, the deſign and buſineſs of it (which is perfectly oppoſite and deſtructive to all Sin and Ungodlineſs) they deſtroy his Sovereignty Government and Kingdom, his Laws, his Life and his Service, practically deny him to be their Sovevereign Lord, and are only ſo far his Subjects and Servants, his Partiſans and Adherents, as to defile his Church, to ſcandalize Chriſtianity, to harden the World in Infidelity and Ungodlineſs, and to bring upon their Saviour (who knew no Sin) this heavy reproach uſual in Salvian's time, ſi Chriſtus ſancta docuiſſet Chriſtiani ſanctè vixiſſent. Not Jews nor Heathens can do ſo much injury to Chriſtianity, as wicked Chriſtians do, who therefore are the worſt of Enemies to the Croſs of Chriſt, and deſerve an Anathema Maranatha. 1 Cor. 16. 22.

From the Nature and Character of the Chriſtian Religion all Men ſhould learn, wherein to place their Happineſs, which is the ineſtimable Benefit, that God intended them, when he introduc'd the Myſtery of Godlineſs. Their great Concern (their Duty and their Intereſt) is to be happy and to eſcape the being miſerable, which conſiſteth in being ſaved from their Ungodlineſs and the penal Effects thereof. In Holineſs and Godlineſs they have a liberation and exemption from being miſerable, and the enjoyment of their true Happineſs, the State of Bleſſedneſs, the Life of Bleſſedneſs, the Inheritance of Bleſſedneſs and the Society of the Bleſſed. But Sin always was and always will be miſerable; Man cannot be more vile and miſerable than Sin and Hell and the Wrath of God will make him. All Religioniſts ſhould learn alſo from the Nature and Character of Chriſtianity, not to miſplace their Religion, which is then miſplac'd, when it is not duly plac'd in the Subſtantials of Godlineſs. The Samaritans are at this day a Sect ſtrict and devout in their way, and thus they magnifie their Sanctity above the Jews. We do not kindle a fire on the Sabbath, we do not go out of the Doors, we do not ſleep with any Woman on the Sabbath day at night, but the Jews do all this. Aliens from Godlineſs uſually place their Religion in ſome Trinkets (as in exteriour Formalities and ritual Obſervances) that are on this ſide Godlineſs, and ſubſtitute a Changeling inſtead of the living Child. It is not unuſual, to make downright Ungodlineſs a Religion, as a Branch of the Donatiſts Religion was a taking away their own and others Lives. (c) Fiunt miſeris & religioſa delicta. One of the great Diſeaſes of the Chriſtian Church is the over-valuing things of little value and undervaluing the great Subſtantials of Godlineſs. The ſeveral Parties of Chriſtians have their peculiar Opinions, Rites, Modes of Government and Worſhip, and theſe little Peculiarities that make the diſcrimination, are the great things with them; by theſe they value themſelves, theſe they make the Teſt and Standard of Godlineſs; the Zealots for theſe muſt be counted Pious, and others muſt be branded with ignominious Names; for theſe they become like Fiends and Furies to one another, cenſuring, vilifying, declaiming againſt one another with great (and ſometimes Perſecutive) Heat and Animoſity; theſe they are mighty buſie and talkative about, and their great Concern is, to make Men Proſelytes to themſelves and their Party rather than to Chriſt and an Holy Life. For in this mighty Ardour the love of Godlineſs groweth cold; and as in a Fever when the kindly natural heat decayeth, and a contra-natural heat enkindleth, bodily ſtrength decayeth and languiſheth: So when our fervour is placed upon any thing but the great imports of Godlineſs, Piety decayeth and languiſheth, and inſtead of loving and living the Holy Life (in all the ways of Purity, Goodneſs and Righteouſneſs) we become earthly, ſenſual and deviliſh. The conſequence of theſe Evils in the Church is Atheiſm, and Infidelity in the World; for when they that have ~~that~~ little Devotion, ſee ſuch wild work amongſt Religioniſts, they are prone to think, that Religion is nothing better than Humour and Frenzy.

(c) S. Cypr. p. 6. Ed. Pamel.

From the Nature and Character of the Chriſtian Religion it appeareth, that Ungodlineſs is the Adverſary to it (hath an antipathy againſt it) and is the root of Infidelity. They that are well diſpos'd towards Godlineſs are prepar'd for the due reception of Chriſtianity, and are thoſe that (in ſome degree) are of God and hear God's word: But in Ungodlineſs there is a manifold remote and a great proximate ill diſpoſition towards Godlineſs and conſequently to the due receiving the Chriſtian Religion. For Ungodlineſs maketh Men blind, erroneous and fooliſh, full of atheous and carnal Conceits in matters of Religion, their Happineſs and Salvation (and uſually of a blind and carnal Zeal that will bear down all that oppoſeth it) very unteachable in their Underſtandings, befool'd and deceiv'd in their Opinion and Judgment, unperſwadable in their Wills (bent upon their Sin and Ruin) ſenſleſs, ſtupid and benum'd in their Mind and Affections, careleſs, regardleſs and inconſiderate of the great things of Faith and their own great Concerns (of which they make little reckoning having other Fiſh to fry) all which are impediments and remote ill diſpoſitions to Chriſtianity and Godlineſs. And the great Proximate ill diſpoſition is diſlike and diſaffection; for unlikeneſs cannot but diſlike; contraria pugnant, contraries agree as Fire and Water, Light and Darkneſs. The Chriſtians Diſcipline of Godlineſs is utterly contrary and repugnant to all Vice and Wickedneſs, whence they that are addicted to any Vice (remaining ſuch) cannot like it, will be loath to believe it, and unwilling that ſuch a Doctrine ſhould be true, which is a very frowning and threatning Truth, which maketh them vile and diſgraceth them, criminateth, condemneth and diſquieteth them, ſheweth them the truth of their Caſe, and would make them condemn themſelves, bereave them of their vain Hopes and Imaginations, their falſe Opinions and Valuations of themſelves (put them out of conceit with themſelves) which is of a ſtinging and pungent Nature (as Light is to ſore Eyes) croſſeth and thwarteth their corrupt Affections, is againſt what they are for (like and affect) againſt their ſecular Intereſt, their ſuppos'd felicitative Life and Enjoyments, diſturbeth their Repoſe, maketh Men diſſenters from them and contrary kind of Men, who by non-compliance with them (d) teſtifie againſt them, and condemn them, ſhew a diſlike of them and their ways and an abhorrence of their Practices, put an uneaſie reſtraint upon them, check and controul them, diſgrace and diſparage them, by the light of an Holy Life make the deformity of their Deeds of darkneſs appear, and many ways are offenſive unto them. In Ungdodlineſs there is a Genius and Diſpoſition averſe from and deadly inimical to Godlineſs, ſuch as the Philoſophic Pagans found inimical to their Virtue. (e) The Name of a Philoſopher is a grievous and troubleſom hearing to the vulgar,

Joh. 8. 47.

(d) S. Cypr. Ep. 2. Lact. l. 5. c. 9. Gat. Not. in Ant. p. 381.

(e) M. Tyr. Diſſ. 29.

the rich is a grievous Spectacle to the poor, the temperate to the intemperate, and the eminently valiant to the cowardly, ὐ γὰρ ἀνέχονται αἱ πονηρίαι τὰς ἀρετὰς, for Wickedneſſes cannot endure the Virtues. Wiſd. 2. 15. He is grievous unto us even to behold: For his Life is not like other Mens, his ways are of another Faſhion. Many could not ſee without trouble (f) τὺς τῦ φιλοσόφυ σχῆμα ἔχοντας, thoſe that had the Garb of a Philoſopher. If we deſpiſe external things and have no power in the World, and refuſe to flatter them that are in power (g) they revile us and beat us, and pour contumelies upon us, and take away our Goods, and make us remove our Quarters, and ſometimes they kill us. (h) And many being vanquiſhed by Deriſions, Subſannations and Reproaches, have deſerted their Order, and returned to the former cuſtomary way of living. So many have been detained from ſerious embracing Chriſtianity by the ignominy and diſgrace that attended it, and becauſe it would darken their worldly Glory, ſpoil their Garb and Faſhion in the Eye of the World, and like a damp put out the Candle of their Joy. The puſillanimous are fearful of the frowns and evil Words of Men, and much more of their Blows; they think it a terrible thing, to live a mortifying kind of Life, and to walk in a troubleſome afflictive way, and are ſtumbled at the hard and great things, which Chriſtianity requireth of them and will bring upon them (the Croſs, the whole Body of Afflictions) they have not Fortitude, to undertake Chriſtianity (a dangerous as well as a laborious Buſineſs) a worldly Heart ſuggeſteth, that a worldly Life and Happineſs is beſt, whence the Vice of Worldlineſs (an inordinate reſpect to ſome worldly Intereſt) uſually detaineth Men in Infidelity, and is the grand Adverſary to Saving Faith. But none is more ſo than the vice of Pride, which the Chriſtian Religion is in the main of it levell'd againſt, and to which it is ſo entirely repugnant, that it is but agreeable to the nature of things, if the Children of Pride have an antipathy againſt it. They are not apt to learn, or to correct their Errours, are more prone to queſtion the truth of God, then to confeſs their Ignorance and Incapacity. The ſenſual and high-minded are too lofty for a lowly Saviour (as the Phariſees and Philoſophic Bravo's were:) It is not to be expected, that the gay Gallants of the World ſhould (in any great number) ſeriouſly embrace a Religion of deep Humility, that cometh to ſtrip them of their gayety and ſpruceneſs, to pluck their Plumes and lower their Top-ſail: nor are the admirers and lovers of the World qualify'd for the due reception of a Religion, that diſgraceth thoſe Vilities, diſparageth their Poſſeſſors and layeth their Honour in the Duſt, uſually the Chriſtian Religion ſeemeth contemptible and ſilly to thoſe high-flown Men of Senſe (as they ſuppoſe themſelves) that are proud of their Wit and Parts, nor is it rightly valu'd by any, that are (i) nondum ſalubriter proſtrati, in their unhumbled ſtate and unacquainted with thoſe humbling Duties, whereby Sinners are initiated into the Myſtery of Godlineſs.

(f) Dion. Pruſ. or. 72.

(g) Καὶ λοιδορῦσι, ϗ τύπτυσι, ϗ παντοίως ὑβρίζυσιν ἡμᾶς, ϗ τὰ ὑπάρχοντα ἀφαιρῦνται, ϗ μεταλύυσι, ϗ τὸ τελευταῖον, λόϊς ϗ φονεύυσιν.

(h) Καὶ δὴ πολλοὶ τοῖς γέλωσι, ϗ τοῖς μώκοις, ϗ τοῖς ὀνειδισμοῖς ἡττηθέντες, ἔλιπον τὴν τάξιν, ϗ πρὸς τὰ πρότερον ἤθη ἐπέστρεψαν. Simplic. in Epict. p. 21, 124.

Quomodo ſunt verè juſti quibus vilis eſt humilitas veri juſti? S. Aug. c. Jul. l. 4. c. 3.

(i) S. Aug. confeſſ. l. 4. c. 1.

IV. The Nature and Character of the Chriſtian Religion inferreth, that it is the only efficacious Diſcipline of Godlineſs, that to call Chriſtianity the moſt effectual Religion to promote Godlineſs, as ſuppoſing that other Religions are effectual for the purpoſe of Godlineſs (though not ſo effectual) is not to commend it, but to reproach it. (k) For the Croſs of Chriſt is made void, if we ſay, that by any other way beſides his Religion Men may attain Righteouſneſs (Godlineſs) and Life eternal. To ſuppoſe, that by ſome other Religion beſides Chriſtianity Men are ſaved from their Sins and Ungodlineſs, emerge from under the Dominion of Sin and need not a Saving Converſion to Chriſtiainity and Godlineſs, is a grand inconſiſtence with Chriſtianity. (l) We were ſailing (ſaith a late Traveller) in the Arabick Sea in company of many Merchants of ſeveral Nations and Religions, there aroſe a diſpute touching the diverſity of Religions, one holding (as our Deiſts and Atheiſts this Day do) that all Religions were indifferent and ſufficient, and that all Perſons acknowledging a God ſhould infallibly be ſaved: miſcalling the Chriſtians and blaming them for having good Opinions of themſelves and bad of others. To whom a Chriſtian diſcreetly and learnedly replied, ſhewing the Purity of our Religion, and that a Chriſtian dying in mortal Sin ſhould be damned as well as Turk or Infidel. Upon this account the Chriſtian Religion only can be ſuppos'd to ſave Men from their Ungodlineſs, becauſe no other Religion can be ſuppos'd, to ſave them from being deadly Sinners; and for this Reaſon it is the peculiar Excellency and Tranſcendence of this Religion, to be the Diſcipline of Godlineſs. Which Tranſcendence of the Chriſtian Religion implieth the Tranſcendence of its Godlineſs, and that this muſt be counted an attribute of the Myſtery of Godlineſs, its Godlineſs is tranſcendent to all other reputed Religion and Virtue. Which great Attribute of this great Myſtery (hugely honourary to the Chriſtian Religion and of great Concern to the Souls and Salvation of its Profeſſors) we will duly illuſtrate and prove from ſeveral Heads of Argument taking our riſe from theſe following deſcriptive Notices of it.

(k) Evacuatur crux Chriſti, ſi aliquo modo præter illius ſacramentum ad juſtitiam vitamque æternam perveniri poſſe dicatur. S. Aug. de Nat. & Gr. c. 7.

(l) Le Blanc's Travailes Par. 1. c. 9.

(1.) The Chriſtians Godlineſs is that which conſtituteth the Saints of God, and therefore is no leſs than Sanctity of Virtue; and it is of Tranſcendence Divine (Supra-humane) as ſurmounting unregenerate Humanity: But all other reputed Virtue and Religion is no more than unregenerate and graceleſs Humanity. Are ye not carnal and walk as Men? ſaith the Apoſtle, 1 Cor. 3. 3. (m) So ſecundum hominem & ſecundum Deum vivere (to live according to Man and according to God) are oppoſed. Ambulare ſecundum hominem & eſſe carnalem (to walk according to Man and to be of the Carnal kind of Life and Practice) are Identical. The Carnal kind of Men are ſuch in matter of Vice (in following the worſer part of unregenerate Humane Nature) and they are ſuch in matter of Virtue (in following the better part of unregenerate Humane Nature) they are ſuch notwithſtanding a ſort of Virtue and Religion which they have, otherwiſe the Apoſtle would not have blam'd the Corinthians for walking as Men, but becauſe they did not walk as Men in following the better part of unregenerate Humane Nature. Whereas their Crime was, they walked as Men (the bad and carnal kind of Men, that are no Saints or Holy Men) they walk'd not according to God and the Chriſtian Godlineſs. (n) What would he have them to do, to whom he upbraided, that they were Men? Would ye

(m) S. Aug. de C. D. l. 14. c. 4.

(n) Quid eos volebat facere, quibus exprobabat, quia homines erant? vultis noſſe, quid eos facere volebat? Audite in Pſalmo:

know, what he would have them to do? Hear in the Pſalms; I have ſaid ye are Gods and all of you Sons of the Higheſt. To this therefore God calleth us, that we be not Men. Not meer Men, but (o) ἄνθρωποι Θεοῦ, Men of God (the divine kind of Men) γένος ἅγιον καὶ κοινωνοὶ θείας φύσεως, the holy Nation, partakers of the Divine Natature, υἱοί τε καὶ Θεοί, Sons of Gods and Gods (a Race of high ones above the Sons of Men;) for Chriſt put on a created Body, (p) ἵν᾽ ἐν αὐτῷ ἀνακαινισθῆναι καὶ θεοποιηθῆναι δυνηθῶμεν, that we might be in him renew'd and deify'd, as the Fathers ſpeak without any thing of extravagance in their Senſe. There is a want of Judgment and Piety therefore in many of our Modern Elogies of the Chriſtian Religion and Vindications of Morality, as in this following. (q) Chriſt Jeſus taught Morality, viz. the way of living like Men, and the fifth Chapter of Matthew is an excellent Lecture of this kind. To live like Men is a general ambiguous expreſſion, and to make it of a determinate ſignification, it muſt be underſtood, to ſignifie either in a ſenſe of diſparagement; To live like thoſe that are of kind and quality and pitch of excellency Men, ſo as to live as meer Men: or in a ſenſe of excellency; To live like thoſe that are of kind and quality and pitch of excellency Men, ſo as to live as more than meer Men. If in the former ſenſe our Saviour hath taught us, to live like Men, he was a Teacher of Morality at the ſame rate with Homer, of whom Cicero complaineth, (r) He maketh the Gods to live like Men, whereas he ought to make them live like the Gods. So our Saviour is ſuppos'd, to teach Chriſtians, to live like Men, whereas his buſineſs was, to teach Men, to live like Chriſtians. Things more vulgar and accommodate to the humane ſize have the Name of Man call'd upon them in Scripture: but they are things great and extraordinary, that have the Name of God call'd upon them, Job 1. 6. Pſal. 65. 9. and 104. 16. Iſa. 8. 1. Gal. 1. 7, 11. To live like Men therefore is far from being expreſſive of the Chriſtian Godlineſs, which is a living according to God, and to ſink it into ſuch a Morality, is a debaſing and vulgarizing the divinity of the Chriſtian Religion. Whoſe holy Laws are Chriſtianity, which cannot be of one piece with the Moralities of Jews and Heathens, and therefore muſt not be called Morality (meerly ſuch) but the Divine or Chriſtian kind of Morality, which ought to be contradiſtinguiſh'd to the meer Humane Morality. And what can be more apparent than that our Saviour's Beatitudes (bleſſed are the poor in Spirit, bleſſed are they that mourn) are not Rules of meer Morality teaching to live like Men, but are Rules initiative into the Chriſtian Sanctity, which is the Life of the Regenerate Children of God? So the following Precepts (Ye are the Salt of the Earth, the Light of the World, let your Light ſhine before Men, that they may glorifie your Father which is in Heaven) are not Precepts of Morality injoyning nothing more than to live like meer Men: nor is the original Law of God (whoſe Precepts are in ſome ſort written upon our Hearts) meerly a Law of ſuch Morality; for it is the Holy Spiritual Law, that obligeth to the Holy Spiritual Life, which is the Morality of the holy kind of Men as ſuch, which conſtituteth Saints and Holy Angels. (s) So when God introduc'd Chriſtianity, he made a ſtupendious change of things beyond all thought, from Devils made Men Angels and introduc'd a Converſation worthy of Heaven, (t) τῆς ἀγγελικῆς πολιτείας τὴν εὐταξίαν, the lovely order of an Angelical Converſation; for ſuch a Life he hath introduc'd, ſuch Laws he hath made, ſuch a Converſation he hath appointed, that ſuch as apply themſelves to theſe ἀγγέλους εὐθέως γίνεσθαι καὶ ὁμοίους θεῷ, preſently become Angels and like unto God (ſo far as is competible to us) although they are no better than the worſt of Men. (u) A Spiritual Man is not any longer in the Fleſh, ἄγγελος ἐντεῦθεν ἤδη γενόμενος, from thenceforth he is become an Angel and an aſcendent towards Heaven. So our Religion was anciently called, (w) ἡ ἀγγελικὴ καὶ οὐράνιος πολιτεία, the Angelical and Heavenly Converſation. Origen calleth his Friend Ambroſius, (x) a Man of God, a Man in Chriſt, and ſaith of him, that he contended to be Spiritual, nec amplius homo, and to be no more a Man.

Ego dixi, dii eſtis, & filii excelſi omnes. Ad hoc ergo vocat nos Deus, ne ſimus homines. S. Aug. in Joann. Tr. 1.

(o) S. Athan. de Syn. Nic. decr. p. 411. Ep. ad Adelph. p. 332. or. 2. c. Arian. p. 166. Com.

(p) Idem or. 3. c. Arian. p. 223.

(q) Glanvil. way to happin. p. 113, 114.

(r) Tuſc. l. 1.

(s) S. Chryſoſt. T. 6. p. 348.

(t) Idem T. 2. p. 602.

(u) Idem T. 3 p. 107.

(w) Vit. Thecl. p. 233, 234.

(x) Spencer. Not. in Orig. p. 2.

(2.) The Philoſophic Pagans have a Divine Virtue, which they diſtinguiſh from the Humane. (y) The Humane Virtue is that which maketh a good Man; but the Theoretic is θεία ἀρετή, Divine Virtue, whereby the Platoniſts pretended, to be deify'd. (z) They would be firſt Men and then Gods. And they pretended not only to a Theoretic Divine Virtue, but (a) to live the life of the Gods in Humane Bodies, (b) not any Humane, but a Divine Life. They were not content to live (c) the life of a good Man, which is the political or ethical Virtue: but this muſt be diſmiſs'd and another muſt be choſen, that of the Gods: for our aſſimilation muſt be to theſe, not to good Men. The Stoicks pretended to more than to fulfil, (d) τὴν τοῦ ἀνθρώπου ἐπαγγελίαν, the profeſſion of a Man (to live like Men) their aim and aſpire was, of Men to become Gods. Of the Ethicks of Ariſtotle the ſublimer Philoſophers ſay, (e) μικρόν τι καὶ ταπεινὸν καὶ δημῶδες περὶ τῆς ἀρετῆς φρονοῦσι, they are of a mean and low and plebeious Sentiment touching Virtue. Yet this vulgar Moraliſt (Ariſtotle) diſtinguiſheth Virtue into (f) the Humane and Heroical, which he accounteth Divine Virtue. He ſuppoſeth alſo, (g) that the Intellect in Man is a divine thing, and that the Life according to it (to live in Contemplation) is βίος θεῖος πρὸς τὸν ἀνθρώπινον βίον, a Divine Life in compariſon of the Humane Life. So Clemens will have his Gnoſtick or Man of knowledge (h) ἰσάγγελος, equal or like to the Angels in this Life. In theſe Philoſophic Pagan Sublimities there is viſibly a rampant and delirous Extravagance, from which none of them is excuſable: but Celſus thinketh, (i) that the Chriſtians borrowed their diſtinction of Wiſdom into Divine and Humane from the Pagan Theologers, who uſually diſtinguiſh things (k) into Divine and Humane, the Precious and the Vile, and in this their diſtinction of Wiſdom and Virtue there is no extravagance. The Jews ſuppoſe, (l) that there is amongſt them a degree of Intellectuality and Sanctity that is above Men, and which they call the angelical degree; whether this pretenſion be ſober or extravagant, there is nothing of Extravagance in the diſtribution which they make of Mankind into אדם טבעי the natural Man, as the Idolatrous Gentiles, and אדם אלהי the Divine Man as the (true) Iſraelites. Theſe are really (m) τὸ θεῖον γένος, the Divine Generation, Divine Men, adorn'd with the Divine Similitude, alone are counted worthy, τῶν θείων ἀγαθῶν, of the Divine Goods (which the Philoſophers appropriate to the highly Virtuous) and are

(y) Hierocl. in aur. Car. p. 5, 6, 218.

(z) Πρῶτον ἀνθρώπους γενέσθαι τοὺς ἐσομένους Θεοὺς δεῖ. Phot. cod. 242. col. 1065.

(a) Eſſentque in corporibus humanis vitam imitati Deorum. Cic. Tuſc. l. 1.

(b) Οὐκ ἀνθρώπινόν τινα βίον, ἀλλὰ τὸν θεῖον. Stob. Ecl. Phyſ. p. 204.

(c) Τὸν ἀνθρώπου βίον τοῦ ἀγαθοῦ. Plotin. En. 1. l. 2. c. 6.

(d) Epict. diſſ. l. 2. c. 9. & 19.

(e) Euſeb. pr. Ev. l. 15. c. 4.

(f) Eth. ad Nic. l. 7. c. 1.

(g) Ibid. l. 10. c. 7.

(h) Str. l. 7. p. m. 526, 538.

(i) Orig. c. Celſ. l. 6. p. 283.

(k) Jambl. de Myſt. S. 1. c. 21.

(l) Coſri,

21, & 63.

(m) Hierocl. ſupr. p. 45, 118, 125, 230, 278.

are of the θεῖος χορὸς, the Divine Chorus; for their Names are written in Heaven. (n) Chriſtians are the Divine People, the Divine Sect, the Sect of God, the Diſciples of God (as the ancient Writers call them) their Inſtitution is ἀγωγὴ ἡ θεία, the Divine Inſtitution, not ἀνθρώπινον μάθημα, ἀλλὰ θεία διδασκαλία, any Humane but a Divine Diſcipline, (o) their Life is ἡ ἔνθεος καὶ οὐράνιος ζωὴ, the Divine and Heavenly Life, ἡ ἐν τῷ οὐρανῷ πολιτεία, the Converſation in Heaven brought down on Earth, they emulate the Life of Angels, τὴν ἐπουράνιον μελετῶντες πολιτείαν, meditating the Life which is in Heaven, their Chriſtian Converſation and the Judaical differ from each other ὅσον ἀγγέλων καὶ ἀνθρώπων, as much as the Converſation of Angels and of Men, they are a Temple far tranſcending the Judaical, the living Temple, the Houſe and holy Habitation of God, which he inhabiteth in a living way, they being ὑπὸ θείου πνεύματος ἀγόμενοι, animated by a Divine Spirit, and they muſt eſchew what is alien τῆς θείας φύσεως, from a Divine Nature. They are of the Heavenly Royal Family, Deſcent and Parentage, and conſequently of the Heavenly Royal Qualities and Properties; the Divine Genius and Indoles is peculiar to their Family, they are born of God in reſpect of their Virtue (which therefore is of kind and quality divine) ſuch the Pagans thought more than meer Men (they counted them ſemidei) that were ἐκ διὸς γεγονότες, generated by Jupiter; and if like generateth like, their Virtue and Godlineſs muſt be the true Nobleneſs and God-likeneſs. (p) And therein God taketh no little complacence, cùm quis ſic ſpiritaliter naſcitur, ut in actibus ejus & laudibus divina generoſitas prædicetur, when any one is ſo ſpiritually born, as that the Divine Generoſity is notic'd in his practices and praiſes. (q) Ὁ θεῖος λόγος, the Divine Word (whence Chriſtians have their Inſtitution) produceth πράξεις θείας, Divine Practices. (r) Converſabatur Deus, ut homo divinè agere doceretur, God was converſant amongſt Men, that Man might be taught, to practiſe divinely. But all other Virtue which is not the Chriſtian, is but that of the Will of Man, of kind and quality the Humane. Inter Ethnicam Philoſophiam & Chriſtianam tantum intereſt, quantum à divino ſpiritu humanum abeſt ingenium.

(3.) The Chriſtians Virtue and Godlineſs is the Chriſt-like; for it is a derivative and deſcendent from Chriſt, a participation of his fulneſs (δικαιοσύνη ὤν, μετέχεται ἀπὸ τῶν δικαίων, being Righteouſneſs it ſelf, they that become Righteous, participate of him) who is the ſampler, Pattern and original of Sanctity, the Head on whom the precious Oyl was pour'd, that runneth down to the Skirts of his Garments, and who is filled with all Virtue, that he might be a publick Bank and Treaſury thereof. His Virtue is of another kind than that which is found in unregenerate Humanity, and (which ſpeaketh a great tranſcendence thereof) it conſtituteth Men Chriſtos, as the Fathers ſay; whereby they mean a race of juniour and ſervient Chriſts. (s) The Scripture calleth thoſe Chriſts, that live according to Chriſt. (t) He maketh us his Members, that in him we alſo might be Chriſts. (u) The true Chriſt is one, who by the participation of himſelf maketh many Chriſts. God hath made an external delineation of our Religion in the perſon of Chriſt, he is the Archetype, according to which all are formed, that are Chriſtianiz'd, (w) who partake of his threefold honourary Office (ſo far they are Chriſt-like) and are dead, crucify'd, raiſed in ſociety with him and conformity to him. Their being Chriſtians conſiſteth in affinity and conformity to Chriſt (as Platonizing conſiſteth in affinity to Plato) in ſymbolizing with him in his Genius and Diſpoſition, his Life and Spirit, to which the Humane and Mundane kind of Virtue is hugely alien and diſagreeing, ſo alien, that it diſcerneth not his kind of Virtue and Excellency; for he is to the World the Myſtery of Godlineſs. The World hath no acquaintance with that new Life, which is the Life of Chriſt, Fleſh and Blood revealeth not his Excellencies, (which are not diſcern'd without a Ray of ſupernatural Light) therefore the World knew him not, 1 Joh. 3. 1. (x) For the Myſtery of Chriſtianiſm is alien from this World. (y) The Wiſdom of God is ſo vailed, that the Treaſures of it are hid there, where the World hath affix'd the Title of Fooliſhneſs. For ſo Celſus a great admirer of the Pagan Virtue, can find nothing in Chriſt of that Virtue, Generoſity and Bravery, which he admireth. Our Saviour's Speeches (that do ſpirare divinitatem) are with him (z) πάροιστρα, fanatical; the unſpotted mirrour of all Divine Perfection therefore was in his Account no better (a) than (as he calleth Mary Magdalene) πάροιστρος, a Fanatick. So Julian calleth the Saints of God, (b) flagitious, abominable, miſerable, abject, and nothing worth; yet a mighty Pagan Virtuoſo this Apoſtate was, and a great friend to Political Juſtice, as the Devil himſelf (in ſome ſort) is in ſeveral of his Oracles. (c) For in the War againſt Pyrrhus the Romans wanting Money made a Prayer to Juno, and the Goddeſs is ſaid, to have made anſwer, ſi integra inter arma juſtitia eſſet, pecuniam non defuturam, that Money ſhould not be wanting, if in their War Juſtice was not violated. Accordingly they were furniſh'd with it, and this was the occaſion of worſhipping Juno Moneta.

(4.) The Chriſtians Godlineſs is beyond all things, that are on this ſide (Godlineſs) the being truly Holy and Godly. Epicurus is ſaid, (d) humanum fuiſſe (to have been Humane) whence he was called a good Man becauſe of his good Nature, which is no better goodneſs than ſuch as may be found in a Brute, in an Atheiſt, and in the Witch of Endor, who was in ſuch ſenſe a good Woman, but ſo as to be a Witch. (e) For this Woman though a Pythoneſs, yet was of a very good nature and benign, which Joſephus taketh notice of, and extolleth her mightily for it. Many are good Men in ſuch a ſenſe as Guicciardine calleth Pope Clement a good Pope, for he addeth; I mean not goodneſs Apoſtolical; for in theſe days he was eſteem'd a good Pope, that did not exceed the wickedneſs of the worſt of Men. (f) Amongſt the Pagans Men were counted good becauſe of their Political Virtue (becauſe they were good as to Civil Society) they honour'd Parents, did not perpetrate Adultery, Homicide, Theft, Falſe Witneſs, which was counted good Life, and the Pagans that ſo lived, ſuppos'd themſelves to live well, and boaſted of their Works of Righteouſneſs, (g) I give to the Poor, I rob no body, nor covet the Wife of another, nor kill, nor cheat any, reſtore

(n) Lact. l. 4. c. 26. & l. 6. c. 23. Tertull. Apol. c. 37, 39. Clem. Protr. p. m. 52. Pædag. l. 1. c. 7. & l. 3. c. 11. Orig. c. Celſ. l. 3. p. 129.

(o) Euſeb. pr. Ev. l. 1. c. 3. Petav. T. 4. l. 7. c. 11. S. 4. Clem. Pæd. l. 1. c. 12. & l. 3. c. 7. S. Chryſoſt. in Act. p. 669. Orig. ſupr. l. 7. p. 367.

(p) S. Cypr. de Zelo & Liv.

(q) J. Mart. Paræn. p. 40.

(r) Tertull. c. Marcion. l. 2. c. 27.

(s) Χριστοὺς οἶδε καλεῖν ἡ γραφὴ, τοὺς ζῶντας κατὰ Χριστόν. Gr. Naz. orat. 21. p. 378.

(t) Faciens nos membra ſua, ut in illo & nos Chriſti eſſemus. S. Aug. 2. Enar. in Pſal. 26

(u) Chriſtus verus unus eſt, qui participatione ſui multos facit Chriſtos. Pamphil. Apol. inter op. S. Hieron. T. 9.

(w) Grot. de Imp. ſum. Pot. c. 2. n. 5.

(x) Τὸ γὰρ μυστήριον τοῦ χριστιανισμοῦ ξένον ἐστὶ τοῦ κόσμου τούτου. Macar. Hom. 27.

(y) Apparet illic ſapientiam eſſe quærendam, ubi ſtultitiæ titulus apparet. Lactant. l. 4. c. 2. Dei ſapientia mundi eſt inſania.

(z) Orig. c. Celſ. p. 338.

(a) Ibid. l. 2. p. 96.

(b) S. Cyr. c. Jul. l. 8. p. 252.

(c) Putean. pecun. ratio, c. 1.

(d) Cic. de Fin. l. 2.

(e) Sadduciſm. Triumphat. p. 47.

(f) S. Aug. in Joan. Tr. 45.

(g) Idem in Pſal. 31.

what without witneſs is committed to my truſt. As bad as this evil World is, yet all in ſome ſort and degree do and live well and (almoſt) all are ſo far Religious. (h) In ipſa impietate vitæ ſuæ faciunt aliqua legis, in their impiety of Life they do ſome things of the Law. No evil Man is altogether naught, not Herod the Great, who (as Joſephus relateth) cauſ'd all his Veſſels of Gold and Silver to be melted for the relief of the Poor in a time of Famine. Memorable inſtances of the Humane and Mundane kind of Morality or Virtue abound in Paganiſm. When Mount Ætna vomited forth his Flames, two young men in Sicily took their Parents on their Backs, and carry'd them through the Flames unhurt; for which dutiful fact the Name of Pii was given them, by that Name they are remembred to Poſterity, and the place of their burial is called Campus piorum. That great and ancient Nation of the Chineſe is eminent for the duty of honouring Parents, (i) their Books are full of Moral Sentences and good Counſels, they have their Commandments which have a correſpondence to our Decalogue (as not to kill, not to ſteal, not to lie, to honour Father and Mother) and their Laws are founded upon the five Cardinal Virtues held in great veneration amongſt them, Piety, Juſtice, Policy, Prudence and Fidelity. The Jews alſo abound with good Moralities (as appeareth from Buxtorf's Florilegium Hebraicum) and there is great abundance of excellent Moral Sentences and good Counſels amongſt the Muhammedans, who thus magnifie their Law and their Lives: (k) We his People (the People of Muhammed) as much excell all other People in Knowledge and Manners, as the Law of his Sect excelleth all other. Thus not only Philoſophers, Phariſees and Aſceticks (that pretend to be extraordinary Saintiſts) but all this wicked World of Mankind are in ſome ſort and degree good Men, have good Life and are virtuous and Religious, which is one part of their Character: but their plenary Character hath both a dark and a bright ſide; for the moral good that is amongſt the generality of Mankind, is quite overpoyſed and obſcur'd, (l) immenſo malorum cumulo, by an immenſe heap of moral Evils. They are only ſo far good, as yet to be ſtark naught; have good Life only ſo far as yet to be dead in Sin and deadly nefarious Miſcreants; they are only ſo far Religious, as yet to be the damnably wicked Kind and Party; and are only ſo far wiſe and virtuous, as yet to be (m) fatui, ſtulti, flagitiis immerſi (Fools immers'd over Head and Ears in Vice and Wickedneſs) as Maimonides rightly characteriſeth the Arabians notwithſtanding their Moralities and Virtues. Their Virtue doth not ſave them from being the damnably vicious and flagitious, their Godlineſs doth not ſave them from being the Wicked and Ungodly. In that little Virtue which they practiſe, they are not the Godly-virtuous, and therefore are not the righteous doers of Righteouſneſs. So in carnal pretending Chriſtians there is a believing on Chriſt and a loving him, which is not the Godly-virtuous (and therefore not the Chriſtian) kind of believing on him and loving him, but is a vile and graceleſs kind of thing (that may be called the Humane and Mundane kind of believing on him and loving him) not that which the Diſcipline of Godlineſs requireth, not the Chriſtians Virtue and Religion; for nothing can be ſuch, that doth not conſtitute Men the Godly-virtuous, and therefore nothing can be ſuch, that is on this ſide Saving Grace and Holineſs (the Saint of God-kind of Virtue) as the Chriſtians Virtue is commonly called.

V. The tranſcendence of the Chriſtians Virtue and Godlineſs appeareth from the general nature of the Chriſtian Religion, which is of tranſcendent Excellency and conſiſteth of things ſuperlative and tranſcendent. S. Paul is obſerv'd, to delight in ſtrange magnifying expreſſions and compoſitions of words, heaping Expreſſion upon Expreſſion (as if he could never ſpeak high enough of Chriſt and the matters of Chriſtianity) ſuch as ὑπεράνω, Eph. 4. 10. ὑπερύψωσε, Phil. 2. 9. ὑπερπλεόνασε, 1 Tim. 1. 14. πολὺ μᾶλλον κρεῖσσον, Phil. 1. 23. καθ' ὑπερβολὴν εἰς ὑπερβολὴν, 2 Cor. 4. 17. ὑπὲρ ἐκ περισσοῦ, Eph. 3. 20. Unſearchable Riches, Eph. 3. 8. Breadth, and length, and depth, and height, Eph. 3. 18. The love of Chriſt which paſſeth all knowledge, Eph. 3. 19. Chriſt is all and in all, Col. 3. 11. His Excellency (reſplendent in his Divine Names and Attributes) is ſuperlative and tranſcendent; for (as the Muhammedans ſay of their Alcoran) it tranſcendeth all Creatures. In him (his Perſon and Religion) are all the Goods and Excellencies of the tranſcendent kind, better Learning, Life and Liberty, Riches, Honours and Comforts than the World is acquainted with (the unbounded Abyſs, the height and fulneſs of them) the worſt of Chriſt (even his Reproach) is better than the World (the beſt of the World) the Treaſures in Egypt, Heb. 11. 26. The knowledge of him is ſuperlative and tranſcendent, incomparably paramount to all other knowledge and to all other things, to all Judaical Excellencies and Advantages, the natural and legal Man's Religion and Virtue, all Mundane Goods and Excellencies, which are rejectaneous ſtuff, (n) τῇ πρὸς Χριστὸν συγκρίσει, in compariſon of Chriſt and Saving Chriſtianity, and muſt be counted loſs, if they hinder from this gain, Phil. 3. 8. The Eſtimation and Affection that is due to him is ſuperlative and tranſcendent. For all things muſt be depreciated and forſaken, and muſt be look'd upon as forſaken things in compariſon of, and ſo far as they come in competition with, him and the Goods of his Kingdom; which muſt ſtand ſingular, peerleſs and tranſcendent in our Eſteem and Affection, and muſt have the Height and Sovereignty of it. All things muſt be devoted to him, nothing muſt be alienated from him, he muſt be ſerv'd with our All and at any rate; for ſo Chriſtians love Chriſt to the death, and rejoyce to die for him, (o) as J. Mart. often repeateth. Many have worſhipp'd the Sun, yet none have ſuffer'd death for the Faith of the Sun: but Men of all ſorts ſuffer all things for the Name of Jeſus. For his word of Truth and Wiſdom is πυρωδέστερος καὶ φωτεινότερος, more ardent and more lucid by much than the Solar Virtues. His love to his People and his ſufferings upon their account together with the effects of them are ſuperlative and tranſcendent. For nothing is ſo celebrated amongſt Chriſtians as Chriſt crucify'd (the Author of their Salvation and the Object of their Admiration) the royal and moſt heroick Lover that ever was, who died for us, when we were in the height of our Rebellion, died as the Prince of Criminals a Death ſupaſſing all Dolours, died as our Sin-bearer and waſh'd us from our Sins in his own Blood, Apoc. 1. 5. His Love and his Blood, his ſolemn and dreadful paſſion of Sorrows, Ignominies and Agonies (which was a Love-Tragedy) is not to be thought on without Paſſion, and his Croſs hath an amazing Myſtery in it; for

(h) Idem de Sp. & Lit. c. 28.

(i) Semedo par. 1. c. 29.

(k) Hottin. Diſſ. p. 74.

(l) Maffeius Indic. p. 532.

(m) Pocock Spec. p. 9.

(n) S. Chryſoſt. in Phil. Hom. 11.

(o) P. 78, 337, 342, 349, 350.

for (p) τὸν θάνατον εἰς ζωὴν ἀνεσταύρωσεν, he crucified Death into Life. His whole Oeconomy of Humiliation and Exaltation is ſuperlative and tranſcendent. For Power, Majeſty and immenſe Riches were hid under an appearance of weakneſs, meanneſs and extreme Poverty. God ſo order'd Chriſt, as to be alien from the World, and quite of another Mould; he ſpeaketh not like one of us, he liveth not like one of us, his Sentiments are not as ours, his ways are of another Faſhion. He was (duly) oppoſite to all that the World is and is pleas'd with (as Holineſs is oppoſite to Sin, Humility to Pride, Spiritual to Carnal, divine Mourning to Revelling and Jollity) and he is a Meſſiah for none but Sinners, for Miſcreants and Varlets; for no Man can embrace Chriſt, but thereby he owneth himſelf a condemned Criminal and Malefactor. (q) Chriſt was ſent a Legate to a Whore, a Thief and a Publican. His Hiſtory is full of miraculous Atteſtations to his Divinity, but in worldly reſpects he was (r) ἄδοξος, ἄτιμος, ἐξουθενημένος, inglorious, abject, annihilated, the Lord of Glory was ſtript of all mundane Glory to the height of Prodigy and Aſtoniſhment, his viſage was marred more than any Man, and his form more than the Sons of Men. And alike tranſcendent was his Exaltation ὑπεράνω πάντων τῶν οὐρανῶν, over above all the Heavens, Eph. 4. 10. His divine Virtues of Humility, Patience and Self-denial are ſuperlative and tranſcendent. For there is a Conſtellation of Miracles of Humility in his voluntary Humiliation, in changing the form of God for the form of a Servant, Riches for extreme Poverty, Glory for Meanneſs and Diſgrace, Heaven for this gloomy Region of Sin and Miſery; and not only diveſting himſelf of all his external heavenly Glory, but of all the gay and ſpecious things of this World, chuſing a Croſs in it before a Throne, and to be fetter'd in an Iron-chain, ſtript and whipt from Pillar to Poſt, gibbeted and hanged on a Tree, and expoſed as a Spectacle of reproach to Men and Angels. O miracula! ô prodigia! (s) What revilings of Reproach did he patiently bear? What mockeries of Contumelies did he tolerate? He the innocent and juſt one is reckon'd amongſt the flagitious, and the word of God is led to be a Victim without opening his Mouth. When the Sun hid his Head, the Day was benighted, and the Earth was moved, he is not moved, that Patience might have its plenary and perfect Conſummation in Chriſt. He ſtuck at nothing, not Contumelies, not Poverty, no depth of abaſement and of ſufferings for the Welfare and Salvation of others, ſo intirely did he deny himſelf his private Pleaſure and Emolument. The Love of God in ſending his Son (the moſt free and ſelf-moving, the moſt undeſerv'd and ill deſerv'd, the moſt pure and unſelf-intereſted, the moſt ardent and beneficent, the moſt condeſcending, coſtly and expenſive Love that ever was) is ſuperlative and tranſcendent. He ſpared not his own Son, but wrote his Love to us in Characters of his own Blood. 1 Joh. 4. 10. Herein was Love, not that we loved God, but that he loved us, and ſent his Son to be the Propitiation for our Sins. To cut off his own Right-hand (as it were) to part with the Apple of his own Eye, to abandon ſo divine a Perſon as his own Son (ſo near and dear to God) to unſpeakable Labours, unparallelled Sufferings, inſupportable Torments, and to bring them upon him for us Rebels and Traitors, this ſpeaketh the immenſity of his Love to us, raiſeth it to the higheſt pitch, and maketh it ſtupendious and amazing. So the Goſpel-diſpenſation of things is ſuperlative and tranſcendent, and is celebrated by the Holy Writers both for the tranſcendent Grace of it and Glory of it. Eph. 16. 2 Cor. 3. 9, 10.

The Chriſtian Religion appeareth, to conſiſt of things Superlative and Tranſcendent, and conſequently if it is of one piece, it's Virtue and Godlineſs muſt be ſomething that is Superlative and Tranſcendent (ſuch as divine Illumination, Sanctification, the Faith of God's Elect, the Holy Spiritual Life, the Spiritual-religious Worſhip, the imitation of Chriſt, the Divine Charity, which are of Tranſcendent kind and degree) whence a Judgment may be made of ſome modern Elogies of the Chriſtian Religion. (t) One counteth good Nature the prime intendment of the Chriſtian Religion, and commendeth the bleſſed Jeſus for the ſweetneſs and obligingneſs of his Converſation. Another commendeth the Chriſtian Religion as every way well calculated for the Peace and Order of the World, and calleth it the beſt natur'd Inſtitution in the World. A Third ſaith, The Chriſtian Religion is adapted to the true Temper of Humane Nature, the Reaſons and Underſtandings of Mankind, and is ſuch as any wiſe and prudent Man would have pitch'd upon. Which modern Elogies of the Chriſtian Religion may be underſtood in no ill Senſe, but the true meaning of them ſeemeth to be this very ill Senſe; they make the vile and vulgar things of the World, common good Nature, civil Virtue and Societiveneſs, the regulating Humane Nature according to common Prudence (the humane and mundane Morality and living like Men) to be the Virtue and Godlineſs of the Chriſtian Religion. Which is a vulgarizing the Divinity of it, a commonizing and profaning the Sanctity of it, and a degrading the Tranſcendency of it to the common level. He that ſaith (u) A true and lively Divine Charity is the only School-miſtreſs of Life, teacheth me Saving Chriſtianity: But he that teacheth me only to be good natur'd, civilly obliging, and to keep Humane Nature in due Temper according to common Prudence, teacheth me nothing of Chriſtian and Divine Virtue. There are the ſame Names of Virtues and Vices in Chriſtianity, common Humanity, Judaiſm and Paganiſm: But the things ſignified by thoſe Names are of different kind; as that Divine Faith whereby Chriſtian Believers are juſtified (and ſanctified) is of a different kind from any thing, that in graceleſs unregenerate Humanity is called Faith. So the Chriſtians Divine Charity (the Love that God is, which is the Life of God and of Regenerate Souls) is of a different kind from any thing, that the virtuous Pagans call Charity. (w) They pretend to a Benevolentia Univerſalis (βούλεσθαι πᾶσι τ' ἀγαθά, to have good Will to all) yet murder'd by Thouſands thoſe innocent Chriſtians, for whom the Divine Charity would have oblig'd them to die. The main buſineſs of Chriſtianity is tranſcendent to what unholy Mankind count Well-doing and Virtue, viz. To eſtimate aright Chriſt crucified, to take up his Croſs, to crucifie the Fleſh with the Affections and Luſts, to croſs the grain of ſenſitive Nature, to be ſanctified in Body, Soul and Spirit, to exterminate all κακοήθεια, malignity of Nature, to ſhake off every evil Habit and eſchew every

(p) Clem. Alex. Strom. p. m. 53.

(q) Phot. Cod. 277. Col. 1556.

(r) J. Mart. Dial. c. Tryph. p. 336, 350.

(s) Quæ conviciorum probra patienter audita? quæ contumeliarum tolerata ludibria? Ille innocens, ille juſtus inter facinoroſos deputatur, & Dei Sermo ad victimam tacens ducitur. S. Cypr. de Bono patient.

(t) Cenſure of the Platonic Philoſ. p. 27.

(u) Unica magiſtra divina quædam charitas, vera & viva charitas. Acont.

(w) Simplic. in Epict. p. 141.

tempting Bait, to Watch and Pray, that we enter not into Temptation, not to be defiled or ſinfully diſturb'd, but to live in Purity and joyous Peace, to make God and Heaven All and the World as nothing, to imploy all our Talents in his Service, to prefer his Honour and Intereſt before all things, to imitate his Divine Nature and Practice, and to be God-like in all Purity and Sanctity, in all Grace and Goodneſs.

VI. The Tranſcendence of the Chriſtians Virtue and Godlineſs appeareth from their Regenerate State and Condition; for it is the Virtue and Godlineſs thereof, and can be no lower than their State and Condition, which is magnificent and tranſcendent. (x) All of them are the Children of Light, the Children of the Promiſe, the Children of Abraham, the Children of God, the choſen Nation, the Royal Prieſthood, the true Iſraelites, fore-known and predeſtinated to the Kingdom of God, who hath called them, not only of the Jews, but alſo of the Gentiles. S. Paul had great Reaſon, to ſay, we have receiv'd abundance of Grace, (y) For we have not only received from Grace ſo much as is needful for the taking away Sin, but much more. For thereby we were freed from Puniſhment, and have put off all Wickedneſs, and were regenerated from above, and are riſen again the old Man being buried, and were redeem'd, and were ſanctified, and brought into Sonſhip and juſtified, and made the Brethren of the only Begotten, and conſtituted Co-heirs, and of the ſame Body with him, and our Initiation is into his Fleſh, and as the Body hath Union with the Head, ſuch is our Union with him. If a Man is Chriſtianiz'd, this is (z) a return to Sonſhip, a liberty to call God his Father, to be a conſort of the Grace of Chriſt, to be called a Child of Light, to be a partaker of eternal Glory, and to ſay all at once, it is to be in all plenitude of Benediction in this World, and of the Goods that are laid up for us in the Promiſes in the World to come. Julian asketh, what good Jeſus was the Author of to his Kindred? And the Anſwer is (a) He was made Man, that we might be his Kindred; and what is there on Earth comparably ſo magnificent as this? We are made partakers of the Divine Nature, are filled with the Holy Spirit, gain by him Spiritual Cognation with God, he hath made himſelf our Brother, we are called the Sons of God who is over all. To be ſo highly dignify'd and ennobled, as to be the Children of Light, the Children of Abraham, the true Iſraelites, the Children of God, the choſen Generation, the Royal Prieſthood, the Brethren of Chriſt and his Co-heirs, the Members of his Body, Bone of his Bone and Fleſh of his Fleſh, to be juſtified, ſanctified, regenerated, entitled to all the Promiſes and to an heavenly Glory, is a Condition at a great rate tranſcendent to unregenerate Humanity; which tranſcendent Condition none can be in without the Virtue and Godlineſs that conſtituteth it; nor can any Virtue or Godlineſs conſtitute it, which is not tranſcendent to Humane Nature in its lapſed State. Their Law of Life alſo (or Diſcipline of Virtue) that are in ſo tranſcendent a Condition, muſt neceſſarily be of a tranſcendent Strain. And their tranſcendent Condition it ſelf is ſuch a Law of Life; for the State and Condition that any Man is rightfully in, is a Law of Life to him. The Sons of God are neceſſarily oblig'd to live agreeably to their Deſcent and Parentage, their Kind and Family, their Rank and Relation, their high Condition and their Hopes.

The entrance into this tranſcendent Condition ſheweth the tranſcendence of its Virtue, which is not uſually acquir'd but by ſuch a method, as is competently well deſcrib'd by the Council of Trent. (b) "By the hearing of Faith, "by underſtanding themſelves to be ungodly "Sinners, by the fear of Divine Juſtice, by "conſidering the Mercy of God in Chriſt, by "loving God initially, by hating their Sins, "and by receiving the Grace of God, Sinners "come to a ſanctification and renovation of the "inward Man, whence a Man of Unrighteous "is made Righteous, and of an Enemy a Friend, "that he may be an Heir according to the "Hope of eternal Life. (c) Chriſtianus Gerſon a Jew converted to Chriſtianity and baptiz'd in Germany in the Year 1600. continu'd in great anxiety of Mind Fourteen Weeks together, inſomuch that he could not reliſh either Meat or Drink, nor take any quiet Sleep. In the Progreſs of a Sinners Converſion to Godlineſs ſuch difficulties and conflicts uſually occurr, that ſpeak it a ſort of Virtue, hugely diſtant from, and tranſcendent to, ordinary moral Virtue, which is ſo remote from it, that it may indiſpoſe Men to the Acquiſition of it. (d) For Men never much affrighted with the danger, wherein all by Nature ſtand, nor inflam'd with the Love of a better Country than they enjoy, cannot addreſs themſelves to any reſolute or ſpeedy departure out of the Territories of civil Moralities, within which if Satan hold us, he maketh full reckoning of us as of his civil or natural Subjects. (e) Nemo capeſſit nova, niſi quem pænituit priorum. Therefore to the way of removing out of Satans Territories into the Territories of Godlineſs (which is a great remove) the civil Moralities may by accident be a great Impediment. For the way is a duly humbling Repentance. The high and brave Spirit of Man muſt be broken; he muſt be poor, that he may be rich; empty, that he may be filled; have nothing, to poſſeſs all things; be loſt, that he may be found; be condemned, that he may be pardon'd; be blind, that he may ſee; be a fool, that he may be wiſe; and die, that he may be made alive.

VII. The Tranſcendence of the Chriſtians Virtue and Godlineſs appeareth from their good Life, which is not ſuch good Life, that is competible to deadly Sinners (remaining ſuch) nor doth it conſiſt of (f) thoſe opera moralia, or good Works that a Man may perform without Grace, as ſome School-men ſay (who contradiſtinguiſh thoſe opera moralia, to their opera meritoria) nor is it only ſuch good Life, to which we are inſtituted by common Ethicks (which yet are called Ars benè vivendi, benè vivendi Diſciplina, the (x) Omnes filii lucis filii promiſſionis, filii Abrahæ, filii Dei, genus electum, regale ſacerdotium, veri Iſraelitæ, præcogniti, & præordinati in regnum Dei, qui eos vocavit non ſolum ex Judæis, ſed etiam ex Gentibus. Author. de vocat. Gentium. l. 1. c. 6.

Art

(y) Οὐ γὰρ ὅσον ἐχρῄζομεν εἰς τὴν τῆς ἁμαρτίας ἀναίρεσιν, τοσοῦτον ἐλάβομεν μόνον ἐκ τῆς χάριτος, ἀλλὰ καὶ πολλῷ πλέον. Καὶ γὰρ καὶ κολάσεως ἀπηλλάγημεν καὶ κακίαν ἀπεδυσάμεθα πᾶσαν, καὶ ἀνεγεννήθημεν ἄνωθεν, καὶ ἀνέστημεν τοῦ παλαιοῦ ταφέντος ἀνθρώπου, καὶ ἀπελυτρώθημεν καὶ ἡγιάσθημεν, καὶ εἰς υἱοθεσίαν ἤχθημεν, καὶ ἐδικαιώθημεν, καὶ ἐγενόμεθα ἀδελφοὶ τοῦ μονογενοῦς, καὶ συγκληρονόμοι καὶ σύσσωμοι αὐτοῦ καθέστημεν, καὶ εἰς τὴν σάρκα αὐτοῦ τελοῦμεν, καὶ ὥσπερ σῶμα κεφαλῇ οὕτως ἡνώμεθα. S. Chryſoſt. in Rom. Hom. 10.

(z) Ἡ εἰς υἱοθεσίαν ἐπάνοδος· ἡ παῤῥησία τοῦ καλεῖν ἑαυτοῦ πατέρα τὸν Θεόν. Κοινωνὸν γενέσθαι τῆς χάριτος τοῦ Χριστοῦ· τέκνον φωτὸς χρηματίζειν· δόξης αἰδίου μετέχειν. Καὶ ἁπαξαπλῶς ἐν παντὶ πληρώματι εὐλογίας γενέσθαι ἔν τε αἰῶνι τούτῳ, καὶ ἐν τῷ μέλλοντι τῶν ἐν ἐπαγγελίαις ἀποκειμένων ἡμῖν ἀγαθῶν. S. Baſil. de ſp. ſanct. c. 15.

(a) S. Cyr. c. Jul. l. 6. p. 214.

(b) Ap. Petav. T. 1. l. 10. c. 27. S. 12.

(c) Henrich. de ver. Chriſt. rel. p. 369.

(d) Dr. Jackſon origin of Unbelief. S. 1. ch. 5.

(e) Apulejus de Deo Socrat.

(f) Durand. l. 2. diſt. 28. Qu. 2.

Art or Diſcipline of living Well) but it is a Tranſcendent to what unregenerate Humanity calleth good Life. For

(1.) The Chriſtians good Life is no lower than their new Life (and the Divine Virtues thereof;) for they ſuppoſe, that the Life which is antecedent thereto, is a deadly evil Life and an abiding in Death. Whence they call their good Life (g) τὸν ἐξ ἀναστάσεως βίον, the Life which they have and live from their Reſurrection. Their good Life therefore is no lower than the Righteouſneſs of the Kingdom of God. Rom. 14. 17. no lower than the Life which they have and live in the Divine Spirit, whereby they are inabled to do thoſe things, which the natural Man cannot turn his Hand to, to bear thoſe Sufferings which meer Man cannot undergo, to practiſe Virtues that are againſt the Hair and grievous to Nature (to love Enemies, forgive Injuries, acknowledge our Faults when juſtly reprov'd, and to expoſe our ſelves to reproach, ignominy and torments for the Glory of God (h) is a Goodneſs that is of the Holy Spirit) whence ſome have thus defin'd the Holy Spirit, It is that whereby we are made more than Men. The Chriſtians Virtues therefore are of Tranſcendence Divine, if they live in the Spirit, the fruit whereof is Love, Joy, Peace, Long-ſuffering, Gentleneſs, Goodneſs, Faith, Meekneſs, Temperance. Their good Life is no lower than their Life of Faith, which is the ſummary of their Godlineſs, according to what the Hebrew Doctors ſay. (i) Six hundred and thirteen Precepts were given to Moſes, but the Pſalmiſt hath reduced them to eleven; the Prophet Iſaiah cometh, and hath reduced them unto ſix; the Prophet Micah cometh and hath reduc'd them to three; the Prophet Iſaiah again hath reduced them to two; but the Prophet Habakkuk cometh, and hath reduced them all to one: the Juſt ſhall live by his Faith. There is no living unto God according to his Inſtitution of Sanctity without being God's Believers (without Faith it is impoſſible to pleaſe him) nor can their Life of Godlineſs be a lower Life than that which is implied in their Character the Life of Faith. They live in the exerciſe of it (the practiſe of Believing divinely) they practiſe univerſal Righteouſneſs by it (whence they are divinely Juſt, Merciful, Chaſt, Temperate, rejoicing in Hope, patient in Tribulation) they do the great things of the Men of Faith, repelling Temptations, conquering fleſhly Allurements, ſubduing ſenſitive Appetites, deſpiſing the World and curing their worldly Mind and Life. (k) Ἡ πίστις μετεωρίζει τὴν ψυχὴν, Faith raiſeth the Soul to an high and elevated Life. And ſuch is the Chriſtians holy and heavenly Life, nor is their good Life of a lower order than vita ſanctorum (the Life of thoſe that are of the Saint of God-kind and Family) the Morals of it are mores ſanctitatis (whence it muſt be called Sanctity of Virtue) and a principal Law of it is ἁγιοπρεπῶς πολιτεύεσθαι, to live as becometh Saints. Whom ſome have compar'd to Heaven (l) becauſe they ſhine with ſo many Virtues, as Heaven doth with Stars: Our Lord ſaying; ye are the Light of the World, ſhine like Luminaries in the World. The Tranſcendence of their Condition as the Lights of the World ſpeaketh the Tranſcendence of their good Life, an eminent Branch whereof is their heavenly mindedneſs. For their Religion inſtituteth them, to be heavenly in their eſtimation of things, Election, Affections and Converſation, to make account, that they have no very valuable Home, or Country, Eſtate or Treaſure on this ſide Heaven; to make it the buſineſs of their Life to ſeek and ſecure the heavenly Felicity, to carry it above the World, and (m) to count nothing here their own, ἀλλὰ ζῆν ἑτέρωθι, but to live elſewhere, and to deſpiſe the preſent things ὡς οὐκ ὄντα, as things that are not, to be Strangers (n) as to the Inheritances that are here, mindful only of their own things, but counting all things that are here Alien. The Chriſtian Life could not be the Holy Life, if it was not the heavenly Life (for none can be the godly affected and addicted and God's Adherents, that are the worldly affected and addicted and the World's Adherents) nor could it be the Life of Faith, if it was not the Life of Divine Charity, which is connex'd with Faith, as the heat of the Fire is with the light of it, and which (in various Senſes and for various Reaſons) may be called univerſal Divine Virtue and Godlineſs. For it keepeth all the Commandments, all Well-doings not qualify'd with it are but ill kind of doings (whence the Schools may be allow'd to call it the form of all the Virtues) and in the ſame Senſe that all Wickedneſs is (Selfiſhneſs or) the Self-love Practice, all the true goodneſs of Practice (to be godly and divinely ſelf-denying, lowly minded, innocent, uninvidious, patient, benign, beneficent, pure and peaceable, juſt and merciful) is the godly Love-practice. The (genuine) Chriſtians therefore out-live all the World, becauſe they out-love all the World, their holy and divine kind of Love is (o) Chriſtiani nominis theſaurus (the Treaſure of the Chriſtian Name) the ſummary of their Myſtery of Godlineſs, they dwell in Love and dwell in God and God in them. 1 Joh. 4. 16. Their good Life therefore is no lower order of Virtue than the Love that God is (as the Father of the divine Family) which is the true greatneſs and goodneſs, lovelineſs without any odiouſneſs, nobleneſs without any vileneſs.

(2.) Throughout univerſal Paganiſm there is no ſuch thing as a duly ſerious concern for the Salvation of the Soul, which muſt be chiefly taken care of, or it will be loſt (Ficinus in his Proem before the Books of Plato exhorteth to the reading of them, becauſe there young Men may learn inter jocandum præcepta morum, the Precepts of Life and Manners that are delivered joaking:) But the Chriſtians good Life is a ſuperlative and tranſcendent care of the Soul. Such as Maximilian King of Bohemia (afterwards Emperour) expreſſed in his Anſwer to the Pope, (who perſwaded him to be a good Catholick with the promiſe of many inviting Honours and Emoluments) I thank your Holineſs, but my Soul's health is dearer unto me than all things in the World. In Paganiſm there are generous Sayings (p) that no Gains ſhould allure Men, nor Torments affright them, to do any vile thing (q) rebus omnibus dignitatem anteponunt (r) yet there are not in it any Martyrs of Piety. But the Chriſtians good Life is a tranſcendent regard for Sin and for Holineſs as ſuch, they are not of the graceleſs ſinning kind, nor can they diſpenſe with ſinning againſt God at any rate, but their voice is that of the Bohemian Proteſtants in their Perſecution. Omnia acceptamus, ſive famem, ſive funem, ſive rogum, potius quam ut peccemus in Deum. We embrace every thing, whether

(g) S. Baſil. de. ſp. ſanct. c. 15. Homo animalis ſpiritum non habens. 1 Cor. 2. 14.

(h) Acont. Stratagem. p. 222. ed. An. 1554.

Gal. 5. 22, 23, 25.

(i) Hotting. de jur. Hebr. p. 3, 4.

(k) S. Chryſoſt. T. 5. or. 55.

1 Pet. 4. 6.

(l) Quia quot cœlum ſtellis, tot ſancti virtutibus eluceſcunt: dicente Domino; vos eſtis lux mundi, lucete ſicut luminaria in mundo. P. Chryſol. Ser. 120.

(m) Gr. Naz. or. 3. p. 94.

(n) Τῶν τῇδε κληρονομημάτων, μόνων τῶν ἰδίων μεμνημένοι, τὰ δὲ ἐνταῦθα πάντα ἀλλότρια ἡγούμενοι. Clem. Str. l. 7. p. 536.

(o) Tertull. de patient.

(p) Gat. Not. in Ant. p. 107.

(q) Cic. de off. l. 3.

(r) S. Chryſoſt. in 1 Cor. p. 264.

whether Hunger or Halter or Fire, rather than (wittingly and willingly) to Sin againſt God. So the Chriſtian Martyrs fear'd not Death, but to Sin againſt God. They adher'd to Righteouſneſs at the rate of theſe following Verſes. (s)

Ἴτω μὲν πῦρ, ἴτω δὲ φάσγανον, τέμνε
Κάταιθε σάρκας, ἐμπλήσθητί μου πίνων
Κέλαινον αἷμα. Πρόσθε γὰρ κάτω γαίης
Ιασιν ἄστρα, γῆ δ᾽ ἄνεισ᾽ ἐς οὐρανὸν,
Πρὶν ἐξ ἐμοῦ σοι θῶπ᾽ ἀπαντῆσαι λόγον.

Let Fire burn my Fleſh, and Sword my Body cut,
And with my deareſt Blood thy raging Paſſion glut,
The Stars ſhall ſooner fall and Earth to Heaven go,
Than any lying word out of my Mouth ſhall flow.

The Chriſtians good Life is a tranſcendent regard for God and his Service, his Favour and Diſpleaſure, his Rewards and Puniſhments (which may well turn this World's gay Specioſities into a nigrum nihil, and make the noiſie things that are here without ſence or ſound) they make light of Afflictions in compariſon of what God will inflict, Hell is with them no leſs than Hell and Heaven no leſs than Heaven. (t) If there was no Hell, yet an heavenly Glory being propos'd to us, ſo that we may have a Kingdom and be glorified with the Son of God, it ought to be lamented with Thouſands of Tears, that Men ſhould deprive themſelves of ſuch tranſcendent Goods as theſe. If I was to be cut in pieces, if I was to die Ten Thouſand Deaths, if I ſhould part with Ten Thouſand Souls and as many Bodies every day, yet all this I ought to ſuffer for ſuch a Glory. But ſeeing Hell is at hand, the never dying Worm, the Fire unquenchable and the gnaſhing of Teeth, how is it that we do not open our Eyes, but continue fatning our Bodies and neglecting our Souls? Godlineſs of Mind and Life conſiſteth in a Sovereign and tranſcendent Regard for theſe great inviſible things (the ungodly minded are therefore ſuch, becauſe they are otherwiſe minded, the great things have not their Sovereign Concern and Care, Eſtimation and Affection, but are with them of underling Regard) to which the things that are ſeen are immenſly diſproportionate. Agreeably to which immenſe diſproportion our Saviour initiateth Men into Godlineſs calling them to Self-denial; for Self-denial is a denying totum me, all that I am in the World. (u) Let therefore every Man examine his own Heart, whether he can ſay of his deareſt Pledges, all theſe have I counted Dung for Chriſt's ſake. Of a like tranſcendent ſtrain with their Self-denial, is the Activa and Paſſive Virtue to which Chriſtians are inſtituted. Which is nothing leſs then (w) τὸ σφοδρὸν τῆς χάριτος, a vehemence of Grace, and the holy fervour of Love, which doth not move drowſily or remiſly, nor is it cold and indifferent, but its Motions are live-ardent, it runneth and flieth, and is an holy kind of Zeal in the Service of God (for qui non zelat non amat;) nothing leſs than the management of an holy War offenſive and defenſive (of infinite neceſſity and greateſt hazard, wherein if they are vanquiſh'd, all is loſt) an agoniſtical ſtriving, wreſtling, running, fighting for Victory and Immortality, for their Innocence and Sanctity and for the Life of the Soul (quotidiè de vita dimicamus, S. Cypr.) nothing leſs than praying continually, earneſt taking heed, aſſiduous diligence, all diligence, a making Godlineſs their buſineſs, which requireth the whole Man and the whole Soul, and muſt be their care of all cares (for it is not a little care or pains, that will do a great deal of Work or any great Work, no excellent thing can be ſo done or gained, and none miſcarry but by their negligence;) nothing leſs than a purſuing Holineſs, abounding in every good Work, thriving in the holy Life, growing to be perfect Men, working out their Salvation, preſſing toward the Mark (as the Race-horſes ſtretch themſelves vehemently toward the end of their Race) for the Prize of the high calling of God. Phil. 3. 14. The Sublimity of their paſſive Virtue is above the viſible Heavens. (x) For Heaven, Day and Night doth not ſo glorifie God as an holy Soul. As he that beholdeth the Pulchritude of Heaven ſaith, Glory be to thee, O God, what a Work haſt thou created? So doth he that beholdeth the Virtue of a Man and much more. For who is not ſtruck with admiration, when one that is a Man of the common Nature, and converſant in the midſt of Men, is as an adamant in the midſt of ſwarms of Sufferings? When being in the midſt of Fire and Swords and wild Beaſts, he is ſtronger than an adamant, and vanquiſheth all things for the Profeſſion of Godlineſs? When being reviled, he bleſſeth; being evil ſpoken of he praiſeth; when being injur'd he prayeth for the injurious; when he doth good to them, that lie in wait to do him a miſchief and make War upon him. For theſe and ſuch things as theſe do more glorifie God than the viſible Heavens.

(3.) The Chriſtians good Life is a tranſcendent goodneſs and meekneſs towards Men. For it is not to be ſuppos'd, (y) that the intemperate Zealotick Practices of ſome in the elder times of the Church (in pulling down the Heathen Temples, trampling on their Altar, rudely treating the Preſident) the fierce Digladiations and Contentions, Slaughters and Perſecutions that for a long time prevailed in the Church, the Chriſtians thundring out Anathema's againſt one another upon every trifling matter of difference, and their being bloody Furiſts and Gladioliſts in many ages, are reconcileable with the goodneſs and gentleneſs of the Chriſtian Life. (z) The Name of Jeſus ἐμποιεῖ θαυμασίαν τινὰ πρᾳότητα, ingendreth a certain wonderful meekneſs, and modeſty, and philanthropy, and goodneſs, and gentleneſs. (a) They that were more ferine than Wolves having receiv'd the Goſpel προβάτων ἡμερώτεροι γεγόνασι, became more gentle than Sheep. (b) This is the ſimplicity that is to be ſeen in the Church, this is the Charity which ought to be had, that the love of the Brotherhood imitate the Doves, that their manſuetude and lenity equalize that of Lambs and Sheep. How incongruous in a Chriſtian Breaſt is the ferity of Wolves, the rage of Dogs, the deadly poiſon of Serpents and bloody ſavageneſs of wild Beaſts? (d) We ſhould remember, what Name Chriſt giveth his People, by what Title he calleth his Flock: He calleth them Sheep, that the Chriſtian ſimplicity may equalize that of Sheep: He calleth them Lambs, that the ſimplicity of the Mind may imitate their innocent Nature. (e) We diſcern one another by the Mark of Innocence and Modeſty. In our places of Aſſembly (f) nothing is heard, but that which maketh Humane, Meek, Modeſt, Chaſt, communicative of the

(s) Euſeb. pr. Ev. l. 6. c. 6.

(t) S. Chryſoſt. in Johan. p. 891.

(u) Mr. Hales Ser. on Matth. 26. 75.

(w) S. Chryſoſt.

(x) S. Chryſoſt. in 1 Cor. Hom. 18. p. 355.

(y) Baron. ad an. 307. n. 17. & ad an. 308. n. 91. Herald. in Min. Fel. p. 77.

(z) Orig. c. Celſ. l. 1. p. 53.

(a) S. Chryſoſt. T. 6. p. 623.

(b) Hæc eſt in Eccleſia noſcenda ſimplicitas, hæc charitas obtinenda, ut columbas dilectio fraternitatis imitetur, ut manſuetudo & lenitas agnis & ovibus coæquetur. Quid facit in pectore Chriſtiano luporum feritas? & canum rabies? & venenum lethale ſerpentum? & cruenta ſævitia beſtiarum? S. Cypr. de Unit. Eccleſ.

(d) Meminiſſe debemus quo vocabulo plebem ſuam Chriſtus appellet, quo titulo gregem ſuum nuncupet: Oves nominat, ut innocentia Chriſtiana ovibus æquetur: Agnos vocat, ut agnorum naturam ſimplicem ſimplicitas mentis imitetur. Idem de Zel. & Liv.

(e) Nos innocentiæ ac modeſtiæ ſigno facile dignoſcimus.

(f) Aliud auditur nihil, niſi quod humanos faciat, niſi quod mites, verecundos, pudicos, caſtos, familiaris communicatores rei, & cum omnibus conſolida

Goods of this Life, and conjoyned with all by the firmeſt Bonds of Kindred. (g) We that are commanded, to love Enemies, whom have we to hate? We that being hurt may not return like for like, whom can we hurt? Malè velle male facere, male dicere, male cogitare de quoquam ex æquo vetamur. We are the ſame to the Emperours and to our Neighbours, and are equally forbidden, to will, do, ſpeak, think evil of any. Theſe are great things, but we ſhall hear far greater things than theſe. (h) Amongſt the Pagans Sheep and Lambs were Names of Reproach and denoted Stolidity, Meekneſs was of an ill Name amongſt them, οἱ πρᾶοι, the Men of meek and mild temper were thought none of the wiſeſt: but our Saviour pronounceth the meek bleſſed, (i) againſt the general and commonly known Opinion of men. And he not only advanceth Meekneſs to a Beatitude, but he advanceth it to an extraordinary Sublimity. Chriſt hath taught a new ſort of Manſuetude (which muſt be underſtood with a due limitation) the great King of Heaven (ſaith Iſidore Peluſiota) came down from above, to deliver to the World the Laws of an Heavenly Converſation, which he hath propoſed in a way of conflict and ſtriving quite contrary to the Order of the Olympick Games. There he that fighteth and getteth the Victory receiveth the Crown, here he that is ſtricken and beaten and beareth it patiently, hath the honour and applauſe. There he that returneth blow for blow is celebrated: here he that turneth the other Cheek, is celebrated in the Theatre of Angels. The Victory is meaſur'd not by Revenge, but by a wiſe and generous Patience. This is the new Law of Crowns, this is the new way of Conflict and Contention. (k) Chriſtians do not hate, but pity their Perſecutors, lament for their Sin and future Miſery, and would not have them puniſh'd (which is φιλανθρωπίας τὸ μέγεθος, the greatneſs of Philanthropy) they pray for their Enemies and love thoſe that hate them, bleſs thoſe that curſe them, (l) being reviled they bleſs, being perſecuted they ſuffer it, being defamed they intreat, (m) and they are taught by their ἥμερος ϗ φιλάνθρωπος νομοθεσία, Law of Gentleneſs and Philanthropy, not to reſiſt their Enemies and Perſecutors; which ſuperlative manſuetude muſt not be counted common good Nature, (n) that ſoftneſs and goodneſs of temper which are naturally implanted by the Creator in the Rational Nature; for the Chriſtians learn'd it only from their Lawgiver. (o) Chriſtians (ſaith Origen) have ſuch Laws of manſuetude, that they may be kill'd as Sheep. (p) In their Apparel and Diet and the reſt of their Life they ſhew θαυμαστὴν ϗ ὁμολογουμένως παράδοξον, the marvellous and confeſſedly ſtrange nature of their inſtitution of Life; they dwell in their own Countries, but as Strangers, they partake of all things as Citizens, and they ſuffer all things as Strangers; every ſtrange Land is to them a Country, and their own Country is to them a ſtrange Land. They marry as all do, and beget Children, but do not (as others) expoſe their Children. They uſe a common Table not-common (not polluted) they are in the Fleſh, but do not live according to the Fleſh. They have their Manſion on Earth, but their Converſation in Heaven. They obey Humane Laws, but by their own Lives they tranſcend the Laws. Ἀγαπῶσι πάντας ϗ ὑπὸ πάντων διώκονται, they love all men and are perſecuted by all men. They are unknown by the World, yet condemned by the World. They are put to death, yet quickened unto life. They are poor, yet make many rich. They are ſtript of all things, yet abound with all things. They are diſgrac'd and in their diſgraces they are glorious. They are infam'd, yet juſtified, they are reviled, yet bleſs; they are contumeliouſly treated, but treat others with great reſpect; they do good, but are puniſh'd as evil men; being puniſh'd they rejoyce, as being (in death) made alive. The Jews war againſt them as Aliens, and by the Greeks they are perſecuted: but they that hate them, cannot ſhew cauſe why they are inimical to them.

VIII. The tranſcendence of the Chriſtians Virtue and Godlineſs appeareth from the tranſcendent bad Entertainment, which it met with in the World at the riſe of it; which plainly argueth, that it is of kind and quality (the Saint of God-kind of Excellency, or) Sanctity of Virtue and of Tranſcendence Divine. The Tragical Scene of Hatred and Perſecution that was raiſed in the World at the riſe of it, demonſtrateth the truth of this Character of it. For,

(1.) The Adverſary to Chriſt and Chriſtians (their Religion and Virtue) was the World, which ſometimes ſignifieth only the multitude of Mankind (ſo we call a vaſt multitude a World of People:) but uſually it ſignifieth the multitude of Mankind, ſo as to connote their kind and quality, which is the Mundane and Ungodly, and ſo the World ſignifieth the multitude of Mankind, that are Cives hujus Mundi (in S. Auſtin's Senſe) the World's partiſans and adherents againſt God and Godlineſs, Joh. 17. 16. They are not of the World, even as I am not of the World. Joh. 15. 19. If ye were of the World, the World would love his own: but becauſe ye are not of the World, but I have choſen you out of the World, therefore the World hateth you. The Mundane Genius (the Spirit of the World whereby all ungodly Mankind are animated) had a deadly averſation from the Chriſt of God (the God-kind of Chriſt) his Sanctity and Divinity of Life and Spirit. In him no ſuch accompliſhments were reſplendent, which are taking to Mankind in their Mundane Naturaliſm (ſuch as Secular Philoſophy, Wit, Eloquence, Power and Pomp, Mundane Gallantry) his Accompliſhments were of another kind, ſuch as were alien from the World, and as repugnant to the World as Righteouſneſs to Unrighteouſneſs (deep Humility, Lamb-like Meekneſs, Divine Graciouſneſs and Benignity, Self-reſigning, Soul-melting Love, the enraviſhing Excellencies, Endearments and Precioſities of a crucify'd Saviour;) and as Quintilian counteth it a proficiency in Oratory, to be like Cicero: ſo it muſt be counted ſomething of Sanctity and Saving Grace, to like and reliſh the Life and Genius of the Chriſt of God. It is not reaſonable therefore, to ſuppoſe, that the Chriſtian Religion is ſo ſuitable to the unregenerate man's Reaſon (to the Reaſons and Underſtandings of Mankind) that it is ſuch, as any wiſe and prudent man would have pitch'd upon; for the worldly wiſe and prudent notwithſtanding their unregenerate Reaſon want their Eye-ſight, are Aliens from the true knowledge of God and Chriſt, have no diſcernment of his Excellency (which is a tranſcendent to unregenerate Humanity) their Reaſon, Wiſdom and Prudence doth not tranſcend the Mundane Genius, to which Chriſt is a Stone of ſtumbling and Rock of offence, and which at the riſe of Chriſtianity did not only (q) abuſe him by maledictions of words, but germanitatis neceſſitudine copulatos. Arnob. adv. Gent. l. 4. p. 152.

(g) Tertull. Apol. c. 37.

(h) Herald. in Arnob. p. 152.

(i) Ibid. p. 94.

(k) J. Mart. p. 56, 91, 363. S. Chryſoſt. T. 5. p. 548.

(l) Orig. c. Celſ. l. 5. p. 273.

(m) Ibid. l. 2. p. 79.

(n) Τὸ ἐπιεικὲς ϗ τὸ εὐσταθὲς, ἐσπαρμένα φυσικῶς ὑπὸ τοῦ δημιουργοῦ τῇ λογικῇ φύσει. Ibid. l. 7. p. 363.

(o) Ibid. l. 8. p. 115.

(p) J. Mart. Ep. ad Diognet. p. 496.

Multum profeciſſe cui placuit Cicero.

(q) Verborum maledictionibus Chriſtum ſcindere, verum etiam bello gravi atque omnibus perſequi telorum effuſionibus & ruinis. Arnob. adv. Gent. l. 1. p. 41.

rais'd a War againſt him and perſecuted him by the ruining effuſions of Darts. He that is born after the Fleſh, perſecuteth him that is born after the Spirit. (r) The Chriſtians Religion and Virtue was a Stranger of heavenly deſcent introduc'd into the World of unregenerate Mankind, that were Aliens from it and Enemies to it becauſe it is the Virtue and Godlineſs of Regeneracy, and not that which is of the old Houſe.

(2.) The World was outragiouſly the Adverſary of Chriſt and Chriſtians (their Virtue and Religion) which was ſo far from gaining them the Honour and Favour of the World, or ſaving them from the ignominy and hatred of it, that it expos'd them thereto at the moſt ſuperlative rate. For the Goſpel (s) and other Books of Learning are full of the Jews horrible Reproaches and malicious Calumnies of Chriſt, whom the Gentiles imitated, (t) in their Commentaries of the Acts of Pilate and our Saviour (full of Blaſphemies and Contumelies of Chriſt) which were taught in the Schools, and the Boys had them daily in their Mouths. So Lucian's Name for our Saviour ὁ ἀνασκολοπιζόμενος, is the ſame with the Jews תלוי (u) the Jews and Pagans agree in imputing his Divine Miracles to Art Magick, and agree alſo, to have any one rather than Chriſt. Not this man but Barabbas, ſaith the Jew. (w) Let Jonas be conſecrated a God rather than Jeſus, ſaith the Pagan. His Name made his Followers infamous and odious throughout the World, which was filled with hatred againſt the Chriſtian Name (odium erga nomen Chriſtianum, oditur in hominibus innocuis etiam nomen innocuum, nominis eſt prælium) whence the Chriſtians that were not chargeable with any (immoral) Crimes, yet were hated, perſecuted and put to death for their Name. If any confeſs'd himſelf a Chriſtian, he was condemned to die without any further Tryal; which the Chriſtians thought very hard meaſure: but the Pagans could not endure the Name Chriſtian (noſtri nominis inhorreſcitis mentione, ſaith Arnobius) and their Name denoted their Sect of Religion, which the Pagans abominated at a far greater rate than any immoral Crimes, and thought it a comprehenſion of all Crimes. (x) Omnia complectitur ſcelera Chriſtianum eſſe. Chriſtianum hominum omnium ſcelerum reum, deorum, imperatorum, legum, morum, naturæ totius inimicum exiſtimas. The Chriſtians as ſuch were thought guilty of all Crimes, the Enemies of the Gods, the Emperours, of the Laws and Cuſtoms (or good Manners) and of univerſal Nature, hoſtes humani generis (the Enemies of Mankind) who if not chargeable with any other Injuſtice, yet as being Chriſtians and perſwading others to be ſuch (y) did τ̃ βίον ἀδικεῖν, do a great deal of hurt to Life. The World of Mankind therefore hated them as Chriſtians, hated them to the death, hated them ſo outragiouſly, (z) that if a Son turned Chriſtian, the Father would diſinherit him; if a Servant turned Chriſtian, the Maſter would impriſon him; and the Husband had rather his Wife ſhould be a Whore than a Chriſtian. Tanti non eſt bonum, quanti eſt odium Chriſtianorum. The emendation of a Servant, Wife or Son cannot counterballance the hatred of the Chriſtians. (a) No Extremities or Puniſhment were thought beyond their demerit (pulling out the Eyes and breaking the Legs were towards them counted gentle puniſhments) they were treated with the utmoſt height of Rage, Barbarity and Cruelty, with all varieties of puniſhment which the Wit of Man could excogitate, (b) and Ulpian the Lawyer (an excellent Lawyer and of great Humane Virtue) is known to have made a Collection of the ſeveral Edicts which the Emperours put out againſt the Chriſtians, to ſhew, by what ways and methods they ought to be puniſh'd and deſtroy'd. Which prodigiouſly ſtrange Phænomena could not have been in the World, if Chriſtianity had not been of this tranſcendence, The great Myſtery of Godlineſs, from which unregenerate Mankind were Aliens, and to which they were deadly inimical.

(3.) The World was a contemptuous reproachful Adverſary to Chriſt and Chriſtians, their Religion and Virtue, which ſpeaketh the tranſcendence of it; for they did not diſcern and reliſh that Saint of God-kind of Excellency, that is in Chriſt crucify'd, in bearing his Croſs, in his Religion and Virtue and Divine Family, that were crucified to the World and the World was crucified unto them. As Friendſhip, ſo Alienation (which is to be dead or crucify'd as to any livelineſs of Affection and Appetite) is mutual, and ſuch an Alienation there was between the Chriſtians and the World: the World was to them an Alien and they were the ſame to the World, 1 Joh. 3. 1. The World knoweth us not. They were counted alieni by the Jews, (c) and extraneous by the Pagans, (d) with whom it was matter of the greateſt ſcorn and deriſion, to worſhip a crucify'd Man put to death as a Malefactor. (e) They contemn'd the Chriſtians as far below them, who had all the Mundane Glories and Proſperities on their ſide (the liberal Arts, greatneſs of Empire and the great Men of the World) they reproach'd them (f) for their meanneſs and poverty in the World, which diſpos'd Men to Chriſtianity, and therefore it diſpos'd them to Chriſtianity, becauſe Chriſtianity is the Saint of God-kind of Virtue; and for the ſame reaſon Mundane Bravery indiſpos'd Men to Chriſtianity, and not many wiſe Men after the Fleſh, not many mighty, not many noble were called. In our own times the Princes in the Eaſt-Indies are ſaid to be (g) jealous of our Religion, becauſe the Chriſtians adore one God great above the reſt, that will not ſuffer any others, diſdaining to communicate himſelf to any; and that ſetteth a greater eſteem and value upon innocent, poor and ſimple People than upon the rich Kings and Princes. This is their ordinary diſcourſe. In all times the Mundane Bravo's have a great averſation from the Chriſtians Sanctity and Virtue (which is oppoſite and deſtructive to their being Mundane Bravo's, would eclipſe their Brightneſs and pull down the Pillars of their Glory) nor would the Philoſophic Bravo's be Chriſtians for this reaſon, (h) Chriſtus humilis eſt, vos ſuperbi. Some think it no way probable, that ſo great a Philoſopher and ſo wiſe a Man as Plutarch ſhould believe the Superſtition and Fopperies of Paganiſm: but they that read the beginning of his Life of Marcellus will be of another mind. Great and immenſe was the fooliſhneſs of the wiſeſt of the Pagans in divine matters, an effect whereof was their reproaching Chriſtianity as a womaniſh Superſtition, a peſtilent Superſtition, (i) Fooliſhneſs and Madneſs. Παραφρονεῖς, thou art delirous, (k) ſaith Trypho to J. Martyr. (l) Epictetus objecteth to the Galileans ſuffering Martyrdom, μανία, madneſs, dementiam exiſtimant, they count it madneſs, (m) ſaith Tertullian, that we prefer obſtinacy rather than ſafety. So Amentia (madneſs) is the Name (n) that the juniour Pliny giveth to the Chriſtian Religion, which therefore cannot be ſuppos'd, to be highly ſuitable to the Reaſons and Underſtandings of unregenerate Mankind, but is neceſſarily to them a veiled Myſtery becauſe of its Saint of God-kind of Excellency, from which they are Aliens. Yet in a conſiderable degree they have a diſcernment of what is juſt and unjuſt, good and evil, and conſequently of a good and bad life. Whence ſome ſay, (o) A good Converſation will indeed command Eſteem, irreſiſtibly extort reſpect from all men.—— Yea it will procure reſpect even from the worſt of men; for it is a miſtake, to think, that bad men really do or can deſpiſe true Goodneſs. In truth however they may pretend, or make a ſhew, to ſlight and ſcorn it, however in words they may flout and revile it, yet in their Hearts they cannot but admire and reverence it. Although their Will may be ſo far perverted, as to ſet them againſt it, yet their reaſon cannot be ſo far deſtroy'd (or natural Light ſo quench'd in them) as to diſapprove it. They do but vilely diſſemble and bely their Conſcience, when they make, as if they did condemn or contemn it. But this Diſcourſe needeth great limitation; for the Sentiments and Opinions of Men touching the goodneſs of things and perſons are hugely diſſonant, and what one approveth and eſteemeth, another condemneth and contemneth. The ancient Pagans that agreed in Paganiſm, yet were hugely diſſonant in their Notions of what is true Goodneſs and a good Converſation. The Jews, Chriſtians, Pagans and Muhammedans are in a conſiderable degree agreed touching what is true Goodneſs and a good Converſation, but their difference is greater than their agreement. The World did not in their Hearts admire and reverence true Goodneſs, when they treated the Son of God with the utmoſt of their hatred and contempt: nor did a good Converſation in thoſe times always command eſteem and irreſiſtibly extort reſpect from all men, when Chriſtianity cum odio ſui cæpit, was hated to the death, ſo ſoon as it was born into the World, when it was thought a Religion fit for none but the Rabble (ſervi & ancillæ) when the Jews and Pagans (p) raged againſt the Chriſtians worſe than againſt any other Enemies, raged againſt them both alive and dead, raged againſt them for true goodneſs, (q) counted them [illegible], thought it Piety and Juſtice to deſtroy them, and poured the utmoſt ſcorn and contempt upon them, (r) pereuntibus addita ludibria. It is too poſſible, that Mankind in their Infidelity, Graceleſneſs and Wickedneſs may condemn and contemn that which is true Goodneſs at as high a rate as Paul perſecuted it; and if Chriſtendom is full ſtock'd with ſuch Cattel, Infidels as to ſaving Faith and the Sons of Carnality and Wickedneſs, true Goodneſs may have much what the ſame treatment in degenerate Chriſtendom as in the old Heathen World. It had ſo in Salvian's days, when true Goodneſs was ſo condemn'd and contemn'd, that none could be in eſteem and credit, none could be ſafe, unleſs he was an evil-doer. (s) The World called Chriſtian in great part conſiſteth of Impietiſts, who inſult over Chriſtians that live piouſly. They that contemn mundane things, and will not drink with the drunken, how are they inſulted over by them that count their Wickedneſs Gallantry and Bravery? Thus it was in S. Auſtin's days, nor is there any great emendation in the ſtate of the Chriſtian World unto this day. For try it who will, and he will find, that the ſtrictneſs and purity of the Chriſtian Life will not conciliate him eſteem and credit, but rather diminiſh his eſteem, and ſpoil his garb and faſhion in the Eyes of the generality of men. It will make him many ways offenſive to them, bring upon him their jealous and ſcornful Eyes, and under foul Names and Notions they will hate, condemn and reproach his Sanctity of Life. But on the other hand a good Converſation hath a mighty force and aptitude, to command eſteem and extort reſpect from all men, and often produceth in ſome men ſuch an effect; no bad men really do or can deſpiſe all true Goodneſs, they cannot but in their Hearts reverence and admire that which is convictively to them true Goodneſs and by the Light of Nature ſuch; none of them can inwardly condemn or contemn true Goodneſs and a good Converſation as ſuch; ſo far it is true, that bad men do not really nor can deſpiſe true Goodneſs.

(r) Scit ſe peregrinam in terris agere, inter extraneos facile inimicos invenire. Tertull. Apol. c. 1.

(s) Buxt. Synag. Jud. p. 165, 176. ed. an. 1614. de Abbrev. p. 10, 87, 88. Lex. Talm. col. 1459.

(t) Baron. ad an. 311. n. 47, 49.

(u) Elmen. in Arnob. p. 40.

(w) Orig. c. Celſ l. 7. p. 370. Tertull. Apol. c. 1, 2, 3. J. Mart. p. 55. Arnob. p. 19.

(x) Annot. in Zoſim. p. 340. Elmenh. in Arnob. p. 4. Annot. in Min. Fel. p. 105.

(y) Clem. Str. p. m. 368.

(z) Tertull. c. nation. l. 1. c. 4.

(a) Baron. ad an. 311. S. 2.

(b) Panciroll. rer. mem. l. 1. p. 275.

(c) Tertull. Apol. c. 31.

(d) Elmen. in Arnob. p. 31.

(e) S. Cyr. c. Jul. l. 6. & 7.

(f) Min. Fel. p. 102.

(g) Le Blanc. Travails, pa. 1. c. 22.

(h) S. Aug. de C. D. l. 10. c. 2

(i) Lactan. l. 5. c. 1

(k) P. 258.

(l) Diſſ. l. 4. c. 7.

(m) Apol. c. 27.

(n) Voſſ. in Plin. Ep. p. 27. Viv. in S. Aug. de C. D. l. 1 c. 27.

(o) Dr. Barrow, Ser. 2. on Rom. 12. 17.

'Ουδὲν ἐν ἀνθρώποισι διαειδὲν νόημα· ἀλλ' ὃ σὺ θαυμάζεις, τῷ δ' ἑτέροισι γέλως. Denique non omnes eadem mirantur amantque. Horat.

(p) Lactan. l. 5. c. 9, 11.

(q) Herald. in Arnob. p. 56.

(r) Tacit. Annal. 15.

(4.) The Chriſtians Godlineſs was at the riſe of it connex'd with the Croſs (of Perſecution and Tribulation) which is one of its great Singularities. For all manner of Vice and all other Sects of Virtue and Religion had much more tolerable quarter in the World than the Chriſtian; there is no ſtanding allotment of the Croſs to any other Sect of Virtue and Religion, nor is there any other Inſtitution of taking up and bearing the Croſs. (t) Epicurus flouriſh'd at Athens, and his Sect of Philoſophers flouriſh'd as much as any other (if not more) in the Roman Empire, which put to death ſholes of Chriſtians for reputed Atheiſm. (u) They that equaliz'd the Philoſophers and the Chriſtians for teaching Virtue, would not have them equaliz'd as to licence and impunity of Diſcipline. (w) Simon Magus by his boaſtful pretenſions rais'd a Sect of Simonians, and no Perſecution was rais'd againſt them as againſt the Chriſtians. (x) In the Jews War the Impoſtor Barchocebas commanded τιμωρίας δεινὰς, grievous Puniſhments to be inflicted upon the Chriſtians only, if they did not deny Jeſus Chriſt and blaſpheme him. Some ſmall matters the Philoſophers ſuffer'd by their unpopular Life (Socrates and Pythagoras ſuffer'd death, but the actors of thoſe Inhumanities afterwards repented of them and repair'd their Honour) the Jews ſuffer'd much, a great Perſecution, from the madneſs of Antiochus Epiphanes (wherein there were ſome Martyrs of kin to the Chriſtian:) but their Religion was far from being like the Chriſtian, The Inſtitution of a Religion of the Croſs. For Chriſtians muſt have ſociety with and conformity to Chriſt in his Sufferings (in his Ignominy, in his Agony, in his Wounds, in his Thorns, in his Conflicts, Victories and Triumphs, his Croſs and his Crown) ſeeing he far'd hardly to extremity, they muſt not expect to be cocker'd and to go to Heaven on an eaſie Feather-bed. His Kingdom (his reigning proſperous Condition) was not here, he did not live high in Affluence and Pleaſure, in Pomp and Splendor, nor had the Favour and Applauſe of Men. To flow in Wealth, to ſhine in Secular Luſtre, to ſwim in ſenſitive Delights, to be the Sons of Pleaſure, the Darlings of Fortune, and the World's Minions, this is not to be as he was in this World. Which yet is one tranſcendence of the Chriſtians Virtue, (y) and as as the holy Writers frequently, plainly and expreſly affirm, hereunto they are appointed,

(t) S. Aug. de C. D. l. 18 *c.*4. *Cic. de Fin. l.*1. & 2.

(u) *Tertull. Apol. c.*46.

(w) Orig. c. Celſ. l. 6. p. 282.

(x) J. Mart. Apol. 2. p. 72.

(y) See Dr. Hamm. of Taking up the Croſs.

(s) Totus mundus Chriſtianus eſt & totus mundus impius. Per totum enim mundum impii, & per totum mundum pii: illi illos non cognoſcunt. Quomodo putamus quia non cognoſcunt? Inſultant benè viventibus. Unuſquiſque veſtrum qui jam piè vivit, qui contemnit ſecularia, qui non vult ire ad ſpectacula, qui non vult ſe inebriare, qui iſta facere noluerit, quomodo ei inſultatur ab his qui faciunt? Nunquid inſultaretur ei ſi agnoſceretur? S. Aug. Expoſ. in Ep. 1. Joan. Tr. 4.

appointed, the Righteous are not ſaved but by endurances and hardſhips in their way, theſe are (more or leſs) the Lot of all that will live Godly, and of every Son of the Divine Family, they are needful for our welfare (that we may be try'd and exercis'd, approv'd and improv'd, and may have our Smart here and the Beſt to come) and in the natural courſe of things they are unavoidable in this evil World. (z) Civitas Dei mundi hujus dilectoribus odioſa eſt, the City of God and his Saints is odious to the Lovers of the World (whence the Lot and Badge of the true Church muſt be the Croſs) the Truth is ſharp and pungent hated by the ſenſual and voluptuous (qui vitam ſuam mortiferis voluptatibus dedunt) therefore they that follow it, muſt brook many injuries, ſuſtain many hardſhips and troubles. (a) No one that chuſeth πυκτεύειν, to combat by cuffing, expecteth to be crowned without Wounds. The ancient Writers therefore ſuppoſe (though ſome in our time teach otherwiſe) that no times are ſo favourable as wholly to exempt a Chriſtian from any degree of bearing the Croſs, (b) that it is an error to think otherwiſe, and that he is not initiated into Saving Chriſtianity, that knoweth not the Croſs. (c) The Juſt cannot live here without Perſecution. But how is this, when the Church hath Peace? Becauſe they live amongſt the Evil, they ſuffer Perſecution. Quare? Quia omnes mali perſequuntur bonos. The reaſon is, becauſe all evil men perſecute the good. The holy Vitaliſts and the Sons of Carnality are vitally diſſonant and repugnant and of a contrary kind, whence the latter have againſt the former a vital and deadly enmity and antipathy (ſuch as is between the Wolf and the Lamb, the Dolphin and the Crocodile) which is a principal Fountain of the Chriſtians Perſecutions, and ſpeaketh their Virtue no leſs tranſcendent than that of the holy Vitaliſts, which is the Life of God.

IX. In the Chriſtians Sufferings there was a great appearance of the tranſcendence of their Virtue and Godlineſs to great and happy effects. (d) For contrarily to the Senſe of the Jews, who counted a quiet and placid death a dying upon the Mouth of the Lord, the Chriſtians counted a violent and bloody death the moſt bleſſed and deſirable. They were not like the Philoſophers, who ſuppos'd, (e) that External Calamities and Adverſities οὐ πάνυ πολὺ, do not very much befall good men; for their Religion allotted them (beſides common Afflictions and Adverſities) the Croſs of Perſecution and Tribulation, which they accounted a ſtate of the greateſt perfection of Virtue in this World, the ſtate of their greateſt Honour and Ennoblement (nothing ſo ennobled and adorn'd Paphnutius at the Council of Nice as the loſs of his Eye for Chriſt's ſake, Conſtantine took notice of that Eye and kiſs'd it) the ſtate of their Military Glory and Victory, their magnificent and royal, their advantageous and felicitative, their joyous and triumphant Condition: for they rejoyced inaſmuch as they were partakers of Chriſt's Sufferings, and gloried in his Croſs; accounting loſſes their gain, if they were for his intereſt; hardſhips their pleaſure, if for his ſervice; ignominy their honour, if for his name-ſake; and to undergo pains and diſgraces for him, their felicity and their glory. When they were reproachfully called by the Heathen Sarmentitii and Semaxii (becauſe they were burned as upon a Croſs) Tertullian anſwereth on their behalf, Hic eſt habitus victoriæ noſtræ, hæc palmata veſtis, tali curru triumphamus: They counted the Croſs the Habit of their Victory and Triumph, their triumphal Chariot, they kiſs'd their Chains, calling them πνευματικὰς μαργαρίτας, Spiritual Jewels, as Ignatius called his; (f) they deſpiſed this preſent Life, trampled on Torments and Puniſhments, contemned Death, and accounted their Death, (g) not their Deſtruction but their Coronation. And how extremely alien from Humane Nature, how much above Nature were theſe Divine Sentiments? Such was alſo,

(1.) Their promptitude and alacrity in entertaining their Sufferings; (h) for they rejoyced more at their being condemn'd, than if they had been abſolv'd. Chriſtianus etiam damnatus gratias agit: A Chriſtian when condemned giveth thanks to Men for condemning him; and he giveth thanks to God (as Polycarp did) for having a part in the number of Martyrs and of the Cup of Chriſt. When the Martyrs at Thebais ſuffered under Diocleſian, (i) we ſaw (ſaith Euſebius) θαυμασιωτάτην ὁρμὴν θείαν τε προθυμίαν, a moſt wonderful vehemency and divine forwardneſs of Chriſt's Believers. For ſo ſoon as Sentence was pronounced upon the firſt of them, others leap'd to the Tribunal of the Judge, confeſſing themſelves Chriſtians, without regard as to dangers and multifarious torments, without fear as to the free profeſſion of Piety towards God; entertaining the laſt Sentence of death μετά τε χαρᾶς καὶ γέλωτος καὶ εὐφροσύνης, with joy and laughter and chearfulneſs, ſo that they ſang Hymns and Thankſgivings unto God until the expiring of their laſt Breath. Some in thoſe times of Perſecution, (k) were caſt into Priſon, ſome were driven from their Country, others had their Goods taken away; ſome were ſlain and had their Limbs cut off, ſome were delivered to the Fire, others were drowned, they ſuſtained all manner of Puniſhments, and which was δυνάμεως ὑπερβολὴ, a tranſcendence of power in him that could effect it, they that ſuffered theſe things, were not only not deſpondent, nor only not afflicted in mind, ἀλλὰ καὶ ἔχαιρον, ἐσκίρτων, ἐπήδων, but they alſo rejoyced, leaped and danced. (l) We undergo the extremities of Puniſhment καὶ θανατούμενοι χαίρομεν, and being put to death, we rejoyce. (m) Fire and Sword and wild Beaſts and Ungulæ tearing the Fleſh are rather delight unto us than terrour. Chriſtians ſlight theſe uſual Bugbears of Humane Nature, (n) παίζουσι πάντα τὰ ἐν τῷ βίῳ ἐπίπονα, make ſport with all the hardſhips of this Life. (o) If God (ſaith Origen) will have us conflict and combat again for Piety, let our antagoniſts come, and we will ſay to them, I can do all things through him that enableth me, Chriſt Jeſus our Lord. What the Philoſopher ſaith of his wiſe man is moſt true of a Chriſtian, (p) He is an Artiſt at taming Evils; Pain, Penury, Ignominy, Priſon and Exile, and all other horrendous things, when they are come to him, are tame and gentle. Not only gentle and innocuous, but tranſportingly joyous; for Julian ſaid of the Chriſtians, (q) that they would fly to Martyrdom as Bees to their Hive. They trampled on Live-coals as Dirt, look'd upon Seas and Waves as Meadows, and ran to the Sword as to a Diadem and a Crown. They throng'd in great multitudes offering themſelves to Martyrdom, (r) and ſought it more in thoſe times, than others ſought for Biſhopricks in after-times. (s) They ſtrove with one another, who ſhould be the Martyr. They wearied their Perſecutors, ſo many offer'd themſelves to Martyrdom, that they knew not what to do with them; (t) their Adverſaries called them Deſperati, and the Preſident Arrius Antoninus (ſeeing a multitude that offer'd themſelves to Martyrdom) cried; O miſerable People, if you would die, you have Precipices or Ropes, whereby to diſpatch your ſelves. Something of exceſs there was in their Zeal for Martyrdom, which yet (in the main) was Divine, as was alſo their more regular Charity to their Perſecutors, whom they look'd upon (u) as co-operating to their end and ſcope, accounting them ἀποκρισιαρίους τῆς δεσποτικῆς οἰκονομίας, Under-agents of the Lord's Oeconomy.

(z) S. Aug. de C. D. l. 5. c. 16. Lactant. l. 4. c. 26.

(a) S. Chryſoſt. T. 6. p. 459.

(b) Erras, mi frater, erras ſi putas unquam Chriſtianum perſecutionem non pati. S. Hieron. ad Heliodor. Nunquam deeſt tribulatio perſecutionis, ſi nunquam deſit obſervantia pietatis. S. Leo Ser. 9. de Quadr. Fidenter dico, quia minus piè vivis, ſi minus perſecutionem pertuleris. Greg. M. Ep. 27. l. 6. Si non pateris pro Chriſto ullam tribulationem, vide nè nondum cœperis in Chriſto piè vivere. S. Aug. in Pſal. 55. Si putas te non habere tribulationes, nondum cœpiſti eſſe Chriſtianus. Ibid.

(c) Append. de Diverſ. Ser. 16. inter op. S. Aug. T. 10.

(d) Fellin. S. Cypr. Ep. 13.

(e) Hierocl. in aur. Car. p. 105.

(f) S. Chryſoſt. T. 6. p. 337.

(g) S. Cypr. Ep. 82.

(h) Tertull. ad Scap. c. 1, 2. Apol. c. 46.

(i) Euſeb. H. Eccl. l. 8. c. 9.

(k) S. Chryſoſt. T. 6. p. 636.

(l) J. Mart. p. 265.

(m) Gr. Naz. or. 20. p. 350.

(n) Orig. c. Celſ. l. 2. p. 109.

(o) Ibid. l. 8. p. 424.

(p) Sen. Ep. 85.

(q) S. Chryſoſt. T. 5. p. 533.

(r) Sulp. Sev. Hiſt. l. 2. p. 143.

(s) Baron. ad an. 309. n. 21.

(2.) Their Patience and Fortitude in bearing their Sufferings (together with the Conſolations which they found in them) which were (w) παλαίσματα ὑπὲρ τὴν θνητὴν φύσιν, wreſtlings above mortal Nature. (x) In all theſe, the Fire, and Iron, and Nailings that they endur'd, the wild Beaſts and depths of the Sea, the cuttings off of their Members and burnings, the piercings and effoſſions of their Eyes and the mutilations of their whole Body, the Famine, the Mines, the Bonds, they ſhew'd their patience for Piety, and for the love and deſire of their King they counted all theſe ἡδονῆς πάσης γλυκίονα, more ſweet than any Pleaſure. (y) The Sword, the Croſs and wild Beaſts, Chains and Fire and all other Torments could not make them depart from their Profeſſion. They openly proclaim'd it in the midſt of their Torments (z) lacerati & cruenti vociferamur, Deum colimus per Chriſtum, tortur'd and torn and all in Blood we proclaim, we Worſhip God by Chriſt. (a) With us Boys and Young Women by an inſpir'd Patience paſſive of Grief and Pain, contemn Croſſes, Torments, wild Beaſts, and all the terrible Bugbears of Puniſhments. Their Patience they have rightly called inſpired; (b) for it was Religious, joyouſly thankful to God, freed them from turbulent Reſentments of impatience, was in the Eyes of the People and of Provinces and their Torturers themſelves (c) maximum miraculum (one of the greateſt Miracles) an happy and invincible Patience that vanquiſh'd all Cruelty, and bare (execrabiles corporum lacerationes ſine ullo gemitu) the torturous Lacerations of their Bodies without whimpering. A Patience of ſo high and holy a Character muſt be thought of Kind and Quality tranſcendent to the Popular and Philoſophic Pagans Patience, amongſt whom there are memorable inſtances of Patience and Fortitude. Such as Anaxarchus, Epictetus, Zeno Eleates, an Athenian Harlot, and of late (d) a Chineſe defy'd and vanquiſh'd all extremities of Torture, rather than he would betray a Conſpiracy againſt Tyranny and for the good of his Country. But amongſt the Pagans the Military Fortitude was the great Virtue, the name Virtue primarily ſignifieth it, Meekneſs was therefore of an ill Name amongſt them, amongſt the ancient Greeks a bad Man ſignify'd a Coward, a good Man a Valiant Man, to die in Battel was thought the moſt glorious Death (and they that ſo died were counted the bleſſed in the World to come) Virtue with them was that which they counted Laudable, and they thought nothing more laudable than a mundane Gallantry and Bravery of Spirit, which was their Fortitude and Patience. But the Chriſtians Military Fortitude is of the ſame Nature with the Armour of God, and therefore is Sanctity of Virtue and of Tranſcendence Divine, from which the Philoſophers Fortitude and Patience is remote and diſtant, as their αὐτοχειρία, Self-murder is from the Chriſtians Martyrdom. (e) Tales ſtulta Philoſophia habeat Martyres. The Chriſtian Martyrs had divine Aſſiſtance and ineffable Conſolations in their Sufferings, whence their Virtue appeareth to be Sanctity of Virtue and of Tranſcendence Divine. The Apoſtles and other Martyrs (f) conflicted with Fire and Iron and wild Beaſts and Tyrants, with preſent Evils and threatned Evils, ὥσπερ ἐν ἀλλοτρίοις σώμασιν, ἢ ἀσώματοι, as not in their own, but in other Bodies, yea as without Bodies. Pamphilus the Martyr Philoſophiz'd in the midſt of his Torments (g) as one without Fleſh and without a Body, not ſeeming to have any Sence of his Pains. (h) How many of ours have not only born without wailing the burning of their Right-hand (as Mutius Scævola did) but the burning of their whole Body? So the cruel Martyrdom of Marcus Arethuſius was to him (i) as πομπὴ οὐ συμφορά, a ſhew not a calamity.

(3.) In the Chriſtians Sufferings the divine tranſcendence of their Virtue appear'd to great and happy Effects. For in her times of Perſecution the Church grew in extent and amplitude (k) a great Acceſſion was made of new Converts, who by beholding the Sufferings of others, and ſeeing torrents of Blood from them, were not made more averſe from the Faith, but more forward to embrace it, more bold and fervid. The greatneſs of the Chriſtians Sufferings in conſort with their Heroic paſſive Virtue (l) illecebra erat ſectæ, drew them to Chriſtianity. For they were awakened thereby and excited to inquire into it, and having inquired into it, were ſo taken with it, that they deſir'd to die for it. The greatneſs of the Chriſtians Sufferings was (m) a great Vindication of their Innocency (for it was againſt common ſenſe, to ſuppoſe, that they were voluptuous or intemperate, who were ſo forward to Sacrifice their Eſtates and Lives) and the People ſeeing multitudes of ſuch, whoſe Patience was invincible in the midſt of their various Torments (n) they were prone to think that it was not a vain thing for which ſo many (of all Sorts, Ages and Sexes) laid down their Lives (but that there was Truth at the bottom of it) and that their invincible Patience was ſomething more than Humane. The Divinity of their Virtue was ſo conſpicuous in their Sufferings, that it convinc'd Men, that their Religion was of divine Original, and they were a principal cauſe of its true Proſperity. For it is not with the Chriſtian Church as with the Kingdoms of the World, that cannot ſubſiſt without ſecular Peace and Proſperity; nor is the Chriſtian Religion like other Religions, that thrive beſt in times of worldy Proſperity under the ſhadow of ſecular Authority: But Chriſtians have a Peace and Proſperity independent upon the World, Perſecution was their time of Honour and Proſperity, they were raiſed up, when they were caſt down, their Graces ſhone the brighteſt in the dark Night of their Suffering, and then their Religion was in the moſt thriving and flouriſhing Condition. (o) In Perſecutions and Afflictions συνελεξάμεθα δόξαν ϗ δύναμιν, we gathered Glory and Power, which we loſt, when we came

(t) Min. Fel. p. 71. Tertul. ad Scap. c. 4.

(u) Macar. Hom. 37.

(w) S. Chryſoſt. T. 6. p. 337.

(x) Euſeb. Hiſt. Eccl. l. 8. c. 14. & de laud. Conſt. c. 7. p. 622.

(y) J. Mart. p. 337.

(z) Tertull. Apol. c. 21.

(a) Pueri & mulierculæ noſtræ cruces & tormenta feras & omnes ſuppliciorum terriculas inſpirata patientiâ doloris illudunt. Min. Fel. p. 339.

(b) S. Cypr. ad Demetr.

(c) Lactant. l. 6 c. 17.

(d) Palafox. p. 372.

(e) S. Hieron.

(f) Gr. Naz. or. 3. p. 76.

(g) Ἄσαρκος ὥσπερ ϗ ἀσώματος, οὐδ' ἐπαΐειν δοκῶν τῶν ἀλγηδόνων. Euſeb. H. Eccl. p. 338.

(h) Quot ex noſtris non dextram ſolum, ſed totum corpus uri, cremari, ſine ullis ejulatibus pertulerunt? Min. Fel. p. 339.

(i) Gr. Naz. or. 3. p. 89.

(k) S. Chryſoſt. T. 6. p. 636.

(l) Tertull. Apol. c. 50.

(m) J. Mart. p. 50.

(n) Lactant. l. 5. c. 13. Min. Fel. p. 340.

(o) Gr. Naz. or. 3. p. 62.

to enjoy worldly Proſperity. (p) The Heathen Emperours never more contributed to our Well-being, than when they commanded Chriſtians to be beaten, baniſh'd and put to Death. In her times of Perſecution the Chriſtian Church was highly Chriſtian, ſub tyrannis aurea (like Gold tried and purified in the Fire:) But when thoſe times were blown over and the Church enjoy'd the World, ſhe became (by degrees) like the World, a Crew of Worldly People, or a θηριοτροφεῖον, a Nurſery of Brutiſts, as ſhe is at this day.

X. The tranſcendence of the Chriſtians Virtue and Godlineſs appeareth from our Saviour's Sermon on the Mount, which Name of his Diſcipline (a Sermon on the Mount) is ſuppos'd, to denote and ſignifie, that it is a Diſcipline of Sublimity, Celſitude and Tranſcendence. (q) If we ask what the Mount ſignifieth, it is rightly underſtood to ſignifie greater Precepts of Righteouſneſs, for they were the leſſer that were given to the Jews. A City ſet on an Hill is (r) a City founded upon eximious and great Righteouſneſs, which the Mount ſignifieth, on which our Lord diſcourſeth. So Mount Sion in the Prophets ſignifieth the Church (s) τὸ μέγα καὶ νοητὸν ὄρος, a great and ſpiritual Mountain (t) for there is nothing flat and mean in her, nor any abject Doctrines, but whatever is great and ſublime, namely, the true knowledge of God, and the illuſtrious manifeſtation of the Myſteries of our Saviour. The Church is called a Mountain, to ſignifie (u) the elevatedneſs of her Dogmata, and alſo becauſe (w) the Life of them that are juſtified in Chriſt and ſanctified by the Spirit is raiſed on high. Which Allegorical Expoſition of a Mountain is the true and genuine Expoſition of our Saviour's Sermon upon the Mount. For (1.) Our Saviour inſtituteth to the Virtue and Righteouſneſs of Chriſtianity and Regeneracy (which is Sanctity of Virtue) the Virtue and Righteouſneſs which he teacheth, is no other than the Life of them that are juſtified in Chriſt and ſanctified by the Spirit. For the Goſpel is (x) the draught of that form of Life, which we are to live from our Reſurrection. So our Saviour (ſaith S. Baſil) preparing us for this Life, propoſeth (y) the whole Evangelical Converſation, injoining, to be devoid of Anger, to bear Evils, to be pure from the love of Pleaſures, and from the love of Money. (z) In Chriſt Jeſus neither Circumciſion availeth any thing, nor Uncircumciſion, but a new Creature. For what is done to us externally in the Body, is of no great Merit, but that is highly to be regarded, which is done in the Mind. For to deſpiſe this preſent World, not to love tranſitory things, to be humble at the Heart towards God and Man, to bear Contumelies patiently, to repel Malicioufneſs from the Heart, to diſtribute to the Needy that which is our own, not to deſire that which is other Mens, to love a Friend in God, to love Enemies for God, to mourn for the Affliction of a Neighbour, not to rejoice at the Death of an Enemy: This is the new Creature, which the Doctor of the Gentiles elſewhere requireth, ſaying: If any Man be in Chriſt, he is a new Creature, old things are paſt away, behold, all things are become new. For it belongeth to the old Man, to affect this preſent World, to have a Concupiſcence of the tranſitory things, to lift up the Mind in pride, not to have patience, to be malicious and revengeful towards our Neighbour, not to give of our own to the Indigent, to deſire that which is anothers for increaſing and multiplying, to love none purely for God, to return inimicalneſs to Enemies, to rejoice in the affliction of our Neighbour. All theſe things are of the old Man, they are things that we derive from the root of Corruption. But he that now overcometh theſe, and according to our Lord's Precepts changeth his mind into Benignity, of him it is rightly ſaid, that old things are paſt away, behold, all things are become new. Then they are made new in our Minds, when the Vices of the old Man paſs away. The Virtue and Righteouſneſs which our Lord's Precepts require (according to theſe ancient Writers) is that which is conſtitutive of the new Creature, of the State and Life of Regeneracy, which therefore as ſuch are Chriſtianity of Virtue and Righteouſneſs. And our Lord's Precepts muſt be obſerv'd from a Principle of Faith in him and Love and Obedience to him, upon which account alſo the obſervance of them is Chriſtianity of Virtue and Righteouſneſs. And ſo far as they are Chriſtianity of Virtue and Righteouſneſs, (which cannot be introduc'd without new New Laws and Duties) they are neceſſarily new Laws, new Commandments and new Duties. They muſt therefore be denominated (a) ἡ καινὴ πολιτεία, the new Converſation (b) the Law of the new People called to an eternal Inheritance (novus populus ad æternam hæreditatem vocatus) perfectus vitæ Chriſtianæ modus (the perfect Law of the Chriſtian Life) the new and Chriſtian Law of Life (c) ὡς ὁ καινὸς νομοθέτης ἐκέλευσεν, as the new Law-giver hath commanded.

(2.) Our Saviour therefore inſtituteth to Virtue and Righteouſneſs which is high and tranſcendent both in kind and degree. For as it is the Virtue and Righteouſneſs conſtitutive of the new Man of Chriſtianity and Godlineſs, and the ſame with the fruit of the Spirit which is in all Goodneſs, and Righteouſneſs and Truth, it is neceſſarily (the Saint of God-kind of Virtue) high and tranſcendent in the kind of it. And it is high and tranſcendent in the degree of it; (d) for he that loveth an Enemy proceedeth to an higher degree of Benignity, than he that only loveth thoſe

(p) Nunquam nobis amplius contulerunt (Gentiles) quàm cùm verberari Chriſtianos atque proſcribi ac necari juberent. S. Ambroſ. Ep. c. Symmach. p. 563.

(q) Si quæritur, quid ſignificet Mons, benè intelligitur ſignificare majora præcepta juſtitiæ, quia minora erant, quæ Judæis data ſunt. S. Aug. de Ser. Dom. in Monte. l. 1. c. 1.

(r) Civitas fundata ſuper inſignem magnamque juſtitiam, quam ſignificat ipſe mons, in quo diſputat Dominus. Ibid. c. 6.

(s) S. Cyr. in Eſai. l. 2. T. 3. p. 281.

(t) Χθαμαλὸν γὰρ οὐδὲν ἐν αὐτῇ, ἀλλ᾽ οὐδὲ τῶν πεπατημένων δογμάτων, ἀλλ᾽ εἴ τι μέγα καὶ ὑψηλόν. Ibid.

(u) Τῶν ἐν αὐτῇ δογμάτων, τὸ ἐπηρμένον. Ibid. l. 2. T. 1. p. 201.

(w) Ἀνῴκισται καὶ αὐτὸς ὁ βίος τῶν ἐν Χριστῷ δεδικαιωμένων καὶ ἡγιασμένων ἐν πνεύματι. Idem Com. in Mich. p. 424.

(x) Τοῦ ἐξ ἀναστάσεως βίου προδιατύπωσις. S. Baſil. de ſp. ſanct. c. 15.

(y) Τὴν εὐαγγελικὴν πᾶσαν πολιτείαν, τὸ ἀόργητον, τὸ ἀνεξίκακον, τὸ φιληδονίας ἀῤῥύπωτον, τὸ ἀφιλάργυρον τοῦ τρόπου νομοθετῶν. Ibid.

(z) In Chriſto Jeſu neque circumciſio aliquid valet neque præputium, ſed nova creatura. Non enim magni eſt meriti ſi quid foris erga nos agatur in corpore ſed magnopere penſandum eſt, quid agatur in mente. Nam præſentem mundum deſpicere, tranſitoria non amare, mentem medullitus in humilitate Deo & proximo ſternere, contra illatas contumelias patientiam ſervare, & cuſtodita patientia dolorem malitiæ à corde repellere, egenis propria tribuere, aliena minimè ambire, amicos in Deo diligere, propter Deum & eos qui inimici ſunt, amare, de afflictione proximi lugere, de morte ejus qui inimicus eſt, non exultare: Hæc eſt nova creatura quam magiſter gentium apud alios diſcipulos vigilanti oculo requirens, dicit: Si quis igitur in Chriſto nova creatura, vetera tranſierunt: Ecce facta ſunt omnia nova. Ad veterem quippe hominem pertinet, præſentem mundum quærere: Tranſitoria ex concupiſcentia amare: Mentem in ſuperbiam erigere: Patientiam non habere: Ex dolore malitiæ de proximi læſione cogitare: Sua indigentibus non dare: Atque ad multiplicandum aliena quærere: Nullum purè propter Deum diligere: Inimicitias inimicis reddere: De afflictione proximi gaudere: Cuncta hæc vetuſti ſunt hominis: Quæ videlicet de radice trahimus corruptionis, ſed qui jam iſta exuperat, & ad præcepta dominica mentem in benignitatem commutat, de hoc rectè dicitur. Quia vetuſta tranſierunt, ecce facta ſunt omnia nova. Tunc ergo in noſtris mentibus nova fiunt, cùm a nobis vetuſti hominis vitia tranſeunt. Greg. M. ſupr. Ezech. l. 1. Hom. 10.

(a) S. Chryſoſt. in Matth. p. 93.

(b) S. Aug. ſupr. l. 2. c. 5. & l. 1. c. 1.

(c) J. Mart. p. 236.

(d) S. Aug. ſupr. l. 1. c. 9, 21.

that love him: and he that is not angry without a cauſe, proceedeth to an higher degree, than he that only abſtaineth from killing. But he that only loveth thoſe that love him, will perfect his Benignity (ſo that it will be the perfect way of good Practice) if he carrieth it on to the love of an Enemy. And he that only abſtaineth from killing (perficietur) will be of the perfect way of good Practice, if he proceedeth, not to be angry without a cauſe. (e) Innocence is perfectly known to us that are taught of God as being revealed by a perfect Maſter, and faithfully obſerv'd by us as being commanded by an incontemptible inſpector. Not killing how can it be more fully commanded than by teaching, that we may not be ſo much as angry? Adultery how can it be more perfectly prohibited than by reſtraining us from the ſolitary Concupiſcence of the Eye? To unteach Evil doing what can be greater Diſcipline than to interdict evil ſpeaking? Againſt the permiſſion of Injury what can be more inſtructive, than not to ſuffer any retaliation thereof? Chriſt's way of eſchewing the ſeveral Sins and Vices is not the mutilate and partial way, which is a lower and leſſer kind and degree of eſchewing them: But the plenary and perfect way, which is the ſuperlative and higheſt kind and degree of eſchewing them. Such is the Spiritual-religious Virtue and Righteouſneſs, which is oppos'd to the Civil-religious Virtue and Righteouſneſs, that is on this ſide the Kingdom of God, and doth not ſave Men from being the wicked and unrighteous. For where Heart-murder and Heart-adultery liveth and reigneth, there may be not-killing and not-committing Adultery as to external Fact, and conſequently a Civil-religious Virtue and Righteouſneſs, which is a ſpurious and illegitimate kind of Virtue and Righteouſneſs. Such is the carnal Man's and carnal Religioniſt's kind of Virtue and Righteouſneſs, to which the Regenerate Chriſtians Virtue and Righteouſneſs is oppos'd as of Kind and Quality the genuine and legitimate, and as of tranſcendent kind and degree. The carnal kind of Men and Religioniſts Practiſe the retaliating inimicalneſs, an Eye for an Eye, and a Tooth for a Tooth (the Sin of Revenge:) But the Regenerate Chriſtians Virtue and Righteouſneſs is not to Practiſe the retaliating inimicalneſs (not ſo to reſiſt the evil Man, as the Chriſtian Law forbiddeth) although the Non-practice of it giveth advantage to the evil Man, to double his Injury, to ſmite us on both Cheeks, to take away both Coat and Cloak, and to compel us to travel two Miles. Matth. 5. 39, 40, 41. Such is the ſublimity and tranſcendence of the Chriſtian Philoſophy, whence our Saviour's Commandments are ſaid to be (f) μεγάλα ϗ ἐπίπονα ϗ ὑψηλά, great and laborious and high, τὰ μακρὰ σκάμματα διέτεινε, he hath made great Stages of Virtue, he inſtituted ὑψηλὴν τὴν πολιτείαν, an high Converſation, πολιτείαν ἀγγελικήν, an Angelical Converſation, making Earth Heaven, commanding ſuch things, which aſſimilated thoſe that were converſant in them to the incorporeal Powers, made Men Angels, τῆς ἀνθρωπίνης σχεδὸν ἐξοικίζων φύσεως, almoſt diſlodging them of Humane Nature. (g) He hath ſet us upon the very top or pinnacle of Virtue, leading us to the very height and ſummity of Philoſophy, by degrees he conducteth us to the very top of Heaven. And theſe Sublimities of Chriſtian Philoſophy are not meer good Advice and Counſel, which may be neglected with ſafety and impunity (h) but if they be not done, ϗ γέενναν ἠπείλησε, he hath threatned Hell, and that otherwiſe there is no entring into the Kingdom of Heaven. And he that entreth not into the Kingdom of Heaven, ſhall fall into Hell undoubtedly. Hell is the Portion of none but the Ungodly, our Saviour's Sublimities of Philoſophy therefore are nothing more than an Inſtitution to the Chriſtians Godlineſs, which is God-likeneſs (according to Chriſtianity) as the ſtile of our Saviour's Sermon importeth. For he urgeth his Diſciples to the Practice of his ſublime Diſcipline by this Reaſon, that they may be the Children of God, the Children of the Higheſt, the Children of their Father which is in Heaven, and Perfect as their Father which is in Heaven is Perfect. The Children of God by Regeneration muſt be alſo his genuine Children by reſemblance and imitation of his Holineſs and Goodneſs, which is the Chriſtians Godlineſs and the Tranſcendence thereof. In the Doctrine of Chriſt therefore there is (i) τὸ ὑπερέχον πρὸς εὐζωΐαν, a tranſcendent Excellency as to (truly) good Life.

(3.) The Chriſtians Virtue and Righteouſneſs (requir'd by our Saviour's Sermon) is tranſcendent to the Virtue and Righteouſneſs of other Religioniſts in the kind of it and the degree of it. Their Righteouſneſs cannot be the Righteouſneſs of Chriſtians, unleſs it exceedeth the Righteouſneſs of the Scribes and Phariſees (that were of higheſt Reputation amongſt the Jews for Piety and Sanctity) as our Saviour ſaith. Whereby he ſignifieth, that they muſt be (k) meliores optimis, better than the beſt of mundane Religioniſts, and higher than the higheſt of the Law-religioniſts. Who in the Eyes of Men ſeem'd to be high and mighty Saintiſts, but were deadly ungodly Sinners (devoid of the Life of Sanctity) whoſe Righteouſneſs did not entitle them to the Kingdom of Heaven, nor was it Righteouſneſs and true Holineſs, but of Kind and Quality ſpurious and illegitimate, the whole of it was either external to the Soul, or at leaſt external to the Righteouſneſs and true Holineſs of the Soul. The Righteouſneſs which they practis'd (no better than literal Judaiſm) was complicated with the fouleſt Wickedneſs; and the Righteouſneſs which they taught (being blind and undiſcerning of Good and Evil) was of the ſame Character. The Righteouſneſs therefore of theſe formal Doctors, dead Ritualiſts and out-ſide Saintiſts may be called Juſtitia minor, to ſignifie, that it is a Righteouſneſs leſſer than the Righteouſneſs of the truly Righteous. (l) The leſſer Righteouſneſs is the Righteouſneſs of the Phariſees, the greater Righteouſneſs is the Righteouſneſs of the Chriſtians. The Righteouſneſs of the Phariſees is not to kill: The Righteouſneſs of thoſe that ſhall enter into the Kingdom of Heaven, is, not to be angry without a cauſe. The leſſer Righteouſneſs is not to commit bodily Adultery: The greater Righteouſneſs is that of the Kingdom of God, not to commit Adultery in the Heart. (m) The greateſt part of the Precepts (of our Saviour) concern inward Virtues; as the love of Enemies, reſervedneſs in judging, being looſen'd from the Goods

of

(c) Innocentiam à Deo edocti, & perfectè eam novimus, ut à perfecto magiſtro revelatum, & fideliter cuſtodimus, ut ab incontemptibili diſpectore mandatam. Quid plenius dicere, non occides, an docere, nè iraſcaris quidem? Quid perfectius, prohibere adulterium, an etiam ab oculorum ſolitaria concupiſcentia arcere? Quid eruditius de maleficio, an & de maleloquio interdicere? Quid inſtructius injuriam non permittere, an nec vicem injuriæ ſumere? Tertull. Apol. c. 45.

(f) S. Chryſoſt. T. 8. p. 73.

(g) Εἰς αὐτὴν ἡμᾶς τὴν κορυφὴν ἔστησε τῆς ἀρετῆς, ἐπ' αὐτὴν ἄνω τὴν ἀκροτάτην τῆς φιλοσοφίας ἀνάγων τὴν κορυφήν, κατὰ μικρὸν εἰς αὐτὰς ἡμᾶς ἀνάγει τῶν οὐρανῶν τὰς ἁψῖδας. Idem in Matth. p 129, 131.

(h) Idem T. 3. p. 91, 92.

Matth. 5. 9. 45, 48. Luc. 6. 35.

(i) Euſeb. pr. Ev. l. 1. c. 4.

(k) Bucer. in Matth. 5. 20.

(l) Minor juſtitia juſtitia phariſæorum, major juſtitia juſtitia Chriſtianorum. Juſtitia phariſæorum eſt, ut non occidant: juſtitia eorum qui intraturi ſunt in regnum cœlorum, ut non iraſcantur ſine cauſa. Juſtitia minor eſt, non mœchari corporum conjunctione: Juſtitia verò major eſt regni Dei, non mœchari corde. S. Aug. ſupr. c. 9. & 12.

(m) Moral Eſſays by Meſſieurs du Port Royal. p. 165, 166.

of the World, renouncing Humane Satisfactions, vigilance in Prayer, the humility and ſimplicity of Children. It is here that he placeth the Juſtice ſurpaſſing the Juſtice of the Phariſees, without which none can enter into the Kingdom of Heaven. If by the inward Virtues we underſtand thoſe real vital ſubſtantial Virtues, it is moſt true, that in theſe our Saviour chiefly placeth the Juſtice ſurpaſſing the Juſtice of the Phariſees, in whom there was nothing more than certain umbratil ſemblances of the inward Virtues; for even their love to God was only an out-ſide formal Buſineſs, that reach'd no further than the Surface of the Soul. But in reſpect of external Practice alſo Chriſtians muſt (in ſeveral reſpects) eſchew the Phariſees legal Practices, and deny themſelves their legal Allowances. (n) Do we not walk in newneſs of Life and perfect Righteouſneſs above the Scribes and Phariſees, if we obſerve what our Lord ſaith? It was ſaid to them of old time an Eye for an Eye, and a Tooth for a Tooth. But I ſay unto you, that ye reſiſt not Evil: But whoſoever ſhall ſmite thee on thy right Cheek, turn to him the other alſo. And if any Man will Sue thee at the Law, and take away thy Coat, let him have thy Cloak alſo. —— how is he not dead to the Law, that doth not vindicate what was taken away, and liveth to Chriſt, that proceedeth to add the Cloak alſo? Chriſtianity conſiſteth in being dead to the Law (parted from it ſo as not to live to it any more as one of its Religioniſts) and in living to Chriſt as one of his Religioniſts, who by a new Law hath preſcrib'd a new Practice diſſonant from that of the legal Doctors (the Scribes) and the Judaical Saintiſts.

The Pagan Saintiſts cannot reaſonably be thought of a better Character than the Judaical. Many Sayings there are in Paganiſm (touching Innocence, Juſtice, Patience, Beneficence) agreeable to the Precepts of Chriſtianity. Whence ſome infer, that there are no Evangelical Precepts of Chriſtian Practice, which were not before taught by the Philoſophers. So Celſus pretendeth (o) that the Chriſtians Ethicks are common to them with other Philoſophers, ὡς ȣ σεμνόν τι ϗ καινὸν μάθημα, ſo that there is nothing more than ordinary, nothing new in Chriſt's Diſcipline. If this was ſo, it would abate very much of the neceſſity of Chriſt's coming and of his honourary Names (the Light of the World and Light of Men and Light of the Gentiles, the only Doctor and Maſter, the Way, the Truth and the Life;) for the World was before ſufficiently furniſh'd and illuminated with Ethicks from the Schools of Philoſophy. Non negamus Philoſophos juxta noſtra ſenſiſſe. We acknowledge, that the Philoſophers have ſaid things agreeable to our Diſcipline, but this Agreement is complicated with greater diſagreement. For there is nothing of true Piety in their Diſcipline. (p) Philoſophy did not know the Religious Worſhip that is according to God. Whence they may juſtly be ſaid, to be Aliens from the total of our Diſcipline, which is thus rightly repreſented. (q) This is the Chriſtians Maxim, All the Wiſdom of Man conſiſteth in this one thing, in knowing and ſerving God. Philoſophy did not unteach them Heathen Impiety, nor cure Polytheiſm and Idolatry but increaſe them (increaſing the number of the Gods) nor did it ſave them from being Self-magnifico's, or teach Mankind to be truly Good and Holy; for as the Popular Pagans Notion of a good Man was one that was worthy of Cere's ſacred Torch, ſo the Philoſopher thus characterizeth a good Man. (r) Who can deny, that Ulyſſes was a good Man, that was minded by Jupiter, belov'd by Minerva, guided by Mercury? (s) Athenæ nihil commune habent cum Hieroſolymis quoad virtutes Theologicas. The Philoſophers have nothing in common with the Chriſtians as to the Theological Virtues (which are peculiar to God's People) without which the other Virtues are neceſſarily of Kind and Quality illegitimate, how much ſoever they may ſeem to reſemble the Chriſtian.

(4.) The Moſaic Law muſt be conſider'd both as it was the Law of the Law-religioniſts Virtue and Righteouſneſs (that of the Scribes and Phariſees) and as it was an Inſtitution to the true Righteouſneſs and Holineſs of Saints and Prophets in the Old Teſtament-times; and of the Moſaic Law thus conſider'd we muſt affirm, that our Saviour's Sermon is an Inſtitution to an higher Virtue and Righteouſneſs than the Moſaic Law. (t) ȣ τὰ αὐτὰ κεῖται τοῖς παλαιοῖς ϗ ἡμῖν σκάμματα, We and the Ancients have not the ſame Stages of Virtue propos'd to us. God and Nature proceed to perfection gradually from lower to higher Degrees. The Law and the Prophets (the ancient Teachers of Righteouſneſs) were but as the Morning Star to make way for the Sun of Righteouſneſs, and it cannot be ſuppos'd, that the Morning Star ſhineth as bright as the Sun. From an Hebrew Doctor R. Hiskiah ſome have cited this Saying. (u) The Law which thou at preſent learneſt, ſhall be vanity compar'd with the Law, which is to be delivered in the days of the Meſſiah. Agreeably whereto Chriſtians give this account of their Law and Life. (w) With us it is a Crime, not only to be evil, but to come within a little of being ſo; Chaſtity is ſo ſtudied, as to reſtrain the Eye; the Man-killing Hand is removed to ſuch a diſtance, as that Anger is repreſs'd; Perjury is ſo atrocious and ſuperlatively nefarious, as that Swearing is to us only ἀπώματος matter of Abjuration; many of us never had Riches, many were glad, that they had them only for this Reaſon, that they might deſpiſe theſe many things, τὸ μηδὲν ἔχειν ἀντὶ παντὸς πλȣτȣ φιλοσοφȣντες, chuſing to have nothing inſtead of all Riches, abandoning the Belly (as an harſh and loathſome Miſtreſs and the Mother of all Evils) to the craſs generality. To theſe there is one Law of Virtue, not to be overcome by ſo much as any ſmall Vices, that are over-look'd by others; others puniſh the ends of Sin, we puniſh even the beginnings of it, reſtraining it at a far off as a flowing Evil hardly to be ſtopp'd. But tell me, where and with what Men there is a Law, for them that are reviled, to bleſs; them that are defam'd, to intreat; them that are perſecuted, to give way; them that are ſtript of their Garments, to become more naked; them that are curſed, to pray for them that curſe them; and in a word χρηστότητι νικᾶν θρασύτητα, by goodneſs to overcome boldneſs, and to make the injurious better by our patience in Sufferings? (x) Chriſtians that live in the times of the Goſpel (which tranſcend the times of the old Teſtament in Light and Knowledge, in Grace and Aſſiſtance, in Love and Kindneſs, in Immunities and Priviledges) μείζονα ἐπιδείκνυσθαι δεῖ τὴν ἀρετὴν, ought to ſhew a greater Virtue and more eminent Sanctity; a more eminent Heavenly-mindedneſs, as having a Religion of the better Promiſes; a more eminent Purity, as having the pure immortal Joys more clearly reveal'd; a more eminent Patience, as being better accquainted with the Diſcipline

(n) S. Baſil. de Bapt. l. 1. p. 654.

Gal. 2. 19.

(o) Orig. c. Celſ. l. 1. p. 6.

(p) Οὐ γὰρ τὴν κατὰ τὸν Θεὸν ἔγνω θρησκείαν ἡ φιλοσοφία. Clem. Str. l. 6. p. m. 486.

(q) Omnis ſapientia hominis in hoc uno eſt, ut Deum cognoſcat & colat: hoc noſtrum dogma, hæc ſententia eſt. Lactant. l. 3. c. 30.

(r) Max. Tyr. diſſ. 22.

(s) Alſted. Encyclop. Syſt. Eth. l. c. 1.

(t) S. Chryſoſt. T. 3. p. 91.

(u) Raymund. pugn. Fid. p. 608.

(w) Gr. Naz. or. 3. p. 108.

(x) V. Grot. de J. B. ac P. l. 1. c. 1. S. 17. & c. 2. S. 6. cum Annot. S. Chryſoſt. in Gen. p. 182. & T. 6. p. 717.

Diſcipline of the Croſs; a more eminent Humility, as being the Followers of Chriſt the great Maſter of Humility; a more eminent Charity and Benignity towards all Men ſince the kindneſs and love of God towards Man hath appear'd; and a more eminent Charity in loving Chriſtians as Chriſtians and laying down their Lives for the Brethren, touching which Holy People in the Old Teſtament-times had no Commandment. And if Chriſtians are neceſſarily oblig'd to greater Goodneſs and Holineſs than they, it muſt be ſuppos'd, that by our Saviour and his Apoſtles Chriſtians are inſtituted to that greater Goodneſs and Holineſs in the New Teſtament; and that ſince the coming of Chriſt πολλῷ στενωτέρα γέγονεν ἡ ὁδὸς, the way of Piety is made much more narrow. In the Old Teſtament-times the Jews in their Moſaic Inſtitution had large Permiſſions, Poligamy, Divorce, ſome Revenge (the avenger of Blood, an Eye for an Eye) Curſing, not duely neceſſitated Swearing (and ſome others) which Permiſſions that to the Jews were neceſſary, very much abated the Perfection of Holy Mens Inſtitution to Spiritual-religious Righteouſneſs (which was complicated with their Civil-religious) and it was neceſſary, that our Saviour ſhould expreſly reſtrain them. They were commanded not to hate their Brother-ſocietiſt (Jew or Proſelyte) not to bear him a grudge, and by a general Precept they were bound not to avenge, Lev. 19. 17, 18. If ſuch an one was their Enemy, they were commanded to do him common kindneſſes, Exod. 23. 4, 5. Deut. 22. 1,—4. But the ſeven Nations in Paleſtine they were commanded (yet not without ſome limitation) utterly to deſtroy, and ſhew no mercy to them, Deut. 7. 2. Exod. 34. 12. With the Amalekites they were bound, to have an irreconcileable War, Exod. 17. 16. Deut. 25. 19. Againſt the Ammonites and Moabites the Law denounceth this ſevere Sentence (which yet is not to be underſtood without ſome mollifying limitation) Thou ſhalt not ſeek their Peace nor their Proſperity all thy Days for ever., Deut 23. 6. Thus far the Jews Civil-religious Inſtitution oblig'd them to have and to hate Enemies (which our Saviour forbiddeth) and to revenge themſelves upon thoſe Nations that had injur'd them. But this is not all the hatred of Enemies, to which they were inſtituted by their Political Law; for the Aliens that oppos'd them are repreſented in it as God's Enemies, they are taught to hate them and to fight againſt them as ſuch Enemies, and to rejoyce and triumph in their deſtruction. God was (in ſome ſort) their Political King and alſo their Military King or Lord General, he fought their Battels for them, and their Battels againſt the Aliens were the Lord's Battels. The greateſt Actions in thoſe Old Teſtament-times were the ſaving them out of the Hands of their Temporal Enemies, and the executing ſevere Judgments upon Offenders, to uphold the Worſhip and Government of their King and their God and to aſſert his Law (for God being their King they that oppos'd his Government were dealt with as Rebels and Traytors in a Commonwealth) and a curſing, fighting, killing Military Spirit was their Judaical Legal Spirit. But in the New Teſtament (as we have no literal Canaan, nor literal Judaiſm, ſo) we have no Heathen Nations to fight againſt but our Heatheniſh Nature; the Lord's Battels that we are to fight, are againſt Sin and Temptations; God doth not now raiſe up Saviours, to deliver us out of the Hands of Temporal Enemies, nor is he the God of our Armies; the Valour that we are to exerciſe, is that of bearing the Croſs (not of fighting in the high places of the Field;) the Weapons of our Warfare as Chriſtians are not Carnal, but Spiritual (as our Warfare is;) God now delighteth in other Names and Titles than in the Old Teſtament-times, the Son of God is come with the Law of Kindneſs in his Mouth; and as the appearances of God are now changed, from dreadful and terrible to inexpreſſibly kind and benign: ſo his Behaviour to his Enemies is now chang'd (from killing them to die for them) Chriſtians are come from the Mount of Curſing, from a Condemning, Conſuming, Deſtroying Diſpenſation to a diſpenſation of inexpreſſible Grace and Love: All which ſhould ſweeten their Diſpoſition, and fill them with Love and Goodneſs to Mankind. And if their God is the God of all Grace, if their Saviour is full of Grace, if their Law is the Law of Grace, and their Life is the Life of Grace, it cannot be otherwiſe, but they muſt have far more gracious Laws and Precepts given them now, to regulate their Behaviour, than were given in the Moſaic Inſtitution, and there muſt be a Spirit peculiar to the Goſpel-times oppoſite to the Judaical Old Teſtament-ſpirit.

The Judaical Old Teſtament-ſpirit ſeemeth to breath in a great part of the Prayers and Devotions of the Book of Pſalms, which ſeem to be ſuch, as the Jews and Muhammedans uſually make, Prayers of Imprecation or Execration (curſing Prayers) that are not reconcileable to Chriſtian Piety. To ſalve this difficulty, (y) ſome would have the Tranſlation changed, and to run not in the Senſe of the Imperative Mood, but of the Future Tenſe; for they obſerve, that in the Hebrew the words are in the Future Tenſe, not let them be confounded, but they ſhall be confounded, not let them be turned back, but they ſhall be turned back, Pſal. 35. 4. But this ſolution of the difficulty is of no value, as appeareth from the conſent of Interpreters, who render the Pſalmiſts words, not in the ſenſe of the Future Tenſe, but of the Imperative Mood, and in many places the Hebrew words cannot otherwiſe be rendred; for they are not of the Future Tenſe, but of the Imperative Mood, as Pſal. 59. 13. כלה Conſume them in wrath. Pſal. 69. 24. שפך pour out thine Indignation upon them. The many places of this ſort of Prayers wherein the Hebrew is of the Imperative Mood, demonſtrate, that thoſe other places wherein the Hebrew is of the Future Tenſe, are of the ſame Senſe, and conſequently the Tranſlation ought not to be changed. Nor is is it reaſonable to ſuppoſe, (z) that it is Chriſt himſelf that ſpeaketh the hundred and ninth Pſalm (that Pſalm of dreadful Execrations;) for this is to ſuppoſe him, to ſpeak extremely diſſonant Language from his Evangely. It is a better way, to mitigate the harſhneſs of this ſort of Prayers, to ſuppoſe them non vota ſed vaticinia, not properly Prayers, but Prophetic Predictions and Comminations with approbation (Comminations of a due event in a way of Prayer) as when the Pſalmiſt ſaith, Set thou a wicked man over him, and let Satan ſtand at his right hand, the meaning is, It will be ſo, and it ought to be ſo, ſo it is fit and righteous, that it ſhould be add Iniquity to their Iniquity, is as much as to ſay, ſo it will be, and ſo it ought to be. But there are many places in the Book of Pſams, that are not capable pable of this μαλακτικὸν, this cannot be thought the full meaning of them, but they are manifeſtly and properly Prayers, Prayers of Imprecation againſt God's, the Church's and the Pſalmiſt's Enemies, as Pſal. 59, 69. 83, 109. This ſort of Prayers therefore muſt be thought the Proprieties of the Land of Canaan's Pietiſts, and imputed to their Judaical Old Teſtament-ſpirit. From the ſame Spirit iſſu'd Curſe ye Meroz, the Prophet Eliſha's curſing the Children that reviled him, his Maſters calling for Fire from Heaven, the Prophet Jeremy's Prayers for Vengeance againſt his Perſecutors, and the Prayer of dying Zechariah, The Lord look upon it and require it. Old Iſrael's Pietiſts (truly ſuch) were ſpiritually Religious, as Chriſtians are, and in ſeveral Inſtances they remarkably chriſtianiz'd in their Practice, (a) as Moſes in praying for his Enemies, David in bearing Shimei's Curſes patiently: but in many Inſtances their Practices accounted laudable or not criminal becauſe agreeable to their Civil-religious Inſtitution (wherewith their Spiritual-religious Inſtitution was complicated) are not juſtifiable in Chriſtianity; as Jael's trepanning and deſtroying Siſera, the harſh uſage of the Children of Ammon by David a very Holy Man of the Moſaic Inſtitution. But the Moſaic Inſtitution is not in our Saviour's Sermon on the Mount conſider'd as an Inſtitution of the true Righteouſneſs and Holineſs of the Saints and Prophets of the Old Teſtament-times; It is manifeſtly conſider'd by him in the other Notion, as the Law of the Law-religioniſts Virtue and Righteouſneſs, ſuch as the Righteouſneſs of the Scribes and Phariſees was. That our Saviour in his Sermon hath reſpect to the Law (not meerly to the Gloſſes of the Scribes and Phariſees) is apparent from his citing the very words of it, when he ſaith, It was ſaid by them of old time. By the Law the Law-religioniſts had their Virtue and Righteouſneſs, which in the whole of it was not better than that of the Jews Civil-religious Law, whence the Chriſtians ſtick not to affirm, that they tranſcend the Righteouſneſs of the Law. (b) Our newneſs of Life is it not tranſcendently conſpicuous, not only in compariſon of the Greeks and of Worldly Men, but alſo in compariſon of thoſe that have ſuperlatively the Righteouſneſs of the Law? Seeing we do not deſire any addition, nor covet more, as worldly men do, and not only ſo, but we do not affect the things that we have, and which are our own. We ſtudy to do good to the Indigent above the Law; for we do not only do good to our Neighbour, but extend it unto Enemies and to the Evil, doing good according to the Commandment of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, which is to be merciful, as our Heavenly Father is merciful, ϗ πάσης τῆς κατὰ τὸν νόμον δικαιοσύνης τὴν περισσείαν φυλάσσειν ὁμοίως διδασκόμεθα· And in like manner we are taught to obſerve a tranſcendence of all the Righteouſneſs of the Law, and conſequently of all the Righteouſneſs of the Scribes and Phariſees.

(y) Dr. Ham. Pref. to his Paraphr. on the Pſalms.

(z) Idem ibid.

(5.) As the Law of Nature is variouſly underſtood, ſo our Saviour's Inſtitution of Virtue and Righteouſneſs (in his Sermon on the Mount) muſt be ſaid, to tranſcend, or not to tranſcend the Law of Nature. Some ſay, that ſetting aſide the poſitive Precepts of Baptiſm and the Lord's Supper, Chriſt commanded no new Duty, but all was Duty before that is now. Others thus expreſs their Opinion more cautiouſly; that matters of Faith and the Sacraments only excepted, there is nothing in the whole Goſpel, which is not juris naturalis. Many are of this Mind, but ſome of the beſt learned ſay, (c) they ſee no reaſon for this Opinion: which yet is manifeſtly founded upon theſe Reaſons; The Law Natural is the ſame with the Divine Moral Law, is alſo the comprehenſion of what is in its own Nature matter of Law (of which Nature the Agenda of Chriſtianity are except the two Sacraments) and it is not reaſonable to ſuppoſe, that our Saviour's buſineſs in his Sermon on the Mount is to make Duties of poſitive Inſtitution. Which Reaſons would be of great force, if the Natural Law might be conſider'd as fully and perfectly a Law without being duely notic'd: but without being ſuch it is not plenarily Law; the Natural Law therefore muſt be defined, The comprehenſion of what is in its own nature matter of Law, ſo far as it is notic'd to Mankind by Natural Light. Which definition of the Law of Nature inferreth, that this Propoſition, All the Agenda of Chriſtianity are juris naturalis, the Sacraments only excepted, is either wanting in good Senſe or devoid of Truth. For if by the two Sacraments we underſtand the whole of Chriſtianity (which is virtually compris'd in them) the Propoſition is wanting in good Senſe. But if the Propoſition meaneth by the two Sacraments ſtrictly thoſe two poſitive inſtituted Rites only diſtinct from all the other Agenda of Chriſtianity, which are ſuppos'd, to be of the Natural Law, it is at a great rate devoid of Truth. For Natural Light is far from noticing all the Agenda of Piety, the Holy Life and the Saint of God-kind of Virtue. All thoſe Chriſtian Duties that have Chriſt for their Object, or Chriſtians (as ſuch) or the Church of Chriſt, or the new Kingdom of God, or the Kingdom of Darkneſs, are ſo far new Duties; and ſuch are all thoſe Chriſtian Duties, that ſuppoſe the ſtate of Chriſtianity (the entring into it or being in it) the Immunities and Priviledges of it, the communication of the Holy Spirit and our Regeneration by it. Natural Light furniſheth no Notices of the two oppoſite Kingdoms of Light and Darkneſs, the two oppoſite ſtates of Life and Death, the two oppoſite kind of Lives the Carnal and the Holy Spiritual, the two oppoſite Families the Mundane-born and the Heaven-born, the two oppoſite Religions of Law and Saving Grace, the two oppoſite kinds of Religioniſts the Carnal and the Spiritual; and therefore cannot be thought to notice the great Agenda that ſuppoſe them. The Carnal Jews that had the Law of Nature of a better Edition than the Gentiles, yet were Aliens from the knowledge of the Spiritual Freedom, the Spiritual Food (the Object of Spiritual Hunger and Thirſt) the Spiritual Circumciſion and from the very knowledge of the Spiritual-religious obſervance of the Law. They knew not by their Natural and Legal Light the true and genuine kind of Virtue, Piety, Humility, Purity, Temperance, Juſtice, Charity: So Heathen Mankind took up with their bad kind of Virtue, and (d) Plato allotteth a future Felicity in the beſt place to them that have exercis'd τὴν δημοτικὴν καὶ πολιτικὴν ἀρετήν, the Popular and Civil Virtue. The Duties of Religion that are notic'd by the Light of Nature, may not be notic'd by it as to the Due and Chriſtian-kind of them. To pray to God and to worſhip him, may be notic'd by Natural Light without the notice, that (according to Chriſtianity) we ought to worſhip him in Spirit and Truth, and to pray, that his

Kingdom

(a) Grot. de V. R. C. l. 5. S. 6.

Judg. 4. 18.

2 Sam. 12. 31.

(b) S. Baſil. de Bapt. l. 1. p. 654.

(c) Grot. de J. B. ac P. l. 1. c. 2. S. 6.

(d) Alcin. de doctr. Plat. c.

Kingdom may come. What is Virtue and Righteouſneſs, is in good degree notic'd to Mankind by Natural Light, yet ſo imperfectly, that all unregenerate Mankind are blind and benighted, and every one that becometh a Convert to Chriſtianity and Godlineſs, becometh a new kind of Man, of a new Nature and a new Spirit, of new Affections, Volitions and Deſigns, entreth into a new Covenant, a new Kingdom and Family, becometh a Member of a new and heavenly Society, hath a new Father, a new Country, a new Inheritance, a new Lord, a new Law, a new Work and Buſineſs, liveth a new Life, and his Duties are (in a limited Senſe) new Duties in reſpect of the Light of Unregenerate Nature, which knoweth them not, which counteth them mean and pedantic or fooliſhneſs and madneſs. (e) When any one beginneth to live unto God, to deſpiſe the World, to bear his Injuries without willing to revenge them, not to deſire Riches, nor ſeek a terrene Felicity, to contemn all things, and highly to ſet up in his thoughts the Lord only, and to adhere to the way of Chriſt, the Pagans ſay, he is mad. It ſeemeth as abſurd to the natural Man's Reaſon, as it is diſtaſtful and abominable to his Genius, to rejoyce in Loſſes, to make Reproaches our Glory, (f) Lowneſs our Height, Meanneſs our Greatneſs, our Riches to have nothing, to return no Evil to any, but to requite their greateſt Injuries with good-will and good offices, to eſteem them that ſlight us, and to love them that hate us. What the Philoſophers (the Pagan Saintiſts) have diſcours'd of theſe matters, appeareth not to have been from any conſcientious regard to the Light of Nature, but from Unpopular Humour. (g) Sacred Theology is grounded only upon the Word and Oracles of God, and not upon the Light of Nature. This holdeth not only in thoſe Points of Faith which concern the great Myſteries of the Deity, of the Creation, and of the Redemption, but likewiſe thoſe which concern the Law Moral truly interpreted; love your Enemies, do good to them that hate you, be like your Heavenly Father, that ſuffereth his Rain to fall upon the juſt and unjuſt. To this it ought to be applied, Nec vox hominem ſonat, It is a Voice beyond the Light of Nature.

(e) Cùm cœperit Deo quiſpiam vivere, mundum contemnere, injurias ſuas nolle ulciſci, nolle hîc divitias, non hîc quærere felicitatem terrenam, contemnere omnia, Dominum ſolum cogitare, viam Chriſti non deſerere, à paganis dicitur inſanus. Annot. in Min. Fel. p. 79.

(f) Luk. 14. 11. Matth. 20. 27. 2*Cor.* 6. 10.

(g) Lord Bacon Advanc. of Learn. p. m. 317.

Chriſtianity as it is Lex remedians, is neceſſarily a new Law, that injoyneth new Duties, Duties that are new in this Senſe, they are not requir'd by the Original Law of Soul-intereſts, nor are they Branches of our original Sanctity of Life. Which original Law of Soul-intereſts with due diſtinction and limitation of Senſe may be called the Law of Nature; for the Law of Nature ſo far as it is the Divine Moral Law and is of Spiritual-religious obſervance, is the Holy Spiritual Law, or the Original Law of Soul-intereſts, which was the perfect rule of Righteouſneſs in the original ſtate of the Univerſe (requiring all Duty, forbidding all Sin, allowing no degree of Sin, nor any failure of Duty and Virtue, but requiring the Spiritual-religious Virtue and Righteouſneſs in abſolute ſinleſs Perfection) for Sin was therefore Sin, becauſe it was a tranſgreſſion of the Divine Law (the Rule of Practice) a deviation from this ſtraight Rule. So in Chriſtianity this Divine Law is ſuppos'd by the Apoſtle, to require that Spiritual-religious Virtue and Righteouſneſs, which conſtituteth Regenerate Chriſtians, and it cannot be ſuppos'd, to require this Virtue and Righteouſneſs imperfectly, but in abſolute ſinleſs Perfection. It is not imaginable therefore, that our Saviour doth inſtitute to an higher Virtue and Righteouſneſs than the Divine Moral Law, in ſuch Senſe he commandeth no new Duty, nor doth our recover'd Sanctity tranſcend our original Sanctity, and conſequently the Law of Grace doth not tranſcend the Law of Nature ſo underſtood and explained. Yet Chriſtians muſt ſay, (h) τὸ κ̓τ' φύσιν βιῶν ἀπίστω πεπιστευκότος ἐϛὶν, to live according to Nature, is to be a vile Unbeliever. Natura eſt prima omnium diſciplina, Nature (ſaith Tertullian) is the firſt Schoolmiſtreſs of all: but the Agenda of Chriſtianity are the Virtues and Duties of Regeneracy, which therefore are of an higher Diſcipline than the Law and Light of Nature; they are higher than any Civil-religious obſervance of the Law of Nature, and than any Spiritual-religious obſervance of it which the Light of Nature ſheweth. As they are the Agenda of Chriſtianity they are an addition of new Duty both to Men and Angels (for the Holy Angels being Chriſtianiz'd have an addition made to their Duty by our Saviour's coming) and they ariſe from new cauſes of Duty or degrees of Duty, as glorying in the Croſs manifeſtly doth, laying down our Lives for the Brethren, and loving Enemies with a Love conformable to the Love of God in Chriſt unto us, when we were Enemies. But theſe additions of Duty and of cauſes of Duty are not Superiorities and Tranſcendencies above that Spiritual-religious Virtue and Righteouſneſs which the Divine Moral Law requireth (and which conſtituteth the Saints of God) they are only novi modi exercendi, new modes of exerciſing that Divine Charity, which is the Summary of Sanctity, of the Divine Moral Law and of the Myſtery of Godlineſs. The prime Article whereof God was manifeſt in the Fleſh yet remaineth to be diſcours'd of; but of this great Article and of the fourth Name of the Chriſtian Religion The new Creation we will give an account in the following Book.

(h) J. Mart. Ep. ad Zen.

BOOK

BOOK VI.

An Idea of the Lord the Son, his Incarnation and new Creation.

CHAP. I.

1. The true Idea of the Son of God of a middle Nature between two extremes; the one the Doctrine of Arius and Socinus that creaturizeth the Son of God, the other the Scolaſtic-Theology of the Church, that introduceth an Abſtract Son of God. 2. The firſt ſort of Arguments to prove the Truth of our Idea (which alſo clearly illuſtrateth it) is from this Name The Son of God, which denoteth an Honour, Dignity and Eſtate of Nobilitation. 3. This Honour and Dignity is deſtroy'd by the Hypotheſis of an Abſtract Son of God. 4. In the New Teſtament it is never attributed to an Abſtract Son. 5. Amongſt Holy People it always ſignifieth the Perſon of the Meſſiah. 6. The Son of God and the Humane Nature are inſeparable. 7. The Idea of the true Son of God belongeth to popular Nobility-Learning. 8. The true Son of God is an holy-popular-kind of Son. 9. The Abſtract Son of God is of no Religion. 10. The Abſtract Son of God is no Ingredient of the Chriſtian Trinity.

I. THE Chriſtian Religioniſts are thoſe that believe on the Name of the Son of God (in the Senſe of the New Teſtament) whereby they are diſcriminated from the World of Unbelievers, Jews, Heathens and Muhammedans, who either do not acknowledge any one to be the Son of God (in the Senſe of Chriſtianity) or they do not acknowledge him to be ſo, that is ſo called in the New Teſtament and in the Chriſtian Religion. (i) The Muhammedans accuſe the Chriſtians of falſifying the Word of God unto Iſa (Jeſus) in the ſecond Pſalm; that inſtead of Thou art my Prophet, I have educated thee, they have ſubſtituted, Thou art my Son, I have begotten thee. Such is the tranſcendency of God in the Conceit of theſe Infidels, that they ſuppoſe it a thing far below him to have a Son; they are great Unitarians (Zealots for the Unity of God) their Religion (k) doth not acknowledge any Son of God, to be join'd with him in Religious Worſhip; and thoſe that ſo join a Son of God they call Aſſociantes, by which Name they uſually call the Chriſtians, ſuppoſing them in ſo doing guilty of an unpardonable Crime. And by the ſame Name Muhammed called thoſe old Arabians that worſhipp'd Angels as the Sons and Daughters of God, whoſe Idolatrous Worſhip he aboliſh'd. The Pagans in their Philoſophy and Religion had Sons of God more than a few. The Indian Brachmans ſuppos'd, that God had ſeveral Sons, to one of which they attributed the Creation of the World. (l) For Porphyry from Bardiſanes telleth of an huge Statue of theirs, half of a Maſculine and half of a Feminine Form, on whoſe Arms the ſeveral Parts of the World were ingraven, which Statue (as the Brachmans reported) God gave to his Son when he created the World, that he might uſe it as an Exemplar. So the Platoniſts attribute the Creation of the World to their Logos, called by Philo πρωτόγονος υἱὸς Θεοῦ, the primogenit Son of God, and by Porphyry πατρικὸς νοῦς, the paternal Mind or Intellect. (m) Hunc autem Chriſtum eſſe non credis (ſaith St. Auſtin to Porphyry) this paternal Intellect and primogenit Son a Platoniſt doth not believe to be Chriſt. Our Chriſt is indeed as vaſtly diſſonant from a Platonic Son of God, as Chriſtianity is from Paganiſm, as Celſus obſerveth touching another Platonic Son of God. Whence it is (ſaith he) that theſe Chriſtians call their Jeſus the Son of God, I now declare. (n) The Men of ancient times called this World as made by God his Child and Youngling. And is there not a mighty ſimilitude between this and the Chriſtians Son of God? St. Auſtin therefore and Lactantius who alledge a Diſcourſe in the Aſclepian Dialogue, touching this paganical Son of God (the viſible World) as a Teſtimony in confirmation of Chriſtianity, have committed a very great miſtake. And a miſtake there is in the Aſſertion of a learned Man of our own, (o) that according to the Senſe of the ancient Jews, the Son of God ſpoken of Pſalm 2. was the Eternal Son of God of the ſame Subſtance with the Father. For altho' it is apparent, that at the riſe of Chriſtianity, and in the times before it, the Jews did call the Meſſiah the Son of God, yet there is no appearance that they look'd upon him as the Eternal Son of God. Of the Senſe of the Jews ſince the times of Chriſtianity, Origen giveth this account. (p) A Jew doth not acknowledge, that any Prophet hath predicted the coming of the Son of God. That which they ſay is, that the Chriſt of God ſhall come. They often ask us, and (when they diſpute with us) preſently ask us touching the Son of God, as ſuppoſing that there is no ſuch Perſon, nor that any ſuch is propheſy'd of. But in this account of the Senſe of the Jews there is ſomething of miſtake; for the Hebrew Doctors which ſince the times of Chriſtianity expound the ſecond Pſalm touching the Meſſiah, (q) do call him the Son of God: but they do not ſuppoſe him the Son of God, ſo as to be of the Godhead (which is the Chriſtian Senſe) but in a metaphorical and large Senſe, and ſuch a Senſe which is competible to a meer Man. Athanaſius therefore thus excuſeth the Apoſtles, becauſe in the beginning of their preaching the Goſpel they ſeem'd only to ſpeak of the Humane Nature of Chriſt. (r) They had a reaſonable cauſe for ſo doing, becauſe the Jews of thoſe times being themſelves in Error, and drawing the Heathen into the ſame Error, ἐνόμιζον τὸν χριστὸν ψιλὸν ἄνθρωπον μόνον, ἐκ σπέρματος Δαβὶδ ἔρχεσθαι, καθ' ὁμοιότητα τῶν ἐκ τοῦ Δαβὶδ ἄλλων γενομένων τέκνων, οὔτε δὲ Θεὸν αὐτὸν, they ſuppoſed the Meſſiah to come of the Seed of David, only a meer Man, like

(i) Hotting. Theſ. Phil. p. 164.

(k) Idem Hiſt. or. l. 1. c. 7. p. 157. l. 2. c. 2. p. 221. ed. 1.

(l) De ſtyge p. 283.

(m) S. Aug. de C. D. l. 10. c. 28.

(n) Ἄνδρες παλαιοὶ τόνδε τὸν κόσμον ὡς ἐκ Θεοῦ γενόμενον, παῖδά τε αὐτοῦ καὶ ἤϊθεον προσεῖπον. Πάνυ γοῦν ὅμοιος οὗτός τε κἀκεῖνος παῖς Θεοῦ. Orig. c. Celſ. l. 6. p. 308. Intel. Syſt. p. 540, 330.

(o) Pocock. Not. Miſc. p. 307, &c.

(p) Ἰουδαῖος δὲ οὐκ ἂν ὁμολογήσαι, ὅτι προφήτης τις εἶπεν ἥξειν Θεοῦ υἱόν. ὃ γὰρ λέγουσιν, ἐστὶν, ὅτι ἥξει ὁ χριστὸς τοῦ Θεοῦ. καὶ πολλάκις γε ζητοῦσι πρὸς ἡμᾶς εὐθέως περὶ υἱοῦ Θεοῦ ὡς οὐδενὸς ὄντος τοιούτου, οὐδὲ προφητευθέντος. C. Celſ. l. 1. p. 38.

(q) Hoornbeck c. Jud. l. 5. c. 1. Lightfoot Hor. in Matt. 27. 54.

(r) De ſent. Dionyſ. p. 432. Com.

others of David's Poſterity, not believing him to be God. The Jews Maxim is (s) Quod Deus non habeat ſocium aut ſecundum in Deitate; they do not acknowledge, either that Jeſus is the true Meſſiah, or that the true Meſſiah is the Son of God, as that Name importeth his Deity, both which are fundamental Articles of the Chriſtian Theology, alike certain, but not alike eaſily intelligible; for the multifarious Conteſts in the Chriſtian Church touching the Perſon of the Meſſiah (which hath been the Subject of more and more virulent Debates than any other branch of Religion) ſhew how infinitely perplex'd and obſcure this Article is, The Deity of the Meſſiah.

The true meaning of the Article (as I ſuppoſe) is of a middle nature between two Extremes: The Doctrine of Arius and Socinus on the one hand, which creaturizeth the Son of God; and the Scholaſtic Theology of the Church on the other hand, which by the Son of God underſtandeth an Abſtract Son of God of Eternal Generation. In oppoſition to both theſe Extremes, and to avoid the great Evils that on both hands incumber this great Article, we will ſhew that this great Name The Son of God, is one of the ἀξιώματα Titles and Attributes of Honour and Dignity, and that it importeth nothing leſs than the Deity of that determinate individual Perſon, to whom it belongeth. And touching that determinate individual Perſon to whom it belongeth, we will ſhew, that it is only the Perſon of Chriſt Jeſus, and not any Abſtract Son of God. By an Abſtract Son of God I mean the Scholaſtic Verbum or the Platonic Logos, or any other the like Hypoſtaſis. A ſuppoſed Son of God conſidered in the State of Separation and Abſtraction from being the complex Perſon of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt. (t) Either the ſolitary Scholaſtic Verbum or the Scholaſtic Verbum incarnate is called The only begotten Son of God. This ſolitary Scholaſtic Verbum is fitly denominated an Abſtract Son of God, that is ſeparated and abſtracted from being the Perſon of Chriſt. For (u) perſona Chriſti mixtura eſt Dei & hominis, perſona ex duabus naturis compoſita, Deus & Homo, nec ſine verâ Divinitate Humanitas, nec ſine verâ Humanitate Divinitas. And if the Perſon of Chriſt Jeſus is eſſentially God-Man, no ſuppoſed Son of God that is not God-Man, can be the Perſon of Chriſt Jeſus. If he is in the ſtate of ſeparation and abſtraction from being Man, he is neceſſarily in the ſtate of ſeparation and abſtraction from being the Perſon of Chriſt Jeſus. It is no contradiction, to ſay, that the Scholaſtic Verbum or Platonic Logos is the Son of God; but it is a contradiction, to ſay, that ſuch an abſtract Son of God (being ſuch) is the Perſon of Chriſt Jeſus. (w) Our uſual Theology will not allow us to ſay, that Chriſt Jeſus was aſſum'd into Unity of Perſon with the Son of God, becauſe the Perſon of Chriſt Jeſus is eſſentially the complex both of the Divine and Humane Nature, upon which account it alſo affirmeth (x) Nondum erat Chriſtus, ante quam noſtri habitus ſimilitudine Homo eſſet inventus. Chriſt was not antecedently to his being Man, (y) Chriſt both Name and Thing doth not any way agree τῷ λόγῳ γυμνῷ, to the naked Logos (not having Humane Nature conjoin'd) ſaith the Alexandrian Cyril. And according to Athanaſius incarnatione ipſa Chriſtus factus eſt, he became Chriſt by his Incarnation; good Authors ſometimes have unwarily ſpoken otherwiſe, but this (ſaith Petavius) unicè eſt Chriſtiana profeſſio is the only Chriſtian Profeſſion. The Chriſtian Profeſſion knoweth no Abſtract Chriſt Jeſus, yet the Scholaſtic Theology of the Chriſtian Church (from the elder times of it) hath introduc'd into the Chriſtian Theology an Abſtract Son of God, that (being ſuch) cannot be the Perſon of Chriſt Jeſus, who is the only Son of God, and ſuch a Son of God, that is not Creature but Creature-tranſcendent.

II. The firſt ſort of Arguments to prove the truth of this our Idea (which will alſo clearly explicate and illuſtrate it) we will deduce from this Name, The Son of God, which certainly ſignifieth an Honour, Dignity and Eſtate of Nobilitation. For it is ſelf-evident, that to be the Son of God importeth Honour, Dignity and Nobilitation of Perſon; that the Scripture Theology by the Name of The Son of God intendeth to ennoble the Perſon ſo called, as Humane Authors intend to ennoble Men by the Names δῖος, Divine, διογενὴς, God-begotten, διοτρεφὴς, a Nurſling of God, deorum filii, ſati ſanguine Divûm, è ſtirpe Deorum, Sons of the Gods, Θεοειδεῖς, Θεοείκελοι, ἰσόθεοι, God-like, Θεῷ τὸ εἶδος ὅμοιος, Os humeroſque Deo ſimilis.

—— —— οὐδὲ ἐῴκει
Ἀνδρός γε θνητοῦ πάϊς ἔμμεναι, ἀλλὰ θεοῖο.

So Priam ſaid of Hector.

—— —— he ſeem'd to me
No Son of Mortal Man, but of a God to be.

But this Name, The Son of God, in the ſenſe of Chriſtianity and the New Teſtament, is not only a term of Honour and Ennoblement (as a Son of God is in profane Authors:) but in our Religion (which is the Kingdom of God) it is the name of a certain Honour, Dignity and eſtate of Nobilitation, ſuch as Nobility-learning treateth of. For ſo in all Kingdoms and Empires to be be Son and Heir of the Government, is a particular diſtinct Honour, Dignity and eſtate of Nobilitation (almoſt the ſupreme Dignity) and the Writers of Nobility-learning treat of it as one of the Titles of Honour, (z) In Codinus the Heir apparent is expreſs'd generally by the Emperour's Son, or ὁ υἱὸς τοῦ βασιλέως, and the Deſpotes are mention'd by themſelves as of an inferiour Dignity. The Son of the King therefore (or the Emperor's Son) is a Title of Honour, that denoteth a Dignity Superiour to the other Dignities (next to the Supreme) the Dignity of the Heir apparent or of the King's primogenit Son, as the Heir apparent hath been called (a) in our own Nation and (b) in France alſo before the Title of le Daulphin was in uſe, Filius regis primogenitus therefore is in ſenſe the ſame with the Title of the Prince (which is the uſual Name of the Son and Heir apparent) who is ſometimes ſtiled, not only the Son of the King, but the Son of the Kingdom; for ſo one of our Engliſh Hiſtorians (c) ſtileth Henry the Eighth. His Father had other Sons, but he was not only the Son of the King but the Son of the Kingdom; not only the Son of his Father's Nature but of his Regial or Imperial Eſtate (and conſequently of the Kingdom, as that name ſignifieth the Kingdom Eſtate) who therefore ought to be called The Regial or Imperial Son of the King. And he ought the rather to be ſo called, becauſe he is not only the deſigned Succeſſor in the Imperial Dignity in time to come, but he is at preſent in great degree partaker thereof, (d) For the Prince in our Law is reputed as the ſame Perſon with the King, and ſo declared by a Statute of Hen. 8. Coruſcat enim princeps

(Jay

(s) Abarben. ap. Vorſt. de cap. fid. p. 27, 33.

(t) Filius Dei unigenitus dicitur, aut Verbum ſolum, aut Verbum incarnatum. Petav. T. 4. l. 16. c. 5. S. 9.

(u) *Idem ibid. l.*3. c. 9. S. 15. c. 16. S. 2. *l.*4. *c.*9. S. 12. *l.*5. *c.*3. *S.*6. *l.*11. c. 8. *S.*12. & l. 4. c. 14. S. 10. de Trin. l. 3. *c.*11. *S.*14.

(w) *Idem T.*4. l. 6. c. 9. S. 17.

(x) Ibid. l. 4. *c.*15. S. 12.

(y) Ibid. l. 11. c. 8, 9. *S.*1. vid. S. Cyr. de rect. Fid. p. 54.

(z) Selden Titles p. 232. *Ed.*3.

(a) Ibid. p. 498.

(b) ibid. p. 397.

(c) Sir Fr. Bacon Hiſt. of Henry 8.

(d) The preſent State of Eng. 1. *par. p.*104, 105.

(ſay our Lawyers) radiis Regis Patris ſui, & cenſetur una perſona cum ipſo. And the Civilians ſay, the King's eldeſt Son may be ſtiled a King. But mine Author addeth, The Prince in Nature is a diſtinct Perſon from the King, ſo in Law alſo in ſome Caſes he is a Subject. In former times (e) the Prince in our Nation had the Attribute of Atheling or Ætheling, to denote him in a ſenſe of Eminence Nobilis ortu, generoſus, ἐυγενὴς, or one born of him that is Noble; and an ancient Poet of ours ſtyling him Edgar Atheling, looketh upon him as King by kind.

(e) Seldon ſupr. p. 498, 499.

Wo ſo were next King by kunde me cluped Atheling, Thervore me cluped him ſo, vor by kunde he was (King.

(f) Galba at his deſignation of L. Piſo for his Succeſſor in the Roman Empire ſaid, that he placed him (by the Example of Octavian) in proximo ſibi faſtigio, in the next Sublimity to himſelf. In after-times and for a long time the Heir apparent or Succeſſor deſign'd in the Roman Empire was called Cæſar, had the Attribute of Nobiliſſimus, certain Imperatoria Inſignia (Imperial-Enſigns or Ornaments) were allow'd him, his Dignity is ſometimes ſtyl'd Imperium and Cæſarianum Imperium; ad Imperii ſocietatem adſciſcere and ad Imperium aſſumere, or τοῦ βασιλικοῦ κοινωνὸν ἀποφαίνειν κλήσει were Phraſes to make a Cæſar (there being another kind of taking a Partner to the Empire by making another Emperour;) neither was it meerly titulary and of expectation, but join'd with an eminency of Power, and for the moſt part ſuch, as wanted only a fulneſs of Equality with the Emperor's. A like Eminency of Honour was conjoyn'd with this Eminency of Power; (g) for the Emperor Theodoſius was angry with a Biſhop, becauſe he did not Honour the Emperor's Son with the like Honour as himſelf. Of later times the Heir or Succeſſor apparent is not ſtyled Cæſar, but Rex Romanorum, which is a great Name, but touching the greatneſs of his Power the Imperial Lawyers are not agreed, yet thus far they are agreed, they all ſuppoſe him to be of Supra-ſubject (or Subject-tranſcendent) Condition. (h) There is alſo a frequent Opinion among them, that Filius Regis Rex vocari debet, quamvis regnum non habeat; and that he is Rex quoad nomen & dignitatem, but not quoad juriſdictionem, adminiſtrationem, vel alia ſimilia, quæ reſpiciunt Dominium. But ſo much of Dominion neceſſarily belongeth to the Son and Heir of the King, as belongeth to the firſt-born Son and Heir of a Family (i) who is not only ſtyled Herus ac Dominus, but Dominus rerum paternarum; and the Lawyers ſay of ſuch, erant vivente quoque Patre quodammodo Domini.

(f) Ibid. p. 225, 227.

(g) Sozomen Hiſt. Eccl. l. 7. c. 6.

(h) Selden ſupr. p. 27.

(i) Grot. Not. in Joh. 8. 35. Owen in Heb. 1. 2. Calv. Lex. in Voce Dominium.

From theſe Notices of Humane Affairs it is apparent, that the Son of God is of definitive notion an Honour, Dignity and eſtate of Nobilitation, and that his Name and Idea belongeth not to Platonic and Ariſtotelick Metaphyſicks or to Scholaſtick Theology (as both Catholicks and Hereticks have ſuppoſed) but to Nobility-learning. The Bible throughout the whole of it ſuppoſeth, that there is an analogy between Divine and Humane Affairs, and ſo do all Expoſitors; for they explicate the one by the other. Our Saviour's Idea muſt be underſtood by that of a King's Son, Matt. 22. 2. that of a Son in a Family, John 8. 35. that of a Son and Heir, Matt. 21. 37, 38. Rom. 8. 17. Heb. 1. 2. that of a Filius unigenitus & primogenitus, John 1. 14, 18. Rom. 8. 29. Col. 1. 15, 18. Heb. 7. 6. The Son of God is of definitive notion Filius Regis unigenitus & primogenitus in the Kingdom of God; and therefore is of definitive notion ſuch an Honour, Dignity and Eſtate of Nobilitation in divinis, as the Filius Regis primogenitus is in an Humane Kingdom. God is an Honour, Dignity and eſtate of Nobilitation, whoſe Name and Idea belongeth to Nobility-learning; and the ſame Judgment muſt neceſſarily be made of the Name and Idea of the Son of God. As from the nature and propriety of his Generation, and Sonſhip, the Fathers rightly argue (k) that the Son is not ſelf-exiſtent, nor a Creature, and that he is of the ſame Nature with the Father: So from the nature and propriety of his imperial Generation and Sonſhip (becauſe he is the Son and Heir of the great Imperial Eſtate of the Godhead) we ought to argue, that he is this Honour, Dignity and eſtate of Nobilitation, the Imperial Son of God, a Divine Imperial Perſon, a Prince Creature-tranſcendent, a filial Kingdom-eſtate Creature-tranſcendent, a Chriſtian and Saint of God-kind of Son of God ſo as to be the Lord the Son, the Imperial Saint of God-kind of Son, the holy Empire's Imperial Son, the height of all Honour, Nobilitation and Excellence competible to a Son. Let us conceive in our Mind that God is The Imperial Eſtate-tranſcendent to all Creatures, Men and Angels (ſo as to be the God-kind of Soveraignty) this Idea implieth and inferreth, that the Imperial Son of God is ſuperiour and tranſcendent to all Creatures, Men and Angels; that it is Sanctity, Divinity and Deity of Perſon, to be the Imperial Son of God; that he is one of and in the Godhead (the Soveraignty;) that amongſt the Saints and Sons of God he is the Lord the Son, in State and Nature no leſs than God the Son; and that he is Deus natus & genitus in the ſame ſenſe that a King's primogenit Son is Rex natus & genitus, which is the Pſalmiſt's Senſe of the King's Son, Pſalm 72. 1. Give the King thy Judgments, O God, and thy Righteouſneſs unto the King's Son. For the King's Son ſignifieth Rex natus & genitus, as the Son of God ſignifieth his Imperial Son; which an ignorant Friar in France well diſcern'd, when he compared the French King to God the Father, and called our bleſſed Lord the Daulphin of Heaven. The Holy Ghoſt calleth him The Imperial Son, ſtyling him The Prince of the King's of the Earth; ſo do the Magi, calling him He that is born King of the Jews (which is the ſame with Rex natus & genitus;) The only begotten Son of God is the ſame with the Imperial Son, and ſo is the Meſſiah or Chriſt the Lord. Divines implicitly call him The Imperial Son, when they call our Saviour (l) The only Son of our ſupreme Sovereign and the Heir apparent to the Kingdom of Heaven, (m) The Son of God the Heir of Eternal Majeſty, (n) τὸν τοῦ πατρὸς ἀγαθῶν οὐσιωδῶς κληρονόμον, eſſentially the Heir of the Father's Goods, (o) μόνος κληρονόμος ὡς υἱὸς, the only Heir as a Son. Agreeably to the Apoſtle Heb. 1. 2. the Council of Frankford calleth the Son (p) filium & heredem univerſorum, the Son and Heir of all things. Here therefore we may ſafely fix our Foot (the Ground being firm under us) with great aſſurance we may pronounce, that this is the true Idea of the Son of God The Imperial Son, The Imperial Svint of God-kind of Son, or The Holy Empire's Imperial Son, and that this is the ſenſe of Clemens Romanus, who p. 36. of his Epiſtle to the Corinthians calleth our Saviour τὸ σκῆπτρον τῆς μεγαλοσύνης τοῦ Θεοῦ, The Scepter of the magnificence of God, which is the ſame Name with The Imperial Son that is an Honour, Dignity and Eſtate of Nobilitation Creature-tranſcendent. For in (k) Petav. de Trin. l. 2. c. 10.

(l) Downam Chriſt. Warf. par. 2. p. 331.

(m) Dr. Barrow Ser. on Joh. 1. 14.

(n) S. Cyr. in Joann. p. 170.

(o) Idem Theſaur. p. 226.

(p) Petav. T. 4. l. 7. c. 1. S. 7.

the Kingdom of God the Creature-party and the Subject-party are one and the very ſame; if therefore the Son of God is natively and eſſentially a Lord and Prince Subject-tranſcendent, he is natively and eſſentially a Lord and Prince Creature-tranſcendent, which is a demonſtration of Chriſt's Divinity againſt the Doctrine of Arius and Socinus. But the true Idea of the Son of God is alike oppoſite to the Scholaſtic Hypotheſis of an Abſtract Son of God (whereby the plain and certain definitive notices of the Son of God are contradicted and overthrown) which therefore as we paſs along we will modeſtly confront and oppoſe to the true and genuine Son of God, that is, Chriſt Jeſus, The Child of God, The Son of God, The Imperial Son of God, The Imperial Saint of God-kind of Son (neither more nor leſs than ſo) who is The God-ſon of God of kind and degree ſuch (no Creature-ſon) and in ſuch ſenſe God the Son.

III. The Honour and Dignity of ſuch a Son is deſtroy'd by the Hypotheſis of a Scholaſtic Abſtract Son. For as there can be no ſuch Honour and Dignity amongſt Men as the Imperial Son and Heir of the King, if the plenary Kingdom-eſtate be ſubſtituted inſtead of it, if the Son of the King be eſſentially and plenarily from his nativity King as well as the Father: ſo the Honour and Dignity of the Imperial Son and Heir of God is deſtroy'd, if we ſubſtitute the Eſtate of the Godhead inſtead of it, if the Son of God is eſſentially and plenarily from eternity God Almighty (omni-imperial) as well as the Father. It cannot be ſaid of ſuch a Son, that he is neither higher nor lower than the Imperial Son and Heir, that he is natively no more than the Prince, the Son of the King that is the Son of the Kingdom, nor may he be called the Heir apparent of the Kingdom of Heaven, the Heir of eternal Majeſty; for he is ſuppoſed to have been begotten immediately and from Eternity into the actual and plenary poſſeſſion of the Kingdom-eſtate. (q) Seeing the Father is believed to be All-imperial and Eternal, the Son is demonſtrated to be conſempiternal, and to differ in nothing from the Father; for he was God of God, All-imperial of the All Imperial, Coeternal of the Eternal, not after in time, not inferiour in potentacy, not unlike in glory, not divided in Eſſence. This is not the Idea of an imperial Son and Heir, but of one that is eſſentially and plenarily, natively and neceſſarily an Emperour from a Emperour, and ſo the Son is ſuppoſed to be de Deo Deus. (r) The Father is God by Nature, Omni-imperial, Creator, Lord, King, Incorruptible, Immortal, Life, having no beginning of Exiſtence, nor produc'd from not being into being; and the Son is all theſe without any diverſity. This Idea of an Abſtract Son of God utterly ſpoileth the analogy between Divine and Humane Affairs, deſtroyeth the Notion of a Son and Heir, and yet it is not unuſual with the ancient Writers, to compare the Son of God to a Son and Heir, to ſuch a Son and Heir as cannot have the plenary Poſſeſſion of the Kingdom-eſtate but by the after-conceſſion, aſſumption or tradition of the Father. Thus Tertullian diſputeth againſt Sabellianiſm. (s) The nature and notion of a Monarchy doth not hinder, but that the Monarch may have a Son, and (ſi particeps ejus adſumatur & Filius) if his Son be aſſumed into the Government and becometh a Partner in it, it doth not follow, that the Monarchy is divided and ceaſeth to be a Monarchy. Lactantius compareth the Son of God to the Son and Heir of a Family, to whom the Father granteth the Rule and Government. (t) If one hath a Son whom he ſingularly loveth, who yet is in the Houſe and Hand of his Father, altho' he granteth unto his Son the Name and Power of Lord, yet in the eye of the Law the Family is but one and the Maſter one, (u) Athenagoras (ſaith Eugubinus) to illuſtrate Divine Affairs from Humane, hath brought a very fine ſimilitude. The Roman Emperour begat a Son, afterwards took him into Conſortſhip of the Empire, and declared him Auguſtus. The World venerated both theſe as one Emperor. The Son venerated the Father, not the Father the Son; but the Father ſo lov'd the Son, that he gave unto him whatever himſelf was. He had generated him, then declar'd him Emperor, made a tradition of the Imperial power of the World to him, commanded all to obey him, the Honour that was done to him be accounted as done to himſelf, and ſo declared; nor was there any thing which the Son had not by Tradition from him. Black is ſcarce more unlike to white than an Imperial Son rais'd to the Government by the after-aſſumption and tradition of the Father is unlike to a Scholaſtic Abſtract Son (who hath nothing by donation from the Father but only by generation, and who is generated plenary King or Emperour) yet this is the fine ſimilitude of Athenagoras, who alſo (to compleat his unlike ſimilitude) ought to have proceeded, to ſhew, that three political Imperial Perſons in the Roman Government were venerated as one Emperor, and that this Ternary was a reſemblance of the Trinity.

IV. If Chriſtians ſpeak of the Son of God, their Religion obligeth them to underſtand by that Name the Perſon ſo called in the New Teſtament, which is no other than the Perſon of the Chriſtian Meſſiah. For throughout the whole New Teſtament (w) this name the Son of God never ſignifieth an Abſtract Son of God, is never applied to any ſuch Hypoſtaſis, but only to the complex Perſon of Chriſt Jeſus. Mar. 1. 1. The Goſpel of Chriſt the Son of God. Luke 1. 35. That holy thing which ſhall be born of thee, ſhall be called the Son of God. Matt. 16. 16. Peter anſwered and ſaid, Thou art Chriſt the Son of the living God. John 6. 69. We believe and are ſure, that thou art that Chriſt the Son of the living God. John 1. 49. Rabbi, thou art the Son of God, thou art the King of Iſrael. John 11. 27. Martha ſaith unto him, yea Lord I believe, that thou art the Chriſt, the Son of God, which ſhould come into the World. Acts 8. 37. The Eunuch anſwered

(q) Cùm enim Deus & omnipotens & æternus creditur pater, conſempiternus eidem Filius demonſtratur, in nullo à patre differens; quia de Deo Deus, de omnipotente omnipotens, de æterno natus eſt Coæternus: non poſterior tempore, non inferior poteſtate, non diſſimilis gloria, non diviſus eſſentia. S. Leo ap. Petav. de Trin. l. 4. c. 6. S. 11.

(r) Ὁ πατὴρ Θεὸς κατὰ φύσιν, παντοκράτωρ, δημιουργὸς, κύριος, βασιλεὺς, ἄφθαρτος, ἀθάνατος, ζωὴ, ἀρχὴν τοῦ εἶναι μὴ ἔχων, ἀλλ' οὐδὲ ἐκ μὴ ὄντος εἰς τὸ εἶναι παρενεχθείς· ταῦτα καὶ ὁ υἱὸς ἀπαραλλάκτως. *S. Cyr. ap. Petav. ibid. l.*2. c. 11. *S.*2.

(s) Adv. Prax. c. 3.

(t) Cùm quis habet filium, quem unicè diligit, qui tamen ſit in domo & manu Patris, licet ei nomen Domini poteſtatemque concedat, Civili tamen jure & domus una & unus Dominus nominatur. l. 4 c. 29.

(u) Attulit pulcherrimum, quoad licet ex mortalibus noſſe immortalia, Athenagoras exemplum, in Oratione ad duos Imperatores, Patrem & Filium. Pater erat Antoninus Pius, erat ei filius Auguſtus; genitus ab eo & declaratus Auguſtus, Imperatorque totius Orbis. Omnis terra gentes omnes venerabantur utrumque ut unum Imperatorem. Quidquid jubebat filius factum erat: quidquid item pater, fiebat extemplo: procedebat filius, vererabantur, adorabant omnes, idque cupido & volente Patre: ſimiliter procedebat Imperator Verus, omnes venerabantur, etiam filius. Filius venerabatur patrem, non pater filium, ſed tanta charitate filium diligebat pater, ut illi ſua delitiæ eſſent, ſua voluptas & gaudium, ut dederit ei quidquid ipſe eſſet. Genuerat eum, tum Imperatorem declaraverat, totius orbis poteſtatem tradiderat, omnes illi parere jubebat: quidquid honoris impenderetur filio ſibi collatum prædicabat, præ ſe ferebat: nihil erat reliquum quod filio non tradidiſſet. Eugub. de per. Phil. l. 2. c. 8.

(w) Vid. Crell. de uno Deo l. 1. S. 2. n. 316.

ſwer'd and ſaid, I believe that Jeſus Chriſt is the Son of God. Acts 9. 20. Paul preached Chriſt, that he is the Son of God. 1 Joh. 5. 5. Who is he that overcometh the World, but he that believeth, that Jeſus is the Son of God? 1 Joh. 4. 15. Whoſoever ſhall confeſs, that Jeſus is the Son of God, God dwelleth in him and he in God; yet this in ſome ſort the unclean Spirits confeſs Matt. 8. 29. What have we to do with thee, Jeſus thou Son of God? They that were in the Ship with him did acknowledge it after his ceaſing the Wind, Matt. 14. 23. They came and worſhipped him, ſaying, of a truth thou art the Son of God. The Devil in his temptation was willing to ſuppoſe it, Matt. 4. 3, 6. If thou be the Son of God, command that theſe Stones be made Bread. The Centurion (an Heathen Soldier) did acknowledge it, Matt. 27. 54. Mar. 15. 39. and the ſenſe of his Words may be underſtood by comparing the Evangeliſts: For in ſome of them his Words are, Truly Lu. 23. 47. this Man was the Son of God; but in S. Luke his Words are, Certainly this was a righteous Man. Altho' he might not know the meaning of this Name The Son of God either in the ſenſe of Jews or Chriſtians, yet ſeeing the manner of our Saviour's Death and the Miracles that attended it, and knowing that he ſuffered Death for pretending to be the Son of God, he juſtify'd our Saviour, that he was no Impoſtor, and pronounc'd that he was a juſt Man in his pretenſion, or (which is the ſame thing) that he was, as he pretended to be, The Son of God: With Chriſtians this is the main point. For they are 1 Joh. 5. 10, 13. Gal. 2. 20. Eph. 4. 13. Chriſtians, becauſe they believe on the Son of God, they live by the Faith of the Son of God, their Religion is the knowledge of the Son of God. Their prime fundamental Article as Chriſtians, their choice and noble characteriſtic and diſtinctive Article, of principal importance, vaſt comprehenſion, the Eſſence and Summary of their Faith, is this Abridgment of Chriſt's Evangely, John 20. 31. Theſe things are written, that ye might believe, that Jeſus is the Chriſt the Son of God, and that believing ye might have life through his Name. To this Article it is, that the Witneſſes of Chriſtianity atteſt, that we Chriſtians Heb. 4. 14. Joh. 1. 34. Mat. 3. 17. Mar. 14. 61. peculiarly have a great High Prieſt that is paſſed into the Heavens, Jeſus the Son of God. John bare record, that this is the Son of God. God the Father bare record by a Voice from Heaven, This is my beloved Son. The Son of God died to atteſt this great Article; for the High Prieſt ask'd him, Art thou the Chriſt, the Son of the bleſſed? And Jeſus ſaid, I am. Chriſtians confeſs their Faith in the ſame Terms, and this language ſo pervadeth the New Teſtament, that it muſt be acknowledged, that Servetus made a true obſervation, when he ſaid, Nullum locum ex tota ſcriptura poſſe dari, ubi Chriſtus abſolute ſine reſpectu ad humanam naturam nominetur Filius Dei; which rude Expreſſions mean, that throughout the whole Bible the Name of the Son of God is not attributed to an Abſtract Son.

V. In thoſe times when the New Teſtament was written, this Name The Son of God was amongſt both Jews and Chriſtians an honourary Name ſignificative of the Perſon of the Meſſiah; ſo that in thoſe times both among Jews and Chriſtians to be the Perſon of the Son of God, was as ſuch to be the Perſon of the Meſſiah, and to be the Perſon of the Meſſiah, was as ſuch to be the Perſon of the Son of God. And the reaſon hereof is apparent; for to be the Imperial Son of God, is as ſuch to be the Perſon of Meſſiah the Prince; and to be the Perſon of Meſſiah the Prince, is as ſuch to be the Imperial Son of God. This Name therefore, The Son of God, never did amongſt Holy People in thoſe times ſignify any Abſtract Son of God, never was apply'd to any ſuch Hypoſtaſis, nor was any ſuch Hypoſtaſis (any ſuch Abſtract Eſſence as a Platonic Mens or a Scholaſtic Verbum) ever thought of in thoſe times amongſt Holy People; for altho' there might be amongſt the Jews in thoſe times ſome ſuch Philoſophic-Paganizers as Philo, yet their Romantick Platonic Scholaſticiſm was nothing to the People, nothing to the Holy People (that were altogether Aliens from it) their notion of the Perſon of Chriſt was the Son of God, and their notion of the Son of God was the Perſon of Chriſt, and they knew no other: Of this we have great aſſurance both from the whole New Teſtament, and from thoſe Expoſitors of it, that are the beſt learned in matters of Jewiſh Learning (x) υἱὸς ὑψίςȣ κληθήσεται, id eſt, Meſſias vocabitur. Nam Meſſias & Filius Dei convertuntur. He ſhall be called the Son of the Higheſt, that is, he ſhall be called the Meſſias (the Lord Meſſias;) for the Meſſias and the Son of God are terms convertible, Joh. 9. 35. Doſt thou believe on the Son of God? The Senſe is (y) Doſt thou plase thy truſt on the Meſſias, as all the Jews profeſs themſelves to do? The Son of God was the uſual cognomen of the Meſſiah. (z) Theſe names Chriſt and the Son of God are Names that are uſed one inſtead of the other. The Perſon of Chriſt therefore is the Son of God, but no otherwiſe than as the Perſon of Chriſt, he hath no other Deity, no other Sonſhip unto God (and conſequently there is no Abſtract Son:) but as the Perſon of Chriſt he is upon ſeveral accounts the Son of God, Pſal. 2. 6. and 89. 26, 27. Joh. 10. 36. Act. 13. 33. Heb. 1. 3, 4, 5.

VI. The Son of God and the Humane Nature are now inſeparable, whence a reaſonable Man will infer, that the Humane Nature is one of his Eſſentialities, and that an Abſtract Son of God never was, becauſe ſuch a Son never will, never can be (a) à fine rerum contemplemur initia, ſemper enim ſimilis eſt finis initiis. From the end of things we may learn their beginnings, that the Humane Nature was from the beginning inſeparable from the Son of God, and one of his Eſſentialities; for he can never ceaſe to be the Perſon of Chriſt Jeſus. But an Abſtract Son of God is ſuppoſed to have exiſted from Eternity without being the Perſon of Chriſt Jeſus; from whence it followeth, that he is not eſſentially ſuch, and that he may exiſt to Eternity (compleat in his Hypoſtaſis and Deity) and yet may ceaſe to be the Perſon of Chriſt Jeſus. (b) Natura hominis aſſumpta nihil ad eſſentiam perſonæ Verbi attinet, the aſſumed Humane Nature is not at all eſſential to the Perſon of the Verbum, it is but adventitious and as an Accident to a Subſtance. The Scholaſtic Verbum therefore that aſſumed noſtrum hominem nempe Jeſum Chriſtum (c) as Athanaſius ſaith, may diſcard and annihilate this Athanaſian Chriſtum Jeſum, and yet this Abſtract Son will remain untouch'd and intire; which diſſolution of the Perſon of the Meſſias (ſuppoſing an Abſtract Son) is not in the Nature of the thing impoſſible, unreaſonable or incommodious: and the Philoſopher Amelius ſuppoſeth, that this

(x) Lightfoot Hor. in Luk. 1. 32.

(y) Fiduciam tuam collocas in Meſſiam, quod omnes Judæi facere ſe profitentur. Filius Dei cognomen erat uſitatum Meſſiæ. Grot. Not. in Joh. 9. 35.

(z) Appellationes Chriſti & Filii Dei inter ſe permutantur. Limborch. Amica Collat. cum erudit. Jud. c. 9. p. 218.

(a) Origen περὶ ἀρχ. l. 1. c. 6.

(b) Petav. T. 4. l. 3. c. 15. S. 14.

(c) Ibid. l. 11. c. 8. S. 12.

is the ſenſe of St. John's Goſpel; that the Logos (or Platonic Mens) hath the Rank and Dignity of a principle, that by him all things were made, and what was made in him was life, (d) then did he ſlide into Bodies, and having put on Fleſh did appear a Man, at the ſame time ſhewing the Majeſty of his Nature; and after a diſſolution of his compages he was deify'd again and became a (naked) Deity again as at firſt, before he deſcended into Body and Fleſh and Man. Before we appeal to this Philoſopher (as learned Men do) touching the ſenſe of the Proem of S. John's Goſpel, we ought to be better ſatisfied touching his faculty of interpreting Scripture, who pretendeth to find in it a diſſolution of Chriſt's Divinity from his Humanity, (e) which is an Opinion falſly imputed to Origen, but was really the Opinion of Marcellus Ancyranus, who ſuppoſed, that after the Day of Judgment the Humanity of Chriſt ſhould be quite diſcarded and annihilated. Agreeably whereto both the Fathers and Modern Divines Diſcourſe (f) that the (Abſtract) Son of God to appear unto Men, and to have dealings with them in the Old Teſtament times, did often aſſume an Angelical Nature, which he preſently diſmiſs'd. And who can read theſe Diſcourſes without ſuſpecting, that at the long-run he may deal in the ſame manner with his Humane Nature? It will be ſaid, that the Caſe is different, that the Angelical Nature was not in perſonal Union with him, as the Humane Nature is, that in his Incarnation the two Natures were joyn'd ἀδιαιρέτως, undividedly, ἀχωρίστως, inſeparably, as the Councils ſay, (g) and Divines ſay, Quod ſemel accepit, nunquam dimiſit. But theſe Allegations are far from being ſatisfactory to them that inquire into the Cauſes of Things. For if the Humane Nature is altogether preter-eſſential and adventitious to the Son of God, it may be ſafely diſcarded; and if it was but aſſum'd for an Oeconomy, is it not reaſonable that it ſhould be laid aſide, when that Oeconomy is over? The Humane Nature therefore muſt be ſuppoſed eſſential to the Son of God, and hereafter it will be proved ſo to be.

VII. The true Son of God is not a Scholaſtical and unpopular, but a popular kind of Son, that belongeth to popular Nobility-Learning, is ſuited to the Affairs, Underſtandings and Affections of the People (mankind in general) who are concern'd, to be the Religioniſts of the Son of God. And he is neceſſarily a popular Imperial kind of Son, to whom the People owe their Subjection and Obedience, and therefore is the Chriſtian Imperial Son, which is the Perſon of Chriſt Jeſus. But the Abſtract Son of God is altogether unpopular, and belongeth only to Platonic or Ariſtotelic Metaphyſicks. For thus the eternal Logos (Word or Son of God) is defin'd by the Maſters of this Scholaſtick Theology. (h) Id ipſum quod apud Græcos vox iſta (Logos) ſignificat, notio & ἔννοια. The very thing which the Greek Word Logos ſignifieth, A Notion or Conception of the Mind, which is ſuppoſed to be generated from Eternity by the eternal Father. If the Apoſtles had gone about the World and alarm'd all Mankind under pain of damnation, to believe in ſuch a mental conceptional Word or Metaphyſical Son of God, as this Scholaſtic Theology repreſenteth to us, what an extravagant preachment had Chriſtianity been? Not but that this mental-conceptional Word and Metaphyſical Son is a great reality; for the Alexandrian Cyril ſaith, (i) ἔστι τοίνυν ἐξ ΟΝΤΟΣ Ο ΩΝ, καὶ ὄνομα τοῦτο προσφυέστατον αὐτῷ, He is ex Ente Ens (the Metaphyſical Ens from the Metaphyſical Ens) and this is his moſt agreeable Name. So J. Mart. in divers places (k) maketh the following Words to be the Words of the Logos or Abſtract Son of God, ἐγὼ εἰμὶ ὁ ὤν, ὁ Θεὸς Ἀβραάμ, I am Ens (or he that is) the God of Abraham. Entity is ſuppoſed to be the moſt agreeable notice of this Scholaſtic Abſtract Son of God, as the Platonic Logos is of definitive Notion τὸ ὄν, the Metaphyſical Ens. True Chriſtians may through miſtake have a great Zeal for this Scholaſtic Theology, which pretendeth to do great Honour to their Saviour: but their Zeal will be cool'd, if they conſider, that this eternal Scholaſtic Son of God is an Abſtract from the Perſon of their Saviour, an Idea peculiar to Scholaſticiſm, and nothing better than a branch of Metaphyſical Ontology, neither ſuited to their Underſtandings nor to their Holy Affections. And they ought the more to alienate themſelves from this Scholaſtic Abſtract Son, becauſe in the Primitive times this imaginary Son undermin'd and in great degree deſtroy'd the true and popular-imperial Son of God. For Origen ſaith of his Platonic Logos or Abſtract Son of God (l) ὅπερ ἦν ὁ κυρίως υἱὸς Θεοῦ, This was the Son of God properly ſo called. But is not God always called in the New Teſtament the God and Father of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt? And is it not the Perſon of Chriſt, that as ſuch is always called The Son of God and the Son of the Bleſſed? Origen proceedeth to ſay of his Platonic Logos (m) that the Son of God ſaid in Jeſus, I am the way and the truth and the life. But was it alſo this ſuppoſed Son of God, that ſaid in Jeſus Not my Will be done? With Origen the Man Chriſt Jeſus was of little value, the object of his Eſteem was his Platonic Logos or Abſtract Son, whom he ſuppoſeth to be in the Man Chriſt Jeſus, ὁ βλεπόμενος ἄνθρωπος, the Man that was ſeen, as he ſtyleth him. But Eccleſiaſtic Writers (who yet ſuppoſe an Abſtract Son) diſlike this Origenic Language. They obſerve (n) that God ſaid of the complex Perſon of Chriſt Jeſus, This is my Son, but did not ſay, In hoc eſt Filius meus. And that our Saviour to ſhew the Son of God to him that had been blind, did not point at τὸν ἔσω κεκρυμμένον, an internally hidden Son of God, but told him, This is the Son of God, which thou haſt ſeen, and that talketh with thee, which are no contemptible Arguments againſt the Hypotheſis of an Abſtract Son.

VIII. The Abſtract Son of God as being of a kind and quality Metaphyſical and Scholaſtical is both unpopular and unholy. For that Abſtract Son of God which we meet with in the beſt learned of the Fathers, is no other than the Platonic Mens or Logos, which is a Philoſophic-pagan kind of Son; who as he is of Kind and Quality Pagan, is profane and unholy; and as he is of Kind and Quality Philoſophic (Scholaſtical and Metaphyſical) is both unpopular and unholy. Such a Son of God (an abſtract Platonic Metaphyſical Ens) is quite alien from Religion and Sanctity (which is the holy-popular Buſineſs) and is meerly a buſineſs of Platonic mundane Metaphyſicks. The Verbum or Logos of the School-Divines is of the ſame Character; for the Maſters of this Theology ſay of it (o) Hoc ipſum diſ-

(d) Εἶτα εἰς τὰ σώματα πίπτειν, καὶ σάρκα ἐνδυσάμενον φαντάζεσθαι ἄνθρωπον, μετὰ τοῦ τηνικαῦτα δεικνύειν τῆς φύσεως τὸ μεγαλεῖον. Ἀμέλει καὶ ἀναλυθέντα πάλιν ἀποθεῶσθαι καὶ Θεὸν εἶναι, οἷος ἦν πρὸ τοῦ εἰς τὸ σῶμα καὶ τὴν σάρκα καὶ τὸν ἄνθρωπον κατενεχθῆναι. S. Cyr. C. Jul. l. 8. p. 283.

(e) Petav. ſup. l. 12. c. 8.

(f) Mr. Thornd. Epil. B. 2. c. 13. Dr. Teniſon of Idol. p. 318.

(g) Petav. ſupr. l. 3. c. 16. S. 11, 14. & l. 12. c. 18. S. 2.

(h) Petav. T. 4. l. 16. c. 1. S. 8.

(i) C. Jul. l. 8. p. 266.

(k) P. 95, 96, 28

(l) C. Celſ. l. 1. p. 52.

(m) Ibid. l. 2. p. 62.

(n) Petav. T. 4. l. 7. c. 1. S. 6, & l. 8. c. 12. S. 20.

(o) Idem de Trin. l. 6. c. 3. S. 1.

diſcernere pauci poſſunt, nec niſi Philoſophia paululum eruditi. And is this a Son of God, that muſt be preach'd and propounded to the Faith of all Mankind, although incapable of underſtanding the Metaphyſicks of an Abſtract Son of God, which the Alexandrian Cyril calleth (p) τὰ ἰσχνὰ καὶ ἀπόρρητα τῶν θεωρημάτων, the ſubtilties and recondites of the Theorems? More than ordinary Scholaſtic ſubtilty is requiſite, to form a Notion or Idea of an Abſtract Son of God: but they that believe ſuch a Son, muſt have a Notion of what he is (elſe he is to them a Non Ens, not ſo much as an Ens rationis) and this is the Notion of him moſt in vogue amongſt Scholaſtic Divines (q) Fetus eſt mentis intelligentiæque quod producitur, ac verbum mentis, It is the Product and Child of Mind and Intellection, and the Word of the Mind. Such an Abſtract kind of Son is manifeſtly both unpopular and unholy: but the true Son of God is neceſſarily and demonſtratively an holy popular kind of Son. For he is a Saint of God-kind of Son, and a Saint of God-kind of imperial Son (elſe he is not the Son of God in the ſenſe of the ſcience of Sanctity) therefore he is the Chriſtian and Chriſtian-imperial kind of Son (elſe he is not the Son of God in the ſenſe of Chriſtianity) therefore he is no other than the Perſon of the Chriſtian Meſſiah. He is the Iſſue of paternal Sanctity, one of the divine Family of the Saints and Sons of God (ſo as to be Lord of the Family) he is neceſſarily the Son and Heir of the Kingdom of God (which is the Kingdom of Saints and Sons, the holy-popular Family and Empire) he is neceſſarily the Prince and King of Saints; therefore he is neceſſarily The moſt holy, The holy one of God, which is the ſcriptural Definition of the Perſon of the Meſſiah. The Son of God is neceſſarily the God-kind of Son, the God-kind of imperial Son; therefore he is neceſſarily the holy-popular kind of imperial Son, the King of God's People; and what is the Definition of the Perſon of the Meſſiah but (the King of the Jews, the King of Iſrael) the King of God's People? It is not imaginable therefore, that there ſhould be any ſuch Son of God as a Scholaſtic Abſtract Son: nor ought we that are the holy People, to conteſt for ſuch a Son of God, which is altogether alien from the God-kind (the holy and Saint of God-kind) of things not of kin to the Chriſtian-ſaving Son of God (of kind and quality a Godleſs Son of God) to us altogether heterogeneous, foreign and exotick. Nor are we concern'd to regard any ſuch Abſtract Son, that is not the Perſon of Chriſt our only Saviour.

IX. The Scholaſtic Abſtract Son of God is a perſon of no Religion objectively or ſubjectively; which ſheweth, that there never was any ſuch Son of God. For neither the Light of Nature nor of Scripture enjoineth any religious Worſhip or God-Service of an Abſtract Son of God. The Platonic Mens or Logos is an Heathen Deity, but peculiar to the Schools of Philoſophers and metaphyſical Theamatiſts: It was no Deity of the Pagans religious Worſhip, nor was ſuch a Deity known in their Religion. In the Scriptures of the Old Teſtament there are numerous and illuſtrious Types and Predictions of King Meſſiah, whom all Nations are concern'd to ſerve and obey: but of the God-Service of an Abſtract Son of God there is nec vola nec veſtigium in all the Scriptures of the Old Teſtament. And is it poſſible, that this ſuppoſed Son of God ſhould have the Government of the World, and (r) a Kingdom-eſtate of Sovereignty and Rule throughout the Old Teſtament-times; and that no body ſhould be concern'd, to be his Subject or Servant, ſo as to do him the religious Homage and Service? It is reaſonable to ſuppoſe, that the Holy Spirit exiſted in thoſe times, when no religious Worſhip was done to him, none was demanded for him: But the Caſe is different; for the Holy Spirit is not majeſtas imperii a divine imperial Head (an Eſtate of Kingdom and Empire) as the Son of God neceſſarily is, and the Abſtract Son of God is ſuppoſed to have been all along the Old Teſtament-times. Yet in the Scriptures of thoſe Times there is not ſo much as any mention of ſuch a Son of God, nor any Precept, Hiſtory, or Example of his God-Service and Worſhip: But The Son in the Old Teſtament ſignifieth, as in the New Teſtament, The complex Perſon of the Meſſiah. Throughout the whole New Teſtament, not any Son of God but only the complex Perſon of Chriſt Jeſus, is propounded to us, to be believ'd in, lov'd, obey'd, and invocated. The Chriſtian Witneſſes do not atteſt the Exiſtence of any Abſtract Son of God. No Man becometh a Chriſtian Religioniſt (nor of any other Religion) by believing in an Abſtract Son of God. The Platoniſts Belief of ſuch a Son neither made them Chriſtian nor Heathen Religioniſts; which is a plain Indication, that this Scholaſtic Son is of no concern at all in Religion, but is only a buſineſs of Scholaſtic Metaphyſicks; and that the Schools may keep their Trinity to themſelves (both the Platonic of T'agathon, Nous, Pſyche, and the Ariſtotelic of Mens, Notitia, Amor) Religioniſts have no concern in it.

The Scholaſtic Abſtract Son of God is a Perſon of no Religion ſubjectively, whereby he is oppoſite to the true Son of God, the moſt vertuous and pious, and the moſt dutiful Son to a Father that ever was or can be. His Piety was celebrated by the Arians, thereby to befriend their own Dogma; and one of them did it at ſuch a rate, as to make it a matter of Raillery. For when Eudoxius had gain'd the See of Conſtantinople, and was ſeated in the Throne of it, the firſt Sentence that he pronounc'd, was (s) ὁ πατὴρ ἀσεβὴς· ὁ υἱὸς εὐσεβὴς, the Father is impious, the Son is pious. And when a Tumult aroſe upon it, Be not troubled (ſaid he) at what I have ſpoken; for the Father is ἀσεβὴς impious (not pious) becauſe he worſhippeth none: but the Son is pious, becauſe he worſhippeth the Father. Which Apology ceas'd the Tumult, but excited a loud Laughter. At this ludicrous rate a pretended Chriſtian Prelate celebrated the Piety of the Son of God, ſo as to betray his own Impiety; from which alſo his Dogma is not excuſable, becauſe it ſinketh God's only Son below the Dignity of the Son of God. A Crime which Euſebius is guilty of, when he deſcribeth the Son of God as (t) τῇ τοῦ πατρὸς καθοσιωμένος τιμῇ, devoted (in the Arian ſenſe) to the Worſhip of the Father. But this is ſomewhat a nice Point, and it is eaſie to fall into Miſtake on both hands, as will appear by conſidering the different Opinions of the Fathers touching this Queſtion, (u) Whether Chriſt was properly a Servant to his Father? Some of them affirm it, and others deny it: Both Parties are miſtaken, and yet both ſay true. For he was a Servant to his Father, yet ſo as to be the imperial Son of God, and therefore ſo far and in ſuch ſenſe he was a Servant; and ſo far and in ſuch ſenſe he was not a Servant. Iſa. 49. 6. and 52. 13. and 53. 11. Zech. 3. 8. Matt. 12. 18. Heb.

(p) c. Jul. l. 8. p. 270.

(q) Petav. de Trin. l. 2. c. 11. §. 7.

(r) Petav. T. 4. l. 12. c. 18. S. 1.

(s) Socrat. Hiſt. l. 2. c. 43.

(t) Valeſ. Annot. in Euſeb.

(u) Petav. T. 4. l. 7. c. 7, 8, 9.

Heb. 1. 7, 14. and 3. 5, 6. It cannot be ſuppoſ'd, that the Son of God is oblig'd to practiſe all the ſame Duties of Piety to his Father in a ſtate of Exaltation as in a ſtate of Humiliation; but from Duty of Piety to his Father he can never be diſcharg'd: and although we may not ſubject him to the Father in the Arian Notion (as a Creature ſubordinate and heterouſian) yet on the other hand it is incompetible to his eſſential condition of Sonſhip, to be equaliz'd with God at ſo extravagant a rate, as the Scholaſtic Theology ſuppoſeth, which aſſerteth, (w) That God was not to him a God, as he was God (the Abſtract Son) nor was he obedient to God the Father, nor inferiour as God (as the Abſtract Son) but only as Man; (x) Patri non eſt auctoritas, the Father hath no Authority over him, nor greater Dignity or Excellency: (y) In the Trinity there is ἄκρα ἰσότης, equality to the heighth, nothing is prepos'd and ſub-pos'd. In Gerſon's days, (z) as Eraſmus relateth, a Divine was compell'd to make a publick Recantation, for ſaying that God the Father was the Cauſe of the Son and Spirit. A virtuous Son will imitate a divine Father; it is his Duty and Character: but we are told (a) that this Saying ὁ υἱὸς τὸν πατέρα μιμεῖται (the Son imitateth the Father) is hæretica locutio, quæ in Arianis damnata, an heretical Speech which was condemn'd in the Arians. What then doth our Saviour mean, when he ſaith John 5. 19. The Son can do nothing of himſelf, but what he ſeeth the Father do: for whatſoever things he doeth, theſe alſo doeth the Son likewiſe? To look on what the Father doeth, and to do likewiſe, plainly ſignifieth an Imitation of him: No, ſaith Cæſarius (b) when the Son formed Adam and Eve, he did not look upon another Man and Woman made by the Father; ἀλλ' αὐθέντης ὑπάρχων δημιουργὸς καὶ αὐτεξούσιος, τῶν ὅλων θεὸς, but being a ſelf-authoritative Demiurgus, and ſelf-imperial, and God of the Univerſe, he was ſufficient to make all things. Such an Abſtract Son of God can be of no Religion (ſubjectively) nor can ſuch irreligious Attributions to him be excus'd from being Blaſphemy againſt God. The only Apology that can be made for the Authors of them is, to ſay, that ſeveral of them contradict themſelves, and ſometimes ſpeak better things. For in this Scholaſtic Theology God with reſpect to the Abſtract Son is ſaid to have (c) the paternal ἀξίωμα dignity and a paternal Authority (d) to be the Cauſe and Author of the Son, and he is ſaid to be Patri ſubjectus ut auctori ſubject to the Father as the Author of him, yet not in the Arian ſenſe. But in another Mood theſe Scholaſtic Divines will not have him ſuppos'd (e) ſubject to the Father as he is God (or the Abſtract Son) in any ſenſe, ſo extremely ſelf-contradictious are the Maſters of this Theology to themſelves: And beſides many great Contradictions ariſe in it from the ſeveral diſagreeing Parties of it (Platonic, Ariſtotelic, ancient and modern of both ſorts) yet all of them muſt agree in ſuppoſing, that the Abſtract Son cannot be of any Piety or Religion. For the Platonic Logos is not ſuppos'd to practice any Duties of Piety towards T' Agathon (although he looketh thitherward) and the Ariſtotelian Scholiaſticks agree, that the Abſtract Son in the Trinity is not of any diſtinct Underſtanding, Will, and Power of Action from the other divine Perſons; which implieth, that he cannot be of any diſtinct Practice or practical Virtue. And ſome (f) modern Ariſtotelian Scholiaſticks do not allow him to be a Perſon in the vulgar ſenſe, as if Metaphyſicks and Theology differ'd from the vulgar in their Notion of a Perſon. Yet one that is of Underſtanding, Will, and Affection, is neceſſarily a Perſon in the vulgar familiar ſenſe, which is the ſenſe of the Scriptures.

X. The Scholiaſtic Abſtract Son of God doth not as ſuch conſtitute any other than a Philoſophic Pagan-kind of Trinity, it doth not conſtitute the Chriſtian Trinity (as the true and genuine Son of God doth;) for that is not the Chriſtian Trinity, wherein the Perſon of Chriſt Jeſus is wanting. The Chriſtian Trinity is the ſummary of the Chriſtian Faith, and the moſt ancient Chriſtian Creed. It is characteriſtical, and diſtinctive of our Profeſſion; the Belief and Profeſſion of it conſtituteth us Chriſtian Believers and Religioniſts. The Son in this Trinity is the complex Perſon of Chriſt; God is conſidered in it under this formal Notion as the God and Father of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt: The Holy Ghoſt is conſider'd in it as the Chriſtian Paraclete and the Spirit of Chriſt. And ſuch a Trinity is of kind and quality Chriſtian: But if we remove out of the Chriſtian Trinity the complex Perſon of Chriſt, ſubſtituting in his ſtead a ſcholaſtic Abſtract Son of God, and ſuppoſe the other Perſons of the Trinity to be homogeneous; we ſhall then have ſuch a Trinity, wherein there is nothing of Chriſtianity, which is not characteriſtic or diſtinctive of our Profeſſion, nor doth the Belief of it make a Chriſtian. A Trinity of Archical Hypoſtaſes and demiurgic Principles, like thoſe of the Platonic Triad, that are αἱ ἀρχαὶ τῶν ὄντων καὶ τῶν ὅλων αἰτίαι, the archical and active Principles of the Univerſe of Beings, which is of kind and quality no better than Philoſophic-pagan, which properly belongeth to the Schools of Philoſophers and Metaphyſicians, not properly to the Faith of God's Believers; nor is it the Myſtery of Chriſtianity and Godlineſs. Such a Trinity is that in Greg. Thaumat. Confeſſion of Faith, which he is ſaid to have received by Revelation from the Bleſſed Virgin and S. John, and which was preſerv'd and taught in his Church a long time after. (g) There is nothing created or ſervient in the Trinity, nor any thing ſuperinductitious, as if it did not exiſt before, but was afterwards brought in. If the Son in our Trinity is the Scholaſtic Abſtract Son, if the complex Perſon of Chriſt is not ſuperinductitious into it, it is not the Chriſtian Trinity.

CHAP.

(w) Ibid. l. 9. c. 6. S. 2. & c. 9. S. 3.

(x) Idem de Trin. l. 5. c. 5. S. 12. & c. 4. S. 13.

(y) Photius col. 604, 605. 1542.

(z) Ep. 682

(a) Heinſ. Ariſtarch. c. 21.

(b) Dial. 3. ad Inter. 30.

(c) Petav. de Trin. l. 2. c. 2.

(d) Ibid. l. 5. c. 5.

(e) Idem T. 4. l. 1. c. 7. S. 6. & de Trin. l. 2. c. 3. S. 14.

(f) Mr. Nye Doctr. of the Trin. p. 53. 154.

(g) Οὔτε κτιστόν τι, ἢ δοῦλον ἐν τῇ τριάδι, οὔτε ἐπείσακτον, ὡς πρότερον μὲν οὐχ ὑπάρχον, ὕστερον δὲ ἐπεισελθόν. Dr. Bull Def. Fid. Nic. p. 151, 152. Ed. an. 1703.

CHAP. II.

1. A ſecond ſort of Arguments to prove the truth of our Idea from the Birth-nobilitation of our Saviour. 2. His Birth-nobilitation, his true Generation and Nativity, is that which is related in Scripture. 3. This is ſupplanted and deſtroy'd by an unſcriptural Generation and Nativity. 4. His Birth-nobilitation true Generation and Nativity is Popular. 5. It is Holy-popular. 6. His Birth-nobilitation from his Holy-popular Generation. 7. His Birth-nobilitation is deſtroy'd by the Scholaſtic Incarnation.

I. A Second ſort of Arguments to prove the Truth of our Idea, we will deduce from the Birth-nobilitation of the Son of God; for his Name ſpeaketh him of Birth-nobilitation and of the higheſt poſſible or conceivable (h) as being one that ſprang from the ſupernal root naturally conſerving in himſelf his paternal Nobility. S. Hilary calleth his Divinity (i) naturam generoſitatis, which denoteth his native Nobleneſs, and that native Nobleneſs is the Birth-nobilitation of a Divine kind of Imperial Son of God, who therefore hath εὐγενείας τὸ ἄκρον, the fulleſt height of Birth-nobilitation. From the Exiſtence of a ſupreme God the Heathens inferr'd (k) that there are native generated Gods, which derive their origin from the princely Fountain of things. If theſe Heathen Gods had been really the Sons of God, (l) if Faunus and Picus had been of the Divine Race, Family and Potentacy, (divini generis & poteſtatis) if they are the Regal or Royal Progeny, and deſcendents from the Head of all Principality (ſi ſint progenies regia & principali oriuntur è capite) Arnobius would have attributed to them (ab rerum capite deſcendentium honeſtamenta natalium) a Birth-illuſtriouſneſs and Nobilitation, as deriving their Deſcent and Pedigree from the Imperial Head of all. So in the Greek and Latin Poets the Deſcendents from Kings are (m) repreſented as highly Noble and Illuſtrious; (ſo amongſt the Iſraelites 2 King. 9. 34.) Kings themſelves, and other eminent Perſons are counted natively and by kind noble at a great rate, as being Deſcendents from Jove the ſupreme King. Antiquity called Kings the Sons of Jove, Ἐκ Διὸς βασιλῆες. Heſiod. —— Mi genus ab Jove ſummo, ſaith Æneas in Virgil, who often repeateth Nate Dea, becauſe the Deſcendents from the Gods were reputed Noble, as θεῖος ſignifyeth both Divine and Noble. So the Chineſe ennoble their Emperour (n) by ſtyling him Thienzu, Son of Heaven: Kings have their chief ennoblement from their Relation to God and Heaven, and Cognation to them alſo (to be Son-in-Law to a King, 1 Sam. 18. 18.) is an ennoblement of Condition. But to be the Son and Heir of the King and of the Crown-Dignity (o) a novus Conſtantinus, is the great Eſtate of Nobilitation (becauſe in the main Subject-tranſcendent;) and ſometimes ſuch a Phyſiognomy, ſuch great Endowments, Heroic Qualities and Atchievements accompany theſe great Eſtates of Nobilitation, that the Poets ſay, Credo equidem (nec vana fides) genus eſſe deorum. Agreeably to this uſual Senſe of Language our Saviour's Name is expreſſive of his high Birth-nobilitation in general, and it affordeth alſo theſe four particular Notices thereof. (1.) His name denoteth, that he is natively of Regial and Imperial Conditon; for ſuch he is as the Son of God (who is the great King) and ſuch he is as the Son of David; of which Name Clemens miſtakingly ſaith, (p) that many called our Saviour the Son of David, but few knew him to be the Son of God. For the Jews in our Saviour's time did call the Meſſiah the Son of God, and the Son of David is a Periphraſis of the Meſſiah, it is one of his Names and a name of great Nobilitation. Chriſt in the Book of the Apocalypſe (wherein he is repreſented in all his Royal Habiliments, with all his Royal Power and Majeſty and Royal Titles) is intituled The Lion of the Tribe of Judah, The Root of David, Apoc. 5. 5. He is the Lion of the Tribe of Judah as being the warlike victorious Prince of the warlike victorious Tribe; And the Root of David by a Metonymy denoteth him a Branch ſpringing from that Root (the Branch and Offspring of David, Apoc. 22. 16.) which ſpeaketh him the Stem of Royalty, Splendor and Proweſs (the Regial Son) who according to the Prediction of the ſecond Pſalm hath Right to the Kingdoms of the Earth. Agreeably whereto he intituleth himſelf The bright Morning Star, Apoc. 22. 16. to ſignify, that he is the magnificent Imperial Eſtate riſing in the Eaſt; as the King of Babylon for the ſame reaſon is intituled Lucifer Son of the Morning, Iſa. 14. 12. And in this political Senſe (in all reaſon) the Morning-Star muſt be underſtood in our Saviour's Promiſe, Apoc. 2. 28. as the Context ſheweth. He that overcometh and keepeth my Works unto the end, to him will I give Power over the Nations; and he ſhall Rule them with a Rod of Iron (as the Veſſels of a Potter ſhall they be broken to pieces) even as I received of my Father. And I will give him the Morning-Star. The meaning of the Promiſe is, that he who overcometh ſhall be in Conſort with Chriſt a Phoſphorus and Son of the Morning, (in ſuch ſenſe he ſhall have the Morning-Star) having the brightneſs of Rule and Empire: Rule and Empire is that which our Saviour was born to. (2.) His Name denoteth, that he is natively of Divine, Regial and Imperial Condition, by Birth a Divine Imperial Lord, Prince and Potentate. His Birth-nobilitation may be illuſtrated from the Sons and Heirs in Families (for the Heir is Lord of all, Gal. 4. 1.) but the chief illuſtration of it is from the Hebrew Tongue, which denoteth the Qualities that Perſons are of by ſtyling them the Sons thereof (as the Sons of Wiſdom, the Sons of Darkneſs) or the Sons of thoſe that are of thoſe Qualities; as the Sons of the Wiſe, the Sons of the Mighty. So in other Languages, the Sons of Mars, the Sons of Æſculapius; and in Martinius's Bellum Tartaricum we read of the great River of Kiang, which is ſaid to be ſo vaſt, that it is worthy to be called the Son of the Sea. In which Denominations our intent is to ſignify a reſemblance between the Progeny and the Parent, and that the Progeny are Deſcendents from the Parents, ſo as to be of the Quality which we mention. For this Name The Sons of Nobles ſignifieth the Deſcendents from Nobles, ſo as to be the Nobles the Sons. This Name The Sons of the Mighty (or the Sons of the Gods) ſignifieth the Deſcendents (from the Gods ſo as to be the Gods the Sons, or) the

(h) Ὁ τ̃ ἄνωθεν ῥίζης ἐκπεφυκὼς τ̃ πατρῴαν ἐφ' ἑαυτῷ φυσικῶς ἀποσώζων εὐφυΐαν, S. Cyr. in Johan. p. 161.

(i) In Pſal. 2.

(k) Arnob. adv. Gent. l. 1. p. 16.

(l) Ibid. l. 5. p. 156. & l. 3. p. 101. & l. 2. p. 76.

(m) Tiraquelle de Nobil. p. 25, 182, 539.

(n) Semedo Hiſt. of Chin. par. 1. c. 22.

(o) Selden Titles, p. 51.

(p) Strom. l. 6. p. m. 490.

Eccleſ. 10. 17.

Pſal. 29. 1. and 89. 6.

Deſcendents from the Mighty ſo as to be the Mighty the Sons. This Name The Sons of Men ſignifieth the Deſcendents from Men, ſo as to be the Men the Sons, Mic. 5. 7. and this Name The King's Son ſignifieth the Deſcendent from the King, ſo as to be the King the Son, Pſalm 72. 1. So the Son of the Stranger is the Stranger the Son. The Sons of the Prophets are the Prophets the Sons. Agreeably whereto this Name The Son of God (which importeth the fulleſt height of Birth-nobilitation) in the ſenſe of Chriſtianity and the New Teſtament muſt by perfect Analogy be underſtood, to denote and ſignify The Lord the Son, or God the Son; and ſuch is the Imperial Son of God (contradiſtinct to the Creature-Party) the Creature-tranſcendent Lord the Son. Mr. Selden ſaith, that as this Name The Son of Man amongſt the Jews ſignifieth Man: ſo by this Name The Son of God they ought to underſtand the true God himſelf. (q) But this great Hebrician very much miſtaketh his Analogy; (Filius Dei can never ſignify ipſum verum Deum) he ought to have made his Compariſon thus; as Filius hominis amongſt the Hebrews ſignifieth Man the Son, ſo Filius Dei ſignifieth God the Son. And is not this manifeſtly the reaſon, why the Muhammedans will not allow our Saviour to be called The Son of God, becauſe in Oriental Language this Name denoteth and ſignifieth God the Son? So our Saviour's profeſſing himſelf The Son of God was underſtood by the Jews to ſignifie (according to their Hebrew way of Expreſſion) that he was God the Son; for they charged him with Blaſphemy, and that he made himſelf God and equal with God, becauſe he ſaid, I am the Son of God, Joh. 5. 18. and 10. 33, 36. Our Saviour did in this their Senſe profeſs himſelf the Son of God, Mar. 14. 62. and this they look'd upon as an horrendous Crime, and accuſed him as reus affectatæ divinitatis, for which cauſe they put him to Death. Joh. 19. 7. We have a Law and by our Law he ought to die, becauſe he made himſelf (no leſs than God the Son) the Son of God. He is ſo the Lord's anointed, as to be the Lord anointed; and he is ſo the Word of God, as to be God the Word. For ſo his Name importeth Apoc. 19. 19. where Chriſt is repreſented as the great Evangelical Warriour, a mighty Hero, Commander and Conqueror (riding on a white Horſe, attended by the Armies of Heaven on white Horſes, having Eyes as a Flame of Fire, on his Head many Crowns, cloathed in Purple, ſmiting the Nations with a Sword, ruling them with a Rod of Iron, and having on his Thigh and Veſture this name written King of Kings and Lord of Lords) and in this Viſion of his Divine Majeſty and Glory, Prowess and Puiſſance, his Name is ſaid to be called The Word of God. Throughout the Viſion Chriſt is repreſented as a Divine Imperial Potentate; therefore his Name in this Viſion The Word of God muſt be ſuppoſed to be of this meaning God the Word, as he is expreſly ſtyl'd John 1. 1. And if this Name The Word of God is of this meaning God the Word, in all reaſon this Name The Son of God muſt be ſuppoſed, to be of this meaning God the Son. He is ſo The Word of God, as to be God the Word; and by parity of Reaſon he is ſo The Son of God as to be God the Son, which (rightly underſtood) is the ſame Name with Deus natus & genitus, and this Name muſt be underſtood in the ſame ſenſe with Rex natus & genitus, which ſignifieth the Imperial Son, who is King the Son; in which ſenſe an ancient Writer might truly ſay of God (r) ὡς βασιλεὺς υἱὸν βασιλέα ἔπεμψεν, as a King he ſent the Son-King. The Son-King may ſignify the Regial Son meerly ſuch, and it may ſignifie the Regial Son in actual and plenary poſſeſſion of the Kingdom-eſtate; and of the ſame variety of acceptation is this Name God the Son, or the Lord the Son. Of this Name our bleſſed Saviour was the firſt Day of his Nativity, which an Angel thus proclaim'd, Luk. 2. 11. Unto you is born this Day in the City of David a Saviour, which is Chriſt the Lord. If I had underſtood Chriſtianity ſo well as now I do, and had heard theſe Words of the Angel, I ſhould have thus argu'd with myſelf touching Chriſt's Divinity: To be the Saviour-prince and the Lord Meſſiah in the ſenſe of Chriſtianity is a Divine Imperial Condition; therefore the Child that is now born, is by Birth-nobilitation of Divine Imperial Rank and Party; for otherwiſe he would be immenſly inept for, and immenſly remote and diſtant from the Divine Imperial Condition of the Saviour-King and the Lord Meſſiah. This deduction being plain and obvious, as well as undoubtedly certain, it is marvellous that the followers of Socinus (who are very converſant in the Scriptures) ſhould miſs of it. But a principal Reaſon is, they are ſtrangers to Nobility-learning (as their Writings ſhew) which is the cauſe of their mean and dull and pedantick Notions in matters of Theology. What generous Mind would not argue with Clemens (s) τίς δ' ἂν τοῦδε εὐγενέστερος, ᾧ μόνος πατὴρ ὁ Θεός; who can be of greater Birth-nobilitation than he who had God for his generative Father and God only? (3.) His Name denoteth, that he is one of the Divine-kind of Birth, ſo as to be natively of Divine Imperial Condition; that he is natively one of the Divine Family of the Saints and Sons of God, ſo as to be Lord of the Family, the Lord the Son, the Creature-tranſcendent Lord the Son. He can be no other than natively a Saint who is ſuch a Son, that is natively the King of Saints. If he is natively the holy Child Jeſus, he muſt be natively an holy Child, and therefore a Child of God. He that is natively the Son of God according to Chriſtianity, is natively a Son of God according to Chriſtianity; and therefore he is natively a Saint of God-kind of regial Son, natively the regial Son contradiſtinct to the Creature-party of Saints and regenerate Sons of God, but ſo as to be one of their Divine Family, that are Children of God, and therefore Heirs of God and Joint-Heirs with Chriſt, who is the firſt-born among many brethren. For both he that ſanctifieth, and they that are ſanctified, are all of one; for which cauſe he is not aſhamed to call them Brethren. A Son he is over his own Houſe, ſo that himſelf is one of that Divine Houſhold, as he ſaith to Mary Magdalene. Go to my Brethren and ſay unto them, I aſcend unto my Father and your Father, and to my God and your God. (4.) His Name is of a meaning extremely diſſonant from the Appellation of Adam, of whom in a Genealogy the Evangeliſt ſaith, who was the Son of God. A learned Expoſitor will not allow (t) that the Evangeliſt calleth Adam the Son of God, accounting it incongruous and nothing to his purpoſe; but we will ſuppoſe him to be ſo called, as being ſo far and in ſuch ſenſe the Son of God, his natural Life was immediately from him, and ſo his Appellation muſt be underſtood Phyſiologically, to ſignfy only, that that Phyſiological kind of Origination and Derivation which is in mundane Nature, in the caſe of Adam was immediately from God. For Adam is not called the Son of God with any reſpect to Religion, nor to denote any Religious Nobilitation, no nor any Nobilitation at all. His Appellation doth not ſo much as denote that he was born of God, as the meaneſt Regenerate Chriſtian is; and if he had been ſo born, yet his Sonſhip to God would not have raiſed him higher than the δουλικὴ φύσις, the ſubject and ſervient Nature and Condition, whereas the ſecond Adam is no lower than the δεσποτικὴ or βασιλὶς φύσις, the dominant, regial and imperial Nature and Condition. Such was his Birth-nobilitation in his Bethlehemitical Nativity, as the holy Text plainly and uncontrolably ſignifieth Luke 2. 11. Unto you is born this Day Chriſt the Lord. Whence it is manifeſt, that our Saviour in his Bethlehemitical Nativity was of this Birth-nobilitation; he was born the King of the Jews, Chriſt the Lord, the Lord Chriſt, which is the ſame Name with the Lord the Son and the Son of God. Other Texts alſo alike plain and uncontrolable aſſure us, that our Saviour by his Humane-divine Generation and in and by his Bethlehemitical Nativity was of this Birth-nobilitation, he was born the Son of God. Luk. 1. 31, 32. Thou ſhalt conceive in thy Womb and bring forth a Son, and ſhalt call his Name Jeſus. He ſhall be great and ſhall be called (that is, he ſhall be) the Son of the Higheſt. Luk. 1. 35. The Holy Ghoſt ſhall come upon thee: and the Power of the Higheſt ſhall overſhadow thee: therefore alſo that holy thing which ſhall be born of thee, ſhall be called (ſhall be) the Son of God. Theſe Texts ſpeak as plainly as the Tongue of Man can ſpeak touching the Birth-nobilitation of our Saviour (they need no Interpreter but an unprejudic'd Mind) whence it is much, that Men of Learning ſhould pro and con Diſcourſe ſo blindly as they do, touching the Humane-Divine Generation and Birth-nobilitation of their Saviour. Epiſcopius ſaith, (u) This Eminency (to be formed by the Power of God in the Womb) is proper to the Man Chriſt Jeſus, to which the like never was, nor ever will be. I reply (ſaith a learned Man) that is not true. For what? The Fleſh of Chriſt was conceived and formed in the Womb of the Virgin by Divine Power and Virtue without a Father. And was not the firſt Man formed by the Hands of God himſelf without Father and Mother? Is he not therefore expreſly called the Son of God? Luke 3. 38. In this therefore that Eminency of Chriſt Jeſus doth not conſiſt, whence he is called the only or only begotten Son. Yea according to this reaſon, the firſt Adam will be in ſome ſort ſuperiour to the ſecond; for this was made by God without Father only, that was made without Father and Mother. Thus the Humane-Divine Generation of our Saviour and his Birth-nobilitation is diſparag'd and degraded below a comparative triviality (the forming the terreſtrial Adam) againſt the plain nature of things, againſt the plain uncontrolable ſenſe of Scripture, and againſt the ſenſe of thoſe many miraculous Phænomena that attended our Saviour's Generation and Nativity, and loudly proclaim it to be the greateſt thing that ever was, namely the Embaſſy of an Archangel, the miraculous birth of the Baptiſt, the Propheſies of Holy People, their many Divine Hymns of Praiſe, the Angel's publication of tydings of great Joy to all People, the celebration of the Angelical Hoſt, the appearance of the Glory of the Lord and of a new Star in Heaven. What mean all theſe great things, if our Saviour's Generation and Nativity was nothing but the forming in the Womb and bringing forth the Body of a Man, that ſo a great Perſon (the Abſtract Son) might become mean, an infirm Man. If an humane King had generated of the Bleſſed Virgin his primogenit Son, this primogenit Son by virtue of this Generation would have been an Humane Imperial Son. By parity of Reaſon therefore, If the Divine King doth generate of the Bleſſed Virgin his primogenit Son, this primogenit Son by virtue of this Generation is neceſſarily The Divine Imperial Son, and conſequently The Lord the Son. If this is not demonſtrative reaſoning, there is no ſuch thing as demonſtration. But becauſe the Scholaſtic Theology ſuppoſeth (w) that our Saviour's Humane-Divine Generation and conſequent Nativity was (not his Birth-nobilitation, but) his Humiliation, that thereby he was only born the Son of Man, and that his Birth-nobilitation as the Son of God is the Nativity of an Abſtract Son, we will therefore confront theſe Generations and Nativities by deducing certain Inferences from the Account which we have given of our Saviour's Birth-nobilitation.

(q) Bar Enoſh filius hominis millies in Ebræorum Commentariis pro homine occurrit: ita Filius Dei etiam in eorum ore pro ipſo vero Deo. De J. Nat. & Gent. l. 2. c. 12.

(r) J. Mar. E. ad Diognet. p. 498.

(s) Strom. l. 1. p. m. 269.

Rom. 8. 17, 29. Heb. 2. 11. and 3. 6. Joh. 20. 17.

Luk. 3. 38.

(t) Lightfoot Hor. in Luk. 3. 23.

II. The Birth-nobilitation of the Son of God truly ſuch and his true Generation and Nativity is plainly related in Holy Scripture: but the Scholaſtic Generation and Nativity of an Abſtract Son of God is not ſo much as mention'd in Holy Scripture; for of an Abſtract Son and of the twofold or threefold Nativity which the Scholaſtic Theology attributeth to the Son of God, there is not one Syllable in all the Book of God. Some of the ancient Scholaſtic Divines (as Athanaſius) are ſaid (x) to attribute a threefold Nativity to the Son. The firſt is that whereby the Logos was from the Father and with the Father from Eternity, as being the Coeternal Progeny of the Eternal paternal Mind. This only is the true and properly called Nativity of the Logos, as he is the Logos of God and God. Becauſe of this Nativity he is called the only begotten, as Athanaſius ſuppoſeth, who alſo ſuppoſeth, that only upon account of it the Son is of or from the Father, that is, deriv'd his Origine from him. Another Nativity is that condeſcenſion of the Logos, which is his going forth from the Father to the creating the Univerſe; with reſpect whereto he is called the Firſt-born of every Creature, as Athanaſius ſuppoſeth. His third Nativity was, when this Divine Perſon went forth from the Boſom and Glory of the Father into the Womb of the moſt Holy Virgin, and ſo the Word was made Fleſh and he was born Man. But moſt uſually the Scholaſtic Theology doth not attribute to the Son theſe three Nativities, but two of them only; deriving the complex Perſon of our Saviour from two ſeveral Generations and Nativities, the one productive of him as God (the Son) the other as Creature only and as Man. And theſe two Generations and Nativities we are injoyn'd to believe as a principal Article of Faith, both Catholicks and Arians thunder out Anathema's againſt all that do not acknowledge it. The Senſe of the Catholicks is, (y) According to the Catholick Faith and the Declarations of Scripture it is certain, that the Lord Jeſus Chriſt hath two Nativities, one of his Father without time, the other of his Mother without knowing Man; and that he hath two ſeveral Natures from theſe two Nativities, that of God, as he is begotten of the Father without time; and that of Man, as he is born of his Mother. In the firſt ſpiritual Nativity he had no Mother, in the ſecond carnal Nativity no Father. The Word was ſingle according to his Divine, Paternal and Sempiternal Generation, but became double (or complex) by his Maternal, Temporal and Corporeal Generation. But if we inquire of Scholaſtic Divines, In what part of the Bible are theſe two Generations and Nativities diſtinguiſh'd? In what place of Scripture are they mention'd? Where are they attributed to the Son of God? And touching the firſt of them (the Generation and Nativity of an Abſtract Son of God) what Holy Writer hath aſſerted it, or made any mention of it? They have no places of Scripture to produce, but ſuch as a wiſe Man would be aſhamed to alledge. And for my own part I am infinitely aſham'd, to read the Fathers of the Chriſtian Church building an Article of Faith upon moſt intoleraby inept Applications of places of Scripture: Such as Ante Luciferum genui te. Eructavit Cormeum Sermonem optimum. Dominus condidit me initium viarum. Ante omnes colles generavit me. (z) Priuſquam te formarem in utero, novi te. Beatus qui erat, antequam naſceretur. One Evangeliſt is thought to aſſert this Article, when he ſaith, The Word was made (or became) Fleſh. But doth this Evangeliſt ever diſtinguiſh theſe two Generations and Nativities? Doth he ever make the leaſt mention of the Generation and Nativity of an Abſtract Son? And is there no way for the Word to become Fleſh but by a Generation and Nativity? Shall we then (being deſtitute of expreſs places of Scripture) build this Article upon Humane Argumentations? That is a very lubricous Foundation, and all our Arguments will not ſignify ſo much as this one Prejudice againſt them; If it had been an Article of Faith, it would have been expreſly mention'd in Scripture. Or ſhall we ſymbolize with the Church of Rome, and build this Article upon Eccleſiaſtical Tradition, whereby alone the Scholaſtic Trinity can be proved? That is a more lubricous foundation than Humane Argumentation. If the Fathers and Councils had only propoſed and recommended this Article as an Hypotheſis, whereby the certain Articles of the Chriſtian Faith (the Trinity, the Deity and Incarnation of the Meſſiah) may be explain'd, this had been becoming Fathers of the Chriſtian Church. But to make Articles of Faith of our own Heads, to inſert them into Creeds, to hereticate and damn all that do not acknowledge them, is unchriſtian overdoing at a great rate, irreconcileable with Wiſdom, Juſtice and Charity, extremely injurious to the Underſtandings of Men, to the Rights of Chriſtians, and moſt of all to the Religion of Chriſtianity.

(u) Hæc ἐξοχὴ (nempe quâ Dei virtute in utero formatus erat) propria eſt Jeſu Chriſto homini, cui nulla alia aut ſimilis fuit aut erit unquam. Regero, illud verum non eſſe. Quid enim? Caro Chriſti divinâ potentiâ ac virtute ſine patre in utero virginis concepta ac formata fuit. Annon primus homo ſine patre & matre Dei ipſius manibus formatus fuit? Annon idcirco Dei filius diſertè dicitur? Luk 3. 38. Non ergo in hoc ſita eſt ἐξοχὴ illa Jeſu Chriſti, quâ Filius unicus ſive unigenitus appellatur: Imo hâc ratione primus Adam ſecundo quadammodo ſuperior erit; cùm ille à Deo ſine patre & matre, hic ſine patre tantum factus fuerit. Dr. Bull c. Zuicker. p 37.

(w) Petav. T. 4. l. 7. c. 6. S. 4.

(x) Athanaſius triplicem Filio nativitatem manifeſtè tribuit. Prima eſt, qua ut, ὁ λόγος ab æterno ex patre & apud patrem extitit, utpote æternæ mentis paternæ coæterna progenies. Hæc ſola eſt τοῦ λόγου quâ Dei λόγος & Deus eſt, vera ac propriè dicta nativitas. Ob hanc nativitatem τοῦ μονογενοῦς in ſcripturis dici ipſum cenſuit Athanaſius: qui & eo ſolo nomine exiſtimavit Filium eſſe ἐκ πατρὸς, hoc eſt, ex patre initium & originem ſubſiſtentiæ ſuæ traxiſſe. Altera nativitas conſiſtit in illa συγκαταβάσει, quâ ὁ λόγος ex Deo patre exivit ad creationem Univerſi. Hujus reſpectu dici illum in ſcripturis omnis creaturæ primogenitum ſtatuit Athanaſius. Ex hac nativitate nihil acceſſit divinæ perſonæ τοῦ λόγου· utpote quæ, ut dicit, fuit potiùs ipſius demiſſio & Condeſcenſio. Tertia demum ejus nativitas cum eadem divina perſona è ſinu & gloria paterna exivit, ſeque intulit in uterum ſacratiſſimæ virginis, itaque verbum caro factum eſt, ſive natus eſt homo. Dr. Bull Def. Fid. Nic. p 232. Ed. an. 1703.

III. The true Birth-nobilitation of the Son of God and his Scriptural Generation and Nativity is almoſt totally ſupplanted and deſtroy'd by the unſcriptural Generation and Nativity of an Abſtract Son. For the Scholaſtic Divines have their Minds ſo prepoſſeſs'd and taken up with their Metaphyſical (or rather Hyper-Metaphyſical) Speculations of an Abſtract Son, and his unſcriptural Generation (which they voluminouſly and vehemently conteſt about) that ſome of them look ſo diſdainfully upon the Scriptural Generation and Nativity, that they will ſcarce allow it the Name of a Generation. (a) There is a twofold Generation of him, the one into Divinity and Filiety, Recondite, Divine, and which may be underſtood by Faith: the other is to come into Fleſh, and to carry Fleſh. The former of theſe is the only Generation, a manifeſtation of Power from God: the latter is rather a taking Fleſh, not a Generation. Ordinarily they give it the name of a Generation; but when they come to explain themſelves, they plainly tell us, that they do not mean by it any ſuch thing as a Generation. For they ſay (b) One may become a proper natural Son two ways: the one by natural and formal Generation, whereby the Nature and Eſſence is communicated; the other is by a Subſtantive unition into the ſame Perſon. (c) The proceſſion of the Humane Nature of Chriſt is not by Generation, nor is it communicated from the Father, nor is Chriſt as Man generated by God, nor hath he the natural ſimilitude or image of God, which the Condition of a Son requireth. But being joined with the Word by a natural Conjunction, it hath by that unition the Divinity communicated to it, and the propriety of it or of the Word, which is Filiety. Conſider'd as Man therefore he is the natural and properly ſo called Son of God, not by Generation but Unition. But was not the Bleſſed Virgin with Child (impregnated) by God or by the Holy Ghoſt? That which was conceived (d) or rather begotten in her, was it not of the Holy Ghoſt? In the Conception of our Saviour the Bleſſed Virgin was a Mother, and was not God a Father? Therefore this Conception was a Divine Generation. So three of the Evangeliſts certainly thought it, that look'd upon Chriſt Jeſus as the Son of God properly ſo called, yet knew nothing of the eternal Generation of the Son, as S. Jerom thinketh, and the thing is manifeſt from their Writings. So the Angel, Luke 1. 35. plainly affirmeth, that our Saviour is the Son of God becauſe of his miraculous Conception, and that this miraculous Conception was a Divine Generation, as it muſt be, if according to our (right) tranſlation it was the cauſe of our Lord's Sonſhip; for (as Vaſquez ſaith) ratio filii propriè accepti & ratio geniti eadem eſt. If it was not a generation, how abſurd is it to ſtyle the Bleſſed Virgin Θεοτόκος, the Mother of God? And how abſurdly do we talk of our Saviour's being begotten of a Virgin and born of a Woman, of his being of the Seed of David, of celebrating his Birth and Nativity, and of labouring for ſpiritual Regeneration conformable to his natural Generation? The Scholaſtic Theologers expreſly contradict the Scriptures, when they ſay (e) that the Man aſſum'd out of Mary (ſuch is their Language) was not begotten by the Holy Ghoſt but created. They expreſly contradict themſelves (which is no rarity with theſe Maſters) in denying his Conception to be a Generation; for ſometimes thus they argue, (f) Seeing one and the ſame Chriſt is both God and Man, he muſt neceſſarily receive his being both by true Generation: therefore both as God and as Man he was truly generated. In ſome degree they contradict their own Doctrine of the Incarnation; for they ſay (g) that the Holy Ghoſt deſcended upon the Bleſſed Virgin, repleniſh'd her Womb with a genital Vertue, framed our Saviour's Body, and conjoin'd it with the Logos; and by this Unition, not by Generation, Chriſt Jeſus as Man became the proper natural Son of God. They attribute the Incarnation therefore to the Operation of the Holy Ghoſt rather than to the Logos (as ſometimes they do, to avoid the force of ſcriptural Arguments:) but uſually they ſuppoſe it to be principally the Act of the Logos, and account it chiefly his Aſſumption of the humane Nature into perſonal Union with himſelf, ſo joyning the humane Nature with God. This Unition they ſubſtitute inſtead of Generation, ſuppoſing (what they cannot prove) that in the miraculous Conception the Communication of the divine Nature and Eſſence, and the Production of ſuch a Son who is the divine Image and Similitude, are both wanting.

(y) Petav. T. 4. l. 3. c. 6. & c. 7. S. 3. & c. 12. S. 8.

(z) Lactan. l. 4. c. 8.

(a) Duplex generatio ejus: Una quidem in divinitatem & filietatem, occulta, divina, & quæ fide intelligatur: Alia autem in carnem venire, & ferre carnem. Illa quidem ſola generatio à Deo potentiæ manifeſtatio: Iſta autem acceptio magis carnis, non generatio. Mar. Victorin. ap. Petav. de Trin. l. 1. c. 5. S. 8.

(b) Petav. T. 4. l. 16. c. 5. S. 9.

(c) Humana Chriſti natura non illa quidem generatione procedit, vel communicatur à patre: neque Chriſtus qua homo eſt, Gignitur à Deo: neque Dei ſimilitudinem naturalem aut imaginem habet, quod filii conditio poſtulat, verùm naturali copulatione cum Verbo conjuncta, eadem unitione communicatam ſibi divinitatem obtinet, ac divinitatis modum, ſive proprietatem, quâ Verbum conſtat, quæ filietas dicitur. Ideò propriè dictus & naturalis eſt Dei Filius, non Generatione, ſed unitione, quatenus ut eſt homo ſpectatur. Petav. ibid. l. 7. c. 5. S. 5. Vaſq. T. 1. in 3 par. Diſp. 89. c. 14. Gonet. Clyp. T. 12. Diſp. 23. Art. 2.

(d) See Dr. Pearſon on this Art. his only Son initio.

(e) Ap. Petav. de Trin. l. 3. c. 7. S. 18.

(f) Cùm unus idemque Chriſtus ſit Deus & homo, neceſſe eſt, ut vera generatione utrumq; ut eſſet, acceperit. Verè igitur & quà Deus eſt, & quà homo eſt genitus. Petv. T. 4. l. 5. c. 14. S. 9.

(g) Id. de Trin. l. 3. c. 5. S. 5.

IV. The Birth-nobilitation of the Son of God (truly ſuch) and conſequently his true Generation and Nativity, is popular (that which the People or the generality of Mankind mean by thoſe Names:) but the ſcholaſtic Generation of an Abſtract Son is altogether ſcholaſtical and unpopular. For becauſe the Logos (or Word) in the Evangeliſt is the ſame with the Son of God, and becauſe ſaying is the ſame thing with producing a Word, hence the ſcholaſtic Divines infer, that the generating the Abſtract Son of God is nothing elſe but an internal ſaying or mental conceiving. (h) Generatio iſta nihil eſt aliud quàm locutio quædam ac dictio. That Generation is nothing elſe but a (mental conceiving) certain internal ſaying and ſpeaking. (i) Verbum enim ex mente ſuo quodammodo gignitur. For a Word is in ſome ſort generated by or from the Mind. So Clemens (k) ſaith of the Abſtract Son of God, Λόγος υἱὸς νȣ̃ γνήσιος, The Logos is the genuin Son of Mind. And S. Baſil ſaith, that he hath the Name of Logos to ſhew, ὅτι ἐκ τȣ̃ νȣ̃ προῆλθε, that his Proceſſion is by and from Mind and Intellect. So according to S. Auſtin, Quia verbum ideò filius. The Son is therefore the Son, becauſe he is the mental conceptional Word. (l) As in us Verbum mentis (a Notion of the Mind) hath its origin from our Intelligence, and our Notion or Idea (verbum mentis) repreſenteth the Object (is the expreſs image and ſimilitude thereof) and conſequently if our Mind is the Object of her own Cogitation, her Verbum mentis is the Image of her ſelf: So God, who is ſaid to be Mind by knowing and contemplating himſelf, is ſuppos'd to generate his Notion or Idea, his Verbum mentis, (or mental conceptional Word) which Verbum mentis is ſuppos'd to be the Abſtract Son of God that is of eternal Generation. Such an Hypotheſis hath prevail'd in the Church for many Ages: but to me it ſeemeth marvellous to a Prodigy, that ever ſuch a Crotchet (which profaneth our Religion, and not only rendreth it unintelligible, but ridiculous) ſhould enter into any ſober Man's head. And it ſeemeth more marvellous, that in a learned Age, and at this time of the day (m) Men of excellent Learning and Underſtanding ſhould obtrude it upon, or at leaſt recommend it to the Church of God. (n) Ita prorſus ſenſiſſe veteres pleroſque conſtat. It is maniſeſt, that the Ancients for the moſt part were of this Opinion: For they ſuppos'd that the Logos of God the Father was ſo called, not chiefly with reſpect to the external Speech of a Man, but to the interiour Notion and Conception of the Mind of Man, which is called by Philoſophers the mental conceptional Word (ſed ad interiorem humani animi ἔννοιαν & notionem, quæ à philoſophis verbum mentis nominatur) and that as that interiour Word neceſſarily floweth from the Mind of Man and co-exiſteth with it: ſo from God the Father, who is an eternal Mind, his mental-conceptional Word was neceſſarily generated, and is coeternal with him. And as a Man when he thinketh, findeth as it were another Perſon ſpeaking with him: ſo in God his mental conceptional Word is really another and a diſtinct Perſon from him. Athenagoras with moſt of the Ancients thought, that that divine Perſon which we call the Logos and Son of God was in an ineffable and altogether incomprehenſible manner from Eternity generated by the Mind and Cogitation of God the Father. Et multa ſunt quæ ſuadent, hoc myſterium ab ipſis Apoſtolis traditum fuiſſe. And there are many things which incline to believe, that this Myſtery was a Tradition from the Apoſtles themſelves. But they that can diſcern good ſenſe, and that rightly reliſh the Excellency and Nobleneſs of Chriſtianity, will as ſoon believe all the Tales of the Legendaries, and the childiſh unwritten Traditions of the Church of Rome, as this Myſtery, that the ever bleſſed Son of God is a childiſh ſcholaſtic Crotchet; and that this Whim is a Tradition from the Apoſtles (who were no Scholaſticks) which confeſſeth, deſcribeth, and repreſenteth it ſelf as nothing better than ἔννοια & notio quæ à Philoſophis verbum mentis nominatur, that is, an idiotically philoſophical and unpopular Conceit. A meer Notion of ſpeculative Mind is by Scholaſticks counted a ſubſtantive, living, and wiſe Child, a Son, a Son and Heir, the moſt virtuous Son, the Heir of a vaſt Eſtate, a Perſon, the moſt noble and holy Perſon, a Perſon of Religion and of the Godhead, the eternal almighty God; the meer Cogitation of cogitative Mind is counted a Perſon diſtinct from the cogitative Mind: Meer thinking is counted generating; begetting a Child and Son, and ſuch a Son who is born of God (Nil tam abſurdum eſt, quod non aliquis dixerit philoſophorum;) and they that can underſtand Generation no better, have reaſon to ſay with the R. R. Expoſitor of our Articles, What begetting ſignifieth, it is not poſſible for us to underſtand. But we know very well what the generality of Mankind mean by begetting a Child, and by the Generation and Nativity of a Son. We know that the Scripture uſeth words in their ſenſe (and therefore ſpeaketh intelligibly) and we are ſure, that the true Son of God is not appropriate to Scholaſticks, but is accommodate to the People and their Concerns. We affirm therefore, that he is of no Affinity with a notion of the Mind called by Philoſophers Verbum mentis (which will be farther conſider'd

(h) Petav. de Trin. l. 3. c. 10. S. 6.

(i) Grot. de V. R. C. l. 6. c. 9.

(k) Petav. de Trin. l. 7. c. 14. S. 3, 4, 5.

(l) Ibid. l. 3. c. 10. S. 2. l. 5. c. 8. S. 7. l. 6. c. 2.

(m) Dr. Bull, Mr. Nye.

(n) Dr. Bull Def. Fid. Nic. p. 206.

hereafter) but he muſt be denominated a popular kind of Son, of a popular Birth-nobilitation, Generation, and Nativity.

V. The Birth-nobilitation of the Son of God, and his true Generation and Nativity, is of kind and quality holy-popular: but the Generation and Nativity of the Abſtract Son of God is both unholy and unpopular; for it is not a buſineſs of Sanctity, but of School Philoſophy. That generatio ex Deo which is the reality of Regeneration, muſt be called The holy and divine kind of Generation (Generation being a vital Production, and this being the holy and divine kind of vital Production) whereby alone a Man becometh a Saint of God-kind of Son, a Son of God in the ſenſe of Chriſtianity and the New Teſtament (by being born and begotten of God in the ſenſe of Chriſtianity and the New Teſtament;) whence it appeareth, that the true Son of God cannot be of the ſcholaſtic kind of Generation and Nativity (but is neceſſarily of another kind of Generation and Nativity:) nor can an Abſtract ſcholaſtic Son (as being of a ſcholaſtic kind of Generation and Nativity) be the true Son of God. He is not a Son of the holy and divine kind of Generation (it is incompetible to him) and not being born of God in the ſenſe of Chriſtianity and the New Teſtament, he is not a Son of God in the ſenſe of Chriſtianity and the New Teſtament. Which is too apparent from the Accounts which the ancient Writers have given of his Generation, that are of ſuch a nature, as plainly demonſtrateth, that they did not receive their Notices from thoſe divine Teachers the holy Apoſtles, but that they are a fruit of their own miſunderſtanding Underſtanding. Some of them are not only of an unholy exotic nature, but are ſo rude and unlearned, that they are as remote from School-philoſophy as from Sanctity. For ſo (o) Lactantius conſidering the Abſtract Son of God under the Notion of Sermo and Verbum, he obſerveth, that in our Speech the Spirit of our Noſtrils is complicated with the Word of our Mouth, and therefore he ſuppoſeth, that God generated his Son prolatione vocis ac ſpiritus; and that he produc'd the Angels ſilently, but that the Son (whom he ſtileth Vocalis ſpiritus) cum voce ac ſono ex ore Dei proceſſit. This is a Notion ſuperlatively wild for a Chriſtian Apologiſt: but this was the Mode of the Chriſtian Apologiſts; inſtead of recommending to Men an holy Meſſiah and his divine Religion, to puzzle them with an Abſtract Son of God and his unholy Generation. So Tertullian ſhewing, that the Stoicks attribute the Formation of all things to a Logos, Sermo, & Ratio artifex, which they counted a Spirit, he ſubjoineth, (p) To that Speech, Reaſon and Virtue, whereby we have ſaid, that God formed all things, we attribute the proper ſubſtance of a Spirit, which hath Speech to pronounce, Reaſon to diſpoſe, and Virtue to perfect things. This (Sermo) we have learn'd to have had a prolation by God, and that his Generation was by prolation. (q) God before the Conſtitution of the Univerſe was ſilently cogitating with himſelf and making an orderly diſpoſal of things; he had within himſelf and in his very Reaſon his Sermo, whereby the Univerſe of things was cogitated and ordered, and made in the Mind (or as to the Reaſon) of God. This cogitative Virtue and this diſpoſal of things in divine reaſon is called Wiſdom in Scripture (Prov. 8.) wherein the ſeveral Reaſons (or Ideas) of things were contained; for in Wiſdom by Cogitation and Diſpoſal God made all things, which Wiſdom (the ſame with Sermo) was not ſelf-originated, but ſo ſoon as it began to be agitated in the Reaſon of God for the diſpoſing of the Creation-works, then it had its Nativity and Making. So ſoon as he diſcern'd it neceſſary for the Creation-works, he preſently made it, and generated it in himſelf, according to that of Solomon, The Lord created me in the beginning of his ways towards his Works. Thus things were made quantum in Dei ſenſu as to their being made in the reaſon of God: but when God would give them their real Subſtances and Species, in the firſt place he brought forth the Sermo, that by him all things might be made. Tunc igitur etiam ipſe Sermo ſpeciem & ornatum ſuum ſumit, ſonum & vocem, cùm dicit Deus fiat Lux. Hæc eſt nativitas perfecta Sermonis. Then it was therefore that the Sermo had his Species and Adornation, his Sound and his Voice, when God ſaid, Let there be Light. This is the perfect Nativity of the Sermo, when he proceedeth from God, and by proceeding from him is generated and made his Son. Firſt, the Sermo is cogitatively made in the Name of Wiſdom; the Lord created me the beginning of his ways. Then he is generated effectively; when he prepared the Heavens, I was there.

This is the Summary of Tertullian's ſcholaſtic Speculation touching a twofold Generation of the Logos antecedent to the Creation (the one an imperfect, the other a perfect Generation and Nativity) which is diſſonant from that of ſome other Fathers (that will be cited preſently;) for they do not attribute any Nativity or Generation to the Logos antecedent to his Prolation, which was the beginning of the Creation. But this with Tertullian is the ſecond or perfect Nativity of the Sermo, when he had his ſpecies and adornation, ſound and voice. (r) O rare ſpecies of the Sermo, O eximious adornation! But ſo this great man in the moſt auguſt myſtery of all other, was pleas'd with toying and following Nugacities. Such is the Epicriſis which a learned ſcholaſtic Divine ſubjoineth to Tertullian's Account of his ſcholaſtic abſtract Logos. And it had been happy if ſo far as is juſt, and as Chriſtianity oblig'd him, he had paſs'd the ſame Cenſure upon the whole of that ſcholaſtic Theology, wherewith his learned Book is repleniſh'd. I may not preſume to cenſure venerable Names, but I may propoſe ſome Interrogatories to learned and holy Men, and may be allow'd to ask them what they think touching the ſcholaſticizing theſe divine matters (which we have under conſideration) whether it is not an unholy toying and trifling and following Nugacities? What elſe is the Dictio interna both of ancient and modern times (æternæ mentis coæterna progenies?) What elſe is (s) ἐξερευξάμενος πρὸ τῶν ὅλων eructavit verbum ante hæc univerſa? What elſe are theſe miſerably perverted Places of Scripture, Sermone ejus cœli confirmati ſunt, & ſpiritu oris ejus omnes vires eorum; Deus condidit me initium viarum in opera ſua, ante omnes colles generavit me, Ante Luciferum genui te? What elſe is the Prolation of the Sermo at the beginning of the Creation, his Generation by Prolation, the Application of this famous Text thereto, Filius meus es tu, ego hodie genui te, and this unchriſtianiz'd Maxim (t) Deus in principio fecit ſibi Filium, God in the beginning of the Creation (by

(o) L. 4. c. 8.

(p) Nos etiam ſermoni atque rationi itemq; virtuti per quæ omnia molitum Deum ediximus, propriam ſubſtantiam ſpiritum inſcribimus, cui & ſermo inſit pronuncianti, & ratio adſit diſponenti, & virtus præſit perficienti. Hunc ex Deo prolatum didicimus & prolatione generatum. Apol. c. 21.

(q) Adv. Prax. c. 5, 6, 7. & v. adv. Hermog. c. 18. 20.

(r) Egregiam verò ſermonis ſpeciem, ornatum egregium! ſed ita nimirum viſum eſt viro magno, in auguſtiſſimo omnium myſterio quaſi ludere & nugas ſectari. Dr. Bull ſupr. p. 241.

(s) Tertull. ſupr.

(t) Ibid. & c. Marcion. l. 2. c. 27.

(by the prolation of Speech) made to himſelf a Son? Of what other Character are theſe ancient Conceits touching an Abſtract Logos or Sermo and his Generation (u) God having within him his internal Sermo, he generated him before the univerſe of Beings (w) when God would make thoſe things, which he had conſulted about, he generated the Sermo (or Logos) prolatitious, the firſt begotten of the whole Creation. (x) The Voice of God (in Adam's Paradiſe) what is it elſe but the Sermo, who is alſo his Son? What better can be thought of the account which Athenagoras giveth of the Abſtract Logos and his Generation? (y) God from the beginning being an eternal Mind had the Logos in himſelf, being eternally Logical (rational) the Son of God is the Logos of God, which is the exemplar Cauſe and formative Energy of the Creation by prolation or iſſuing forth from the Father (which iſſuing forth was the beginning of the Creation, he iſſued forth, to be the exemplar Cauſe and formative Energy, to ſeparate the craſs from the tenuious parts of the Matter) ſo being the firſt thing generated by God. So Tatianus calleth the Abſtract Son or Logos (z) ἔργον, πρωτότοκον τοῦ πατρὸς, the primogenit Work of the Father, by which all things were made. It is not eaſy to acquit ſuch Epithets of unholy nugacity, and is there not ſomething of it in this account, which Tatianus hath given of the Abſtract Logos of God? (a) With him by his rational Virtue the Logos did ſubſiſt: but by the will of his ſingleneſs the Logos iſſued forth; which iſſuing forth of the Abſtract Logos (at the beginning of the Creation) is the only Generation that theſe Fathers attribute to him; for they do not make Tertullian's diſtinction of a twofold Generation and Nativity of the Sermo. Nor doth J. Mart. who intituleth the Abſtract Logos (b) πρῶτον γέννημα, the firſt thing generated by God, τέκνον πρωτότοκον τῶν ὅλων κτισμάτων, the primogenit Son of the Univerſe of Creatures, and ſaith of him ὅτι ἀρχὴν πρὸ πάντων τῶν κτισμάτων ὁ Θεὸς γεγέννηκε δύναμίν τινα ἐξ ἑαυτοῦ λογικήν, that firſt before all Creatures God generated out of himſelf a certain rational Power, πρὸ πάντων ἁπλῶς τῶν κτισμάτων, abſolutely before all Creatures. The Expreſſions ſound, as if the Logos was ſuppoſed to be generated only in the beginning of the Creation; but however that be, is there nothing of unholy nugacity in this Father's Deſcription of the Logos? Nor in his comparing the Production of the Logos (not to the Production of an internal Word of the Mind, as Scholaſtic Divines uſually do, but) to the Production of external Speech, thus expreſſing his Senſe (c) λόγον γάρ τινα προβάλλοντες λόγον γεννῶμεν, we producing (or pronouncing) a Word generate a Word? So Tatianus (who was his Scholar and ſpeaketh his Senſe) diſputeth, that the Logos iſſuing from the Power of the Father did not leave him Alogos, καὶ γὰρ αὐτὸς ἐγὼ λαλῶ, καὶ ὑμεῖς ἀκούετε, for I my ſelf ſpeak and you hear, yet by the tranſition of Speech I am not κενὸς λόγου devoid of Logos. Here is no ſuch thing as the generation of a Son (for the pronouncing a Word is no ſuch thing) nothing that looketh like Apoſtolical Tradition, or that ſavoureth of the ſanctity and divine Excellency of the Chriſtian Religion, which muſt neceſſarily ſuffer unſpeakable detriment in thoſe ancient times, when its Apologiſts inſtead of acquainting Men with the Chriſtian ſaving Son of God, made it their buſineſs to repreſent to them School-philoſophic Trifles. We may be allowed to aſk, if Athanaſius's account of the generation of an Abſtract Son and Logos muſt not be thought of that number? (d) If he is not the Word he is not the Son; for that which is out of the Father is the Son. And what is that which is out (or forth) of the Father, but a Word proceeding out of the Heart, and begotten out of the Womb?

VI. To be born Holy, of the Holy-kind, ſo as to be of the Holy Imperial degree, is the great Birth-nobilitation, which one that is born the Son of God cannot be without; therefore the Scholaſtic Abſtract Son or Sermo is not one that is born the Son of God. For the Son of God being called The Word, the Scholaſtic Divines have defin'd him by that Name underſtood according to their School-Philoſophy. (e) So that by the Son of God is underſtood the Word of the Father, which is, the ſame thing to the Father, as an internal Word of the Mind is to the Mind of Man. An external Prolatitious Word is produc'd in time (whence it is moſt probable, that J. Mart. ſuppoſed his Logos to be produc'd in time) this Abſtract Logos therefore is defin'd an internal mental Word or Conception, (f) the Progeny of the paternal Mind itſelf, born from it, remaining in it, and ſo intimately united to it, that it may be called the very Nous or Mind of the Father. This Account of the Logos giveth us occaſion to propoſe another Interrogatory to Learned and Holy Men, Whether Tertullian hath not a great deal of Company in following unholy Nugacities? For they that give this account of the Logos, ſtrangely miſtake popular-religious Language touching popular-religious Matters, forget the Learning of Chriſtians and of the Scriptures, and by inſtituting us into the Learning of their Scholaſtic-metaphyſicks, ſubſtituted inſtead of truly Divine-learning, they inſtitute us to be Sophiſts not the Saints of God. Nor is their Logos of any better Character; for he is definitively nothing better than Nous the Progeny of Nous (ſpeculative Mind;) and therefore if he can be a Perſon, he can be no better than a Sophiſt an Alien from God and the Saints of God. He is The Word; and is he not therefore definitively (The Word of God) The Holy Word; The God-kind of Word? No, he is not of any ſuch Nobilitation, but is definitively a Word only (g) according to S. Auſtin (who ſpeaketh the too uſual Senſe of the Greek and Latin Fathers) Quid eſt dico? Verbum profero. What is ſaying? The producing a Word. He is a Thought; but if ſo, one would think, that he ſhould be definitively a noble-Thought, or a good and holy-Thought; but neither is this Nobilitation any ingredient of his definition, he is only the mental Production of a Thought. And if he is only a mental Production, his Production is not Generation

(for

(u) Ἔχων τὸν ἑαυτοῦ λόγον ἐνδιάθετον ἐν τοῖς ἰδίοις σπλάγχνοις ἐγέννησεν αὐτὸν πρὸ τῶν ὅλων. Theophil. ad Autol. p. 88.

(w) Ὁπότε δὲ ἠθέλησεν ὁ Θεὸς ποιῆσαι ὅσα ἐβουλεύσατο, τὸν λόγον ἐγέννησε προφορικὸν, πρωτότοκον πάσης κτίσεως. Ibid. p. 100.

(x) Φωνὴ δὲ τί ἄλλο ἐστὶν, ἀλλ' ἢ ὁ λόγος ὁ τοῦ Θεοῦ ὅς ἐστι καὶ υἱὸς αὐτοῦ. Ibid.

(y) Ἐξ ἀρχῆς γὰρ ὁ Θεὸς νοῦς ἀΐδιος ὢν εἶχεν αὐτὸς ἐν ἑαυτῷ τὸν λόγον ἀϊδίως λογικὸς ὤν· ἀλλ' ἐστὶν ὁ υἱὸς τοῦ Θεοῦ λόγος τοῦ πατρὸς ἐν ἰδέᾳ καὶ ἐνεργείᾳ, ἰδέα καὶ ἐνεργεία εἶναι προελθὼν, πρῶτον γέννημα εἶναι τῷ πατρί. P. 10.

(z) P. 145.

(a) Διὰ λογικῆς δυνάμεως αὐτὸς καὶ ὁ λόγος ὃς ἦν ἐν αὐτῷ ὑπέστησε. Θελήματι δὲ τῆς ἁπλότητος αὐτοῦ προπηδᾷ λόγος. Ibid.

(b) Apol. 2. p. 66. Dial. cum Tryph. p. 267, 284, 356, 357, 359.

(c) Ibid. p. 284.

(d) Καὶ εἰ μὴ λόγος, οὐδὲ υἱός· τὸ γὰρ ἐκ τοῦ πατρὸς υἱός ἐστι. τί δὲ ἐστιν ἐκ τοῦ πατρὸς, εἰ μὴ ὁ λόγος, ὁ ἐκ καρδίας προελθὼν, καὶ ἐκ γαστρὸς γεννηθείς. Ap. Dr. Bull p. 208.

(e) Ita ut Filius Dei intelligatur, ὁ λόγος τοῦ πατρὸς, Verbum patris, quod nempe ſe habeat ad patrem, ut ad mentem humanam Verbum ejus interius. Dr. Bull, p. 203.

(f) Ipſius paternæ mentis progenies, ex ipſa nata, in eâque ipſâ manens, tam intimè ipſi unita, ut planè ὁ νοῦς ipſa mens patris appellari poſſit. Ibid.

(g) In Pſ 44.

(for that is a vital Production) not an Holy vital Generation, not the holy kind of Generation; therefore he is not one that is born the Son of God. The Scholaſtic Abſtract Son of God is not of ſo high a kind of Birth, and therefore is not by much of ſuch Birth-nobilitation as the meaneſt Regenerate Chriſtian, that is one of the Divine Family, which the Apoſtle ſpeaketh of Eph. 3. 15. of whom (God the Father) the whole Family in Heaven and Earth is named. (h) The Jews count it a magnificent thing, that they can derive their Pedegree from Judah, Reuben and other Sons of Jacob; but we Regenerate Chriſtians reckon our Deſcent from God the Father. So part of S.Paul's Judaical Glories, Phil. 3. 5. was his being of the Stock of Iſrael, of the Tribe of Benjamin (not deſcended from the Handmaids as many of Jacob's Children were) an Hebrew of the Hebrews; which denoteth the great antiquity of his Race, and that both his Parents were of Abraham's Race, neither of them Aliens. The Jews were (i) τετυφωμένοι διὰ τὸ γένος, puffed up becauſe of their Stock and Family: but Regenerate Chriſtians reckon upon no Birth-nobilitation ſave only their Regeneration, nor upon any Family but the Divine Family, from the Father whereof (as he is ſuch) they derive their Deſcent and Pedigree, not as Men, but as Saints and Holy People the Sons of God. (k) If any Man had bad Parents and yet is virtuous (ſaith the Apoſtate Julian) τοῦτον δὲ νομιστέον πατέρα τὸν Δία καὶ φυτουργὸν, Jove muſt be ſuppoſed to be his Father and the Founder of his Family, and he muſt be denominated εὐγενὴς, nobly born. Such is the Birth-nobilitation of true Chriſtians, they are born of God and Heaven-born, and therefore nobly-born (for even Gold is reputed noble, (l) becauſe it is of a bright, fiery and radiant Colour, tanquam Cælo derivatum) and as they are Heaven-born, ſo together with the Inhabitants of Heaven they conſtitute one Family and Empire of Saints and Holy People, that are all of the ſame Birth-nobilitation, called by the counterfeit Dionyſius and his Scholiaſt ἡ Θεία Γένεσις, Θεογενεσία, the Divine kind of Generation, which is (m) τὸ ὑψηλὸν καὶ εὐγενὲς, ſublime and real Birth-nobleneſs, whereby Chriſtians become ſpiritual Jews, (n) which is τῆς ψυχῆς εὐγένεια, the Birth-nobilitation of the Soul. This Divine kind of Generation is the Son of God-kind of Generation, and therefore the true Son of God is neceſſarily of this Generation and Nativity and of the Birth-nobilitation which it importeth. So our Creed repreſenteth him as in his Humane-divine Generation born and begotten of God (in the ſenſe of Chriſtianity) born of the Holy Ghoſt (which importeth Sanctity) and therefore a Sanctity-kind of Son, not only as to the Body, but as to the Soul much more, according to that of P. Chryſologus (o) Quod in ea natum eſt, de ſpiritu Sancto eſt, & quod de ſpiritu Sancto natum eſt, Spiritus eſt. That which is born in her (the Bleſſed Virgin) is of the Holy Ghoſt, and that which is born of the Holy Spirit is (vital Sanctity or) Spirit. (p) Nos etſi efficimur, non tamen ſancti naſcimur: Ille autem ſolus veraciter Sanctus natus eſt. This difference there is between Chriſt and us; we are made Holy but are not born Holy: he alone is born truly Holy.

But if this is all the difference between Chriſt and us (his Generation and our Regeneration) as a Regenerate Chriſtian, although born of God, is yet no more than a Man (an Holy Man:) So Chriſt muſt be repreſented as no more than Ille homo à ſpiritu Sancto conceptus, & natus ex B. Virgine, That Man conceiv'd by the Holy Ghoſt and born of the Bleſſed Virgin. But they that thus deadly miſrepreſent him, ought to conſider, that it is one thing for an Imperial Eſtate of Religion and Sanctity, to generate his mean Sons as to Religion and Sanctity, that are of the ſubject and ſervient Sanctity; and another thing to generate a Son to Sanctity Imperial, who is a filial Imperial Eſtate as to Religion and Sanctity and a Perſon of Sanctity Imperial. When the Angel ſpeaketh to the Bleſſed Virgin of that Holy thing which ſhould be born of her, Luk. 1. 35. He muſt be underſtood to call her Child The holy one of God, Mar. 1. 24. Dan. 9. 25. Act. 2. 27. which Name denoteth him to be Sanctus Sanctorum, and therefore a Saint of God-kind of Son, and a Saint of God-kind of Imperial Son or the Lord the Son. Of this Birth-nobilitation our Saviour was as then generated and begotten of God, as the Angel's Words plainly ſignifie. The Holy Ghoſt ſhall come upon thee, and the power of the Higheſt ſhall overſhadow thee, therefore alſo that Holy thing which ſhall be born of thee. —— The Angel ſaith further, that the Child as then begotten of God ſhould be The Son of God, The Son of the Higheſt. And ſeeing his Words muſt be underſtood as μεγαλυσμοί, and in the ſenſe of Nobility-learning, they neceſſarily import, that this Holy Child was by Birth-nobilitation that Honour, Dignity and Eſtate of Nobilitation which theſe Names (The Son of God, The Son of the Higheſt) ſignify; and conſequently they import, that he was by Birth-nobilitation The Regial or Imperial Son of God. And that he was of this Birth-nobilitation, is manifeſt, becauſe he was born (by his Bethlehemitical Birth-nobilitation) The Lord, Chriſt the Lord, Meſſiah the Prince, the King of Iſrael, The filial Imperial Eſtate of the Holy Empire. And becauſe he was born to it, and was by birth no leſs than Son and Heir of the Kingdom of God, the Angel ſaith Luk. 1. 32, 33. The Lord ſhall give unto him the Throne of his Father David (the Antitype of it) and he ſhall reign over the Houſe of Jacob for ever. Theſe things being infinitely plain and certain, this Dogma of the Followers of Socinus as they underſtand it, Chriſtum non natura, ſed Dei beneficio Deum eſſe (that Chriſt is not God by Nature, but only by God's conferring ſuch a Dignity upon him) appeareth to be infinitely criminal. (q) And ſuch is the miſtake of Maldonate (which they glibly ſwallow) that purus homo, a meer Man might have been generated as our Saviour was: Which groſs Miſtake had it's Origine from his groſs Ignorance in Scripture Nobility-learning; for he doth not ſo much as know, that God muſt be contemplated as an Imperial Eſtate. Let us ſuppoſe the Papacy to be an immortal Imperial Eſtate, and that we hear Roman Catholicks talk of the Son of the Papacy, What reaſonable Man would not have this Idea of him, That he is a Roman Catholick kind of Son, but not a mean Son of the Subject ſervient Party, but by Birth-nobilitation The Imperial Son, one whom the Roman Catholicks count of this high Birth-nobilitation The Son of their Holy Lord's Imperial Honour and Dignity, The Lord the Son? Such is the Son of God, as S. Auſtin well deſcribeth him. (r) It was requiſite that he ſhould baptize, who is the only Son of God, not an adopted Son. The only Son hath the Power, the adopted Sons the Miniſtry and Service.

(h) Magnificum putant Hebræi, quod genus ſuum referre poſſunt ad Judam, Reubenem & alios Jacobi filius; at nos Deo patre cenſemur. Grot. Not. in loc.

(i) J. Mar. Dial. cum Tryph. p. 229.

(k) Seld. de Synedr. l. 3. c. 9. S. 6.

(l) Putear. pecun. ratio c. 4.

(m) S. Chryſoſt. in Joan Hom. 10.

(n) Orig. Philocal. l. 16.

(o) Ap. Petav. T. 4. l. 5. c. 18. in fine.

(p) Maldonat. in Luk. 1. 35.

(q) Crell. de uno Deo l. 1. S. 2. c. 295.

(r) Oportebat ut ille baptizaret, qui eſt Filius Dei unicus non adoptatus. Adoptati Filii, Miniſtri ſunt Unici. Unicus habet poteſtatem, adoptati miniſterium. Tr. 7. in Joan.

VII. The Scriptural Birth-nobilitation of our Saviour is deſtroy'd by that Incarnation of an Abſtract Son of God, which the Scholaſtic Theology ſuppoſeth. For his Scriptural Birth-nobilitation is his conjunct Humane-divine Generation and Nativity, which this Theology divideth into two ſeparate Generations and Nativities, one of which is infinitely remote and diſtant from his Scriptural Generation and Nativity, and this infinitely remote Generation and Nativity this Theology maketh to be his only Birth-nobilitation. For that Generation and Nativity is only his Birth-nobilitation, whereby he hath the Divinity (or Deity) of his Perſon, not that whereby he hath only the Humanity and Servility of his Perſon; but according to this Theology he hath the Divinity (or Deity) of his Perſon only from a Generation and Nativity infinitely antecedent to his conjunct Humane-divine Generation and Nativity, and thereby he hath only the Humanity and Servility of his Perſon. So this Theology underſtandeth that uſual Maxim, Qui Deus eſt de patre, idem homo eſt de matre (he that is God from his Father is Man from his Mother) which would be a very good Maxim, if it was underſtood of the conjunct Humane-divine Generation of our Saviour, and in all reaſon it ought to be ſo underſtood. For the Scholaſtic Theologers ſay of Chriſt (s) Conſubſtantialis eſt Deo Patri & matri (he is Conſubſtantial to God his Father and to his Mother) ſuch he is, and ſuch he ought to be, and accordingly his Scriptural Generation is a conjunct Humane-divine Generation. In which Generation the Bleſſed Virgin perform'd all the parts of a Mother, and God performed all the parts of a Father. And if God in this Generation perform'd all the parts of a Father, then the Holy Child had his Sonſhip unto God and his Birth-nobilitation of the Son of God by this conjunct Humane-divine Generation, as the Scripture expreſly declareth. This reaſoning the unprejudic'd will be apt to think ſufficiently Demonſtrative; but we ought to conſider further, that the Scholaſtic Divines find themſelves under a neceſſity of denying either the Temporal or Eternal Generation of our Saviour. For if he had his Divine Nature communicated to him from Eternity, he could not have it by a Temporal Generation; and conſequently that Temporal Generation ſo called could not be his Generation, nor could he have the Birth-nobilitation of his Perſon by it; it muſt be nothing more than (t) an Oeconomy of Deſcent and Demiſſion, an Aſſumption, an Unition, an Inhumanation, an Incarnation, an Incorporation, an Exinanition, and a taking upon him the form of a Servant, which is extremely oppoſite to his Birth-nobilitation.

Accordingly in this Theology theſe are the diſcriptive Notices of our Saviour's conjunct Humane-divine Generation. (u) His Birth ſeemeth to be the greateſt and ſtrangeſt Paſſion of all, involving the loweſt Submiſſion and the deepeſt Suffering. —— For him to deſcend from Heaven the Region of Light and Bliſs into this gloomy and ſad World, for him in a manner to diveſt himſelf of Celeſtial Majeſty and to aſſume the Form of a Servant; for him to be incloſed in a Womb and to come out wailing thence; to ſuck at a Breaſt for Life, to be carried in Arms! (w) In this ſtrain with great variety of Expreſſion the Scholaſtic Divines repreſent our Saviour's Humane-divine Generation and Nativity. If they had inſiſted upon the Poverty and Meanneſs of his Nativity in Worldly reſpects, their diſcriptive Notices of his Birth would have been an eminent branch of the Divinity of the Chriſtian Religion: but to repreſent an Abſtract Son of God as undergoing a Generation for us (a Deſcent εἰς γένεσιν) to make his Generation and Nativity (in the whole of it) the moſt ſtupendious Self-humiliation and Self-abaſement, is plainly deſtructive to the Scriptural Birth-nobilitation of our Saviour. It involveth alſo a ſcurvy Reflection upon the Man Chriſt Jeſus, which appeareth in this Diſcourſe of an ancient Writer. (x) This is the legitimate Son of God, who is of God himſelf, who aſſuming to himſelf that Holy Thing, and annexing to himſelf the Son of Man, by that connexion and permixtion maketh him the Son of God, which naturally he was not; ſo that this Name the Son of God is chiefly in the Spirit of the Lord which deſcended and came (ut principalitas nominis filius Dei in ſpiritu ſit Domini, qui deſcendit & venit) the Conſequence of that Name is in the Son of God and of Man, conſequentially this Son of Man is made the Son of God, but principally he is not ſo. Although Chriſt as Man was manifeſtly begotten of God, yet according to this Author he was not as Man the legitimate Son of God, nor naturally and directly ſuch, but only conſequentially, as being united to an Abſtract Son of God. Agreeably to which Conceit he maketh a fond Interpretation of the Angel's Words (therefore alſo that Holy Thing which ſhall be born of thee, ſhall be called the Son of God) which is juſtly cenſur'd (y) and confuted by Maldonate. (z) In this Scholaſtic Theology there is a little Diſpute touching the Ennoblement of our Saviour's Humane Nature, whether we may not ſay, that it was deified by his Incarnation, and that Man was made God (as we may ſay, that God was made Man:) but this Diſpute we will overlook as not concerning the matter in hand. For we are not making inquiry touching the Ennoblement of his Humane Nature, but touching the Birth-nobilitation of his Perſon, as he is the Perſon of the Son of God.

(s) Petav. T.4. l.3. p.243.

(t) Ibid. l.2. c.1.

(u) Dr. Barrow Ser. on Luk. 2. 10.

(w) Dei Filius pro noſtra ſalute hominis factus eſt Filius. Novem menſibus in utero ut naſcatur, expectat; faſtidia ſuſtinet cruentus egreditur, pannis involvitur, blanditiis delinitur, & ille pugillo mundum includens præſepis continetur anguſtiis. Petav. ſupr. l. 5. c. 14. S. 10. Chriſtus exinanitur in eo quod naſcitur, formam ſervi accipiendo. Novatian. de Trin. c. 17.

(x) Novatian. de Trin. c. 19.

(y) In Luk. 1. 35.

(z) Petav. T.4. l.4. c.9. & l.10. c.1.

CHAP. III.

1. A third ſort of Arguments to prove the truth of our Idea, deduc'd from our Saviour's generative Proprieties, which are thoſe of a proper natural Generation. The firſt generative Propriety. 2. The ſecond generative Propriety. 3. The third generative Propriety. 4. The fourth Generative Propriety. 5. The fifth generative Propriety. 6. The ſixth generative Propriety. 7. Miſtakes of the Scholaſtic Theology oppoſite to his proper natural Generation. The firſt Miſtake. 8. A ſecond Miſtake. 9. A third Miſtake. 10. A fourth Miſtake. 11. A fifth Miſtake. 12. A ſixth Miſtake. 13. A ſeventh Miſtake. 14. An eighth Miſtake.

I. A Fourth ſort of Arguments to prove the truth of our Idea of the Son of God, we will deduce from his generative Proprieties, which conſtitute him truly and naturally in the proper and plenary ſenſe The generated Son of God, and God in ſuch ſenſe his generative Father; ſo that this Generation, Filiation and Paternity, is the true and natural, the proper and the plenary. The truth of theſe generative Properties is abundantly atteſted both by the Nature of things and the Teſtimony of Holy Scripture: but we will not content our ſelves barely to prove the truth of them, we will diſtinctly explicate thoſe ſeveral Divine Truths, which they involve, contain and imply, which are ſo many branches of the true Idea of the Son of God, and of this great Article The Divinity of the Meſſiah. The firſt of theſe generative Proprieties is, that he is a God-kind or Saint of God-kind of Son. For the proper natural Generation is a propagation of the Species, Children and Parents are ὁμογενεῖς, of the ſame ſpecific Nature, Men and other Animals generate their Kind, homo ex homine, bos ex bove. So all the Regenerate Children of God are of the God-kind, and the Son of God is neceſſarily ſo (as being begotten and born of God) and therefore as to his conſtitutive Nature and Eſſence, his true Idea muſt be underſtood by analogy to the Creature-Sons and Saints of God. For notwithſtanding the immenſe diſtance between him and them, yet the Son of God is neceſſarily a Son of God and a Saint of God, (as being an Holy one of God) of the God-kind or the Saint of God-kind (of that ſpecific Comprehenſion) of the Holy and Divine Kind and Family. And if he is neceſſarily of this Family as the Son of it, he is neceſſarily a ſort of Brother to all the holy Members of it, not as being the incarnate Son of God, but as being The Son of God. (a) The Scholaſtic Theology will by no means allow, that he was our Brother, or had any Brethren till his Incarnation. But it is not his being Incarnate that conſtituteth us his Brethren, but our being the Sons of God; and although he had never been Incarnate, yet ſuppoſing both himſelf and us, to have been always the Sons of God, we had been always his Brethren. For God is neceſſarily the Father of all his Saints and Sons, they have all one common Father, and conſequently they are Brethren, and in ſome ſort his Brethren, who muſt be number'd with the Sons of God as ſuch, though not with the Creature-Sons of God as ſuch. He muſt not be number'd with the Creature-Sons of God as ſuch, ſo far and in ſuch ſenſe he hath no Brethren: He muſt be number'd with the Sons of God as ſuch, ſo far and in ſuch ſenſe he hath many Brethren, Matt. 25. 40. This the ancient Writers of the Church plainly enough expreſs, when they ſay, The Son of God became what we were, that we might become what he was. (b) He was made Man that he might make Men the Sons of God, regenerate them in Spirit, and might have adopted Brethren.

II. A ſecond generative propriety of the Son of God is, that the Divine Nature is communicated to him. (c) For in proper natural Generation the ſame Nature (not a different) is communicated, deriv'd and propagated from Father to Son, and the Son is a Natural Fruit of the Father, as in the Goſpel (ſaith Gr. Nyſſen) the Generation of Vipers (the Sons of Vipers) are Serpents not Sheep. A Father uſually is not properly and naturally generative, nor is a Son truly and according to Nature a Son, unleſs he is of the ſame Logically ſpecific Nature with the Father, and the one be deriv'd from the other. A Son is not genuin but degenerate, if he is not of the ſame morally ſpecific Nature with the Father; the Birth is unnatural, as if a Lionneſs ſhould yean a Goat, or an Eagle bring forth a Sparrow. All vital Beings propagate their Kind (Brutes, Men, Devils,) ſo Chriſt propagateth the Chriſtian Kind, and God muſt be ſaid to propagate his Kind; for the Holy and Divine kind (in reſpect of Life and Practice) are of his Kind and Quality, and that vital Sanctity which is generated in his Children is the Holy and Divine kind of vital Nature, and the Divine Nature communicated to them. (d) It is a participation of the Divine Nature, and according to this acceptation of Nature we are ſaid to be Regenerated into Sons of God. In ſuch ſenſe the ſaying of S. Hilary muſt be underſtood, which is commonly underſtood in an ill ſenſe, and reckon'd one of his Errors (e) We are the Sons of God, not only by Adoption, but Nature. Chriſtians therefore in their Regeneration being made partakers of the Divine Nature, ſymbolize with Chriſt in his Humane-divine Generation. (f) We are new born by the ſame Spirit by which Chriſt was born. So S. Auſtin ſpeaking of Chriſt and a Chriſtian ſaith (g) This is reborn by the very ſame Spirit, whereby he was born. That ſpecific Nature which is conſtitutive, diſtinctive and denominative of a Son of God as ſuch, is neceſſarily the conſtitutive Nature of the Son of God. Agreeably whereunto Origen calleth Virtue (h) ὑιὸν Θεȣ̃ ὑπὸ τȣ̃ Θεȣ̃ γεγεννημένην, The Son of God as being generated by God. It is generated by God in and for the generation of his Sons, and neceſſarily conſtituteth both Chriſt and Chriſtians the Sons of God, but with great and many Differences. For that which in us is Regeneration, is in Chriſt Generation. To us it is adventitious (a Non-eſſentiality)

(a) Petav. de Trin. l. 2. c. 4. S. 2. T. 4. l. 6 c. 6. S. 4. & l. 11. c. 9 S. 9. S. Aug. de Fid. & Symb. c. 4.

(b) Factus eſt homo ut homines faceret filios Dei, ut regeneraret in ſpiritu, ut fratres haberet adoptatos. Petav. T. 4. l. 2 c. 8. S. 2, 3.

(c) Idem. de Trin. l. 2. c. 10. S. 9. & l. 5. c. 7. S. 6, 7.

(d) Eſt participatio divinæ naturæ & ſecundum acceptionem hujuſmodi naturæ dicimur regenerari in filios Dei. Aquin. 12 Qu. 110. Art. 3.

(e) Remarks relating to the ſtate of the Church of the 1ſt Cen. p. 474.

(f) Ex eodem ſpiritu renati ſumus, ex quo natus eſt Chriſtus. Fulgent. de incarn. & grat. c. 20.

(g) De ipſo ſpiritu & hic renatus, de quo eſt ille natus. De prædeſt. ſanct. c. 15.

(h) C. Cel. l. 5. p. 258.

ality) to be the Sons of God, and ſo far divine Vertue is to us adventitious (non-eſſential:) but to the Perſon of Chriſt it is eſſential, to be a Son of God, and Divine Vertue is to him an eſſentiality, upon which account we muſt affirm, that in his Humane-divine Generation there was a communication of the Divine Nature and Eſſence (and alſo the production of ſuch a Son who is the divine Image and Similitude) although Scholaſtic Divines affirm the contrary.

III. A third generative Propriety is Similitude of Nature, whereby the Son is the live Image of the Father, as Adam begat a Son in his own likeneſs, after his Image, Gen. 5. 3. In proper natural Generation the Son is (i) viventis vivens imago, & ex patre natus non habet naturæ diverſitatem, a live-Image of one that hath life, and being born of him is without diverſity of Nature. The ſameneſs of Nature between Father and Son (according to S. Auſtin's Interpretation) the Fathers and Councils ſignify by the Term ὁμοούσιος, Conſubſtantial or Co-eſſential. (k) The Arians call us Homoouſians, becauſe in oppoſition to their Error we defend the Father and the Son, to be in the language of the Greeks Homoouſious, id eſt unius ejuſdemque ſubſtantiæ, vel ut expreſſiùs dicamus Eſſentiæ (quæ οὐσία Græcè appellatur) quod planius dicitur unius ejuſdemque Naturæ, that is, of one and the ſame Subſtance, or to ſpeak more clearly, Eſſence (which is called in Greek Uſia) which is more plainly thus expreſſed, of one and the ſame Nature. Of this identity of Nature (or Conſubſtantiality) between Father and Son the generation of Animals and the propagation of Mankind is a viſible inſtance; for the Son of a Man is of the ſame Eſſence and Humane Nature with the Father, which implieth his ſimilitude of Nature, and that he is the live Image and Effigies of his Father. Theſe Phyſiological Notices are applicable to the generation of the Son of God, and the Fathers in their Scholaſtic Theology have apply'd them thereto: but touching their method of applying them, I muſt propoſe it to be conſider'd by all Learned and Holy Men, whether it is not moſt extremely irregular? For they never inquire, what God of proper kind is, nor what is his ſpecific Determination, nor wherein the Image and Similitude of God (according to Chriſtianity) conſiſteth: but according to the Scholaſtic way of contemplating God (by way of Eſſence and Attributes) they conceive in their Minds the Attributes of the Godhead (Eternity, univerſal Potentacy, Omniſcience, Omnipotence and ſuch more) and theſe they affix to a ſecond Perſon, whom they call the Son of God, (l) and having ſo done, they pronounce him the full and perfect Image and Similitude of God. But if we ſhould hear the Courtiers ſay, the King hath begotten a Son, that is his perfect Image and Similitude, what Interpretation ſhould we make of this Saying? Should we ſuppoſe that this is the primary ſenſe of it, that this generated Son is the perfect Image and Similitude of the King in reſpect of Government, the Powers and Prerogatives thereof? So to interpret it is not the regular Method of underſtanding the Image and Similitude of the King (it is a beginning at the wrong end:) and alike irregular is the Scholaſtic Theology in underſtanding the Image and Similitude of God. For this is plainly the due Order and Method of proceeding. A Man generateth the Mankind of Sons, which as ſuch are his Image and Similitude; and God generateth the God-kind of Sons, which as ſuch are his Image and Similitude. A Man generateth Sons, which reſemble him as to his Mankind of Excellence, Perfection and Nobilitation; and God generateth Sons which reſemble him as to his God-kind of Excellence, Perfection and Nobilitation. The Divine Nature (the conſtitutive vital Nature of the Sons of God and their Eſſence as ſuch) is the God-kind of Image and Similitude of God, and conſtituteth the Poſſeſſors of it his live-Images (m) according to the Chriſtian Religion. And (ſeeing the Image of God in Glory is but Grace conſummate) there is not any Image of God that is conſtitutive of a Saint and Son of God but this alone. (n) And what a glory is it, to be God-like (as Saints and Sons of God?) If the divine Similitude appeareth and ſhineth in our Actions? The Philoſophers ſo far agree with the Chriſtian Religion, they place the Image and Similitude of God in Sanctity and Virtue according to that of Plato, There is nothing on Earth ſo like to God as the Soul of a juſt Man. (o) ὁμοίωσις Θεῷ, Similitude to God conſiſteth in being Holy and Juſt with Prudence. A temperate Man is to God a Friend, ὅμοιος γὰρ, for he is like unto him. In his Fourth of Laws, he ſaith, What practice is acceptable and ſuitable to God? one, even that which the old Saying implyeth, ὅτι τῷ ὁμοίῳ τὸ ὅμοιον φίλον ἂν εἴη, like is ever a Friend to like. Theſe plain and certain Notices which both Philoſophy and Religion furniſheth, were not unknown to the Fathers of the Chriſtian Church, but they are far from having made a due uſe of them in forming their Idea of the Son of God. For the Son of God is neceſſarily a Saint and Son of God, and therefore muſt become ſuch by his Generation into vital Sanctity (the living Image of God;) and as Clemens ſaith ſpeaking of Chriſtians, (p) ὑμεῖς μιμηταὶ χριστοῦ γίνεσθε, χριστὸς δὲ Θεοῦ, ye are imitators of Chriſt and Chriſt of God. Chriſtians by their Regeneration are the living Images of Chriſt, and the Perſon of Chriſt is by his Generation the live Image of God, which he is in ſuch a manner and meaſure, that he muſt be ſtyl'd in an holy religious Senſe (as will appear preſently) ὁμοούσιος καὶ ὁμοφυὴς, Co-eſſential and of the ſame Nature with God. Regenerate Chriſtians cannot be ſo called without great abatement, diſtinction and limitation of Senſe; Chriſt muſt be ſo ſtyled ſimply and without addition. But by theſe Terms (ὁμοούσιος καὶ ὁμοφυὴς) the Scholaſtick Divines mean, that the whole Scholaſtic Divine Eſſence and Attributes were communicated to him in his Generation, we ſuppoſe that thoſe Attributes were not plenarily communicated to him till his Exaltation to the Throne, and that then they were ſo Communicated; ſo that in the whole of it this Generation, Filiation and Paternity is the true and natural, the proper and the plenary.

IV. A fourth generative Propriety of the Son of God is, that his Production was not by making or creating (that exteriour way of Production) but that he was of or from the vital Eſſence or Subſtance of the Genitor by an interiour way of Production. The Terms of making, creating, generating (q) are ſometimes ſynonymous (ſuch an ambiguity there is in theſe Words) παιδοποιεῖν, creare liberos ſignify the Generation or Procreation of Children, and we read of Melito Biſhop of Sardis, that he wrote a Book περὶ κτίσεως καὶ γενέσεως χριστοῦ, touching the Creation and Generation

(i) Petav. de Trin. l. 2. c. 11. & l. 5. c. 8.

(k) Contr. Sermones Arian.

(l) Petav. de Trin. l. 2. c. 11.

(m) Matt. 5. 45. Eph. 4. 24. Col. 3. 10. Pet. 1 16. 1 Joh. 4. 7, 8.

(n) Quæ gloria eſt ſimilem Deo fieri? Si ſimilitudo divina manifeſtetur & luceat in actibus noſtris? S. Cypr. de bono patient.

(o) Petav. T. 3. de Op. 6. dier. l. 2. c. 4. S. 10.

(p) Strom. l. 2. p. m. 307.

(q) Petav. de Trin. l. 2. c. 1. & 10, S. 13. Thorndike Epil. B. 2. c. 17.

tion of Chriſt. But although in a large ſenſe (as they ſignify any Production) theſe Terms are ſynonymous, yet they are of a ſtricter Notion, and are ordinarily diſtinguiſh'd, as Irenæus ſaith (r) differentia eſt inter natum & factum, there is a difference between being born and being made, of which difference we have this account in the Scholaſtic Theology. (s) A Man is ſaid to make an Houſe, but to beget a Son; Effection or Creation is ἔξωθεν, exteriourly, Generation is ἔσωθεν, interiourly; the Production is in an interiour way in Generation and of the Subſtance of the Genitor, but that which is made or created by him is not ſo, but is only an external Work. In which account of the difference between Generation and Effection (or Creation) there is manifeſtly a culpable defect; for the Word Vital is wanting, which the Nature of the thing requireth, and without which this difference between generating and making is not intelligible. For in the Scholaſtic Theology Generation is defin'd (*) origo viventis à vivente, agreeably whereto (t) the Philoſophers have differenc'd generating from making. Generation is a vital Production both in reſpect of the Cauſe, the Product and the way of producing it; whence it is manifeſt, that the Son of God is of the vital Eſſence of God (whence his Nature is deriv'd) which vital Eſſence is vital Sanctity. His Generation therefore may be illuſtrated from the Generation (or Regeneration) of the Creature-ſons of God, who are (in ſome degree) erroneouſly called by Scholaſtic Divines (u) factæ non natæ genitæque imagines, ideoque naturam ipſam Dei & οὐσίαν, non participant, made, not born and generated Images (of God) and therefore they do not participate of the very Nature and Eſſence of God. Elſewhere they tell us (w) that the created Nature of Men and Angels is a certain participation of the Divinity; and if their Nature may be ſo called, their holy Nature muſt be called a participation of the very Nature of God. And although they are nothing more than Creature-ſons, yet in ſome reſpect they are born and begotten of God, and thereby become his born and generated Images. But the Scholaſtic Divines are willing, to decline theſe plain religious Notices when they treat of the Trinity (as not agreeing with their Philoſophy concerning it) whence the Alexandrian Cyril, although at other times he ſpeaketh the Scripture Language, and calleth the Regeneration of God's Children (x) Generation, yet in his Dialogues of the Trinity he ſaith, when we are adopted we receive Grace (y) ἐν γεννήσεως τάξει, inſtead of a Generation.

V. A fifth generative Propriety of the Son of God is, that his Generation is agreeable to that definition of Generation uſual in the Schools, (z) Origo viventis à vivente per principium conjunctum. It is the origination of what is vital from that which is vital by a conjunct Principle, whereby they mean a ſeminal vital Principle, which they ſuppoſe to be requiſite in all natural Generations, and ſo far they are ſound Philoſophers. But like the old Philoſophers they ſuppoſe alſo, that the Seed is the Matter out of which (in part) the body of the Fœtus is formed. Agreeably whereto (a) Smalcius (a Follower of Socinus) ſuppoſeth, that our Saviour's Body was not formed meerly out of the Subſtance of the Bleſſed Virgin, but that God on his part created ſome Matter in her Womb, which he added to her Subſtance and conjoyn'd with it, to conſtitute the Body of our Saviour, and ſo a true Man was generated, otherwiſe (as he conceiteth) this Man had not been properly the Son of God from his Conception and Nativity: But theſe are great Miſtakes in Philoſophy. For Modern Naturaliſts are ſatisfied, that the Seed of the Male giveth neither Matter nor Form to the Fœtus it ſelf; but like the Flint and Steel only ſetteth the Tinder on Fire as Dr. Harvey expreſſeth it. The ſeminal vital Principle of our Saviour's Generation was in the Womb of the Bleſſed Virgin (ſuch Seminal vital Principles are the Eggs not long ſince diſcover'd to be in Womens Wombs) but it had not exerted its Seminal vital Virtue, nor had a Fœtus been formed if ſhe had not been impregnated from above. Thus our Saviour's Generation as to his Humane Nature appeareth, to be agreeable to the uſual definition of Generation: nor is it otherwiſe with his Generation as to his Divine Nature. For although a material Seminal vital Principle cannot be ſuppoſed in ſpiritual vital Generation, yet there is ſomething analogous thereto in the Generation of God's Children. For they are begotten into Life by a principle of Life, and have a principle of Life ſpiritual as well as of Life natural. Their holy vital Virtues and Practices are from a vital Principle, which muſt be called an holy vital Nature conſtitutive of their Species. And becauſe this Holy vital Nature is the Seminal vital Principle in their new birth (analogous to the Spermatic vital Principle of our bodily Life) the Apoſtle calleth it their Seed. 1 Joh. 3. 9. Whoſoever is born of God doth not commit Sin; for his Seed remaineth in him and he cannot Sin, becauſe he is born of God. If there is a Seminal vital Principle in the Generation of God's Children as they are born of God, a principium conjunctum cannot be wanting in the Generation of the Son of God.

VI. A ſixth generative Propriety of the Son of God is, that he is natively the holy Empire's Imperial Son, and therefore the holy Imperial Lord the Son (which is Imperial Sanctity, a Divinity or Deity of Perſon) and therefore no Creature or Creature-ſon. So in Humane Kingdoms Like generateth Like, both in Kind and Degree; Subjects beget Subjects, and the Imperial Eſtate generateth the Imperial Son, and this is true natural and orderly Generation, Filiation and Paternity. Nor is it otherwiſe in the Kingdom of God, wherein God is The Holy Imperial Lord, and if he is a Father, he is The Holy Imperial Lord the Father, and conſequently his Son and Heir is of this Idea; he is natively according to the natural Order of Generation The holy Imperial Lord the Son. This Idea and generative Propriety is plainly ſignified by his Name The Son of God; for when the Pſalmiſt ſaith kiſs the Son, oſculo homagii, what can he mean by the Son (in the myſtical Senſe) but The holy Imperial Lord the Son? Throughout the new Teſtament (not only in ſome but in all places of it) this Name the Son of God manifeſtly ſo ſignifieth. For the Devil underſtood it to ſo ſignify, when in his Temptation, as he repreſenteth to our Saviour his nearneſs to God (who therefore would have an eſpecial care of his ſafety) ſo he alſo repreſenteth to him his Power over Nature and over all Creatures, which the Imperial Son of God muſt neceſſarily have. If thou be the Son of God command that theſe Stones be made Bread. When the Eunuch ſaith, I believe, that Jeſus Chriſt is the Son of God, what can be his meaning but that he believed, that Jeſus Chriſt is the Divine Im-

(r) L. 4. c. 29.

(s) Petav. de Trin. l. 2. c. 1. l. 5 c. 4. S. 8. & c 7. S. 1, 2.

(*) Ibid. l. 7. c. 14. S 1.

(t) Procl. in Tim. p. 91, 92.

(u) Petav. supr. l. 6. c. 5. S. 7.

(w) Ibid. c. 11. S. 2.

(x) Com. in Eſai. p. 608.

(y) Dial. 2. p. 439.

(z) Petav. de Trin. l. 5. c. 8. S. 8. l. 7. c. 14. S. 1.

(a) V. Bp. Pearſon on the Creed p. 337. Ed. 1.

perial Lord the Son, and therefore he would be his Subject and Religioniſt? So when the Apoſtles preach'd Chriſt, that he is the Son of God (to induce Men to be his Subjects and Religioniſts) this muſt neceſſarily be their meaning, that he is the divine imperial Lord the Son, which layeth a neceſſity upon Mankind to become his Subjects and Religioniſts. So this Name ſignifieth in all thoſe places, wherein it is ſynonymous with the Name Chriſt or Meſſiah; And ſo it ſignifieth in that of our Saviour, If the Son (the Lord of the Family the holy Empire) ſhall make you free, ye ſhall be free indeed. Sometimes the Son is not only diſtinguiſh'd from Men and Angels, nor only repreſented as of an higher Order than they, but of a contradiſtinct Party, they being of the Subject Party (Moſes but a Heb. 1. 14. and 3. 5. Servant, the Angels but miniſtring Spirits) but he is of the imperial eſtate (or Sovereignty) as the imperial Son and Heir, Heb. 1. 2. to whom it belongeth to ſit on the imperial Throne, and on the right-hand of the Majeſty on high. Heb. 1. 3, 8. His name the Son, ſignifieth him to be of imperial quality and condition in contradiſtinction to the ſervient Party of holy Men and holy Angels. For to which of the Angels ſaid he Heb. 1. 5, 8, 13. at any time, Thou art my Son? I will be to him a Father, and he ſhall be to me a Son? To which of the Angels ſaid he at any time, ſit on my right-hand? or Thy throne, O God, is for ever and ever? He is now fully poſſeſs'd of the ſupreme Soveraignty (as the Son) an eſtate of properly divine and creature-tranſcendent Sublimities, the imperial eſtate of the God-head (b) τὴν τοῦ πατρὸς βασιλείαν βασιλεύει ὁ υἱὸς, The Son reigneth in the ſame Kingdom-eſtate with the Father. Which tranſcendent imperial condition he hath obtained by inheritance, Heb. 1. 4. therefore he is natively the imperial Son the Lord the Son: which is to ſay, that he is natively a Perſon of Sanctity imperial, that it is Divinity and Deity of Perſon to be the Son of God (that Divinity and Deity of Perſon which the name importeth) and conſequently, The Son of God is no Creature nor Creature ſon, but the divine Lord the Son, or the divine imperial Lord the Son, which is the Meſſiah.

The Schools rightly affirm (c) Nulla poteſt dari creatura, quæ naturaliter ſit filia Dei, There cannot be a Creature, which hath naturally Filiation to God: For a Creature as ſuch can be no more than a Creature, and therefore it cannot belong to the nature or eſſence of it, to be a Saint or a Son of God. But it is otherwiſe with one whoſe Definition is The Son of God; whoſe Eſſence it is, to be The Son of God, and who is this ſpecies individua, the Son of God: who is his Son, ſo as to be the Lord the Son, is born of him (or begotten by him) ſo as to be the Lord the Son, and therefore is the only Son, the only begotten Son of God. The Multitude of Sons that are of the ſubject and ſervient Party, do not hinder, but that the divine imperial Son is the only Son in a threefold ſenſe, as being alone the Son, as being alone a Son, as being a Son that is the only one of God. He alone muſt be conjoined with the Father as the Son. He alone is a Son, ſo as not to be of the remote and diſtant and ſervient Party: And he alone is a Son in the proper plenary ſenſe (as having plenarily the Proprieties of Generation and Filiation;) for Creature-ſons are but mutilately and partially, in ſome reſpect and degree Sons (Sons not Sons, generated not generated) they have a Generation from God, yet ſo as to be of factive not generative Original, and ſo as to be no higher than Sons of the Creature-party. (d) We are many Sons, but this Son is not ſuch as we. For this is both a true and proper Son, by original, not by adoption: by reality, not nominality: by nativity, not creation. He is alſo the only or only begotten Son, as being a Son, that is the only one of God (the one Son his well-beloved, Mark 12. 6.) ſuch as the Hebrews call יחיד which ſignifieth unus & unicus ejus & unigena (e) but the Septuagint render it not amiſs ἀγαπητὸς, beloved, both becauſe an only Son is highly beloved, and becauſe a Son that ſtandeth ſingular and alone in the Father's Eſteem and Affection is ſo far and in ſuch ſenſe an only (or only begotten) Son. Such an only Son was Iſaac to Abraham, Solomon to David, Gen. 22. 2. Prov. 4. 3. and ſuch an only Son is the imperial Son of God, who ſtandeth ſingular and alone in his Father's Eſtimate, and ought to ſtand ſo in ours, as being of infinite Excellency, Precioſity, and Importance. His high Excellency and Dignity, together with his near and dear relation to God, the Apoſtle expreſſeth by ſtiling him his Son: but (as if this was not enough) he ſometimes ſpeaketh more emphatically, and ſtileth him his own Son, which ſignifieth (as his own blood) his Rom. 8. 3, 32. divine Son, who is ſingularly and uncommonly, peculiarly and appropriately, properly and plenarily, in the neareſt degree of Relation and Alliance his Son, and is not in any degree alien and foreign, as he would be, if he was a Creature, not a divine Perſon. Foul is the Error and Impiety therefore of degrading the Son of God into a Creature; and great is the Incongruity of ſuppoſing God to generate a Creature (or one that is but a Man) by true and proper and natural Generation; for by ſuch a Generation the Son of God muſt be from him, as the Scholaſtic Theology rightly affirmeth. But this Theology is in this point (in great degree) inconſiſtent with it ſelf, and (in ſeveral reſpects) muſt be confronted and oppos'd to a true and proper and natural Generation.

VII. For the ſcholaſtic Theology miſtaketh in its Paralleliſm of the Generation of the Son of God, and the Conſequence which it draweth from it. (f) A Man begetteth a Man, and God begetteth God. For what is it to be generated, but to be born of another into a ſimilitude of Nature? He that is begotten muſt have a Nature communicated to him from him that begetteth, and therein muſt be like unto him, not leſſer, not inferiour, as to the nature, eſſence or ſubſtance, as we ſee in the Propagation of Men and all Animals. The Son therefore cannot be generated leſſer or inferiour than the Father as to the divine eſſence and nature, and thoſe things which belong to the eſſence (or which belong to the Father as he is God) but being ὁμοούσιος, conſubſtantial or coeſſential (of the ſame ſubſtance) with the Father, he hath the ſame eternity, immortality, wiſdom, verity, bonity, immenſity, omnipotency (with ſuch more Attributes) by his Generation, and the very ſame Deity or Divinity. For there is not any thing at all in the Father, which is not communicated to the Son (in the Generation of him) ſave only his Paternity; and if any the leaſt Perfection which is in the one, was wanting in the other, he would not be God becauſe imperfect. Wherefore (g) the Son is born full from full, and

(b) S. Athanaſ. Orat. 2. in Arian.

(c) Gonet. Clyp. T. 1. Tr. 2. Diſp. 1. S. 2. p. 532.

(d) Multi nos filii Dei, ſed non talis hic filius eſt. Hic enim & verus & proprius eſt filius, origine, non adoptione: veritate, non nuncupatione: nativitate, non creatione. S. Hilar. de Trin. l. 3.

(e) Grot. N. t. in Joh. 1. 14.

(f) Homo hominem generat, & Deus Deum. Quid enim aliud eſt generari, quàm naſci ex altero in ſimilitudinem naturæ? Petav. de Trin. l. 5. c. 8. S. 2. l. 3. c. 3. S. 3, 13. l. 4. c. 5. S. 13. c. 16. S. 12. l. 5. c. 9. S. 4.

(g) Plenus è pleno natus eſt Filius, & perfectus à perfecto, totus ex toto, perfectus in Deitate. Ib. l. 5. c. 6, 7, 8, 9.

perfect from perfect, whole from whole, perfect in Deity. Thus the Catholic Fathers argue in their Diſpute againſt the Arians, (a Diſpute vitiated by an unholy Scholaſticiſm on both ſides) who ſuppos'd the Son not to be of the ſame Subſtance with the Father, but of an inferiour created Subſtance of another kind. They grounded themſelves upon this Maxim (their Faith was founded upon it) that abating the imperfection which is in humane Generation, there is the ſame true, proper, genuine and natural Generation, Paternity and Filiation in divinis which is amongſt Men, and that as a Man generateth a Man, ſo God generateth God. From whence they inferr'd, that the Son of God is generated in ſuch equality with the Father, that he is generated abſolutely perfect. But in this Argumentation (although they proceed upon a ſound Principle) they are miſtaken in their Paralleliſm; for the Generation of the Son of God is not parallel to an Animal's meerly generating an Animal, nor to a Man's generating a meer Man. It may be compar'd thereto, but this is not the due and Scriptural Paralleliſm; for it is a Father's generating the Son and Heir of his Family, and a King's generating the Son and Heir of his Kingdom, that is the Parallel of the Generation of the Son of God. From whence it followeth, that the Catholic Fathers are miſtaken in their Conſequence and in this their Doctrine of the Trinity, that all that belongeth to the Father as God (and therefore his Kingdom and Godhead-eſtate) is actually and plenarily communicated to the Son in his Generation, and in this ſenſe he is ſaid to be de Deo Deus, God of God (h) ἀΐδιος, ἀθάνατος, δυνατὸς, φῶς, βασιλεὺς, παντοκράτωρ, θεὸς, κύριος, κτίστης καὶ ποιητής, All that the Father is, eternal, immortal, potent, light, King, All-imperial, God, Lord, Creator and Maker. But is not the Generation of ſuch a Son extremely diſſonant from a Father's begetting the Son and Heir of his Family (who doth not beget him at firſt and immediately into the actual and plenary Poſſeſſion of his Inheritance) and from the proper natural regial Generation of a Son? Is it reaſonable, that the Catholic Fathers ſhould take and leave at pleaſure the proper natural Generation? So far as it agreeth with their ſcholaſtic Theories, ſo far they entertain it: but if it claſheth with them, they abandon it. For ſo a Synod telleth us (i) Solius divinitatis eſt, inæqualem filium non habere. It is otherwiſe in all other Generations and Filiations, only in the Deity the Son is generated, without an inequality to the Father. What now is become of the proper natural Generation in divinis? This is not to weigh by our own Weights, and to mete by our own Meaſures. The Fathers argue, that the Son muſt be generated perfect in Deity, becauſe he is the expreſs, natural, and generated Image of the Father; as if a King could not have a Son, that is his expreſs natural and generated Image, without communicating to him actually and plenarily in his Generation the Kingdom-eſtate. S. Athanaſius argueth (k) that Chriſt was not anointed to be made King, ἦν γὰρ ἀϊδίως βασιλεύων, for he was King and reigned from Eternity: But he ought to have argued contrariwiſe; becauſe it is certain, he was anointed to be made King, therefore he was not ſuch a King before to which an Unction is incompetible: Not ſuch a King as Euſebius aſſerteth, (l) That only begotten Logos of God coreigneth with his Father from infinite Ages to infinite Ages.

VIII. The Scholaſtic Theology that erroneouſly diſtinguiſheth two Generations (before mentioned) erroneouſly confoundeth two diſtinct Generations, the natural Generation of a King with the political, which maketh the Generation of the Son hugely unlike to proper natural Generation and to popular Affairs. For is there any thing more obvious in humane Affairs, than that Kings and Potentates have a twofold Generation and Nativity, a natural as Men, and a political as Kings? They are the Sons of God as Kings (m) and are generated by him as ſuch. Pſal. 89. 26, 27. He ſhall cry unto me, Thou art my Father. Alſo I will make him my firſt-born higher than the Kings of the earth. Each King of the Earth is look'd on as a Son of God; and ſo David Pſal. 2. as a King exalted by God is ſtiled his Son, and the time of his Inauguration, or taking Poſſeſſion of the Throne, is called the day of God's begetting him. So the Roman Emperours generally had two Natales or Birth-days kept, Natalis Imperatoris and Imperii; the firſt to commemorate his coming into the World, the ſecond his Advancement to the Imperial Dignity: and this is the true and proper regial Generation and Filiation. If therefore the Son of God is rais'd to the actual and plenary Poſſeſſion of the divine Sovereignty by the true and proper regial Generation and Filiation, it muſt be by a twofold Generation and Nativity, touching both which the holy Writers are not ſilent: but theſe holy-popular Notices belong to another ſort of Learning and Theology than that which the Fathers and Councils follow in their Doctrine of the Trinity. For they ſuppoſe, that the Son had the whole Deity communicated to him from Eternity, yet had but one Generation (that of the Subſtance of the Father) and in that one Generation nothing was communicated to him (as indeed by that Generation nothing more could be communicated to him) but only the conſtitutive Nature and Eſſence of God (whereby he is conſubſtantial with the Father:) as a Man hath but one Generation as a Man, and in that one Generation nothing more is communicated to him than the conſtitutive Nature and Eſſence of a Man. But if the Son of God was plenarily God from Eternity, that great Imperial Eſtate the Godhead-Eſtate muſt have been communicated to him from eternal Ages, and that Communication muſt have been a Generation as well as the Communication of the conſtitutive nature and eſſence of God; for it is one thing to generate a Man, another thing to generate a King.

IX. The Generation of the Son of God in the Scholaſtic Theology, is nothing like the proper natural Generation of the vital Subſtance of the Father. For it is but the Generation of a Notion by a Notion, and is any thing more unſubſtantial and umbratile? (n) The Scholaſtic Theology affirmeth, that the divine Generation is therefore a Generation truly and properly ſo called, becauſe thereby a word and notion of the Mind exiſteth. (o) A word of the Mind which is produc'd by Intellection. So S. Auſtin proveth, that the Son is equal to the Father from the manner of his Generation. (p) As ſaying himſelf (underſtanding himſelf) the Father generated a

(h) Petav. ſupr l. 2. c. 11. S. 5.

(i) Ibid. l. 5. c. 9. S. 7.

(k) Or. 2. adv. Arian. p. 171. Com.

(l) Ὁ μένγε τοῦ Θεοῦ μονογενὴς λόγος, τῷ αὐτοῦ πατρὶ συμβασιλεύων ἐξ ἀνάρχων αἰώνων εἰς ἀπείρους καὶ ἀτελευτήτους αἰῶνας. Or. de Laud. Conſtant. pag. 607.

(m) V. Dr. Hamm. on Pſal. 2. N. t. f. Petav de Trin. l. 3. c. 6. S. 7.

(n) Divinam productionem ideo generationem eſſe propriè vereque dictam adſtruit, quod per eum verbum ac notio mentis exiſtit. Petav. de Trin. l. 7. c. 14. S. 7.

(o) Verbum mentis quod cognitione producitur. Ibid. l. 5. c. 8. S. 7.

(p) Tanquam ſeipſum dicens pater genuit verbum ſibi æquale per omnia. Non enim ſeipſum integrè perfecteque dixiſſet, ſi aliquid minus aut amplius eſſet in ejus verbo, quàm in ipſo.

Word equal to himſelf in all things. For he had not ſaid himſelf perfectly and intirely if there was any thing more or leſs in his Word than in himſelf. But if we ſhould ſuppoſe with Tertullian, Lactantius, (and others of the Ancients) that the Abſtract Son was generated by external ſaying (Pronunciation) this would not be thought the proper natural Generation of the vital Subſtance of the Father; and it is not imaginable, that a Generation by internal ſaying is a more ſubſtantial or a more proper and natural Generation than that other by external ſaying. Yet with the ſcholaſtic Divines this Generation by internal ſaying is (q) the moſt formal Generation (r) the primary and archetypal Generation, of which humane Generation is but the ſimilitude and imitation. So that the Son of God (s) quia verbum ideo filius, is therefore the Son, becauſe he is the Word of the Mind. But it would be very difficult, for theſe ſcholaſtic Divines to perſwade the generality of Mankind, that the moſt proper Child of a Man is a Notion, the Child of his Mind, and the moſt proper way of begetting Children is by thinking, and that the moſt primary, proper and archetypal way of conceiving a Son is conceiving in the Mind, and that conceiving a Son in the Womb is but the ſimilitudinary and metaphorical (t) Some have compar'd the eternal Generation of the Son of God to Minerva's being born of Jupiter's Brain: but is this brain-conception and generation the proper natural generation of a Child of the Subſtance of the Father? S. Auſtin ſaith (u) Mens parens eſt notitiæ ſuæ (the Mind is the Parent of her own Notice) but his Phraſe is metaphorical. Sometimes theſe Theologers ſay (w) Hæc notitia velut partus quidam eſt, quæ idcirco gigni dicitur, This Notice is as a certain Child, which therefore is ſaid to be generated. (x) Productio verbi creati eſt quædam intelligibilis generatio, the Production of a created mental Verbum is a certain intelligible Generation. From which metaphorical Phraſeology it appeareth, that themſelves look upon the mental kind of Generation in created Beings as the improper and metaphorical. In conſiſtence with themſelves therefore and their own Rule (which is (y) to philoſophize de divinis by Analogy and Similitude to created Beings ſecluding Imperfections) they ought to ſuppoſe that the mental kind of Generation in divinis is the improper and metaphorical. Accordingly, they ſuppoſe, that in two divine Perſons the Generation of the Child of the Mind or Verbum mentis (z) is improper, and metaphorical: but in the Father they will have this Generation (of the Son of the Mind or Verbum mentis) to be the primary proper Generation. They are not tolerably conſiſtent with themſelves; for to prove the Propriety of the Son's Generation, they in conſort with the Fathers alledge ex utero ante Luciferum genui te, and they ſay (a) that the Phraſe ex utero is uſed to ſignify, that the Son is generated of the Subſtance of the Father (Quod enim hoc modo naſcitur, id ex generantis oritur ſubſtantia) for that which is this way generated, is of the Subſtance of the Parent. They ſay alſo (from Athanaſius) that by the Womb is ſignified, τὸ ἴδιον καὶ γνήσιον, that he is a proper and genuine Son. And they alſo affirm, (b) Non creatum, factumve, ſed eo productum modo, quo filii propagantur à patribus, Dei eſſe filium, that the Son of God was not created or made, but was produc'd in that manner, that Sons are propagated from their Fathers. They ſuppoſe therefore, that the Propriety of Generation conſiſteth in being the fruit of the Womb (not of the Mind) that the Conception in the Womb is the proper and ſubſtantial Conception, the Conception in the Mind is but the umbratile and metaphorical. So the terms of conceiving, and begetting, and being born, in common uſe and primary ſignification, relate to the Womb, and not to the mental-conceptional Generation of the Schools. The way of propagating Children both divine and humane is not in the notional way, thus therefore the Son of God was not generated.

X. The ſcholaſtic Theology can give no good Anſwer to that Objection which S. Hilary relateth, (c) There are many wiſe men of the World, whoſe wiſdom is fooliſhneſs with God, who when they hear God of God, true of true, perfect of perfect, and that one was born of one, contradict us as preaching impoſſible things; for they ſay, Naſci nihil potuit ab uno, quia omnis nativitas eſt ex duobus, there could be no birth of one alone, for every Nativity is of two; as in Ariſtotle, Male and Female are called φύσεως ἀρχαί, the Principles (or beginnings) of Generation. The ſame Father reporteth, (d) The envy of the Jews, the hatred of the Gentiles, the fury of the Hereticks, is chiefly excited againſt us upon this account, becauſe we confeſs the Son in the Father by virtue of eternal Generation. This is no great credit to the Article, to be the cauſe of infinite Miſchiefs to the Church of God, and to the Souls of Men; which yet muſt be born with, if it was really an Article of the Chriſtian Faith; and it would become us to anſwer Objections as S. Hilary doth, The Wiſdom of this World is fooliſhneſs with God. But ſeeing the revealed Word of God knoweth no ſuch Article, and it is at beſt but an Hypotheſis, whereby the Chriſtian Faith may be explained, it becometh wiſe Men to conſider, whether it be well done, to affix to their Religion ſuch an Article which ſpoileth the Recommendableneſs of it. The Aſſerters of it ought to provide ſound Anſwers to plain and ſound Reaſonings. Such Anſwers which are creditable to their Religion, and do not diſhonour it by ſcholaſtic Futilities, as Syneſius doth in his firſt Hymn, where he ſuppoſeth, that the Father brought forth the Son ὑπερουσίοις λοχείαις, by a ſuperſubſtantial Child-birth, which ſoundeth not like the Generation of the Son of the Subſtance of the Father. The Jeſuits are provided of another Anſwer; for ſome of them made a Creed, of which this was one Branch, (e) I believe in two Gods, of which one is both Father and Mother of the Son metaphorically in eternal Generation. With this Branch of the Jeſuit's Creed it may not be amiſs to conjoin a Branch of the Armenians Creed touching the Son of God. (f) As none knoweth his Eternity, ſo none can conceive his Being or Eſſence; for as he was Jeſus Chriſt from all eternity, ſo he is to day, and ſhall be for ever. Jeſus Chriſt was not born without a Father and a Mother; if therefore he was Jeſus Chriſt from all Eternity, one God (agreeably to the Jeſuits Creed) was both Father and Mother in the eternal Generation. So the ſcholaſtick Theology teacheth (g) that the Male is the principal in Generation, and therefore God is called the Father (becauſe he is the origin of the eternal Genera-

(q) Gonet. Clyp. T. 5. Diſp. 2. p. 168.

(r) Petav. ſupr. l. 5. c. 7. S. 8, 9.

(s) Ibid. l. 7. c. 14.

(t) Voſſ. de Idol. l. 8. c. 12. Gonet. ſupr. p 463.

(u) Petav. ſupr. l. 7. c. 13. S. 24.

(w) Ibid.

(x) Gonet. ſupr. p. 88.

(y) Ibid. p 84.

(z) Valent. T. 1. Diſp. 2. Qu. 1. punct. 1. p. 583.

(a) Petav. ſupr. l. 5 c. 7. S. 2, 4.

(b) Ibid. l. 2. c. 10. S. 1.

(c) De Trin. l. 2.

(d) Neque vel invidia Judæorum, vel odium Gentilium vel furor hereticorum, aliis potius adverſus nos cauſis eſt excitatus, quàm quod æternitatis virtute nomen filii confitemur in patre. De Concil. Arim. p. 29.

(e) Credo in duos Deos, quorum unus filii pater & mater eſt metaphoricè in generatione æterna. Hoornbeck Theol. pract. T. 2. in Præfat.

(f) Rycaut preſ. ſtate of the Armenian Ch. p. 413.

(g) Petav. de Trin. l. 5. c. 9. S. 15.

Generation, yet not without having ſomething of the Name and Propriety of a Mother; for he is ſaid ex utero genuiſſe. But it is a Maxim in this Theology, that the eternal Generation was without a Mother. Yet here we have ſomething of a Mother of God in divinis, where there can be no Impregnation, nor any ſeminal Principle, nor the Formation of any Fœtus but Idea's, nor the Production of any Son but a Word of the Mind, which is nothing like what Mothers call the Son of their Womb. But what are theſe ſcholaſtic Vanities (repugnant to the nature of things in Generation, and to the common ſenſe of Mankind concerning it) to a proper natural Generation?

XI. As in the Arian, ſo in the Platonic Scholaſticiſm, the Abſtract Son of God pretendeth not to a proper natural Generation. For although the Platoniſts ſay, that this ſecond God was generated by the firſt God or T'Agathon, yet by this Generation they mean only an Emanation; and therefore this ſecond God is ſtiled (h) αὐτοπάτωρ καὶ αὐτόγονος, a ſelf-parent and ſelf-begotten, becauſe they ſuppoſe, that in a proper ſenſe he was not generated, οὐ γὰρ ἐκείνου κινουμένου πρὸς γένεσιν τοῦ τούτου ἡ πρόοδος γέγονεν, for this God did not proceed from that firſt God as any way moved towards the Generation of him (for if there was any Motion, he would not be the ſecond God, but the third) but he muſt neceſſarily proceed from that Firſt as remaining quieſcent and immovable, οὐ προσνεύσαντος οὐδὲ βουληθέντος, οὐδὲ ὅλως κινηθέντος, not ſo much as actively conſenting thereto, nor at all willing it, or any way moved thereunto. Becauſe of this manner of his proceeding from the firſt God (by natural and neceſſary Emanation) he is ſaid to proceed αὐτογόνως, ſelf-begottenly. (i) The Platoniſts ſay of him ἑαυτὸν ἐξέλαμψε, of himſelf he ſhone forth, and he is ſtiled in an Oracle

> Αὐτοπάτωρ, ἀπάτωρ τε, πατὴρ, υἱὸς αὐτὸς ἑαυτοῦ
> Αὐτοφυής, ἀδίδακτος, ἀμήτωρ. ———
>
> Self-father, without Father, Father and Son of himſelf,
> Self-born, untaught, without a Mother. ———

With this Platonic Language none of the Chriſtian Name ſymbolize ſo much as Calvin and his Followers, who ſuppoſe the Son of God to be αὐτόθεος, God from himſelf: but they are condemned by the ſcholaſtic Theology of the Chriſtian Church, which in condemning them condemneth this Platonic Language and this abſurd Tenent, that the ſame Perſon is both his own Father and Son. But it is a Vanity, to condemn the Language of the Platoniſts, and yet to retain their ſenſe, or not to alter it to much better purpoſe than the School-Divines have done. For ſome of them ſuppoſe, (k) that the Son is from the Father only by way of Reſultance and Emanation, in ſuch a manner as the Properties of things have their Origin from the Eſſence (without any true and proper Action) and it is but reaſonable that theſe ſhould retain the Platonic Language, that the Son is from the Father αὐτογόνως, ſelf-generatively. Others of them ſuppoſe, that the Son is from the Father as a natural and neceſſary Emanation, by a natural and neceſſary Action (l) as Light is from the Sun and Heat from the Fire, which ſo ſoon as they exiſt, diffuſe their Light and Heat, and (having no Intellection or Preconception of what they do, nor Volition) always operate to the utmoſt of their power. But if God is the Father of his Son by proper natural Generation, they are related as Father and Son, and have the Rights and Dues of Father and Son in the ſenſe of Law and Morality; and conſequently it is the Father's doing (in the ſenſe of Law and Morality) that the Son doth exiſt, elſe he is not his Father in the ſenſe of Law and Morality, nor did he (in ſuch ſenſe) generate him, nor is he related to him as a Son, nor doth he owe unto him the Dues from a Son, nor may claim the Rights of a Son. And if it muſt be the Father's doing (in the ſenſe of Law and Morality) that the Son doth exiſt, or elſe he is not the Father, a natural and neceſſary Emanation by a natural and neceſſary Action cannot conſtitute any one a Father; for ſuch a Production is not imputable to him, nor can it be counted his doing in the ſenſe of Law and Morality. As if from a Man faſt aſleep ſuch a Child ſhould proceed, that is a natural and neceſſary Emanation by a natural and neceſſary Action, he would not be the Father of it (in the ſenſe of Law and Morality) and the caſe would be the ſame, if ſuch a Child ſhould ſo proceed from him when awake, if when awake he was as little concern'd in the Production of it as if he was faſt aſleep. He would be no more the Father of ſuch a Child (in the ſenſe of Law and Morality) than of a Platonic Son, that is from him αὐτογόνως, ſelf-begottenly. But ſome School-Divines ſometimes proceed a ſtep farther, and are willing to ſuppoſe (m) that the Father in ſome ſort willeth the Production of the Son (antecedently to his Production) and that the Son is of the Father per neceſſariam ac naturalem electionem by a neceſſary and natural Election, or (to raiſe no Diſpute about a Word) by a neceſſary and natural Volition excluſive of all Deliberation. But neither is this Production of a Son properly the Father's doing, and becauſe it is wholly unavoidable and indeliberate, without Counſel, End or Deſign, and in this Production no ſuch thing is intended, as that the Father (ſo called) ſhall have the poſſeſſion, uſe and diſpoſal of the Son, therefore the Son (ſo called) is ſui juris at liberty and his own diſpoſe, and the Father (ſo called) is not a certain ſuperiour Owner and Proprietor of him. But ſuch is every Father in proper natural Generation, wherein it is intended (at leaſt by God in nature) that the Father ſhall have a poſſeſſion, uſe and diſpoſal of the Son; and if God be the Owner of any thing (one would think) he muſt be the Owner of his own Son, and accordingly the Apoſtle ſaith, that Chriſt is God's, 1 Cor. 3. 23. The Son of God had his Production from a Charity tranſcendent to what belongeth to Creature-objects, yet ſo as to be produc'd for God; for if Chriſt was not God's, he could not be the Son and Heir of God; and he could not be God's, if in his Production he was not at all for him and to him. And ſeeing there is holy end and deſign in his Production, it could not be from a meer natural and neceſſary volition (ſuch as the volition or appetite of good in general which is in all Men) but muſt be from an holy virtuous Will (n) as the moſt ancient Writers of the Church ſuppos'd (although their Sentiment in this Point hath ſince been counted Hereſie) agreeably to what we ſee amongſt Men; for good Men beget Children by natural Inclination and Operation conjunct with an holy virtuous Will, which never excludeth Deliberation. If we ſuppoſe therefore, that the Generation of the Son of God is from ſuch a natural and neceſſary volition, which is but a ſort of natural neceſſity, ſo that naturally it cannot but

(h) Dr. Cudw. Intell. Syſt. p. 574.

(i) Gale in Jambl. p. 299, 300.

(k) V. Gonet. Clyp. T. 4. p. 53.

(l) Ibid. p. 51. Petav. de Trin. l. 6. c. 11. S. 11.

(m) Petav. ibid. l. 6. c. 8. S. 2[illegible].

(n) Ibid. S. 2.

but always be; if we ſuppoſe him to be from the Father as a natural and neceſſary Aporrhœa, or as Heat from the Fire (o) only ſuppoſing a natural and neceſſary volition to be in the Fire; we ſuppoſe ſuch a generation,* which is hugely diſſonant from the proper natural generation, and from the holy-virtuous volition and agency, which is too irrational and unholy to be competible unto God. And becauſe ſuch a Son of God ſo produc'd without end or deſign, cannot be his (in reſpect of Ownerſhip) as a Son is the Father's, therein he reſembleth the Platonic Son, of whom his Father (ſo called) cannot be the Owner, as a Father is of his Son, nor can ſuch a Son owe to his nominal Father any filial Duty.

XII. By the proper natural generation of a Son all that incommunicable Perfection which Paternity implieth, is preſerved intire, which by the ſcholaſtic generation of the Son (of God) is deſtroy'd. For although in ſeveral Sayings that occur in this Theology, the due difference between Father and Son may ſeem to be preſerv'd intire, yet theſe Sayings are contradicted by others, and if we conſider the Maxims of it (whereby we ought to make a judgment of it) they will appear to be ſuch, as manifeſtly deſtroy that incommunicable Perfection which Paternity implieth. For Paternity in the imperial eſtate of the Godhead implieth Self-exiſtence, abſolute Self-perfection, and Self-fullneſs, abſolute Supremacy, Liberty and Independence, Ownerſhip abſolutely univerſal, peerleſs Supereminence, abſolutely the fulleſt height of Dominion and Power, and to be abſolutely the firſt Cauſe and the laſt End; All which Perfections muſt be conſider'd as Peculiarities of the Father, incommunicable to the Son (without deſtroying his Sonſhip) and as ſuch they are Nobilitation and Perfection. That manner of having the Perfections of vital Sanctity (and other divine Perfections) which is peculiar to God the Father, and which his Paternity implieth, is Nobilitation and Perfection, and ſuch is alſo the Father's fecundity or generative and prolific Virtue, whereby he is generative of the Son (p) as ſome of the ancient Writers diſcourſe. But that which is chiefly remarkable touching the Peculiarities of God the Father, and which clearly illuſtrateth the Unity of God according to the Chriſtian Religion (although it plainly teacheth a Trinity in the Godhead) is that peculiar notion wherein God the Father is God. For it is he only whoſe definitive Name, Notion and Idea is God (the imperial eſtate of God or of the Godhead) which is to be God abſolutely and definitively. For although the Son is God, yet this is not his definitive Name, Notion and Idea, but The Son of God. Although the holy Spirit is God, yet this is not his definitive Name, Notion and Idea, but The Spirit of God. Only the Father is He, whoſe definitive Name, Notion and Idea is God, as (in ſome degree) appeareth from ſome good obſervations, which even Scholaſtick Divines have made. (q) In the Scriptures when the Name God is put abſolutely, at large, and without reſtriction, or the addition of any Perſonal Propriety, it ſignifieth the Father. As when the Apoſtle writeth: though there be many that are called Gods, whether in Heaven or in Earth, (as there be Gods many, and Lords many) to us there is but one God the Father, of whom are all things; and one Lord Jeſus Chriſt, by whom are all things, 1 Cor. 8. 5, 6. Theodorus Abucara obſerveth alſo, that the Son and the Spirit are related to the Father, as the Father is not related to them. For the Son is the Son of God and the Word of God, and the Spirit is the Spirit of God, the Finger of God. Τȣ̃ πατρὸς λέγονται, οὐχ ὁ πατὴρ αὐτῶν, They are ſaid to be the Father's, the Father is not ſaid to be theirs. They are ſaid to be his, as a certain Superiour owner's, (who accordingly ſendeth them) but ſo the Father is not theirs. The Son is God, but as a Perſon of the Trinity, (upon that account) The Father is God in Nature, antecedently to a Trinity. The Son is God, as being the Son of ſuch a Father (the Son of God:) but the Father is not God as being the Father of ſuch a Son, but in nature antecedently to any actual Paternity. All which Peculiarities of God the Father (imply'd in his Paternity) a proper natural Generation muſt neceſſarily preſerve intire and inviolate: but inſtead of preſerving them, the ſcholaſtic Theology in its Maxims plainly ſubverteth and deſtroyeth them. For in this Theology (r) potentia generativa is no branch of Omnipotency (s) The Paternity is counted no Perfection, but only a perſonal propriety, a relation and a notion, all perfection is in the eſſence (and what belongeth thereto) which is common to all the three Perſons. Whence every one of them is ſaid to be no leſs than the whole Trinity; the Son is no leſs than the Father and the Son together, and the Holy Spirit is the whole that himſelf the Father and the Son is; which cannot be thought very pious Miſtakes. (t) So Innaſcibility or Self-exiſtence (and conſequently Independence) is in this Theology accounted no Perfection, but only a Notion of the Father, of whom Cerealis ſaith, Patri non eſt auctoritas, quia voluntas nulla eſt. Pater enim nec volens, nec nolens genuit, ſed natura. The Father hath no Authority over the Son, becauſe he did not generate him by Will. For he did not generate him either willing or nilling, but by Nature. It is a principal Maxim in this Theology (u) That the Son in his Generation had the whole intire Deity communicated to him by the Father; not any the leaſt Perfection was in the Father, which was not communicated to the Son; all things were communicated (quæ patri quâ eſt Deus competunt) which belong to the Father as he is God. Agreeably to which fundamental Maxim (not to be thought on without amazement) ſome ſay (w) that in the Trinity of Perſons there is no order (without which the divine relations cannot be) no priority of dignity, one is not before or after another, nor is Numeration to be admitted here, that of firſt, ſecond, third.

XIII. To make a proper natural Generation no Generation, is a great Incongruity in the ſcholaſtic Theology, which aſſerteth a Production of diſtinct Perſons in the Godhead without any ſuch diſtinctneſs of eſſence, which is neceſſary to conſtitute diſtinct Perſons. The Fathers argue, As a Man generateth a Man, ſo God generateth God. This in their ſenſe is a bad Argument, and if they were Pagan Theologers they would proceed to argue with as good reaſon; As one Man generateth another Man, ſo one God generateth another God. But Chriſtian Divines underſtand, that the Suppoſition of more Gods than one is both impoſſible and irreligious. Whence their ſcholaſtic Theology ſuppoſeth, that there is but one infinite and abſolutely perfect uncreated Spirit, Mind and Eſſence, called God. That the Generation of the Son and the Proceſſion of the Holy Ghoſt cannot be the Production of more than one ſcholaſtic individual

---

(o) Ibid. S. 12.

(p) Ibid. l. 5. c. 6. S. 9.

(q) Ibid. l. 4. c. 15. S. 14.

(r) Gonet. Clyp. T. 5. p. 107.

(s) Petav. ſup. l. 10. c. 3. S. 1. 4. & l. 6. c. 7. S. 12, 14, 15.

(t) Ibid. l. 5. c. 1. S. 19. & c. 5. S. 12.

(u) Ibid. l. 3. c. 3. S. 3. l. 4. c. 16. S. 12. l. 5. c. 9. S. 4. l. 2. c. 11. S. 5.

(w) Idem T. 1. l. 2. c. 8. S. 11, 20, 21.

divine Eſſence and Attributes; for this would be a making more Gods than one. The Son therefore by his Generation is not ſuppos'd to have any individual Eſſence or Subſtance diſtinct from the Father, but only the ſame diſtinctly, ſo as to be a different mode of Subſiſtence or relative Property. And in this ſenſe the Son is ſuppos'd to be ὁμοούσιος (conſubſtantial or coeſſential with the Father) as having the ſame ſcholaſtic individual divine Eſſence or Subſtance with the Father, the communication whereof is ſaid to be his Generation. The intellectual nature of the three divine Perſons (their Underſtanding, Will and Power of Action) is ſuppos'd to be numerically one and the ſame, and abſolutely indiſtinct as that of one Man or one Angel. And this the Hypotheſis of a ſcholaſtic proper natural Generation implieth; which therefore inferreth this conſequence, that there can be no Production of a diſtinct Perſon or Perſons in divinis, and therefore no ſuch thing as Generation (which is the Production of a diſtinct Perſon) can be there. This will clearly appear by conſidering (1.) The ſcholaſtic Divines are not ſo unwiſe, as not to underſtand what they ſay, yet they univerſally acknowledge, that theſe myſterious things which they ſay touching the Perſons of the divine Eſſence (ſeveral Perſons that are of one and the ſame ſingular ſcholaſtic Eſſence without any diſtinctneſs of Eſſence) are to us unconceivable, that our Minds cannot reach them or form an Idea and Conception of them, but they are (x) extrà intelligentiæ conceptionem (beyond the conception of Intelligence) that their Myſtery of the Trinity is ὑπὲρ νοῦν, ὑπὲρ λόγον, above Underſtanding and Reaſon, ſo as to be unintelligible (which neither Men nor Angels can underſtand) fideique non perſcrutantis ſed recipientis, which is not a matter of human ſearch, but to be receiv'd by a Faith-ſubmiſſion. This is no ſmall blemiſh to their commonly received Maxims touching the divine Perſons, They plainly claſh with our Faculties and with the nature of things, and (ſo far as we can judge from the nature of things) are impoſſible as well as unintelligible. The Generation of the Abſtract Son of God is ſaid, not to be the Production of any Eſſence (or Subſtance) into Exiſtence, it is only the communicating (or giving) the ſcholaſtick divine Eſſence, ſo that the ſcholaſtic individual Subſtance and Attributes of one individual Perſon, without any Diminution, Diviſion, Multiplication, or Diſtinction of Eſſence, is communicated, and becometh the ſcholaſtic individual Subſtance and Attributes of another individual Perſon alſo; which is not any poſſible Communication: Nor is it poſſible, that any intelligent Mind ſhould have any Notion or Conception of it, but it is as a Word without ſenſe or ſignification. (2.) According to Logick it is peculiar to the ſecond Subſtances (genus and ſpecies) to be common and communicable, Subſtantia prima (the firſt or ſingular Subſtance) in plures non communicatur. (y) This Maxim the ancient ſcholaſtic Divines of the Church found in common Logick: but that they might introduce a ſcholaſtic Trinity, they were neceſſitated to diſcard it, and other plain Dictates of Reaſon. For the Eſſence of an individual Man muſt be conſider'd as it is ſpecific, and as ſuch it is common and communicable: It muſt be conſider'd alſo as it is individual, and as ſuch it is proper, uncommon, and incommunicable. To ſuppoſe therefore an individual Eſſence to be ſcholaſtically common and communicable, is a Contradiction to the Nature and Notion of its Individuality. And thence it is, that the Mind cannot conceive of ſeveral things having the ſame ſingular ſcholaſtic Eſſence without any diſtinctneſs of Eſſence. (3.) Curcellæus argueth, (z) That every thing is its own Nature and Eſſence. Every thing is conſtituted what it is, and diſtinguiſh'd from others by its proper Nature and Eſſence. If therefore the divine Perſons have not every one his proper Nature, but that which is numerically one common to all three, they are not three Perſons, but no more than one, which I cannot ſalve from being a Contradiction. The Followers of Socinus argue, A Perſon is an intelligent Being; therefore three Perſons muſt be three intelligent Beings. To this Argument the Anſwer is, (a) If it meaneth that there is no Perſon where there is no intelligent Nature to make it a Perſon, ſo we grant it. If it meaneth, that a Perſon implieth an intelligent Being ſeparated and divided from other Individuals of the ſame kind, as it is among Men, ſo we deny it as to the Perſons of the Trinity. But in theſe great Argumentations Fairneſs and Clearneſs ſhould be uſed, which is wanting in this Anſwer. For the ſcholaſtic Hypotheſis of the Trinity doth not only deny a ſeparate divided Nature to the ſeveral Perſons of the Trinity: (b) but a diſtinct individual Nature (Eſſence or Subſtance) without which there can be no ſuch diſtinct Perſons as the Father and the Son are. (c) Juriſconſulti perſonam appellare ſolent ipſam individuam hominis ſubſtantiam, The individual Subſtance of an individual Perſon is that which the Lawyers (in conſort with common ſenſe) call the Perſon. For this is that which conſtituteth, denominateth, and diſtinguiſheth the individual Perſon as ſuch, is the individual Perſon identically (as the individual Subſtance of an Animal is that Animal identically) and can be neither larger nor narrower than the individual Perſon. If therefore the diſtinct individual Subſtance which conſtituteth the diſtinct individual Perſon as ſuch, doth not exiſt, the diſtinct individual Perſon cannot exiſt; and conſequently the Father cannot be ſuppos'd to generate a Son, that is a diſtinct individual Perſon, if nothing of a diſtinct individual Subſtance be generated, nor is ſuch a Generation any thing like a proper natural Generation. (4.) It is one thing to conſtitute an individual Perſon as ſuch, and another thing to conſtitute him ſuch a Perſon, a Perſon of certain modes and relations, a Father or a Son, a firſt or a ſecond Perſon. An individual mode or a relative property may conſtitute him ſuch a Perſon; but becauſe it can do no more, it cannot conſtitute him an individual Perſon as ſuch, although we conjoin with it the divine Eſſence, which is ſuppos'd to be common; for this Eſſence is not ſuppos'd to conſtitute an individual Perſon as ſuch. The being an individual Perſon is in order of Nature antecedent to the being a firſt or ſecond individual Perſon, and therefore an individual Perſon as ſuch cannot be conſtituted by thoſe modalities. So the being an individual Perſon as ſuch (which alone is capable of the relations of Father and Son, terminateth and ſuſtaineth them) is in order of Nature antecedent to the being (d) a paternal or a filial individual Perſon, and therefore cannot be conſtituted by thoſe relative Properties, but the diſtinct Perſons of the Father and the Son muſt be conſtituted by a Diſtinctneſs of Subſtance. If we ſhould ſuppoſe two Modes of Subſiſtence, or two relative Properties in the conſtitutive individual Eſſence of an

(x) Petav. de Trin. l. 4. c. 13. S. 4.

(y) Idem T. 4. l. 6. c. 1. S. 3.

(z) De Ver. Trin. n. 55.

(a) Biſhop Stilling-fleet of the Trin. p. 75, 76.

(b) Petav. de Trin. l. 4. c. 13. S. 14.

(c) Ibid. l. 4. c. 4. S. 2.

(d) V. Petav. T. 4. l. 7. c. 4. S. 6.

Abſtract Intelligence, it would not thereby become two individual Perſons, but only one Perſon of two diſtinct Capacities. (5.) As one ſeeing Eye can conſtitute but one Oculiſt, ſo one Intellect can conſtitute but one Intellectualiſt; therefore three Intellualiſts (or Intelligents) cannot be conſtituted but by three intellectual Natures, without which the Trinity of the Godhead cannot be Perſons either in a vulgar familiar ſenſe, or in any artificial metaphyſical ſenſe; for if they are three diſtinct Perſons, they are neceſſarily three diſtinct Intellectualiſts and intellectual Natures, which in all ſuch Caſes wherein the Notion of a Suppoſitum is not needful to be conſider'd is the ſame thing as to be three diſtinct Perſons. To ſuppoſe them Perſons, not in a vulgar familiar Senſe, but only in an artificial metaphyſical Senſe (of our own deviſing) is a groundleſs Diſtinction, that doth not ſignify any thing, if in both Senſes three diſtinct Perſons muſt be ſuppoſed three diſtinct Intellectualiſts; and it doth not amend, but farther deprave the Scholaſtic Theology. For it maketh the Trinity not to be a Trinity of Perſons according to the Senſe of Mankind, nor according to the Senſe of the Scriptures, nor a popular-religious Myſtery, but only a Ternary of School-Philoſophy Trifles, a Trinity for Sophiſts, and not for Saints and holy People. So this Scholaſtic Account of the three divine Perſons, that they are nothing but original Mind knowing it ſelf and loving it ſelf, (Mens, Notitia, Amor) is no more a Trinity of Perſons than the Carteſian Tres modi cogitandi, which is but a Toy-Trinity (that may ſerve the Schools to play with) a Trinity of Cyphers, not of divine Perſons, of Religion and Sanctity. Acts are Perſons, Modalities are Perſonalities, at the ſame rate that thinking is generating, and ſuch a Trinity of Perſons there is in any one Perſon, Man or Angel.

XIV. The Scholaſtic Theology underſtandeth theſe Names Deus natus, Deus genitus, Deus de Deo natus, in a ſenſe inconſiſtent with any Generation, with proper natural Generation, and with the divine kind of Generation. For it underſtandeth the Word Deus in theſe Names, to ſignify God definitively and abſolutely, whence it argueth, that the whole intire Deity muſt neceſſarily be communicated to the Son in his Generation, and that he muſt be abſolutely perfect (becauſe he is God) which is to underſtand theſe Names in a ſenſe inconſiſtent with any Generation, which is wholly incompetible to a Being abſolutely perfect, of which Innaſcibility and Self-exiſtence are eſſential Attributes. It underſtandeth theſe Names in a ſenſe inconſiſtent with proper natural Generation; as if one ſhould underſtand this Name Rex natus & genitus, as it is the Name of the King's primogenit Son, to ſignify, that he is born perfect in Regality, that the whole intire Regality is communicated to him in his Generation, This would be an underſtanding the Name in a Senſe inconſiſtent with proper regial generation. As Rex natus & genitus, ſo Deus natus & genitus, is the Honourary Title of our Saviour, and both theſe honourary Titles ſignify his Birth-nobilitation. They ſignify alſo in what Notion (with what Limitation and Diſtinction of Senſe) our Saviour is King and God. For as he is Rex not ſimply and without addition, but as Rex natus & genitus, (as the regial Son of the King:) in like manner he is Deus, not as Deus ſimply and without addition, but as Deus natus & genitus, that is, as the Imperial Son of God. He is not God in an extravagant Scholaſtic Senſe, but he is God as the Son, and as is competible to the Son. He is God as the Son and Heir of the Godhead, (much like to an Heir in Common-Law-ſenſe) and he is God as the Son, (or as being the Son) of and in the Chriſtian Godhead, which conſiſteth of Father, Son, and Holy Ghoſt. He is God, (e) εἴσω τε πως ἐςὶ τῶν τῆς θεότητος ὅρων, and is as it were within the Boundary of the Godhead, not Creature, no leſs than God, God ſo as to be of the Godhead, of the Godhead-party, (contradiſtinct to the Creature-party) and for theſe Reaſons ought to be ſtiled God the Son, to ſignify his Creature-tranſcendence, and that he is no Creature-ſon. Creature-ſons have an holy and divine kind of Generation from God, and ſo hath the Creature-tranſcendent Son; but they are begotten and born of God only ſo far as to be Saints; he hath a divine Generation ſo far as to be King of Saints, and therefore is Deus de Deo natus God born or begotten of God. Agreeably to this divine Generation of a Son wherewith Chriſtianity is well acquainted, our Saviour's being Deus de Deo natus muſt be interpreted, from which the Scholaſtic kind of generating a Son is altogether alien. And its miſunderſtanding theſe Names muſt be counted a πρῶτον ψεῦδος, one of its grand fundamental Miſtakes, which is the Origine of innumerable other.

CHAP. IV.

1. A fourth ſort of Arguments to prove the Truth of our Idea of the Son of God from the Proprieties of his Sanctity. The firſt Propriety. 2. The ſecond Propriety. 3. The third Propriety. 4. The fourth Propriety. 5. The fifth Propriety. 6. The ſixth Propriety. 7. The ſeventh Propriety. 8. The eighth Propriety, with a ſummary Idea of the Chriſtian Trinity. 9. The Diſſonances of the Scholaſtic Theology. The firſt Diſſonance. 10. The ſecond Diſſonance. 11. The third Diſſonance. 12. The fourth Diſſonance. 13. The fifth Diſſonance. 14. A Conſectary from it.

1. A Fourth ſort of Arguments to prove the Truth of our Idea of the Son of God, we will deduce from the Proprieties of his Sanctity, the Conſideration whereof ſheweth, that his Idea belongeth not to Metaphyſicks or the Scholaſtic Theology, but to the Science of Sanctity, to which the Idea of God, and of a Saint or genuin Son of God neceſſarily belongeth. He is the Son of God according to Chriſtianity, which is the Science of Sanctity; therefore his Idea belongeth thereunto. And becauſe his Idea belongeth to Nobility-learning, it muſt neceſſarily belong to the Science of Sanctity, which is the Scripture-Nobility-Learning. Every Idea of the Son of God therefore that is form'd in Metaphyſicks and the Scholaſtic Theology, is of Kind and Quality ſpurious and illegitimate. For it cannot be his Idea, (f) Qui Sanctitas eſt & Communicatio catio Patris, who is Sanctity and the Communication of the Father. From his Sanctity it appeareth, that he is a Saint of God-kind of Son of God, and from the Proprieties thereof it appeareth, that he is a Saint of God-kind of Son of God, ſo as to be (in a legitimate ſenſe) God the Son, not a Creature-ſon. Lactantius ſuppoſeth, that (g) having perform'd his Magiſtery and the Legation of God, becauſe of that Virtue which he both taught and practiſed, he might be and deſerv'd to be accounted God by all Nations.

(e) S. Cyr. in Johan. p. 229.

(f) Didym. de Spir. Sanct. l. 1.

But there is not ſo much Reaſon to account him God becauſe of that Sanctity which he taught, as becauſe of that Sanctity which he is. For (in the firſt place) it muſt be ſaid ſimply and without any Limitation of Senſe, Sanctity is that which he is as his proper kind of thing, Good and Excellency, which cannot be ſaid of any Creature-ſon, Man or Angel. For Sanctity is not Gabriel's or Raphael's kind of thing as ſuch, nor the Petrian and Paulian kind of thing as ſuch, theſe muſt be conſider'd as other kind of Perſons than Sons and Saints of God, as they are Perſons of ſuch Names, they are but common angelical and human kind of Perſons, and therefore we cannot ſay of any one of them ſimply without Limitation of Senſe, Sanctity is that which he is as his kind of thing. Nor can any one of them ſay, I quà I am that Perſon of Quality a Saint or Son of God, I am ſuch ex propriâ naturâ & eſſentiâ ſpecificâ, by my proper ſpecific Nature and Eſſence. An Angel-Perſon or a Man-Perſon is not as ſuch that Perſon of Quality a Saint or Son of God. An Angel is the Angelical Nature, and the Angelical Nature is an Angel; a Man is the Human Nature, and the Human Nature is a Man, but the Divine Nature is not the Conſtitutive of their Species, they are not it as ſuch, it is not they; nor is Man or Angel ex propriâ ſpecie perſonæ, a Saint or Son of God; for this is not his proper kind of Perſon. If Men or Angels are the Saints and Sons of God, they are rightly counted more than meer Men or Angels, and are called by the Fathers (h) Dii adoptati ac Filii, adopted Gods and Sons. But the Son of God is no ſuch adopted Son, nor can be conſider'd as a meer Angelical or Human kind of Perſon, but he muſt be conſider'd as a God-kind (a Divine-vital-kind) of Perſon. If we may ſay of any Creature-ſon, (Man or Angel) as he is a Saint or Son of God, Sanctity is that which he is as his kind of thing, yet this we cannot ſay of him ſimply, without Limitation of Senſe; but ſo we muſt ſay of the Son of God, Sanctity is that which he is as his kind of thing or reality; for as it is the God-kind of thing, ſo it is the Son of God-kind of thing. Sanctity is that which he of proper kind is (as being of proper kind that Perſon of Quality a Son of God) it is his ſpecific Nature, as it is God the Father's, which plainly demonſtrateth that he is no Creature-ſon; for he is of proper Kind and Species a Perſon, not of the common Angelical or Human Species, but of the God-kind and Species, and therefore not any thing leſs, not any thing elſe than of proper Kind and Species a Perſon of the Creature-tranſcendent Kind and Species. This ſpeaketh him the Divine Kind of Lord the Son, (or of proper Kind God the Son); for as he muſt be Man that of proper Kind and Species is a Perſon of the Man-kind and Species, ſo he muſt be God (not leſs than God) that of proper Kind and Species is a Perſon of the God-kind and Species. If St. Paul was a Man, ſo as to be of proper Kind and Species a Perſon of the God-kind and Species, he could not be a Man without being God, and therefore he would be both God and Man in one Perſon, which is the Perſon of our Saviour, who is neceſſarily a God-kind of Perſon, ſuch a God-kind of Perſon, who is the Lord the Son. His being Man doth not hinder him from being God (of proper Kind and Species a Perſon of the God-kind and Species:) nor doth his being God hinder him from being Man, but it hindreth him from being of proper Kind and Species a Perſon of the common Human Species, becauſe he is not a Perſon without being of proper Kind and Species a Perſon of the God-kind and Species, or without being God. His Human Nature, if it was alone, might conſtitute a Perſon, but it could not conſtitute his Perſon. His Human Nature therefore cannot ſubſiſt as his Human Nature, (the Human Nature of his Perſon) but in Conjunction with his Divine Nature, ſo conſtituting the Perſon of Deus-Homo, or Homo-Deus; for which Reaſon he cannot be conſider'd as a meer Human-kind of Perſon, but muſt be conſider'd as a God-kind of Perſon, (a God-vital kind of Perſon) as being Deus natus ac genitus, or The Imperial Saint of God-kind of Son, The holy Empires Imperial Son.

II. Nothing but Sanctity is that which he is as his kind of thing, good and excellency. His genuin Idea is beſt underſtood from the Matters of Chriſtian Sanctity, (the Learning of it, the Life of it, the State of it, the Settlement, Inſtitution, Law and Diſcipline of it, the Kingdom and Government of Sanctity Imperial) for theſe are the All that he is (as his kind of things) in himſelf and to us. His Honour and Nobility is no other than Sanctity, his Riches are only thoſe of the Kingdom of Sanctity, and the only Benefit that cometh by him, is to be a Saint of God. His Goods and Excellencies are of an oppoſite kind to the common, human and mundane kind of Goods and Excellencies (ſecular Learning and Policy, Wit and Eloquence, Splendor and Gallantry, Riches and Power, and in due degree they are oppoſite to mundane Virtue and Religion) thoſe are the Saint of God-kind of Goods and Excellencies, which ennoble the Excellency of the knowledge of Chriſt, ſuch as none diſcern and reliſh, like and love, but they that are touch'd from above and imbu'd with a divine Sentiment, Matth. 16. 17. Joh. 1. 13. If he had been a ſecular and mundane kind of Meſſiah, he muſt have brought us ſecular and mundane kind of Goods and Excellencies, but with theſe the World was ſufficiently furniſh'd before his coming, it needed only the true and choice and ſaving Goods and Excellencies, and theſe only are to be found in him. Not any thing that might ſignally recommend him to the natural Man's Eſteem, not any thing that he doateth upon and glorieth in, not any thing taking and plauſible to him appear'd in Chriſt when he was in the World, but only ſpiritual and divine kind of Excellencies ſtript naked (as it were) of the mundane Goods and Excellencies. (i) Inops, nudus, humili loco natus, ſine oſtentatione humanæ ſapientiæ, ſimili coborte hominum comitatus, Indigent, naked, born in a mean place, without Oſtentation of Human Wiſdom, attended by a Train of Men of the like Character, ſuch was the Appearance of the Son of God in the World, which ſheweth that he is unto us no other Goods and Excellencies but only the God-kind of Goods and

(g) Magiſterio ac Dei legatione perfunctus, ob eam ipſam virtutem quam ſimul & docuit & fecit ab omnibus gentibus & meruit & potuit Deus credi. l. 4. c. 16.

(h) Ap. Petav. de Trin. l. 2. c. 10. S. 10.

(i) Viv. in S. Aug. de C. D. l. 7. c. 21.

and Excellencies, nor is he any other in himſelf (as his kind of Goods and Excellencies) which ſpeaketh his Sanctity and Divinity of Perſon, that he is of proper Kind and Species a Perſon of the God-kind and Species.

III. As Sanctity is the All that he is, ſo (in the ſenſe of Perfection and Indeficiency, without any Abatement or Diminution) he is the All of Sanctity. And this he is as the Son of God the Father, whoſe Godhead is in the State of Derivation, ſo that in Conjunction with God the Son is vital Sanctity in the infinite fulneſs thereof, and ſo all Sanctity is in him, which the Apoſtle's Words muſt neceſſarily import, when he attributeth to him an immenſe fulneſs, Col. 1. 19. It pleaſed the Father, that in him ſhould all fulneſs dwell. Col. 2. 9. In him dwelleth all the fulneſs of the Godhead bodily. Eph. 1. 23. The Church is his Body, the fulneſs of him that filleth all in all. As he is a Saint of God-kind of Son, vital Sanctity is his conſtitutive Nature, of which a Creature-ſon can have only a certain meaſure, and he that hath only a meaſure of it is no more than a Creature-ſon. But as the Council of Frankford rightly determineth (k) Chriſtus naturâ unctus, nos per gratiam, quia in illo plene fuit divinitas, Chriſt was anointed by Nature, we by Grace, becauſe the Divinity was in him in fulneſs. So the Schoolmen and the Fathers agree, that he is not anointed by ſome Participation of Sanctity, Sed ipſamet Sanctitate per eſſentiam, quæ eſt Divinitas, but by eſſential Sanctity it ſelf, which is the Divinity. (l) Per gratiam unionis fit communicatio totius divinitatis & totius ſanctitatis divinæ, By the grace of Union a Communication is made of the whole Divinity, and the whole divine Sanctity. A modern Scholaſtic aſſerteth (m) an immenſe and infinite Plenitude of Grace and Sanctity in the Human Nature of Chriſt, and rightly deriveth it, not only from his Unction to be the Meſſiah, (although it muſt be derived from thence alſo) but from his Human-divine Generation, as Caſſian doth. (n) He is the Son of God, becauſe begotten and conceived by the Divinity. And if he is the Son of God, he is certainly God. And if he is God, the Grace of God is not wanting in him. All Grace therefore is in him, all Virtue, all Power, all Divinity. In his Conception all divine Virtue, all fulneſs of Divinity came into him. Whence he had his Origin thence he had the Perfection of all Divinity. So the Evangeliſt attributeth to the only begotten Son of God as ſuch the fulneſs of Grace, Joh. 1. 14. which fulneſs of Grace cannot be meant of ſuch a narrow meaſurable fulneſs as denominateth holy Men and Women full of Grace: but it muſt be underſtood of ſuch a fulneſs as beareth a proportion to the fulneſs of God the Father; for the Evangeliſt ſaith, We beheld his glory, the glory as of the only begotten of the Father, full of grace. All the Grace and Holineſs that we have is but a ſomething of that fulneſs which he is; for of his fulneſs have all we received, and grace for grace. His fulneſs denoteth, according to Origen, (o) τὴν ἀκρὴν μετοχὴν τῆς θεότητος, The higheſt and fulleſt Participation of the Godhead, who alſo ſtyleth the Abſtract-ſon ἡ περιεκτικὴ πασῶν ἀρετῶν ἀρετὴ, A Virtue that compriſeth all Virtues. And Clemens ſaith, (p) All the Powers of the Holy Spirit collected into one, concur to one thing, to be the Perfection of the Son. (q) We ſaw the Glory (as St. Chryſoſt. paraphraſeth the Evangeliſt) not of a Prophet, nor of an Angel, nor of an Archangel, nor of the Powers above, nor of any other created Nature, but of the Lord himſelf, of the King himſelf, the genuin only begotten Son, the Lord of all himſelf, whoſe fulneſs is called by this Father ἄβυσσος ἄφατος καὶ πέλαγος ἄπειρος, a bottomleſs Abyſs and boundleſs Sea. His fulneſs is abſolutely undiminiſhable and inexhauſtible, how much ſoever of it is communicated it is not leſſen'd or impair'd thereby, (as if we light Thouſands of Lamps at a Fire, the Fire is not thereby impair'd or diminiſh'd) which ſpeaketh his fulneſs abſolutely immenſe and immeaſurable. So ſome (ſpeaking with reſpect to Chriſt's Prerogative) have ſaid of the Bl. Virgin, (r) Singulis ſe gratia eſt largita per partes; Mariæ verò ſimul ſe totam dedit gratiæ plenitudo. To every one of the Saints Grace was given by Parts or Portions, but to Mary the whole Plenitude of Grace was given at once. He that was born of her is the Plenitude of Grace and Holineſs, which in Church-Writers is ſometimes called (s) Plenitudo Divinitatis, the fulneſs of the Divinity. The Divinity (vital Sanctity) is communicated to him as much and as far as it can be communicated, and conſequently in the immenſe and boundleſs fulneſs of it, without which he could not be qualify'd to be the Origin of the Creature-ſons of God. They are as leſſer Stars, or rather as Planets, that ſhine by a borrowed Light: He is as the Sun, ſuppoſing the Sun to be the Fulneſs as well as the Fountain of Light. But this fulneſs muſt be diſtinguiſh'd into Native and Dative. That which we clearly diſcern to have been given him in the conferring on him the Officiary Dignity of the Meſſiah muſt be called Dative, but what is otherwiſe muſt be counted his Native fulneſs, as natively appertaining to the Excellency of his Perſon. And this being an immenſe fulneſs of vital Sanctity demonſtrateth that he is no Creature-ſon, but is of the Godhead.

IV. Vital Sanctity (in the immenſe fulneſs of it) is his Eſſence, which alſo demonſtrateth that he is no Creature-ſon. For Sanctity is not eſſential to Men or Angels, or any Creature. It is eſſential to them as they are Saints, but it is not eſſential to any of them to be Saints. It is their Nature and Eſſence as they are holy Men and holy Angels, but it is not their Nature and Eſſence ſimply and without addition. It is not they, they are not it, but only have it (a ſomething of it) and may exiſt without it; for they are good and holy (t) κατὰ συμβεβηκὸς καὶ ἐξ ἐπιγεννήματος, preter-eſſentially and adventitiouſly. Agreeably to which Imperfection of Creatures the Arians having called their Abſtract-ſon of God κτίσμα, a Creature, they ſuppos'd (a Party of them at leaſt) that he was mutable and defectible. In Oppoſition to which monſtrous Conceit the Catholic Fathers (u) attribute even to Chriſt Jeſus (who is Man) Ἀναμαρτησία, (Impeccancy) in this ſenſe, That he was beyond all Poſſibility of ſinning. Which Propriety of his Sanctity will be readily acknowledg'd by all that have honourable Thoughts of their Saviour, and therefore to them it is a Demonſtration of his Creature-tranſcendency; for every Creature is neceſſarily in its own Nature peccable, mutable, defectible. But to the Divine Imperial Son of God the Divine Nature in immenſe fulneſs is Eſſence, which Divine Eſſence is to his Perſon perfect Holineſs; for it is a Contradiction to ſuppoſe him deficient

(k) Gonet. Clyp. T. 12. p. 5, 7. Petav. T. 4. l. 11. c. 7. Vaſq. in 3. par. Th. T. 1. Diſp. 41. c. 3.

(l) Gonet. ibid. Diſp. 20. Art. 1.

(m) Petav. ſupr. c. 5. S. 2, 7. & c. 6. S. 6.

(n) Dei filius quia & à Divinitate genitus & à Divinitate conceptus. Si autem Dei filius, ergo indubitanter Deus. Si autem Deus, ergo gratia Dei non carens.——Omnis ergo in eo gratia, omnis virtus, omnis potentia, omnis divinitas.——Omnis in ipſa ſtatim hominis conceptione Dei virtus, omnis divinitatis venit plenitudo. Inde enim illi omnis divinitatis perfectio, unde & origo. Petav. ibid. c. 9. S. 8.

(o) Grot. Not. in Joh. 1. 16. Orig. c. Celſ. l. 5. p. 258.

(p) Πᾶσαι αἱ δυνάμεις τοῦ πνεύματος συλλήβδην μὲν ἕν τι πρᾶγμα γενόμεναι, συντελοῦσιν εἰς τὸ αὐτὸ τὸν υἱόν. Str. l. 4. p. m. 391.

(q) In Johan. Hom. 12. & 14.

(r) P. Chryſol. Ser. 143.

(s) Grot. Not. in Col. 1. 19. Petav. T. 4. l. 8. c. 12. S. 17.

(t) Orig. c. Celſ. l. 6. p. 305.

(u) Petav. T. 4. l. 11. c. 10.

in Holineſs, whoſe Eſſence is Holineſs in infinite fulneſs, and without Deficiency. As God is holy in ſinleſs Perfection by Nature, becauſe the Divine Nature (vital Sanctity) is his Nature, ſo is the Son of God; whence the ancient Writers ſay (w) that he was φύσει κακίας ἀλλότριος, by Nature alien from all Sin and Wickedneſs, φυσικὴ δικαιοσύνη, natural Righteouſneſs, John Baptiſt, ἔργον ἦν δικαιοσύνης, was the Work of Righteouſneſs, Ἰησοῦς δὲ φύσει, but Jeſus was by Nature, Gratia ipſa fuit illi homini naturalis, quæ nullum peccatum admittere poteſt. Sinleſs Holineſs was in him as Heat in the Fire or Cold in the Snow, which cannot be otherwiſe affected. (x) Aliter de igne, aliter de ferro calidi nomen accipimus, quia ignis per ſe calet. Grace and Holineſs is in Chriſt as Heat is in the Fire, not as it is in Iron. Yet this Similitude the ancient Writers make uſe of to good purpoſe. For to ſignify that Chriſt's Human Nature was altogether holy they compare it to a red hot Iron and a live burning Coal, which is not hot meerly by the quantity of Heat, but by the Subſtance of Fire receiv'd into it and pervading it. They illuſtrate it alſo by ſuppoſing the Region of the Air to be a Region of Fire, and a Globe of Iron to be plac'd in this Region of Fire, which thereby becometh altogether fiery, yet retaining the Nature of Iron; ſo the Human Nature of Chriſt by its Union with the Divine (yet retaining the eſſential Properties of Human Nature) becometh holy and divine.

(w) Ibid. c. 7, & 10, & 12.

(x) Macrob. in ſom. ſcip. l. 2. c. 15.

V. His unbounded fulneſs of vital Sanctity is in him with reſpect to us primarily and originally. (y) For this Son of God far tranſcendeth every one that becauſe of his Virtue is called a Son of God, for he is as it were the Origin and Fountain of ſuch. He is ſet as it were the Root and the firſt Fruit of thoſe that are reformed to newneſs of Life in Spirit. He is the new Man in himſelf, and in his Religion and Diſpenſation of Things he is the new Man unto us; nor is the new Man of Grace and Holineſs to be gained otherwiſe than by his Religion, who is conſtituted the publick Bank and Treaſury of Grace and Holineſs, (whence the indigent World may be ſupply'd) the Head and Principle of new Mankind, (as the firſt Adam was of the old) the Head of the Church of the Regenerate, who have an Unction from the Holy One, that was himſelf (like Aaron) anointed with the precious Oil, and datively filled, that he might fill all things, Eph. 4. 10. Some object, that if Chriſt was God by Nature, it was ſuperfluous and needleſs for God to give unto him the Holy Spirit; and probably ſome will make this like Objection. If Chriſt was natively the unbounded fulneſs of Grace and Holineſs, it was ſuperfluous and needleſs to make him datively ſuch. But it muſt be conſider'd that he ought to be the immenſe fulneſs of Grace and Holineſs both becauſe of his Nature and his Place. He muſt be natively the immenſe fulneſs of vital Sanctity as being a Perſon of this high Worth and Excellency, the only begotten Son of God. And he muſt be datively the immenſe fulneſs of the Spirit of Holineſs as being by Officiary Dignity God's Meſſiah; for him hath God the Father ſealed (appointed him to be the Meſſiah and Saviour of the World) Joh. 6. 27. He muſt be authoriz'd and every way furniſh'd by God, and ſuch an Oeconomy muſt be us'd towards him as is fit to be us'd towards a Perſon of ſuch a place, and conſequently he muſt caſt out Devils and be rais'd from the Dead as God's Meſſiah by the Spirit of God.

(y) Οὗτος δὲ πολλῷ καὶ μακρῷ διαφέρει παντὸς τοῦ διὰ τὴν ἀρετὴν χρηματίζοντος υἱοῦ τοῦ θεοῦ, ὅστις ὡσπερεὶ πηγῆς καὶ ἀρχὴ τῶν τοιούτων τυγχάνει. Orig. c. Celſ. l. 1. p. 44. ῥίζα δὲ ὥσπερ καὶ ἀπαρχὴ τιθέμενος τῶν εἰς καινότητα ζωῆς ἀναμορφουμένων ἐν πνεύματι. S. Cyr. Alex. T. 5. p. 691.

VI. He is vital Sanctity it ſelf, (the things themſelves which vital Sanctity is) which ſpeaketh him to be no Creature-ſon. In the ancient Writers of the Church the Son of God is called by many abſtract Names, (z) αὐτοσοφία, αὐτολόγος, αὐτοδύναμις, αὐτοφῶς, αὐτοαλήθεια, αὐτοδικαιοσύνη, αὐτοαρετὴ, αὐτοαγιασμὸς, αὐτοζωὴ, αὐτοπηγὴ, αὐτορίζα, Wiſdom it ſelf, Logos it ſelf, Power it ſelf, Light it ſelf, Truth it ſelf, Righteouſneſs it ſelf, Virtue it ſelf, Sanctification it ſelf, Life it ſelf, The Fountain it ſelf, the Root it ſelf. By theſe Names (the moſt of which are proper and accommodate to the true Son of God) the Scholaſtic Theology intendeth to ſignify that the Son of God is theſe Forms and Attributes in infinite Perfection, and is not meerly a Participation of a Portion of them, and that they are not in him by way of Quality and Habit, but they are his Eſſentialities; and this is all that it meaneth by theſe Abſtract Names, which it applieth to the Abſtract Son of God. But as in the Application of theſe Names I pretend not to follow the Scholaſtic Theology, ſo I cannot altogether ſymbolize with it in the Interpretation of them. For the New-Teſtament's Names of the Meſſiah ought to be interpreted as Names of the New-Teſtament and of the Chriſtian Religion, which is the Religion of Regeneracy. If the Apoſtle ſaith that God is Love, this muſt be underſtood of the Love that vital Sanctity is, and which is in Regeneracy; and this divine kind of Love God is, not only in infinite Perfection and eſſentially, but as (his ſpecific Nature and Difference) that which he is as his kind of thing, Good and Excellency. So if Chriſt is called The Light, (or αὐτοφῶς, Light it ſelf) this muſt be underſtood of the Light which vital Sanctity is, and which is in Regeneracy, as S. Cyprian ſpeaketh, (a) in Chriſto, hoc eſt in Lumine, (in Chriſt, that is, in the Light) and this Light is that which he is as his kind of thing, Good and Excellency, eſſentially and in infinite Perfection in himſelf, and he is it unto us alſo, which ſpeaketh him the new Creator, no Creature-ſon, for ſuch a Son cannot be the Light which we are in, as we are light in the Lord, (as the Apoſtle ſpeaketh) no Creature can be the Light of Life, as he is, or the ſaving Truth and Wiſdom, with reſpect whereunto he may be denominated αὐτοαλήθεια, αὐτοσοφία, Truth it ſelf, Wiſdom it ſelf. So with reſpect to the Virtue and Righteouſneſs which is in Regeneracy it is rightly ſaid, (b) Ipſe Virtus & Juſtitia eſt, and he is juſtly denominated (c) Innocentia ipſa & ipſa Juſtitia, αὐτοαρετὴ, αὐτοδικαιοσύνη, for the Life of Righteouſneſs and true Holineſs is that which he is as his kind of Good and Excellency, and in infinite Fulneſs and Perfection it is his Eſſence, whence it muſt be ſaid of this Holy of Holies, (d) Sanctuarium Sanctuariorum ipſe Meſſias. This ſort of Attributes are great Attributions, as incompetible to a Creature-ſon as the Mathematical Dimenſions are to a Point.

(z) Orig. c. Celſ. l. 6. p. 309. S. Chryſoſt. in Joh. Hom. 14. Petav. de Trin. l. 6. c. 11. S. 1. & T. 1. l. 2. c. 6. S. 9. &c.

(a) De orat. Dom in fin.

(b) Lact. l. 4. c. 16.

(c) S. Cypr. de Bon. patient.

(d) v. Grot. Not. in Joh. 2. 19.

VII. His vital Sanctity is the (interior and exterior) Deiformity of the Divine Imperial Lord the Son, which is Creature-tranſcendent Deiformity, and ſpeaketh him to be no Creature-ſon. Such a Son of God as he is ſuch an Image of God he is, (for the Son is the Image of the Father) and ſuch is his Deiformity. He may be a natural Image of God, if he is no more than the Perſon of a Man; he may be a ſupernatural Image and Reſemblance of God, if he is no more than an holy Man or a glorified Saint; but according to his Idea he is the Creature-tranſcendent Son of the Creature-tranſcendent Imperial Eſtate, and therefore the Creature-tranſcendent Image of God, of the Creature-tranſcendent Deiformity, which is his Imperial Perſonal (interior and exterior) Deiformity in the ſenſe of Chriſtianity and the New-Teſtament. For this is that which the holy Writers of the New-Teſtament mean when they ſtile our Saviour The Image of God, The Image of the inviſible God, The expreſs Image of his Perſon. (2 Cor. 4. 4. Col. 1. 15. Heb. 1. 3.) In which μεγαλυσμοὶ, or magnifying Expreſſions, they do not celebrate an Abſtract Scholaſtic Son of God, but it is manifeſtly the Perſon of our Saviour Chriſt which they celebrate; and that which they celebrate is his proper Honour and Nobilitation, which is his Divinity of Perſon, (or Creature-tranſcendence;) and their Senſe is, that he is the Image of God as the Lord the Son, and therefore peculiarly, appropriately, and in ſuch ſenſe which is incommunicable to any Creature. The Creature-ſons that are in reſpect of vital Sanctity (which is both Grace and Glory) the Sons and live Images of God, are no more than Creature-ſons, the ſubject, ſervient, undergraduate, mutilate and partial, and comparatively the mean, the remote, diſtant and heterogeneous Sons and Images of God, whoſe vital Sanctity is no more than the particular, finite, and narrow bounded; but the Son of God is (as we have ſeen) this vital Sanctity as his kind of Good and Excellency, and in infinite Fulneſs and Perfection it is his Eſſence, ſo as to be in this reſpect God, not Creature, and ſo as to be in this reſpect of definitive Notion God the Image, (which is the ſame Name with God the Son) and therefore in this ſenſe and reſpect God of God, Light of Light, very God of very God, or as the ancient Writers ſometimes ſpeak, (e) Divinitas genita, the generated Divinity. But it muſt be remembred that the ancient Writers look upon every Creature-ſon or Saint of God as a Divinity; and it muſt be acknowledg'd that vital Sanctity is of kind a Creature-tranſcendent Good, Excellency and Deiformity; ſo that every Creature-ſon or Saint of God is ſo far and in ſuch ſenſe of Creature-tranſcendent Deiformity, and is of the ſame Divine Family with the only begotten Son of God, who yet in reſpect of vital Sanctity (or this Creature-tranſcendent Deiformity) is vaſtly different from the Creature-ſons. For they are not of proper Kind and Species Perſons of the God-kind and Species as he is, and therefore as to Kind they are but mutilately and partially (not in the plenary ſenſe) Perſons of vital Sanctity (or the Creature-tranſcendent Deiformity) and they are far from being Perſons of it in his degree (who is of it in God-graduality;) ſo that becauſe of vital Sanctity which he is eſſentially and in infinite fulneſs he alone of all the Sons of God is of Creature-tranſcendent Deiformity both as to kind and degree in the plenary ſenſe. Creature-ſons are as to kind of the Creature-tranſcendent Deiformity, but becauſe they are only preter-eſſentially and adventitiouſly ſo, their being ſo is but that which is of the Creature-kind, not that which is of the God-kind, as the Son of God's is, who becauſe of his peculiar vital Sanctity in reſpect of Kind and Degree muſt be denominated αὐτὸ τῆς θεότητος εἶδος, the very Form or Species of the Divinity, as Athanaſius calleth the Abſtract Son of God; or as he is called in that Expoſition of the Faith attributed to Gr. Thaumaturgus, χαρακτὴρ καὶ εἰκὼν τῆς θεότητος, The Character and Image of the Divinity. When the holy Writers ſo denominate him, they conſider him in his Imperial Eſtate of Exaltation, wherein he is moſt illuſtriouſly the Image of the inviſible God, and wherein he may be moſt clearly diſcern'd to be (as the Image derivatively from God, but conjunctly and undividedly with God) of one and the ſame Idea with God, viz. The Sanctity imperial, The Sanctity vital, The Sanctity imperial-perſonal, for Chriſtianity imperial is Sanctity imperial, and Chriſtianity vital is Sanctity vital. So that God is not only in himſelf, but in and to his Son the Sanctity imperial, vital, imperial-perſonal, not only ſelf-originately, but derivatively ſo.

VIII. The vital Sanctity which the Son of God is, is that of the one individual divine vital Eſſence, (which is to him an undivided Derivative) whereby he is one of the Trinity of divine Perſons of one Eſſence. As the divine Perſons of the Chriſtian Trinity are neceſſarily the Perſons of one Sovereignty, for there can be but one divine Sovereignty, ſo for the ſame Reaſon they are neceſſarily the Perſons of one divine vital Eſſence. That there may be three Perſons of one divine Sovereignty is of eaſy Apprehenſion, (needeth no Illuſtration) and that the Son of God is one of theſe is plain from his Idea, (for he is the divine imperial Son;) but that there can be more Perſons than one of one divine Eſſence is not of eaſy Apprehenſion, the Suppoſal of it is the principal Difficulty that incumbreth the Doctrine of the Trinity, which is not to be voided either in the Ariſtotelian Scholaſtic way, by ſuppoſing them to be only certain Scholaſtic Modes or Relations of one common ſcholaſtic divine Eſſence; nor in the Platonic Scholaſtic way by multiplying the ſcholaſtic divine Eſſence. But waving theſe Scholaſtic Hypotheſes, we will here briefly repreſent a clear intelligible Account of this abſtruſe Theory by theſe following Steps and Gradations.

(1.) By the divine Eſſence we mean The one Eſſence of one God the Father, which may ſignify either in the ſtricter or in the larger Notion and Comprehenſion. In the ſtricter and narrower Notion and Comprehenſion the divine Eſſence of God the Father is only that which is ſo his Eſſence, as not to be the Eſſence of the Son. But in the larger Notion and Comprehenſion the divine Eſſence of God the Father compriſeth that divine Eſſence which the Son is. For the divine Eſſence of the Son is the divine Eſſence of God the Father, but ſo as to be the divine Eſſence of the Son. He belongeth to God the Father, he is his Son, and a Perſon of his Godhead, of his one Sovereignty, and of his one divine Eſſence, the fulneſs whereof is πλήρωμα τοῦ πατρὸς, the fulneſs of the Father. If there was in the Godhead a divine Eſſence which is not the Eſſence of God the Father, there muſt be two or more divine Eſſences there, and the one divine Eſſence of one God would be wanting there.

2. The one divine Eſſence muſt be conſider'd as it is the divine vital Eſſence, as is ſelf-evident, and the ſcholaſtic Theology uſually harpeth upon this ſtring (f) That in Life which the Son is ſaid to have from the Father, there is the ſignification of Nature and Eſſence. By Life in the only begotten which is generated by the

(e) Petav. de Trin. l. 6. c. 6. S. 20. & T. 4. l. 11. c 12. S. 11.

(f) Sicut Pater habet vitam in ſemetipſo, ita & Filio dedit vitam habere in ſemetipſo. In vita naturæ & eſſentiæ ſignificatio eſt. S. Athanaſ. ap. Petav. de Trin. l. 4. c. 6. S. 10. Vita in

Father, Eſſence is underſtood. That which is Life in both is ſignified by Eſſence; and Life which is generated from Life, is Eſſence which is born from Eſſence. So in the counterfeit Dionyſius, ὄντως & ζώντως, the communication of Eſſence and Life (g) is the ſame thing. The Generation of the Son being a vital Production, the divine Eſſence muſt be conſidered as the divine vital Eſſence.

(3.) The one divine vital Eſſence is vital Sanctity (which is the God-kind and Saint of God-kind of vital Eſſence) as the ſcholaſtic Theology ſaith (h) Divinitas ipſa ſanctitas eſt, The Divinity is Sanctity it ſelf. The one divine vital Eſſence is vital Sanctity, becauſe it is The God-kind of vital Nature and Eſſence, and therefore is a ſpecific vital Nature and Eſſence, yet ſo as to be an exiſtent individual Nature and Eſſence, as other ſpecific vital Natures and Eſſences are. It is communicable as well as other ſpecific vital Natures and Eſſences; for it is in ſome degree communicated to all the Creature-Sons of God. But it is not in this reſpect communicable as they, it cannot intirely exiſt in ſeveral Individuals intirely divided and ſeparated: nor is it communicable to any Creature, ſo as to conciliate to him the imperial Creature-tranſcendency, which is the Deity.

(4.) The imperial Son of God (The imperial Saint of God-kind of Son) is neceſſarily a Perſon of the imperial Creature-tranſcendency (of the Sanctity, Divinity and Godhead) and of vital Sanctity eſſentially and in infinite Fullneſs. It muſt be communicated to him, as much as it can be communicated, and ſo it is commonly ſaid, that God in the Generation of his Son did communicate his divine Eſſence: but this cannot be done by the Production of a new divine vital Eſſence (as in the Generation of a Child there is a Production of a new humane vital Eſſence;) therefore as he is neceſſarily εἴσω τῶν τῆς θεότητος ὅρων, within the boundaries of the Godhead, ſo he muſt neceſſarily exiſt in and of the one divine vital Eſſence as a Perſon of it, he muſt belong to this Eſſence, it muſt belong to him. Not as if any individual Eſſence could be ſcholaſtically communicated, but in reſpect of the vital Sanctity which it is derivatively, the one individual divine vital Eſſence became by his Generation the Eſſence of the Son of God. In ſuch ſenſe it became common or was communicated in this divine Generation, in which therefore much more was done than a meer Sanctification of our Saviour's humane Nature; for the fullneſs of the Godhead dwelleth in him bodily (ſubſtantially, non umbratiliter) of which Words no good ſenſe can be made without ſuppoſing, that the one individual divine vital Eſſence, in reſpect of the vital Sanctity which it is, became by his Generation his Eſſence and Subſtance. If his Perſon is conſtituted by no other Subſtance but meerly the humane, he is no more than a Man, he is not Deus natus & genitus, or God the Son; And he muſt be more than the Son, if we ſuppoſe him a Perſon of this divine vital Eſſence at ſuch an extravagant rate of plenary Communication, that he no more deriveth from the Father.

(5.) The Son is eſſentially and neceſſarily A Derivative: The Godhead therefore muſt be in the ſtate of Derivation (of deriving and being derived) and the divine vital Eſſence muſt be ſo, elſe no Son can be in it. The vital Sanctity therefore which this divine vital Eſſence is, muſt be diſtinguiſh'd into that which it is primitively, and that which it is derivatively; for the vital Sanctity which the Son is, muſt be denominated The Derivative. Upon his Generation the vital Sanctity which this divine vital Eſſence is, became thus diſtinguiſh'd, or became twofold: That which is The Primitive (the fullneſs of it) and that which is The Derivative. This divine vital Eſſence as it is The primitive vital Sanctity, is the Father (his divine vital Eſſence in the ſtrict Notion and Comprehenſion:) but The vital Sanctity which this divine vital Eſſence is, as it is the Derivative (the fullneſs of it) is the Son, his divine vital Eſſence. This one individual divine Eſſence therefore is of this twofold Notion or Conſideration; It is the divine vital Eſſence of the Father, and it is alſo the divine vital Eſſence of the Son. Whence it is very plain, that one individual divine vital Eſſence is the Eſſence of two Perſons: of the one as it is The vital Sanctity the Primitive, of the other as it is The Derivative from the inexhauſtible Fountain of it. Becauſe the Son is The vital Sanctity The Derivative, therefore ſpeaking with reſpect thereto he is fitly called by thoſe Names of Derivation which the Fathers and Councils have given to the Abſtract Son of God, Light of Light, Life from Life, Sapience from Sapience, God of God. The Image is the Derivative from the Exemplar (the Son from the Father) ſo is the Image of the inviſible God. (i) χαρακτηρίζει τὸ γένος, he beareth the character of his Deſcent and Parentage, and is ἀπαύγασμα τῆς δόξης the eradiation of the Glory (or the eradiated Glory of God) the brightneſs and glory of God as effulgent and deriv'd. Heb. 1.3. ſuch is his vital Sanctity, ſuch is his imperial-perſonal Deiformity or Similitude to God, It is the brightneſs of his glory, and the expreſs image of his perſon. (k) The latter words expound the former, Image expounding Brightneſs, and Perſon or Subſtance expounding glory. The deriv'd brightneſs of his Perſon or of his Glory is this divine Image or the vital Sanctity which he is. And as the Father is The vital Sanctity, both the meerly conſtitutive and the communicative, ſo is the imperial Son, but with the difference of The Primitive and The Derivative. Which Derivative muſt be conſider'd as derivative from God, and as derivative to us, who receive of Chriſt's Fullneſs.

(6.) The vital Sanctity which the Son is (the derivative and the live-image of the Father) is the divine vital Eſſence of the Father, in the large Notion and Comprehenſion, ſo that in ſuch ſenſe the Father doth not part with it out of his own Eſſence. (It is his own Life and Nature, his own vital Sanctity in divinis.) It is not parted or divided from the Exemplar (the primitive vital Sanctity which the Father is) It is not parted or divided from the one-individual divine vital Eſſence of the Father (it is undividedly that one individual divine vital Eſſence, and that one individual divine vital Eſſence is it undividedly) ſo that the vital Sanctity, which the Son is, muſt be ſaid to be imparted without parting with it, and it muſt be denominated The undivided Derivative, the undivided plenary Derivative. In humane Generation the ſame (ſpecific) Nature is communicated and deriv'd from Father to Son, ſo as that an entirely ſeparated and divided individual Eſſence is produced: but it is otherwiſe in the Generation of the Son of God; for the vital Sanctity which he is, is imparted by God the Father without parting

---

unigenito quæ ex Patre generata eſt, eſſentia intellecta. —— Quod in utroque vita eſt, id in utroque ſignificatur eſſentia; & vita quæ generatur ex vita, id eſt, eſſentia quæ de eſſentia naſcitur, dum non diſſimilis naſcitur, ſcilicet quia vita ex vita eſt. S. Hilar. ap. Petav. ibid. l. 6. c. 10. S. 1.

(g) Ibid. l. 6. c. 11. S. 9.

(h) Idem T. 4. l. 11. c. 12. S. 11.

(i) Epiph. Hær. 76.

(k) Mr. Mede on Luke 2. 13, 14.

parting it from his one individual divine vital Eſſence, and the Son is ὁμοούσιος, co-eſſential with the Father, not extra-eſſential. This undivided Derivation of the Son from the Father, the ancient Fathers (to help our Conception of it) have compar'd to Light iſſuing from Fire, Splendour from Light, Vapour from the Water, the River-water from the Fountain, the Beam from the Sun. Which Similitudes may ſomewhat illuſtrate the undivided Derivation of the Son from the Father (or rather the undivided Derivation of the vital Sanctity which the Son is) which may alſo be illuſtrated from the Image of the Face in the Looking-glaſs; for the Image in the Glaſs is an undivided Derivative from the Face. So in the Godhead, in reſpect of vital Sanctity, the Communication is plenary and undivided.

(7.) But becauſe it may well be thought, that theſe little Similitudes are far from clearly explicating a great and abſtruſe Theory, we will illuſtrate it by this following ſimilitude. Let us ſuppoſe the Sun to be the imperial Lord of Heaven, and inſtead of one of thoſe Heroes which the Heathen deify'd in the Sun, let us ſubſtitute a ſolar imperial Son, who is eſſentially of ſolar Light (of imperial Soli-formity) which ſolar Light we will ſuppoſe to be one individual luminous vital Eſſence. The whole of this one individual luminous vital Eſſence is the Father's Eſſence in the large Notion and Comprehenſion, but in the ſtrict Notion and Comprehenſion it is his Eſſence only, as it is his luminous Vitality peculiarly ſuch, not the imperial Son's. The imperial Son (if he doth exiſt) muſt neceſſarily exiſt in and of this one individual luminous vital Eſſence as a Perſon of it, he muſt belong to this Eſſence, it muſt belong to him; for his Generation cannot be the Production of a new ſolar vital Eſſence. This one individual luminous vital Eſſence therefore muſt be communicated to him, which cannot be ſuppos'd to be a ſcholaſtic Communication, but a Communication only in reſpect of the luminous Vitality which it is, in reſpect of which luminous Vitality this one individual luminous vital Eſſence becometh the Eſſence of the imperial Son by his Generation. For upon his Generation The luminous Vitality which this luminous vital Eſſence is, becometh twofold: that which it is primitively, and that which it is derivatively. This luminous vital Eſſence as it is The primitive luminous Vitality is the imperial Father (his luminous vital Eſſence in the ſtrict Notion and Comprehenſion:) but the luminous Vitality, which this luminous vital Eſſence is, as it is the derivative luminous Vitality, is the imperial Son, his luminous vital Eſſence. This one individual luminous vital Eſſence therefore is of this twofold Notion or Conſideration: It is the luminous vital Eſſence of the Father, and it is alſo the luminous vital Eſſence of the Son. Whence it is very plain, that one individual luminous vital Eſſence is the Eſſence of two Perſons: of the one as it is the luminous Vitality The primitive, of the other as it is the luminous Vitality The derivative, of which the Sun is an inexhauſtible Fountain to his Son. As it is the former, it is the luminous vital Eſſence of the Father (in the ſtrict Notion) and the Exemplar: As it is the latter, it is the luminous vital Eſſence of the Son and the Image. The luminous Vitality which the Son is (the Derivative) and the luminous Vitality which the Father is in the ſtrict Notion (the Primitive) are undivided; they are undivided the one from the other; they are undivided from the one individual luminous vital Eſſence (without any Section, Partition or Diviſion from it) both are the luminous vital Eſſence of the Father in the large Notion and Comprehenſion; which ſpeaketh the luminous Vitality that the Son is (the Derivative) to be imparted without parting with it (the undividedly Derivative) and it ſpeaketh the Son to be ὁμοούσιος co-eſſential with the Father.

(8.) That we may not overlook the Idea of the Holy Ghoſt (who may be undividedly deriv'd from the Father to the Son, or imparted without parting it from his own Eſſence, as is of eaſie conception and needeth no illuſtration) let us ſuppoſe that this imperial Lord the Son is the origin and neceſſarily the imperial Head of a luminous vital Empire, and therefore muſt be in the large Comprehenſion of his Eſſence, not only The luminous Vitality the meerly conſtitutive (of his Perſon) but alſo The luminous Vitality which is The Communicative. So that there is a third ſolar imperial Perſon, and The one individual luminous vital Eſſence muſt be conſider'd both as it is The luminous Vitality the meerly conſtitutive, and as it is The luminous Vitality the Communicative. It is The luminous Vitality the meerly Conſtitutive, as it is The luminous Vitality of the Father (in the ſtrict Notion) and as it is The luminous Vitality of the Son (in the ſtrict Notion) contradiſtinguiſh'd and confronted to the luminous Vitality which the Holy Ghoſt is. But the luminous Vitality which the Sun (the Father) is, muſt be two ways confronted: for as it is The Primitive it muſt be confronted to the Derivative: and as it is The meerly Conſtitutive, it muſt be confronted to The Communicative. So the luminous Vitality which the imperial Son is, muſt be two ways confronted: for as it is The Derivative, it muſt be confronted to the Primitive, and as it is The meerly Conſtitutive, it muſt be confronted to the Communicative. This ſecond ſolar imperial Perſon muſt be alſo ſuppos'd to be (conjunctly and undividedly with the Father and ſubordinately to him) The imperial Head and Origin of the luminous vital Empire, whence the third ſolar imperial Perſon, which anſwereth to the Holy Ghoſt (who is the vital Sanctity, as it is The Communicative) muſt neceſſarily be deriv'd to the ſecond from the Father. Theſe things are eaſily applicable to the Chriſtian Trinity, if inſtead of luminous Vitality we ſubſtitute vital Sanctity; and underſtand the meerly Conſtitutive to belong to the Father and the Son as the conſtitutive nature of each, but the communicative to belong to them as to their place.

(9.) Vital Sanctity in divinis is not to be ſuppos'd a meer Accident, Quality or Habit, but Eſſentiality, it is Eſſence or Subſtance as it is vital and vital Sanctity. Accordingly our Saviour's Perſon is conſtituted, not meerly by an humane vital Subſtance, but by the one individual divine vital Eſſence, as it is the meerly conſtitutive vital Sanctity the Derivative, whence he is eſſentially God as well as Man, and his Perſon became ſo conſtituted by his generatio ex Deo, yet not meerly by his divine Generation, but by his human-divine generation. For vital Sanctity doth not conſtitute a Perſon, but as it is combin'd with an intellectual Nature, of it ſelf and alone it is not a Perſon; whence the Hypotheſis of an Abſtract Son of God, his Eternal Generation and the Scholaſtic Incarnation muſt neceſſarily be diſcarded by them that will not otherwiſe than agreeably to ſound Reaſon, Religion and the nature of things maintain the Divinity of our Saviour's Perſon, which is a Theory that in our Account of it is of ſo intelligible a Notion and of ſo rational a Conſiſtence, that no clearer Explication can be given of any Theory in Philoſophy or Theology, which is enough to put to ſilence the Anti-Trinitarians Arguings from Reaſon againſt it. And if the Debate muſt be determin'd by the Holy Scriptures, it is not hard to diſcern who will have the better Cauſe of it. For it is not imaginable that throughout the New-Teſtament the Son ſhould be joyned with the Father as his Colleague and Conſort, if he was not of one Eſſence and Sovereignty, of one Honour, Majeſty and Divinity with the Father. When he ſaith, what things ſoever the Father doeth, theſe alſo doeth the Son likewiſe; I and my Father are one; I am in the Father and the Father in me; He that hath ſeen me hath ſeen the Father; My Father worketh and I work; All that the Father hath are mine. He ſpeaketh not the Language of Creatures (of holy Men and Prophets) he repreſenteth himſelf as bordering ſo near upon the Father as no Creature can do, and of ſuch Approximation as only a divine Perſon can be of. He would have ſpoken of himſelf in a much more homely Style if he had been a Creature-ſon, and would have taken care that Men ſhould not miſtake him for God; whereas on the contrary he uſually ſpeaketh of himſelf in ſuch a Style that no unprejudic'd Interpreter of his Words can ſuppoſe that they mean any thing leſs than to repreſent him as (l) Deum in homine quodammodo incluſum, (God in ſome ſort inclos'd in Man) as the Scholaſtick Theology rightly affirmeth. But theſe Matters relating to his Sanctity are in this Theology (in ſeveral reſpects) repreſented very differently from our Account of them, and we will briefly confront and compare ſome of theſe diſſonant Accounts.

IX. In the Scholaſtic Theology the Unity of the Son's Eſſence and Sovereignty with the Father's is uſually notic'd in Words that agree with our Account, but the Senſe of them, which ought to be of Kind and Quality Divine and Chriſtian, is (for the moſt part) an unchriſtian Scholaſticiſm. Such is that Maxim of St. Athanaſius, (m) τὸ πλήρωμα τῆς τοῦ πατρὸς θεότητος ἐστὶ τὸ εἶναι τοῦ υἱοῦ, The fulneſs of the Father's Divinity is the Eſſence of the Son. The fulneſs of the Father's Divinity is ſuppos'd to exiſt in the Son according to that of St. Auſtin, (n) Altho' the divinity dwelleth in the Saints, yet not all the fulneſs of the divinity, as in Chriſt the Head. But the fulneſs of the Father's Divinity is not only ſuppos'd to exiſt in the Son, but to be his Eſſence by a plenary Communication of the divine Eſſence, which plenary Communication of it is ſuppos'd to be undivided, for the Son is ſaid to be (o) τὸ ἴδιον τῆς τοῦ πατρὸς οὐσίας γέννημα ἀδιαίρετον, the proper undivided Off-ſpring of the Father's Eſſence. This Theology declaimeth againſt any Section, Partition, Diviſion, (τομὴ ἢ διαίρεσις) of the divine Eſſence, as that which introduceth a Plurality of Gods. It attributeth to the ſeveral divine Perſons an Unity of Sovereignty, (δυναστείαν μίαν κυριότητα μίαν, βασιλείαν μίαν, one Potentacy, one Domination, one Kingdom or Regality) and in like manner it attributeth to them, μίαν οὐσίαν, τῆς οὐσίας ταυτότητα, μίαν θεότητος φύσιν, one Eſſence, the ſame common Eſſence, one nature of the Divinity. If theſe and the like Notices of the Unity and Undividedneſs of the divine Eſſence and Perſons be underſtood agreeably to the Sanctity and Divinity of the Chriſtian Religion, they are truly Divine and Chriſtian; but in the Scholaſtic Theology they are underſtood as Maxims of Ontology or Metaphyſical Theology, (which is the Theology that hath prevail'd in the Church) and the Senſe of them is (for the moſt part) an unchriſtian Scholaſticiſm. For the ſeveral ſorts of Triads (or Trinities) which this Theology affordeth appertain to ſome ſort of Scholaſticiſm; and all that have attempted to explain the Trinity in an unuſual Method, and yet have not departed from this kind of Theology, have only ſubſtituted a Trinity of one ſort of Scholaſticiſm inſtead of another. The Divine Sovereignty in this Theology doth not ſignify the Sanctity Imperial, but the Sovereignty of univerſal governing Providence; and it turneth the Chriſtian Trinity into a Deity of univerſal governing Providence (conſider'd as ſuch) which is hugely unchriſtian and unholy. In like manner the divine Nature or Eſſence in this Theology (uſually) doth not ſignify the Sanctity vital, but the ſcholaſtic divine Eſſence and Attributes, the fulneſs whereof is that which it (uſually) meaneth by the fulneſs of the Father's Divinity, which is ſuppos'd to be in the Son. The Nicene ὁμοούσιος, (conſubſtantial or co-eſſential) in this Theology chiefly ſignifieth, that the ſcholaſtic divine Eſſence with its Attributes is common to the Son with the Father, which implieth the Son's Equality with the Father, as the Son of a Man is a Man and of the Eſſence of a Man equally with his Father. It ſignifieth alſo, that the Abſtract-Son is no created Subſtance, nor an extrinſick Heterouſian in reſpect of God the Father, as the ſecond Archical Hypoſtaſis in Platoniſm (a ſubordinate Deity) is in reſpect of the firſt God, (p) and that the Abſtract-Son is indiviſible from the Father as a Plant from the Root, which is conſubſtantial thereto. And conſidering the moſt uſual and currant Senſe of the Fathers it is reaſonable to believe, that the Word was at firſt intended to ſignify that the Subſtance, Nature and Eſſence of the Abſtract-Son is more than ſpecifically, that it is numerically one and the ſame with the Father's. This Conſubſtantiality being apply'd to the Father and the Son, not upon account of the Chriſtian Divine Nature, but upon account of the Scholaſtic Divine Eſſence and Attributes, it became a Metaphyſical and Scholaſtical kind of Term, upon which account it gave Scandal and troubled pious Minds, (as we find in the Account of thoſe Times when it was introduc'd) to the Arians it ſeem'd to imply vaſt Abſurdities, and it met with ſo violent an Oppoſition from them, that upon account of this one ſingle Term Homoouſios the Chriſtian Church was filled with virulent Cenſures and Reproaches, Diſputings, Fightings, Tumults, Schiſms, Slaughters, Baniſhments, Perſecutions and Outrages innumerable. All which infamous Diſaſters had been avoided, if the Term had been apply'd to the Father and the Son only upon account of the Chriſtian Divinity of the Son, his Sanctity vital and imperial.

X. Although the Scholaſtic Theology moſt uſually and generally doth not ſuppoſe that the divine Perſons are ſeveral infinite Minds and Spirits, (ſeveral Individuals in one ſpecific Nature as Men are) yet the beſt Learned of the moſt Ancient Fathers did hold, that the Father and the Abſtract Son were two diſtinct infinite Spirits, (or Scholaſtic Eſſences) and conſequently they (l) Method. ap. D. Bull p. 167.

(m) Petav. de Trin. l. 4. c. 16. S. 10, 12. & l. 5. c. 9. S. 3.

(n) In ſanctis quamvis divinitas habitet, non tamen ſicut in capite quod eſt Chriſtus, omnis plenitudo divinitatis.

(o) S. Athanaſ. de ſyn. Nic. decret. p. 420, 421 Com. Petav. ſupr. & l. 4. c. 13. S. 8, 14, 18.

(p) S. Athanaſ. ſupr.

they attributed not a ſingular and numerical, but a ſpecific Unity of Nature to the divine Perſons. But at and after the Nicene Council the generality of Learned Men in the Chriſtian Church ſeem to have quite abandon'd this (portentous) Conceit; for thus Gr. Naz. expreſſeth their Senſe, (q) τὸ μὲν ἓν τῇ ὀυσίᾳ γινώσκοντες, τὰ δὲ τρία ταῖς ὑποστάσεσιν, We acknowledge God one as to Eſſence, but three as to Perſons. Before the meaning of the Term Hypoſtaſis was ſettled there was a Diſſenſion amongſt the Catholicks, (r) one Party affirm'd that there is but one Hypoſtaſis, (meaning thereby one divine Eſſence) another Party affirm'd that there are three Hypoſtaſes, (meaning thereby three divine Perſons;) but ſo ſoon as they well underſtood one anothers meaning their Quarrel was at an end, becauſe they all agreed in this Principle, and this was the Senſe of them all, one Eſſence and three Perſons. (s) Gr. Nyſſen and ſome others of the ancient Writers would not have three Men called three Men, but one Man, becauſe their common Eſſence is but one, (they are but one in Eſſence;) and they thus diſcourſe with deſign to ſhew, that the divine Perſons are not three Gods, but only one God; which Diſcourſe of theirs hath a twofold Aſpect, for on the one hand they ſeem to ſuppoſe that the divine Perſons are ſeveral Individuals in one ſpecific Eſſence, as three Men are; but on the other hand it is plain that (although they miſtake in their Philoſophy) they would have a numerical Unity of Nature attributed to the divine Perſons, becauſe they would have ſuch an Unity of Nature attributed to them which anſwereth to that of one Man. The ancient Scholaſtic Theology therefore of their Times, as well as the modern, ſeemeth to have diſcarded a ſpecific divine Nature, which to do is in ſome ſenſe one of its Virtues, and in another ſenſe it is one of its Vices. For to diſcard ſuch a ſpecific divine Nature, of which the divine Perſons are ſo many Individuals, is one of its Virtues; but univerſally to diſcard a ſpecific divine Nature, and to overlook the God-kind of vital Nature, (which muſt be called a ſpecific divine Nature) is a principal Vice of this Theology, which maketh it (in great degree) an unchriſtian Scholaſticiſm. The undivided Communication of this divine Eſſence (the God-kind of vital Nature) is clearly intelligible, and is of Kind and Quality Chriſtian; but the Scholaſtic Theology ſuppoſeth that this Eſſence an infinite Mind and Spirit as ſuch is communicated ſo as to produce a Perſon whoſe Eſſence is an infinite Mind and Spirit, yet no ſuch Eſſence, nor any Reality is produc'd, which is a moſt unintelligible and (according to natural Light) impoſſible Communication; nor is it poſſible that meerly three Modes or Relations conjoyn'd with one Scholaſtic Eſſence ſhould conſtitute three divine Perſons. The Platonic Party of Scholaſtic Trinitarians therefore object againſt the Ariſtotelian, that theirs is a phantaſtic Trinity of meerly nominal Perſons, that it is not a thing in Nature, nor falleth under Human Conception. But on the other hand the Ariſtotelian Party of Scholaſtic Trinitarians object againſt the Platonic, that their Trinity of three diſtinct infinite Minds and Spirits, (each of which is ſuppos'd to have the Scholaſtic divine Eſſence whole and entire) is downright Tritheiſm. A Plurality of Scholaſtic divine Eſſences is like a Plurality of divine Sovereignties, neceſſarily a Plurality of Gods. The Notion of God according to natural Light is one infinite eternal Mind or Spirit; but three ſuch infinite Spirits cannot be one numerical infinite eternal Mind or Spirit, nor can one numerical infinite Mind or Spirit be three diſtinct infinite eternal Minds or Spirits. They are neceſſarily three Gods; for three Gods muſt be defin'd by three ſuch infinite Beings. They are three individual Scholaſtic divine Eſſences, as three Men are three individual human Eſſences, each of them is ſuppos'd to be his proper peculiar Eſſence or Subſtance, which is his ſingular individual Eſſence or Subſtance; therefore they are (not one individual, but) three individual Eſſences or Subſtances in one common ſpecific Nature, as Men are; and according to this Hypotheſis Gods may be multiplied like unto Men. Thus the divided Parties of Scholaſtic Trinitarians ſtrenuouſly argue againſt each other; whence it appeareth that both their Scholaſtic Trinities are great Miſtakes, that they ought to be diſcarded, and that ſuch a Trinity that is not Scholaſtic ought to be ſubſtituted in their ſtead. Such a Trinity that can ſolve and anſwer theſe Objections of Infidels. (t) Bodinus denieth that God can produce God, becauſe an infinite Being cannot flow from an infinite Being. With the Jews (that are great Scholaſticks) it is a Maxim (u) That God cannot make any one ſuch as he is. Nor is it poſſible that from one infinite Mind and Spirit two infinite Minds and Spirits ſhould emane, that are twice as much as he is, or that theſe ſhould have neceſſary Exiſtence; yet according to the ancient Writers (before cited) that call the Abſtract Son of God an infinite Spirit of God, the Trinity muſt be three infinite Minds and Spirits.

XI. The meaneſt Chriſtian clearly underſtandeth wherein the Image of God in a Son of God doth conſiſt, the New-Teſtament plainly declaring that it conſiſteth in our being inwardly regenerated in our Souls, (in having the living Image of God planted there) and in being outwardly regenerated into the glorious Image of God by being clothed with immortal Bodies. From which plain Notices of the Science of Sanctity it is not hard to give an account of the Image of God in the only begotten Son of God, which according to Chriſtianity muſt conſiſt in his imperial-perſonal Deiformity, ſuch Deiformity which is his interior Sanctity and his divine and heavenly Sovereignty. But theſe plain Notices of the Chriſtian Theology are of ſmall regard in the Scholaſtic Theology, it hath excogitated very diſſonant Accounts of the Image of God in the Son of God, ſuch as Chriſtianity knoweth nothing of, and which ingendred not only the fierce Altercations about ὁμοούσιος, conſubſtantial, but the like eager Conteſts about ὁμοιούσιος (of like Subſtance, Nature and Eſſence) which Term the favourers of Arianiſm endeavour'd to ſubſtitute inſtead of the Nicene Homoouſios. If this Term had been expounded to ſignify in a truly Divine and Chriſtian Senſe only, there could not have been any Conteſts about it amongſt Chriſtians; for all of them did acknowledge that the Son is the Image of the Father, (elſe he is not the Son) and therefore of like Nature and Eſſence in the Senſe of the Science of Sanctity. But in thoſe elder Times when theſe unchriſtian Conteſts began, a Scholaſtick Theology was ſubſtituted inſtead of the genuine Chriſtian Theology, the Term Homoiouſios was underſtood

(q) Or. 32. p. 520.

(r) Petav. de Trin. l. 4. c. 14. S. 10.

(s) Ibid. c. 9. S. 5. &c.

(t) Bodinus negat Deum efficere poſſe Deum, quia infinitum ab infinito fluere nequit. Poſſevin; Jo. Bodin. libr. cautio.

(u) Quòd Deus non poſſit facere aliquem ſui ſimilem. Hotting diſſ. de Attribut. p. 325;

derſtood to ſignify in an unholy ſcholaſtic Senſe, and thence it was that the ſeveral Parties of Chriſtians were at variance about it; and not only the ſeveral Parties of Chriſtians were at variance about it, (w) but the ſame Fathers were at variance with themſelves, ſometimes diſliking it and ſharply diſputing againſt it, and ſometimes approving it and diſputing for it, which is an Inconſiſtence in the ancient Scholaſtick Theology. An Inconſiſtence there is alſo in the modern Scholaſtick Theology touching the infinite fulneſs of Grace and Sanctity in the Human Nature of Chriſt. For on the one hand it affirmeth (x) that this Grace and Sanctity is without meaſure, and what is without meaſure is infinite; that it is an unmeaſurable fulneſs of habitual Holineſs, ſuch as wonderfully exceedeth the joynt and cumulated Holineſs of all, either Saints or Angels; that Chriſt's Grace is not only Plenty, but Immenſity, there being no end or bottom of his Riches; in him were not only ſome Treaſures, but all the Treaſures; and as S. Hierom ſaith on Iſa. XI deſcendit ſuper eum fons omnis Domini, the whole entire Fountain of Holineſs deſcended upon him. Yet on the other hand this Theology argueth, that the Grace of Chriſt is a Creature, (a created Quality) inherent in his Soul, which is a Creature alſo, and therefore it muſt neceſſarily be finite, not all-fulneſs, unleſs we ſpeak ſecundum quid, and improperly, (as ſome ſay) which is to make the Apoſtle ſpeak improperly, when he ſaith of Chriſt, It pleaſed the Father that in him ſhould all fulneſs dwell, Col. 1. 19. The Scholaſtick Theology ought to reconcile theſe ſeeming contradictory Propoſitions, (which may be done) but it is better at making than reconciling Inconſiſtences touching Chriſt's fulneſs, of which Origin ſpeaketh like a Chriſtian Divine, (y) Our Saviour doth not participate of righteouſneſs, but being righteouſneſs is participated by the Juſt.

XII. The Scholaſtic Hypotheſis touching the abſolute Unity and Identity of the divine Eſſence in the divine Perſons is diſſonant from Chriſtianity. For the meaneſt Chriſtian may underſtand that God muſt be conſider'd as he is a Parental Providence, and as he is the Sanctity Imperial. His divine Eſſence muſt be conſider'd as it is vital and vivificative to the World of living Creatures, (as being the true Zeus) and it muſt be conſider'd as it is the divine vital kind of Eſſence, (the Sanctity vital) which is the God-kind or Saint of God-kind of vital Eſſence. But this different Conſideration of the divine Eſſence is not (according to Chriſtianity) competible to the divine Eſſence of the Son of God, (who is meerly the holy Imperial Son) nor is it competible to the divine Eſſence of the Holy Ghoſt, (who is meerly the Spirit of Holineſs;) the Scholaſtic Theology therefore in its Hypotheſis of the abſolute Unity and Identity of the divine Eſſence in the divine Perſons (which ought to be limited to Sanctity vital as it is ſuch) is guilty of an unchriſtian Miſtake. A like Miſtake the uſual Scholaſtick Theology committeth in that *περιχώρησις, Circumince*ſ*ſion, mutual Inexiſtence or in-being, immeation or pervading,* which it attributeth to the divine Perſons, and of which it interpreteth our Saviour's Words, I am in the Father and the Father in me. For ſeeing the ſcholaſtic divine Eſſence is abſolutely and numerically one and the ſame in all the three divine Perſons, the Senſe of this Theology is, it attributeth to the divine Perſons mutual-inexiſtence or in-being, mutual immeation or pervading, although in reſpect of their Nature and Eſſence there can be no ſuch thing as mutual-inexiſtence or in-being, mutual immeation or pervading. (z) For as if their Perſons were not diſtinct, one of them could not be ſaid to be in the other, Sed ambo unus & idem; ſo if their Nature or Eſſence is not at all diſtinct, one of them cannot be ſaid to be in the other in reſpect of his Nature or Eſſence; and conſequently there can be no ſuch thing as their mutual in-being, immeation or pervading, according to the ſcholaſtic Theology. But there is a Chriſtian kind of Perichoreſis, or mutual in-being of the divine Perſons; for that fulneſs of vital Sanctity which the Son hath and is, he hath it and is it in the Father, and the Father is it in and to the Son. Which Chriſtian kind of Perichoreſis is hugely remote and diſtant from a ſuppoſed Perichoreſis of ſeveral Perſons that are of one and the ſame ſingular ſcholaſtick Eſſence.

This grand Difficulty in the Scholaſtick Trinity (ſeveral Perſons of one and the ſame ſingular ſcholaſtic Eſſence) the Scholaſtic Theology pretendeth not to aſſoil, but only to palliate and excuſe from the inſuperable Difficulties that are in ſome other Theories, and ſome other Articles of Religion. But it ought to be conſider'd, that the Chriſtian Trinity is more than a particular Article of the Chriſtian Religion, It is the initiating Creed of it, the Center of it, the main Body of the Chriſtian Faith, the Foundation of Foundations, (as the Jews call the Exiſtence of God) other fundamental Articles and the very Frame of the Chriſtian Religion being founded upon it. The inſuperable Difficulties which ſome Branches of Religion that are ſaid to be above our Comprehenſion, (as the Article of God's Eternity) ſeem to involve, are comparatively ſmall Matters and very tolerable, and thoſe Branches of Religion have natural Light to ſupport the Belief of them; but the Evils which this great Article (as it is repreſented in the Scholaſtick Theology) hath done to Chriſtianity are not very tolerable, and the Article it ſelf is purely from ſupernatural Revelation, and is a divine Inſtitution for the Salvation of the World. And can it be ſuppos'd that this Article (ſo great and good, of ſo wiſe an Inſtitution and ſo peculiar a Character) is neceſſarily of ſuch a nature, that the Poſſibility of it is not reconcileable to the unprejudic'd Reaſon of Mankind? that it muſt neceſſarily be the choke-pear of Chriſtianity, and the grand Stumbling-block of Faith, that occaſioneth (in great degree) the World's Infidelity? that it cannot be vindicated from the Objections of Infidels, nor be fit to be debated any where but in the Schools, and there it is repreſented as unconceivable and unintelligible at the moſt ſuperlative rate? that it muſt neceſſarily make Chriſtianity (in great part) a Religion fit for Sophiſts, but not for Saints, intrigue it with Philoſophic Subtilties and Difficulties innumerable, ſophiſticate the Plainneſs and Simplicity of it, adulterate the Purity of it, profane the Sanctity of it, ſpoil the Reaſonableneſs and Recommendableneſs of it, and occaſion a Shole of Scholaſtic Hereſies (with all the Evils that accompany them) touching the Perſon of Chriſt? (a) It is not only in the Work of Virtue and the Obſervance of the Commandments, but alſo in the Path of Faith, that the way is ſtrait and hard which leadeth to Life; it is a Matter of great Labour

and

(w) Petav de Trin. l. 4. c. 6.

(x) Gonet. clyp. T. 12. Diſp. 13. Art. 1 S. 1. Davenant in Col. 1. 19. Jeanes of the fulneſs of Chriſt, p. 235, 236, 243, 246, 247. Ed. 1.

(y) Ὁ Σωτὴρ ἡμῶν οὐ μετέχει μὲν δικαιοσύνης, δικαιοσύνη δὲ ὢν μετέχεται ἀπὸ τῶν δικαίων. c. Celſ. l. 2. p. 320.

(z) Petav. ſupr. l. 4. c. 16. S. 5.

(a) Non in ſolo opere virtutis, aut in ſola obſervantia mandatorum; ſed etiam intramite fidei anguſta & ardua via eſt, quæ ducit ad vitam: & magni laboris eſt magnique diſcriminis, inter dubias imperitorum opiniones & veriſimiles falſitates per unam and great danger to walk ſmoothly on in the one Path of ſound Doctrine, between the dubious Opinions of the unskilful and the Falſities that carry a ſhew of Truth; and the Snares of Error every where oppoſing themſelves, to eſcape all danger of Deception. In the great Myſteries of Faith, as they are repreſented in the Scholaſtic Theology, it is not eaſy to eſcape dangerous Miſtakes; yet ſometimes this Theology ſaith, In abſoluto & facili eſt æternitas, The Condition of Salvation is compendious and eaſy both in reſpect of Obedience and of Faith. The Articles whereof would not be ſuch inſuperable Difficulties as they are, if they were underſtood agreeably to the Nature of that Religion of which they are the Articles. They ought to be underſtood and explicated agreeably to the Myſtery of Godlineſs, which is a Myſtery of Grace and Sanctity, not of School-Philoſophy. And accordingly the Trinity muſt be ſuppos'd, not to be a Trinity of Perſons of one ſingular ſcholaſtic Eſſence, but of one individual divine vital Eſſence, which is vital Sanctity; ſo that each divine Perſon muſt be diſtinctly notic'd as to the vital Sanctity that he diſtinctly is. The Father is the Sanctity vital, as it is the Primitive; The Son is the Sanctity vital, as it is the Derivative (the undividedly Derivative) The Holy Ghoſt (that appertaineth both to the Sanctity vital the Primitive, and to the Sanctity vital the Derivative) is diſtinctly The Sanctity vital as it is the Communicative.

XIII. The Scholaſtic Theology cannot aſſoil this Difficulty (which incumbreth the Doctrine of the Trinity) That ſeveral Perſons are God, and yet there is but one God. For it cannot aſſoil this Difficulty but by another which it doth not pretend to aſſoil. It ſuppoſeth that every one of the divine Perſons is God by having the whole ſcholaſtic divine Eſſence, and that this ſingular divine Eſſence exiſteth in them all and is common to them all, whereby they become one God; and thus it ſalveth one Difficulty by another which it doth not pretend to aſſoil. This is one Evil, and another is connex'd therewith. For this one ſingular ſcholaſtic divine Eſſence this Theology calleth one eſſential God, and it thus diſtinguiſheth a twofold meaning of the Name God. (b) There is one certain thing which is in reality Father, Son, and Holy Ghoſt, the three Perſons together (This is God) and every one of them ſingly is God, as (habens divinitatem) having the Deity or Divinity. The Name God is ambiguous, and ſometimes ſignifieth the Nature and Divinity common to the three Perſons, or the three Perſons together with the ſame Eſſence: and ſometimes it ſignifieth ſome one Perſon of the three. Having thus diſtinguiſh'd the ſeveral (ſuppoſed) Significations of the Name God this Theology thus aſſoileth the Difficulty which is under Conſideration. (c) Res illa una Deus eſt, That one thing is God which is in ſome reſpect one and in ſome reſpect three; one Subſtance (or Eſſence) and in Perſons three. By this Method of aſſoiling the Difficulty we have ſuch an one God which is no God, and ſuch an one God as is in Pagan Polytheiſm, but the Scriptural Unity of God and his uncauſed Godhead is overlooked and deſtroyed. For the Name God in the proper (not metaphorical) Acceptation is certainly a Title of Honour, and a Name of Perſonal Nobilitation, one God therefore or The one God is neceſſarily a divine Perſon; and to ſuppoſe that to be The one God which is not a Perſon of God-Nobilitation is a Contradiction. A Scholaſtic meer eſſential one God, therefore (una quædam res, res illa una) ſubſtituted inſtead of a Perſonal God, is really no God at all, nor are the Scriptures acquainted with any ſuch Deity. Nor are they acquainted with ſuch an one God which is in this Theology, and is alſo in the Pagan Polytheiſm. For as the Pagan Theiſts were Monarchiſts, and deriv'd their many Gods from one Supreme Deity and Principle of all things, ſo the Scholaſtic Theology deriveth all Beings and the other divine Perſons from God the Father; (d) Ab hoc Deo, & quà principium eſt ἀγέννητον, uno etiam ac ſolo, (from this God, and as he is the ingenit Principle, the one and only.) The Scholaſtic Theology attributeth to God the Father what the Pagan Polytheiſts attributed to their Supream Deity; for it ſuppoſeth him to be ſo far the one and only God as he is of himſelf God; but it looketh upon him as nothing more than hic Deus, This Perſon of God, (e) Hic Deus qui eſt Pater, (one of the Perſons that have the Deity) and is far from acknowledging his Mono-Theiſm (ſimply and without addition) that he is the one ſole Perſon of the Almighty God, and as ſuch the one only God, beſides whom there is no other. This Mono-Theiſm of God the Father, which is the true Unity of God, the true Anti-polytheiſm, which the Scripture aſſerteth and celebrateth (as will be hereafter diſcours'd) is deſtroyed by this Scholaſtic Theology and its Trinity, which alſo thus far deſtroyeth his uncauſed Godhead; it denieth him to be God in order of Nature antecedently to any Cauſation. For the Generation of the Son and the Spiration of the Holy Ghoſt muſt be accounted ſome ſort of Cauſation, and is ſo called in the Scholaſtic Theology, which alſo ſuppoſeth that the Father is the Fountain of the Divinity, that the Son of God is a Perſon generated by God, and that the Holy Ghoſt is from the Father and the Son by Spiration. If this generated Son as ſuch is the Son of God, if the Holy Ghoſt by this Spiration is the Spirit of God, common Senſe will argue that the Father did exiſt as God in order of Nature antecedently to this Cauſation, Generation and Spiration, and therefore in order of Nature antecedently to his being a Father and antecedently to a Trinity. And if he did ſo exiſt, then he did exiſt as the one only God from Eternity, doth ſo exiſt to Eternity, is not without great Impiety called by Scholaſticks Hic Deus, A meer eſſential or imperſonal God is not the one only God, nor is this ſcholaſtic Maxim (underſtood as it is in the Scholaſtic Theology) excuſable from foul Error, Quælibet perſona eſt tota eſſentia divina, id eſt, unus ille verus Deus, extrà quem non eſt alius, Every Perſon is the whole divine Eſſence, that is, the one true God, beſides whom there is no other.

XIV. Theſe things the Scholaſtic Theology muſt admit, if it did admit this Principle, that God did exiſt in order of Nature antecedently to a Trinity. This Theology therefore denieth this ſelf-evident Principle, (and therefore denieth him to be God in order of Nature antecedently to any Cauſation) in its principal Maxims it affirmeth the contrary. But this Affirmation is ſo grand an Abſurdity, that alone it is ſufficient to ſpoil its Explication of the Trinity. For this is the Senſe of this Theology, that God is a Father in order of Nature antecedently to his being a Perſon, and therefore antecedently to his Exiſtence. Generation and Filiation, Spiration and Pro- ſanæ doctrinæ ſemitam inoffenſis greſſibus ambulare; & cùm undique ſe laquei erroris opponunt, omne periculum deceptionis evadere. S. Leo Ser. 5. de Nativ.

(b) Una quædam res eſt, quæ veraciter eſt Pater & Filius & Spiritus Sanctus, tres ſimul perſonæ, ac ſingulatim quælibet earundem. Petav. de Trin. l. 3. c. 9. S. 7, 10. Nomen Deus ancipitem habet uſum, atque interdum communem tribus naturam & divinitatem ſignificat, aut tres ſimul perſonas cum eâdem eſſentiâ: interdum verò perſonam aliquam de tribus. Ibid. c. 11. S. 5. & l. 4. c. 3. S. 9.

(c) Ibid. l. 3. c. 9. S. 14.

(d) Ibid. l. 3. c. 2. S. 4.

(e) Ibid. l. 5. c. 4. S. 10.

ceſſion, (ſaith this Theology) conſtitute three Perſons in the eternal Godhead. To produce and to proceed (whether by Generation or Spiration) is that which maketh or conſtituteth a Plurality of Perſons in the Godhead. By producing therefore and by Generation the Father is made and conſtituted a Perſon, and conſequently his being a Father (by Generation and Production) is in order of Nature antecedent to his being a Perſon. The ſame Concluſion iſſueth from other grand Maxims of this Theology. For it ſtateth the Perſonalities of Father, Son and Holy Ghoſt upon three modes of Subſiſtence, (τρόποι ὑπάρξεως) of one and the ſame Eſſence, which is thereby diſtinguiſh'd into three Perſons. Which Modes of Subſiſtence are relative Subſiſtences, or ſubſiſting Relations; ſo that every divine Perſon is formally conſtituted what he is, relatione perſonali, perſona divina eſt Hypoſtaſis & tamen relatio, relatione plurificatur perſona in divinis. All the abſolute and eſſential Attributes are perfectly the ſame in the divine Perſons, which are conſtituted and diſtinguiſh'd by their relative Properties. The divine Perſon of God the Father therefore is conſtituted a Perſon, and is diſtinguiſh'd from the other divine Perſons by his Relation of Paternity, which is neceſſarily founded upon his generating the Son, and conſequently this Generation and his Paternity are in order of Nature antecedent to his being a Perſon. (f) The Schoolmen are aware of this Difficulty, and attempt to aſſoil it, but Vaſquez is gravell'd with it, and others that pretend to aſſoil it had as good ſay nothing, as nothing to purpoſe. For they cannot anſwer their own Objections, their Diſtinctions are not reconcileable to common Senſe, nor are they excogitated for any other End, but to palliate this groſſeſt of Abſurdities, Paternitas conſtituit Patrem in eſſe perſonæ, (g) proprietas ipſa Patris, non ut in creatis evenit, ad hypoſtaſin accedit jam exiſtentem, ſive perſonam; ſed eam ipſam conſtituit. It is not with God as it is with Creatures, he is conſtituted a Perſon by his Paternity. Such is their Maxim, yet they talk at the greateſt rate for proper Generation in divinis.

(f) Gonet. Clyp. T. 5. Diſp. 11. Art. 3.

(g) Petav. de Trin. l. 5. c. 4. S. 10.

CHAP. V.

A fifth ſort of Arguments to prove the Truth of our Idea, from plain Attributions of Deity to our Saviour in holy Scripture: The firſt ſort of theſe Attributions. 2. A ſecond ſort of them. 3. A third ſort of them. 4. A fourth ſort of them. 5. A fifth ſort of them. 6. A ſixth ſort of them. 7. A ſeventh ſort of them. 8. An eighth ſort of them. 9. The Scholaſtick Theology miſtaketh in alledging the Old-Teſtament. 10. Particularly in alledging the Prophets. 11. It miſtaketh in alledging the New-Teſtament. 12. A principal Fault of this Theology. 13. It cannot anſwer the Anti-Trinitarians Scripture-Arguments from the Unity of God. 14. Nor a ſecond ſort of their Scripture-Arguments. 15. Nor a third ſort of their Scripture-Arguments. 16. Nor a fourth Claſſis of their Scripture-Arguments. 17. Nor a fifth Claſſis of them. 18. Nor the Jews Objections.

1. A Fifth ſort of Arguments to prove the Truth of our Idea of the Son of God we will deduce from the many plain Attributions of Deity to him in holy Scripture. Socinus and his Followers have ſtated their Controverſy touching the Divinity of Chriſt upon the Terms of Deus ſummus, which is an ambiguous Expreſſion. For by denying him to be Deus ſummus, they mean to deny his being a Perſon of the one ſupreme Godhead, and to make him a Creature, as they call him; and this we ſuppoſe to be a bordering upon Infidelity and meer natural Religion, a vilifying the Son of God, a deſtroying the Nobleneſs of Chriſtianity, and therefore both Hereſy and Pedantry. But if by denying him to be Deus ſummus they did only mean that he is not Deus ſummus in the Senſe of the Scholaſtic Theology, we ought ſo far to conſort with their Hypotheſis; for nothing is more contrary to his Idea than to ſuppoſe him (in the Senſe of that Theology) the Almighty eternal God. As it is on the one hand a moſt unchriſtian Extravagance to deny his proper Deity (this being his Eſſence and Definition, to be Deus natus & genitus) to make him a Creature ſuch as is a minor Deity, or a meer holy Man deiſy'd; ſo on the other hand it is an irreligious Extravagance to aſſert, that all the Names and Operations and Attributes of God are in full and plain Words (in Scripture) given to Chriſt. The Scripture uſeth great Temper and Sobriety in its many plain Attributions of Deity to our Saviour, and touching all of them in general it is obſervable that they are no other than ſuch as belong to him, as he is The holy imperial Lord the Son.

The firſt ſort of theſe plain Attributions is this Name The Lord with its illuſtrious Adjuncts The Lord of all, The one Lord, The Lord of Glory, Lord of Lords and King of Kings. Which illuſtrious Adjuncts ſignify this one thing, and nothing more, that he is the holy imperial Lord the Son actually poſſeſs'd of his imperial Eſtate (to which a Right and Title was antecedent;) for the holy imperial Lord actually poſſeſs'd of his Imperial Eſtate, (which is the divine Sovereignty) is neceſſarily and plenarily Lord of all, The one Lord, The Lord of Glory, King of Kings and Lord of Lords. From which high and holy Sovereignty a Judgment may be made touching his true Idea; for that divine imperial Eſtate which he now poſſeſſeth did belong to him as his Eſtate; but it could not belong to any ſave only a Perſon of this Quality and Character, The holy imperial Lord the Son; this therefore is his true Idea. He was natively the Perſon of Chriſt the Lord, which is to ſay, that he was natively The holy imperial Lord, and therefore (the divine Prince and Potentate) the holy imperial Lord the Son. If he had been a Creature-ſon it would have been an infinite Incongruity to raiſe him to the Imperial Eſtate of the Godhead, the ſame Throne, Sovereignty, Majeſty and Glory with God, (allowing only the difference between Father and Son) the ſame univerſal and plenary Dominion, the ſame Soul-Sovereignty, the fulleſt Height of Honour and Power, of Illuſtriouſneſs and Beatitude. His high and holy Imperial Eſtate of ſupreme Lordſhip and Dominion always belong'd to him, was always deſign'd for him, though not actually conferr'd upon him till his Reſurrection.

Acts 10. 36. 1 Cor. 2. 8. and 8. 6. Apoc. 17. 14.

rection. But as Chriſtians in reſpect of their heavenly Inheritance have jus ad rem before they have jus in re, ſo it was with the Son of God in reſpect of his heavenly Sovereignty; for in the days of his Fleſh he had Right and Title to it, and therefore was no Creature-Son, but (as a Chriſtian muſt be ſaid to be a Citizen of Heaven, though not in actual Poſſeſſion of that State and Place) a Perſon of the one ſupreme Godhead. If he was a Creature-Son, he muſt be of the ſervient and ſubject-party, which is oppoſite to his Name The Lord, that always and eſſentially belong'd to him, and denoteth him to be eſſentially of the Godhead-party. In the Language of the holy People this Name The Lord always ſignifieth the Creature-tranſcendent Lord (to whom all Creatures, Men and Angels, of right are ſubject) The Son of God therefore as ſuch is of the Godhead-party, becauſe as ſuch he is The Lord. In the Language of the holy People (who are Citizens and the Subjects of the holy Empire) this Name The Lord ſignifieth The holy imperial Lord (their divine ſoveraign Lord) this therefore is his true Idea. There can be but one Kingdom-eſtate Creature-tranſcendent, which is the one ſupreme Godhead: The Son of God is neceſſarily a Perſon of this one Creature-tranſcendent Kingdom-eſtate; therefore he is neceſſarily a Perſon of the one ſupreme Godhead, and his true Idea muſt repreſent him as no leſs than ſo. In the New Teſtament The Lord is the uſual Name of the Son of God, as in the Old Teſtament it ſignifieth the true God: the true God is The Lord in Sanctity and Religion, becauſe he is the imperial eſtate of Sanctity; therefore the Son of God muſt be a Perſon of that imperial eſtate, or elſe in Sanctity and Religion he cannot be The Lord.

II. A ſecond ſort of theſe plain Attributions is this Name the Lord, as it is the Interpretation of the Name Jehovah; whence ſome learned Men infer, that Chriſt is The Jehovah. Which Aſſertion muſt be underſtood to be meant ſtrictly and without limitation of ſenſe. But in ſuch ſenſe it is not true or poſſible; for Jehovah is the proper diſtinctive Name of the one Perſon of God definitively ſuch, and therefore of a divine Perſon diſtinct from the Perſon of Chriſt; and it is not poſſible, that in the ſtrict ſenſe one divine Perſon can be another. But the holy Writers in ſeveral Places ſpeak of Chriſt indiſtinctly from Jehovah, as being in certain Caſes and Conditions not diſcriminated from him, of the ſame Condition with him, and ſo far and in ſuch ſenſe Jehovah, the ſame with Jehovah. Thus in aſcending up on high and leading Captivity captive Chriſt is the ſame with Jehovah (of the ſame Condition with Jehovah) and what is ſaid of Jehovah in the Old Teſtament, is apply'd to Chriſt in the New Teſtament. Pſal. 68. 18. Eph. 4. 8. In being pierc'd and looked on Chriſt is the ſame Apoc. 1. 7. with Jehovah. Zech. 12. 10. Joh. 19. 37. In being of right to be worſhipped by all the Gods (the holy Angels) Chriſt is the ſame with Jehovah. Pſal. 97. 7. Heb. 1. 6. So in the right of having every knee bowed to him. Iſa. 45. 23. Rom. 14. 11. In ſome places the holy Writers ſpeak of Jehovah indiviſively and complicately with Chriſt, as being in ſome caſes ſo conjunct and undivided, that they are not diſcriminated ſave only immediatione ſuppoſiti (by the immediateneſs of Chriſt's Perſon) ſo far and in ſuch ſenſe he is Jehovah, or the ſame with Jehovah. What the Prophet Joel ſaith Chap. 2. 32. Whoſoever ſhall call on the Name of the Lord (Jehovah) ſhall be delivered, Rom. 10. 13. the Apoſtle applieth to Chriſt the Lord, but not to Chriſt alone, but to Jehovah indiviſively and complicately with Chriſt; for he ſpeaketh of calling upon the Name of the Lord according to Chriſtianity, the ſeveral Texts which he citeth, are meant of the Jehovah of the Old Teſtament, and ſo are thoſe words of his, The ſame Lord over all is rich unto all that call upon him. What the Prophet Iſaiah ſaith Chap. 40. 3. The voice of one that crieth in the Wilderneſs, prepare ye the way of the Lord (Jehovah) is thus apply'd in the ſaying of Zechariah to John the Baptiſt Luk. 1. 76. Thou Child ſhalt be called the Prophet of the higheſt; for thou ſhalt go before the face of the Lord (or Jehovah as it is in the Prophet Iſaiah) to prepare his ways. What the Prophet ſaith of Jehovah is by Zechariah applied to Chriſt, but not to Chriſt alone, nor to him in the firſt place, but to the Jews Jehovah indiviſively and complicately with Chriſt; for by the Higheſt is meant the Jews Jehovah, whoſe Prophet John Baptiſt was, and who went before his face, to prepare his ways, although not immediately as appearing in his own Perſon. Hence it is, that the Words of the Prophet Malachi, differently repreſented in the Prophecy and in the Evangeliſt, are in ſenſe the ſame. In his Prophecy they run thus; I ſend my Meſſenger, and he ſhall prepare my way before me. Mal. 3. 1. In the Evangeliſt they are thus repreſented; I ſend my Meſſenger before thy face, which ſhall prepare thy way before thee. Matth. 11. 10. In the Prophecy they are the Words of God touching ſending a Meſſenger before his own face: In the Evangeliſt they are the Words of God touching ſending a Meſſenger before the face of his Son, which in Scripture are look'd upon as the ſame thing. In the ſame place Chriſt is again complicated with Jehovah. Mal. 3. 1. The Lord whom ye ſeek, ſhall ſuddenly come to his Temple, even the Meſſenger of the Covenant. For the Jew's Jehovah was the Lord of his Temple, and he came into his Temple, though not in his own Perſon, yet in the Meſſenger of the Covenant's coming into it, which was an Equipollent or the ſame thing. And by the Divinity of his Perſon he filled that ſecond Temple with glory at the ſame rate, as if himſelf had appeared therein in his own Perſon, and thereby made the glory of the latter houſe greater than the glory of the former; which is the only tolerable ſenſe that can be made of the Prophecy. Hagg. 2. 7, 9. And as the Meſſiah may be ſaid to be the Jehovah coming into his Temple, or the Jehovah aſcending on high, and leading captivity captive, but not in his own Perſon: ſo he may be ſaid to be the Jehovah our Righteouſneſs, but not in his own Perſon, according to that of the Apoſtle (whence it is manifeſt, that he is not Jehovah or God our Righteouſneſs in his own Perſon) 1 Cor. 1. 30. He is made unto us of God Righteouſneſs. This is the higheſt ſenſe wherein the Meſſiah can be ſaid to be Jehovah our Righteouſneſs: but he may be ſaid to be ſo in ſome other lower ſenſes analogically to Zorobabel, of whom the Prophecy is literally meant. Jer. 23. 6. In his days Judah ſhall be ſaved, and Iſrael ſhall dwell ſafely: and this is his Name whereby he ſhall be called, The Lord (Jehovah) our Righteouſneſs. The Words are part of a Prophecy touching the Return of the Jews from the Babylonian Captivity wherein their God (Jehovah) was Righteouſneſs and Salvation (in reſpect of ſecular Intereſts) to the literal Iſrael and Judah. And this Righteouſneſs and Salvation in the literal ſenſe of the Prophecy was a type of the ſpiritual Iſrael's Righteouſneſs and Salvation (as to Soul-Intereſts) of which Chriſt is the procuring cauſe, and which God hath provided for them in Chriſt. Which genuine Expoſition of the Prophecy is far from inferring that Chriſt is ſtrictly the Jehovah : nor doth this Saying of ſome Hebrew Doctors ſignifie any thing to the Proof of it (h) that God calleth the Meſſiah by his own name, and his name is Jehovah; for ſo he calleth Zorobabel (i) and often an Angel : Nor do thoſe Hebrew Doctors count the Meſſiah the Jehovah, we diſcard therefore this extravagant conceit, that Chriſt is ſtrictly the Jehovah : but we will inſer from the numerous cited places of Scripture, that he is ſo much undiſcriminated from Jehovah and the ſame with him, that he can be no leſs than a Perſon of his God-head (one with him in divine-vital Eſſence and Sovereignty) no Creature-Son.

(h) Biſhop Pearſon on the Creed, Art. 2 p. 208. Ed. 1.

(i) Bil.bra veritat. p. 190, 335.

III. The third ſort of plain Attributions is this Name God attributed to Chriſt, which we do not ſuppoſe to mean, that Chriſt is the Perſon of God (the imperial Perſon of God) abſolutely and definitively ſo; but that he is God ſo as to be a Perſon of the one ſupreme Godhead (that imperial Creature-tranſcendence or God-eminence) as the imperial Son in it and of it, and therefore God in a ſenſe directly oppoſite to this moſt unchriſtian Aſſertion of the Anti-Trinitarians (k. Chriſtum perſonam ſupremæ divinitatis non eſſe, that Chriſt is not a Perſon of the ſupreme Godhead, but only an holy Man conſtituted an extrinſick minor Deity, ſo introducing (if they worſhip Chriſt) Man-worſhip, Creature-worſhip, and a Plurality of Gods. The feeble Anſwers which they make to thoſe Places of Scripture, wherein Chriſt is called God, ſhew, that they are far better at proving, than at anſwering the Proofs that are alledg'd againſt them. It argueth a great want of Ingenuity, that they do not (without making Demurs and ſeeking Tricks and Evaſions) freely and ingenuouſly acknowledge the Deity of their Saviour notwithſtanding theſe expreſs Teſtimonies of Scripture. Joh. 1. 1. The Word was God. Joh. 20. 28. My Lord and my God, ſaid Thomas to our Saviour. 1 Tim. 3. 16. God was manifeſted in the fleſh. 1 Joh. 3. 16. Hereby perceive we the love of God, becauſe he laid down his life for us (in the Perſon of his Son, which was equivalent to the laying it down in his own Perſon.) Act. 20. 28. God hath purchaſed the Church with his own blood. In which place I do not ſuppoſe, that Chriſt is called God, but his Blood is called the Blood of God as being divine Blood, as the Lamb of God ſignifieth the divine Lamb. To him the Apoſtle attributeth the Throne of
Heb. 8. 1. God (כסי הכבוד the Throne of Glory ſo called by the Jews) which therefore doth belong to him, but is ſo far from belonging to any that is not God, that it is utterly incommunicable to any Creature, who can rightfully ſit on the Throne of God, without being truly God ? He cannot be the Meſſiah, that is not the imperial Son; And he that is the imperial Son, is neceſſarily one of the imperial Eſtate (that is, of the Godhead) which is a perfect Demonſtration of the Deity of our Saviour, to whom therefore, as to one of the Godhead, the Apoſtle attributeth the
Heb. 1. 8. Throne : Thy throne, O God, is for ever and ever Which words are part of a Prophecy, that muſt have a completion in a far ſublimer ſenſe in the New Teſtament than in the Old; as muſt alſo thoſe other Words of a Prophecy Matth. 1. 23. They ſhall call his Name Emanuel, which is God with us. Of the ſame nature is that ſublime Prophecy (which no honeſt Interpreter of Scripture can deny to be ultimately meant of our Saviour) Iſa. 9. 6. His name ſhall be called Wonderful, Counſellor, The mighty God. In the Style of the Jews The bleſſed ſignifieth God. The Apoſtle therefore could not more expreſly and fully atteſt the Deity of Chriſt, than by ſaying of him, Rom. 9. 5. Who is over all God bleſſed for ever. Which yet is no more than his uſual Name The Son of God importeth; for it is Divinity or Deity of Perſon, to be the (imperial) Son of God.

(k) Crellius de uno Deo l. 1. S. 2. c. 4.

IV. A fourth ſort of theſe plain Attributions is The divine Attributes of an omni-imperial Authority, an omnipotent executive Power, an Omniſcience and Omnipreſence, which in Scripture are expreſly aſcrib'd to our Saviour, and which belong to him, as he is the holy imperial Lord the Son. For his Idea is the meaſure of his divine Attributes; all ſuch divine Attributes belong to him, which neceſſarily belong to the Holy imperial Lord the Son (both upon account of the Dignity of his Perſon, and upon account of his officiary Dignity and Government.) No other divine Attributes do belong to him, but ſuch as belong to the Holy imperial Lord the Son as ſuch. As ſuch he muſt have an omni-imperial Authority with reſpect to the holy imperial Concerns (the Concerns of his Church and Kingdom;) his Sovereignty is the Church-Sovereignty, and that it may be ſo, it muſt be in this ſenſe an univerſal Sovereignty; All capable Creatures muſt owe Subjection to him, muſt be of Right and by Obligation the Subjects of his holy Empire, and all things muſt be ſubjected to his Diſpoſal. He is not a governing Lord and King of the World, but all capable Creatures ought to be the Subjects of his ſpiritual Kingdom (in ſuch ſenſe he is King of Kings and Lord of Lords;) and as the Pope pretendeth to all temporal Power indirectè & in ordine ad ſpiritualia, ſo Chriſt hath Right to diſpoſe of all things, as the Concerns of his holy Empire do require. Agreeably to his Omni-imperial Authority his Power is omnipotent in order to the Concerns of his holy Empire, adminiſtring the Government of it, hearing Prayers, pardoning Sins, giving Grace, ſending the Holy Spirit, judging the World, killing and making alive, raiſing the dead, diſtributing the final Rewards and Puniſhments, and crowning his People with life immortal. The Apoſtle giveth illuſtrious Atteſtations to his Omnipotency with reſpect to the holy Empire, Coloſ. 1. 17. By him all things conſiſt. Hebr. 1. 3. Upholding all things by the word of his power. His Agency is that which is peculiar to the Godhead, and an imitation of his Father's Creature-tranſcendent Agency. What things ſoever the Father doeth, theſe alſo doeth the Son likewiſe. As the Father raiſeth up the dead, and quickneth them : even ſo the Son quickneth whom he will, Joh. 5. 19, 21. His Omniſcience (which he hath derivatively, conjunctly, and undividedly with God) is a principal branch of his (Deity or) imperial Creature-tranſcendence; Without it he could not be Meſſiah the King, the imperial Son in his imperial Eſtate, he could not be qualify'd for his Religion, officiary Dignity and Government. For the Patron-Saints of the Pontificians without an Omniſcience are incapable of Invocation. Without it Chriſt could not be King of the Univerſal Church (eſpecially as to the Soul-ſovereignty of it) or Judge of the World. He could not judge the Secrets of Men if he did not ſearch the Heart and Reins, which is a Peculiarity of the Godhead. Apoc. 2. 23. His Diſciples obſerv'd, that he knew what was in Man, the ſecret thoughts of Men. Joh. 2. 25. Matth. 9. 4. They attribute to him an Omniſcience. Joh. 16. 30. We are ſure that thou knoweſt all things. Joh. 21. 17. Lord, thou knoweſt all things. But if we ſpeak of our Saviour in the days of his Fleſh, it muſt not be ſaid in rigorous exactneſs, but with a mollifying reſtriction (πῆ in ſome ſort) that he knew all things, † as appeareth from his own words touching his Neſcience of the laſt day. Mar. 13. 32. For it is manifeſt, that although many Attempts have been made, to expound them otherwiſe; yet no tolerable Expoſition can be made of them, ſave only that of Grotius, who interpreteth them to mean, that as our Saviour in his minority encreaſed in Wiſdom, ſo he arrived not at the fullneſs of Knowledge till after his Reſurrection. Sicut poſt reſurrectionem accepit omnem poteſtatem, itâ & omnem ſcientiam. As after his Reſurrection he received all Power, ſo all Knowledge. Agreeably whereto the Apocalypſe is ſaid to be given him by God. Apoc. 1. 1. In actu primo therefore and radically Chriſt had in him ſuch Powers, which might not be fully exercis'd in this lower State, till he was made perfect. Heb. 5. 9. His Attribute of Omnipreſence appeareth in his dwelling in the Souls of his People, his being with their Spirit, his coming in to them and ſupping with them, his being with them to the end of the World, and wherever two or three are gathered together in his Name. If Chriſt was a Creature-Son unfurniſh'd with, and incapable of theſe divine Attributes and Perfections, Chriſtianity would be a Religion of the greateſt Nonſenſe imaginable; for the prime Article of it is, that Chriſt preſideth in the imperial Eſtate and Government of a vaſt holy Univerſe, and yet he muſt be ſuppos'd utterly incapable thereof, and of Abilities to manage it.

† The ſealed Book was not underſtood by the Lamb till it was opened by him Apoc. 5. 5.

Joh. 14. 23. 2 Tim. 4. 22. Apoc. 3. 20. Matth 18. 20. and 28. 20.

V. A fifth ſort of theſe plain Attributions is The religious Worſhip and Service of Piety (which is incommunicable to any Creature;) for Chriſtians are alike God's Religioniſts and Chriſt's Religioniſts, not only becauſe they are of his Inſtitution, but becauſe he is (in conſort with God) the Object of their God-honour and Service. They honour the Son as they honour the Father, are alike God's Believers and Chriſt's Believers, their Saviour is their ſoveraign Hope and Truſt, they ſerve him with that Eſteem, Devotedneſs and Adherence, that Fullneſs of Affection, thoſe Intentions and Deſigns, which are the (deifying) ſoveraign Honour and Service of their Souls. This ſuperlative Affection which by way of Homage we owe unto Chriſt, proveth his Deity; A Chriſtian ſerveth none but God with that devotional Eſteem and Affection wherewith he ſerveth his Lord Chriſt, which muſt be no leſs than ſupreme and ſoveraign (allowing only the Difference which Father and Son importeth) peerleſs and incommunicable beyond all competition, a depreciating all things in compariſon, a counting nothing too much for him, nothing too dear for him, a ſerving him with our All and at any rate, living for him, dying for him, 2 Cor. 5. 15. No Man therefore can be a Chriſtian without making Chriſt in devotional Eſteem, Affection and Service, his Chriſtian imperial Lord and his God as God the Son according to Chriſtianity. Job. 20. 28. It is doubtful whether they be Semi-Chriſtians, that at this rate minorate the Adoration due unto Chriſt (k) Non eadem, neque æqualis, ſed quodammodo ſimilis eſt illi, quæ Deo debetur. It is not the ſame, nor equal, but in ſome ſort it is like to that which is due to God. Although they are not ſo bad, yet becauſe they are hugely diſſonant from the Sentiment of Chriſtians, muſt they not be thought of the ſame Family and Foot-mark with Aſterius the Cappadocian Sophiſt, who (if Athanaſius doth not wrong him) wrote a Book (l) in quo locuſtam & erucam cum Chriſto comparat, immo Chriſto anteponit, wherein he compareth the Locuſt and Palmer-worm with Chriſt, yea and preferreth them before him? How far the genuin Chriſtians are from minorating the Adoration of their Saviour, and making him an Underling in their religious Worſhip, appeareth from their Character; for they are ſuch as own Chriſt Jeſus for their divine ſovereign Lord and call upon his name, Act. 9. 21. 1 Cor. 1. 2. the name of that Lord who is not to be heard of but by the Preaching of the Goſpel, Rom. 10. 14. to whom they are bound to bow the Knee (paying him the religious Worſhip) Phil. 2. 10. whom they conjoin with God in their Doxologies and laudatory Aſcriptions, Apoc. 5. 13. and 7. 10. to whom their Doxologies are the ſame that they make unto God, 1 Pet. 4. 11. 2 Pet. 3. 18. Heb. 13. 21. Rom. 9. 5. Apoc. 1. 5, 6. and 5. 13. and 7. 10. As the holy Angels alſo (in conſort with all Creatures) pay unto him the ſame Adorations with God, and reſound together the Praiſes of God and of the Lamb. Heb. 1. 6. Apoc. 5. 11, 12, 13. our Saviour is repreſented as a Perſon conjoin'd with God in the ſupreme Godhead, and Chriſtians conſider him as ſuch in their religious Worſhip without making any minorating or diſparaging Difference or Separation. They are repreſented as conjunct and undivided, and as ſitting on the ſame Throne (not only in the Doxologies, but) in the Deſcription of the New Jeruſalem; for the Throne of God and of the Lamb are ſaid to be in it. Apoc. 22. 3. It is not hard, to diſcern what ſort of Perſon this divine name The Lamb and his Throne ſignifieth and characterizeth, that they denote the holy imperial Lord the Son, who as ſuch is the Object of the higheſt Acts of religious Worſhip in Baptiſm and the Holy Euchariſt, in Doxologies and Prayer. For St. John prayeth to him, Apoc. 22. 20. St. Paul prayeth to him, as Chriſtians pray unto God, 2 Cor. 12. 8. The Protomartyr did put up his Prayers to him, and they are the ſame that the Prince of Martyrs did put up to his Father upon the Croſs, Act. 7. 59, 60. In the precationary Benedictions of the holy Writers (which are a ſort of Addreſſes to him for the greateſt Bleſſings) uſually he is conjoined with God, 1 Theſ. 3. 11, 12. 2 Theſ. 2. 16, 17. So S. Paul uſually beginneth his Epiſtles and ſometimes cloſeth them, Eph. 6. 23. 2 Cor. 13. 4. Oftentimes his Benedictions run in this form, The Grace of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt be with you, or be with your Spirit, Gal. 6. 18. Phil. 4. 23. 2 Theſ. 3. 18. ſo Apoc. 22. 21.

Joh. 5. 22, 23. and 14. 1. 1 Tim. 1. 1. Eph. 1. 12. Matt. 10. 37. 1 Cor. 16. 22. 2 Cor. 5. 14, 15. Phil. 1. 21. 1 Pet. 2. 7.

(k) Enjedin. explicat. loc. &c. p. 388.

(l) Baron. ad an. 325. n. 101.

He that is rightfully the Object of all this religious Worſhip (the divine Honours) in the Chriſtian Church, cannot be ſuppos'd to be unqualified for it; ſuch religious Worſhip is an Aſcription to him of the Creature-tranſcendent Knowledge, Preſence, Power, Dominion and Sovereignty (and therefore of nothing leſs than the Godhead) which our Saviour rightfully both inherited and merited, Rom. 14. 8, 9. Apoc. 5. 9, 12. compar'd with Apoc. 4.12. Whence a learned ſcholaſtic Divine of our own argueth with great reaſon (m) He that by juſt Title hath acquir'd a divine Empire over Men and the divine Honours, is neceſſarily God (as the imperial Son:) But the Son by juſt Title and moſt deſerved Right hath acquir'd the divine Empire and Honours; which inferreth the Concluſion. The ſame (n) Author hath ſo well explain'd the Difference between the Adoration done to Angels in the Times of the Old Teſtament and the Worſhip that we rightfully do to our Saviour in the Times of the New Teſtament, as that it is a clear Proof of his Deity of Perſon. For thoſe Adorations which the Patriarchs did to an Angel, were only to an Angel viſible and preſent: but we pay religious Worſhip to our Saviour in Heaven the inviſible World. The Adoration done to an Angel in thoſe times was done to the Angel only by Accident (not quâ talis, but only as repreſenting and ſuſtaining the Perſon of God) it was done to God per ſe: but Chriſt is propos'd an Object of our Adoration per ſe. Apoc. 5. 12. An Angel was worſhipp'd only during the time that he appeared on Earth and ſuſtained the Perſon of God, when he laid aſide that Perſon, he was to be no more worſhipp'd: but Chriſt is perpetually and to eternity an Object of religious Worſhip. Rom. 9. 5. Heb. 13. 21. 1 Pet. 4. 11. and 5. 11. 2 Pet. 3. 18. Apoc. 1. 5, 6. and 5. 12, 13. Having thus eſtabliſh'd the divine Worſhip of Chriſt, let us conſider on the other hand, what divine Worſhip was given to him by the believing Jews, when he was here on Earth. If they that believ'd him to be the Son of God, had ſuppos'd him to be the eternal almighty God, certainly they would have been affected towards him as to the Appearance of the eternal almighty God, they would have been ſtounded and amaz'd at his Appearance amongſt them, as much as Peter and John were at the Voice of God on the holy Mount. When he appear'd amongſt them, they would have fallen on their Faces, they would have made him the Object of their daily ſolemn Devotions, and of their Temple-Service (or at leaſt they would have deſir'd, that he might be made ſuch:) but they did nothing of this; therefore by the Son of God they did not underſtand the eternal almighty God, nor any thing more or leſs, or any thing elſe than the imperial Son. As ſuch our Saviour requireth the divine Honours to be done to him, Joh. 5. 21, 22, 23.

VI. A ſixth ſort of theſe plain Attributions is the Form of God, Phil. 2. 6. Touching the meaning whereof we need not be very ſollicitous; for the Form of God is manifeſtly the ſame with Deiformity, and Deiformity muſt be underſtood, as it ſignifieth in the Chriſtian Theology, wherein Chriſtians inwardly in their Souls and outwardly in their Bodies, regenerated into the divine image, are uſually denominated θεοειδεῖς, Deiformes, and this is their Deiformity. And ſuch was the Deiformity of the Son of God (agreeable to that of the other Sons of God) but not without great difference. For other Sons of God have their Deiformity by Regeneration, Chriſt had his Deiformity by Nature and Generation. Other Sons of God are but Creature-Sons, and their Deiformity is no higher: but Chriſt's was a divine imperial-perſonal Deiformity; for he was God the image of God. And as a Man (made after the image of God) hath both the internal and external form of a Man (both the rational Soul and alſo the external Pulchritude and Majeſty of a Man:) ſo in the Son of God, before his voluntary ſelf-humbling, there was both the interiour form of God, and alſo the exteriour Glory, Pulchritude, Illuſtriouſneſs, Magnificence and Majeſty of God. The interiour form of God he never parted with, but the exteriour form of his divine royal Perſon he parted with and laid aſide, when he voluntarily became cloathed with humane Fleſh, Weakneſs and Meanneſs. As the Sun (ſaith S. Ambroſe) when he is cover'd with a cloud, his clarity and brightneſs is not deſtroyed, but it is ſuppreſs'd. So was the Glory of the Son of God, when he became the Son of Man, and ſo far he parted with it. Extrinſecally he put off his Glory, and it was all obſcur'd and ecclips'd, as the Sparklings of a Jewel are, when it is hid in its casket. The divine Glory of his royal Perſon was overſhadow'd with a Vail, ecclips'd and darkned with a cloud of Fleſh called the Vail of his Fleſh, Heb. 10. 20. For as by the Vail the arcane things of the Holy of Holies were hid from the eyes of Men: ſo by Chriſt's Fleſh his divine imperial perſonal Deiformity was vail'd and hid from Men's bodily eyes, and the Son of God appeared under that mean external guiſe which the Apoſtle calleth the Form of a Servant, Phil. 2. 7. which Phraſe muſt be expounded agreeably to that other the Form of God (and cannot tolerably be expounded otherwiſe;) for as that ſignifieth Deiformity, ſo the Form of a Servant denoteth the Servi-formity, the vile, abject, ignoble, and ſervile condition in worldly reſpects. The Apoſtle addeth, that he was made (or became) in the likeneſs of Men, that is, without his Deiformity; laying aſide his Deiformity, he became in the Likeneſs of us Men (that are without all external Deiformity) of our bodily nature (as to the general Infirmities thereof) which is frail, infirm, paſſible, mortal. The Apoſtle uſeth another Expreſſion of the ſame import with the likeneſs of Men (ver. 8.) he was found in faſhion (external guiſe) as a Man (diveſted of his Deiformity) which he might have been, although he had liv'd as a mighty Prince and illuſtrious Potentate amongſt Men: but the Apoſtle muſt be underſtood to mean, that he became in the likeneſs of Men, and was found in faſhion as a Man, ſo as not to tranſcend Servi-formity amongſt Men in worldly reſpects. He emptied himſelf therefore (o) ſe vilem & imbecillum hominem faciendo, by making himſelf a mean and infirm Man. From which Account of his ſtupendious Exinanition and Humiliation it appeareth, that in the days of his Fleſh (before he was conſtituted Lord and Chriſt in his imperial eſtate) he was God, as having been antecedently to his making himſelf in the likeneſs of Men in divine imperial-perſonal Deiformity. But ſuch was his Humility, that he duely neglected and declin'd his being as God (or his being equal with God) ȣ̓κ ἁρπαγμὸν ἡγήσατο, he counted it not a prey or a matter of rampant deſire and ſeizure, he did not aſſume it or take it upon him. This Senſe is the natural Signification of the Words, this Senſe the Contexture of the Apoſtle's Diſcourſe requireth, this Senſe repreſenteth our Saviour as extremely alien from the ambitious mundane Spirit (that counteth nothing unlawful for Dominion) and the Luciferian Spirit of the

---

(m) Quiſquis juſto titulo divinum in homines imperium ac divinos honores acquiſivit, ut is Deus ſit, neceſſe eſt: At qui Filius juſto titulo ac meritiſſimo jure divinum in homines imperium acquiſivit & Ergo. Dr. Bull c. Zuicker, p. 40.

(n) Ibid. p. 32.

(o) Petav. T. 4. l. 3. c. 11. S. 1.

the Prince of Darkneſs, who was tranſported with the rampant Deſire of a Godhead (ἁρπαγμὸν ἡγήσατο, he counted it a matter of rampant Deſire and Seizure) whereas our Saviour duely declin'd his being equal to God (or his being as God) and therefore muſt be ſaid not to have aſſum'd it, or taken it upon him. But though he was rich (both as being Heir of the whole Eſtate of God, and as being in divine imperial-perſonal Deiformity) yet for our ſakes he became poor, 2 Cor. 8. 9.

VII. A ſeventh ſort of theſe plain Attributions is the Form of Apoſtolical Benediction, 2 Cor. 13. 14. (The Grace of the Lord Jeſus Chriſt, and the Love of God, and the Communion of the Holy Ghoſt be with you all) and more eſpecially the Form of Baptiſm preſcrib'd by our Saviour, (In the Name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghoſt) which is a plain Teſtimony, that according to the Chriſtian Inſtitution the Son is a Perſon of the one ſupreme Godhead, and not only ſo, but that there are three Perſons of the one ſupreme Godhead, as the Chriſtian Church hath always underſtood the Words. For Baptiſm is the Chriſtians federal Rite, and is like that Oath of Allegiance which Aliens take when they are naturaliz'd and endeniz'd. As they by an Oath of Allegiance confederate with the Sovereignty in an Earthly Kingdom, ſo they that are baptiz'd confederate with the holy Sovereignty, which is in the Comprehenſion of Chriſtianity and the Kingdom of God. This Holy Trinity (or Ternary) therefore muſt neceſſarily be the one holy and divine Sovereignty, wherewith they confederate Allegiance. They that are baptized in the Name of Chriſt are admitted into the State and Relation of Subjects unto him, and own him for their King and Sovereign; he is therefore a Perſon of the holy Sovereignty, and ſo is his holy Spirit, (which is the Inſpiration-virtue of the holy Government) unleſs it can be ſuppoſed that we confederate with any thing that is not a Perſon. The Chriſtian Baptiſm conſiſteth of a Duty-part and a Benefit-part. As it conſiſteth of a Duty-part, to be baptized in the Name of this holy Trinity, importeth a being baptized into the Faith and Profeſſion of an holy Chriſtian Trinity (Baptiſm is adminiſtred in confeſſione & Auctoris & Unigeniti & Doni, ſaith S. Hilary) accordingly the moſt ancient Chriſtian Creed was this Form of Baptiſm and no more. Chriſtian Believers therefore muſt be ſuch as believe an holy Chriſtian Trinity, and muſt be Chriſtian Trinitarians (not ſuch as diſown the Name) and there is not any tolerable Trinity conceivable or imaginable, ſave only three Perſons of one ſupreme Godhead; for a Trinity that conſiſteth of one God and two Creatures, neither Wit nor Grace will count a tolerable Trinity. A Trinity is the Eſſence and Summary of the Chriſtian Religion; to diſpute away therefore the commonly receiv'd Trinity, without ſubſtituting a better in its ſtead, is a deſtroying the Chriſtian Religion. According to the Chriſtian Religion all that are meerly of the Miniſterial Party, (Apoſtles and Evangeliſts as well as others) are baptized into the Faith of an holy Trinity (formally or equivalently) this holy Trinity is contradiſtinguiſh'd to all that are of the meer Miniſterial and Subject-Party, each one of this Holy Trinity is conjoyn'd and aſſociated with the other, (though not without any Note of Diſtinction or Superiority, yet) as of one holy imperial Party and Dignity; every Chriſtian muſt be one of the Father's Believers as being the divine Author of his Religion and the Object of his Faith; he muſt be one of the Son's Believers as being the divine Author of his Religion and the Object of his Faith; he muſt be one of the Holy Ghoſt's Believers as being the divine Agent of the Author of his Religion and an Object of his Faith, (which is a thing incompetible to any Creature;) upon all which accounts it is evident that each one of this holy Trinity is of the holy imperial Party and Dignity, which is the Godhead in the Chriſtian Religion. A Chriſtian is alſo bound to exerciſe that religious Reverence, Subjection and Obedience towards each one of this holy Trinity which is peculiar to God only; and in Baptiſm he is dedicated to each one of this Holy Trinity agreeably to his Oeconomy, as Tertullian ſpeaketh. If we conſider Baptiſm with reſpect to the Benefit-part of it, it is manifeſt that a Chriſtian hath the Benefits of his Regeneration from this whole Holy Trinity, as from thoſe that are of the holy Empire's Imperial Eſtate. For the State of Remiſſion of Sins, of divine Sonſhip and ſanctifying Grace are conferr'd upon a Believer in his Baptiſm not Miniſterially, but Imperially, by this holy Trinity. Church-Officers are the Miniſterial Party, but this Holy Trinity are the one holy imperial Party in conferring theſe divine Benefits, Tit. 3. 5, 6. According to his Mercy he ſaved us by the waſhing of Regeneration and renewing of the Holy Ghoſt, which he ſhed on us abundantly thro' Jeſus Chriſt our Saviour. It belongeth to the Creature-Party to be regenerated and ſanctified; but authoritatively to confer the State of Remiſſion of Sins, and executively to ſanctify Souls, are Peculiarities of the imperial Party in Sanctity and Religion.

VIII. An eighth ſort of theſe plain Attributions is that Apocalyptick Name of our Saviour Alpha and Omega, which is a Name of God in the Old-Teſtament, and a Prophetick kind of Name. For it denoteth (as is before diſcours'd) his God-like governing, ordering and carrying on Affairs from firſt to laſt, from the beginning to the end, that is, his actual and jural Management of Affairs in the ſupreme way of Regency from firſt to laſt. And therefore it denoteth him to be the divine or ſupreme Potentate, unſubject, independent, unaccountable, uncontrollable, αὐτοκράτωρ, Self-Sovereign, παντοκράτωρ, actually and jurally the Commander and Diſpoſer of all things. So in the Prophet God often ſaith of himſelf, I am the Firſt and I am the Laſt, thereby intending to ſay, I am He, or I am God. Agreeably to this Name of God in the Old-Teſtament, (which relateth to the Affairs of Old Iſrael) our Saviour ſaith of himſelf (with relation to the Affairs of the New Iſrael) in the Book of the Apocalypſe, ch. 1. 11. I am Alpha and Omega, the firſt and the laſt. v. 17. I am the firſt and the laſt, ch. 2. 8. Theſe things ſaith the Firſt and the Laſt, which was dead and is alive, ch. 22. 13. I am Alpha and Omega, the beginning and the end, the firſt and the laſt. The actual and jural Management and carrying on of Affairs (the Affairs of Old Iſrael in the Old-Teſtament-Times) in the ſupreme way of Regency from firſt to laſt this Name in the Old-Teſtament aſcribeth unto God; therefore the actual and jural Management and carrying on of Affairs (the Affairs of the New Iſrael in the New-Teſtament-Times) in the ſupreme way of Regency from firſt to laſt this Name in the New-Teſtament aſcribeth unto Chriſt. In the Old-Teſtament it is an Aſcription Iſa. 41. 4. and 44. 6. and 48. 12.

tion of the Godhead unto God, a ſtyling him the ſupreme Potentate and Lord of Affairs; therefore in the New-Teſtament it is an Aſcription of the Godhead unto Chriſt, a ſtyling him the ſupreme Potentate and Lord of Affairs (only with that Abatement which the Name of the Son of God importeth.) In the Old-Teſtament the meaning of it is, I am he, or I am God, (the God of the Old-Teſtament;) therefore in the New-Teſtament the meaning of it is, I am he, or I am God, (the God of the New-Teſtament.) Theſe Deductions and Conſequences are clear and firm, and prove that our Saviour is a Perſon of the one ſupreme Godhead. But the Scholaſtick Theology inferreth from this Name (I am Alpha and Omega) that Chriſt is the Supreme Eternal God, not duly conſidering the Analogy between the Old and New Teſtament, not conſidering that this Name is a Prophetick kind of Name, (which is a Reſtriction and Limitation of it, and ſheweth in what reſpect both God and Chriſt is the firſt and the laſt) not conſidering that this Name is given to our Saviour not as he is the ſupreme Eternal God, but as he is (after his Reſurrection) raiſed to the Poſſeſſion of the Divine Sovereignty, as is apparent from Apoc. 2. 8. Theſe things ſaith the Firſt and the Laſt, which was dead and is alive. Many the like Miſinterpretations of Scripture, that give great Scandal and Advantage to the Anti-Trinitarians, are obſervable in the Scholaſtic Theology, (although the Arguments whereby it proveth the Deity of Chriſt are in great part firm and good) which Weakneſs of many of its Proofs complicated with the Weakneſs of its Anſwers to the contrary Allegations we will remark and confront to our Account of the plain Attributions of Deity to our Saviour in holy Scripture.

IX. This Theology miſtaketh in its Allegations of the Old-Teſtament to prove the Deity of Chriſt and the Trinity of the Chriſtian Religion, which cannot ſeem ſtrange to them who have look'd into the Writings of the Fathers, with whom it is uſual and cuſtomary to alledge the Words of God in the Pentateuch, the Pſalms and the Prophets, as ſpoken by the Son of God. Athanaſius ſaith (p) as often as any of the Old Prophets ſay, ἐγένετο λόγος κυρίου, The Word of the Lord came to me, this is meant of the Son of God. And is it ſtrange that they who miſinterpret the Scriptures at this rate ſhould miſtake the Appearances of Angels in the Old-Teſtament-Times for Appearances of the Son of God? That they ſhould miſtake in their Idea of the Trinity? And in their Allegation of Proofs of it from the Old-Teſtament? wherein there are no better Proofs of it than thoſe celebrated Words of the Pſalmiſt, (which cannot be thought by any, ſave only by a Mind blinded with Prejudice, to mean a Trinity) By the Word of the Lord were the Heavens made, and all the Hoſt of them by the Breath of his Mouth. So the Name Elohim in the beginning of Geneſis (being of the Plural Number) hath been thought to imply a Trinity of Perſons in the Godhead, (q) which idle Conceit is now exploded. And there is no more Firmitude in this other celebrated place, Let us make Man after our Image. Or in this other, Gen. 3. 22. Behold the Man is become as one of us. Or in this Phraſe of Moſes, Gen. 19. 24. The Lord rained upon Sodom Brimſtone and Fire from the Lord out of Heaven. (r) For it is uſual in Hebrew to put the Noun for the Pronoun, and to change the Perſon from the firſt to the third. The Phraſe is parallel to this other, Dixit Dominus adſcende ad Dominum, ſuch the Phraſe is Dan. 9. 17. and Zech. 3. 2. (where the Phraſe is, The Lord ſaid, The Lord rebuke thee) the Apoſtle hath taught us plainly enough to expound (not of Chriſt, but) of the Angel of God's Name and Preſence, Jude 7. The Elogy of Wiſdom in the Book of Proverbs, ch. 8. is by the Fathers generally expounded to be meant of the Son of God, which ancient Conceit is ſtill retained by ſome, but others (that are no Anti-Trinitarians) reject and explode it. (s) Moſt of the Fathers interpret it to be meant of the Son incarnate, others expound it of the Abſtract Logos, or Son of God; but it cannot be meant of both theſe, which is an Argument that it is meant of neither. Solomon's Wiſdom was not a Deity, or σίβασμα, an Object of religious Worſhip in the Old-Teſtament-Times, it is no higher than Scientia rerum agendarum, the Wiſdom of Creation, Providence, Diſcipline, pious Ethicks and Politicks, which is on this ſide Chriſt and Chriſtianity, Matth. 12. 42. His Wiſdom is of no higher kind than meer inſtructive Wiſdom, but Chriſt is the Wiſdom of God in a Myſtery, 1 Cor. 2. 7. His Wiſdom had prepared her Banquet in his Time, (Prov. 9. 1.) but Chriſt's was not prepared till the Times of the Goſpel, Matth. 22. 2. His Wiſdom is a Woman and a Queen Regent, and therefore the Daughter, not the Son of God. His Wiſdom (being a Woman) is only an allegorical and fictitious Perſon, that cry'd and lifted up her Voice in his Time, and loudly proclaim'd and publiſh'd her Documents; but ſo did not the Son of God. Wiſdom was Solomon's Miſtreſs and School-miſtreſs, as Philoſophy (the ſame with Wiſdom) was the Miſtreſs and School-Miſtreſs of the Heathen Sages, which they extol at the ſame rate that Solomon doth Wiſdom, (t) attributing the ſame things to it, repreſenting it as a Woman, ſtyling it the Miſtreſs of Life and Manners, the School-Miſtreſs of Virtue, the Foundreſs of Human Society, the Inventreſs of Laws, (with ſuch more honourary Attributes) as Solomon ſaith of his Wiſdom, By me Kings reign and Princes decree Juſtice. (u) Hence many very learned Men (ſaith S. Auſtin) interpret Solomon's Wiſdom to be meant of that Wiſdom which he had receiv'd to govern the People. His Wiſdom is obſerv'd to be nothing elſe (w) but the Property of Wiſdom, (the Oppoſite to Fooliſhneſs) as it belongeth indifferently either to God or Man, and to be the ſame with Knowledge, Underſtanding, Inſtruction, Diſcretion, (which are with Solomon Terms ſynonymous) and what elſe can that Wiſdom be which findeth out the Knowledge of witty Inventions? Prov. 8. 12. (x) The Apocryphal Book of Wiſdom and the Son of Sirach ſymbolize with Solomon in their Elogy of Wiſdom, (conſidering it both as demiurgic and operative of the Works of God, and as diſciplinary and inſtructive to Men, repreſenting it as enraviſhingly beauteous, Solomon's Miſtreſs or deſired Spouſe, as kind to Man and the faireſt Iſſue of God, and of the greateſt Ancientry;) but there is no Probability that they mean by Wiſdom any thing more than an Endowment of the Mind, or the Moſaic Law, which is that which the Son of Sirach meaneth by it.

X. The Viſion of Iſaiah the Prophet ch. 6. hath been ſuppos'd to be a Viſion of the Son of God, and this Reaſon is alledg'd to countenance this

(p) De Synod. p. 714. Com.

Pſal. 33. 6.

(q) Voſſ. Etymol. in voce Deus. Petav. de Trin. l. 2. c. 7. S. 3.

(r) V. Druſ. Revet. Pocock. Grot. in Hoſ. 1. 7.

(s) Petav. ſupr. c. 1.

(t) Cic. Tuſc. 2&5.

(u) Multi quidem doctiſſimi viri hoc ex perſona illius ſapientiæ dictum aſſerunt, quam Salomon ad judicandum regendumque populum accceperat. Ap. Petav. ſupr. c. 1. S. 10.

(w) Mr Nye Doct. of the Trin. p. 129 133.

(x) Wiſd. 7, 8, 9. Ecclus. 1. and 24.

this Conceit, the Evangeliſt having cited a Verſe of that Chapter and ſome other Words of that Prophet, ſubjoyneth, Joh. 12. 41. Theſe things ſaid Eſaias, when he ſaw his Glory, (Chriſt's Glory) and ſpake of him. But the Glory of the Lord of Hoſts (a Name incompetible to Chriſt) is that which Iſaiah ſaw, that Glory which the Jews call the Schecinah, that Glory which dwelt in their Temple, his Glory who is celebrated by the τρισάγιον, holy, holy, holy, (Apoc. 4. 8.) whoſe Glory filleth the whole Earth, who ſitteth upon the Throne, ſo as thereby to be diſtinguiſh'd from Chriſt the Lamb, Apoc. 5. 11. And it is certain that the Prophetic Judicial Sentence cited by the Evangeliſt from the Prophet Iſaiah, (Make the Heart of this People fat, and make their Ears heavy, and ſhut their Eyes, Iſa. 6. 10.) had a Completion in that Prophet's Time, whence Calvin upon the place ſaith, Evangeliſta extendit ad Evangelium quod jam uſu venerat ſub lege, what had come to paſs under the Law the Evangeliſt extendeth to the Goſpel. And the Reaſon is, in this Evangelical Prophet's Viſions the Affairs of the Goſpel-Times were complicated with thoſe things that came to paſs in his own Time. He ſaw the Jews Excæcation and Obduration in his own Time, and therewith he foreſaw the Jews Excæcation and Obduration in the Goſpel-Times, (this latter complicated with the former) ſo he ſaw the Glory of God, and therewith he foreſaw the Glory of Chriſt (this latter complicated with the former) he had a Previſion of Chriſt and his Glory, (y) as Abraham ſaw Chriſt's day, ſaith Grotius.

(y) Grot. Not. in Joh. 12. 41.

An unprejudic'd Mind ſurveying the Old-Teſtament from the beginning to the end will not find in it (otherwiſe than in its illuſtrious Prophecies of a Meſſiah to come) any Indication of the Trinity nor of the Deity of an Abſtract Son of God, which is at leaſt a very probable Argument that his Generation and Exiſtence from Eternity is a Miſtake. It hath been thought that his Generation from Eternity may be prov'd from ſome of the illuſtrious Prophecies of the Old-Teſtament touching a Meſſiah to come, particularly from the ſecond Pſalm, whence no ſuch thing can be proved but by expounding it in Contradiction to the Text. But the Prophet Micah ſaith, ch. 5. 2. Thou Bethlehem Ephratah, tho' thou be little among the Thouſands of Judah, yet out of thee ſhall he come forth unto me, that is to be Ruler in Iſrael: his goings forth are from of old, à diebus ſeculi. Some Obſcurity there is in the laſt Clauſe of this Prophecy (which is not well rendred in our Tranſlation;) but thus much is plain and univerſally acknowledg'd, it ſpeaketh not of an Abſtract Son of God, but of the Imperial Perſon of the Meſſiah promis'd to the Jews, and as to his Nativity it mentioneth only that at Bethlehem. This Imperial Perſon is ennobled in the Prophecy by the Ancientry of his Origines or goings forth, which may be ſpoken of in a twofold Senſe, either in the ſenſe of denoting his Age, or in the ſenſe of deriving his Pedigree. To ſay of the Meſſiah, that his goings forth are of old, à diebus ſeculi, in the ſenſe of denoting his Age, is an intituling him The Ancient of days, which is a Title competible to the Father, but not to the Son, not to the Lamb of God and the holy Child Jeſus. This therefore cannot be the Senſe of the Prophecy, but it muſt be underſtood to ſpeak of the Antiquity of the Origines or goings forth of the Meſſiah in the ſenſe of deriving his Pedigree; and ſo to ſay that his Origines or goings forth are of old, à diebus ſeculi, is to conſider him as a Branch or Stem of ancient Royalty, and to ſay of him, his Origines or goings forth, in reſpect of Imperial Family, are of old, à diebus ſeculi. Agreeably to which Senſe (z) the Jews expound this Text of the Prophet, (underſtanding it to mean, that the Meſſiah is of the anciently illuſtrious Davidical Family, that was reigning ſeveral Hundred Years) and they are but ſlender Objections that are made againſt this Expoſition. But Calvin maketh another Expoſition of this Clauſe of the Prophecy touching the Meſſias's goings forth of old, he ſuppoſeth it to be meant of his divine Predeſtination, which is a very probable Expoſition, although it is objected that the ſame thing may be ſaid of us, that we are predeſtinated from Eternity. For this Objection may as well be made againſt the Apoſtle ſaying, that Chriſt was fore-ordained before the Foundation of the World, as againſt Calvin's Expoſition. There is great difference between Chriſt's Predeſtination and ours, for he was infinitely of more Regard in the divine Decree than any other Perſon, he was predeſtinated as a Perſon of the higheſt Honour, Excellency and Importance; and therefore his Predeſtination was ſupereminently honourary, as both Jews and Chriſtians account it, when they ſay of him, that he was fore-ordained before the Foundation of the World, Ante ſolem præparatum eſt nomen Meſſiæ. It ought therefore to be mentioned for his Honour, that the goings forth of this divine imperial Potentate in reſpect of the divine Predeſtination are of old, à diebus ſeculi. But there is a third Expoſition that is the moſt probable, (a) which interpreteth his goings forth to ſignify the goings forth of his regial or governing Family from Bethlehem, theſe were from of old, à diebus ſeculi. There is no Reaſon to doubt of the Certainty of this Interpretation.

(z) Hoorn-beck l. Jud. l. 3. c. 1. p. 229.

(a) Bibliä veritat. p. 341.

XI. The Scholaſtic Theology is not without Miſtakes and Exceſſes in its Allegations and Interpretations of the New-Teſtament to prove the Deity of Chriſt. For although the Son and the Holy Ghoſt are God contradiviſively, and are the only Lord God, the true God, the great God, the moſt high God, the Almighty God, which is, and which was, and which is to come, as Perſons of his Godhead, indiviſively and as appertaining to him that is ſo; yet ſeeing no divine Perſon can be the imperial Perſon of God, or God abſolutely and definitively, but the Father only, (as will be diſcours'd hereafter) and he alone is ſimply and without addition, without diſtinction and limitation of Senſe, The only Lord God, the true God, the great God, the moſt high God, the Almighty God, (which is, and which was, and which is to come) therefore it muſt be ſuppos'd that theſe honourary Names put abſolutely in Scripture are meant of God the Father only, and are his Peculiarities. S. Hilary argueth, (b) that Chriſt is not God, if he is not the true God; as that is not Fire and Water, which is not true Fire and Water. But this pious Father ought to have conſider'd that we muſt diſtinguiſh before we define, and that it is one thing to ſay that Chriſt is or is not the true God, and another thing to ſay in what ſenſe he is or is not the true God. The true God is Life Eternal to us in Chriſt Jeſus, ſo that being in Chriſt Jeſus we are in the true God and have Eternal Life. And this is plainly the Apoſtle's Senſe, 1 Joh. 5. 20. We know that the Son of God is come, and hath given us an underſtanding that we may know him that is true, and we are in him that is true, in his Son Jeſus Chriſt. This is the true God and Eternal Life. The true God and the true Meſſiah are diſtinguiſh'd, but ſo, that that they are one Imperial Party in the ſaving Religion of Chriſtianity. And in like manner The only Lord God and our Lord Jeſus Chriſt are diſtinguiſh'd, yet are ſo intimately and intirely conjoyn'd in Religion, that a denying the one is a denying the other alſo. Whence the Apoſtle ſaith of the Gnoſticks, denying the only Lord God and our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, Jude 7. So the great God mention'd by St. Paul, (looking for that bleſſed hope and the glorious appearing of the great God and our Saviour Jeſus Chriſt) Tit. 2. 13. ought in all Reaſon to be interpreted agreeably to the Style of Scripture, which by that Name doth not mean our bleſſed Saviour, Prov. 26. 10. Job 36. 26. 2 Sam. 7. 22. 2 Chron. 2. 5. Pſal. 48. 1. The Scholaſtic Theology interpreting theſe Names to be meant of our Saviour muſt be charg'd with Miſtakes, Exceſſes, and an over-ſtretching the String, which Miſtakes are very viſible in the like Interpretation which this Theology maketh of thoſe other Names The moſt high, (Luc. 1. 76.) the Lord which is, and which was, and which is to come, the Almighty, Apoc. 1. 4, 8. compar'd with Apoc. 4. 8. and Apoc. 5. 13.

(b) Ap. Petav. de Trin. l. 2. c. 9. S. 7.

In this Theology Chriſt is ſuppos'd to have been the God of Old Iſrael, which is infinitely contrary to his Idea, to the Tenour of Chriſtianity, the Stream of the Scripture-Theology, to many Notices of the God of Iſrael which the Scripture furniſheth, and to that Diſtinction which the New-Teſtament maketh between the God of Iſrael and Chriſt our Saviour, Act. 3. 13. The God of Abraham, and of Iſaac, and of Jacob, the God of our Fathers, hath glorified his Son Jeſus, Act. 5. 30. The God of our Fathers raiſed up Jeſus, Act. 22. 14. The God of our Fathers hath choſen thee, that thou ſhouldeſt know his Will and ſee that juſt one. It is ſcarce imaginable that any one who readeth theſe places of Scripture ſhould ſuppoſe that it was the Son of God who ſaid to Moſes, Exod. 3. 6. I am the God of thy Father, the God of Abraham, the God of Iſaac, the God of Jacob. (c) Yet this S. Baſil, S. Ambroſe, and others of the Fathers ſuppoſe. Chriſt is ſuppos'd to have been Dux & Dominus, the Lord and Leader of the old rebellious Iſraelites in their March through the Wilderneſs, to countenance which Conceit St. Paul's Text is alledg'd, 1 Cor. 10. 9. Neither let us tempt Chriſt, as ſome of them alſo tempted, and were deſtroyed of Serpents. But it is the way of the Holy Writers of the New-Teſtament to ſpeak of the Old-Teſtament Affairs in New-Teſtament Language. As becauſe the Reproach of God's People is now the Reproach of Chriſt, therefore the Apoſtle ſaith of Moſes, Heb. 11. 26. Eſteeming the Reproach of Chriſt (the Reproach of God's People which is now the Reproach of Chriſt) greater Riches than the Treaſures in Egypt. So the Prophetick Spirit is now the Spirit of Chriſt, and accordingly the Apoſtle ſaith of the Prophets of the Old-Teſtament, Pet. 1. 11. ſearching what or what manner of time the Spirit of Chriſt which was in them did ſignify; and this is alledg'd as a Proof of the Exiſtence and Deity of our Saviour in the Times of the Old-Teſtament.

Our Saviour prayeth, Joh. 17. 5. And now, O Father, glorify thou me with thine own ſelf, † with the Glory which I had with thee before the World was. This divine Prayer is ſuppos'd to ſignify our Saviour's Generation and Deity from Eternity, (d) becauſe the Expreſſion is not the Glory which was given to me, but which I had with thee. Habere eſt verbum poſſeſſivum atque actum & fruitionem præſentem deſignat. They that interpret the Words to ſignify the Glory which he had only in decreto, cannot confirm their Interpretation by any Example in Scripture; but on the contrary, (1.) If we ſay that Lazarus had his good things with God before he actually receiv'd them, that ſo St. Paul had his Crown of Righteouſneſs, and ſo the Meſſiah had his Kingdom, who will deny that this is an agreeable and ſcriptural way of ſpeaking? The Jews ſay that ſeven things were (intentionally) made before the World, The Garden of Eden, The Law, The Juſt, The Iſraelites, The Throne of Glory, Jeruſalem, and the Meſſiah the Son of David. Agreeably to this their Senſe the Jews may ſay, They had a Meſſiah with God before the World was, and this is an agreeable and ſcriptural way of ſpeaking. To be given to us and to have are Terms equivalent; for what is given to us in ſome ſort we have; ſo Chriſtians have an Houſe from Heaven, although they have it not in preſent actual Poſſeſſion and Fruition, 2 Cor. 5. 1. and ſuppoſing them to have been before the Creation predeſtinated to Glory, may we not ſay of them, They had a celeſtial glorious Houſe with God before the World was? ſo it muſt be ſaid of the Meſſiah before he was actually glorified, He had with God a ſupereminent Glory, (an Heavenly Kingdom-Eſtate) before the World was. (2.) Our Saviour thus interpreteth his own Phraſeology, and withal expoundeth to us what Glory it is that he meaneth in this his divine Prayer, v. 24. Father, I will that they alſo whom thou haſt given me be with me where I am, that they may behold my Glory which thou haſt given me; for thou lovedſt me before the Foundation of the World. This Expreſſion, The Glory which thou haſt given me, for thou lovedſt me before the Foundation of the World, and this other Expreſſion, The Glory which I had with thee before the World was, are equipollent Expreſſions, they are the ſame Words, (or equivalent) ſignifying the very ſame thing. Our Saviour by thus ſaying, Thou lovedſt me before the Foundation of the World, ſo as to give me a ſupereminent heavenly Glory, plainly telleth us what he meaneth by the Glory which I had with thee before the World was. And withal he plainly telleth us what Glory it is that he meaneth and ſpeaketh of, viz. the Glory of the Perſon of Chriſt glorified, the Glory which he would have his Diſciples to ſee and behold, (the Glory of his ſuffering Humanity, his premiant Glory) this is the Glory which God had given him (in decreto) out of ſuperlative Love to him before the Foundation of the World, or the Glory which he had with God before the World was. So St. Auſtin, (though a great Scholaſtic Divine) rightly interpreteth theſe Words of our Saviour, Glorify thou me with thine own ſelf, with the Glory which I had with thee before the World was. (e) Do that in the World which was with thee before the World, Do that in its time which thou determinedſt before all Times. As then in Predeſtination, ſo now in Performance. (3.) In this divine Prayer our Saviour ſpeaketh in the Style of the New-Teſtament, throughout the whole of which (in all other places) the Glory of an Abſtract Son of God is never called Chriſt's Glory; this therefore is not the Glory ſpoken of in this Prayer. In ſome ſort our Saviour was in Glory antecedently to his Humiliation, for he was in the Form of God: yet this in the Style of the New-Teſtament is never called his Glory, as being only previous to that which was eminently and ultimately his Glory, Luc. 24. 26. Ought not Chriſt to have ſuffered theſe things, and

(c) S. Baſil c. Eunom. l. 2. p. 56. S. Ambroſ. de Fide l. 2. c. 5.

† Vid. Coſri p. 254. Ed. Buxt.

(d) Dr Bull.

(e) Fac in mundo quod apud te jam fuerat ante mundum: fac in ſuo tempore quod ante omnia tempora ſtatuiſti. Sicut tunc in prædeſtinatione, ita & nunc perfectione. Tr. in Joan. 105. vid. Grot. Not. in loc.

to enter into his Glory? This Glory (the Glory of the Meſſias's Heavenly Kingdom-Eſtate) is the Joy that was ſet before him, this Glory was his Crown and his Apotheoſis, whereby he was made perfect; and this is the Glory (as appeareth from the Style of the New-Teſtament) which his Diſciples underſtood him to mean when he ſpeaketh of the Glory which he had with God before the World was. If our Saviour ſpake thoſe Words agreeably to the Senſe of his Diſciples, and agreeably to his own Senſe in other parts of this divine Prayer, then they are not meant of any ſuch Glory as an Abſtract Son poſſeſs'd from Eternal Ages. This was not the Glory of Chriſt glorified, of which thoſe Words are meant. Nor could the Scholaſtic Logos ever be without the Glory of his Scholaſtic Deity, and therefore could not pray to be reſtored to it.

A Learned Divine argueth with great Aſſurance (f) that Chriſt is the only Son of God from all Eternity, becauſe Heb. 7. 3. Melchiſedech is repreſented without beginning or end of days, that ſo he might be a Type or Shadow of the Son of God. But how far a Type of this Son of God? only in this, as he was without beginning of days or end of life. But this is arbitrariouſly ſpoken, and is a Reflexion upon the Apoſtle, (as if he mention'd Melchiſedech's being without Father or Mother or Pedigree to no purpoſe) and it is as credible that Melchiſedech was a Type of the Son of God in being without Father or Mother or Pedigree, as in being (in this learned Man's Senſe) without beginning of Days or end of Life. The Apoſtle ſaith of him, made like unto the Son of God, he abideth a Prieſt continually. Melchiſedech is introduc'd to repreſent Chriſt as an immortal Prieſt; not as a meer Perſon, but as a Prieſt, an immortal Prieſt, and not as a Prieſt that is ſo from Eternity to Eternity; nor doth any Man believe that our Saviour's Prieſthood had no beginning of Days. But the Apoſtle's Senſe is, that the Succeſſional Levitical Prieſthood was by Deſcent, the Pedigree of the Prieſts both by the Father's and Mother's ſide was exactly preſerv'd, they had their Predeceſſors and Succeſſors, and ſo in their Prieſthood there was a Succeſſion of the beginning of Days and end of Life. But Melchiſedech's Order of Prieſthood is no ſuch Succeſſional Prieſthood; he is repreſented without Father, without Mother, without Pedigree, having neither beginning of Days nor end of Life, which ſheweth that in his Order of Prieſthood there is no Succeſſion of the beginning of Days or end of Life, (as there is in the Mortal, Temporary, Succeſſional Levitical Prieſthood;) and in this Unſucceſſional Nature of his Prieſthood Melchiſedech (who abideth a Prieſt continually) is made like to the Son of God, whoſe Prieſthood is unchangeable, immortal and unſucceſſional, without a Succeſſion of the beginning of Days or end of Life.

XII. The principal Fault of the Scholaſtic Theology is a diſtorting the Holy Scriptures from a popular-religious to a School-philoſophic Senſe. As our Saviour's Words, I came forth from the Father, (which the meaneſt Chriſtian can underſtand) are thus interpreted in this Theology. (g) I ſhone forth out of his Subſtance. For the Abſtract Son ſhone forth in a manner tranſcending all Underſtanding and Expreſſion. When our Saviour ſaith, that the Father hath given him any thing, according to this Theology (h) this is the meaning, that the Father generated him; not that after he was exiſtent, the Father gave him ſomething which he had not. (i) He gave to him by generating, not in the way of beſtowing. If our Saviour ſaith (ſpeaking of his Doctrine) I have not ſpoken of my ſelf, (being the Scholaſtic Verbum) this is his meaning, (k) I am not begotten or born of my ſelf. For if the Word of the Father ſpeaketh, he ſpeaketh himſelf, becauſe he is the Word of the Father. The Father is ſaid to ſpeak to the Son and to give him Commandment, which are eaſily intelligible Expreſſions, and of an ordinary Senſe; but in this Theology (l) the Commandment of the Father is no other but the (Subſtantive) Word of the Father. So that when our Saviour ſaith of the Father, He gave me Commandment, the meaning is, He generated the (Subſtantive) Verbum that I am. To give him Commandment is, (m) Verbum producere, to produce the Scholaſtic Word, who is the Subſtantive Will and Commandment of the Father. The Son is ſaid to hear, and the meaning is (ſaith this Theology) that Subſtance is communicated to the Son from the Father, in qua id ipſum eſt, quod loquitur, in which that very thing is which he ſpeaketh. If the Father is ſaid to ſhew the Son (who is ſuppos'd to be a metaphyſical kind of Son) any thing that is to be done, this Theology underſtandeth it to mean, (n) rerum formas atque ideas communicare gignendo, the Communication of the Forms and Ideas of things by generating him. (o) To learn the Son, is to generate him learned and knowing, and to give all Judgment to the Son, is to generate him the Judge. So theſe Expreſſions of our Saviour, I am in the Father and the Father in me, I and the Father are one, he that hath ſeen me hath ſeen the Father, (p) are in this Theology interpreted to ſignify its Conſubſtantiality and Circumınceſſion, (ὁμοούσιον & περιχώρησις,) of the ſcholaſtic kind. And ſo the Words of our Saviour, Joh. 16. 15. All things that the Father hath are mine, (which are beſt interpreted by thoſe of the Apoſtle, whom he hath appointed Heir of all things, Heb. 1. 2.) are by this Theology diſtorted to a School-philoſophic Senſe, and at this rate it interpreteth the New-Teſtament and the Evangeliſt's Logos. A Logos which is in the Mind of an Artificer, and is meerly an Ideal Exemplar of his Works, is a popular Buſineſs; but this is not the Logos which is (q) Et exemplar & Ars divina, juxta quam Deus Pater cuncta molitus eſt, (both the exemplar and divine Art, according to which God the Father made all things) this is a ſecond infinite Mind, which is ſuppos'd to be the Ideal Exemplar Logos, (the Mundane-Syſtem Logos) the Artificer of the firſt Artificer and his Art, which is of no Affinity with popular or religious Matters, (and is of as little Affinity with Reaſon) but is purely a Buſineſs of Platonic myſtic-metaphyſical Ontology, an idiotically philoſophical and unpopular Conceit. So the infinite ſcholaſtic divine Eſſence of the Father (r) is by the ancient Scholaſticks ſuppos'd to be τόπος φυσικός, the natural place of the infinite ſcholaſtic divine Eſſence of the Son, wherein he reſteth, who is inſeparate from him, and between whom there is an ἐμπεριχώρησις

(f) Dr. Jackſon B. 7. S. 3. c. 26. So S. Chryſoſt. in Joan. Hom. 4. p. 574.

(g) Ex ſubſtantia ejus effulſi. Effulſit enim modo quodam qui intelligentiam omnem ſuperat, & quem oratione nemo poteſt aſſequi. Petav. de Trin. l. 4. c. 8. S. 2.

(h) Vult intelligi, quod eum genuerit Pater; non ut tanquam jam exiſtenti & non habenti dederit aliquid. S. Aug. de Trin. l. 1. c. 12.

(i) Dedit generando, non largiendo. V. Petav. ſupr. l. 2. c. 4. S. 7, 8.

(k) Ego non ex me natus ſum. Si enim verbum Patris loquitur, ſeipſum loquitur, quia ipſe eſt verbum Patris. S. Aug. ſupr.

(l) Non aliud eſt mandatum Patris, aliud verbum Patris. Idem ibid.

(m) Petav. ſupr. l. 6. c. 4. S. 5. & l. 3. c. 8. S. 2.

(n) Ibid. l. 2. c. 4. S. 6.

(o) Docere Filium eſt doctum & ſcientem genuiſſe, & judicium dare Filio, eſt judicem ipſum gignere. Petav. ibid. l. 8. c. 1. S. 10.

(p) Ibid. l. 4. c. 5. S. 12.

(q) Dr Bull Def. Fid. Nic. p. 203. Ed. an. 1703.

(r) Ibid. p. 285, 287. 288.

ἐμπεριχώρησις, (Circuminceſſion) and this idiotically philoſophical and unpopular Conceit is ſuppos'd to be the Interpretation of the Evangeliſt's popular Phraſe, The Son is in the Boſom of the Father, as we have before remark'd.

XIII. As the Anti-Trinitarians can never anſwer the Scriptural Arguments, whereby the ſcholaſtic Theology proveth the Articles of the Trinity and the Deity of the Meſſiah: So the ſcholaſtic Theology can never anſwer the Anti-Trinitarians contrary Allegations from Scripture. Both Parties are good at proving their own Hypotheſis, but neither Party can tolerably anſwer (to ſay nothing of Arguments from reaſon) the Scriptural Arguments of their Adverſaries. Which is a plain Indication, that both Parties are miſtaken, that they have divided the Truth between them, and that another Account of thoſe great Articles, diſſonant from both, ought to be introduc'd. For although the ſcholaſtic Theology that hath been long in poſſeſſion is of venerable Antiquity, and back'd with all manner of Church-Authority, will think ſcorn to be impeach'd of Errour by any private Man; yet it will appear to any impartial Conſiderer of things, that its great Articles as they are ſcholaſticiz'd, are a multiply'd Contradiction to thoſe many places of Scripture touching the Unity of God, which are alledg'd againſt them by the Anti-Trinitarians. Such as theſe following. Joh. 17. 3. This is life eternal, that they might know thee, the only true God, and Jeſus Chriſt whom thou haſt ſent. 1 Cor. 8. 6. To us there is but one God the Father, of whom are all things, and one Lord Jeſus Chriſt by whom are all things. Eph. 4. 6. One God and Father of all. 1 Tim. 2. 5. There is one God and one Mediator between God and Man, the Man Chriſt Jeſus. Rom. 16. 27. To God only wiſe be glory through Jeſus Chriſt. Act. 3. 13. The God of our Fathers hath glorify'd his Son Jeſus. From theſe places and many more (that will be cited hereafter) it is apparent, that the one God beſides whom there is no other, is a Perſon, as the Apoſtle repreſenteth him, We know, that there is no other God but one. And to ſhew who it is that is this one God, he preſently ſubjoineth, To us there is but one God the Father. 1 Cor. 8. 4, 6. But in the ſcholaſtic Theology The one God is not a Perſon, but an Eſſence trine in Perſons, which is one Contradiction to the Scripture-Theology. The one perſonal God is repreſented in Scripture as in order of nature exiſtent antecedently to the Son and to a Trinity: but according to the ſcholaſtic Theology Generation conſtituteth him a Perſon; which is another Contradiction to the Scripture-Theology. The Scripture-Theology repreſenteth to us in the firſt place one perſonal God with all his Attributes, Rights, Dues and Decrees, and after this Theology touching the one perſonal God it repreſenteth to us a Trinity: but the ſcholaſtic Theology in the firſt place repreſenteth to us a Trinity in Unity, which is a third Contradiction to the Scripture-Theology. It is apparent from theſe Places of Scripture, that but one divine Perſon (the Father) is the Perſon of God and of definitive Name and Notion God: but according to the ſcholaſtic Theology every one of the divine Perſons is ſuch, every one of them is without Diſtinction or Limitation of Senſe counted and denominated The one God, The true and the great God, the one ſupreme eternal almighty God, which is a fourth Contradiction to the Scripture-Theology.

To evade the argumentative force of ſome of theſe places of Scripture, we are told (s) that to ſuch Younglings in Chriſtianity as the Corinthians were, the Trinity was a dangerous point, therefore the Apoſtle propoſeth to them God the Father as the only God of the Chriſtians, concealing the other divine Perſons as they are Perſons of the Trinity, 1 Cor. 8. 6. But as this could not be very honeſtly done, ſo the Apoſtle did not do it; for elſewhere he expreſly mentioneth to them the other divine Perſons of the Trinity, and yet when he mentioneth them, he expreſly mentioneth God the Father as the only God, 1 Cor. 12. 4, 5, 6. And if the Trinity is ſuch a dangerous point to Younglings in Chriſtianity, whence is it, that our Saviour inſtituted it, to be the initiating Creed of his Believers? For another reaſon the Apoſtle is ſaid to propoſe God the Father as the only God, to aſſert μοναρχίαν the ſingularity of the Principle, and that he is the fountain of the Divinity and of Entity. But this ſcholaſtic Maxim doth not aſſert the Scriptural Unity of God, it reacheth no farther than Paganiſm (for the Pagan Polytheiſts aſſerted this Monarchy, they deriv'd their Deities and all Beings from one firſt Principle and ſupreme Deity;) this Maxim therefore cannot be the whole of the Apoſtles Maxim (touching the Unity of God; and conſequently when they intitle the Father the only God, the only wiſe God, the only Lord God, it is an enormous wreſting their Words, thus to interpret them (t) He only is God, is only Wiſe, is only Lord of himſelf; for this is to ſuppoſe, that Chriſtianity teacheth but the ſame thing with Paganiſm touching the Unity of God. If therefore the holy Writers frequently aſſert, that God the Father (repreſented as diſtinct from the Son) is the one only God, this muſt not be underſtood to mean nothing more than that he is the firſt and higheſt Principle, the κορυφὴ and ſummity of all (for thus things are ſtated in the Pagan Theopolity:) but it muſt be underſtood to mean, what the Article of the Unity of God importeth in the Scripture-Theology, which is this Scriptural Anti-Polytheiſm, that God the Father is the one and ſole Perſon of the Almighty God, and that as ſuch he is the one God, beſides whom there is no other. This Scriptural Antipolytheiſm or Unity of God, the Bible from the beginning to the end of it loudly proclaimeth, and ſo far as the ſcholaſtic Theology infringeth this great fundamental Article, it is inexcuſably impious, and ought to be abandon'd by all the Lovers of God and Piety. We ought therefore to deteſt and abandon its Diſtortion of our Saviour's Words Joh. 17. 3. This is life eternal, that they might know thee the only true God, and Jeſus Chriſt whom thou haſt ſent. In which plain Words our Saviour ſaith nothing touching (the Unity of God) but what the whole Bible proclaimeth, That God the Father is the only true God, beſides whom there is no other. Yet this ſcholaſtic Theology ſometimes will have the Words conſtrued thus; This is life eternal, to know thee, and Jeſus Chriſt whom thou haſt ſent, to be the only true God. Sometimes it diſputeth (u) that the excluſive Word only belongeth not to the Subject, but to the Predicate of the Propoſition. And ſometimes it will have the Words ſignifie, Pater eſt habens ſolam veram deitatem, the Father hath the only true Deity. Which Conſtruction of the Words maketh him a true Deity in conſort with others, but not τὸν μόνον ἀληθινὸν θεὸν, the only true God, as our Saviour ſtyleth him. At the ſame rate this Theology diſtorteth the God of Abraham, Iſaac and Jacob, (w) which it will have to ſignify the whole Trinity.

(s) Petav. de Trin. l. 3. c. 1. S. 6, 8

(t) Ibid. c. 2. S. 11.

(u) Ibid. c. 1. S. 2.

(w) Ibid. c. 2. S. 18.

nity. They that can at this rate diſtort the Holy Scriptures are Armour of Proof againſt all Scripture-Arguments, they muſt be left (as incapable of Conviction) to their own Prejudices: but they muſt not be thought to have anſwer'd their Adverſaries Arguments becauſe they have ſaid ſomething to them, which is computatively nothing, or worſe than nothing. They muſt make a new Bible before they can extinguiſh the Light wherewith this great Principle ſhineth, The Unity of God is the Mono-Theiſm of God the Father. This Principle (without ſeeking Artifices and Evaſions) ought to be freely and ingenuouſly granted to the Unitarians; but when they have gain'd it, all that they have gain'd by it againſt the Chriſtian Trinity they may put in their Eye, as will hereafter appear.

XIV. The Anti-Trinitarians object that God is the Head of Chriſt, and is alſo his God, (1 Cor. 11. 3. Matth. 27. 46. Joh. 20. 17. Eph. 1. 17. Heb. 1. 9. Apoc. 3. 12. Micah 5. 4.) which are things incompetible to the Son of God in the Scholaſtic Theology. To which Argument this Theology anſwereth, (x) that God is the Head of Chriſt according to his divine Nature, but is not his God, ſave only according to his human Nature. Which Anſwer is a ſelf-contradiction. For if God is the Head of Chriſt according to his divine Nature, he is neceſſarily his Godhead, (and conſequently his God) according to his divine Nature. God is to Chriſt a God and an Head, (an Imperial Head) as an Imperial Father is an Head to his Imperial Son, (who yet is of the ſame Imperial Eſtate with himſelf) his human-divine Perſon therefore is ſuch an Imperial Head which hath an Head, and is God ſo as to have a God, as the Author to the Hebrews ſaith of him, Thy Throne, O God, is for ever and ever. And yet he alſo ſaith of him, God even thy God hath anointed thee with the Oil of Gladneſs. The Son of God is neceſſarily the Son of the Imperial Eſtate of God, therefore the Imperial Eſtate of God is to him the Imperial Eſtate of God (as to the Imperial Son) and conſequently God is unto him a God. There can be therefore no ſuch thing as a Son of God which hath not God for his God, and conſequently there can be no ſuch thing as the Abſtract Son of God in the Scholaſtic Trinity, of whom the Scholaſticks ſay, (y) The Eternal Father is called the God of Chriſt, not as Chriſt is God and the Verbum, but as he is Man. In this Theology the Scriptural Mono-Theiſm doth not belong to God the Father, and therefore he cannot be the God of the ſecond Perſon in the Scholaſtic Trinity, which Trinity muſt fall if this great Principle ſtandeth firm, that God the Father is neceſſarily the God of the true Son of God, as he is intituled by our Saviour, My God and my Father, and in the Tenour of the New-Teſtament his God and Father, which two Names are not only fitly conjoyn'd, but inſeparably connex'd. For as Chriſt (the Father of his Church) cannot be a Father to any Perſon without being his Lord, this being his eſſential Dignity, to be the Lord of all that are his; ſo God cannot be a Father to any Perſon without being his God, this being his eſſential Dignity, to be a God (the Imperial Eſtate of a God) to all his Children and to all that are his. The Son of God therefore muſt have him for his Father, ſo as to have him for his God; to have him for his, is to have him for his God, and it is impoſſible that in reſpect of his own Son (or in any other reſpect) he ſhould be no God, as he muſt be, if he is his Father, and yet is not his God. If he is his Father, he is his divine imperial Father, and therefore is neceſſarily his God. Accordingly our Saviour by his Practice of Piety towards him through his whole Life practically made him his God. For his not ſeeking his own Glory, but God's Honour and Intereſt above all things, that God might be glorified in him and by him; his not ſeeking or doing his own Will, but the Will of the Father which ſent him; his religious Obedience to God, his keeping his Commandments, his doing always thoſe things that pleaſe him, and the entire reſigning his Will to the Will of God, was a practical making him his God. And ſuch was (z) his εὐλάβεια, Pious Fear and Obſervance towards God, or his religious Caution (as ſome render it) in declining at the greateſt rate every thing that was contrary to the Will of God. The many Prayers alſo which our Saviour put up unto him that was able to ſave him from Death, (ſometime with ſtrong Crying and Tears) were a practical making God his God. It will be ſaid that he practis'd all this Piety towards God only as Man; but there is a different Notion of it in the Apoſtle, who ſuppoſeth our Saviour to have practis'd it as a Son, and a Son he was, not only as Man, but according to his divine Nature, therefore according to his divine Nature God was his God. If we ſuppoſe the contrary, that according to his Divinity God was not his God, then according to his Divinity he did not owe Duty to God, and if ſo, then according to his Divinity he was not a Son in the Senſe of Law and Morality, and according to proper natural Generation. If he was God, ſo as not to have a God according to his Divinity, then God the Father could be his God but very diminutively, and ſo as rather not to be his God. He was therefore no more than forſaken of his God, that was rather not his God, when he cry'd out, My God, my God, why haſt thou forſaken me? He did but go to his God, that was rather not his God, when he ſaid to his Diſciples, I aſcend unto my Father and your Father, and to my God and your God. And becauſe if he is the Abſtract Son he cannot ſay my God (in the Religioniſts Senſe) if he is the Abſtract Son incarnate he cannot ſay my God but very diminutively, therefore (according to this Theology) it is not eaſy to ſay how the loſs of my God could be ſinking and overwhelming to our Saviour.

XV. The Anti-Trinitarians object the Apoſtle's Text, 1 Cor. 3. 33. Ye are Chriſt's and Chriſt is God's. Whence they irreligiouſly infer, that Chriſt is not a Perſon of the ſupreme Godhead; but they ought to make this religious Inference from it, that God is ſuch a ſuperior Owner and Proprietor of Chriſt according to his divine Nature as a Father is of a Son, is more than mutilately and diminutively his God, and it was not meerly his Nature as Man that in the Days of his Fleſh rever'd the Divinity in the Father, (a) as the Scholaſtic Theology affirmeth. Chriſt is not ſaid to be his own, (as we are not our own) but God the Father's, from whom the holy Writers derive his All, and to him they refer it. For all things in the Oeconomy of our Religion they derive from one God the Father, of whom are all things, (as being the prime Original and ſupreme Cauſe) and one Lord Jeſus Chriſt, by whom are all things, as being the mediatory Cauſe of all things, 1 Cor. 8. 6. God by him hath created all things, (x) Ibid. c. 4. S. 12, 13.

Heb. 1. 8, 9.

(y) Pater æternus Chriſti Deus appellatur, non quà ille Deus ac verbum eſt, ſed ut eſt homo. Petav. T. 4. l. 9. c. 6. S. 2.

Matth. 26. 39. Joh. 5. 30. and 6. 30. and 8. 29, 50. and 12. 28. and 13. 31. and 14. 31. and 15. 10. and 17. 4. Phil. 2. 8. Heb. 5. 8.

(z) Petav. de Trin. l. 3. c. 4. S. 8.

Heb. 5. 8.

(a) Petav. de Trin. l. 3. c. 4. S. 8.

Eph. 3. 9. God by him hath reconciled all things, Col. 1. 20. God by him hath given us the Victory, 1 Cor. 15. 57. God by him hath given us the Holy Spirit, Tit. 3. 7. God by him will judge the Secrets of Men, Rom. 2. 16. God by him wrought Miracles, Signs and Wonders, Act. 2. 22. All things are of God, who hath reconciled us to himſelf by Jeſus Chriſt, 2 Cor. 5. 18. Of God he is made unto us Wiſdom and Righteouſneſs and Sanctification and Redemption, 1 Cor. 1. 30. Chriſt glorified not himſelf to be made an High-prieſt, (as Aaron made not himſelf ſuch, but was called of God) but he that ſaid unto him, Thou art my Son, Heb. 5. 5. I have ſet my King upon my holy Hill of Sion. I will declare the Decree, The Lord hath ſaid unto me, Thou art my Son, this day have I begotten thee. Ask of me, and I ſhall give thee the Heathen for thine Inheritance, Pſal. 2. 5, 6, 7. So the Prophet Daniel hath a Viſion, wherein the Son of Man is repreſented as coming to the Ancient of Days, and there was given him Dominion and Glory and a Kingdom, Dan. 7. 13. As the regial Son hath his Kingdom by the Appointment and Donation of his Eternal Father, ſo himſelf was the choſen one of God, Luk. 23. 35. The holy One of God, Mar. 1. 24. The Lamb of God, Joh. 1. 29. The Gift of God, Joh. 4. 10. The Bread of God, Joh. 6. 33. The Salvation of God, Luk. 3. 6 The Chriſt of God, Luk. 9. 20. God ſanctified him and ſent him into the World, Joh. 10. 36. God the Father ſealed him, Joh. 6. 27. God anointed him with the Holy Ghoſt and with Power, Act. 10. 38. God gave the Spirit without meaſure unto him, Joh. 3. 34. God gave him to the World and to Death for us all, Joh. 3. 16. Rom. 8. 32. and God appointed him Heir of all things, Heb. 1. 2. The Father loveth the Son, and hath given all things into his hand, Joh. 3. 35. God hath put all things under his Feet, 1 Cor. 15. 27. God gave him the Throne of his Father David, Luk. 1. 32. God glorified his Son Jeſus, Act. 3. 13. God ſet him at his own Right Hand, Eph. 1. 20. God made him both Lord and Chriſt, a Prince and a Saviour, Act. 2. 36. and 5. 31. God hath highly exalted him, given him a Name above every Name, and every Tongue muſt confeſs that Jeſus Chriſt is Lord to the glory of God the Father, Phil 2. 11. God raiſed him up from the Dead, and gave him glory, that our Faith and Hope might be in God, 1 Pet. 1. 21. So the Scripture uſually repreſenteth the miraculous Reſurrection of our Saviour as God's doing, (the Operation of his tranſcendent Power) but in ſome places our Saviour repreſenteth it as done by himſelf, Joh. 2. 19. Deſtroy this Temple, and in three days I will raiſe it up, Joh. 10. 17, 18. I lay down my Life, that I might take it again. No Man taketh it from me, but I lay it down of my ſelf: I have power to lay it down, and I have power to take it again. This Commandment have I received of my Father. In theſe places our Saviour conſidereth himſelf as God's Meſſiah, and ſpeaketh not excluſively, but incluſively and comprehenſively of the Preſence, Power and Agency of his Father, that thereby he would raiſe up his Temple and could reaſſume his Life. For ſo theſe places muſt be interpreted, that they may be conſiſtent with the Stream and Tenour of the New-Teſtament, which affirmeth our Saviour's Reſurrection to have been done(b) by the Agency of God the Father, of whom our Saviour (conſidering himſelf as God's Meſſiah) uſually ſpeaketh agreeably to the holy Writers of the New-Teſtament, deriving his All from him, attributing and referring his All to him. So that none who will open unprejudic'd Eyes to read the New-Teſtament can ſuppoſe (as the Scholaſtic Theology doth) that in the main God was not his God nor his ſuperior Proprietor or Owner; but that in the main (as to his Divinity) he was only his own God, and at that rate a Self-owner, a Self-ſovereign.

The Son can do nothing of himſelf, but what he ſeeth the Father do. The Father loveth the Son, and ſheweth him all things that himſelf doeth: and he will ſhew him greater Works than theſe, that ye may marvel. I can of mine own ſelf do nothing: as I hear I judge, and my Judgment is juſt, becauſe I ſeek not mine own Will, but the Will of the Father which hath ſent me. My Doctrine is not mine, but his that ſent me. If any Man will do his Will, he ſhall know of the Doctrine whether it be of God or whether I ſpeak of my ſelf. He that ſpeaketh of himſelf ſeeketh his own glory: but he that ſeeketh his glory that ſent him, the ſame is true and no unrighteouſneſs is in him. When ye have lift up the Son of Man then ſhall ye know that I do nothing of my ſelf, but as my Father hath taught me, I ſpeak theſe things. I have not ſpoken of my ſelf, but the Father which ſent me, he gave me a Commandment, what I ſhould ſay and what I ſhould ſpeak. And I know that his Commandment is Life everlaſting: whatſoever I ſpeak therefore, even as the Father ſaid unto me, ſo I ſpeak. The Word which you hear is not mine, but the Father's which ſent me. The Father which dwelleth in me he doeth the Works. He that believeth on me believeth not on me, but on him that ſent me. I ſeek not mine own glory, there is one that ſeeketh and judgeth. If I honour myſelf, my Honour is nothing; it is my Father that honoureth me, of whom ye ſay, that he is your God. I am come in my Father's Name. The Works that I do in my Father's Name, they bear witneſs of me. To ſit on my Right Hand and on my Left is not mine to give, but it ſhall be given to them for whom it is prepared of my Father. All things are delivered to me of my Father. All Power is given unto me in Heaven and in Earth. The Father judgeth no Man, but hath committed all Judgment unto the Son. As the Father hath Life in himſelf, ſo hath he given to the Son to have Life in himſelf, and hath given him Authority to execute Judgment. The living Father hath ſent me, and I live by the Father. All that the Father giveth me ſhall come to me. Thou haſt given him Power over all Fleſh, that he ſhould give Eternal Life to as many as thou haſt given him. I have manifeſted thy Name unto the Men which thou gaveſt me out of the World: thine they were and thou gaveſt them me. Now they have known that all things whatſoever thou haſt given me are of thee. And the glory which thou gaveſt me I have given them. Father, I will that they alſo whom thou haſt given me be with me where I am, that they may behold my glory which thou haſt given me. He that overcometh to him will I give Power over the Nations, even as I received of my Father. When he cometh into the World (as the great Miſſionary of God) he ſaith, Sacrifice and Offering thou wouldeſt not, but a Body haſt thou prepared me: In Burnt-offering and Sacrifices for Sin thou haſt had no Pleaſure: Then ſaid I, lo, I come, (in the Volume of the Book it is written of me) to do thy Will, O God. Not my Will but thine be done. I will pray the Father, and he ſhall give you another Comforter. When the Comforter is come, whom I will ſend unto you from the Father, Joh. 11. 41. Becauſe of the People that ſtand by I ſaid it, that they may believe that thou haſt ſent me. (c) Ut inde me à te miſſum colligant, quòd videant omnia à me ad tuam laudem referri, nihil me mihi vindicare.

Joh. 5. 19, 20, 30. and 7. 16, 17, 18.

Joh. 8. 28. and 12. 49, 50. and 14 10, 24. and 12. 44.

Joh. 8. 50, 54. and 5. 43. and 10. 25. Matth. 20. 23. and 11. 27. and 28. 18.

Joh. 5. 22, 26, 27. and 6. 57, 37. and 17. 2, 6, 7, 22, 24.

Apoc. 2. 26, 27.

Heb. 10. 5, 6, 7.

Luk. 22. 42.

Joh. 14. 16. and 15. 26.

XVI. The Arians objected, that to God the Son, who is King coeternal, coeſſential and coequal

(b) Act. 2. 24, 30, 32. and 3. 15, 26. and 4. 10. and 5. 30. and 10. 40. and 13. 33 and 17. 31. Rom. 4. 24. and 8. 11. and 10. 9. 1 Cor. 6. 14 and 15. 15. 2 Cor. 4. 14. and 13. 4. Gal. 1. 1. Eph. 1. 19, 20. and 25. Col. 2. 12, 13. Heb. 13. 20.

(c) Grot. Not. in loc.

equal with the Father in the Scholaſtic Senſe, the Text of the Apoſtle, 1 Cor. 15. 24, 28. is altogether incompetible, for he cannot be ſuppos'd to deliver up the Kingdom to God the Father, and ſo to become ſubject unto him. To which the ancient Scholaſtic Theology anſwereth, (d) that Chriſt will preſent to his Father the Multitude of the Elect at the laſt day, and this is delivering up the Kingdom to him; and then Chriſt's Members will be perfectly ſubject unto God, and ſo the Son will be ſubject unto him. But theſe Anſwers are wild Miſinterpretations of the Apoſtle, who is not ſpeaking of any ſuch things as theſe, but of putting down all Rule and all Authority and Power. Some therefore (as Camero) diſtinguiſh a twofold Kingdom of Chriſt, the one the Eſſential, (which belongeth to him as the ſecond Perſon in the ſcholaſtic Trinity, and which cannot be depos'd) the other the vicarious and mediatory, (which was given to him) and this is ſuppos'd to ceaſe, and then the Son will be otherwiſe ſubject to the Father than he is now, but in what reſpect they do not intelligibly expreſs. Nor is it intelligible that retaining the eſſential Kingdom the Abdication of the mediatory Kingdom can make the Son more but leſs ſubject than now, (the mediatory Kingdom being ſome ſort of Subjection;) or that the Son by the Abdication of the mediatory Kingdom can become ſubject to the Father without becoming ſubject to himſelf, if he retaineth the eſſential Kingdom; or that God can be all in all without Chriſt's being all in all, if he retaineth the eſſential Kingdom. It is to no purpoſe (in this Matter) to diſtinguiſh ſeveral Conſiderations of the Son (as God and as Man) for his Perſon is but one, and if his Perſon retaineth the eſſential Kingdom, he retaineth the moſt unſubject Condition that the ſcholaſtic Theology can attribute to him, (the Condition of the Supream Eternal Almighty God) and therefore cannot be ſaid to become ſubject by the Abdication of the mediatory Kingdom. The Apoſtle alſo conſidereth our Saviour in his higheſt Capacity, as appeareth from the Emphaſis in his Words, yet ſaith of him, then ſhall the Son alſo himſelf be ſubject unto him that put all things under him: Nor would it be to the Apoſtle's Purpoſe, (which is to ſhew, that there will be no governing Eſtate but God only) to ſay that the Son will abdicate the mediatory Kingdom and yet retain the eſſential Kingdom. Theſe are mighty Difficulties, inſuperable by the ſcholaſtic Theology; but the Text is not of inſuperable difficulty. For altho' the Imperial Son of God will always continue ſuch, and he is not to be compar'd to a General in War, that giveth up his Commiſſion when the War is ended, (as the Unitarians ſuppoſe) yet at the end of things he will ceaſe to be a governing Imperial Eſtate. Imperial Chriſtianity will then ceaſe, and conſequently Chriſt will ceaſe to be the governing Imperial Eſtate of it, and nothing but Sanctity Imperial will remain. But the Imperial Son of God can never be of the Subject-Creature-Party, nor doth the Apoſtle ſuppoſe that he will be otherwiſe ſubject to God than as the regal Son of a King is ſubject to his alone reigning Father. The regal Son in ſuch Circumſtances is not a governing Imperial Eſtate, yet in ſome ſort reigneth (in the Senſe of Government) in his Father's reigning, but without the Adminiſtration of the Government. So Chriſt's Adminiſtration of the Government will ceaſe at the laſt day, and this Senſe of the place ſeemeth to be agreeable (e) to Pet. Martyr's Expoſition of it. From which genuin Expoſition of it we may infer, that there is no ſuch Son of God (or God the Son) as the ſecond Perſon in the ſcholaſtic Trinity that neceſſarily retaineth the eſſential Kingdom.

The Exaltation of Chriſt is by the Holy Writers ſet forth in an high Strain and in rapturous lofty Expreſſions; but the ſcholaſtic Theology maketh nothing of it. (f) No new Perfection or new Glory or Beatitude or any part of it did accrue to Chriſt by his Aſcenſion, only a change of external place was made by it. It is abſurd to ſay that God the Word was after his Incarnation promoted to greater glory than he had before. Hippolytus ſaith, (g) The Name above every Name, οὐ δόσις ὡς ἐν ἀρχῇ τῶν οὐκ ἐνόντων αὐτῷ φυσικῶς, was not a gift of that which he had not naturally in the beginning: but rather a return to that which he had eſſentially and in the beginning. Thus the celebrated Exaltation of our Saviour is in this Theology (in the Compute of the whole) made nothing, and not only ſo, but it is made leſs than nothing, and not an Exaltation, but a Degradation. For to allot the mediatory Kingdom (ſuppos'd to be the only given Kingdom) to ſuch a divine Perſon, who was fully poſſeſs'd of the eſſential Kingdom, is a Degradation, the mediatory Kingdom being manifeſtly below the eſſential Kingdom, as all Men will acknowledge, ſave only ſuch (and it is ſtrange that there ſhould be any ſuch) who ſuppoſe the Mediatorſhip to be above the Authority of God. The Anti-Trinitarians argue, If the Son of God is the ſecond Perſon of the Scholaſtic Trinity, and was always fully poſſeſs'd of the eſſential Kingdom, his plenary Right of reigning could not be given him at a certain time (as the New-Teſtament affirmeth) for he always had it; nor could God give him at that certain time the plenary Poſſeſſion of the divine Sovereignty, for he was always fully poſſeſs'd of it. A mediatory Kingdom, as it is meerly the officiary Dignity of Mediation, might be given him, but this could not be the Exaltation of his Perſon. He might be declaratively exalted, but this is not the Exaltation which the New-Teſtament celebrateth, which is the making him both Lord and King, the inveſting him with all Power in Heaven and Earth, the raiſing him above all Principality and Power and Might and Dominion, (Angels, Authorities and Powers being made ſubject unto him) the giving him the Throne and the Name above every Name. That the divine imperial Son of God in the ſenſe of the holy-popular Theology ſhould be thus exalted (as a Reward of his Obedience and Sufferings) is hugely agreeable and eaſily intelligible; but to attribute this Exaltation to the ſecond Perſon of the ſcholaſtic Trinity, who is always and eſſentially the Supreme Almighty God in plenary Poſſeſſion of the high and holy imperial Eſtate, is hugely incongruous and unintelligible. If we ſuppoſe him to be incarnate (in the ſcholaſtic ſenſe) yet an Exaltation is not properly competible to his Perſon (who cannot be made greater or better than he is) at leaſt it is competible to him only in reſpect of the Human Nature, and therefore but very mutilately and diminutively; and in reſpect of his whole Perſon it is an Exaltation, that is no Exaltation, (a Reward that is no Reward) and much more no Exaltation than an Exaltation, becauſe it is incompetible to his divine Nature. Which divine Nature is ſo far from being capable of an Exaltation, that (in conſort with and undi-

---

(d) Petav. de Trin. l. 2. c. 3. S. 15. & l. 3. c. 5. S. 1, 2.

(e) Loc. Com. Claſſ. 2. c. 17. ſ. 14.

(f) Chriſto per ſuam Aſcenſionem nulla nova acceſſit perfectio vel gloria nova vel beatitudo, aut pars ejus duntaxat loci extrinſeci mutatio facta eſt. Biel in Feſt. Aſſumpt. B. Mariæ Ser. 4. Deum Verbum poſt Incarnationem ad majorem quàm ante gloriam fuiſſe provectum, abſurdam eſt dictu. Petav. T. 4. l. 15. c. 4. S. 2.

(g) Ap. D. Bull. Def. Fid. Nic. p. 103. Ed. an. 1703.

undividedly from the Father and the Holy Ghoſt) it is ſuppos'd to give all things, and conſequently the Exaltation to the Human Nature. But this Hypotheſis cannot be true, for beſides that the Scriptures repreſent our Saviour's Exaltation and Glorification as peculiarly the Act of God the Father, (Joh. 17. 5.) it is not tolerable to ſay, that the Son of God committed all Judgment to the Son of God, made him Lord and King, and gave him a Name above every Name. Satisfactory Anſwers to theſe Arguments are not to be expected from the ſcholaſtic Theology, for what can be expected from ſuch a Theology, which groſly miſtaketh and miſinterpreteth the plaineſt places in the Bible? Is there any thing more plain than that of the Apoſtle, Let all the Houſe of Iſrael know aſſuredly that God hath made that ſame Jeſus whom ye have crucified both Lord and Chriſt? Act. 2. 36. This the Arians objected, and the ſcholaſtic Theology anſwereth, that it is meant of the Incarnation. (h) Pet. de Trin. l. 2. c. 3. S. 3. (h) This is the only true ſenſe of the place, the Human Nature being aſſum'd into the Conſortſhip of the divine Subſtance, thereby he is ſaid to be made both Chriſt and Lord. But what will this Theology ſay to that of the Apoſtle, Heb. 1. 6. When he bringeth in the firſt begotten into the World he ſaith, And let all the Angels of God worſhip him. A divine Edict was publiſh'd at that time enjoyning the holy Angels to worſhip the Son of God. But if he was always poſſeſs'd of the eſſential Kingdom, at that time they could not but know him to be their ancient Lord and Sovereign. But (when he was brought into the World) they did not know him to be ſuch (as appeareth from the divine Edict enjoyning them to worſhip him, which had been ſuperfluous, if they had known him to be their ancient Lord and Sovereign;) therefore he was not always poſſeſs'd of the eſſential Kingdom.

XVII. The Arians objected, that none knew of the laſt day, not the Angels, neither the Son, but the Father. Marc. 13. 32. To this the ſcholaſtic Theology anſwereth; that our Saviour's words are of this meaning, He would not declare it, or as his Father's Legate and Ambaſſadour he was not to declare it (but was prohibited) it was not revealed to him, that he might reveal it to others. The moſt ſay, He knew of it as God, but was neſcient of it only as Man. Which is to ſay, that the Father doth not ſignifie the Father only, but two other Perſons; and that the Son doth not ſignifie the Son properly ſuch; for Chriſt as Man is not properly the Son according to this Theology. Joh. 10. 29. our Saviour ſaith, My Father which gave them me, is greater than all. Joh. 14. 28. If ye loved me, ye would rejoyce, becauſe I ſaid, I go unto my Father; for my Father is greater than I. Our Saviour affirmeth, that his going to the Father would ſignifie very much to the bettering his condition, for this reaſon, becauſe my Father is greater than I. In the Interpretation of which words, (that were very much inſiſted on by the Arians) the ſcholaſtic Theology is not conſiſtent with it ſelf. (i) Petav. ſupr. l. 2. c. 2. (i) For ſometimes it will have the words to be ſpoken of our Saviour only according to his humane nature; and if ſo, the Father is not greater than Chriſt according to his divine nature, which yet the more ancient ſcholaſtic Theology affirmeth. It underſtandeth theſe words to be ſpoken of our Saviour according to his divine nature, and acknowledgeth the Father to be greater than Chriſt κατὰ τὸ αἴτιον, as being the principle and fountain of the divinity. But this ſenſe is impertinent to our Saviour's Scope; for it doth not ſhew, that his going to the Father will ſignifie any thing (much leſs very much) to the bettering his condition. Nor may we limit the ſenſe of his Words to his humane nature; for it is a poor buſineſs to ſay of God, My Father is greater than I as Man (the compariſon is between Perſon and Perſon ſimply and without addition) and according to this Interpretation in how ſlender a degree is our Saviour's Affirmation true (My Father is greater than I) and how little would his going to the Father ſignifie to the bettering his Condition? Sound Reaſon there is in theſe Argumentations of the Anti-Trinitarians againſt the ſcholaſtic Theology: but there is neither ſound Reaſon nor true Religion in the Inference which they draw from our Saviour's words, namely, that Chriſt is a minor Deity heterouſian to the Godhead. For our Saviour's compariſon is between a divine imperial Father and his divine imperial Son not yet poſſeſs'd of his divine imperial eſtate.

The Diſcourſe between our Saviour and a Young-man Matt. 19. 17. is a Diſcourſe between two great Religioniſts, whereof the one checketh the other for his Language (not well-becoming a great Religioniſt) in ſtyling him good Maſter. Why calleſt thou me good (ſaith our Saviour) there is none good but one, that is God. This Text the Arians objected againſt the ſcholaſtic Trinity, and it is of ſome force upon this account, becauſe it proveth God the Father's Mono theiſm. For our Saviour appropriateth Goodneſs unto God (the Father) conformably to thoſe other Texts (which the Arians alſo objected) God only wiſe, Rom. 16. 27. who only hath immortality, 1 Tim. 6. 16. In theſe Texts our Saviour is manifeſtly diſtinguiſh'd from the one only wiſe and good and immortal God (to whom he is related as the only begotten Son) and therefore the ſcholaſtic Theology which interpreteth theſe Attributes to be in theſe Texts Attributions to the whole Trinity, manifeſtly diſtorteth the holy Scriptures. As on the other Hand the Anti-Trinitarians do not reaſon from Scripture in their unchriſtian degrading our Saviour below a Perſon of the ſupreme Godhead. For let us only ſuppoſe, that the holy Spirit is a Perſon of the ſupreme God-head as the Agent of that imperial eſtate; may not this holy Spirit ſay of God the Father, God only is wiſe, God only is good, God only hath immortality, without excluding himſelf from being a Perſon of the ſupreme Godhead? Theſe Attributions directly and primarily are the peculiar Attributions of God the Father, to whom Wiſdom, Goodneſs and Immortality ſupereminently belongeth. But this Peculiarity and Supereminence doth not at all claſh with the Wiſdom, Goodneſs, and Immortality of the other divine Perſons, but inferreth it. For becauſe God only is wiſe, good, and hath immortality, therefore his imperial Son and his holy Spirit muſt have Wiſdom, Goodneſs, and Immortality, as being Perſons of his Godhead; and they muſt have ſuch Wiſdom, Goodneſs, and Immortality, as belongeth to ſuch Perſons of his Godhead.

The Anti-Trinitarians object, that the ſecond Perſon in the ſcholaſtic Trinity cannot be ſuch a Legate or Miſſionary of God as our Saviour was. For that Abſtract Son of God cannot come down from Heaven, nor remove from Place to Place, and therefore cannot be ſent by him into the World. And if he is under no Authority, as many ſuppoſe (being the eternal almighty God) he cannot be authoritatively ſent by God, nor come in his Name, nor receive his Commandments and obſerve him. If he is the eternal almighty God, he ought to be counted ſuch, and therefore ought to repreſent himſelf as ſuch: but if he be ſuch a Miſſionary of God as our Saviour was, he muſt repreſent himſelf as of a very diſſonant Character from himſelf, he muſt ſay of himſelf things utterly incompetible to ſuch a perſon and inconſiſtent with Truth. For being abſolutely omnipotent and able of himſelf to do all things, yet ſpeaking as the Father's Miſſionary (and therefore according to his divine Nature) he muſt ſay, I can of my ſelf do nothing. Being abſolutely Omnipotent from Eternity yet ſpeaking as the Father's Miſſionary (and therefore according to his divine Nature) he muſt ſay, All Power is (in time) given unto me. The Father hath (in time) given to the Son, to have Life in himſelf. Being abſolutely Omniſcient from Eternity yet ſpeaking as the Father's Miſſionary he muſt ſay, As my Father hath taught me (in time) I ſpeak theſe things. As I hear I judge. The Father which ſent me he gave me a Commandment, what I ſhould ſay, and what I ſhould ſpeak. And the holy Writers muſt ſay of him, Apoc. 1. 1. The Revelation of Jeſus Chriſt which God (in time) gave unto him. Being the Almighty Eternal God yet ſpeaking as the Father's Miſſionary he muſt ſay, If I honour my ſelf my Honour is nothing. I am not come in mine own Name, (by mine own Authority) The Words that I ſpeak unto you I ſpeak not of my ſelf. My Doctrine is not mine, but his that ſent me. In the Preſence of his Father that ſent him he muſt place all his Safety. He that ſent me is with me: the Father hath not left me alone: for I do always thoſe things that pleaſe him. And although the whole Trinity of Perſons are of one individual ſcholaſtic Eſſence, Will, Power, Energy and Operation, yet (ſpeaking as the Father's Miſſionary and according to his divine Nature) he muſt ſay, I came down from Heaven not to do mine own Will, but the Will of him that ſent me I ſeek not mine own Glory, there is one that ſeeketh and judgeth. All our Saviour's Diſcourſes are hugely agreeable to a divine Imperial Son of the Chriſtian and holy-popular Kind, but not to ſuch a Deity of Perſon that is in himſelf the Eternal Almighty God. It ſeemeth incongruous and too mean for him not to attribute any thing to himſelf, to place all his Safety in the Preſence of his Father that ſent him, from his Conſortſhip to derive the Infallibility of his Judgment, (If I judge, my Judgment is true: for I am not alone, but I and the Father that ſent me) and from his Miſſion to derive the Validity of his Teſtimony, Joh. 8. 14. Though I bear record of my ſelf, yet my record is true: for I know whence I came and whither I go. St. Paul ſpeaketh not congruouſly of ſuch a Deity of Perſon, 2 Cor. 13. 4. he liveth by the power of God. In his Reſurrection he ought to be repreſented as his own Father and his own Son, and his Divinity ought to be repreſented as ſaying to his Humanity Thou art my Son, this day have I begotten thee.

To this Heap of the Anti-Trinitarians Arguments we will annex theſe two other. They argue, that if Chriſt was the Eternal Almighty God it was needleſs and ſuperfluous to give the Holy Spirit unto him. To which the Scholaſtic Theology anſwereth, that the divine Perſons cannot act ſeparately ad extrà, what the Father doth that the Son doth, and that the Holy Ghoſt doth by one individual Act. The divine Word acteth by and in Conjunction with the Holy Spirit, and thereby he ſanctifieth his own Human Nature. Thus the Son of God (ſanctifying his own Human Nature, and conſequently being his own regenerate Child) is again made to be his own Father and his own Son. The Anti-Trinitarians argue, that if the Devil had known Chriſt to be the Eternal Almighty God (and he muſt know it as well as the holy People) he would not have been ſo prodigiouſly fooliſh as to attempt his Seduction, and to ſollicit him to ſo vile a thing as to fall down and worſhip him. To which Argument the Scholaſtic Theology anſwereth, that the Devil underſtood not the Myſtery of the Incarnation. He did not therefore underſtand this Name The Son of God in the Notion of the Scholaſtic Theology. The holy People therefore muſt not be ſuppos'd ſo to have underſtood it, unleſs we will ſuppoſe them to have been better Schoolmen than the grand Maſter of Subtilties. Doubtleſs our Saviour was expos'd to the Devil's Temptation, as the Prince of the Holy Empire, to encounter and to vanquiſh the Prince of Darkneſs.

XVIII. Againſt the Trinity and the Deity of the Meſſiah as they are repreſented in the Scholaſtic Theology, the Jews make Objections as well as the Anti-Trinitarians of the Chriſtian Profeſſion. And as their Objections in ſeveral Inſtances are the ſame, ſo the Scholaſtic Theology anſwereth them both alike. For the Jews object (k) the Prieſt is he that offereth Sacrifice, God doth not offer Sacrifice, but Sacrifice is offer'd unto him; therefore it is abſurd to ſuppoſe our Meſſiah (the Prieſt) to be God in the ſenſe of the ſcholaſtic Theology. To which ſolid Objection the ſcholaſtic Theology anſwereth, that Chriſt doth not offer Sacrifice as God, but as Mediator and as Man. This Anſwer diſtinguiſheth two Capacities of the ſame Perſon in reſpect of himſelf, in the one he is the Creditor, in the other the Debtor. And as this both Debtor and Creditor in reſpect of himſelf payeth himſelf, at the ſame rate the ſcholaſtic Theology maketh Chriſt Mediator, as will be hereafter diſcours'd. The Jews alſo object, if our Meſſiah was God (in the ſenſe of the ſcholaſtic Theology) how could all Power in Heaven and Earth (in time) be given him who was always fully poſſeſs'd of it? what need was there that it ſhould be given him? is he not God as well as the Father, and hath he not the ſame Power over all Nations? But why then doth the Father ſay unto him, Aſk of me and I ſhall give thee the Nations and the utmoſt ends of the Earth for thine Inheritance? were not the Nations his Poſſeſſion antecedently to this Poſtulation? To which Objection the ſcholaſtic Theology anſwereth, (l) that he hath an eſſential power over all things equal with the Father, but as the Mediator and as Man becauſe of a ſingular Office and Oeconomy he hath a delegated Power from the Father. Not as if the Power of the Son was of different greatneſs, (now or then greater or leſſer) but there is a difference in the Diſpenſation of it, as he is God and as he is conſtituted Mediator by the Father. The Jews are not ſatisfy'd with this Anſwer to their Objection, and Chriſtians have much leſs Reaſon to be ſatisfy'd with it, as being a Contradiction to a great and the divineſt part of the New-Teſtament. For to allot an Office of delegated Power to one that was of eſſential Power equal to the Father, was an Humiliation, not a Glorification. And if the Perſon of our Saviour had (in time) no Augmentation of Power conferr'd upon him, all the magnificent Deſcriptions of his Exaltation in the New-Teſtament (that amount to nothing) what are they but meer Smoke and Vapour? The Jews object further, that

Joh. 8. 16.

(k) Hoornbeck c. jud. l. 5. c. 1. p. 367.

(l) Ibid p. 363. Buxt. ſyn. jud. p. 588. Ed. an. 1614.

that if our Meſſiah was God (in the ſcholaſtic ſenſe) he could not be impotent, nor need Aid and Help. If the Son is the ſame (ſcholaſtic) divine Eſſence with the Father, the one will have no need of the other. How then can the Father ſay to the Son, Sit thou at my Right Hand, until I make thine Enemies thy Footſtool? To this Objection the ſcholaſtic Theology anſwereth, (m) that one Perſon of the Deity needeth not another. But the Meſſiah is ſaid to be exalted and ſeated at the Right Hand of God, not as God, but as Man and Mediator. In which Anſwer there is nothing of ſound Theology. For if one Perſon of the Deity needeth not another, what meaneth our Saviour's Prayers with ſtrong Cries and Tears? And if he is ſeated at the Right Hand of God, not as God; but as Man, this inferreth, that as not God he ſitteth upon the Throne of God (the Throne of Glory) which is a Contradiction. Thus every way unſatisfactory are the Anſwers which the ſcholaſtic Theology maketh to the Jews Objections againſt the Deity of the Meſſiah; and the Anſwer which it maketh to their Objection againſt the Trinity is of the ſame Character. For the Jews (as alſo the Muhammedans) object againſt the ſcholaſtic Trinity, that it is impoſſible. And the ſcholaſtic Theology thus far agreeth with the Objectors, (n) Trinitatis myſterium, ἀνεξερεύνητον, omninò eſt, The Myſtery of the Trinity is altogether paſt finding out, and is not a matter of human ſearch, but to be receiv'd by Faith-ſubmiſſion. The Weakneſs of theſe Anſwers to the Objections of Infidels (againſt the principal Articles of the Chriſtian Faith) is eaſily underſtood, but can never ſufficiently be lamented.

(m) Hoorn-beek ſupr p. 365, 367

(n) Hulſ. Theol. Jud. par. 1. l. 1. p. 94.

CHAP. VI.

1. A ſixth ſort of Argument for the Truth of our Idea of the Son of God is the true Idea of the Meſſiah. His Idea ſummarily repreſented, and the firſt Branch thereof. 2. A ſecond Branch of his Idea. 3. A third Branch of it. 4. A fourth Branch of his Idea. 5. A fifth Branch of it. 6. A ſixth Branch of his Idea. 7. A ſeventh Branch of it. 8. An eighth Branch of his Idea. 9. A ninth Branch of it. 10. A tenth Branch of his Idea. 11. A Conſectary from our Idea of the Meſſiah.

1. THE Truth of our Idea of the Son of God may be proved and illuſtrated from a ſixth ſort of Argument, which is the Idea of the Meſſiah, whoſe Idea is in great degree co-incident with our Idea of the Son of God, and muſt be thus ſummarily repreſented.

> The Chriſt or the Meſſiah as ſuch is the Lord's anointed to this officiary Dignity,
> The mediatory Saviour-King of the Holy Empire.

By this Name The Chriſt or the Meſſiah the ancient Jews that liv'd before our Saviour's Time called an illuſtrious Perſon predicted and promiſed to their Nation as a Saviour-Prince. Under this Name and Notion they expected him, although the Name occurreth but once in the Old Teſtament, Dan. 9. 25. From the going forth of the Commandment unto the Meſſiah the Prince. The Jews might have called him by ſeveral other Names (Shiloh, Emmanuel, The Branch, Menahem) but they made choice of this Name The Meſſiah, a Name that denoteth his officiary Dignity, which will be well underſtood by diſtinctly conſidering the ſeveral Ingredients of his Idea.

His Idea (in the firſt place) repreſenteth him as The Anointed, according to the Signification of his Name; for The Meſſiah in Hebrew and The Chriſt in Greek ſignifyeth The Anointed. The Reaſon of which Name is a Cuſtom which the Jews had to ſet apart and conſecrate Perſons that were deſign'd for an eminent and extraordinary Employment, by anointing them; and in the ſame manner things inanimate were made ſacred. For Moſes took the anointing Oil, and anointed the Tabernacle and all that was therein, and ſanctified them, and anointed the Altar and all the Veſſels, both the Laver and his foot to ſanctify them, Lev. 8. 10, 11. Long before the Time of Moſes Jacob poured Oil upon the top of a Pillar to conſecrate it; and in like manner the Heathen Nations poured Oil upon Stones (Bætulia) and pay'd their religious Adorations to them. And as the Heathen Nations ſuppos'd that a divine Virtue reſided in their anointed Stones, ſo the Jews by anointing Perſons deſign'd for eminent and extraordinary Employments denoted and ſignified a plenteous Effuſion of Gifts and Abilities upon them, to qualify them for their great Employments. Which plenteous Effuſion of Gifts was more than meerly adumbrated in the Unction of ſome of their Kings; for Saul had a regial Spirit conferr'd upon him, and the Spirit of the Lord came upon David immediately after his regial Unction, 1 Sam. 16. 13, 14. The Cuſtom of anointing Kings was ſo uſual in Ancient Times, that in Jotham's Parable to anoint a King ſignifieth to elect and conſtitute him ſuch. The Trees went forth to anoint a King over them. They addreſs'd themſelves to the Bramble, and the Bramble ſaid unto the Trees, If in truth ye anoint me King over you, then come and put your truſt in my Shadow. (o) In ſome Greek Copies alſo that which in our Tranſlation runneth thus; They went to make Abimelech King, is thus rendred; They went (χρίσαι) to anoint Abimelech King. In Ancient Times therefore, when Kings and other extraordinary Perſons were ſolemnly anointed, there were many Chriſts (anointed Perſons or Sons of Oil) but one is ſupereminently ſuch, and to him the Name is appropriated. Yet at the time of his appearing and long before the Jews had loſt their Unction; for themſelves tell us, that the Unction which they us'd in anointing their Kings and High-Prieſts was hid in the Days of Joſiah, but it will be found again when the Meſſiah cometh, that he may be anointed with it and the Kings and Prieſts in his Days. But becauſe they had loſt their Unction before our Saviour's Time, it cannot be ſuppos'd that he was anointed with material Oil, yet he muſt be known and conſider'd as The Anointed.

Gen. 28, 18.

Jud. 9.

(o) Selden Titles p. 107. Ed. 3.

II. His Idea repreſenteth him as The Lord's Anointed agreeably to his Name The Lord's Chriſt, The Chriſt of God, Pſal. 2. 2. The Kings of the Earth ſet themſelves againſt the Lord and againſt his Anointed, Act. 4. 26, 27. The Rulers were gathered together againſt the Lord and againſt his Chriſt. For of a truth againſt thy holy Child Jeſus, whom

Luk. 2. 26. and 9. 2

thou haſt anointed, the Gentiles and the People of Iſrael were gathered together. He was therefore the King elect, for his Name, The Lord's Anointed, importeth that he was of God's electing, that God ſegregated him and ſingled him out from all others, and pitch'd upon him to be the Perſon that ſhould do the greateſt piece of Service, and bear the greateſt officiary Dignity that ever was. And that he was of God's preferring and dignifying, who appointed him his high Office and Dignity (far above all others) and being ſo diſcriminated and eſpecially dignified by him, and nearly related to him, he was ἐξαίρετος, choice and eximious in God's Eſteem, (the great Favourite) and ſo ſeparated from all others by way of Eminency, in which ſenſe he was The choſen of God, Luk. 23. 35. Matth. 12. 18. 1 Pet. 2. 4. His Name importeth alſo, that as he is of God's electing and preferring, and infinitely choice, and of Precioſity in his Eyes, ſo he is of God's patronizing, who will not fail to own him and ſtand by him, Pſal. 89. 20, 21. I have found David my Servant, with my holy Oil have I anointed him, with whom my hand ſhall be eſtabliſhed: mine Arm alſo ſhall ſtrengthen him. God will be a mighty Patron to his anointed King, and will defend and maintain him (in the Execution of his Office) and therefore ſaith of him, Behold my Servant, whom I uphold, (defend and maintain) Iſa. 42. 1. The Lord at his Right Hand, (as his παραστάτης, or Aſſiſtant) will ſtrike through Kings in the day of his Wrath, (will utterly deſtroy the Enemies of his Kingdom and Government, though never ſo potent) Pſal. 110. 5, 6. But when his Diſciples in their Prayer to God ſtyled him Thy holy Child Jeſus whom thou haſt anointed, their meaning was, whom thou haſt authoriz'd and commiſſion'd. Act. 4. 27. His Name importeth that he was authoriz'd and ordain'd by God to his ſacred Office and Dignity, had his Miſſion and Commiſſion from him, (was authoriz'd and commiſſion'd to do all the Offices of the Saviour Prince) he came to us in his Father's Name, and was commiſſion'd ſo to do, and had his Mandate from above, Joh. 8. 42. I came not of my ſelf, but he ſent me, Joh. 10. 36. The Father ſanctified him, (ſelected, ſet him apart and appointed him for his ſaving Office and Employ) and ſo ſent him into the World, and gave miraculous Atteſtations to him. For him hath God the Father ſealed, (Joh. 6. 27.) God hath authoriz'd and commiſſionated him as it were under his broad Seal, (his Miracles were as it were the broad Seal of Heaven) thereby giving him both Authority and Credence, as Ambaſſadors have both their Authority and Credence from the King's Seal. The Kings of Iſrael, as being the Lord's Anointed, were no common and vulgar, but very ſacred, venerable and inviolable Perſons, (although they were anointed only to an inferior and petty Regality;) our Saviour's Name therefore (the Lord's Anointed) importeth the mighty Sacredneſs of his Perſon, whom God hath ſupereminently ſet apart for himſelf, and who is anointed to the fulleſt height of Honour and Dignity. The anointed One of God is neceſſarily the holy One of God, as Holineſs denoteth unvulgarneſs and unvileneſs of Perſon, Marc. 1. 24. He was alſo the Lord's Anointed anſwerably to that divine Influx which in Ancient Times was (ſometimes) appointed to reſide upon God's Anointed (to inable and qualify them to diſcharge that Office and Dignity to which they were anointed;) for to qualify him for his high and holy Function he was anointed with the Holy Ghoſt and with Power, Act. 10. 38. When he entred upon his Office and Miniſtry the Spirit of God deſcended upon him, Matth. 3. 16. and he deſcended in the Power of the Spirit into Galilee, thus noticing himſelf in the Synagogues. The Spirit of the Lord is upon me, becauſe he hath anointed me to preach the Goſpel to the Poor, Luk. 4. 14, 18. His Unction by the Holy Ghoſt therefore was at his Baptiſm, (p) but the ſcholaſtic Theology will have our Saviour to have been anointed with the Holy Ghoſt in the Womb of the Bl. Virgin, when the divine Nature by the Operation of the Holy Ghoſt was conjoyned with the Human Nature, of which ſort of Unction (ſo called) it muſt be ſaid, that it is nothing like an anointing; yet from hence this Theology deriveth the Name of Chriſt. Not conſidering that this Name The Chriſt chiefly denoteth an officiary Dignity, and that to be anointed in a large ſenſe ſignifieth to be appointed and conſtituted. Whence our Saviour's Inauguration into his Heavenly Regality is called his Unction, Heb. 1. 9. and King Cyrus being a ſort of Saviour-Prince raiſed, ordained and conſtituted by an eſpecial Providence, is called by God mine anointed, Iſa. 45. 1. He is my Shepherd, and ſhall perform all my Pleaſure, Iſa. 44. 28.

III. The Idea of the Meſſiah repreſenteth him as anointed to be the Lord (A divine imperial Perſon, A Creature-tranſcendent Lord, Prince and Potentate) The King of the holy Empire. In his Perſon theſe three honourary Attributes concur; He was The Lord's anointed, he was The Lord anointed, and He was anointed to be the Lord. He was The Lord's anointed as being the Perſon whom God anointed. He was The Lord anointed, as being His holy Child Jeſus, who was natively The Lord, Luk. 2. 11. And he was anointed to be The Lord, as being inveſted with the officiary Dignity of the divine imperial Lord the King of the holy Empire, which is ſignify'd by his Name Meſſiah. (q) Chriſt is not a proper name, but a name of Potentacy and Kingdom. For ſo the Jews called their Kings. As amongſt the Romans the putting on the Purple is an Enſign of the regial dignity aſſumed: ſo with them the Unction of the ſacred Ointment conferr'd the regial name and power. For this reaſon we call him Chriſt, that is, Anointed, who is called in Hebrew Meſſias. Which Name ſignifieth him to be a King, not of an earthly, but of an heavenly and ſempiternal Kingdom. (r) In the Evangeliſts the name of King and of Meſſiah is confounded. Notum illud Judæorum משיח לשון שררה poteſtatem denotare unctionem, & Meſſiæ nomen poteſtatis eſſe. The Jews are known to ſay, That Unction denoteth Authority and Power, and that Meſſiah is a name of Potentacy. So the Jews uſually ſtile him Rex Meſſias, and the Chaldee Paraphraſts commonly call him מלכא משיחא the King Meſſiah. This was the Jews Notion of him, when they thus accus'd him, Luk. 23. 2. We found this Fellow perverting the Nation, and forbidding to give Tribute to Cæſar, ſaying that he himſelf is Chriſt a King. He was adjudg'd to ſuffer Death for this reaſon, becauſe he affirm'd that he was Chriſt a King, which was counted Treaſon againſt Cæſar. In the Hiſtory of his Paſſion to be the Chriſt, Matth. 26. 68. to be a King, Luk. 23. 2. to be the King of Iſrael, Matt. 27. 42. or the King of the Jews Mar. 15. 18. are terms of the ſame Signification. Herod ſet him

(p) Petav. T. 4. l. 11. c. 8, 9.

(q) Chriſtus non proprium nomen eſt, ſed nuncupatio poteſtatis & regni. Sic enim Judæi reges ſuos appellabant. —— Sicut nunc Romanis indumentum purpuræ inſigne eſt regiæ dignitatis aſſumptæ: ſic illis unctio ſacri unguenti nomen ac poteſtatem regiam conferebat. —— ob hanc rationem nos eum Chriſtum nuncupamus, id eſt, unctum, qui Hebraicè Meſſias dicitur. —— quo nomine rex ſignificatur: non quod ille regnum hoc terrenum fuerit adeptus, ſed quod cœleſte ac ſempiternum. Lactant. l. 4. c. 7.

(r) Heinſ. Ariſt. ſac. p. 392.

him out as a mock King, ſo did the Souldiers and Pilate (Joh. 19. 14.) who alſo in his Examination inſiſted upon his Kingſhip: and this was the ſenſe of the Inſcription upon the Croſs, that our Saviour ſuffer'd Death for affirming himſelf to be the Chriſt, or the King of the Jews. Art thou a King then? ſaid Pilate. Jeſus anſwer'd, Thou ſay'ſt that I am a King, Joh. 18. 37. Under this Notion he is predicted in the Book of Pſalms: Yet have I ſet my King upon my holy hill of Sion, Pſal. 2. 6. and 72. 1. Under this Notion he is uſually predicted in the Prophets, as a King that ſhall come, a King that ſhall reign, as Meſſiah the Prince, the Prince of Peace, as a Ruler, and as ſitting upon the Throne of David. So his Inauguration into his heavenly Eſtate of Kingſhip is called The making him Chriſt (which was done gradually, in the degree of Inchoation, before it was done in the degree of Perfection) Act. 2. 36. His Name therefore primarily ſignifieth and denoteth him to be a King, and ſuch a King as his Idea repreſenteth him, namely (A divine imperial Perſon) The King of the holy Empire, who is The Lord the King. For Chriſt is of definitive Notion The King of the Iſrael of God (the King of the Jews) the King of Sion. Becauſe David was King of the holy People (the literal Iſrael) therefore Chriſt is ſaid to ſucceed him in the Throne, and to be inthron'd on the Hill of Sion, which was the Seat of David's Throne and Kingdom. Luk. 1. 32. Pſal. 2. 6. He is therefore the King of the holy People (the Church and People of God) of the holy Commonwealth (the Commonwealth of Saints) and the Title which was falſly attributed to a Muhammedan Chaliph is the true Definition of the true Meſſiah (s) Emir Elmumunin Rex credentium, The Prince, Lord or Emperour of the true Believers. His Dominion is univerſal and unlimited, but ſo as to be King of the Church only in the ſenſe of Alliance and Society. Epheſ. 1. 21. God hath put all things under his feet, and given him to be the head over all things to the Church. Over his univerſal Church he reigneth as the regent Party of a Polity, enjoying and exerciſing all Kingly Prerogatives, Powers, and Adminiſtrations; therein his Sovereignty is acknowledg'd, his holy Laws and happy Government take place, and he enjoyeth the Honours, Homage, and Service due to a divine King. His Church is his Kingdom, the Comprehenſion of his Liege-people, whom he protecteth from Enemies, whoſe Wants he provideth for, and whom he ſupporteth in their Troubles; eſtabliſhing Peace in their Borders, reſtraining, ſuppreſſing, and deſtroying all Adverſaries to this his Kingdom and his People's Welfare: exerciſing Judgment over them, diſtributing the greateſt Rewards to the loyal and faithful, and inflicting upon others the ſevereſt Puniſhments. But as for the reſt of the World they are in one ſenſe Chriſt's Subjects, and in another ſenſe they are not his Subjects (not actually his Citizens and Societiſts) they are in the ſtate of open declared Enemies to his Crown and Dignity.

IV. All his Offices are compris'd in his Regality, and in his being The Lord's Anointed. (t) Some ſuppoſe him to have had the Right of ſucceeding David in the temporal Kingdom, and to have had alſo the Aaronical Prieſthood, which are groundleſs Conceits, extremely alien from the Chriſtian Religion. But as in general He is the King, it belongeth to him (according to the ſenſe of ancient Writers and the uſage of ancient Times) to have the Prieſthood alſo. For Melchizedec (an illuſtrious Type of Chriſt) was both King and Prieſt (u) and the Kings of ſeveral Heathen Nations were Prieſts alſo. Servius (upon that of Virgil, Rex Anius, Rex idem hominum, Phœbique ſacerdos) ſaith, Majorum hæc erat conſuetudo, ut Rex eſſet etiam ſacerdos & Pontifex; unde hodie etiam Imperatores Pontifices dicimus. The Roman Emperours had the great Pontificate (till Gratian relinquiſh'd it) agreeably to the Cuſtom of ancient Times, that the King ſhould be Prieſt and Pontifex. So a Pythagorean will have every King to be a Prieſt, and for this reaſon, (w) Becauſe it is fit, that the beſt ſhould have his Worſhip perform'd by the beſt, and by the chief Ruler amongſt Men, he being chief Ruler of all. The great Affinity between the Regality and the Prieſthood, appeareth from the Appellation both of Jews and Chriſtians, that are intituled Kings and Prieſts, Exod. 19. 6. Apoc. 1. 6. and from the Hebrew word Cohen, which ſignifieth both Prince and Prieſt. So Man the Prince of this lower World ſhould underſtand that (x) ritu ſibi vivendum ſacerdotis, he ſhould live as a Prieſt. Both Princes and Prieſts wore White, which was both the ſacerdotal and royal Apparel, Eſther 8. 15. The Houſe wherein the High-prieſt liv'd was called Regia (as Servius obſerveth) and the Jews High-prieſt had his Crown, as Kings have, Exod. 29. 6. Moſes, who was King in Jeſurun, exercis'd the Prieſthood in part, in ſprinkling Blood and ratifying the Covenant, Exod. 24. 6, 7, 8. And in the nature of them theſe two Offices are ſo near of kin, that there is great reaſon that they ſhould be united in one Perſon. For the King being as ſuch God's Repreſentative to the People, acting and ruling in his name and ſtead, it is hugely agreeable, that he ſhould be the People's Repreſentative unto God, and act in their name and ſtead: So our Saviour ſuffer'd Death both as God's Repreſentative unto us, and as our Repreſentative unto God. But the Regal Office is not only of great Affinity and Connexion with the Sacerdotal, but alſo with the Prophetic Office. For the famous Men of ancient times (Noah, Abraham, Iſaac, and Jacob) ruled their Families as Kings, ſacrific'd as Prieſts, and were Teachers as Prophets. The Rabbins ſpeak of Methuſala's, Sem's, Eber's Domus judicii (Houſe of Judgment) which ſome ſuppoſe to have been Courts of Judicature, (y) others rather ſuppoſe them Schools of Doctrine; probably they were both theſe, as the Jewiſh Synagogues were. Maimonides ſaith of them, Omnes fuerunt Prophetæ & docebant homines ad morem Concionatorum, Doctorum & Præceptorum. They were all Prophets, and taught Men as Preachers and Teachers. So Bede ſaith of King Oſwald (z) Rex ſuis Ducibus ac Miniſtris interpres verbi extitit cœleſtis, The King was to his Captains and Servants an Interpreter of the heavenly Word. Such a Prophet Conſtantine the Great was. But ſome Heathen Nations would have their King's Prophets in an higher ſenſe, if we believe Friar-William de Rubruiquis (who travell'd the Aſiatick parts about the Year 1253, and) who giveth this account of the name Can the name of the Prince in thoſe Parts. (a) Can nomen dignitatis, quod idem eſt qui Divinator. Omnes Divinatores vocant Can. Unde principes dicuntur Can, quia penes eos ſpectat regimen populi per Divinationem. This Friar was deceiv'd (no doubt) touching the Meaning of the Title Can, but not touching the Faculty Zech. 9. 9. Jer. 23. 5. Dan. 9. 25. Iſa. 9. 6, 7. Mic. 5. 2.

(s) Selden Titles, p. 72, 73. Ed. 3.

(t) Petav. T. 4. l. 12. c. 15.

(u) Biſhop Taylor Duct. Dub. B. 3. c. 3. R. 4. n. 16.

(w) Δεῖ γὰρ τὸ ἄριστον ὑπὸ τῶ ἀρίστω τιμᾶσθαι, καὶ τὸ ἁγεμονεῦον ὑπὸ τῶ ἁγεμονεύοντος. Diotog. de regno.

(x) Macrob. in Som. Scip. l. 1. c. 14.

(y) Marſham Can. Chr. p. 183. Ed. Lipſ. Maimon. Mor. Nev. par. 2. c. 35.

(z) Hiſt. Eccl. l. 3. c. 2.

(a) Selden Titles p. 67.

culty of Divination requiſite in Princes, as a better Author aſſureth us. (b) To Principality and the publick Adminiſtration of Affairs Prophecy was anciently ſo conjoined, that we may ſay of Kings and Princes, It was as well their Office to divine, as to give Laws.

(b) Olim principatui & publicæ adminiſtrationi prophetiam adeo conjunctam intelligimus, ut affirmare liceat, Regibus & Principibus, tam jura dare, quam etiam divinare, munus fuiſſe. Fortun. Scac. Myrothec. P. 1. p. 36.

In the Hiſtory of Heathen Princes as it is related in the Bible (c) there are ſeveral Inſtances of their Divination by Dreams; and touching Divination in general Joſeph ſaith to his Brethren, Wot ye not, that ſuch a Man as I (a great Man) can certainly divine? Gen. 44. 15. The ancient Egyptians (as Plato reporteth in his Politicus) choſe their Kings from amongſt their Prieſts, whoſe Learning (in part) was Divination. And their Triſmegiſt (as Ficinus ſaith) had that name given him, becauſe he was the greateſt King, the greateſt Prieſt, and the greateſt Philoſopher; which two latter Branches of his Character comprehend the Learning of Divination. (d) Philo requireth four things in a conſummate and perfect Prince: The Kingdom (the Authority of reigning) the faculty of preſcribing Laws, the Prieſthood, and Prophecy, that he may be acquainted with the Mind of God.

(c) Grot. Not. in Job. 11. 51.

(d) Περὶ βίε Μωσ. l. 3. p. 464. Ed. Gr. Pariſ.

All the Offices of the Lord Meſſiah are compriſ'd (as in his Regality, ſo) in his being The Lord's Anointed. For in ancient times, amongſt God's People (as is commonly known) three ſorts of Perſons, all of them Types of the Meſſiah and his Forerunners, were anointed to their Function and Office, Prophets, Prieſts, and Kings. Whence it appeareth, that theſe Offices belong to the Meſſiah (the Antitype prefigured by theſe) as he is God's Anointed. The Prophets are ſtiled God's Anointed Pſal. 105. 15. Touch not mine Anointed, and do my Prophets (the Patriarchs) no harm. The Prophets might be ſtiled God's Anointed, although they were not anointed with material Oil; and it doth not appear from Scripture that they were ſo anointed. The inferiour Prieſts amongſt the Jews were not anointed, ſave only at firſt the Sons of Aaron (as the Jews ſay agreeably to the Scriptures) whoſe anointing was an everlaſting Prieſthood throughout their Generations, ſo that their Succeſſors needed not any other, Exod. 40. 15. But every High-prieſt the Succeſſour of Aaron was to be anointed; whence in the Jews common Language The Anointed ſignifieth the High-prieſt. And ſo in Scripture the Prieſt that is anointed ſignifieth the High-prieſt, Lev. 4. 3. The LXX render it, ὁ Ἀρχιερεὺς ὁ κεχρισμένος, the High-prieſt that is anointed. A third Office that Men were anointed to amongſt God's People, was the Regal: but the Hebrew Doctors ſay (e) that thoſe who came to the Kingdom by Succeſſion in a legal courſe of Right, were not perſonally anointed: it was thought ſufficient, that their Anceſtors were anointed. But thoſe that came to the Kingdom in an extraordinary way by God's ſpecial Election and Appointment (as Saul, David, and Jehu) theſe were anointed; or if there was a Diſpute and Controverſie touching the right of ſucceeding in the Kingdom (as in Solomon's caſe) then the King was inveſted with the Royal Dignity by anointing. From which account of anointing Perſons to three Offices or Functions it appeareth, that God's anointed (the Lord's Chriſt typify'd by theſe three ſorts of anointed Perſons) muſt be as ſuch a Perſon that is ordained to, and inveſted with theſe three Offices; He muſt be the great and eminent Prophet, Prieſt and King. So at Rome there is a τρισμέγιστος a (pretended) High-prieſt of the Chriſtian Religion, The oracular Prophet, and the Sovereign of an Eccleſiaſtic Empire. So in the Muhammedan's Religion The Chaliph is The High-prieſt, The Vicar-general of their great Prophet, and the Emperour of the Saracens.

(e) Selden. de Succeſſ. l. 2. c. 9.

V. The Idea of the Lord Meſſiah repreſenteth him as anointed, to be The Saviour-King agreeably to his Name Jeſus, which ſpeaketh him the Saviour-King to his People, and conſequently to the World of Sinners. His name The Chriſt is not his proper perſonal name, but the name of his officiary Dignity (and therefore his Appellative:) but his name Jeſus is both his proper perſonal name and the name of his officiary Dignity; for he is The Saviour ex officio, and not meerly The Saviour, but The Saviour-Prince, as being of Princely royal Dignity. The Apoſtle conjoineth both theſe Attributes Act. 5. 31. Him hath God exalted with his right-hand, to be a Prince and a Saviour, which is ἓν διὰ δυοῖν and denoteth a Saviour-Prince. So Act. 3. 15. The Prince of life (Life and Salvation being ſynonymous) denoteth The Saviour-Prince. According to the cuſtom of ancient times when Kings and Princes were their Captains, a Prince and a Captain are ſynonymous. The Captain of our Salvation Heb. 2. 10. therefore is the Prince of it, or our Saviour-Prince. So the illuſtrious Types of Chriſt in the Old Teſtament were Saviour-Princes of the literal, as Chriſt is of the ſpiritual Iſrael. With which Difference between literal and ſpiritual, Chriſt is repreſented as David's Son and Succeſſor in his Kingdom and Government, and in his Wars, Proweſs and Puiſſance. For the Kingdom and Government of right belonged to the Houſe of David, which was in ſuch high eſteem amongſt the Jews, that even after their Diſperſion and Baniſhment, and when Jeruſalem was burn'd, they would choſe no Patriarchs but thoſe that were of the Houſe of David. The Son of David was to ſucceed him in his Kingdom and Government over the Iſrael of God; he was alſo to ſucceed him in his Wars and victorious Puiſſance. And therefore he inculcateth and inſiſteth upon his Deſcent from David in his waging War againſt Satan's Kingdom, and his ſubduing the Princes of the Earth to the Sceptre of his Goſpel. Apoc. 22. 16. I am the root of David. As if he ſhould ſay, Do not wonder that I conquer Kings and the great ones of the earth, and vanquiſh oppoſite Powers, facio rem avitam; I do but what my Anceſtors have done before me; you may be confident, that the Root of David (the Kingly branch ſpringing from his Root, 1 Macc. 1. 10.) will prevail maugre all oppoſition. This Root of David is the Shepherd of Iſrael as David was, and a Bethlemite Shepherd (as David alſo was) he was born a kind of Bethlemite Shepherd amongſt the Cattel, his Birth being alſo firſt made known and publiſh'd amongſt the Shepherds. And becauſe the Family of David was at that time mean, obſcure, and wither'd, as a Root in dry ground, he is repreſented by the Prophet as a Root out of a dry ground (a Branch ſpringing from a Root in dry ground, Iſa. 53. 2.) but that obſcure wither'd Family then put forth a royal Stem, a princely Branch, that ſhould be a Saviour (and therefore a Saviour-Prince) according to that of the Angel, who publiſh'd his Birth to the Shepherds. Luk. 2. 11. Unto you is born this day in the City of David a Saviour which is Chriſt the Lord. At his Birth God ſo far viſited and redeemed his People, Luk. 1.69. that In the houſe of his ſervant David he raiſed up for them an horn of Salvation, which (the Horn being an Emblem of Power, and eſpecially of Regal Power) denoteth a mighty Saviour-King. Such a Shepherd of Iſrael his name The Son of David ſignified amongſt the Jews, A Saviour-King of God's People and of his People, which is the greateſt Excellency and Ennoblement of a King. For (f) Nullum ornamentum principis faſtigio dignius, pulchriusq; eſt, quàm illa corona, ob cives ſervatos. It belongeth to a mundane King, to be a Saviour-Prince to his People in reſpect of their ſecular Intereſts and from temporal Calamities (which is his greateſt Honour:) and in like manner The King of the ſpiritual Iſrael (The Son of David) muſt be the Saviour-Prince in reſpect of Spirituals and Eternals. Which appeareth alſo from this other name of his The Son Iſa. 43. 3. and 44. 6. and 45. 15. of God. For God is intituled The God of Iſrael, The Saviour, The holy one of Iſrael thy Saviour, the King of Iſrael, and his Redeemer. Which divine Attributes import, that it is a Divine and God-like thing to be the Saviour of Men, as it was accounted by the Heathen (g) who intituled Jupiter the Saviour, built the Temples and Altars Σωτῆρος Διὸς of Jupiter the Saviour, and the third Cup at their Feaſts was that Σωτῆρος Διὸς of Jupiter the Saviour. The other Gods alſo were ſtiled Σωτῆρες, Saviours, and the Thuſſians in an Inſcription upon their publick Coin intituled Hercules, The Saviour of the Thuſſians. Thoſe Men alſo that were accounted their magnificent Helpers, and whom they would honour at a great rate, they ſtiled their Saviours. As one of the Ptolemies was called Soter (Saviour) Antigonus was called by the Athenians firſt Benefactor and afterwards Soter, Demetrius alſo and Antiochus had the name of Soter given them. The Name is divine, and the Application of it to our Saviour ſpeaketh him a divine imperial Perſon, elſe he would be but a ſorry Saviour, not a Saviour in the plenary ſenſe, not a Conſort with God in peculiarly deſerving ſo divine a name. I, even I am the Lord, and beſide me there is no Saviour. Iſa. 43. 11.

VI. The Idea of the Lord Meſſiah repreſenteth him as anointed to be the mediatory Saviour- 1 Tim. 1. 1. Tit. 2. 10. and 3. 4. 2 Pet. 1. 1. Jude 25. 1 Tim. 2. 5. King agreeably to the Stile of the New Teſtament, wherein God the Father (in conſort with Chriſt) is called our Saviour, and is repreſented as ſaving us by his Son, whom he hath ſent to be the Saviour of the World. The Father therefore muſt be conſidered as The ſupreme Saviour-King, and The Son muſt be conſidered as The mediatory Saviour-King, agreeably to his uſual name The Mediator between God and Men. A Mediator is not of one, but God is one, Gal. 3. 20. The Apoſtle is diſcourſing, that we muſt have Juſtification or Righteouſneſs with God without any conſideration of the Works of the Law. And he proveth it from hence, becauſe Abraham had his Bleſſedneſs not in the Law-way, but by the free and gratuitous Promiſe of God. He had it not in the Law-way, but without any Law-Treaty; for the Moſaic Law was a Law-Treaty between God and the People of Iſrael by means of a Mediator. But God is only one Party, who (not by the Law-Treaty, but) by his own free Gift and Promiſe gave Abraham the Inheritance; and where there is but one Party, there can be no Mediator. Chriſt is the Mediator therefore, as being a Μεσίτης medioxumous or middle Perſon that interveneth between two Parties; and ſuch a Mediator he is in manifold reſpects. (1.) Chriſt is the Mediator in reſpect of his conſtitutive nature, which is both the divine and humane, and his Perſon is an humane-divine Perſon. If he was otherwiſe conſtituted (if he did not ἀμφοτέροις κοινωνεῖν, as S. Chryſoſtom ſpeaketh) he could not be conſtituted as a middle Perſon between the two parties God and Men. As Man therefore is in confinio utriuſque mundi (in the middle between two Worlds) in reſpect of his Body he is of the nature of Brute-Animals, and in reſpect of his Soul he is of the nature of Angels, he is of kin to both, and is both in conjunction: ſo Chriſt the Mediator muſt be of kin both to God and Man, and muſt be both in conjunction. (2.) He is the Mediator in reſpect of his Place; for his Poſition or Standing is that of a middle Perſon. The head (imperial head) of every Man is Chriſt, and the head of Chriſt is God, 1 Cor. 11. 3. and 3. 23. ye are Chriſt's, and Chriſt is God's. He is God's Repreſentative, ſuſtaining his Perſon, and hath his Authority and Power; over us therefore his Authority is the divine: but he received it from God, his Sovereignty and Dominion, therefore is the mediatory or that of a middle Perſon. He deriveth from God, ſo far he is dependent: but we depend upon him intirely, and of his Fullneſs we receive. God is to him the fountain and original of Life, and he is to us the fountain and original of Life. As the Father hath life in Joh. 5. 26. himſelf, ſo hath he given to the Son, to have life in himſelf. He is therefore the mediatory Original of Life. (3.) He is the Mediator in reſpect of his whole Buſineſs, Function and Agency. For the whole of it, and all that he hath to do, is a Mediation or Inter-agency, and all his Offices are Offices thereof. As a Prophet he is an Internuntius and Interpreter receiving his heavenly Doctrine from God, imparting it unto us, and giving the higheſt Atteſtations to the truth of it. He that ſent me is true, and I ſpeak to the World the things that I have heard of him, Joh. 8. 26. No man hath ſeen God at any time, the only begotten Son which is in the boſom of the Father (intimately acquainted with his Mind and Will) he hath declared him, Joh. 1. 18. His Prieſtly Office is an Office of Mediation and Inter-agency. For the Prieſts in ancient times did officiate with God for ſinful Men in order to the reconciling God to them, and to obtain for them his Mercy, Favours, and Bleſſings. They offered Sacrifice to God for the People, and in virtue thereof interceded with God on their behalf; and their offering Sacrifice was it ſelf an imploring God's Mercy for ſinful Men, a beſeeching God to accept it as a ranſom for them, and in conſideration thereof to releaſe them from their Sins. So our Saviour made his ſoul an offering for ſin, bare the Sins of many, and made Interceſſion for the Tranſgreſſors, Iſa. 53. 12. As a Prieſt alſo he hath ſtated and ſet himſelf in the Preſence of God, to patronize our Cauſe with God; and therefore his Prieſtly Office is an Office of Mediation. Such alſo is his Kingly Office and Dignity; for he reigneth by an imparted Authority (as ſecular Princes do) God hath committed the adminiſtration of all things into his hand, and adminiſtreth the Government by him, in giving Laws, in pardoning ſome and puniſhing others, in defending his People, and ſubduing his Enemies, in raiſing the dead and judging the World, in keeping his Sheep, and deſtroying the Goats and Wolves; in all theſe regal acts he is an Inter-agent between God and us. (4.) He is the Mediator as acting on behalf of both Parties, dealing with Men on behalf of God, and with God on behalf of Men. (h) Advocatus idem

(f) Sen.

(g) Biſhop Pearſon on the Creed, Art. 2. Reuchlin. de Art. Cab. l. 2. fol. 30.

(h) Pet T. 4. c. 8. S.

idem eſt quod & Mediator, (an Advocate is the ſame with a Mediator) ſaith Paulinus. But Chriſt's Advocateſhip is not commenſurate with his Mediatorſhip. He is an Advocate only in reſpect of his Prieſtly Office; but in all his Offices he is a Mediator. He is an Advocate only as he advocateth and intercedeth for us, dealeth with God on our behalf; but he is a Mediator both as he dealeth with Man for God, and as he dealeth with God for Man, reconciling God unto Man, and Man unto God, obtaining the Favour of God for us, and declaring God's Will to us, and converting us unto God So Moſes as a Mediator between God and the People of Iſrael dealt between both, and manag'd the Concerns of both; on behalf of God he taught and ruled the People, and on behalf of the People he impetrated the Favour and Protection of God. So Chriſt as Mediator muſt act for both Parties, he muſt be a divine Teacher and Lawgiver to us, muſt have and exerciſe the Adminiſtration of Government, and be a beneficent Ruler of his People, and muſt ſubdue his and their Enemies, and he muſt deal with us to reduce us to our Duty and Allegiance unto God. As God's Vicegerent he muſt act for him and deal with us; but he muſt alſo act for us and deal with God, to induce him to be propitious and gracious to us, and to procure for us all things needful for our Salvation. As he is the great Prophet and King, the Object of his Mediation and Miniſtration is Men, he is to take care of Res Dei, the Concerns of God with Men; but as he is our Prieſt the Object of his Mediation and Miniſtration is God, he is to take care of our Concerns with God, and to deal with him on our behalf For a Prieſt is to miniſter unto God, (his Office and Miniſtration looketh towards God) and to deal with God on behalf of Men. One may be a Prophet, a King and Ruler unto Men, but if he be a Prieſt it muſt be unto God as the Object of his Miniſtration. Which yet muſt be underſtood with ſome Limitation. For Men are the Object of one Branch of the Prieſt's Office, who as he is to bleſs God on the People's behalf (as a Prieſt) Gen. 14. 20 Nehem. 8. 6. ſo he is to bleſs the People in the Name of God, Numb. 6. 23. 1 Chron. 23. 13. The High-Prieſt alſo by Urim revealed the Will of God to the People, Numb. 27. 21. (5.) Moſes was the Mediator, (an Inter-meſſenger and Inter-agent) in the old Moſaical Treaty and Covenant, for by him God declared his Will to the People of Iſrael, and they being inform'd of it by him did comply, and by him contract with God to be his People, and ſo the Covenant was made by his Mediation. But Chriſt is the Mediator of an higher Covenant, (the new Covenant) and is alſo an higher kind of Mediator. For he is not only ſuch an Inter-agent in the Covenant as Moſes was, but he is the Mediator in procuring the New Covenant, and alſo the Mediator in executing and performing it. In conſideration of his Sacrifice and Merit God hath given and granted to us the New Covenant, with all the ineſtimable Benefits thereof. Our Sins are 1 Joh. 2. 12. forgiven us for his Names ſake. For his ſake God hath made a Grant and Donation of the State of Remiſſion of Sins to his Believers, Eph 4. 32. They are receiv'd into Favour, becauſe they belong to him who is the great Favourite, Eph. 1. 6. They are juſtified in his Name, (upon his account) and are made the Righteouſneſs of God in him, (have the Reputation and State of the Righteous in him, by him and for him) 1 Cor. 6. 11. 2 Cor. 5. 18. His Blood as an Expiatory Sacrifice was the Blood of the New Covenant, and was the procuring Cauſe of it, as being the procuring Cauſe of the Benefit of Remiſſion of Sins, which is the Summary of the Benefits of the New Covenant, Matth. 26. 28. He is alſo the Mediator in executing and performing the New Covenant, for by his derivative and imparted Authority he pardoneth Sins according to the Terms of it, ſendeth the Holy Spirit, reneweth and ſanctifieth Souls, governeth his People, ſubdueth their Enemies, and raiſeth them to the Heavenly Bleſſedneſs. He beſtoweth upon them all the Legacies that God hath bequeath'd to them in his Laſt Will and Teſtament, and is a middle Perſon between the Teſtator and the Legataries, and by means of him God's Will and Teſtament hath its final Effect and Execution. A Mediator therefore is of a larger Notion than an Advocate, for Chriſt cannot be called The Advocate of the New Covenant, but is The Mediator thereof. (6.) He is the Mediator in making Peace between God and Man. For this is commonly the Uſe of a Mediator, he is medius ad componendam cauſam, (in the middle to compoſe the Matter in debate) to reconcile diſagreeing Parties, and to bring them to Concord and good Agreement. So one of the principal Ends of Chriſt's Mediation is Pacification and Reconcilement, that we might be delivered from being under the Wrath of God, and might be in the State of Remiſſion of Sins) State of Amity, Peace and Reconcilement with God, Iſa 53. 8. Luk. 2. 14. Act. 10. 36, 43. Eph. 2. 16, 17. 2 Cor. 5. 19. 1 Joh. 4. 10. This is that Peace which the ancient Prophets foretell (i) ſhould come by Chriſt, namely the Peace of Remiſſion of Sins and Reconciliation with God, In this place will I give Peace, Hagg. 2. 9. He ſhall ſpeak Peace unto the Heathen, Zech. 9. 10. Peace to him that is afar off and to him that is near, ſaith the Lord, and I will heal him, Iſa. 57. 19. I will make with them a Covenant of Peace, Ezek. 34. 25. Which Covenant of Peace literally underſtood concern'd the ſecular Proſperity of the Jews (reſtored from the Babylonian Captivity;) but in an higher ſenſe it ſignifieth the New Covenant of Grace and Peace, whereby Sinners that were in the State of Hoſtility enjoy the State of Amity and Peace with God, and the Goſpel of Peace, which is the Religion of our Reconcilement, of the Favour of God towards us, and the glad Tydings thereof, for nothing ſoundeth ſo high in it as Grace and Peace. This Peace in the firſt place Chriſt negociated with God, but he alſo negociateth it with us, in ſending his Heralds about the World to offer Peace, to treat of a Peace, and to call Men to be at Peace with God. By his Interpoſition alſo and by the Blood of his Croſs Peace was made between the holy Angels above and ſinful Mankind on Earth, (for now the holy Angels are one Family with Chriſtians, whereas before they were in a divided hoſtile State;) Jews and Gentiles alſo are by his Mediation reconciled to one another (becauſe both to God) whereas before there was a mighty Diſtance, and mighty Feuds and Antipathies between them, Col. 1. 20. Eph. 2. 14. (7.) Chriſt is the Mediator as being The way to the Father, which ſpeaketh him a middle Perſon between two Parties, for the Way is between us and the End. I am the Way, no Man cometh unto the Father but by me, ſaith our Saviour. Joh. 14: 6. No Man can be one of God's Citizens, Societiſts and Familiſts (of the heavenly Communion of Saints) but by Chriſt Jeſus; nor can he by any other way come unto God in Devotion, have acceſs to him, and a favourable Reception of his Perſon and his Prayers. Through him we have ac-

ceſs

(i) Mr Mede on Luk. 2. 13, 14.

ceſs by one Spirit unto the Father, Eph. 2. 18. There can be no Acceſs unto God, no good Correſpondence or friendly Dealings with him, unleſs we have Amity and Reconcilement with him; by him alone therefore we have Acceſs unto God, by whom we have Reconcilement. The way to the Holy of Holies, (the Reſidence of God) is through the Vail of Chriſt's Fleſh, which is a new way (of late diſcovery) and a living way, (becauſe he ever liveth to make Interceſſion for us) and this is the Chriſtian way of drawing nigh unto God, Heb. 10. 19--22. (8.) Chriſt is the Mediator as being The mediate cauſe of all things in the 1 Cor. 8. 6. Chriſtian Religion. For there is one God the Father, 2 Cor. 5. 18. of whom are all things, and one Lord Jeſus Chriſt, by whom are all things. All things are of God by Jeſus Chriſt. Chriſtians themſelves and all things that belong to Chriſtians as ſuch are thus originated, 1 Cor. 1. 30. 1 Joh. 5. 11. Act. 2. 33. Their ſaving Benefits are by him as the procuring Cauſe, and (derivatively from God, communicatively to us) they muſt paſs through his Hands. Not as through a meer Channel that receiveth them and conveyeth them, for he is ſo the mediate Cauſe of all things as to be a Soveraign Diſpoſer and Diſpenſer of them, and Lord of Affairs, which ſpeaketh him to be ſuch a Mediator as muſt be intituled The mediatory Sovereign, or The Royal and Imperial Mediator. He is not the Mediator between Men and the Godhead abſolutely, (but between Men and God that is definitively and abſolutely ſuch;) for himſelf The Mediator is in and of the Sovereignty The Imperial Eſtate of the Godhead. A vaſt Diſparity and Diſſimilitude there is therefore between the Chriſtian Mediator and thoſe Paganical Mediators the Demons or Dii medioxumi, which are not fitly compar'd to Chriſt, but in many reſpects reſemble the holy Angels in our Religion. They are below the divine Order, they are Extrinſicks to the Godhead, they are but the ſervient and miniſterial Mediators. Chriſt is the Imperial Mediator, intrinſick to the Godhead, and of the divine Sovereignty.

VII. The Saviour-King of believing Sinners muſt be as a Prieſt An oblational and interceſſional Mediator. A Prieſt amongſt Men is one that is conſecrated to the holy Office and Dignity, to miniſter the divine Service, ſo to deal with God on the behalf of Men, to be their Patron or Advocate. The Jewiſh Prieſts were ſolemnly conſecrated to the holy Office and Dignity, Exod. 28. 41. and 29. 44. Their holy Office and Dignity was to miniſter the divine Service, to attend and wait upon God in his immediate Worſhip, Exod. 28. 1. 1 Chron. 23. 13. 2 Chron. 13. 10. Ezek. 44. 15. Joel 2. 17. Gen. 14. 8. which was an high Office and Dignity (to miniſter unto God in his Houſe and Sanctuary) and of great Concern to Mankind. For a Prieſt (one that is ſuch in a publick Capacity) is appointed to miniſter unto God on the behalf of others, to deal with God on behalf of the People, and to be their Patron and Advocate, Heb. 5. 1. A Prieſt is ordained for Men, (for the Good and Benefit of Men) in things pertaining to God, that he may offer both Gifts and Sacrifices for Sins. The Buſineſs of the divine Service and Worſhip was to make Oblations and Preſents unto God. The Prieſts therefore in the Time of the Law were to make Preſents and to offer Sacrifices to God on behalf of the People, and for the Expiation of their Sins. Agreeably whereto Chriſt muſt be ſo far a Prieſt on Earth as to offer upon the Croſs an expiatory Sacrifice for the Sins of his People. For although he was not a Prieſt after the Order of Aaron, yet the Sacrifices of the Aaronical Prieſthood referr'd to Chriſt, and muſt have their Completion in him. Nor was there ever a Religion in the World, ſince Sin came into it, without an expiatory Sacrifice, whereby the Guilt of it was clear'd and cleans'd and taken away. Chriſt therefore was once offered, to bear the Sins of many, and to put away Sin by the Sacrifice of himſelf, Heb. 9. 26, 28. When he was ſent into the World he was made the Saviour-King of believing Sinners, (which was his officiary Dignity) and he could not be ſuch in reality but by making for them a ſaving Religion, he muſt be the Founder of the State of Life and Salvation, and of the New Covenant, and procure for them the State of Remiſſion of Sins by his expiatory Sacrifice. Which having offer'd, he became our Prieſtly Patron and Interceſſor with God for ever, and his being ſuch is his everlaſting Prieſthood. Heb. 9. 14. When he aſcended into Heaven he offer'd himſelf without ſpot to God as ſacrific'd and ſlain, and ſo he continueth for ever to preſent himſelf unto God. As the Blood of thoſe Sacrifices that were burnt without the Camp was by the High-Prieſt carry'd into the moſt holy place and preſented there, and ſprinkled before the Propitiatory, (Heb. 13. 11.) ſo Chriſt having ſuffer'd without the Gate of Jeruſalem carry'd his expiatory and propitiatory Sacrifice into Heaven, there to preſent it before God, and ſet it before him in his Preſence. On the Day of Expiation the Sacrifice was ſlain and offer'd without the Sanctuary, but the High-Prieſt with the Blood of it enter'd into the Holy of Holies, (Heb. 9. 7, 12.) ſo Chriſt enter'd into Heaven by his own Blood, and appeareth continually in the Preſence of God as our Victim, which is a continual Interceſſion for us, and a more powerful Sollicitation of the Favour of God for us than any Words can be. But beſides this Prieſtly way of befriending his People, (the ſtating and ſetting himſelf in the Preſence of God continually, who is nearly related to us and ſacrific'd for us) he repreſenteth and ſignifieth unto God his Will and Deſire touching their Good, (which is a powerful Impetration, Joh. 14. 16.) commending their Cauſe unto God, procuring his Favour for them, all things needful for their Salvation, and (in general) taking care of their Concerns with God, that things go well with them for ever, Heb. 7. 25. He is a Mediator therefore in his Prieſtly Office more eſpecially and eminently than in either of his other Offices, according to Gr. Naz. Definition of the Prieſthood (k) Μεσιτεία θεοῦ ϗ ἀνθρώπων, A Mediatorſhip between God and Men. (k) Orat. 1. p. 37.

To this high and holy Function of Prieſthood our Saviour could not be conſecrated antecedently to his expiatory Sacrifice, becauſe he muſt be conſecrated, not meerly to be an High-Prieſt, but an everlaſting High-Prieſt. His Conſecration therefore is really the ſame thing with his Exaltation to the Throne, (his Perfection and Conſummation) for his heavenly Prieſthood is of the ſame nature with that of Chriſtians, Βασίλειον ἱεράτευμα, 1 Pet. 2. 9. A Royal Prieſthood. God hath given him Power to adminiſter all things, but ſo as is according to the Will of God; in Conjunction with God and in Dependence upon God he is to exerciſe his Regal Authority and Power; therefore his officiary Dignity muſt not be meerly a Regality, but a Prieſthood muſt be complicated with it, which ſpeaketh it a Church-Sovereignty. And as Heaven is both a Court and a Temple, ſo the officiary Dignity of the mediatory Saviour-King of the Holy Empire muſt be a Sacerdotal Regality, or a Royal Prieſthood. Thus the other Offices of our Saviour are complicated with his Regality, (the primary of them) are ennobled by it, and muſt have magnifying Denominations from it. For he muſt be conſider'd both as the Royal Prieſt and Prophet. In his State of Humiliation, altho' he could not then enter upon his Kingdom-Eſtate, (l) nor his Plenitude of Authority and Power, yet in that low Eſtate he was not without regial Dignity and Authority. And therefore in the diſcharge of his Prophetick Office he muſt be conſider'd as King; the Religion which this great Doctor taught was his Law, his Leſſons were his Legiſlation, his Inſtructions were his Edicts, and his Teachings were his Commands.

VIII. The Idea of the Lord Meſſiah implieth, that as actually ſuch he is (in ſeveral reſpects) The Son of God, and this his Sonſhip is a Divinity or Deity of Perſon. For if God conſtituteth him (more or leſs) actually the King of the Holy Empire, he is politically and by his Place, and alſo datively and factively The divine imperial Son, which is the ſenſe of our Saviour in his Diſcourſe to the Jews, Joh. 10. 34, 35. Jeſus anſwered them, Is it not written in your Law, I ſaid, ye are Gods? If he called them Gods, unto whom the Word of God came, and the Scripture cannot be broken: ſay ye of him, whom the Father hath ſanctified, and ſent into the World, Thou blaſphemeſt, becauſe I ſaid, I am the Son of God? As the Jewiſh Judges and Rulers that were commiſſion'd by God, and a ſort of his Vicegerents and Repreſentatives, are called in Scripture The Gods, and The Sons of God, as being conſtituted politically and by their Place ſuch, ſo he whom God hath ſelected, and (in leſſer or greater degree) conſtituted actually The Saviour-King of the Holy Empire, is neceſſarily The imperial Son of God, as being politically and by his Place ſuch. Our Saviour would be known and acknowledg'd as the Meſſiah, (which is the great Article of Chriſtianity;) he argueth therefore, that as actually ſuch and upon that account he was The Son of God. From whence we learn what our Saviour meant by this Name The Son of God, namely, Not the Eternal, but the Imperial Son of God. This he was, as he was actually The Meſſiah, and his being ſo doth not at all claſh with his being natively The Son of God, but it is a Conſequent thereof. For he that is natively the Imperial Son of God, muſt be conſtituted in proceſs of Time politically and in Place ſuch. Our Saviour was conſtituted ſuch when he was ſanctified and ſent into the World: but he was then conſtituted ſuch only imperfectly, or initially, and in a leſſer degree. For he was not conſtituted plenarily Meſſiah the King (or The Chriſt) till his Reſurrection from the Dead, which anſwereth to the Political Generation of Kings, and was his Natalis Imperii, the Birth-day of his Empire, for thereby he was generated into his Heavenly Kingdom-Eſtate, and conſtituted actually and plenarily, politically and in place The divine imperial Son. He was a Son of God upon the ſame account that the Saints of God are, who being regenerated by him into the heavenly State of Life, (the State of Immortality and Beatitude) thereby become the Sons of God, as being Sons of the Reſurrection, Luk. 20. 36. Rom. 8. 23. But our Saviour's Reſurrection was of a far higher nature than that of the Saints in general, for he was raiſed to the divine imperial Eſtate of the imperial Son of God, and thereby was made in imperial Eſtate and Condition, (and therefore plenarily) both Lord and Chriſt the King, Act. 13. 32, 33. We declare unto you glad Tydings, how that the Promiſe which was made unto the Fathers, God hath fulfilled the ſame unto us their Children, in that he hath raiſed up Jeſus again; as it is alſo written in the ſecond Pſalm, Thou art my Son, this day have I begotten thee? Heb. 1. 5. Unto which of the Angels ſaid he at any time, Thou art my Son, this day have I begotten thee, Heb. 5. 5. Chriſt glorified not himſelf, to be made an High-Prieſt, but he that ſaid unto him, Thou art my Son, to day have I begotten thee. If any thing can be plain and evident in the Bible, this is plain and evident, that the Scripture by this Name The Son of God doth not mean any ſuch thing as a ſcholaſtic Abſtract Son of Eternal Generation, but The divine imperial Son (The Meſſiah) who came forth from the Grave as from the Womb, and was generated by God (in his Reſurrection) not only into the Life of Immortality, but into his immortal ſacerdotal Regality; not only into the heavenly State of Life as the Saints are, but as a Prince and King into the imperial heavenly State of Life, upon both which accounts (in conjunction) he is his firſt-born and firſt begotten from the Dead, Col. 1. 18. Apoc. 1. 5. As it is ſaid of David in the literal ſenſe and of the Meſſiah in the myſtical ſenſe, Pſal. 89. 26, 27. He ſhall cry unto me, Thou art my Father, my God, and the Rock of my Salvation. Alſo I will make him my firſt-born, higher than the Kings of the Earth. If the Regality of mundane Kings is a Sonſhip unto God, the Regality of the Meſſiah is much more ſo. Agreeably whereto the Apoſtle's Text muſt be expounded, Rom. 1. 3, 4. Concerning his Son Jeſus Chriſt our Lord, which was made of the Seed of David according to the Fleſh, and declared to be the Son of God with power, according to the Spirit of Holineſs, by the Reſurrection from the Dead. (m) The Greek Interpreters agree with our Tranſlation in rendring the Participle ὁρισθεὶς, declared, or demonſtrated; but they have not ſhew'd that the Word is of this Signification. The Latin Interpreters render it deſign'd or predeſtinated, as if the Apoſtle was ſpeaking of ſomething future and to be done; whereas he is ſpeaking of a thing already done, and done with Power; for Power is not ſeen in things to be done, but in that which is done and effected. In this Text of the Apoſtle therefore the Word ὁρισθεὶς ought not to be rendred either declared or predeſtinated, but it may be rendred defined, (which is the uſual and proper Signification of it) if by defining we underſtand (agreeably to the Signification of ὁρισμος in Greek Writers) not the meer verbal and notional, but the real defining, the Act and Deed of defining, which is conſtituting. Our Saviour was ὁρισθεὶς, defined or conſtituted The Son of God, and this was done with Power, by the Reſurrection from the Dead, when he was made both Lord and King fully poſſeſs'd of his divine imperial Eſtate, or heavenly Regality, which is a Sonſhip unto God and his being plenarily The divine imperial Son. In the Interpretation of this place of Scripture the generality of Interpreters (ancient and modern) thus far agree, they ſuppoſe that this is the Apoſtle's ſenſe, Our Saviour became the Son of God by his Reſurrection. (n) But ſome of the Scholaſticks diſlike this Interpretation, and have ſubſtituted another inſtead of it. But that which they have ſubſtituted is moſt intricate, incongruous, incoherent and diſtorted, and contrary to the plain ſenſe of the Apoſtle's Words.

IX. The Idea of the Lord Meſſiah implieth, that he muſt be conſider'd both in his primary and his officiary Capacity, both which are deifying to him and Creature-tranſcendency. His primary Capacity is that which is antecedent to his actual Meſſias-ſhip, (which was not till the Father ſanctified (l) Grot. Not. in Matth. 9. 6.

(m) Petav. T. 4. l. 11. c. 13. & T. 2. l. 3. c. 3. S. 9, 10.

(n) Petavium.

ctified him and ſent him into the World) which actual Meſſias-ſhip was his Sonſhip unto God; but antecedently to this officiary Dignity in his native primary Capacity he was the imperial Son of God. For in this primary Capacity he was that Honour, Dignity and Eſtate of Nobilitation The Imperial Son of God, which is ſupraſubject or Creature-tranſcendent. And his actual Meſſias-ſhip or officiary Dignity is alſo deifying to him, and cannot in Congruity be leſs than Creature-tranſcendency. As he is actually The Meſſiah, Creature-tranſcendence of Authority, Power, Knowledge, Preſence and the Spirit without meaſure belongeth to him, he is The Chriſtianity imperial, Chriſt the Power of God and the Wiſdom of God, The Way, the Truth and the Life, The Eternal Life, The Manna and Bread that came down from Heaven and giveth Life to the World, The Horn of Salvation, The Saviour of the World, The Lamb of God that taketh away the Sins of it, and who of God is made unto us Wiſdom and Righteouſneſs, Sanctification and Redemption, The true Paſſover, The true Vine, The Logos and High-Prieſt of our Profeſſion, The Author and Finiſher of our Faith, The Captain of our Salvation, The one Shepherd, The chief Shepherd, The great Shepherd of the Sheep, The Deſire of all Nations, The Sun of Righteouſneſs, The true Melchizedek King of Salem, The Fountain opened for Judah and Jeruſalem, The Rock, The Foundation, The Conſolation of Iſrael, The Reſurrection, The Alpha and Omega, The Lord of the Vineyard, The Lord of all, The Lord of Glory. All which Attributes (and ſuch more) that belong to him as he is actually The Meſſiah, are deifying to him and Creature-tranſcendency, which Creature-tranſcendency the holy Writers attribute to him in their Deſcriptions of his Reſurrection, wherein they ſet forth his Apotheoſis. Eph. 1. 19--22. That ye may know what is the exceeding greatneſs of his Power to us-ward who believe, according to the working of his mighty Power, which he wrought in Chriſt, when he raiſed him from the Dead, and ſet him at his own Right Hand in the heavenly places. Far above all Principality and Power and Might and Dominion, and every Name that is named, not only in this World, but alſo in that which is to come, and hath put all things under his Feet. To raiſe a dead Man to Life is peculiarly an Act of divine Power, to raiſe him to Life immortal is a greater Act of divine Power; but Chriſt's Reſurrection was a much more ſtupendious Act of divine Power, for it was a raiſing him to the ſupreme Sovereignty, the Imperial Eſtate of the Godhead, (to which all Potentates are Underlings) to poſſeſs the Place and State of God, to ſuſtain the Perſon, Port and Majeſty of God, to carry the honourary Name and Stile of God, to be reſpected and reverenc'd, magnify'd and ador'd as God far above all created Sublimities whatſoever. But this ſtupendious deifying Reſurrection was nothing more than a conſtituting him The Son of God, from whence it appeareth that The Son of God in the Stile of the New-Teſtament ſignifieth one of the Godhead, as the Son, who was made of the Seed of David according to the Fleſh, (which denoteth infirm Humanity) and defined (or conſtituted) the Son of God with Power according to the Spirit of Holineſs, by the Reſurrection from the Dead. To the Seed of David the Apoſtle confronteth the Son of God, to infirm Humanity he confronteth Divinity of Power, and to the Fleſh he confronteth the Spirit of Holineſs. Which Spirit of Holineſs is not ſo the Spirit of God as not to be his Spirit; and in like manner the Power of God (or that Divinity of Power) whereby he liveth, (2 Cor. 13. 4.) is not ſo the Power of God as not to be his Divinity of Power. Such is his Divinity, Deity or Creature-tranſcendence of Perſon, which (as appeareth from all theſe ſcriptural Notices of it) conſiſteth in his being the imperial Son of God in his primary and officiary Capacity.

X. The Idea of the Lord Meſſiah implieth, that in him all Fulneſs dwelleth, according to that of the Apoſtle, It pleaſed the Father, that in him ſhould all fulneſs dwell. The fulneſs which the Apoſtle ſpeaketh of is from the Will and Appointment of God, and belongeth to Chriſt, as he is the Head of the Church, (as the Context ſheweth and Divines have obſerv'd) and becauſe to be the Head of the Church and to be the Meſſiah is the ſame thing, therefore all fulneſs belongeth to him by his officiary Dignity (as he is the Meſſiah) which All-fulneſs is manifeſtly deifying to him and Creature-tranſcendency. His fulneſs is of the things divine, to which alone the Name of fulneſs belongeth; for (o) Plenitudo propriè niſi divinis rebus ſuperniſque non convenit, Fulneſs cannot properly be attributed ſave only to the divine and ſupernal things. In him there are unſearchable Riches, (Eph. 3. 8.) all the true and ſaving Goods and all plenty and fulneſs of them, (which are his Wealth and Riches) all fulneſs as to our ſpiritual Wants (whatever indigent Souls can want or deſire, and whatever is needful to our true Happineſs and Perfection) with reſpect whereunto a devout Chriſtian ſaith, (p) ὁ χριστὸς τὰ πάντα τῷ πιστεύοντι, Chriſt is all things to a true Believer. The common Proverb that Money is regnant, Money governeth all, Money is All in All, was thus religiouſly alter'd by Charles the Great, Chriſt is regnant, Chriſt governeth all, Chriſt is All in All. His Religion is the fulneſs of ſaving Truth and Knowledge, Wiſdom and Philoſophy, Col. 2. 3. A full and final Expiation of Sin is in it, Heb. 10. 14. And as he is the Imperial Eſtate of Chriſtianity Imperial, (Meſſiah the King in his Imperial Eſtate) he is to his Believers all the Benefits of the Religion of ſaving Grace (which he hath mediated for them) a full Diſcharge from all their Sins, a plenary Liberation from all their criminal and penal Evils, their ſpiritual Miſeries and Calamities, their deadly ghoſtly Enemies, and by him they have a full Donation of all the choice ineſtimable Goods of the Kingdom (of which they are Citizens, and have the Immunities, Rights and Priviledges of Citizens) nothing leſs than the whole Eſtate of God, (the Honours and Felicities of God's Children) and whatever all the fulneſs of God may ſignify, Eph. 3. 19. For God hath bleſſed them with (the Plenitude of) all ſpiritual Bleſſings in heavenly good things in Chriſt, Eph. 1. 3.

The fullneſs of all Excellency, Perfection, and Nobilitation, both as to kind and degree, is ſo and in ſuch ſenſe in him, that none of it can be ſaid to be wanting in him, nor can he be ſaid to be wanting in it. As he is the imperial eſtate of Chriſtianity imperial, he is the univerſal cauſe and origin of Sanctity, the immenſe fullneſs of vital Sanctity is in him, the fullneſs of the holy Spirit (the gifts and graces of it) He is raiſed to the fulleſt height of Glory and Beatitude, of Honour, Authority, Dominion, Knowledge, and miraculous Power (that which in a large ſenſe muſt be called the fulleſt height of all theſe) every branch of which Excellency and Perfection is deifying to him and Creature-tranſcendence. Which divine Tranſcendence of his appeareth alſo from that other illuſtrious account of our Saviour's Fullneſs, which the Apoſtle giveth to the

Col. 1. 19.

(o) Macrob. in ſom. ſcip. l. 1. c. 5.

(p) Ap. Gat. Not. in Ant. p. 352.

Col. 2. 9. the Coloſſians, In him dwelleth all the fullneſs of the Godhead bodily. Which account of Chriſt's Fullneſs was of great force to retain the Coloſſians in their Adherence to the Chriſtian Religion (againſt mundane Philoſophy, humane Traditions, and Jewiſh Rites, to which they were tempted by Seducers) and in all reaſon it ſhould ingender in all Men an high Eſtimation of Chriſtianity. For if all the fullneſs of the Godhead is communicated unto Chriſt (and otherwiſe it cannot dwell in him) all the Fullneſs of Sanctity and divine Perfection muſt neceſſarily be in him and his Religion. The Apoſtle therefore ſubjoineth, v. 10. And ye are complete (or filled) in him, which is the head of all principality and power. Chriſt that in his imperial eſtate is the head of all Principality and Power, is alſo the imperial eſtate of Chriſtianity imperial, and the Apoſtle conſidereth him as ſuch (throughout this Diſcourſe to the Coloſſians) he conſidereth Chriſt as connoting his Religion, ſo that his Elogies of the Perſon of Chriſt are Elogies of his Religion, and he ſo ſetteth forth the tranſcendence of Chriſt's Perſon, as withall to ſet forth the tranſcendence of his Religion, and of the ſtate of his Religioniſts. But common ſence will not allow the Followers of Socinus to ſuppoſe, that the Perſon of Chriſt is meerly his Doctrine, and that all the fullneſs of the Godhead ſignifieth only the Will of God fully revealed in his Doctrine, which is a groſs diſtortion of holy Scripture, and at this rate of interpreting, the fullneſs of the Scriptures may be dwindled away into emptineſs, and the body into a ſhadow. The Godhead in the fullneſs of what it is in it ſelf and to us, dwelleth in Chriſt and is communicated to him, and it dwelleth in him ſubſtantially, according to the Apoſtle; At this rate we have God in Chriſt and in the Chriſtian Religion, not meerly umbratiliter as in the Judaical Temple and the Jewiſh Rites of Religion, which were a ſhadow of things to come, but the body is of Chriſt, Col. 2. 17. Some expound the word σωματικῶς bodily to ſignifie ὑποστατικῶς perſonally (ſuppoſing the Apoſtle to ſpeak of the ſcholaſtic hypoſtatical union) but this Expoſition cannot be legitimate. For neither can the word σωματικῶς ſo ſignifie, nor doth the Apoſtle teach the Coloſſians ſcholaſtic Theology, nor is it agreeable to that Theology, to ſay, that the Son of God dwelleth perſonally in Chriſt (it is Neſtorianiſm) nor doth this Expoſition include the Father's and the Holy Ghoſt's dwelling in Chriſt, nor doth it ſet forth the excellency of the Chriſtian Religion. (q) Some have obſerv'd, that this magnificent Deſcription of our Saviour's fullneſs is by the Apoſtle oppos'd to the Gnoſticks fullneſs of the Godhead, which they deviſ'd, to ſubvert the Chriſtian Faith by a counterfeit imitation of the Chriſtians fullneſs of the Godhead, which is the Trinity. And this Obſervation would be of good remark, if it could be ſhew'd, that the Trinity is in the Scriptures and in our Religion counted and called The fullneſs of the Godhead: but becauſe this can never be ſhew'd, this Obſervation muſt remain uncertain. But from the view that we have taken of our Saviour's fullneſs it appeareth, how well he is qualify'd for his officiary Dignity (to adminiſter Government without Miſgovernment, to be a faithful Lover and beneficent Ruler of his Liege-people, their Shepherd, and their ſovereign Friend and Patron, to be all ſuperiour comfortable Relations and all manner of ſaving goods to them, to afford them ſalutary relief and aid, and to receive their departing Souls) all the branches whereof ſpeak his Deity or Creature-tranſcendence. Which more eſpecially appeareth in his giving and giving to the Holy Spirit. Joh. 16. 14, 15. He ſhall glorifie me: for he ſhall receive of mine, and ſhall ſhew it unto you. All things that the Father hath are mine: therefore ſaid I, that he ſhall take of mine, and ſhall ſhew it unto you.

(q) Mr. Thorndike Epil. B. 2. c. 12. and 15.

XI. The Idea of the Meſſiah proveth, that this officiary dignity The Meſſiaſhip is incompetible to a Creature-Son (every Branch of it ſpeaking Creature-tranſcendence, a Creature being altogether unmeet for it and unworthy of it, nor will Religion allow it to be imparted to any Creature; he that condemneth the World for deifying Creatures, will not himſelf do the ſame thing;) and this Idea proveth alſo, that the Meſſiaſhip is incompetible to the ſecond Perſon of the ſcholaſtic Trinity, who was King and reigning from Eternity, and therefore was not anointed to be made King, as Athanaſius affirmeth. Many other grand Incongruities this Hypotheſis involveth (which are the known received Doctrines of the ſcholaſtic Theology and uſually occur in it) that claſh with the Idea of the Meſſiah. For the Meſſiah is a Perſon ſent by God (the Father) hath his Miſſion and Commiſſion from him, and the Scripture knoweth of no other Miſſion of the Meſſiah: but according to this Theology (r) the Meſſiah as Man was ſent by the Holy Spirit and by himſelf as God (becauſe the Will and Operation of the Trinity is one and undivided) it maketh therefore the great Apoſtle of our Profeſſion his own Apoſtle. According to this Theology, the Miſſion of the Son of God as God is his Incarnation, it denieth, that a local Miſſion (a moving from place to place) is competible to him as God; yet of his Miſſion as God it interpreteth thoſe words of our Saviour, which muſt be underſtood of a local Miſſion. I came forth from the Father, and am come into the world: again I leave the World, and go to the Father, Joh. 16. 28. Thoſe words of God to our Saviour This is my beloved Son (s) are according to this Theology the Operation of the whole Trinity, yet it acknowledgeth, that they agree and belong to God the Father only (t) Non enim eſt Filius ſui ipſius vel ſpiritus ſancti Filius, for the Son is not the Son of himſelf, or the Son of the Holy Spirit. So the Scripture and ſo this Theology teacheth, but its uſual Maxims are of another ſtrain. For ſometimes it affirmeth, that Chriſt is his own Creature. (u) Factor virginis factus eſt in virgine factura ſua (w) God the Word formed a perfect Man, which he united to himſelf. (x) Sometimes it affirmeth, That God the Word did overſhadow the bleſſed Virgin and impregnate her. (y) Many of the Ancients interpret the Power of the Higheſt, which overſhadowed the Bleſſed Virgin, to ſignifie God the Word (and ſome of them repreſent him (z) as making uſe of Oratory to the Bleſſed Virgin, perſwading and intreating her to be his Mother) agreeably whereto Clemens ſaith (a) The Logos iſſuing forth is demiurgic, and when he becometh fleſh, to make himſelf viſible, he generateth himſelf. If God the Word (ſo called in this Theology) overſhadow'd and impregnated the Bleſſed Virgin, and generated himſelf, he muſt neceſſarily be his own Father and his

A Creature muſt have no more than is fit for a Creature to have.

(r) Petav. de Trin. l. 3. c 4. S. 4. & l. 8. c. 1. per tot.

(s) Ibid. & l. 4. c. 15. S. 7.

(t) Ibid. l. 8. c. 1. S. 14.

(u) Idem T. 4. l. 7. c. 6. S. 5.

(w) Ibid. l. 5. c. 19. S. 2.

(x) Ibid. l. 3. c. 6. S. 9.

(y) Complures Antiquorum, virtutem altiſſimi ad verbum Deiq; filium referunt, quem Dei virtutem Apoſtolus nominat. Hic igitur obumbraſſe virginem dicitur, hoc eſt, in eam quodammodo deſcendiſſe, & inexplicabili virtute ac potentia in ejus caſtiſſimis viſceribus domum ac Templum ædificaſſe ſibi, hoc eſt, formaſſe corpus, ac ſe hominem feciſſe. Petav. de Trin. l. 3. c. 6. S. 4.

(z) Idem T. 4. l. 14. c. 9. S. 5.

(a) Προελθὼν δὲ ὁ λόγος δημιουργίας αἴτιος, ἔπειτα καὶ ἑαυτὸν γεννᾷ, ὅτ' ἂν ὁ λόγος σὰρξ γένηται, ἵνα καὶ θεαθῇ. Strom. l. 5 p. m. 403.

his own Son (b) which yet is a great contradiction both in Nature and Morality. But the ſcholaſtic Theology proceedeth farther in making him his own Father and Son. For ſometimes it affirmeth (c) illam creaturam quam virgo concepit & peperit, tota Trinitas fecit, The whole Trinity made that Creature which the Virgin conceived and brought forth. Sometimes it affirmeth, that Chriſt as Man (d) non magis Dei patris, quàm ſuimet ipſius ac totius Trinitatis filius eſt, is no more the Son of God the Father than of himſelf and the whole Trinity. So in this Theology he is made a Son of the Reſurrection to himſelf and to the Holy Spirit. (e) Reſuſcitat Chriſtus ſemetipſum ſecundum carnem, cum patre & ſpiritu ſancto. As this Theology maketh Chriſt to be his own Father and Son: ſo it alſo maketh him to be Lord and Servant to himſelf. For it ſuppoſeth him to be unto himſelf Creator and Creature, which is to be Lord and Servant to himſelf. And of our Saviour's Prayers it giveth this account (f) Sibi patris filio ſupplicat filius matris, Chriſt as Man is a Suppliant to himſelf as God. He is Lord and Servant to himſelf therefore, which yet this Theology accounteth Nonſenſe (g) becauſe every one that is a Servant, is the Servant of another. As this Theology ſuppoſeth the Meſſiah to be ſent by himſelf (making him his own Meſſiah:) ſo it teacheth (h) that he anointed himſelf, that the Unction of his Humanity is his Divinity, and that he anointed himſelf with the Holy Spirit: but the Father is ſaid to anoint him, becauſe the Father doth it by the Son. According to this Theology (i) as God he gave the Holy Spirit to himſelf as Man, ipſe eſt enim qui dat, ipſe eſt qui accipit, for he himſelf is both the Giver and Receiver. At this rate ſometimes it underſtandeth thoſe words of our Saviour, I ſanctifie my ſelf. (k) I that am the Word of the Father, I my ſelf give the Spirit to my ſelf as Man, and by it ſanctifie my ſelf. In this Theology ſuch Maxims as theſe uſually occur (l) Chriſt was to himſelf the fountain and donor of Grace, (m) anointed his own Temple and ſanctified it, as he doth a Creature by the Holy Spirit, (n) receiv'd the Spirit as Man, gave it to himſelf as God. The holy Spirit from Chriſt deſcended upon Chriſt, from his Deity upon his humane Nature. Such are the incredible and intolerable Incongruities of this Theology (as alien from the Scripture as they are from good ſence and the nature of things) from which we cannot be freed but by relinquiſhing the ſcholaſtic Explication of the Trinity and of the Deity of the Meſſiah, which involveth and inferreth theſe and many more ſuch Incongruities. Of which a principal one is that ſtrange Mediation and Prieſthood, which this Theology attributeth to our Saviour.

For every one that is a Prieſt, is neceſſarily the Prieſt of another; and every one that is a Mediator, muſt be a Mediator in reſpect of others: but according to this Theology (o) Chriſt is the Mediator between Sinners and himſelf (as being a Perſon of the Trinity) the Object of his Mediation and Prieſthood is himſelf, and his Sacrifice of Satisfaction and Reconciliation he offereth to himſelf, and reconcileth us to the whole Trinity. So his Interceſſion in Heaven is ſaid to be (p) the cry of his blood in conſpectu ſanctæ Trinitatis, in the ſight of the holy Trinity. (q) Apud divinitatem ſummæ Trinitatis humani generis oblata ſanctificat, peccata expiat, vota commendat. With the Godhead of the ſupreme Trinity he ſanctifieth the Oblations of Mankind, expiateth their Sins, commendeth their Prayers. The Mediation of our Saviour cannot conſiſt with the ſcholaſtic Trinity upon this account, becauſe it proveth, that God is our Saviour's God, according to his divine nature. For God is neceſſarily the God of the Perſon of the Mediator, which is the humane divine Perſon of our Saviour, as the Scholaſtic Theology acknowledgeth. But in this Theology he is ſuppos'd (r) to mediate only according to the humane nature, or to be ſo the Mediator, that the mediatory Operations (like thoſe of eating and drinking) are peculiarly the Operations of the humane nature. The mediatory Function, Deo congruit per hominem & in homine ſalutem noſtram adminiſtranti, belongeth and agreeth to the Perſon of God adminiſtring the matters of our Salvation in and by the humane nature. But whatever uſe there may be of the humane nature in his Mediatorſhip, yet ſeeing it is the Perſon of God (the Son) that ſuſtaineth this officiary Dignity and diſchargeth the Functions thereof, it is manifeſt that God is the God of this divine Perſon, not only according to his humane Nature, but as ſuſtaining and adminiſtring this officiary Dignity; for as ſuch he is the Perſon of the Mediator. But as if the humane nature only was the Perſon of the Mediator, this Theology (at a marvellous rate of Incongruity) ſaith (s) Chriſtus idem quaſi altiſſimus donat, quaſi homo precatur, The ſame Chriſt as Man prayeth, as God granteth his own Prayers, which is to ſay, that he prayeth to himſelf as his own God. Chriſt is the Mediator between the holy Trinity and the Sons of Adam. Chriſt as Man is the Mediator between himſelf and ſinful Men. To countenance theſe Paradoxes, Chriſt is compar'd to the Soul of Man, which conſiſteth of a ſuperiour and inferiour, an imperant and ſubject-part. But neither the Soul of Man, nor the Perſon of Chriſt (who ſubſiſteth only in the Perſon of the Son of God) conſiſteth of two Perſons, one the ſuperiour, the other the inferiour, one the God, the other the Mediator and Interceſſor. The Son of God may be conſidered as performing the Actions of his Mediation according to the Human Nature only, but the Human Nature (according to this Theology) is not a Perſon, nor is the Perſon of the Mediator more than one, who cannot be a Mediator between himſelf and others, for he cannot be a middle Perſon between himſelf and others. Nor is he the Mediator between the Holy Ghoſt and Mankind, for there is no ſuch Mediator, but he is the Mediator between God and Men, and what that meaneth the Apoſtle expoundeth, 1 Joh. 2. 1. We have an Advocate with the Father. But the ſcholaſtic Doctrine of the Trinity implieth, that a Mediator is needful in reſpect of the Son and the Holy Ghoſt as well as in reſpect of the Father; and according to this Theology none can be a Mediator in reſpect of one divine Perſon without being ſuch in reſpect of the whole Trinity of Perſons, becauſe of their numerical oneneſs of Intellect, Will, Motion, Action and Operation ad extra. The Will of revealing himſelf and of being reconciled to Mankind by a Mediator is neceſſarily the common Act of the whole three Perſons; from whence it followeth, that Chriſt muſt be a Mediator in reſpect of himſelf, which is impoſſible. So Chriſt (according to this Theology) muſt neceſſarily have a Prieſt if God the Father hath one, and the Prieſt is himſelf. To ſalve which intolerable Incongruities, the ſcholaſtic Theology hath nothing to ſay;

only

(b) Tertul. adv. Prax. c. 9.

(c) Petav. T. 4. l. 7. c. 6. S. 4.

(d) Ibid. c. 5. S. 5.

(c) Ibid. c. 6. S. 9.

(f) Ibid. c. 4. S. 4.

(g) Ibid. l. 7. c. 9. S. 16, 17.

(h) Ibid. l. 11. c. 7. S. 6, 8.

(i) Ibid. c. 6. S. 5.

(k) Ego qui patris ſum Verbum, ipſe mihi homini facto ſpiritum tribuo, & meipſum factum hominem in illo ſanctifico. Ib. S. 4.

(l) Ibid. c. 5. S. 8.

(m) Ibid. c. 6. S. 4. & c. 7. S. 3. & c. 8 S. 6.

(n) Ibid. c. 6. S. 4. & de Trin. l. 3. c. 2. S. 7.

(o) Idem de Trin. l. 3. c. 2. S. 8. & c. 5. S. 5. Davenant. in Col. 1. 20.

(p) Petav. T. 4. l. 12. c. 8. S. 8.

(q) Ibid. c. 11. S. 6.

(r) Idem de Trin. l. 3. c. 2. S. 5. &c. & c. 3. S. 17.

(s) Ibid. c. 2. S. 8, 9.

only the force of theſe unanſwerable Objections of the Anti-Trinitarians it endeavoureth to abate by aſſerting this groſs Falſhood, (t) that the Scriptures deſcribe Chriſt the Prieſt and Mediator only with reſpect to his Miſſion by the Father, not as having the Function of making Satisfaction and Reconciliation(which reſpecteth the whole three Perſons equally offended by Mankind) and thence it is that they ſay nothing of Chriſt's being a Prieſt and a Mediator between himſelf or the Holy Ghoſt and Mankind. This indeed is purely ſcholaſtic, (that is, unſcriptural) Theology; but ſeeing the divine Perſon of Chriſt with reſpect to God (the Father) hath the holy Dignity and Office of Prieſthood (offereth Sacrifice, officiateth in the heavenly Sanctuary and dealeth with God on our behalf) this demonſtrateth that God is his God, as he is a divine Perſon ſuſtaining and adminiſtring this officiary Dignity, notwithſtanding this Pretenſion of the ſcholaſtic Theology, that he mediateth only according to his Human Nature. But who can believe this unreaſonable Dogma? For his being by officiary Dignity the Imperial Lord the Son is his being the Mediator; and all the Acts that belong to him as ſuch belong to his Mediatorſhip. And it is not reaſonable to ſuppoſe, that in gathering and governing his Church, in knowing his People, (their Hearts, their Virtues and Vices, and their Needs) in ſanctifying their Souls and raiſing them at the laſt day he acteth only according to his Human Nature.

(t) Ibid. c.5. S.5.

CHAP. VII.

1. The great Objections againſt our Idea of the Lord the Son which are anſwer'd by various Conſiderations. 2. The Eternal Generation not Scriptural. 3. No good account of it in the ſcholaſtic Theology. 4. Reaſons drawn from the divine Perfections do not infer it. 5. It claſheth with the divine Perfections. 6. No Tradition of the Church for it. 7. We clearly diſcern that God may have an Imperial Son generated in time. 8. Of the ſcholaſtic Theologies Notion of a Creature. 9. Of neceſſary and contingent Exiſtence. 10. Of ſelf-originate and cauſed Exiſtence. 11. Of a new God. 12. Reflections on a Book newly publiſh'd.

I. HAving thus far illuſtrated and proved by Arguments the Truth of our Idea of the Son of God, it is time to take into Conſideration an obvious Objection that will be made againſt it. For every one will be ready to charge it with Impiety and Abſurdity, becauſe it denieth his Eternal Generation, which will be thought conſequentially a denial of his Deity and a creaturizing the Son of God. For it is commonly ſuppos'd that this is the definitive Notion of a Creature, That which from an antecedent Non-exiſtence is brought forth into Being (by ſome other Cauſe) or That which after it once was not, is brought into Being. It is commonly ſuppoſed alſo, that whatever Being is neceſſarily exiſtent, (and therefore undeſtroyable) is divine Being: but all Being meerly contingent (dependent upon Will and Pleaſure) is created Being; and that the Non-eternal Generation of the Son cannot conſiſt with the divine Perfections, eſpecially not with God's Immutability. Eternity alſo is an eſſential Attribute of God, (u) Quis enim alius Dei cenſus quàm æternitas? ſaith Tertullian. Nothing is ſo characteriſtical of the divine Nature, (ſaith Iſidore Peluſiota) as to be eternal. If the Son of God therefore is God, he muſt be generated from Eternity. Accordingly the Arians and other Anti-Trinitarians call Chriſt a Creature for this Reaſon, becauſe as they ſuppoſe, Erat quando non erat: So the Jews ſtile the Meſſias, (w) the moſt excellent of all Creatures. But the ancient Chriſtian Church that held the Deity of Chriſt aſſerted alſo his Generation from Eternity, as Origen ſaith, (x) We do not worſhip a new God, τὸν ὐ πρότερον ὄντα θεὸν, ὐδὲ γνωσθέντα τοῖς ἀνθρώποις, that was not a God before, nor known unto Men. And he telleth Celſus, (y) We do not ſupervenerate, τὸν ἔναγχός γε φανέντα, ὡς πρότερον ὐκ ὄντα, one that hath lately appear'd, as if before he was not, for we believe that the Eſſence of Truth was before the time of Chriſt's appearing. (z) We are not commanded to receive πρόσφατόν τινα θεὸν, any recent God. The Catholicks thought it for their Honour to profeſs (a) Neque novitium neque recentem colimus Deum. And for this Reaſon the Empreſs Placilla was extremely averſe from Arianiſm, becauſe ſhe had learned that there is no new or recent God. Neſtorius is of no Authority amongſt Catholicks, but if that great Rant of his which was meant againſt the Catholicks had been meant againſt Paulus Samoſatenus or Photinus (who deny'd our Saviour's Exiſtence before he was born of the Bl. Virgin) they would have concurr'd with him in it; Non ſe bimeſtrem ac trimeſtrem Deum nominare poſſe. Theſe are the great Objections which incumber our Idea of the Son of God, and which may bring upon it the Charge of Hereſy, of Ebioniſm, Samoſatenianiſm, Photinianiſm, Socinianiſm. But if our Idea is the Truth of God, it is pity that it ſhould be daſh'd out of Countenance by terrible Names. We will therefore aſſert and vindicate the Truth of it againſt theſe great Objections; and that we may fairly aſſoil all the Difficulties which it involveth, to what hath been already diſcours'd againſt the Eternal Generation we will add theſe following Conſiderations.

II. It is of great Conſideration that the Eternal Generation is never mention'd in the holy Scriptures, but they are totally ſilent concerning it. So that it muſt not be counted a ſcriptural Truth, much leſs an Article of Faith, either in it ſelf a diſtinct Article, or a Branch of that great Article The Deity of the Meſſiah. St. Hilary (ſpeaking of the unintelligibleneſs of the Eternal Generation) ſaith (b) The Archangels know it not, the Angels have not heard it, the Ages hold it not, the Prophet hath not diſcern'd it, the Apoſtle hath ask'd no Queſtion about it, the Son himſelf hath not publiſh'd it; therefore nothing of it is reveal'd. It is not pretended that it can be proved from Scripture in a direct or expreſs way, but only deductively and conſequentially. Several places of Scripture are alledg'd to prove our Saviour's præexiſtence before he was born of the Bl. Virgin; that præexiſtence (not of his Soul, which we do not concern our ſelves about in this Debate, but of his Perſon) is proved to be the (u) Petav. de Trin. l. 2. c. 9. S. 5. & l. 5. c. 9. S. 10.

(w) Coſri p. 254.

(x) C. Celſ. l. 5. p. 257.

(y) Ibid. l. 8. p. 386.

(z) S. Baſil. c. Eunom. l. 5. p. 134.

(a) Baron. ad an. 385. n. 34. & ad an. 372. n. 78.

(b) Archangeli neſciunt, Angeli non audierunt, ſecula non tenent, Propheta non ſenſit, Apoſtolus non interrogavit, filius ipſe non edidit.

præexiſtence of a divine Perſon, which inferreth his Exiſtence from Eternity, and that inferreth his Eternal Generation, which cannot be proved from Scripture otherwiſe than by this deductive and conſequential way of Probation. But is there any other Article of Faith, or any other Matter of Fact neceſſary to be believed, which cannot otherwiſe be proved but only by this Method of going about, this deductive and conſequential way of Probation? If the holy Writers had thought this Eternal Generation an Article of Faith neceſſary to Salvation, certainly they would have made ſome mention of it in their Writings, at leaſt they would have told us (in writing the Hiſtory of the Son of God) that God generated a Son from Eternity, who was again generated in time, they would have given ſome hiſtorical account of an Abſtract Son of God (to whom an Eternal Generation belongeth) they would have made ſome notifying Deſcription of him, of which his Eternal Nativity muſt have been a principal Ingredient. They that inſiſt ſo much upon being born and begotten of God, could they forget ſo much as once to mention the tranſcendent divine Nativity of the Eternal Son of God? But ſuppoſe that they thought it prudent not to give any hiſtorical account of this Nativity, yet ſeeing their Buſineſs is Chriſtology, ſeeing they delight in ſtrange magnifying Expreſſions concerning Chriſt, making ſtrange Compoſitions of Words, and heaping Expreſſion upon Expreſſion, (as if they could never ſpeak high enough) ſeeing they abound with vaſt numbers of ennobling Attributes of the Son of God, whence is it that in all their Writings they never ſo much as once ſtile him by this tranſcendent ennobling Attribute The Eternal Son of God? Were they leſs ſtudious of his Honour than we are, who ordinarily celebrate and ennoble him by his Eternal Sonſhip? They that have ſtiled The Holy Spirit The Eternal Spirit, why is it that they have never ſtiled The Son The Eternal Son? They that have ſhewed various Reaſons why he is the Son of God, (his Generation of the Bl. Virgin, his Meſſias-ſhip, his Reſurrection) whence is it that they have never alledg'd this Reaſon, becauſe he was generated by the Father from Eternity? Theſe things are ſtupendiouſly unaccountable, (if our Saviour's Eternal Generation is a Truth, and much more if it is an Article of Faith) and the Conſideration of them ſhould incline us to believe, that thoſe places of Scripture which are uſually cited to prove his Exiſtence from Eternity, are meant of him as he is The Evangelical Imperial Son, not as he is The Eternal Son. So we have expounded his preaching to the Spirits in Priſon, John Baptiſt's Saying concerning him He was before me, our Saviour's Saying touching his Exiſtence (in his day) before Abraham, and his Prayer concerning the Glory that he had with God before the World was, his going forth from the Days of Eternity, his likeneſs to Melchizedeck, and his Title of Alpha and Omega. And in like manner we ſhall expound his coming down from Heaven, his being in the form of God, his being The Eternal Life, The firſt-born of every Creature, The Word which was in the beginning, by which all things and the Worlds were made, and the Beings in Heaven and Earth were created. From an impartial Survey of all places of Scripture that are alledg'd in this Argument it will appear, that our Saviour's Eternal Generation cannot rightly be inferr'd from any part of the Bible, although his native Divinity or Deity of Perſon is beyond all Contradiction.

III. The Scholaſtic Theology is ſo far from giving a good account of the Eternal Generation, that its account thereof is not tolerably conſiſtent with it ſelf. For St. Hilary ſaith, that the Generation of the Son is from the Love of God, (c) Omne quod Deus eſt per Charitatem impartiens, (imparting by Charity all that God is:) but this Aquinas expreſly contradicteth. (d) Chriſt is called (ſaith he) the Son of the Love of God as being ſuperabundantly beloved by him, (non quod dilectio ſit principium generationis Filii) not becauſe Love is the Principle of the Generation of the Son. Aquinas and the Schoolmen generally diſpute, that the Generation of the Son is not from any antecedent Will of God: but a principal ſcholaſtic Divine contradicteth them and aſſerteth, (e) antecedente voluntate Pater vult Filium ejuſque productionem, The Father willeth the Son and his Production by an antecedent Will. Thus he contradicteth the Divines of his own School; but he as plainly contradicteth himſelf. For ſometimes he thinketh it beſt to aſſert, (f) neque volentem neque nolentem Patrem genuiſſe Filium, that the Father generated the Son neither willing nor nilling; that Creation is θελήσεως ἔργον, the Work of the Will, but the Generation of the Son is φύσεως ἔργον, a Work of Nature, (ut non per actionem ullam voluntatis genitus eſſe dicatur) that he may not be ſaid to be generated by any Act of the Will, either free or neceſſary. When he aſſerteth, that the Generation of the Son is from an antecedent Will of God, he meaneth a natural and neceſſary Volition, (ſuch as is in all Men towards Good in general:) but this Aſſertion of his is contradictory and deſtructive to this principal Maxim of his Theology, The Father is conſtituted a Perſon by the Generation of the Son. For (the Will being the rational Appetite) if he is not a Perſon antecedently to the Generation of the Son, he cannot will antecedently to his Generation. Nor can he generate the Son for any Reaſons moving his Will thereunto, Reaſons of Goodneſs and Charity, of Felicity and Society, (prudential and virtuous Reaſons) which are the Reaſons that many ſcholaſtic Divines alledge to prove the neceſſity of an Eternal Generation of the Son. (g) “God that took delight “in producing the World (otherwiſe he had not “produc'd it) could not but take more delight in “producing God out of himſelf than the World “out of nothing, (for the one is infinitely a “more excellent Production than the other, and “more deſirable;) therefore it is credible that “God firſt produc'd God out of himſelf, (out of “his own Nature) and afterwards the World. “Again, God taketh pleaſure in producing Crea-“tures like himſelf, and the more any Creature “is like himſelf the more he is pleaſed with it; “therefore he is moſt highly pleaſed in produ-‘cing ſome one like himſelf in Nature and Sub-“ſtance. And becauſe it is neceſſary that Com-“placence and Joy ſhould be in God in the high-“eſt degree, therefore it is neceſſary that God “ſhould have ſome one produced of his own Na-“ture like himſelf in the higheſt meaſure. More-“over, God taketh pleaſure in Society, (other-“wiſe he had not produc'd the World out of no-“thing) there cannot be a fulneſs of Joy in ſummè ſolitario; but if God taketh pleaſure in the “Society of another produc'd out of nothing, he “will incomparably take more pleaſure in the “Society of one produc'd out of his own Nature “and Subſtance. From the like Reaſons ſome School-Divines infer, that there muſt be a plurality of Perſons in the Godhead, (h) becauſe fulneſs of Goodneſs (which is communicative without Malignity or Invidiouſneſs, and giveth all that

(c) Ap. Petav. de Trin. l. 6. c. 8. S. 4, 12.

(d) Par. 1. Qu. 41. Art. 2.

(e) Petav. ſupr. S. 20.

(f) Ibid. l. 2. c. 5. S. 9, 10.

(g) Raymund. de ſabunde Theol. nat. p. 65, &c.

(h) Ric. Victorin ap. Petav. ſupr. l. 6. c. 8. S. 13.

that God is) requireth it. And fulneſs of Happineſs requireth, that ſeveral Perſons be there, which enjoy the ſame good, love one another at the higheſt rate, and live in mutual Communion. And fulneſs of love requireth, that ſuch an one be there, whom God may and ought to love as himſelf. So ſome others argue (i) that God muſt live the moſt perfect and happy Life, which cannot be in meer ſolitude, and therefore muſt produce a Son (qui paternarum perfectionum æternus eſt teſtis congratulator atque hæres) who is an Eternal Witneſs, Congratulator and Heir of his Father's Perfections. Theſe are the Reaſons of generating the Son from Eternity.

But if the Son was generated from Eternity for theſe Reaſons, then we muſt ſay, that God produc'd his Son from Eternity, becauſe for certain Reaſons he thought it neceſſary; which Reaſons are Prudential and Virtuous Reaſons, and therefore we muſt ſuppoſe him to have been produc'd from Eternity, from Wiſdom, Counſel and Will, for End and Deſign. But this ſuppoſition is a downright Contradiction to the Scholaſtic Trinity, and the Eternal Generation, which (as the Alex. Cyril argueth) cannot be (k) τῆς κρίσεως καὶ βουλήσεως ἔργον, a work of judgment and of will (as the Creation is) becauſe it is Eternal. The Creation of the World (in the Scholaſtic Theology) is in this reſpect oppos'd to the Generation of the Son, he was not generated, becauſe God thought it neceſſary for certain Reaſons (moving his Will thereunto) to ſuppoſe him generated for End and Deſign (for motive Reaſons) is Contradictory to his Deity in the Scholaſtic Theology, which implyeth, that he is the ultimate End of all things as perfectly and plenarily, as God the Father is. His neceſſary Exiſtence alſo is deſtroy'd by this ſuppoſition, He was produc'd from Eternity for certain Reaſons moving the Will of God thereunto: Nor could the Father be conſtituted a Perſon by generating the Son, if ſuch Reaſons were antecedent to his Generation. The Son therefore (in this Theology) is ſuppos'd to proceed from the Father as heat from the Fire, the light from the Sun, and ſplendor from Light (which are ſimilitudes that the Ancient Writers frequently make uſe of) naturally, neceſſarily, and eſſentially. The Father is ſuppos'd, to generate the Son (l) οὐσιωδῶς, eſſentially, φύσει, by nature (in quantum eſt and as a natural Agent) not βουλήσει, by Will; and this Generation this Theology ſuppoſeth to be φυσικὴν καὶ οὐσιώδη operationem, a Natural and Eſſential Operation. (m) How can he be generated by the Will and Counſel of the Father, who is the Will and Counſel of the Father? The Father doth not exiſt by Will, nor againſt Will, and the ſame muſt be ſaid of the Son. Such are the Maxims of the Ancient Writers; they affirm, that the Generation of the Son, is not from the Will of God (principiative as the Principle of it) this they ſay: But they alſo ſay the contrary and are inconſiſtent with themſelves and their own Maxims. (n) God having power concurring with his Will generated one worthy of himſelf. Such are their ſayings, and how ſhall we reconcile ſuch Sayings with their own Maxims? Petavius thinketh, that when they ſay the Generation of the Son is from Will, they mean by Will nothing more than the natural and neceſſary Volition (before mentioned) which doth not hinder his Generation from being meerly Natural and Neceſſary, and thus he would ſave them from ſelf-contradiction. But he is much miſtaken in his method of reconciling them; for the Fathers cannot be ſuppos'd to mean by Will nothing more than the natural and neceſſary Volition, as will appear by theſe four Arguments. (1.) The Fathers ſay (o) the Son was generated ex charitate, which is a Divine kind of Love, and a Divine Virtue, of a very different Nature from the natural and neceſſary Volition. (2.) The Fathers derive the Generation of the Son from Wiſdom as well as Will; by Will therefore they cannot mean only the natural and neceſſary Volition. (p) Sola ſapientia Pater genuit Filium, ſaith S. Auſtin, or an Author under his Name. S. Auſtin in his undoubted Writings ſtyleth the Son (q) Sapientia de Sapientia, and ſo others of the Ancients ſtyle him σοφία ἐκ σοφίας, Wiſdom from Wiſdom. And this is not all (r) but they praiſe the Wiſdom, Power and Goodneſs of God in the Generation of his Son. (3.) The natural and neceſſary Volition is not Goodneſs, nor is any thing that iſſueth from it properly a Gift (no more than the Fire is the Donour of Heat or the Sun of Light:) but theſe Ancient Writers aſcribe all that the Son is and hath to the Goodneſs and Gift of the Father. (s) Nil ex invidia retinens, plenuſque datorum. (t) Thou didſt beget him before all Ages by Will, Power and Goodneſs. (4.) The natural and neceſſary Volition is not ſuch a Volition, to which God is moved by Prudential and Virtuous Reaſons: but to this ſort of Volition the Ancient Writers aſcribe the Eternal Generation of the Son. For to this ſenſe S. Baſil and others argue. (u) It is beſt and moſt becoming God, to be a Father and to generate a Son; and ſeeing he is neither wanting in the Knowledge of what is beſt, nor in Will to do it, nor in Power to accompliſh it, how could it be otherwiſe, but that he generated his Son from Eternity? If he did not ſo generate him, either it was becauſe he could not, or becauſe he would not: neither of which can be ſuppos'd; for it is abſurd, to ſuppoſe, that God did not always Will (the Son) the Good of Goods. The Generation of the Son in this Argument is deriv'd, not from the natural and neceſſary Volition, which is a ſort of natural Neceſſity, but the virtuous Volition (the Volition of what is ſimply and abſolutely beſt) which is free from natural Neceſſity, and from which all Chriſtians derive the Creation of the World. Accordingly, Eunomius (S. Baſil's Adverſary) objected againſt this Argument, that it inferr'd as well the Creation of the World from Eternity, as the Generation of the Son from Eternity. But at the ſame rate the Fathers argue for the Conſubſtantiality of the Son, and his equality with the Father, as for his Eternal Generation. If the Father did not generate a Son equal to himſelf, either it was becauſe he could not or he would not. If he would not, he was invidious; if he could not, he was impotent. To ſuppoſe him not able to generate a Conſubſtantial Son, is to impeach him of Imbecillity; and to ſuppoſe him not willing, is to ſuppoſe him μὴ μᾶλλον ἐθελῆσαι τὸ κάλλιον, not to will rather that which is the better and more excellent. Such a Volition is not the natural and neceſſary Volition, nor are theſe Argumentations agreeable to the Maxims of the Fathers touching the Natural, Neceſſary and Eternal Generation of the Son; Nor is the Allegation of Virtuous and Prudential Reaſons to any purpoſe in a matter of Eternal Neceſſity. If the Son

(i) Dr. H. More Script. phil. T. 1. p. 764, &c.

(k) Theſaur. p. 59. Petav. T. 1. l. 3 *c.*5. *S.*6. Athanaſ. c. Arian. or. 2. p. 157. Com.

(l) Petav. de Trin. l. 5. c. 4. S. 10. l. 6. c. 8. S. 14. &c.

(m) S. Cyril. ſupr. p. 54.

(n) Ὁ δὲ θεὸς σύνδρομον ἔχων τῇ βουλήσει τὴν δύναμιν ἐγέννησεν ἄξιον ἑαυτοῦ. Petav. ſupr. l. 6. c. 8. S. 11.

(o) Petav. ibid. S. 4. & 12.

(p) Ibid. S. 16.

(q) Ibid. c. 10. S. 1, 2.

(r) S. Chryſoſt. in Ep. ad Philip. p. 42.

(s) Petav. ſupr. c. 8. S. 12.

(t) Ipſum ante omnia ſecula genuiſti voluntate & potentia & bonitate. Petav. ibid. S. 26. & vid. S. 24.

(u) Ibid. S. 4, 7, 9, 10, 11, 12.

Son be generated by Eternal Neceſſity, his Equality and Conſubſtantiality with the Father doth not at all depend upon the Determinations of of the Divine Will, but theſe things are antecedently thereto immovably fix'd by Eternal Neceſſity.

IV. There is as little reaſon for the Eternal Generation, as there is proof of Scripture. For ſuppoſing it poſſible, which it is not (for there can be no ſuch Son of God, that is not a Saint of God) yet why it ſhould actually be, no good reaſon can be given either from the efficient or the final Cauſe. Not from the final Cauſe; for according to Gr. Nyſſen's compariſon, ſuppoſe the Fire, to have a natural and neceſſary Volition, and to generate heat ad ultimum virium, but not from any final Cauſe or Reaſon moving the Fire thereunto, ſuch is the Nature of the Eternal Generation. Which cannot be from any reaſon moving the Will of God thereunto, nor from any Volition but the natural and neceſſary. Whence this Argumentation of the Ancients appeareth, to be an impertinence; If God did not generate his Son from Eternity, either it was becauſe he would not, or becauſe he could not; for this Eternal Generation of his Son is neceſſarily antecedent to all his determinations of Will and all the Reaſons thereof. But the Exiſtence of God is neceſſarily Antecedent to the Generation of his Son, and God is according to his Idea abſolutely perfect, and conſequently the infinite Eternal Beatitude. And if infinite Eternal Beatitude is neceſſarily antecedent to Generation and Sonſhip in the Godhead, it is upon that account unreaſonable, to argue, that Generation and Sonſhip muſt be in the Godhead from Eternity, that Society may be there, without which there can be no perfect Beatitude; as ſome of the Heathen thus argu'd againſt the Unity of God (w) ſi Deus unus eſt, quæ eſſe beata ſolitudo queat? The Son's Deity and neceſſary Exiſtence (according to the Scholaſtic Theology) imply, that no reaſons of his Eternal Generation can be given from the final Cauſe: Nor will the efficient Cauſe afford any, unleſs certain Sayings of the Ancients may be counted (as themſelves accounted them) Reaſons drawn from the Divine Perfections. (x) As all things that are perfect generate ſomething, ſo that which was always perfect generated from Eternity, and it was moſt becoming him ſo to do. His Nature is of it ſelf γεννητική, generative (y) and as Men are Fathers οὐκ ἐκ βουλήσεως ἀλλὰ φυσικῶς, not from Will but Naturally (which is a miſtake) ſo it is with God. (z) The Son is æternæ lucis æternus ſplendor. The Light was from Eternity, therefore the ἀπαύγασμα, Effulgency of it was from Eternity. Ὄντος ἀεὶ τοῦ πατρὸς, ὢν ἔστι καὶ ἀϊδίως καὶ τὸ τούτου ἀπαύγασμα, ὅπερ ἐστὶν ὁ λόγος αὐτοῦ. The Father exiſting from Eternity, from Eternity alſo his Splendor Exiſteth, which is his Verbum or Logos. If he was not in the Father from Eternity (who is the Logos, Wiſdom and Virtue of the Father) Logos, and Wiſdom and Virtue would be wanting in the Father, he would be ἄλογος & ἄσοφος, which is moſt abſurd to ſuppoſe. He cannot be actually wiſe and intelligent ſine expreſſa notione ac Verbo, without an expreſs Notion which is the (Scholaſtic) Word. Origen argueth (a) that the (Platonic) Eſſence of Truth was before the time of Chriſt's appearing. To affirm, that ſometime he was not, is to ſay, that ſometime Truth was not, Wiſdom was not, Life was not. If any one ſaith, that ſometime he was not, and afterwards was produc'd, I will aſk ſuch an one, why he was not produc'd before? To which interrogatory of Origen a Chriſtian Trinitarian will make anſwer, that a Perſon who is eſſentially θεάνθρωπος cannot Exiſt without the human Nature. The Alexandrian Cyril argueth (b) If God did not generate his Son from Eternity, he could never generate him, Generation being ex Subſtantia, and therefore a Generation on this ſide Eternity would be a Mutation in his Subſtance. Some others argue (c) A Perſon cannot begin to exiſt of and in the divine Eſſence it ſelf, which was not before, conſiſtently with the immutability of the Divine Nature. But it is the common Notion of all Men, that God is immutable. If therefore the Son is the true and genuin Son of God the Father, that is, originated of the Subſtance of the Father, and ſubſiſting in him, he is neceſſarily, as by nature equal to the Father, ſo coeval and co-eternal. This Argument ſuppoſeth, that a true and genuin Son of God muſt neceſſarily be generated as the Scholaſtic Abſtract Son of God is ſuppos'd to be generated of and in the Scholaſtic Divine Eſſence or Subſtance (ſuch a Son cannot be generated de novo without a Mutation in the Divine Subſtance:) but a true and genuin Son of God may be generated otherwiſe, and much more accommodately to thoſe ſimilitudes which the Ancient Writers uſe. (d) As we ſee, that if one taketh of the corporeal Fire which we uſe, inlightning a light of light, he doth not cauſe any Paſſion or Section in it, but it remaineth the ſame: ſuch incomprehenſibly is the Generation of Chriſt of the Father from Eternity. We ſee other fires kindled from fire, it not being at all diminſh'd, but remaining the ſame, whence many fires may be kindled. The Subſtance of the Son is not found from without, nor ſuperinduc'd from non-exiſtents, but generated of the Subſtance of the Father, as the Eradiation of light, as the Vapor of Water; for neither is that Eradiation, nor that Vapor, the Water it ſelf, nor the Sun it ſelf, nor alien and exotick, but an Aporrhœa of the Paternal Subſtance, which ſuffereth no Diviſion. As the Sun remaining the ſame is not diminiſh'd by his poured forth rayes: So the Subſtance of the Father ſuſtain'd no alteration having an Image of it ſelf the Son. At this rate of generating a Son as a Candle is lighted by a Candle, or as Fire is kindled from Fire, without making any Mutation in it, a Son may be de novo, generated in the Godhead without making any Mutation in the Divine Subſtance. For the divine vital Eſſence (without any Mutation of Subſtance) may become his Eſſence in reſpect of its Vital Sanctity, as it is the Derivative; ſo it is the Holy Ghoſt's Eſſence in reſpect of its Vital Sanctity as it is the Communicative. The Son ſo generated is Coeſſential with the Father without the Eternal Generation, which is an Anſwer to this other Argument of the Metaphyſical Scholaſticks (e) τὸ ὁμοούσιον, the Son's being conſubſtantial, inferreth his τὸ συναΐδιον, being coeternal. Their reaſon

(w) Lactant. l. 1. c. 7.

(x) Petav. ſupr. l. 5. c. 9. S. 7, 8.

(y) S. Cyr. Theſaur. p. 57.

(z) Ap. D. Bull Def. Fid. Nic. p. 199, 207, 197. ed. an. 1703.

(a) C. Celſ. l. 8. p. 386. Periarch. l. 1. c. 2. & l. 4.

(b) Petav. T. 1. l. 3. c. 2. S. 11. & T. 2. l. 5. c. 4. S. 9.

(c) Non poteſt perſona aliqua ex & in ipſa divina eſſentia incipere exiſtere, quæ prius non fuit, ſalvâ divinæ naturæ immutabilitate. Atqui immutabilem eſſe Deum, eſt κοινὴ omnium hominum ἔννοια. Itaque ſi Filius ſit verus & genuinus Dei Patris Filius, hoc eſt, ex ſubſtantia Patris ortum habens & in ipſo ſubſiſtens, neceſſe eſt, Patri ſuo ut naturâ æqualis, ita Coævus & Coæternus ſit. Dr. Bull ſupr. Sect. 4. c. 2. n. 4.

(d) Ὥσπερ οὖν ἐννοοῦμεν, ὅτι ἐκ τοῦ παρ' ἡμῖν ὑλικοῦ πυρὸς λάβη τις, καὶ πάθος ἢ τομὴν οὐ ποιεῖ, ἐν τῷ ἀναλάμψαι φῶς ἐκ [illegible]ός, ἀλλὰ μένει τοῦτο· [illegible] ταλήπτως ἐξ αἰ[illegible] τοῦ Χριστοῦ ἐκ πατρὸς [illegible] 199. Ex igne ignes alios acc[illegible]demus, illo nihil diminut[illegible] eodem manente, unde multi accendi poſſunt ignes. ibid. p. 358 Οὐκ ἔξωθέν τις ἐστιν ἐφευρεθεῖσα ἡ τοῦ υἱοῦ οὐσία, οὐδὲ ἐκ μὴ ὄντων ἐπεισήχθη, ἀλλὰ ἐκ τῆς τοῦ πατρὸς οὐσίας ἔφυ, ὡς τοῦ φωτὸς ἀπαύγασμα, ὡς ὕδατος ἀτμὶς· οὔτε γὰρ τὸ ἀπαύγασμα, οὔτε ἡ ἀτμὶς αὐτὸ τὸ ὕδωρ ἐστιν, ἢ αὐτὸς ὁ ἥλιος· οὔτε ἀλλότριον, ἀλλὰ ἀπόρροια τῆς τοῦ πατρὸς οὐσίας, οὐ μερισμὸν ὑπομεινάσης τῆς τοῦ πατρὸς οὐσίας. ὡς γὰρ μένων ὁ ἥλιος ὁ αὐτὸς οὐ μειοῦται ταῖς ἐκχεομέναις ὑπ' αὐτοῦ αὐγαῖς· οὕτως οὐδὲ ἡ οὐσία τοῦ πατρὸς ἀλλοίωσιν ὑπέμεινεν, εἰκόνα ἑαυτῆς ἔχουσα υἱόν. ibid. p. 135.

(e) Ibid. p. 173.

reaſon is τὸ δὲ ὁμοούσιον τῷ πατρὶ ἐπιγενητὸν οὐκ ἔστι, that which is Conſubſtantial to the Father, is not Adventitious in time. But one of their principal Arguments is taken from (f) the name Father (which is ſuppos'd to be a more excellent and honourary Name than the Name God, becauſe it is more excellent and honourary to God, to be the Father of his Son than the God of Creatures.) God was the Father from Eternity (ſay they) therefore he generated a Son, and had a Son from Eternity. So ſome have argu'd, that God could not be Creator, Lord and King from Eternity, unleſs there were Creatures, Servants and Subjects from Eternity. But this is meerly from the Ambiguity of Words, to create Difficulties (which are before conſider'd;) for as God was The Creator, Lord and King from Eternity in one ſenſe, not in another (in a duly limited ſenſe) ſo he was The Father from Eternity. From which uſual Name of God in the New Teſtament the Ancient Writers ſhould not have inferr'd the Eternal Generation, and that our Bleſſed Saviour is the Eternal Son: But they ought to have inferr'd from it, that he is The Evangelical Imperial Son (as the Apoſtle ſtyleth God The Father of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt;) for Divines uſually ſay of this Name The Father, vox hæc Evangelii eſt, vox hæc Evangelium eſt, This is the Word of the Goſpel, and is The Goſpel.

V. The Eternal Generation, and The Eternal Trinity are far from being more agreeable to the divine Perfections than the Non-eternal. For they imply (g) ſecundum eſſentiam eſſe Patrem, & ſecundum eſſentiam eſſe Filium, (that the Father and Son are Eſſential to the Godhead) that the Son is an eſſential Conſtitutive of the Godhead (res illa una quæ veraciter eſt Pater & Filius & Spiritus Sanctus) that without the Generation of the Son the Father could not be ſuch a Subſtance and Perſon, nor a Perſon in General, and that (h) de ratione hujus Entis unius & primi eſt, ut in illo contineantur duæ illæ perſonæ Filius & Spiritus Sanctus. It is of the Nature and Notion of this one and firſt Being, that thoſe two Perſons the Son and the holy Spirit be contained in it. But if The Son is an Eſſential Conſtitutive of the Godhead, he cannot Exiſt by Generation, but muſt Exiſt meerly and immediately by that Neceſſary Exiſtence, whereby God Exiſteth, and therefore can be no Son. For God Exiſteth by meer Neceſſary Exiſtence (in order of Nature antecedently to any Generation;) In this God that Exiſteth by meer Neceſſary Exiſtence, no eſſential Conſtitutive of God (or the Godhead) can be wanting; therefore Nothing generated (no Son) can be an eſſential Conſtitutive of the Godhead. If the Son is an eſſential Conſtitutive of God, thoſe ſimilitudes which the Ancient Writers have us'd, are not accomodate, to illuſtrate his Generation, namely (i) the Emanation of Heat from the Fire and of Light from the Sun. Nec ſine ſole ſuo lux, nec ſine luce ſuâ Sol. Hieron. Vida. For theſe Emanations of Light and Heat are but exteriour Communications, and are far more accommodate, to illuſtrate The neceſſary Emanation of the World from God (according to ſome Philoſophic-pagans) than the Eternal Generation of the Son, who is ſuppos'd, to be an eternally eſſential Conſtitutive of God. But no Being can be ſuppos'd to generate any eſſential Conſtitutive of it; therefore God cannot be ſuppos'd to generate ſuch a Son. His Eternal Generation bereaveth the Divine Majeſty of all Liberty of Agency, of all poſſible deliberation concerning it, of all Exerciſe of Wiſdom and Goodneſs in his divineſt Production, and ſome great Schoolmen ſay (k) that God could not know his Son under the notion of poſſible or future, which bereaveth him of all preconception of Mind and intelligent Agency in this Eternal Generation. If the Eternal Son iſſueth from the Eternal Father naturally, neceſſarily and eſſentially, it cannot be in the Senſe of Law and Morality his doing, that the Son doth Exiſt, (it is not imputable to him) he is not the Father, the Son is not to him a Son in the Senſe of Law and Morality, he oweth him nothing, no filial Affection or Duty, is not at all for him or to him, nor is he the ſuperiour Proprietor and Owner of him, nor hath right to the Poſſeſſion, uſe and diſpoſal of him (as is before diſcours'd) but ſuch a Son is neceſſarily ſui juris, as being not at all oblig'd to ſuch a Father. Accordingly the Scholaſtic Theology ſaith (l) in Filium quem naturâ & neceſſariò produxit, Deus jus habet nullum. God hath no right over his Son, whom he produc'd by nature and neceſſarily. (m) As he was God, he was neither obedient, nor diſobedient, as the Fathers ſpeak. For theſe things are peculiar to them, that are of a ſecond Order and Subjects. (n) The Eternal Father is called The God of Chriſt, not as Chriſt is God and the Word, but as he is Man. Wherefore it was not as God, that he was obedient to his Father and did his Will, but as Man. Theſe are marvellous Maxims touching the Son of God (repugnant to the Nature of Paternity and Sonſhip, and horribly repugnant to God and Piety) but they are not more marvellous than the ſelf-contradictions of this Theology, which uſually diſcourſeth, that all things that the Son hath were given him by the Father, and given him by generating him, (o) and that he gave him his Being. Yet it affirmeth, that his Generation was contrary to the Nature and Notion of a Gift, and that he was produc'd by a Natural Neceſſity. Which is ſuch a Principle of Generation, as is incompetible to any intelligent free Agent, as this Eternal Generation is incompetible to a Perſon. For God is ſaid (p) always to generate his Son from Eternity to Eternity, becauſe there can be no Mutation in God (intra Deum) becauſe the Son is produc'd by Intellection (which is from Eternity to Eternity) and becauſe God is a pure Act (ſemper Actuoſus) therefore this Generation is ſuppos'd to be a never-ceaſing Generation. Which is not a proper Natural Generation; It is a Generation that is always in fieri; It belongeth only to thoſe things that are always in fieri, that have not together and at once a total Perfect Eſſence, as Motion and Time; It doth not allow the Son a Conſiſtent, but only a Tranſient kind of Subſtance, (q) that is always in fieri from Eternity to Eternity. (r) It cannot be ſuppos'd, that that which was generated from Eternity, and yet is generated to this Day, and will be generated to Eternity, is a Perſon, who receiveth his Perfect Eſſence in a ſhort Time, and hath the whole of it at once. So hodie (this Day have I begotten thee) denoteth, that the Son is generated in one certain ſpace of time. And it is not ſenſe, to ſpeak of making that which is

(f) Petav. de Trin. l. 5. c. 4. S. 5, 6. & c. 9. S. 9.

(g) Petav ibid. l. 5. c. 4. S. 10. & l. 6. c. 8. S. 7.

(h) Valentia T. 1. Diſp. 2. Qu. 1. punct. 1. S. 22.

(i) Petav. ſupr. l. 6. c. 9. S. 5. & l. 1. c. 10. S. 5. S. Cyr Theſaur. p. 31, 36, &c.

(k) Vaſqu. in Thom. 1. Par. T. 2. Diſp. 160. c. 3.

(l) Petav. ſupr. l. 5. c. 5. S. 12.

(m) Si quidem quâ Deus nec obediens, nec inobediens fuit, ut Patres loquuntur. Hæc enim eorum propria ſunt, qui ſecundi ordinis ſunt & ſubjecti. Petav. T. 4. l. 9. c. 6. S 2.

(n) Pater æternus Chriſti Deus appellatur, non quâ ille Deus ac verbum eſt, ſed ut homo. Quare non ut Deus Patri ac Deo ſuo Chriſtus obtemperavit, ejuſve voluntatem executus eſt, ſed ut homo. ibid.

(o) Quidquid Deus Pater Deo Filio dedit: ita enim dedit Filio Pater, ſine quibus Filius eſſe non poſſet, ſicut ei dedit ut eſſet. Idem de Trin. l. 3. c. 4. S. 9. & l. 5. c. 5. S. 13.

(p) Ibid. l. 3. c. 10. S. 5, 6.

(q) Ibid. l. 5. c. 9. S. 13.

(r) Curcell. Diſſ. de voc. Trin. n. 67.

made, or of generating that which perfectly exiſteth and is perfectly produc'd by Generation. But this is none of the worſt Incongruities in the Scholaſtic Theology, nor is this never-ceaſing Generation held by all that hold the Eternal Generation. But all that hold the Eternal Generation muſt neceſſarily ſuppoſe the Son not to be meerly an Object of the Eternal Predeſtination (as he is repreſented in holy Scripture) but to be A principal Agent in his and our Eternal Predeſtination, (s) which yet is never attributed to him in Scripture, (as Maldonate hath obſerv'd) and it is a great Argument againſt the Eternal Generation.

(s) Maldonat. in Matth. 20. 23.

VI. As there is no Scripture or ſound Reaſon for the Eternal Generation, ſo the Chriſtian Church hath no Tradition of it. It may be juſtly ſaid, that (in conſort with Scripture and ſound Reaſon) ſhe hath a Tradition of the Divinity or Deity of the Lord Meſſiah; for this hath been always expreſly acknowledg'd in the Chriſtian Church, and counted the great Eſſential of the Chriſtian Religion, the Belief whereof is neceſſary to Salvation. Thoſe that did not believe it (as the Ebionites and Cerinthians) were not accounted Chriſtians, and if any ſuch aroſe in the Church which deny'd it (as Theodotus Byzantinus, Artemon or Artemas, P. Samoſatenus) their Doctrine was counted mortiferous Hereſy, themſelves were counted Hereticks, and they fell under the Cenſures of the Church. Between the Catholicks and the Arians the Matter in Controverſy was the Deity of Chriſt, (wherewith Conſubſtantialiſm is intimately connex'd) this was the principal Queſtion (The ςάσις or ζήτημα) all others were but incidental, and the ſeveral Branches of Arianiſm were therefore counted Hereſy, becauſe they were thought a denying the Deity of Chriſt. In the Council of Aquileia the Arian Biſhops were put to this Teſt, (t) whether they would acknowledge Chriſt verum Deum? but they would only acknowledge him verum Filium, and would not be prevail'd with to proceed ſo far as to acknowledge him verum Deum. (u) Perfecta Fides eſt Deum de Deo credere, The perfect Faith (ſaith St. Jerom) is to believe him to be God of God. This Article (either well or ill underſtood) all Chriſtians from the riſe of Chriſtianity have thought a fundamental Article of their Religion, and have agreed in the Belief and Profeſſion of it. But touching the Eternal Generation theſe three things are obſervable.

(t) Baron. ad an. 381. n. 67.

(u) Idem ad an. 359. n. 38.

(1.) It is certain that the Primitive Chriſtians were not taught it, much leſs were they taught it as an Article of their Faith. If the Primitive Chriſtians had been taught it, if they had known the Eternal Generation, the moſt ancient Fathers could not have made ſuch marvellous blundering Work as they have done about the Generation of the Logos of God. Therefore we muſt ſay of them as St. Jerom doth of three of the Evangeliſts, They knew not the Eternal Generation. The Fathers before cited Athenagoras, Theophilus, Tatianus, (with whom J. Mart. Tertullian and Lactantius ſymbolize) knew ſo little of the Eternal Generation, that they never ſay, The Son or Logos was generated from Eternity, but this is their ſenſe, that the Generation of the Son is the ſame thing with the Prolation of the Sermo (or Logos) which Prolation was not till there was occaſion for him (to be an Archical Principle of the Univerſe of Beings) and then only (not before) he had his Prolation or Generation, and by his προέλευσις, proceeding from the Father at the beginning of the Creation became (w) πρῶτον γέννημα, the firſt thing generated by the Father. Some have thought that the beginning of Geneſis is thus in the Hebrew, In principio Deus fecit ſibi Filium. (x) Tertullian is not of Opinion that this is the Senſe of the Hebrew, but this is his Senſe and Notion touching the Generation of the Son, In principio Deus fecit ſibi Filium, In the beginning of the Creation God made to himſelf a Son, who thence is ſtiled by him Primogenitus ut ante omnia genitus. Theſe Fathers knew ſo little of the Eternal Generation, that they derive the Prolation or Generation of their Abſtract Logos from the free Will of God, as J. Mart. doth, and his Scholar Tatianus and the reſt of theſe Fathers are manifeſtly of the ſame Sentiment. (y) He is God and Son, κατὰ βουλὴν τὴν ἐκείνου, according to his Will or Counſel, and was generated δυνάμει καὶ βουλῇ αὐτοῦ, by his Power, Will or Counſel. Some ſay that theſe Expreſſions mean only, that the Father did not generate the Son againſt his Will; but this is a trifling Evaſion. For they plainly mean, that God did not generate the Son by the natural and neceſſary Volition. As is manifeſt from the general Senſe of theſe Fathers, (the Logos iſſu'd forth θελήματι τῆς ἁπλότητος αὐτοῦ, by the Will of his Singleneſs, ſaith Tatianus;) they derive the Creation and the Prolation of the Logos from one and the ſame Volition, which cannot be the natural and neceſſary Volition. (z) Ut primum Deus voluit, ipſum primum protulit Sermonem, ut per ipſum fierent Univerſa. So ſoon as God would create all things, he firſt brought forth the Sermo, that by him all things might be made. In all reaſon J. Mart. muſt be underſtood to ſpeak of one and the ſame kind of Will when he ſaith, that the Logos hath many Names, both becauſe (a) he miniſtreth τῷ πατρικῷ βουλήματι (to the Will of the Father) καὶ ἐκ τοῦ ἀπὸ τοῦ πατρὸς θελήσει γεγεννῆσθαι, and becauſe he was generated by the Will of the Father. He imputeth the whole Oeconomy of the Logos to the Will of God, and there is no Probability that in the ſame Contexture of Words he taketh the Will of God in a very different ſenſe when he ſaith, (b) ἀλλ' ἐκεῖνον τὸν κατὰ βουλὴν τὴν ἐκείνου καὶ θεὸν ὄντα υἱὸν αὐτοῦ καὶ ἄγγελον ἐκ τοῦ ὑπηρετεῖν τῇ γνώμῃ αὐτοῦ. (Sometimes he ſaith, τῇ βουλῇ αὐτοῦ) ὃν καὶ ἄνθρωπον γεννηθῆναι διὰ τῆς παρθένου βεβούληται. He is God and the Son of God according to the Will of God, and his Angel becauſe he miniſtreth to his Will, touching whom alſo his Will was that he ſhould be generated Man by a Virgin. Theſe Fathers knew ſo little of the Eternal Generation, that ſometimes implicitly, and ſometimes expreſly they deny it. J. Mart. and Tatianus implicitly deny it, when (in the places formerly cited) they compare the Generation of the Logos (not to the Production of an internal Word of the Mind, but) to the Production of external Speech, and ſuch is the Senſe of the other Fathers, who count nothing the Generation of the Sermo, (or at leaſt nothing his perfect Generation and Nativity) but Prolation. (c) This Sermo had his Prolation by God and his Generation by Prolation, which is oppoſite to his neceſſary Exiſtence and eternal Generation. Sometimes they expreſly deny the Eternal Generation. (d) For Tertullian ſometimes expreſly denieth, that God was always a Father, and that the Logos in God was without a beginning. Lactantius ſaith of God, (e) Cùm præter ipſum nihil adhuc eſſet, produxit ſimilem ſui ſpiritum, qui eſſet viribus Dei Patris præditus. When there was as yet nothing but himſelf, he produc'd a Spirit like himſelf, having the En-

(w) Athenag. p. 10.

(x) Adv. Prax. c. 5, 6.

(y) J. Mart. Dial. p. 357, 358.

(z) Tertull. adv. Prax. c. 6. vid. Petav. de Trin. l. 6. c. 8. S. 2.

(a) Dial. p. 284.

(b) Ibid. p. 350, 35

(c) Tertull. Apol. c. 21.

(e) l. 2. c. 5.

(d) Quia & Pater Deus eſt, & judex Deus eſt; non tamen ideo Pater & Judex ſemper, quia Deus ſemper. Nam nec Pater eſſe potuit ante Filium, nec Judex ante delictum. Fuit autem tempus, cùm & delictum & Filius non fuit, quod judicem & qui Patrem Dominum faceret. C. Hermogen. c. 3. Si intra Dominum quod ex ipſo & in ipſo fuit, ſine initio non fuit, ſophia ſcilicet ipſius, exinde nata & condita.

dowments

ex quo in ſenſu Dei ad opera mundi diſponenda cæpit agitari: multo magis non capit ſine initio quicquam fuiſſe, quod extra Dominum fuerit. Ibid. c. 18.

dowments of God his Father, and this was done in principio, in the beginning of things. Lactantius is plain and expreſs againſt the Eternal Generation, but that is not the only thing which is remarkable in his Words, for his Abſtract Logos, (an infinite Spirit) muſt interpret the Logos of Tatianus. (f) The Logos iſſuing forth ἔργον πρωτότοκον τοῦ πνεύματος γίνεται, this was that primogenit Work the Spirit. Λόγος ὁ ἐπουράνιος πνεῦμα γεγονὼς ἀπὸ τοῦ πατρός. And the Logos alſo of Theophilus. (g) Οὗτος ὢν πνεῦμα θεοῦ, this being the Spirit of God. Whence it is manifeſt (as is before obſerv'd) that by many of the Ancients the Trinity was thought three infinite Minds or Spirits. But touching theſe Fathers that are under Conſideration we muſt make this further Remark, that they knew ſo little of the Eternal Generation, that altho' they ſuppoſe a Logos always inexiſtent in God, yet they ſuppoſe it inexiſtent without that which they call Generation or Production, without any thing that they call Generation, or as Tertullian ſaith, without a perfect Nativity, Generation or Production. (h) God having within him his internal Sermo, ἐγέννησε αὐτὸν πρὸ τῶν ὅλων, generated (or produc'd) him before the Univerſe of Beings. The Origin of this ſtrange Conceit of theſe Fathers is very viſible, for they look'd upon the Logos of God to be like our external Speech, which is not generated or produc'd but by Prolation (or Pronunciation:) ſo the Sermo had his Prolation by God, and his Generation or Production by Prolation, (as Tertullian ſaith) which Prolation was not till the beginning of the Creation. Whence it is eaſy to make a Judgment of this Pretenſion of a learned Man, (i) That in the very Times of the Apoſtles the eternal and divine Majeſty of the Son was celebrated by the Faithful even in their publick Liturgy. A Judgment may be alſo made touching the Senſe of J. Mart. when he ſaith, that the Logos did præ-exiſt πρὸ αἰώνων, before the Ages, (or the Worlds;) for either his meaning is, that the Logos antecedently to his Generation was always in God, or that the generated Logos did exiſt πρὸ πάντων τῶν κτισμάτων, (before all Creatures) as himſelf ſpeaketh in conſort with theſe other Fathers. Of the ſame Sentiment with theſe Fathers, (but more eſpecially with Tertullian) touching the Eternal Generation is that ancient Writer of the Trinity ſuppoſed to be Novatianus, who ſaith of God. (k) Of whom when it was his Will, The Sermo was born his Son. When the Father would have it ſo, he that was in the Father proceeded from the Father. (l) He proceedeth from the Father (at the Creation) and by proceeding from him was made his Son, ſaith Tertullian. It is much that theſe Ancients did not conſider, that not every ſort of Inexiſtence in the Father, nor every ſort of proceeding from him, conſtituteth a Son; and that a natural, eſſential, eternal and perfect Generation muſt be acknowledg'd, or elſe an eternal Son is not acknowledg'd.

(f) P. 145.

(g) P. 88.

(h) Theophil. ibid.

(i) Ipſis Apoſtolorum temporibus æterna ac divina Filii majeſtas à fidelibus etiam in publica Liturgia celebrabatur. Dr. Bull ſupr. p. 189.

(k) Ex quo quando ipſe voluit, Sermo Filius natus eſt. Hic ergo, quando Pater voluit, proceſſit ex Patre, & qui in Patre fuit proceſſit ex Patre. cap. 31.

(l) Ex Deo procedit, de quo procedendo Filius factus eſt. Tertull. adv. prax. c. 6, 7.

(2.) The Primitive Chriſtians that acknowledg'd the Trinity and the Deity of the Meſſiah, differ'd in their way of underſtanding thoſe Articles, ſome underſtanding them in the Chriſtian and holy-popular way, others in a ſcholaſtic way, and theſe Scholaſticks very much differ'd from one another. The firſt Epiſtle of Clemens Romanus is in the whole of it holy-popular, the Theology of it is meer Chriſtianity undefiled with any mixture of Scholaſticiſm, (which is hugely alien from the Simplicity of Chriſtianity) whence Photius hath taken occaſion to reflect upon the Author of it as neglecting the more ſublime and God-becoming Appellations of our Saviour. The Remains that we have of Polycarp are of the ſame Character, whence (with great reaſon) we may infer, that both theſe holy Men and a great part of the Chriſtians of their Time were Chriſtian and holy-popular Trinitarians, ſuch as knew no other Trinity but the Chriſtian, nor any other Son of God ſave only (the Lamb) the Perſon of the Lord Jeſus. But the Epiſtles of Ignatius (thoſe of the beſt Edition) are of a very different Character, for there are in them ſeveral very groſs Strokes of the ſcholaſtic Theology, which are complicated with ſomething of a ſelf-contradiction. For the firſt Epiſtle (m) ſtileth our Saviour (moſt Apoſtolically) υἱὸν θεοῦ κατὰ θέλημα καὶ δύναμιν θεοῦ, The Son of God according to the Will and Power of God, which Will and Power (if we underſtand thoſe Words in the uſual ſenſe) can have no place in the Eternal Generation. Yet in the Epiſtle to the Magneſians (n) The Chriſt of God is ſtiled αὐτοῦ λόγος ἀΐδιος οὐκ ἀπὸ σιγῆς προελθών, his eternal Verbum or Sermo not iſſuing forth from Silence. Agreeably whereto we muſt interpret this other Paſſage in that Epiſtle touching Chriſt, (o) ὃς πρὸ αἰώνων παρὰ πατρὶ ἦν, καὶ ἐν τέλει ἐφάνη, who before all Worlds was with the Father, and in the end was made manifeſt. The Epiſtle to Polycarp ſtileth him (p) τὸν ὑπὲρ καιρὸν, τὸν ἄχρονον, τὸν ἀόρατον, τὸν δι' ἡμᾶς ὁρατὸν, τὸν ἀψηλάφητον, τὸν ἀπαθῆ, τὸν δι' ἡμᾶς παθητὸν, the ſuper-temporal, the intemporal, the inviſible, the for us viſible, the intangible, the impaſſible, the for us paſſible. We are oblig'd to interpret theſe Epithets in the Senſe of the Scholaſtic Theology, and ſo interpreted they have a ſtrong ſavour of Metaphyſicks, not at all agreeable to the Sanctity and Simplicity of Chriſtianity, which is a ſhrewd Indication that there is ſome foul dealing in theſe Epiſtles of Ignatius, which thoſe Scholaſtic Divines muſt acknowledg, who ſuppoſe that in the Times of J. Mart. Athenagoras (and thoſe other Fathers abovementioned) the Trinity was not clearly underſtood. For if the Scholaſtic Trinity was not clearly underſtood in thoſe Times, whence is it that it is ſo clearly underſtood and repreſented in the Epiſtles of Ignatius? In his Epiſtle to the Epheſians this Paſſage ſpeaketh the Author an exact Scholaſtic Divine; (q) Εἷς ἰατρός ἐστιν σαρκικός τε καὶ πνευματικὸς, γεννητὸς καὶ ἀγέννητος, ἐν σαρκὶ γενόμενος θεὸς, there is one Phyſician carnal and ſpiritual, generate and ingenerate, being God in fleſh. So the Scholaſtic Theology contradiſtinguiſheth in Chriſt, (r) ἀγέννητον οὐσίαν τῇ γεννητῇ, the ingenerate Subſtance to the generate. Which ingenerate Subſtance may moſt probably be underſtood to ſignify that infinite Spirit which many of the Ancients ſuppoſe to be the Abſtract Son, and an ingenerate Subſtance in Chriſt ſo underſtood is no laudable Theology. But we are not concern'd to diſpute the Authentickneſs of Ignatius's Epiſtles. It muſt be acknowledg'd that the Scholaſtic Theology was very early introduc'd into the Church, and was more early entertain'd in ſome parts of it than in others. It may be ſuppos'd therefore that the true Ignatius was a very early Scholaſtic Theologer, altho' others his Contemporaries were of another Character. The Scholaſtic Theologers of the Chriſtian Church in thoſe early Times did follow very different ſorts of ſcholaſtic Theology. For Athenagoras and many others in

(m) P. 2.

(n) P. 34.

(o) P. 33.

(p) P. 12.

(q) P. 21.

(r) Baſil. Seleuc. Hom. 25. p. 142.

in their Idea of the Logos ſymbolize moſt with the Stoicks univerſal Logos (their Coſmical Zeus) to which Tertullian (s) ſuppoſeth the Chriſtians Logos to be near of kin. The Alexandrian Clemens and Origen in forming their Idea of the Abſtract Son or Logos manifeſtly follow the Platonic Metaphyſicks. But of thoſe that in their Idea of the Trinity and the Logos ſymbolize moſt with the Ariſtotelian Metaphyſicks (as the generally received ſcholaſtic Theology ſince the Council of Nice doth) there are no Inſtances (that I know of) in thoſe early Times.

(3.) The Arians Dogma Erat quando non erat, was not Hereſy or criminal Error, ſave only as it was a Branch of their denying the Deity of Chriſt. The Catholicks underſtood it to be ſuch, and the Arians themſelves ſo underſtood it; for upon account of it they creaturiz'd the Son of God in their Language, calling him ποίημα & κτίσμα, a thing made and a Creature. But St. Auſtin reporteth (t) that the Arians of later Times, (he meaneth the Semiarians) relinquiſh'd that Principle of Arius, Erat quando non erat, and their Tenent was, non extémpore cœpiſſe Filium Dei, that the Son of God had not a Temporary beginning. Theſe Semiarians were of two ſorts, for ſome of them did not ſuppoſe that the Son of God was generated from Eternity, altho' they held that he had not a temporary beginning; for their Opinion was, that Time began from the Creation of the World and the Revolution of the Heavens. But another ſort of them held that the Son of God had no temporary beginning in another ſenſe; for their Opinion was, that he was generated from Eternity; yet theſe were accounted Arians, becauſe they held not the Son ὁμοούσιον, of the ſame Subſtance, but ὁμοιούσιον, of like Subſtance with the Father. If theſe were Arians or Semiarians, it is manifeſt that Erat quando non erat was not an eſſential Principle of Arianiſm, nor was it the principal Point of it, for that was Anticonſubſtantialiſm, which by the Council of Nice was made the Teſt of Arianiſm. That Council indeed condemn'd the Principle of Arius, Erat quando non erat, but the principal Matter of Conteſt between the Catholicks and the Arians was the Term Conſubſtantial, which being eſtabliſh'd by that Council (in Contradiction to Euſebius of Nicomedia) and eſteemed Arx & Propugnaculum Catholici dogmatis, the conteſting Parties quarrelled infinitely and committed infinite Outrages againſt one another about that one Word. The Catholicks were reproach'd by the Name of Homooŭſiani, the principal Pique of their Adverſaries was againſt Homooŭſios, and their main Endeavour was to ſuppreſs and deſtroy it, (this the Catholicks complain'd of (u) as the greateſt Injury) and it is manifeſt that the thing deſign'd by the Emperor Conſtantius was, that the Words Uſia and Homooŭſios might be aboliſh'd as unſcriptural and exotick Words, that were paſt Mens underſtanding, ſavour'd of a dialectical Subtilty, and occaſion'd abundance of Contention in the Church. This was the State of things in the Times of the Arian Controverſy, the whole Hiſtory whereof is ſo full of ignorant and carnal Paſſion, ſo rancidly unſavory and unchriſtian, that I will not dwell upon ſo nauſeous a Subject any further than to obſerve, that altho' my Hypotheſis ſymbolizeth with the greateſt part of the Arians in denying the Eternal Generation, yet it ſymbolizeth much more with the Catholicks, becauſe it acknowledgeth Conſubſtantialiſm both in the genuin intended ſenſe of the Word, and alſo the Chriſtian kind thereof. (w) Conſubſtantial ſignifieth this one thing in the Son, that his Eſſence or Subſtance is one and the ſame with that of the Father.

VII. The Scholaſtic Eternal Generation is unconceivable and unintelligible at the moſt ſuperlative rate; but we clearly diſcern and underſtand that God may have an Imperial Son (who is God) without the Eternal Generation, upon which account this latter Hypotheſis is infinitely to be preferr'd before the former. For the Scholaſtic Divines (ſpeaking of the Eternal Generation) complain, It is not poſſible for us to know what begetting ſignifieth. (x) It is impoſſible to know the Secret of the Eternal Generation of the Verbum, how it was, why it was, or what it was. (y) If any one ſhall ask, how is the Son produc'd by the Father? we ſay to him touching that Prolation, or Generation, or Nuncupation, or Adapertion, or by whatever Name it may be called, his Generation being undeclarable none knoweth it. The uſual Anthem ſaith,

Quid ſit gigni, quid proceſſus
Me neſcire ſum profeſſus.

The Arians ſpeak almoſt the ſame things (z) touching the Unintelligibleneſs of the Generation of their Abſtract Son (which is on this ſide Eternity) as if Men deſign'd to recommend the Chriſtian Religion by repreſenting it as impoſſible and unintelligible. We cannot underſtand that God hath a Son generated from Eternity, and that he ſubmitted to be generated again in time; but we can clearly underſtand the Fallacy of this Argument (in the ſcholaſtic Theology) If the Son is God, all the Properties which are eſſential to God muſt belong to him, and conſequently neceſſary and eternal Exiſtence muſt belong to him, which inferreth his Eternal Generation. For this Argument is manifeſtly a Paralogiſm, becauſe of the Ambiguity of the Name God. If by this Name we underſtand God definitively and abſolutely ſo, neither the Son nor the Holy Ghoſt is God. But if by this Name we underſtand a Perſon of the Godhead, ſo the Son is God. But then this Propoſition is enormouſly falſe; If the Son is God as a Perſon of the Godhead, all the Properties and Perfections which are eſſential to God definitively and abſolutely ſuch (as Self-exiſtence, neceſſary Exiſtence, Exiſtence from Eternity) muſt belong to him. In reſpect of neceſſary Exiſtence there is great difference between the being God definitively and abſolutely ſuch, and the being a Perſon of the Godhead. For God definitively and abſolutely ſuch exiſteth by meer neceſſary Exiſtence; but the Son in the Godhead cannot exiſt otherwiſe than by Generation. God definitively and abſolutely ſuch exiſteth by a neceſſary Exiſtence, which is his own Attribute; but no other Perſon of the Godhead can ſo exiſt; but if he neceſſarily exiſteth, it muſt be either as neceſſarily appertaining to God (definitively and abſolutely ſuch) or as neceſſarily and eternally generated by God (definitively and abſolutely ſuch) ſo that his neceſſary Exiſtence is not upon his own account, nor is it his own Attribute, but he neceſſarily exiſteth becauſe of God definitively and abſolutely ſuch. If God (definitively and abſolutely ſuch) doth generate by a neceſſarily exiſtent and eternal Generation, the Son upon that account doth neceſſarily exiſt; but it cannot be ſaid that he neceſſarily exiſteth, becauſe neceſſa-

ry

(s) Apolog. c. 21.

(t) V. Petav. de Trin. l. 1. c. 10. S. 5. Baron. ad an. 357. n. 9. Petav. T. 1. l. 3. c. 6. S. 3.

(u) Baron. ad an. 362. n. 231.

(w) Ὁμοούσιος id unum in Filio ſignificat, unam & eandem eſſentiam, ſive ſubſtantiam, illius eſſe, quæ Patris ſit. Petav ſupr. l. 4. c. 5. S. 9.

(x) Petav. de Trin. l. 5. c. 6. S. 3, 4.

(y) Si quis nobis dixerit, quomodo Filius prolatus à Patre eſt? dicimus ei, quia prolationem iſtam, ſive generationem, ſive nuncupationem, ſive adapertionem, aut quomodolibet quis nomine vocaverit, generationem ejus inenarrabilem exiſtentem nemo novit. Iren. adv. Hær. l. 2. c. 48.

(z) Baron. ad an. 318. n. 52.

ry Exiſtence is an eſſential Attribute contain'd in his Idea, which is that of a Being abſolutely perfect. The Son of God therefore cannot have neceſſary Exiſtence as his own Attribute, nor can he have it by a neceſſarily exiſtent and eternal Generation, unleſs neceſſary Exiſtence is not only an eſſential Attribute of the Divine Majeſty, but of the Divine Generation alſo. But this it manifeſtly is not. And it is alike evident, that Exiſtence from Eternity cannot belong to the Son as his own Attribute, unleſs neceſſary Exiſtence doth belong to him as his own Attribute, theſe being in ſeveral Expreſſions the very ſame thing.

But God (the Father) is neceſſarily exiſtent, and is neceſſarily the Imperial Eſtate of the Godhead, and the true Generation of the Son of God is, This Imperial Eſtate's generating his Divine Imperial Son. And as an Human Imperial Eſtate, ſo this Divine Imperial Eſtate may in time generate its Imperial Son; there is nothing of Impoſſibility, nothing of Incongruity in it, nothing of Difficulty in conceiving it. From whence it followeth, that an eternal Generation is not eſſential to Deus natus & genitus: For this Son of God (the Imperial Son) is neceſſarily an Imperial Perſon, a Divine Imperial Perſon, and therefore of the Godhead. This Argument needeth no Illuſtration to render it intelligible; but that the Argumentative Force of it may be more fully underſtood, we will briefly illuſtrate it from the Divine Family and Kingdom of God, from the Idea of God and the Meſſias-ſhip. The true Son of God is neceſſarily one of the Divine Family of the Sons and Saints of God (ſuch an one the Scholaſtic Abſtract Son of God, ſuppoſed to be generated from Eternity, cannot be;) but he is ſo one of this Divine Family, as to be The Imperial Head thereof, and therefore is neceſſarily one of the Godhead, and juſtly denominated, The Lord the Son, and God the Son, whenſoever he is generated. The true Son of God is the Son and Heir of the Kingdom of God (which the Scholaſtic Abſtract Son of God, ſuppoſed to be generated from Eternity, cannot be;) and he that is the Son and Heir of the Kingdom of God, although not generated from Eternity, is neceſſarily the Imperial Son, is of the Imperial Party, or Sovereignty, in the Kingdom of God (in Religion and Sanctity;) which is to ſay, That he is the Lord the Son, and God the Son, as certainly The Divine Lamb is, Apoc. 5. 12. The true Son of God is one of his Idea ſpecific-gradual; As one of his kind, He is vital Sanctity; as one of his Degree, He is vital Sanctity in infinite Fulneſs. And he that is of this Idea, is neceſſarily Creature-tranſcendent, and of the Godhead, whenſoever he is generated. He is alſo, by his Meſſias-ſhip, The Saviour-King of the Holy Empire, is, by Officiary Dignity of the Sovereignty and of the Godhead, as the Son of it; and therefore is, by Officiary Dignity, The Lord the Son, and God the Son. And as to his being, by Officiary Dignity, God the Son, neceſſary Exiſtence and an eternal Generation is not requiſite, ſo a neceſſarily exiſtent and an eternal Generation is not requiſite to his being natively ſuch. His being the Perſon of the Meſſiah (and in ſuch Senſe the Son of God) both in his Primary and his Officiary Capacity, involveth in it ſo much of Sanctity, Deity and Divinity of Perſon, that we need not to be beholden to Scholaſticks and their Metaphyſicks in our aſſerting his Godhead, and maintaining the Lamb of God as ſuch in his Divine Dominion and Throne. But on the contrary, if theſe plain and popular Argumentations are firm and ſolid (as certainly they are) then we have plainly demonſtrated the Falſity of this Scholaſtic and Metaphyſical Argumentation, If Chriſt is not of eternal, and neceſſarily exiſtent Generation, he is but a Creature.

VIII. A Creature ought to be thus defin'd; That which is of the made and created Party, ſtrictly ſuch (which is the Subject and Servient) not of the Creator-Party. With this Definition the Fathers exactly agree in this their Notion of a Creature, (u) They are not leſs to be blamed that count the Son of God a made Thing, the Scriptures attributing to him an agreeable Generation, not a Formation or Making. Neither is one the Father of thoſe of which he is the Maker, if Father is properly underſtood, he that generateth. Nor is the Father a Maker, if only the Opificer is called the Maker. This definitive Notion of a Creature, although ſufficiently accurate, yet is not ſo clear and perſpicuous, but that it may need to be illuſtrated and proved by theſe following Notices thereof.

(1.) The School-men (although in the Beginning of their voluminous Theology they have many little Altercations touching God and the Creatures, yet) have not taken care to ſettle the definitive Notion of a Creature; only from their uſual Expreſſions it appeareth, that they mean by it created Nature, that which was made to exiſt. Scholaſtic Divines, in Conſort with the Fathers, ſay, (a) It is the proper Notion of Creatures, τὸ μὴ εἶναι πρὶν γενέσθαι ϗ τὸ ἐξ οὐκ ὄντων ὑφίστασθαι, not to be till they be made, from non-exiſtent to be made exiſtent, to begin to exiſt, and to be produced out of nothing. Something there is of the true Definition of a Creature in theſe Notices, but not without the uſual Fault of Scholaſticks, who, in contemplating Matters of Theology, do not carry on their Thoughts far enough, but take up with their Metaphyſical Notices that firſt occur, and ſtopping in the Half-way, arrive not at the true Idea's of Divine Things. For this uſual and currant Definition of a Creature, That which from antecedent Non-exiſtence is brought into Being, is rather a vain and groundleſs Imagination, than the true Notion of a Creature. It is a Definition made without Reaſon and Judgment, as if we never look'd into Divine or Human Affairs. It is deny'd by a great Party of the School-men themſelves, who ſuppoſe, that the Creatures might be produced from Eternity. (b) One Party of them is of Opinion, That the World, as to all the Parts of it, and as to all Creatures, might have been produced from Eternity. Another Party of them is of Opinion, That the World as to no Part of it, nor as to any Creature, might have been produced from Eternity. A Third part of them chuſeth the middle way, and they are of Opinion, That the World, as to ſome Parts only, and only as to ſome Creatures, might have been produced from Eternity. Creatures therefore, (according to ſeveral Parties of the School-men) may be Creatures without their Beginning their Exiſtence, and although they were never Non-Exiſtents, whether they were ſtrictly made, or were of the created Party from Eternity, or made ſuch in time, this maketh no Difference or Variation as to their being Creatures: So our Saviour's Generation from Eternity ſignifieth nothing more as to his Deity, than his Generation in time. That conſiſteth in Being the Son of God as the Imperial Son. If he was of the made and created Party (ſtrictly ſuch) from Eternity, he was a Creature, although he exiſted from Eternity. And if he was Deus natus ac genitus, it is all one as to the Dignity and Eminence of his Perſon, whether he was generated from Eternity, or in time. But if Scholaſticks may define a Creature for us, the Non-attribution of an eternal Generation to Chriſt, and the Arians erat quando non erat, is neceſſarily the making him a Creature; and accordingly the Arians and Socinians have called Chriſt a Creature. And it muſt be acknowledged, that they have ſo ſtated Things, that according thereto, this is no Miſnomer of their Saviour.

(u) Οὐ μεῖον δ' ἂν καταμέμφοιτο ϗ τοὺς ποίημα τὸν υἱὸν εἶναι δοξάζοντας ϗ γεγονέναι τὸν κύριον, ὥσπερ ἕν τι τῶν ὄντως γενομένων νομίζοντας, τῶν θείων λόγων γέννησιν αὐτῷ τὴν ἁρμόττουσαν ϗ πρέπουσαν, ἀλλ' οὐχὶ πλάσιν τινὰ ϗ ποίησιν προσμαρτυρούντων. Dion. Rom. ap. D. Bull Def. Fid. Nic. p. 141. Οὔτε πατὴρ ἐστὶν ὢν ποιητής, εἰ κυρίως ὁ γεννήσας πατὴρ ἀκούοιτο· οὔτε ποιητὴς ὁ πατὴρ εἰ μόνος ὁ χειροτέχνης ποιητὴς λέγοιτο. Dion. Alex. Ibid. p. 150.

(a) Petav. T. 1. l. 3. c. 6. de Trin. l. 2. c. 12. S 3.

(b) Valen. T. 1. Diſp. 3. Qu. 3. Punct. 2. Vaſq. in Th. 1 Par. T. 2. Diſp. 177. Scheibler. Metaph. l. 2. c 2. Tit. 17. Art. 2. Punct. 6.

(2.) The Terms Made and Created are ambiguous, ſometimes they ſignifie in a ſtrict, and ſometimes in a large Acceptation: (c) For as the Creatures are made, ſo in the ancient Writers of the Church, Efficiens, fecit, factus eſt, are frequently apply'd to the Generation of the Son, they underſtanding theſe Words in a large Senſe and as they ſignifie, to cauſe to exiſt. So Sæbadius ſaith of the Son (d) Non ſine Subſtantia conſtitit, quod de tanta ſubſtantia fecit. That was not without Subſtance, which he made of ſuch a Subſtance. Novatianus ſaith of God, (e) Secundam Perſonam efficiens, making the Second Perſon of the Godhead that proceeded from him. Tertullian ſaith, (f) De quo procedendo Filius Dei factus eſt, By proceeding from whom he was made the Son of God. So we have ſeen, that according to Tatianus, the Logos that iſſued forth before all Creatures, was ἔργον πρωτότοκον, the primogenit Work of the Father. So the ancient Writers uſually apply to the Generation of the Abſtract Son, that of Solomon, Dominus condidit me initium viarum. (g) Wiſdom ſaith, She was created before the Works of God, which they apply to the Generation and Production of the Son, but without deſigning to repreſent the Son as a Creature. For they uſe κτιστὸς, created, in ſo large a Senſe, as to ſignifie γεννητὸς, generated; whereas, in the ſtrict Acceptation, created and generated are oppoſed. (h) Creata, id eſt facta, non genita. One that is produced into Being therefore may be of Two ſorts: κτιστὸς, one that is of the made and created Party ſtrictly ſuch; γεννητὸς, one that is generated, but is not of the made and created Party ſtrictly ſuch. One may be from God, κτιστικῶς, creatively, not generatively: Or, γεννητικῶς, generatively, not creatively.

(3.) According to the Scholaſtic Theology, Two Perſons of the Godhead agree with the Creatures in this Generical Notion, They are cauſed by God to exiſt. For God the Father is (i) ſometimes ſaid to be the Cauſe of the Son, and both the Father and the Son are ſaid to be the Cauſe of the Holy Ghoſt. Which Agreement with the Creatures doth not hinder them from being of the Godhead, and the Creator-party, which is the oppoſite Party to the Creatures. And they are thus differenced from them, according to the ancient Writers (before cited.) They are of the βασιλὶς or δεσποτικὴ, Regial or Imperial Party, the Creatures are of the δουλικὴ, ſubject and ſervient Party. (k) κτίσμα & θεὸς, God and Creature are oppoſed, as δοῦλος & δεσπότης, Servant and Lord. (l) Πᾶν δὲ κτίσμα δοῦλον τοῦ κτίστου, Every Creature is ſervient and ſubject to the Creator. So the Expoſition of Faith in J. Martyr's Works ſaith. Every thing that exiſteth is either created or increated Nature, (m) That which is increated is dominant and free from all Neceſſity: But that which is created, is of ſervient Condition, and under the Commands of its Lord. So the Alex. Cyril ſaith of Chriſt and Creatures, (n) that he is Lord and God, they are of ſubject-ſervient Condition, and Creatures. Their Rank, Order and Claſſis is the low and underling, they are under Authority, (bound to Homage and Service) the ſubordinate and ſubſervient Beings (ſubſervient to an higher End than themſelves) the Beneficiaries and Dependents as the ſubject-ſervient Party. And as in all Monarchic Governments, the ſubject and ſervient Party are the many (the Monarchy is but one:) So the ſubject-ſervient Party, that are under the Creature tranſcendent Monarchy, are the many, and of manifold Species, Compeers and Co-equals, Fellow-Subjects and Servants, in all Reſpects particular, limited and finite Beings, having but a Meaſure of Excellency and Perfection (Perfection mix'd with Imperfection, Light with Shadow, Weakneſs with Strength, and diſparaging Properties with their Glory;) and if they have any Divine kind of Good and Excellency, they have it not eſſentially, nor in infinite Perfection, nor is it their kind of Good and Excellency. Not any of them is related to us as the Sovereign Lord of all, our entire Benefactor and ſupreme Good; they are ſcanty and defective Goods in themſelves, and to us (Shallowneſs and Emptineſs is in the beſt of them) and they are nothing in Compariſon of God. Their Name ſpeaketh them not of the Creator-Party, but oppoſite thereto; whence the Scholoſtic Theology calleth a Creature, (o) Opus aliquod externum & extrà Deum editum (extra Divinitatis terminos) an Extrinſick to the Godhead. (p) Creatæ res à divinitate alienæ, Created Things are alien from the Divinity, ſaith this Theology.

(4.) From the true Definition of a Creature (thus illuſtrated and proved) the uſual and current Notion of a Creature (that which from an antecedent Non exiſtence is brought into Being) appeareth to be falſe and illegitimate: And this uſual Argumentation, whereby it is proved, What once did not exiſt, can never come to exiſt without being made, appeareth to be a Paralogiſm, becauſe of the Ambiguity of the Word Made. A Perſon that once did not exiſt, can never come to exiſt, without being made to exiſt (or cauſed to exiſt;) in ſuch Senſe the Propoſition is true, but nothing to the Purpoſe. But if the Senſe of it is, That a Perſon which once did not exiſt, can never come to exiſt without being one of the made and created Party, ſtrictly ſuch, the Propoſition is to the Purpoſe, but not true; for he that once did not exiſt, may come to exiſt by being generated, (without being ſtrictly made) γεννητικῶς, generatively, not κτιστικῶς, creatively. The Difference between theſe Two ways of Production (proper natural Generation and Creation) the Fathers well explain, (q) by comparing Creation to the Building an Houſe or Ship, which is an external Way and Work of Production, and alſo an artificial Fabrication. By which way of Production we will

(c) Certè veteres Theologi ac præcipuè ii, qui ante Concilii Nicæni tempora ſcripſerunt, per vocabulum κτίζειν non ſolum creationem intellexerunt, quæ ex nihilo fit, ſed omnem generaliter productionem, tam quæ ab æterno eſſet, quàm illam quæ in tempore. Ad eundem modum omninò exponendus eſt locus, quem ex Petri Apocryphis citat Clemens, l. 6. p. 644. εἷς γὰρ τῷ ὄντι ἐστὶν ὁ θεὸς, ὃς ἀρχὴν τῶν ἁπάντων ἐποίησεν, μηνύων τὸν πρωτόγονον υἱόν. Unus enim eſt revera Deus, qui fecit principia Univerſorum, ſignificans primogenitum Filium ſcilicet Græcis itidem uſurpatum eſt, ποιεῖν τέκνα facere liberos pro liberos generare: & ita ſeipſum interpretatur Auctor ejus dicti continuò ſubjungens: μηνύων τὸν πρωτόγονον υἱόν, ſignificans primogenitum Filium. Valeſ. Not. ad Euſeb. p. 8. πρωτόκτιστον σοφίαν, Clem. Str. 5. p. 591. Vocem κτιστὸς in eo Clementis loco idem ſignificare, quod γεννητός· quemadmodum etiam latinè creare dicitur pro gignere. D. Bull ſupr. p. 90.

(d) Petav. de Trin. l. 6. c. 6. S. 10.

(e) c. 31.

(f) Adv. Prax. c. 7.

(g) Petav. ſupr. l. 2. c. 1.

(h) S. Aug. de C. D. l. 11. c. 10. v. Petav. de Trin. l. 2. c. 1. in fine.

(i) Petav. Ibid. l. 5. c. 5. S. 8, 9, 10.

(k) S. Athanaſ. Or. 3. c. Arian. p. 204. Com.

(l) S. Baſil. c. Eunom. l. 4. p. 55.

(m) Ἡ μὲν ἄκτιστος δεσποτικὴ καὶ πάσης ἀνάγκης ἐλευθέρα· ἡ δὲ κτιστὴ, δουλικὴ καὶ νόμοις δεσποτικοῖς ἑπομένη. p. 374.

(n) Τὸν μὲν κύριον εἶναι καὶ θεὸν, τὰ δὲ δοῦλά τε καὶ ποιήματα. Theſaur. p. 55.

(o) Petav. de Trin. l. 2. c. 1. in fin.

(p) Ibid. c. 6. in fin.

(q) Ibid. l. 5. c. 4. S. 7, 8 & c. 7. S. 2.

will ſuppoſe a great Lord to make and create a Family of Servants, and we will ſuppoſe this ſame great Lord to generate one Imperial Son, which Family thus conſtituted conſiſteth of a made and created Party ſtrictly ſuch, that are the ſervient-ſubject-Party, and it conſiſteth of an Imperial Creator-Party, the Father and the Son; for of this Party the Imperial Son is. We may carry on this Compariſon further, and ſuppoſe with Origen (in his firſt Book of Principles) both the Son and the Creatures to have been from Eternity, but with this difference, he ſuppoſeth the Creatures the Subject-Party, and the Son to be of the Godhead-Party. So of the regial Son of the Kingdom of God we may uſe the Words of the Alexandrian Cyril with due Limitation of Senſe. (r) The Son is God, although the Father is God, and in like manner, the Father being King the Son is alſo King. The Son of God is God as the regial Son of a King is King. The regial Son of a King is exempted from being one of the Subject-ſervient Party, and that which exempteth him is his regial Sonſhip; ſo that which exempteth the Imperial Son of the Bl. and only Potentate from being one of the Creature-Party, (the Subject-ſervient Party) is his divine imperial Sonſhip. If Non-exiſtence from Eternity, or to be brought into Being from antecedent Non-exiſtence, is inconſiſtent with his imperial Sonſhip, (as it manifeſtly is not) he muſt be ſuppos'd to be generated from Eternity; but nothing can deſtroy his Divinity, (Creature-tranſcendency) of Perſon, but what is deſtructive of his imperial Sonſhip. It is this alone that maketh the difference between God the Son and the Creatures, not Exiſtence from Eternity, not neceſſary Exiſtence in the ſcholaſtic Senſe. And this may be plainly demonſtrated againſt the ſcholaſtic Theology. For this Theology cannot with any Reaſon deny, that the divine imperial Son of God may be one that is generated but in time, nor will it deny that this imperial Son would be ſuch if he was generated from Eternity. Now this imperial Son generated but in time is neceſſarily the ſame Perſon that he would be if he was generated from Eternity, and conſequently he is alike Deus natus ac genitus, for this ſame Perſon cannot be ſuppos'd to be Deus natus ac genitus and not Deus natus ac genitus, but a Creature. If a Perſon that is natively of the Subject-ſervient Party,(and therefore but a Creature) is by Idolatry factively exempted from being of the Subject-ſervient Party, he is deify'd and made no Creature, but a Creature-tranſcendent; ſo a Perſon may be natively of ſuch Nobilitation and Perfection, of ſuch high Original and Quality, as to be totally exempted from being of the Subject ſervient Party; and he that is natively ſo exempted is natively no Creature, but a Creature-tranſcendent, Deus natus ac genitus.

IX. It is certain that there are ſeveral ſorts and degrees of neceſſary and contingent Exiſtence, and that one ſort of contingent Exiſtence is incompetible to any Creature. It is a wild miſtake in Metaphyſicks therefore thus to diſcriminate God and Creature; whatever Being is neceſſarily exiſtent (and therefore undeſtroyable) is divine Being; but all Being meerly contingent (dependent upon Will and Pleaſure) is created Being. For neither is all neceſſarily exiſtent Being which we can conceive of divine Being, nor is all contingent Being created Being. Neceſſary Exiſtence is an Attribute which we do not find abſolutely belonging to the Idea of any thing ſave only a Being abſolutely perfect; and if this is the Idea of the Son of God, he muſt be ſelf-originate and innaſcible (or ingenit) which is contradictory to his Sonſhip. The ſcholaſtic Theology therefore doth not attribute to the Son of God this neceſſary Exiſtence which belongeth unto God, and which is divine Being; but only ſuch a neceſſary Exiſtence which is cauſed and derivative (from a neceſſarily exiſtent Cauſation or Generation) which ſort of neceſſary Exiſtence is competible to a World of Creatures, as the Platoniſts ſuppos'd, (and as we may conceive) and which is oppoſite to that neceſſary Exiſtence which is divine Being. The neceſſary Exiſtence therefore which the Metaphyſicians treat of muſt be diſtinguiſh'd into the ſelf-originate and the cauſed or derivative, and into the independent and dependent.

But neceſſary Exiſtence in general is of far larger Conſideration than the Metaphyſicians Science; for their neceſſary Exiſtence may be called the natural, to which the legal neceſſary Exiſtence muſt be contradiſtinguiſh'd. Their neceſſary Exiſtence may be called the abſolute, to which we muſt contradiſtinguiſh the reſpective neceſſary Exiſtence, which hath reſpect to well and ill Being or Doing, to Good and Evil, to Life and Love, to Holineſs and Happineſs, to Sin and Miſery. In reſpect of the Holineſs and Happineſs of Souls, and of the Univerſe, the Exiſtence of the Son of God is The unum neceſſarium, (the Neceſſary of all Neceſſaries) and this reſpective Neceſſity of his Exiſtence is truly divine Being, and a grand Ennoblement of his divine Perſonage; for there is a (reſpective) Neceſſity that he ſhould exiſt, and ſuch a Neceſſity which is tranſcendent to the neceſſary Exiſtence of all Creatures. The Exiſtence of the World of Creatures is at a great rate neceſſary, and ſuppoſing the Goodneſs of God they cannot but exiſt in time; yet becauſe their Exiſtence is not ſo neceſſary as that they muſt always exiſt, (in great degree they admit of a may be and may not be) therefore their Exiſtence muſt be called the contingent Exiſtence; but this Contingence is complicated with Neceſſity, and is not ſo a Contingent, but that it is alſo a neceſſary Exiſtence.

That Exiſtence may be neceſſary in one ſenſe which in another ſenſe is contingent, and ſpeaking of neceſſary Exiſtence in the ſame ſenſe, the Exiſtence of a Being may be neceſſary in one degree and not in another. So our Saviour's Exiſtence (which is cauſed and derivative) is not ſo far neceſſary as that he muſt exiſt from Eternity by a neceſſarily exiſtent Generation, yet thus far it is neceſſary, he is exempt from the Creatures Mutableneſs and Defectibleneſs, from Good, and from their Deſtroyableneſs and Annihilableneſs. (s) As the Father by Nature is holy, the Son by Nature is holy, ſo the Spirit is by Nature holy. In the three Hypoſtaſes we contemplate Sanctity according to Nature, which is oppos'd to thoſe to whom ἐκ μετουσίας ὑπάρχει ἁγιάζεσθαι, Sanctification is by Participation. As Iron plac'd in the Fire is ignite, but doth not ceaſe to be Iron, nor is it all Fire. To them Sanctity is ἐπιγεννηματικὴ καὶ ἔξωθεν προσγεγεννημένη, adventitious and brought to them from without. But it is with the Son as St. Baſil ſaith of the Holy Spirit, τῷ μὲν φύσις ἡ ἁγιωσύνη, Sanctity is to him Nature, and therefore he is not μεταπτώτης φύσεως, of a Nature that can fall or be changed. Nor is he ſubject to Deſtroyableneſs or Annihilableneſs as the Creatures are, are, for he is not of the Subject-ſervient Condition as they, but is thus differenc'd from them, He cannot but be the Lord (of ſo unſubject a Condition, and ſo Divine an Eſſence, as that Name importeth;) for this is his Birth-Nobilitation, is Divine Being, and cannot but be neceſſary and never-failing Exiſtence to him. It may be conſider'd alſo, that he is of the Godhead-party, in Reality and due Perſonality one with the Father, his own Life in Divinis, and one that cannot but be infinitely dear to him, the Heir of his Empire, Sovereignty, Omnipotency, to whom his whole Eſtate belongeth by Merit and Inheritance, the great Owner, Proprietor and Lord of Affairs, and who, as the Lord, is (t) ζωὴ κατὰ φύσιν, Life according to his Nature, Life infinite and eternal. But although ſuppoſing him to be generated by proper natural Generation, he cannot but be the Lord, which is neceſſary Exiſtence, yet his being ſo generated is contingent Exiſtence. Whence it appeareth, that there is a contingent Exiſtence, which is incompetible to any Creature.

(r) Ἀλλ᾽ ἔστι θεὸς καὶ ὁ υἱὸς, καί τοι τοῦ πατρὸς ὄντος θεοῦ, βασιλέως τε ὄντος ὁμοίως τοῦ πατρὸς, βασιλεύς ἐστι καὶ ὁ υἱός. Theſaur. p. 34.

(s) Ὥσπερ φύσει ἅγιος ὁ πατὴρ, καὶ φύσει ἅγιος ὁ υἱὸς, οὕτω φύσει ἅγιον τὸ πνεῦμα. —— ἐν τρισὶ ταῖς ὑποστάσεσιν ὁ κατὰ φύσιν ἁγιασμὸς θεωρεῖται. S. Baſil. c. Eunom. p. 83.

But although the Generation of the Son muſt be counted contingent Exiſtence, yet it is not contingent Exiſtence, as the Production of Creatures is, that are of exterior artificial Fabrication, and which are the proper Dependents on Will and Pleaſure, and the Effects thereof. If a Man buildeth an Houſe, it is proper to ſay to him, By thy Will (or for thy Pleaſure) this Houſe was erected. But if this Man generateth Children, it is not proper to ſay to him, By thy Will (or for thy Pleaſure) theſe Children are produced; becauſe the Procreation of Children (altho' it muſt be called contingent, and they are not generated by holy Men without Underſtanding and virtuous Will) is much of natural Operation, and rather of natural Operation than a Dependent on, and an Effect of Will and Pleaſure. Speaking comparatively, it muſt be ſaid (u) οὐκ ἐκ βουλήσεως, ἀλλὰ φυσικῶς, Not to be of Will, but Naturally. So touching the Imperial Son of God (although his Procreation muſt be called contingent, and he was not generated by his Father without Underſtanding and holy virtuous Will) it is not proper to ſay unto God, By thy Will (or for thy Pleaſure) he is and was produced. But touching the Creatures that are of exterior Fabrication (becauſe they are the proper Dependents on Will and Pleaſure, and the Effects thereof) it is proper to ſay unto God, By thy Will (or for thy Pleaſure) they are and were created, Apoc. 4. 11.

X. It is certain, that God and Creature are better differenced and diſtinguiſhed by ſelf-originate and cauſed Exiſtence, than by neceſſary and contingent Exiſtence. For the Name of a Creature denoteth a cauſed Exiſtence, but it doth not denote a contingent Exiſtence. A cauſed Exiſtence is eſſential to a Creature, as all Men acknowledge: But all Men do not acknowledge, that a contingent Exiſtence is eſſential to a Creature. All ſelf-originate Exiſtence is neceſſary Exiſtence, but all (ſuppos'd) neceſſary Exiſtence is not ſelf-originate. Upon all which Accounts it is manifeſt, that God and Creature are far better differenced and diſtinguiſhed by ſelf-originate and cauſed Exiſtence, than by neceſſary and contingent Exiſtence. If the Objection therefore (which we have under Conſideration) rightly argueth touching neceſſary and contingent Exiſtence, we may argue in the ſame manner (and with much more Reaſon) touching ſelf-originate and cauſed Exiſtence. The Objection ſaith, Whatever Being is neceſſarily exiſtent is Divine Being; but all Being meerly contingent (dependent upon Will and Pleaſure) is created Being. If this be ſound Arguing, then we may argue in this manner; Whatever Being is ſelf-originate is Divine Being; but all Being meerly cauſed and derivative (dependent upon another) is created Being. But if we thus argue, we deſtroy the Trinity, and the Scholaſtic Theology concerning it; we entirely deſtroy the Exiſtence of the Son of God, unleſs we will ſay with Calvin, that he is αὐτόθεος, (God of himſelf) which is a ſelf-contradictious and irreligious Conceit ſoundly confuted (w) both by the Socinian Writers,(x) and by the Scholaſtic Divines. The Scholaſtic Attribution of neceſſary Exiſtence to the Son of God, is alike incongruous as the Attribution of ſelf-originate Exiſtence; it is deſtructive of the Nature and Notion both of Father and Son, of Divine, as well as Human Generation, and indeed of the Nature and Agency of an Intelligent Being (who acteth not meerly by Neceſſity of Nature without Underſtanding and Will;) nor is neceſſary Exiſtence of any Affinity with the Contemplation of a Son, or of any derivative and cauſed Being, to whom it cannot appertain. The Honour proper to a Son is not neceſſary Exiſtence, but his εὐγένεια, or Birth-Nobilitation. If Chriſt Jeſus is natively the Imperial Son of God, whether the Scholaſtic neceſſary Exiſtence belongeth to him or not, He is natively and neceſſarily the Lord the Son.

XI. A late and recent Original of the Son of God, is ſuppoſed to introduce a new God; which is an Objection, that ariſeth meerly from an Equivocation of Words. For a new God, in the Criminal Senſe, is Another God, and a new Eſtate of the Deity. Such a new God, (which is another God than the one true eternal God) the Scripture criminateth and condemneth, Deut. 32. 17. Judg. 5. 8. and the Firſt Commandment forbiddeth, Thou ſhalt have no other Gods before me. Such a new God, which is another God, and a new Eſtate of the Deity, Chriſtianity pretendeth not to introduce; but all Chriſtians ſay, There is a new Lord, and a new Law; and ſo far, and in ſuch Senſe only their Religion introduceth a new God. That it introduceth a new Lord (the Son) no Man can doubt, that readeth the New Teſtament, and the Hiſtory of Chriſt: For he became the Son of God, or the Lord the Son, by his Generation and Nativity in Judea, by his Meſſias-ſhip, by his Reſurrection and conſequent Exaltation (when he was made both Lord and King) all which are new and recent Things. He is therefore a new and recent (Imperial) Son of God, and conſequently a new and recent Lord the Son, and in ſuch Senſe a new and recent God the Son. If we have a new and recent Imperial Son of God (a new and recent Meſſiah;) if we have a new Sovereign Lord of all, who is the Son, we have neceſſarily a new and recent God the Son, as that Name is the ſame with a new and recent Lord the Son. Either our Saviour's Ἀποθέωσις, and all the Scriptural Deſcriptions of his Exaltation to the Throne of God, and the Divine Sovereignty ſignifie nothing, or they import thus much That we have a new and recent God the Son. It is the Perſon of Chriſt Jeſus as ſuch, which is the Second Perſon of our Trinity, which is God the Son; and therefore we have a new recent God the Son; and ſuch is the Filial Imperial Eſtate of the new Kingdom of God. Theſe things being infinitely plain and certain, 'tis much that

Pla-

(t) S. Cyr. Theſaur. Par. 1. p. 108.

(u) Ibid. p. 57.

(w) Crell. de uno Deo, l. 1. S. 2. c. 2.

(x) Petav. de Trin. l. 6. c. 11.

Placilla the Empreſs ſhould be taught without any Diſtinction or Limitation of Senſe, That there is no new or recent God; that the Catholicks ſhould think it their Honour to profeſs rudely, and without making any Diſtinction or Limitation of Senſe, We do not worſhip any new or recent God (which may ſignifie, that they deny'd the Religion of Chriſtianity;) and that ſuch a Man as St. Baſil, without diſtinguiſhing at all the Ambiguity of Words, and limiting their Senſe, ſhould thus raſhly and crudely object againſt Eunomius, We are not commanded to receive any recent God. So Gr. Nyſſen argueth, (y) God commandeth us by the Prophet, μηδ᾽ἕνα πρόσφατον θεὸν, θεὸν εἶναι νομίζειν, μηδὲ προσκυνεῖν ἀλλοτρίῳ θεῷ, that we ſhould not ſuppoſe any new God, to be God, nor worſhip any ſtrange God. But it is manifeſt, that is new and recent, which is not from Eternity; as on the contrary, that is called eternal, which is not recent. He therefore that doth not acknowledge, τὸν μονογενῆ θεὸν, The Unigenit God, to be of the Father from Eternity, doth not deny him to be new and recent; for what is not eternal is certainly recent, and whatever is recent, is not God, as the Scripture ſaith, ὅτι οὐκ ἔσται ἐν σοὶ θεὸς πρόσφατος, There ſhall be in thee no new or recent God. Therefore he that ſaith, Erat quando non erat, denieth his Deity. At this rate theſe Fathers miſname their Saviour, ſtyling him, The Unigenit God, whom the Scripture calleth, The only begotten Son of God. At this rate they confound Things that differ, God and the Son of God. At this rate they miſinterpret Scripture, applying what it ſaith of ſuch a new God, which is another God, and a new Eſtate of the Deity, to a new and recent Son of God. At this rate they deceive themſelves by the Ambiguity of Words, not diſtinguiſhing between a new God the Son, and a new God in another Senſe and Acceptation. At this rate they prove the eternal Generation of our Saviour, without it he muſt be ſuppos'd a new and recent God. But there is nothing of force in theſe Argumentations; for without exiſting from Eternity, our Saviour may be God in one Senſe (as a Perſon of the Godhead) though not in another. Chriſt ought to be conſider'd as the Imperial Son of the Imperial Eſtate of God, his Nativity ought to be conſider'd as Analogical to that of an Earthly Prince, whom all Men conſider as a new and recent Lord of all. So the Scripture repreſenteth our Saviour, and accordingly we ought to honour him; for he is our Lord and our God (the Son) as he is the Perſon of Chriſt Jeſus, not as he is an Abſtract Son of God of eternal Generation. Which is an Hypotheſis that doth not at all vindicate the Honour of our Religion from the Reproaches of Infidels; for whether our Saviour was generated from Eternity or not, we muſt acknowledge him τὸν ἐναγχός γε φανέντα, him that hath lately appeared (as Celſus calleth him;) and to ſay with Origen, We do not worſhip a new God, that was not a God before, nor known unto Men, is not ſo much to vindicate the Honour of our Religion, as to falſifie it. For the Son of God is not made known by the Creation, natural Light diſcovereth nothing of him, or of his Religion, nor can it be ſhew'd, that he had any Imperial Government, or was worſhipped in the Old Teſtament-times, (z) as the ancient Writers pretend. The true Son of God is not made known, but by the new and recent Religion of Chriſtianity. To the World he always was, and always will be what Licinius ſtyled him, (a) Deus peregrinus, (which I will tranſlate a new and recent God;) and ſo an (b) Hebrew Doctor ſtyleth him. As for Origen's Platonic Eſſence of Truth, it is not the Son of God, nor do Chriſtians underſtand or worſhip it, nor was it in ancient times known unto Men, ſave only to Platonic Metaphyſicians, who ſuppoſed it's eternal Generation, (c) and from whoſe School St. Auſtin learned the eternal Generation, which a Divine of our own boldly aſſerteth, to be the only Generation of the Son of God.

(y) Ibid. l. 2. c. 12. ſ. 6.

(z) S. Baſil. c. Eunom. l. 5. p. 134.

(a) Baron. ad an. 317 n. 5.

(b) Jacchiad. in Dan. p. 247.

(c) Curcell. p. 823.

XII. For in a Book newly publiſh'd (written in an high Strain of Scholaſticiſm) this is the Title of a Chapter (d) Chriſt is called the Son of God only on account of his eternal Generation. Which ſheweth, that the imaginary eternal Generation hath deſtroy'd the true Scriptural Generation of the Son of God, the Generation of an imaginary Abſtract Son, hath deſtroy'd the Generation of the True Son; the Scholaſtic Divines find themſelves neceſſitated to deny either his eternal or temporal Generation; and which of theſe is the better Choice, is not hard to determine. For what is there in this eternal Generation, that ſhould make us fond of it? Is it at all conceivable or intelligible, rational or religious towards God, a wiſe and learned, or an unlearned Conceit? How much of Learning there is in this Scholaſtic Theology, appeareth from this learned Divine's uſual Expreſſions. (e) It doth not become ſuch ignorant Creatures as we are, to concern our ſelves about Philoſophical Myſteries, eſpecially the Myſteries of the Divine Nature, when every thing is a Myſtery to us. (f) How an infinite Being filleth all Places with his Preſence, or how this Being which filleth all Places, can be ſaid locally to aſcend or deſcend, and to confine his Preſence to any one Place, or how an infinite Being can perſonally unite a finite Creature to himſelf, ſo as to be perfect God and perfect Man in one Perſon; theſe are all great Myſteries to me. (g) What a Perſonal Union is, for my part I cannot tell. (h) I freely acknowledge, that I underſtand nothing of the Philoſophy of the Incarnation. At this rate we are Proficients in the Knowledge of Chriſt, at this rate we promote Learning and Theology. The true Chriſt is made unto us of God Wiſdom, in his Religion are all the Treaſures of Wiſdom and Knowledge: But the Scholaſtic Theology hath made Chriſt (including Tranſubſtantiation) an unintelligible Riddle beyond all Parallel; it hath bereft us of our Underſtanding, intricated, perplex'd, diſorder'd, diſgraced our Religion, turn'd it into a profane Scholaſtic Myſtery, and introduced an Egyptian Darkneſs upon the main Articles thereof. For is there any thing more unintelligible, than Three diſtinct Perſons (in Divinis) without any proper Nature, to conſtitute them diſtinct Perſons? Their real Diſtinction from one another, and their Identity with the Eſſence? Individual Perſons, conſtituted ſuch by thoſe Modalities, that are neceſſarily conſequent upon their being Individual Perſons? A Perſon conſtituted ſuch by his Paternity, a Father in order of Nature antecedently to his being a Perſon? Two eternal Perſons in the Godhead, conſtituted ſuch by their Relation, who yet muſt be Perſons antecedently to their Relation? A Son that is eſſential to the Godhead, and yet is generated by the Godhead? A Son produced by Wiſdom, and by Will, and yet by natural Neceſſity and from Eternity? A Son whoſe Generation is the Father's Doing (in the Senſe of Law and Morality) and yet is a natural and neceſſary Emanation from the Father? A Son of God, that is not a Saint of God? A Son that is generated the Heir of a Kingdom, and yet is at firſt and immediately generated into the

(d) Scripture-Proofs of our Saviour's Divinity, by Dr. Sherlock, ch. 5.

(e) P. 184.

(f) P. 229.

(g) P. 255.

(h) P. 251.

actual plenary Poſſeſſion of it? A Son of proper natural Generation, yet generated meerly by thinking? A Son that is but a Notion, yet is generated of the Subſtance of the Father? A Son that can be no more than the Son, yet is no leſs than the Father and the Son together? A Son who as God, is the Son of God, and yet his Father is not his God, as he is God? A Mediator and a Prieſt that is the Object of his own Mediation and Prieſthood? And a Son that is his own both Father and Son? Such is the Son of this eternal Generation; which is a Principle altogether Unſcriptural and Anti-ſcriptural (as being unpopular and unholy, oppoſite to the Character of the holy Scriptures) extremely injurious to God, and to the Perſon of Chriſt Jeſus (our only Saviour) which involveth in it all the Evils of the Scholaſtic Theology, hath been in great degreee the Origin of the Evils which the Chriſtian Religion in ancient and modern times hath ſuffer'd, and which will eternally obſtruct the Propagation of of it, and the Peace of the Chriſtian Church. Yet with this Learned Divine, this Generation is the grand Fundamental of Faith and Salvation, and ſo darling a Principle, that he oppoſeth the Senſe of other learned Scholaſtic Divines, and will not admit, that Chriſt is called, The Son of God, on any other account but only his eternal Generation. Our Saviour therefore, his Evangeliſts and Apoſtles uſing this Name, The Son of God, muſt intend, to teach us and the Jews the eternal Generation. But how is it then, that throughout the New Teſtament not the leaſt mention is made of ſuch a Thing? That Three Evangeliſts are obſerved to have been ignorant of it, and the Fourth ſaith as little of it as they? And how is it that this Name, The Son of God, is throughout the Bible never apply'd to an Abſtract Son (to whom, according to this Scholaſtic Hypotheſis, it primarily belongeth?) That throughout the New Teſtament it is only apply'd to the complex Perſon of the Meſſiah; ſo that all Learned Men have obſerv'd, that The Son of God and the Meſſiah are terms convertible? Thoſe Evangeliſts, that are obſerv'd to be ignorant of the eternal Generation, call Chriſt, The Son of God, ſo did his Diſciples in the time of their Rudeneſs and Ignorance, ſo did the People upon his ceaſing the Wind, ſo did the Centurion, ſo did the unclean Spirit; and our Saviour himſelf conjoineth theſe Names, His God, and his Father: But God cannot be his God, as he is of the Eternal Generation; therefore he doth not upon that account call him Father, but counteth himſelf the Son of God on ſome other account than the Eternal Generation. No, ſaith this Divine, He is not ſo called, either upon account of his miraculous Conception, or his Advancement into his Kingdom (his Meſſias-ſhip) or his Reſurrection.

(1.) Not becauſe of his miraculous Conception; for the Angel's Meſſage to the Bleſſed Virgin, Luke 1. 35. ſignifieth, That ſhe ſhould conceive by a Divine Power, becauſe one that is the Son of God is to be born of her; not that therefore the Child which ſhould be born of her ſhould be called, The Son of God, becauſe ſhe ſhould conceive by a Divine Power. But that this Interpretation is a groſs Diſtortion of the Sacred Text is manifeſt from this Argument. The Bleſſed Virgin's Conception was certainly a Generation (for ſhe was overſhadow'd, impregnated, begot with Child, and conceiv'd in her Womb.) In this Generation God was the Father, (for it was he that overſhadow'd, impregnated, begot her with Child;) therefore the Child begotten in this Generation, was, as ſuch, The Child of this Father, The Child and Son of God. This the Words of the Angel ſignifie (for they are deſign'd to ſignifie the Nature of this Generation;) they do not ſay, Thou ſhalt conceive by Divine Power, becauſe one that is great, that is holy, that is the Son of God and the Son of the Higheſt is to be born of thee: But they ſay (ſpeaking de futuro) Thou ſhalt conceive by Divine Power a Son, that ſhall be great, ſhall be called, The Son of the Higheſt, ſhall poſſeſs the Throne of David, The holy Thing that ſhall be born of thee, ſhall be called, The Son of God, Luk. 1. 32. 35. (i) It is objected, that Chriſt often calleth himſelf, The Son of God, and ſpeaketh of God as his Father, but never mentioneth his miraculous Birth (as if he did mention his eternal Generation) which was a great Secret in thoſe Days (as if it was a greater Secret than the eternal Generation:) But this Objection is therefore a trifling Argumentation, becauſe our Saviour's miraculous Conception and Birth is ſufficiently proved, to be a Cauſe and Reaſon of his Sonſhip, from the plain and copious Hiſtory of the Evangeliſts, wherein the eternal Generation maketh not the leaſt Appearance. (k) It is further objected, that our Saviour, with reſpect to his Birth, is ſo far from calling himſelf the Son of God, that he always calleth himſelf, The Son of Man. But this Objection is one of the Miſtakes of the Scholaſtic Theology (which perverteth almoſt every thing;) for our Saviour calleth himſelf the Son of Man with reſpect to his State of voluntary Humiliation, which (as alſo his coming down from Heaven) will be hereafter diſcourſed of. This Author hath another Objection, but it is only againſt his Brethren, thoſe Scholaſtic Divines, who ſuppoſe our Saviour to be called, The Son of God, not only upon account of his eternal Generation, but alſo upon account of his miraculous Conception. (l) Theſe he Hereticateth (in ſome ſort) as ſymbolizing with the ancient Scholaſtic Hereſie of Neſtorius. Such hath been the bleſſed Fruit of the Scholaſtic Theology, it hath occaſion'd a Shole of ancient and modern Scholaſtic Hereſies (with the horrible Evils that accompany them) touching the Perſon of Chriſt; it hath made the Faith of a Chriſtian a matter of extreme Subtilty and Scholaſticiſm; a meer honeſt-minded Chriſtian, not Technologically furniſh'd, cannot avoid the Crime of Hereſie (for the Scholaſtic Theology will be called the Catholick Faith:) No Man can be an Intelligent and Orthodox Believer, but a Sophiſt, and one that hath been train'd up in the Schools. But if thoſe Scholaſtic Divines muſt be Hereticks, that differ from our Author in their Account of our Saviour's Sonſhip, they may rejoyce in having good Company. (m) The Dort-Interpreters thus expound Luk. 1. 35. It is not here ſaid, that Chriſt ſhould be the Son of God, becauſe conceived by the Holy Ghoſt; for ſo he ſhould be the Son of the Holy Ghoſt. But becauſe his Conception by the Holy Ghoſt is a Demonſtration, that the eternal Son of God aſſumed true human Nature of the Fleſh and Blood of Mary by the Operation of the Holy Ghoſt,

(i) P. 15

170.

(k) P. 170.

(l) P. 15

(m) Dordraceni Interpretes ſic exponunt. Luc. 1. 35. Hic non dicitur, Chriſtum Dei Filium fore, quia ex Spiritu S. conceptus eſt; quia ſic eſſet Filius Spiritus S. Sed quia conceptio ex Spiritu S. certa Demonſtratio eſt, quod æternus Dei Filius veram humanam naturam ex carne & ſanguine Mariæ, per operationem Spiritus S. in unitatem ſuæ perſonæ aſſumpſit. Sed contra. Rodolphus Gualterus, Hieronymus Zanchius, Joannes Maldonatus in Apologia Confeſſionis Remonſtrantium citate, aliique, exiſtimant hic dici Jeſum fore Dei Filium, quia ex into

Spiritu S. conceptus eſt, & alterum novorum iſtorum interpretum conſequentiam ignorant. Curcell. Diſſ. de voc. Trin. n. 24.

into the Unity of his Perſon. But on the contrary, Gualter, Zanchy, Maldonate, cited in the Apology of the Remonſtrants Confeſſion, and others alſo, are of opinion, that it is here ſaid, that Jeſus ſhall be the Son of God, becauſe conceiv'd by the Holy Ghoſt, and they underſtand not the imaginary Conſequence of thoſe new Interpreters. But if according to the Scripture and theſe Interpreters our Saviour is called The Son of God becauſe of his miraculous Conception, the ſcholaſtic eternal Generation muſt be out of Doors. For thus far our Author according to that Principle rightly reaſoneth. (n) Son is the Name of a Perſon; and though there are two Natures in Chriſt, he is but one Perſon, and the eternal Word is that Perſon, and therefore that Son of God, who was born of the Virgin. To ſay, that the human Nature of Chriſt, which was miraculouſly formed in the Womb of the Virgin, is upon account of that miraculous Conception called The Son of God, is to make a Perſon of it, and to divide Chriſt into two Perſons, which is Neſtorianiſm. And to ſay, that the eternal Word and Son of God which was made Fleſh and was incarnate in the Womb of the Virgin, ~~is~~ therefore called The Son of God, is to ſay, that the eternal Son of God is therefore called The Son of God, becauſe he was made Man.

(n) P. 168.

(2.) Another Pretence (as our Author calleth it) for Chriſt's being called The Son of God without any reſpect to his eternal Generation, is that high Dignity and Authority God beſtowed on him, that he ſhould be the King of Iſrael, which they ſay is that account which Chriſt himſelf giveth, Joh. 10. 34, 35, 36. Is it not written in your Law, I ſaid, ye are Gods? If he called them Gods, unto whom the Word of God came, and the Scripture cannot be broken: ſay ye of him, whom the Father hath ſanctified and ſent into the World, Thou blaſphemeſt; becauſe I ſaid, I am the Son of God? To this illuſtrious and uncontrollable Text our learned Author's Anſwer is a ſelf-confutation, a Contradiction to the Tenour of the Scriptures, the Senſe of all learned Men, and the plaineſt Truth in the World. It is manifeſt (ſaith he) our Saviour doth not in this Anſwer to the Jews give the Reaſon why he calleth himſelf the Son of God, but why he is not guilty of Blaſphemy in calling himſelf the Son of God; for this was his Accuſation, and to this he anſwereth, and theſe are two very different things. But they muſt ſee double that can ſee theſe to be two very different things. For if our Saviour ſaith, It is not Blaſphemy for him to be called the Son of God, this muſt be his meaning, that he may be juſtly and uncriminally called the Son of God. And this he proveth à majore; for if the Men of Dignity and Authority amongſt the Jews are in Scripture called Gods (or Sons of God) then he might juſtly be called The (imperial) Son of God, whom God had ſelected and conſecrated to another-kins Dignity and Authority than they, viz. The Meſſias-ſhip, which importeth divine imperial Sonſhip unto God. For according to the Tenour of the Scriptures Regality is Sonſhip unto God, Pſal. 89. 26, 27. He ſhall cry unto me, Thou art my Father, Alſo I will make him my firſt-born, higher than the Kings of the Earth. To which other places are agreeable, Pſal. 2. 7, 12. Heb. 1. 5, 9. 2 Sam. 7. 14. 1 Chron. 22. 10. If Regality is Sonſhip unto God, (who is the great King) then to be actually Meſſiah the King, (the divine King) is to be politically and by his Place The divine regial Son of God. Which is a Demonſtration that theſe two Names Meſſiah and The Son of God are in ſenſe the ſame; that our Saviour is called The Son of God (not with reſpect to the Eternal Generation, but) as being the Meſſiah; that this is the meaning of our Saviour's Diſcourſe with the Jews, and the account which himſelf giveth of his being the Son of God, Joh. 10. 34, 35, 36. This is further demonſtrable from Heb. 1. 5. I will be to him a Father, and he ſhall be to me a Son. For this Text ſpeaketh wholly de futuro, and can have no reſpect to the Eternal Generation, (that muſt be paſt more than Millions of Ages) which therefore demonſtrateth that Chriſt is in this place called The Son, not as being The Eternal Son, but as being (The Meſſiah) The regial or imperial Son. The Meſſiah and the King of Iſrael, (or the King of the Jews) are the ſame Name, all learned Men in the Scriptures have obſerv'd it, and underſtood the ſenſe of it; but our learned Author ſeeth not what is written in his Bible in Capital Letters; for thus he diſcourſeth. (o) Some conclude, that to be the Son of God ſignifieth no more than to be the Chriſt, the Meſſias, the King of Iſrael. But the true Reaſon of this is on the other ſide, that the Chriſt and the King of Iſrael is the Son of God. For the Kingdom of Iſrael was a Theocracy, God himſelf was their King, and therefore the true Meſſias, the true King of Iſrael muſt be the Son of God, becauſe it is the Kingdom of God, which he always adminiſtred by his own eternal Word and eternal Son. Chriſt is not called the Son of God becauſe he is the King of Iſrael, but is therefore the King of Iſrael becauſe he is the Son of God. To ſuppoſe that the Literal and Carnal Iſrael was the Kingdom of God, which is a Polity, and ſuch an one which is contrary to the Carnal Iſrael, is a great Miſtake; nor is this Name, as it ſignifieth a Polity, or the Kingdom of Heaven, or the Kingdom of the Meſſiah, to be found in all the Old Teſtament, as the Fathers have obſerv'd. To ſuppoſe therefore that God adminiſtred the Kingdom of Old Iſrael by his own eternal Word and Son, is not better than pure Romance; nor is there any Memoir of his Government, Worſhip, or Exiſtence, in all the Times of the Old Teſtament, or in any genuin Memoir of Judaiſm: Nor is the Suppoſition of his Legiſlation and Government in thoſe Times reconcileable with the Apoſtle, Heb. 1. 1, 2. and 2. 2, 3. But whatever the Holy Writers may ſay, we ſeem reſolved to go on in the beaten Track, which we do with great Steddineſs, ſave only when it happeneth to be the right way, for then we are apt to turn aſide into by-Paths, as this Author doth. Who conſidereth God as King of the Literal and Carnal Iſrael, and argueth, that for this Cauſe and Reaſon the Meſſias, the true King of Iſrael, muſt be the Son of God. But no other Man would have conſidered the Meſſias as the true King of Iſrael, (as Saul or Solomon was) but as the King of the Spiritual and true Iſrael; nor becauſe God was the King of the Carnal Iſrael can this be the Cauſe and Reaſon why the King of the Spiritual Iſrael muſt be the Son of God. For what an Argumentation is this, à baculo ad angulum, Chriſt the King of the Spiritual Iſrael muſt be the Son of God, becauſe God is King of the Carnal Iſrael, who are (falſly called) his Kingdom? But this is true Reaſoning; The true Kingdom of God is the Holy Empire, (typify'd by the Carnal Iſrael) of this the Meſſiah as ſuch is the King, and therefore is the Imperial Son of God; ſo that to be the Meſſiah and to be the Imperial Son of God is the ſame thing. Who ſeeth not this the plaineſt Truth in the World? Chriſt therefore is called the Son of God becauſe he is the King of Iſrael, as the Learned have ſuppos'd.

(o) P. 177, 178.

(3.) Another account of Chriſt's being called the Son of God without any reſpect to his eternal Generation, is his Reſurrection from the Dead, Act. 13. 32, 33. We declare unto you glad Tydings, how that the Promiſe made unto the Fathers God hath fulfilled the ſame unto us their Children, in that he hath raiſed up Jeſus again; as it is alſo written in the ſecond Pſalm, Thou art my Son, this day have I begotten thee. To this illuſtrious Text, (which is as bright as the Day) our Scholaſtic Divine maketh a threefold feeble Anſwer, in which there is a marvellous want of good Underſtanding in Matters of Theology, but no want of Affection to the good old Cauſe of the Scholaſtic Theology. His firſt Anſwer is ſome little Exceptions put in againſt this plain Evidence, that this day have I begotten thee, relateth to the Reſurrection. He ſaith, it is not plain to him, that this day ſignifieth the day of the Reſurrection, (ſome cannot ſee, that this day ſignifieth this day; as in our Saviour's Diſcourſe concerning his ſeeing Abraham Scholaſtic Divines cannot ſee, that his day ſignifieth his day) there is no Intimation of the Reſurrection in this ſecond Pſalm, (yet this Text is in it and this other, I have ſet my King upon my holy Hill of Zion) the Author to the Hebrews applieth this very Text to the Prieſthood of Chriſt, ſo that God as much begot him when he made him a Prieſt as when he raiſed him from the Dead. What a marvellous Inſtance is this of a want of good Underſtanding, not to know that Chriſt's Reſurrection is the ſame thing with his being raiſed to his Heavenly Sacerdotal Dignity? The ſecond Anſwer which our Author maketh, is an Endeavour to diſtort the Text to a contrary Senſe. For he ſaith, This day have I begotten thee doth not ſignify any Temporal Act, but an Eternal Generation. But how ſhall this ſtrange Interpretation be proved true? He ſaith, It is very plain from that Preference the Apoſtle giveth to Chriſt above Angels for this very Reaſon, Heb. 1. 5. Unto which of the Angels ſaid he at any time, Thou art my Son, this day have I begotten thee? for if we expound this of the Reſurrection of the Dead, what Preference did this give him above Angels? This learned Author doth not read the Scriptures with ſuch Eyes as other Men do. He readeth the Eternal Generation where we read the Reſurrection. And we rightly read ſo, for is there any thing more plain, than that the Apoſtle in this place to the Hebrews ſpeaketh of our Saviour's Imperial Sonſhip plenarily ſuch, and his being raiſ'd thereto, which was his Generation? But our Author beſides the Apoſtle citeth the Catholick Fathers for his interpreting σήμερον, (this day) of the Eternal Generation; and this he ought not to have omitted, if he deſigneth to make thoſe Ancients our Standard, and to allow us no Improvements in Theology, but only to bear him Company in ſinging over again the old nonſenſical Cant of hodiè æternitatis. But at length (in the third place) he is content to ſuppoſe (p) that this day have I begotten thee referreth to the Reſurrection: but then he ſaith, It is certain this did not make him the Son of God, for he owneth himſelf the Son of God before he died and roſe again. Which Argumentation ſpeaketh a marvellous want of underſtanding our Saviour's Sonſhip, which is an Imperial-perſonal Sonſhip, the Perfection whereof he was to arrive at gradually, whence we often read in the Epiſtle to the Hebrews of his being made perfect. Our Author argueth alſo, that God's raiſing Chriſt could not be the begetting him, nor the Reaſon of his being called his Son, becauſe his Reſurrection is in certain Sayings of our Saviour attributed to himſelf. But of thoſe Sayings of our Saviour an account is given in our foregoing Diſcourſes, and of this Saying of St. Paul alſo, Rom. 1. 4. who was declared to be the Son of God with Power, according to the Spirit of Holineſs, by the Reſurrection from the Dead. This and thoſe other Texts that we have vindicated from Corruption, (with others of like nature) are an illuſtrious Conſtellation of Scriptures, that bear a refulgent Teſtimony againſt the Scholaſtic Eternal Generation. (q) For an Eternal Son needeth nothing more to make him a Son.

(p) P. 161.

(q) Ibid. p. 172.

CHAP.

CHAP. VIII.

1. Of the prime Article of the Myſtery of Godlineſs, of which the Deity of our Lord is a part. 2. The Article of the Incarnation is another part of it. 3. Some places of Scripture illuſtrated that concern it. 4. Of the Word made Fleſh. 5. Of the Scholaſtick and the Chriſtian Trinitarians agreement touching this Article. Sect. 1. Their Firſt Diſagreement touching this Article, with a certain Rule of fixing and determining the Senſe of the New Teſtament. Sect. 2. Their Second Diſagreement. The Incarnation conjoin'd with the manifeſtation of our Saviour. Sect. 3. The Third Diſagreement touching a Binary of Generations. Sect. 4. The Fourth Diſagreement. The Scholaſtic Incarnation more than an Incarnation. Sect. 5. The Fifth Diſagreement. The Scholaſtic Trinity and Incarnation compar'd. Sect. 6. The Sixth Diſagreement. Scholaſtic Objections againſt the Scholaſtic Incarnation. Sect. 7. The Seventh Diſagreement. Of Suppoſitum and Perſona. Sect. 8. The Eighth Diſagreement. Of the hurt done to Religion by the Scholaſtic Incarnation. Sect. 9. The Ninth Diſagreement. Of Scholaſtic Abſurdities.

I. OF the Chriſtian Religion which we have conſider'd and celebrated as The great Myſtery of Godlineſs, this is the prime Article God was manifeſt in the Fleſh. (1 Tim. 3. 16.) Of which great Article there are three Branches (expreſs'd or involv'd in the Words of it) the Deity of our Lord's Perſon, his Incarnation and the manner or kind of it. For in this and the following Articles of the Myſtery of Godlineſs the Apoſtle's deſign manifeſtly is, to repreſent the Chriſtian Religion as great, magnificent and myſterious (accordingly he ſtileth it the great Myſtery of Godlineſs) and ſo the Socinian Interpreters obſerve, that his Diſcourſe is deſign'd, to conciliate Authority to the Chriſtian Doctrine and for the commendation of it. And what can make the Chriſtian Religion ſo great, magnificent and myſterious, as to ſtile it a marvellous Theophania, and to repreſent the Author of it as God manifeſt in the Fleſh? But in the Socinians Interpretation of this illuſtrious Text there is nothing great, magnificent and myſterious; for they ſuppoſe, that this is the whole ſenſe of it, that the Chriſtian Doctrine was manifeſted by Chriſt and his Apoſtles, infirm and abject Men in worldy Reſpects, and therefore called Fleſh. This is one of their Interpretations, wherein they ſhut the Name of God out of the Text: But they are content to follow the common reading, and to admit the Name of God into the Text; but ſo reading it, they interpret the Name of God, to ſignifie, not Chriſt, but God (the Father) who is ſaid to be manifeſted in the Fleſh (as they ſuppoſe) becauſe his myſterious Will was revealed by (infirm and mean Men in worldly Reſpects) Chriſt and his Apoſtles. This their ſecond Interpretation is in Senſe the ſame with the former, and is alike devoid of good Senſe. For is it tolerable good Senſe, to ſay, that the Goſpel or God was manifeſted in the Fleſh, becauſe the Goſpel or the Will and Counſel of God was revealed by infirm Men? No Author ſpeaketh at this rate; much leſs may we ſuppoſe S. Paul ſo to ſpeak, who throughout his Epiſtles upon all Occaſions diſplayeth Chriſt's Glory and Magnificence at the moſt ſuperlative rate. Therefore by God manifeſt in the Fleſh he muſt be ſuppos'd, to mean him that is God-man (connoting his Religion) and by the great Myſtery of Godlineſs he muſt be ſuppos'd to mean τὸ χριστȣ̃ μυστήριον, the Myſtery of Chriſt. The following Articles of the Myſtery of Godlineſs plainly determine the Apoſtle's Senſe, and demonſtrate, that he ſpeaketh of the Perſon of Chriſt Jeſus as manifeſt in the Fleſh. For who is it, that was juſtified (proved to be no Impoſtor) by the Spirit, that was ſeen of Angels (and ador'd by them) that was preach'd unto the Gentiles and believ'd on in the World, but Chriſt Jeſus? And as Ἀνάληψις τȣ̃ Μωσέως, ſignifieth the Aſſumption of Moſes, ſo ἀναλήφθη ἐν δόξῃ, what can it ſignifie but our Saviour's glorious Aſſumption? The Words cannot ſignifie the Exaltation of the Goſpel (or the making it famous) and therefore it is a vanity, to argue from the Order of them, that they do ſo ſignifie. It is much more reaſonable, to ſuppoſe, that the Apoſtle in recounting theſe Articles of the Myſtery of Godlineſs intended, to connex our Saviour's wonderful Entertainment in this and the other World. And ſo the Senſe of them is, that he had a wonderful Reception in this World as well as a marvellous glorious Aſſumption in the other. And being thus fairly expounded the Apoſtle's Words have nothing diſorderly in them; nothing that claſheth with the common reading, θεὸς ἐφανερώθη ἐν σαρκί, God was manifeſt in the Fleſh, nothing but what proveth, that this is the true reading. Which further appeareth from the conſent of all thoſe ancient Greek Copies that the Greek Fathers uſed, and from the conſent af all Greek Copies, as Beza affirmeth. So great a demonſtration of the Truth of the common reading cannot reaſonably be ſhaken by the Allegation of a Paſſage in the Council of Nice, or a Story of Liberatus the Deacon touching Macedonius (that he was depos'd for corrupting this place) nor by an Allegation of the vulgar Latin, the Syriac, Arabic, S. Ambroſe, a Clermont Copy and a Paſſage in Hincmarus touching a Neſtorian's putting Θεὸς into the Text. As if the Neſtorians would corrupt the Text to their own Prejudice, or could corrupt the Copies which the Greek Fathers us'd before the times of Neſtorianiſm. The Clermont Copy (from ſeveral conſiderations) appeareth, to be of little regard. The Arabic hath been thought to leave out the Name God, but that is a miſtake. The vulgar Latin and the Syriac that leave out the word God, were anciently thought, not to leave it out in Senſe; for they were underſtood, to ſpeak of our Saviour's Incarnation. Sacramentum myſterii Dei, quod eſt Chriſtus in carne, ſaith S. Ambroſe. So (r) S. Jerom (s) Leo (t) S. Hilary (u) Fulgentius underſtand the vulgar Latin, to ſpeak of our Saviour's Incarnation. Great is the Myſtery of Truth, that he appeared in Humane Fleſh, ſaith the Æthiopick, which leaveth out the Name God, but not to the prejudice of our Saviour's

(r) In loc.
(s) *Ep.*29. ad Fl.
(t) *De Trin. l.*11.
(u) Ad Thra. c.

(3.) Another account of Chriſt's being called the Son of God without any reſpect to his eternal Generation, is his Reſurrection from the Dead, Act. 13. 32, 33. We declare unto you glad Tydings, how that the Promiſe made unto the Fathers God hath fulfilled the ſame unto us their Children, in that he hath raiſed up Jeſus again; as it is alſo written in the ſecond Pſalm, Thou art my Son, this day have I begotten thee. To this illuſtrious Text, (which is as bright as the Day) our Scholaſtic Divine maketh a threefold feeble Anſwer, in which there is a marvellous want of good Underſtanding in Matters of Theology, but no want of Affection to the good old Cauſe of the Scholaſtic Theology. His firſt Anſwer is ſome little Exceptions put in againſt this plain Evidence, that this day have I begotten thee, relateth to the Reſurrection. He ſaith, it is not plain to him, that this day ſignifieth the day of the Reſurrection, (ſome cannot ſee, that this day ſignifieth this day; as in our Saviour's Diſcourſe concerning his ſeeing Abraham Scholaſtic Divines cannot ſee, that his day ſignifieth his day) there is no Intimation of the Reſurrection in this ſecond Pſalm, (yet this Text is in it and this other, I have ſet my King upon my holy Hill of Zion) the Author to the Hebrews applieth this very Text to the Prieſthood of Chriſt, ſo that God as much begot him when he made him a Prieſt as when he raiſed him from the Dead. What a marvellous Inſtance is this of a want of good Underſtanding, not to know that Chriſt's Reſurrection is the ſame thing with his being raiſed to his Heavenly Sacerdotal Dignity? The ſecond Anſwer which our Author maketh, is an Endeavour to diſtort the Text to a contrary Senſe. For he ſaith, This day have I begotten thee doth not ſignify any Temporal Act, but an Eternal Generation. But how ſhall this ſtrange Interpretation be proved true? He ſaith, It is very plain from that Preference the Apoſtle giveth to Chriſt above Angels for this very Reaſon, Heb. 1. 5. Unto which of the Angels ſaid he at any time, Thou art my Son, this day have I begotten thee? for if we expound this of the Reſurrection of the Dead, what Preference did this give him above Angels? This learned Author doth not read the Scriptures with ſuch Eyes as other Men do. He readeth the Eternal Generation where we read the Reſurrection. And we rightly read ſo, for is there any thing more plain, than that the Apoſtle in this place to the Hebrews ſpeaketh of our Saviour's Imperial Sonſhip plenarily ſuch, and his being rais'd thereto, which was his Generation? But our Author beſides the Apoſtle citeth the Catholick Fathers for his interpreting σήμερον, (this day) of the Eternal Generation; and this he ought not to have omitted, if he deſigneth to make thoſe Ancients our Standard, and to allow us no Improvements in Theology, but only to bear him Company in ſinging over again the old nonſenſical Cant of hodiè æternitatis. But at length (in the third place) he is content to ſuppoſe (p) that this day have I begotten thee referreth to the Reſurrection: but then he ſaith, It is certain this did not make him the Son of God, for he owneth himſelf the Son of God before he died and roſe again. Which Argumentation ſpeaketh a marvellous want of underſtanding our Saviour's Sonſhip, which is an Imperial-perſonal Sonſhip, the Perfection whereof he was to arrive at gradually, whence we often read in the Epiſtle to the Hebrews of his being made perfect. Our Author argueth alſo, that God's raiſing Chriſt could not be the begetting him, nor the Reaſon of his being called his Son, becauſe his Reſurrection is in certain Sayings of our Saviour attributed to himſelf. But of thoſe Sayings of our Saviour an account is given in our foregoing Diſcourſes, and of this Saying of St. Paul alſo, Rom. 1. 4. who was declared to be the Son of God with Power, according to the Spirit of Holineſs, by the Reſurrection from the Dead. This and thoſe other Texts that we have vindicated from Corruption, (with others of like nature) are an illuſtrious Conſtellation of Scriptures, that bear a refulgent Teſtimony againſt the Scholaſtic Eternal Generation. (q) For an Eternal Son needeth nothing more to make him a Son.

(p) P. 171.

1 Tim. 3. 16.

(q) Ibid. p. 172.

CHAP. VIII.

1. Of the prime Article of the Myſtery of Godlineſs, of which the Deity of our Lord is a part. 2. The Article of the Incarnation is another part of it. 3. Some places of Scripture illuſtrated that concern it. 4. Of the Word made Fleſh. 5. Of the Scholaſtick and the Chriſtian Trinitarians agreement touching this Article. Sect. 1. Their Firſt Diſagreement touching this Article, with a certain Rule of fixing and determining the Senſe of the New Teſtament. Sect. 2. Their Second Diſagreement. The Incarnation conjoin'd with the manifeſtation of our Saviour. Sect. 3. The Third Diſagreement touching a Binary of Generations. Sect. 4. The Fourth Diſagreement. The Scholaſtic Incarnation more than an Incarnation. Sect. 5. The Fifth Diſagreement. The Scholaſtic Trinity and Incarnation compar'd. Sect. 6. The Sixth Diſagreement. Scholaſtic Objections againſt the Scholaſtic Incarnation. Sect. 7. The Seventh Diſagreement. Of Suppoſitum and Perſona. Sect. 8. The Eighth Diſagreement. Of the hurt done to Religion by the Scholaſtic Incarnation. Sect. 9. The Ninth Diſagreement. Of Scholaſtic Abſurdities.

I. OF the Chriſtian Religion which we have conſider'd and celebrated as The great Myſtery of Godlineſs, this is the prime Article God was manifeſt in the Fleſh. 1 Tim. 3. 16. Of which great Article there are three Branches (expreſs'd or involv'd in the Words of it) the Deity of our Lord's Perſon, his Incarnation and the manner or kind of it. For in this and the following Articles of the Myſtery of Godlineſs the Apoſtle's deſign manifeſtly is, to repreſent the Chriſtian Religion as great, magnificent and myſterious (accordingly he ſtileth it the great Myſtery of Godlineſs) and ſo the Socinian Interpreters obſerve, that his Diſcourſe is deſign'd, to conciliate Authority to the Chriſtian Doctrine and for the commendation of it. And what can make the Chriſtian Religion ſo great, magnificent and myſterious, as to ſtile it a marvellous Theophania, and to repreſent the Author of it as God manifeſt in the Fleſh? But in the Socinians Interpretation of this illuſtrious Text there is nothing great, magnificent and myſterious; for they ſuppoſe, that this is the whole ſenſe of it, that the Chriſtian Doctrine was manifeſted by Chriſt and his Apoſtles, infirm and abject Men in worldy Reſpects, and therefore called Fleſh. This is one of their Interpretations, wherein they ſhut the Name of God out of the Text: But they are content to follow the common reading, and to admit the Name of God into the Text; but ſo reading it, they interpret the Name of God, to ſignifie, not Chriſt, but God (the Father) who is ſaid to be manifeſted in the Fleſh (as they ſuppoſe) becauſe his myſterious Will was revealed by (infirm and mean Men in worldly Reſpects) Chriſt and his Apoſtles. This their ſecond Interpretation is in Senſe the ſame with the former, and is alike devoid of good Senſe. For is it tolerable good Senſe, to ſay, that the Goſpel or God was manifeſted in the Fleſh, becauſe the Goſpel or the Will and Counſel of God was revealed by infirm Men? No Author ſpeaketh at this rate; much leſs may we ſuppoſe S. Paul ſo to ſpeak, who throughout his Epiſtles upon all Occaſions diſplayeth Chriſt's Glory and Magnificence at the moſt ſuperlative rate. Therefore by God manifeſt in the Fleſh he muſt be ſuppos'd, to mean him that is God-man (connoting his Religion) and by the great Myſtery of Godlineſs he muſt be ſuppos'd to mean τὸ Χριστοῦ μυστήριον, the Myſtery of Chriſt. The following Articles of the Myſtery of Godlineſs plainly determine the Apoſtle's Senſe, and demonſtrate, that he ſpeaketh of the Perſon of Chriſt Jeſus as manifeſt in the Fleſh. For who is it, that was juſtified (proved to be no Impoſtor) by the Spirit, that was ſeen of Angels (and ador'd by them) that was preach'd unto the Gentiles and believ'd on in the World, but Chriſt Jeſus? And as Ἀνάληψις τοῦ Μωσέως, ſignifieth the Aſſumption of Moſes, ſo ἀναλήφθη ἐν δόξῃ, what can it ſignifie but our Saviour's glorious Aſſumption? The Words cannot ſignifie the Exaltation of the Goſpel (or the making it famous) and therefore it is a vanity, to argue from the Order of them, that they do ſo ſignifie. It is much more reaſonable, to ſuppoſe, that the Apoſtle in recounting theſe Articles of the Myſtery of Godlineſs intended, to connex our Saviour's wonderful Entertainment in this and the other World. And ſo the Senſe of them is, that he had a wonderful Reception in this World as well as a marvellous glorious Aſſumption in the other. And being thus fairly expounded the Apoſtle's Words have nothing diſorderly in them; nothing that claſheth with the common reading, Θεὸς ἐφανερώθη ἐν σαρκί, God was manifeſt in the Fleſh, nothing but what proveth, that this is the true reading. Which further appeareth from the conſent of all thoſe ancient Greek Copies that the Greek Fathers uſed, and from the conſent af all Greek Copies, as Beza affirmeth. So great a demonſtration of the Truth of the common reading cannot reaſonably be ſhaken by the Allegation of a Paſſage in the Council of Nice, or a Story of Liberatus the Deacon touching Macedonius (that he was depos'd for corrupting this place) nor by an Allegation of the vulgar Latin, the Syriac, Arabic, S. Ambroſe, a Clermont Copy and a Paſſage in Hincmarus touching a Neſtorian's putting Θεὸς into the Text. As if the Neſtorians would corrupt the Text to their own Prejudice, or could corrupt the Copies which the Greek Fathers us'd before the times of Neſtorianiſm. The Clermont Copy (from ſeveral conſiderations) appeareth, to be of little regard. The Arabic hath been thought to leave out the Name God, but that is a miſtake. The vulgar Latin and the Syriac that leave out the word God, were anciently thought, not to leave it out in Senſe; for they were underſtood, to ſpeak of our Saviour's Incarnation. Sacramentum myſterii Dei, quod eſt Chriſtus in carne, ſaith S. Ambroſe. So (r) S. Jerom (s) Leo (t) S. Hilary (u) Fulgentius underſtand the vulgar Latin, to ſpeak of our Saviour's Incarnation. Great is the Myſtery of Truth, that he appeared in Humane Fleſh, ſaith the Æthiopick, which leaveth out the Name God, but not to the prejudice of our Saviour's

(r) In loc.
(s) Ep. 29. ad Fl.
(t) De Trin. l. 11.
(u) Ad Thra. c.

Deity (of Perſon) or his Incarnation. And the ſame may be ſaid of the Syriac Verſion.

II. The Incarnation of our Saviour properly underſtood (which the Socinian Theology admitteth not) appeareth, to be well founded. For the Apoſtles prime Article of the Myſtery of Godlineſs can ſignifie nothing leſs, nothing elſe than his ἐνσωμάτωσις, Incorporation, ἔνσαρκος παρουσία, preſence in Fleſh, ἡ ἐν σαρκὶ ἐπιδημία, coming in Fleſh (w) which are Names by which the Fathers uſually expreſs his Incarnation. But the Truth of this commonly receiv'd Article doth not rely upon one ſingle Text only; for it hath been always (x) one of the Articles of the Religion of Chriſtians (we do not play the Fool, O Greeks, nor tell Nugacities, when we tell you, that God hath been in the form of Man, ſaith Tatianus) and there is a conjunct Conſtellation of illuſtrious Texts of the New Teſtament, that aſſert and ſupport it. For according to the Apoſtle, Phil. 2. 6, 7, 8. Chriſt was in the form of God, and was not then in the form of a Servant, nor in the likeneſs of Men, nor in faſhion as a Man: But afterwards he became ſuch (by an exinanition) which could not be but by an ἐνανθρώπησις, Inhumanation, οἰκονομία ἐνανθρωπήσεως, Oeconomy of Inhumanation, which is one of the Names, whereby Eccleſiaſtical Writers ſignifie the Incarnation of our Saviour. So he that was rich, yet for our ſakes became poor, that we through his poverty might be rich. 2 Cor. 8. 9. So the Son of God being the brightneſs of his Glory and the expreſs image of his Perſon (as being a divine imperial Perſon) yet becauſe the Children are partakers of Fleſh and Blood (of a frail, infirm mortal Nature, ſubject to many Sufferings) he alſo himſelf likewiſe took part of the ſame voluntarily and by his own choice. Heb. 2. 14. This he did with deſign, to ſuffer Death, that ſo by Death he might deſtroy him that had the power of Death, and deliver them who were ſubjected thereto; which were frail mortal Men (ſuch as the Seed of Abraham or the Hebrews to whom the Apoſtle wrote) not Angels. Ὀυ γὰρ δήπου ἀγγέλων ἐπιλαμβάνεται, ἀλλὰ σπέρματος Ἀβραὰμ

V. 16. ἐπιλαμβάνεται, for verily he taketh not hold of Angels, but of the Seed of Abraham he taketh hold. So our Tranſlators render the words in the Margin, much better than they have render'd them in the Text. For as they are rendred in the Text, they make the Apoſtle, to ſay that explicitly, which he ſaith only implicitly (for he doth not in theſe words explicitly teach our Saviour's Incarnation, nor ſay expreſly, that he took not on him the Nature of Angels, but he took on him the Seed of Abraham:) But he implicitly teacheth our Saviour's Incarnation. For in ſaying, he taketh not hold of Angels, but of the Seed of Abraham he taketh hold (ſo as to help and ſuccour them) the Apoſtle ſaith implicitly, that he took not the Nature of Angels (as having no deſign to ſuccour them) but that of the Seed of Abraham, whom he deſign'd to ſuccour.

V. 17. Wherefore in all things it behoved him to be made like unto his Brethren in their infirm mortal Nature (ſubject to Afflictions) in their afflicted Condition.

(w) Petav. T. 4. l. 2. c. 1.

(x) Ὀυ μωραίνομεν, ἄνδρες Ἕλληνες, οὐδὲ λήρους ἀπαγγέλλομεν, θεὸν ἐν ἀνθρώπου μορφῇ γεγονέναι, καταγγέλλοντες. Tatian.

III. In this Divine Author to the Hebrews there is another Paſſage, which is commonly thought, to expreſs our Saviour's Incarnation. Heb. 10. 4, 5, 6, 7. For it is not poſſible, that the Blood of Bulls and of Goats ſhould take away Sins. Wherefore when he cometh into the World, he ſaith, Sacrifice and Offering thou wouldeſt not, but a Body haſt thou prepared me (or thou haſt fitted me, ſaith the Margin.) In Burnt-offerings and Sacrifices for Sin thou haſt had no pleaſure. Then ſaid I, lo, I come, to do thy Will, O God. In this Paſſage (which is deſign'd to ſhew, that God hath rejected the legal Sacrifices becauſe of their great Imperfection and Infirmity, and hath choſen the one Offering of Chriſt; and that Chriſtians are expiated or ſanctified through the Offering of the Body of Jeſus Chriſt once for all V. 10.) The Divine Author citeth the words of the Pſalmiſt, which he ſuppoſeth, to be ſpoken by Chriſt at his coming into the World: But he citeth them not according to the Hebrew; for according to the Hebrew they are thus tranſlated. Sacrifice and Offering thou didſt not deſire, mine Ears haſt thou opened, or bored. Exod. 21. 6. But this opening or boring the Ear is in the general Nature of it a preparing the Body for Service and Obedience, and therefore reſpecting only the general Nature of it the Pſalmiſt's Words may be thus rendred σῶμα δὲ κατηρτίσω μοι, a Body haſt thou prepared me (or fitted me) ſo far the Divine Author hath rendred the Pſalmiſt's Words according to the Hebrew. Some Learned Men are of Opinion, that he hath rendred the Pſalmiſt's Words according to the Septuagint, and that anciently the Septuagint's Tranſlation was as it is now. (y) Others are of Opinion, that he hath not rendred the Pſalmiſt's Words according to the Septuagint, and that anciently the Septuagint's Tranſlation ran thus; ὠτία κατηρτίζω μοι. thou haſt prepared or perfected to me Ears. According to this latter Opinion the Septuagints Verſion of the Pſalmiſts Words is an Interpretation of the Hebrew underſtood in a ſtrict Notion, and ſuch as the Divine Author doth not cite it. According to the former Opinion the Septuagint's Verſion of the Pſalmiſts words is an Interpretation of the Hebrew underſtood only in a large general Notion (the opening or boring the Ear being conſider'd as only a preparing the Body for Service and Obedience) and as ſuch the Divine Author doth cite it. He citeth this Interpretation (or ſort of Interpretation) of the Hebrew, which muſt be conſider'd both as the Speech of David, and (according to this Divine Author) as the Speech of Chriſt. As it is the Speech of David, it is of this Senſe; mine Ears haſt thou opened, that I might yield Obedience; for that is it, which thou requireſt. As it is the Speech of Chriſt, it is of this meaning; a Body haſt thou prepared me, that I might be obedient unto death; for that is it, which thou requireſt. If our Saviour ſhould ſpeak theſe Words before his entrance into the Body, they would then be expreſſive of his Incarnation: But he may be ſuppos'd, to ſpeak them after his entrance into the Body as congruouſly as before it; and therefore we cannot pronounce touching this Paſſage of the Author to the Hebrews, that it is certainly expreſſive of his Incarnation. The Words of another Divine Author are more certainly expreſſive of it. 1 Joh. 4. 2, 3. Every Spirit that confeſſeth, that Jeſus Chriſt is come in the Fleſh, is of God: And every Spirit that confeſſeth not, that Jeſus Chriſt is come in the Fleſh, is not of God. For theſe words are plainly levell'd againſt the ancient Δοκηταὶ, and Phantaſiaſtæ (who were Gnoſticks;) and ſeeing their Hereſie conſiſted in aſſerting only a fictitious and phantaſtick Incarnation of our Saviour, therefore the Words of this Apoſtle in oppoſition to them muſt be ſuppos'd, to mean and aſſert the real Incarnation of our Saviour (z) who was truly born, did truly eat and drink, truly ſuffer'd perſecution under Pontius Pilate, was truly crucified and was dead, celeſtials, terreſtrials, and ſub-terreſtrials beholding him. (a) What is ſo direfully pernicious, as that the Truth of the Incarnation of Chriſt being deny'd, to deſire to deſtroy all hope of the Salvation of Men? Our Saviour's days of Miniſtery were the days of his Fleſh, he was then real Humane Fleſh, and he was ſuch conſequently upon his having been with God and receiving his Doctrine from him, his being ſent from God, his coming down from Heaven, his coming forth from the Father and coming into the World; therefore his Incarnation is implicitly (yet clearly enough) atteſted by all thoſe innumerable places of the divineſt Evangeliſt, which ſpeak of our Saviour's having been with God and receiving his Doctrine from him, of his being ſent from God, of his coming down from Heaven, and of his coming forth from the Father and coming into the World.

(y) Grot. Not. in Heb. 10. 5. Dr. Ham. on Pſal. 40. Not. d.

IV. But in one place more eſpecially the Divine Evangeliſt concerneth himſelf moſt expreſly to atteſt the Article of our Saviour's Incarnation. Joh. 1. 14. The Word was made Fleſh and dwelt among us (and we beheld his Glory, the Glory as of the only Begotten of the Father) full of Grace and Truth. The Evangeliſt had before told us, that the Word was with God and was God, and then (in his State of imperial perſonal Deiformity) he was not Fleſh. But now he telleth us ϗ ὁ λόγος σὰρξ ἐγένετο, which words muſt ſignifie, that he was made or became Fleſh (which he was not in the State before mentioned) and therefore ἐγένετο, here doth not ſignifie Fuit, as the Followers of Socinus would have it, but was made or became; for he that in the pre-exiſtent State was not Fleſh, could not now be ſuch without being made or becoming ſuch, and muſt be ſaid, to be made or become ſuch. The Verb ἐγένετο, therefore is perverted from its genuine Signification in this place by the Socinian Interpreters, who alſo moſt enormouſly pervert the ſignification of the Noun Subſtantive σὰρξ, (Fleſh) when they ſuppoſe it to ſignifie Meanneſs and Infirmity. For in proper Grammatical ſignification Fleſh doth not ſignifie Meanneſs and Infirmity, but that ſubſtance ſo called, which is mean and infirm. All Fleſh is Graſs, Meanneſs and Infirmity are its Properties. But as the Name of Graſs or Corn ſignifieth that which is the Nature and Subſtance of Graſs or Corn: So (in the firſt inſtant) Fleſh ſignifieth that which is the Nature and Subſtance of Fleſh (for Fleſh is a Subſtance, not an Accident) and therefore is true real Fleſh. For quod non eſt verè aurum, non eſt aurum, and that which is not true real Fleſh, is not Fleſh. Our Divine Evangeliſt therefore (as we have ſeen) concerneth himſelf to aſſert againſt the Δοκηταὶ & φαντασιασταὶ, that Jeſus Chriſt is come in true real Fleſh; and accordingly his Senſe muſt be underſtood in the beginning of his Goſpel, that the Divine (Divine Imperial) Word was made or became the real Subſtance of Fleſh. From whence it followeth that Chriſt ſuffered for us in the Fleſh, was put to Death in the Fleſh, aboliſh'd in his Fleſh the enmity, reconciled us in the Body of his Fleſh through death, and that God ſent his Son (not in the likeneſs of Fleſh, but) in the likeneſs of ſinful Fleſh. If we ask therefore what kind of Fleſh it was that the Divine Word became (for all Fleſh is not the ſame Fleſh: But there is one kind of Fleſh of Men, another Fleſh of Beaſts, another of Fiſhes, another of Birds) the anſwer is, It was true real Humane Fleſh with all its eſſential Ingredients, natural Appetites, Affections and Paſſions, which was alike viſible and tangible as ours, alike needed and received Suſtenance, was alike tender and ſenſible, infirm, paſſible and mortal; and he was made like unto us in all things Sin only excepted. (b) That the Word might raiſe us to Divine Majeſty, he ſhew'd himſelf in our weak Humane Nature. God was manifeſt in the Fleſh. For Fleſh conſignifieth Infirmity and Meanneſs of State. To which alſo the Name of the Son of Man referreth.

There is not any Sentence of Holy Scripture, that is and hath been celebrated at an higher rate in the Church than this one, Verbum Caro factum eſt. (c) The Devotioniſts will not read or pronounce it without Genuflexion and Adoration, looking upon it as humanæ ſalutis ſumma, the ſummary of Man's Salvation. The Eccleſiaſtic Legendaries celebrate it (d) for a mighty ſuppoſed Efficacy that is in it, to make the Devils tremble, to cure Demoniacks, to drive away the Devil and to make him flie; of which mighty Efficacy they tell ſeveral inſtances. The Polemical Divines celebrate it (e) as the great Effatum or Propoſition (quo uno tota de Incarnatione rectè ſentiendi ac loquendi regula & Diſciplina continetur) wherein the whole Rule and Diſcipline both of thinking and ſpeaking aright touching the Incarnation is contain'd. It muſt be ſuppos'd therefore, not only to notice the miraculous Fact of our Saviour's Incarnation, but the kind or manner of it, which is alſo illuſtriouſly notic'd by that Apoſtolical Maxim God was manifeſt in the Fleſh, as will appear in the ſequel of this Diſcourſe.

V. For we muſt now proceed to conſider, that there are two oppoſite Explications of the Incarnation (and conſequently two oppoſite kinds of Incarnation) the one is the Scholaſtic Trinitarian Incarnation, the other is our own, which we muſt call the Chriſtian Trinitarian Incarnation. For according to the Chriſtian Trinitarian's Hypotheſis the Incarnation of the Son of God is The σάρκωσις of his Humane Divine Perſon upon his undertaking the Meſſias-ſhip in Heaven. By the Conſummation of his generative Oeconomy in his primary Capacity he was with God in his State of Imperial-perſonal Deiformity; but upon the commencing of his miſſive Oeconomy (his undertaking the Meſſias-ſhip) he neceſſarily laid aſide his Imperial-perſonal Deiformity, and became Humane Fleſh, taking upon him (f) abjectam illam ac imbecillam hominis naturam ac conditionem, that abject and weak Nature and Condition of Man (Humane Fleſh) which was ſo far an ἐνανθρώπησις, Inhumanation, or becoming Man. But according to the Scholaſtick Trinitarians the Incarnation of the Son of God is his becoming Man by a temporal Generation, ſo aſſuming Humane Nature into the Unity of his Perſon by a real Conjunction and Union thereof to his Divine Nature in a manner

(z) Ignat. Ep. ad Trall. p. 51.

(a) Quid tam exitiabile, quàm negata veritate incarnationis Chriſti, omnem ſpem ſalutis humane velle diſſolvere? Leo Ep. o. ad Fl.

(b) Ut Λόγος nos homines ad divinam majeſtatem eveheret, ipſe in imbecilla hac noſtra humana natura ſe oſtendit. Paulus 1 Tim. 3. 16. Θεὸς ἐφανερώθη ἐν σαρκί. Nam σὰρξ infirmitatem & humilem ſtatum conſignificat. Sic Pſal. 56. 4. & 78. 39. & alibi. Confer. Phil. 2. 6. 2 Cor. 8. 9. Eodem ſpectat nomen Filii hominis. Grot. Not. in Joh. 1. 14.

(c) Stephan. Paris Verbum caro factum eſt fol. 39.

(d) Lud. de Sax. vit. J. Chriſt. c. 18.

(e) Petav. T. 4. l. 9. c. 8. s. 6.

(f) Beza in Phil. 2. 7.

incomprehenſible and ineffable. (g) Carnem fieri ſive incarnari, nihil aliud eſt quàm gigni, hoc eſt, ſecunda generatione hominem fieri, to be made Fleſh or incarnated, is nothing elſe but to be generated, that is, by a ſecond Generation to be made Man. This Scholaſtic Incarnation in ſeveral reſpects and in great degree agreeth with the Chriſtian Trinitarian Incarnation: But this Agreement between them is complicated with many Differences and Diſagreements, and therefore they muſt be called diſſonant Accounts of of it. But theſe diſſonant Accounts of the Incarnation agree touching the general Nature of it, that it was ἡ ἔνσαρκος οἰκονομία, the Oeconomy of the Son of God in Fleſh, οἰκονομία, contradiſtinct to θεολογία, it being a συγκατάβασις, demiſſion of himſelf from the height of Majeſty to our Meanneſs. His Exinanition, πρόσληψις τῆς σαρκός, his taking on him the indument of Fleſh; for ſo he is ſaid by the Fathers ἐνδύσασθαι τὴν σάρκα, to have put on Humane Fleſh, but ſo that it was more than an indument. Theſe diſſonant Accounts of the Incarnation of the Son of God agree alſo touching the eminency of his Character, that his appearance in Fleſh was no leſs than a θεοφάνεια, according to that of S. Auſtin, Deus, quid glorioſius? Caro, quid vilius? Deus in Carne quid mirabilius? Theſe diſſonant Accounts of his Incarnation agree alſo touching the Truth and Reality of his Human Fleſh (h) whereas according to the Maxims of all Hereticks in the time of Irenæus he was (ſine carne & impaſſibilis) without fleſh and impaſſible. But the Chriſtians believ'd, that ἀληθῶς ἀνέλαβε σῶμα, ὁ λόγος γὰρ σὰρξ ἐγένετο, he really aſſumed an Humane Body, for the Word was made Fleſh. Theſe diſſonant Accounts agree alſo touching his intire unmutilated Humanity (i) One Chriſt from the time of his Incarnation conſiſteth of the Divinity, the Fleſh and the Soul. Theſe diſſonanant Accounts therefore agree touching the duplicity of his Character, that he was θεάνθρωπος, his one Perſon being both God and Man, both diſcard a Neſtorian duplicity of Perſons in Chriſt, and an Eutychian confuſion of the two Natures (Divine and Humane) and thoſe fooliſh impious Conceits, which are or have been touching the converting and changing the Divinity into Fleſh, or the Fleſh into the Divinity. The Word is ſaid to be made Fleſh, not to expreſs any ſuch abſurd Converſion or Mutation, but to ſignifie an agreeable Incarnation of a Divine Perſon, which conſiſteth in taking on him Humane Fleſh, ſo as to take it into the Unity of his Perſon (k) τὸ σεσαρκῶσθαι γὰρ, ἡνῶσθαι ἐστι σαρκί, for to be incarnated, is to be united unto Fleſh. Theſe diſſonant Accounts therefore agree, that in the Son of God incarnate there is an Unition of the Divine and Humane Nature, that theſe Natures are united ἀσυγχύτως, without Confuſion, ἀτρέπτως, without Converſion or Tranſmutation of the one into the other, ἀδιαιρέτως, without Diviſion (as not conſtituting two Perſons) ἀχωρίστως, without Separation for ever. They agree alſo, that although the Humane Nature is intire and perfect in the Son of God incarnate, yet he ſubſiſteth not in the Quality of an Humane but a Divine Perſon; that as the Word was made Fleſh, ſo the Fleſh was made the Word, and that the Properties of God are rightly attributed to him that is Man, and the Properties of Man are rightly attributed to him that is God, which ſort of Predication is called the mutual communication of Properties. Laſtly, Theſe diſſonant Accounts agree touching the final Cauſe and Reaſon of the Incarnation of the Son of God, which was to be a Saviour-king to the World of Sinners. Great and many are the Agreements between theſe diſſonant Accounts of our Saviour's Incarnation, which yet are very diſſonant Accounts of it, and which of them is the beſt and trueſt Hypotheſis, will appear by remarking the Diſagreements that are between them and making a Judgment of them.

SECTION I.

The Firſt Diſagreement.

I. THESE diſſonant Accounts diſagree in their Interpretation of the Apoſtle's Text (whence much of their Diſſonance touching the Incarnation appeareth) Phil. 2. 5, 6, 7, 8. Let this mind be in you, which was alſo in Chriſt Jeſus; who being in the form of God, thought it not robbery to be equal with God: But made himſelf of no Reputation, and took upon him the form of a Servant, and was made in the likeneſs of Men. And being found in faſhion as a Man, he humbled himſelf and became obedient unto Death. The Scholaſtic Theology ſuppoſeth, that this deiform ſelf-humbling Perſon ſpoken of by the Apoſtle is the ſecond Perſon of the Scholaſtic Trinity (the Abſtract Logos) whoſe marvellous Humiliation was the Scholaſtic Incarnation: But the Apoſtle's Speech is touching the Perſon of Chriſt Jeſus, and an Abſtract Logos is not the Perſon of Chriſt Jeſus, nor is this Name competible thereto; therefore this deiform ſelf-humbling Perſon whom the Apoſtle ſpeaketh of, is not an Abſtract Logos, but the Humane-divine Perſon of the Meſſiah. Of this Opinion are (l) S. Ambroſe, Eraſmus, Vorſtius, Piſcator, Luther and the Lutheran Divines generally, ſo Grotius alſo (m) and a Divine of our own interpret the Apoſtle. He exhorteth Chriſtians to a Conformity to Chriſt Jeſus, who is their Pattern and great Exemplar, and this is uſual in the New Teſtament: But an Abſtract Logos is not the great Exemplar of Chriſtians, nor are they ever throughout the New Teſtament exhorted to be conformable thereto. This they are not exhorted to, in that place which ſome alledge, 2 Cor. 8. 9. (where Chriſt is ſaid to have been rich, yet for our ſakes he became poor:) But Chriſt's richneſs and his (exterior) Deiformity are the ſame thing, and the one is no more meant of an Abſtract Logos than the other. The Apoſtle exhorteth Chriſtians, to be like minded, as Chriſt Jeſus was, which Phraſe is not agreeable to an Abſtract Logos (n) φρονεῖν, is not rightly us'd but touching a Man. And as an Abſtract Logos is no Chriſtian Pattern, ſo he can be no Pattern of Humility (as the Apoſtle repreſenteth Chriſt Jeſus) for wiſe Men not without Reaſon make doubt, whether the Virtue of Humility be competible to the eternal Almighty God, whoſe Being is a certain Eſtate of Honour and Dignity, and if he is not duly honour'd and glorified, he is undeify'd. Piety is the buſineſs of giving him Honour and Glory, and Sin is therefore exceeding ſinful, becauſe it is a bereaving him of his Honour and Glory, a pouring contempt and contumely upon him. He muſt have the Glory of all his Excellencies and Perfections, and the proper Honour and Glory which is due unto his Godhead, he cannot part with or communicate. His Honour and Glory muſt be higheſt in our eſteem and deſires, himſelf deſigneth it as the ultimate end of all things, Eph. 1. 6, 12. He could not be God, if he did ſuffer his Name to be polluted, or not deſign, that it ſhould be declared throughout all the Earth, and that all the Earth ſhould be filled with his Glory. It cannot be therefore, it may not be, that the ſecond Perſon of the Scholaſtic Trinity ſhould empty himſelf and make himſelf of no Reputation, or be a pattern of Humility, as the Chriſt of God is. (o) Humilis veni, humilitatem docere veni, magiſter humilitatis veni, ſaith Chriſt our Lord. He is the great Maſter of Humility, and the ſtupendious Inſtance thereof in laying aſide his (exteriour) Deiformity and taking upon him the form of a Servant, which is eaſily intelligible, if underſtood of the Humane-divine Perſon of Chriſt. (p) But it hath rack'd many Mens minds to conceive, how an Exinanition of himſelf (an Humiliation) can belong to the eternal and immutable God by becoming Man. His Exinanition is as hard to conceive either pious or poſſible, as (q) τὸν μέγαν Θεὸν δουλεύσειν, ἢ νοσήσειν, ἢ τεθνήξεσθαι, that the great God ſhall undergo Servitude, or be ſick, or ſhall die, which Origen accounteth things impoſſible. The Humiliation and Exinanition which the Apoſtle ſpeaketh of, neceſſarily belong to that Humane-divine Perſon, to whom the obedience unto death and the exaltation which he ſpeaketh of, do belong. And to whom do theſe belong but only to the complex Perſon of Chriſt Jeſus? They are incompetible to an Abſtract Logos, nor can this Mind (which the Apoſtle ſpeaketh of) be ſaid, to have been in Chriſt Jeſus; for the Abſtract Logos was not Chriſt Jeſus, nor in Chriſt Jeſus, but only (according to the Scholaſtic Theology) had a mind to become Chriſt Jeſus. We may therefore confute the Scholaſtic Interpretation of this place (which is an Hiſtory of Chriſt) by this following Argument, which is plainly demonſtrative, and of which we muſt ſay, that all the Scholaſtic Divines in Chriſtendom cannot fairly anſwer it.

(g) Petav. T. 4. l. 6. c. 7. S. 4.

(h) Ibid. l. 4. c. 2. S. 7.

(i) Unus ab Incarnationis tempore Chriſtus ex divinitate, carne & anima conſtat. Petav. Ibid. S. 8.

(k) Ibid. S. 9.

(l) Vorſt. in loc.

(m) Mr. Thorndic Epil. B. c. 14. in fine.

(n) Vorſt. in loc.

> That which was in the Abſtract Logos conſider'd in the Hiſtory as it was ſuch, cannot be ſaid in the Hiſtory, to have been in Chriſt Jeſus:
>
> But the Mind which the Apoſtle ſpeaketh of, is that which was in the Abſtract Logos conſider'd in the Hiſtory as it was ſuch (according to the Scholaſtic Interpretation) Ergo.
>
> According to the Scholaſtic Interpretation, it ought have been ſaid, Let that Mind be in you, which was not in Chriſt Jeſus.

From this Argument plainly demonſtrative we infer, that the voluntary Humiliation of our Saviour (which was an Inhumanation) is by the Apoſtle attributed, not to an Abſtract Logos (or the Second Perſon in the Scholaſtic Trinity) but to his Humane-divine Perſon. And that antecedently to his voluntary Humiliation and Inhumanation his Humane-divine Perſon was in the Form of God. This is the Doctrine of the New Teſtament touching our Saviour, thus far the Senſe of it is fix'd and determin'd; and this Doctrine of it we will call one demonſtrated Rule for its Interpretation.

II. According to the Scholaſticks Interpretation To be in the form of God, ſignifieth, to be (r) in eſſentiâ, in the Scholaſtic Divine Eſſence. (s) As the Abſtract Son of God having aſſum'd our Nature did ſubſiſt in the real Eſſence of a Man and of a Servant: So antecedently thereto de did ſubſiſt in the (Scholaſtic) Eſſence and real Being of God. So the Abſtract Son of God is repreſented in the Scholaſtic Trinity, and ſo the Apoſtle's words are diſtorted to a School-philoſophic Senſe, which is quite alien from their ſignification. For the form of God neceſſarily ſignifieth Deiformity: but the Scholaſtic Divine Eſſence is neither the interiour nor exteriour Deiformity celebrated in Chriſtianity and the New Teſtament, nor do the holy Writers, when they ſpeak of being formed, conformed, transformed, mean any ſuch thing as a Scholaſtic Eſſence; this therefore cannot be the meaning of the form of God. But as the Divine Author to the Hebrews contemplateth the Son of God as in his Divine Vital Eſſence the brightneſs of his Father's Glory, and in his Imperial Eſtate (in conſort with God) upholding all things by the word of his power: So the Apoſtle to the Philippians contemplateth Chriſt as in Nature and State an Imperial Deiform Perſon, which was hugely remote from and oppoſite to his being in the form of a Servant and in the likeneſs of Men.

His taking upon him the form of a Servant is in the Scholaſtic Theology ſuppos'd, to ſignifie The Abſtract Son's aſſuming the Humane Nature, or as ſome ſay, a created Nature (which is the ſame thing) and the words ſo interpreted expreſs the Scholaſtic Incarnation, that he was made Man. But it cannot be ſuppos'd, that the Apoſtle's words are of any ſuch ſignification. For if this had been the Apoſtle's Senſe, he would have ſaid, that he took upon him the form of a Man; for he knew very well, that there is great difference between a Man and a Servant. If he had ſaid, that Chriſt took upon him the form of a Lord, it had not been hard to underſtand his Senſe; and it is not more difficult, to underſtand his Senſe, when he ſaith, that Chriſt took upon him the form of a Servant; for as the dominant eſtate and condition conſtituteth a Lord, ſo the ſervient and ſervile eſtate and condition conſtituteth a Servant. If Chriſt had in all reſpects taken upon him the form of a Servant, he muſt have abdicated his being the Lord: but he took it upon him only ſo far and in ſuch ſeveral reſpects, as ſtill to continue (in the main) The Lord; as the Heir while a Child in ſeveral reſpects differeth nothing from a Servant, and yet he is Lord of all. So Chriſt the Lord took upon him the form of a Servant, which the Apoſtle oppoſeth to his imperial perſonal Deiformity. This in ſome degree and ſeveral reſpects he relinquiſh'd, when he took upon him the form of a Servant; and conſequently, when he reſum'd his imperial perſonal Deiformity, he relinquiſh'd the form of a Servant, which he had aſſum'd. It is the greateſt of extravagancies, to ſuppoſe, that in his preſent ſtate of Exaltation he ſtill retaineth the form of a Servant: but the Humane Nature or a Created Nature he ſtill retaineth and will retain for ever; therefore his taking upon him the form of a Servant doth not ſignifie his aſſuming the Humane Nature or the Scholaſtic Incarnation.

III. Our Saviour's being made in the likeneſs of Men is ſuppos'd, to ſignifie a ſubſtantial ſimilitude, that he had the Philoſophic Eſſence of a Man, was true Man, and ὁμοούσιος, conſubſtantial unto us; as on the contrary, the Marcionites and Manichees inferr'd from theſe words, that Chriſt was not truly a Man, but κατὰ δόκησιν ϗ φαντασίαν, had

(o) S. Aug. Tr. 25. in Joan.

(p) Dr. More Myſt. of Godlin. B. 1. c. 8.

(q) Orig. c. Celſ. l. 7. p. 341.

(r) Petav. de Trin. l. 4. c. 11. S. 5.

(s) Idem T. l. 7. c. 8.

Heb. 1. 3.

only the likeneſs of a Man. They perverted the words to an impious Senſe, and the Scholaſtic Theology perverteth them from their genuine Senſe. For ſuppoſe, I ſhould tell my Reader, that Chriſt is now come down from Heaven, and having exteriourly laid aſide his Deiformity is made in the likeneſs of Men. Every one would underſtand, that the ſenſe and intendment of this Story is not to ſay, that Chriſt is truly and ſubſtantially Man, but that he is made in the likeneſs of Men in this reſpect, as being now exteriourly without his Deiformity, and ſubjected to the Frailties of Humane Bodies, as we Men are, that are without (exteriour) Deiformity. So the Apoſtle muſt be underſtood; for he is not aſſerting the truth of our Saviour's Humanity, nor are his words accommodate thereto: but he is deſcribing our Saviour's deep Humiliation and Exinanition, which conſiſted in this; he exteriourly laid aſide his Deiformity, and was made (or became) in the likeneſs of Men, and was found in Scheme, Faſhion (external make or habit) as a Man, being exteriourly without his Deiformity, and ſubjected to the Bodily Infirmities, as we Men are, that are exteriourly deſtitute of Deiformity. The terms which the Apoſtle uſeth, lively deſcribe a deep Humiliation of our Saviour, but not the Scholaſtic Incarnation; for σχῆμα can ſignifie nothing more than external guiſe, and to ſay, that Chriſt was found in external guiſe as a Man, and that he became in the likeneſs of Men, is this an accommodate and ſufficient way of expreſſing his aſſumption of the ſubſtantial verity of the Humane Nature and the Philoſpophic Eſſence of Man? At firſt ſight the terms ὁμοίωμα, likeneſs, and σχῆμα, faſhion, ſeem to favour the ancient Phantaſiaſtæ, of themſelves they are terms of abatement and diminution, or rather of oppoſition to the ſubſtantial verity of the Humane Nature. And although it appeareth, that the Apoſtle doth not uſe them to any ſuch purpoſe, yet that is becauſe he is deſcribing another ſort of Humiliation than the Scholaſtic Incarnation, of which they are far from being ſufficiently expreſſive. Why then did the Apoſtle chuſe, to make uſe of ſuch terms as theſe inſtead of others, that are properly, plainly and fully expreſſive of the Scholaſtic Incarnation? it could not be to ill purpoſe, and was it to no purpoſe? Doth not his uſe of them plainly argue, that he is deſcribing ſuch an Humiliation, which is not an aſſuming the Humane Nature at the rate of the Scholaſtic Incarnation, but in a far leſſer degree? Our Saviour ſtill retaineth the real Philoſophic Eſſence of Man: but the form of a Servant, the being made in the likeneſs of Men (that are without Deiformity) and the being found in faſhion as a Man, were remov'd, when our Saviour was raiſed to his Deiformity; therefore thoſe expreſſions do not ſignifie the Philoſophic Eſſence of Man; and conſequently the Form of God doth not ſignifie the Philoſophic (or Scholaſtic) Eſſence of God. Some ſay, that theſe words of the Apoſtle he was made in the likeneſs of Men, are a moſt exact and critical form of Speech, to ſignifie, that though Chriſt was true and real Man, he was not meer Man, but a more Divine Perſon united to Humane Nature. But if we ſhould ſay of the Sacramental Elements, they are made in the likeneſs of Bread and Wine, would this be a moſt exact and critical form of Speech, to ſignifie, that though they are true and real Bread and Wine, they are not meer Bread and Wine, but a more Divine Subſtance united to the Material Elements?

We have now interpreted this illuſtrious Text againſt the Scholaſtic Theology (as before we interpreted it againſt the Anti-Trinitarians:) but we may not diſmiſs it without conſidering thoſe many Expoſitors, who rightly ſuppoſe, that it is the complex Perſon of Chriſt, who is here ſaid, to have been in the form of God: but they are of Opinion, that he was ſo in the days of his Meſſias-ſhip here on Earth, and that this was then his Humiliation; he did not oſtentate his being in the form of God, but in great degree concealed it, took upon him the form of a Servant, became in the likeneſs of Men, and was found in faſhion as a Man. This Interpretation taketh no notice of our Saviour's being in the form of God antecedently to his Meſſias-ſhip on Earth, and therefore it is confuted by thoſe innumerable Texts, which ſpeak of his being with God, of his miſſion from being with God, of his coming down from Heaven, and ſo coming into the World in his Meſſias-ſhip; for certainly he was in the form of God, when he was with God in his Heavenly Kingdom. This Interpretation alſo doth not attribute to the Son of God his exteriour Deiformity in the Senſe of the New Teſtament (which the form of God neceſſarily ſignifieth) it contradicteth the Scriptural Explication of the form of God (the brightneſs of his Glory, Heb. 1. 2.) it maketh the Exteriour Deiformity competible to this Earthly State of Life (repugnantly to the Scripture and the nature of things;) it minorateth the form of God at a great rate, which it ought to magnifie, and at the ſame rate it minorateth the ſtupendious Humiliation of the Son of God (for if it was only a receding from that Sublimity, which he might have aſſum'd to himſelf on Earth, it was no ſtupendious Humiliation:) And according to this Interpretation we muſt thus abſurdly deſcribe the proceſs of our Saviour's Humiliation; Being in the form of God, yet being a Man on Earth, he was made in the likeneſs of Men, and was found in faſhion as a Man.

IV. With this illuſtrious Text we will combine another (above-mention'd) that ſpeaketh the ſame Senſe, and giveth the ſame account of our Saviour's Incarnation, 2 Cor. 8. 9. Ye know the Grace of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt; that though he was rich, yet for your ſakes he became poor, that ye through his poverty might be rich. All Trinitarians (Fathers, Councils, Schoolmen, Divines) agree, that this Text muſt be underſtood of the Incarnation, nor can it be tolerably interpreted otherwiſe. And ſuppoſing it to be meant of the Incarnation, the Apoſtle plainly affirmeth, that it was not an Abſtract Logos (or the ſecond Perſon in the Scholaſtic Trinity) but the Perſon of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt that was incarnate. The Incarnation alſo is ſaid to be the Grace of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt; and it is well known, that amongſt Chriſtians The Grace of Chriſt ſignifieth, not the Grace of any Abſtract Logos or Verbum, but the Grace of the Mediatory Sovereign in the Chriſtian Religion. And in conſort with the Text to the Philippians it is the Chriſtians Pattern and Exemplar that is here repreſented as the Perſon that was incarnate: which is not an Abſtract Logos, but the Perſon of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, who is the Archetype, according to which they muſt be formed, and to whom they muſt be conformed. They are not his Servants, nor of his Kind and Cognation, nor have they learned Chriſt, nor do they really own him, love, eſteem and admire him, if they are not his followers in his Sanctity and in his Sufferings. Their being Chriſtians conſiſteth in ſymbolizing with him (as the being Platoniſts conſiſteth in ſymbolizing with Plato) their Honour, Excellency and Perfection conſiſteth in their aſſimilation and conformity to him, who is the mirrour of all Chriſtian and Divine Perfection, a Pattern in abſolute Perfection and of the whole of a Chriſtian (of his dying, riſing, reigning) a Pattern of all Divine Graces and Duties accommodate to all Perſons, their Captain and Leader, their Prince and Sovereign (to whoſe Garb and Demeanour Subjects uſually conform themſelves) rais'd up, ordained and appointed by God, to be (as S. Cyprian ſpeaketh) Doctor vitæ noſtræ & Dux religionis (and accordingly his whole Life diſciplina morum fuit) and to whom they are deſign'd, to be conform'd, that what he is by Nature, they might be by Grace. Great and many are their Obligations, to be Chriſt-like in Mind and Life, in Nature and Practice (his Example is the Law of their Religion) but they are not oblig'd, to have any ſuch regard for an Abſtract Logos or Verbum; no ſuch Metaphyſical Idea is their Shepherd and Captain (whom they muſt follow) their Lord and Maſter (from whom they muſt not be diſagreeable and diſſentaneous;) No ſuch Scholaſtic Verbum mentis or Platonic Idea is a Perſon rais'd up by God, to be the Pattern of their Mind and Life, nor are they predeſtinated to a conformity thereto. If this Metaphyſical Being was the Pattern of our Mind and Life, a principal Branch of our conformity thereto muſt be a Branch of Platoniſm, (t) which is to make our Mind a mundus intellectualis, that ſo it may reſemble this Abſtract Logos or Verbum, (u) in which as in a moſt pure Glaſs the Species of all things ſhine, the form and exemplar of all producibles, according to which the ſupreme Opificer and Architect (as a terrene Artificer by impreſſed Art) operateth all things. If we ſuppoſe this Abſtract Logos or Verbum to become incarnate, and ſuppoſe this Incarnation to be his Humiliation, yet this Incarnation and Humiliation cannot be the Fact or Grace of Chriſt Jeſus; for Chriſt Jeſus (according to the Scholaſtic Theology) did not exiſt antecendently to this Incarnation, but emerg'd into Exiſtence by it, and was an effect and product thereof. With what tolerable congruity and propriety can it be ſaid, that the Perſon of Chriſt Jeſus was rich and became poor, becauſe an Abſtract Logos by laying aſide his Riches and becoming Poor (which is impoſſible) produc'd into exiſtence Chriſt Jeſus? And whereas the Scholaſtic Divines account our Saviour's Nazaretic Conception and Bethlehemitical Nativity one principal part of Chriſt's Humiliation, we muſt ask them, from what part of the Bible they have learn'd this their Dogma? And how it is poſſible, that the Conception and Nativity of Chriſt, whereby his Perſon was produc'd into Exiſtence, ſhould be his voluntary act of Humiliation? for ſo his Perſon muſt be exiſtent and operative before it was exiſtent. If we will allow the Apoſtle, to ſpeak properly, congruouſly, intelligibly, and as an honeſt meaning Man would ſpeak, we muſt ſuppoſe him, to conſider the Perſon of Chriſt Jeſus (that complex Perſon) as a Divine Prince and Imperial Perſon, that by his generative œconomy was rich and in Deiformity (according to our demonſtrated rule of interpreting the New Teſtament) but by his miſſive œconomy, his marvellous voluntary Humiliation and wondrous ſelf-denying ſelf-humbling Incarnation became poor, not tranſcending Servi-formity, diveſting himſelf of his Heavenly Glory and of all outward things that are great in the World, leaving Heaven for Earth, Riches for Poverty, Glory for Meanneſs and Diſgrace.

(t) Ficin. in Plotin. En. 1. l. 2. c. 4.

(u) In quo velut in ſpeculo mundiſſimo rerum omnium ſpecies relucent, producibilium omnium forma & exemplar, juxta quod ſummus ille rerum omnium opifex & Architector induſtrius velut terrenus quidam artifex ex impreſſa arte, univerſa operatur. Stephan. Paris Verbum caro factum eſt. fol. 11.

Section II.

The Second Diſagreement.

I. These diſſonant Accounts agree in conjoyning our Saviour's Incarnation and Manifeſtation, but they differ about his Manifeſtation and conſequently about the time of his Incarnation. God was manifeſted in the Fleſh (ſaith the Apoſtle) and this was his Incarnation, which therefore was connex'd with his Manifeſtation. Accordingly the Incarnation is called by the Fathers, (w) φανέρωσις, ἐπιφάνεια, θεοφάνεια, which ſpeaketh it connex'd with our Saviour's Manifeſtation, and that it is really one and the ſame thing with it, 1 Joh. 1. 2. The Life was manifeſted, nempe in aſſumpta carne, ſay Expoſitors. That Eternal Life which was with the Father, was manifeſted unto us, per incarnationem, ſay they. (x) Apparuit nobis viſibiliter per corpus aſſumptum. So when this Apoſtle ſaith, 1 Joh. 3. 5. Ye know, that he was manifeſted, Expoſitors make this expoſitory addition, in aſſumpta carne. This therefore ought to be counted a ſelf-evident maxim amongſt Chriſtians, the manifeſtation of the Word of Life (the Son of God) was by his aſſumed Fleſh, by his Incarnation, ſo that his Incarnation was his Manifeſtation, the ſame with his manifeſtation in the Fleſh. The Apoſtle ſaith, The Life (the word of Life) was manifeſted, and his Senſe is (y) manifeſtata eſt ipſa vita in carne; therefore he ſpeaketh of the Incarnation, and this is his definitive Notion of it, Manifeſtatio vitæ (verbi vitæ) in carne. Throughout the contexture of his Diſcourſe it is viſible, that he ſpeaketh of the manifeſtation of the Word of Life in the Fleſh: For he ſaith, That which we have heard. (z) Joannes iſte, cæteri quoque Apoſtoli cum Chriſto in terris converſantes, audierunt hoc verbum, non in Deitatis ſuæ natura, ſed in humanitate aſſumpta. The Apoſtle ſaith, That which we have ſeen, (a) vidimus oculis noſtris corporalibus per aſſumptam naturam, ſi quidem verbum hoc caro factum, inter Apoſtolos viſibiliter habitavit, & converſatum eſt The Apoſtle further ſaith, Our Hands have handled the Word of Life. (b) Hoc Verbum incarnatum Apoſtoli tractaverunt, quia ſenſibiliter ipſum tetigerunt, palpaverunt & oſculati ſunt. The ſame Apoſtle ſaith, The Life was manifeſted. (c) Hæc Vita per naturam quam aſſumpſit humanam manifeſtavit ſeipſam, docendo, miracula faciendo, ſuos diſcipulos per totum mundum ad prædicandum mittendo. De qua ſcriptum habetur, vita erat lux hominum, & lux in tenebris lucet. The Apoſtle further ſaith, That Eternal Life which was with the Father, and was manifeſted unto us. (d) Viſibiliter per corpus aſſumptum. (e) Antequam Verbum incarnaretur, æterna vita tàm animæ quàm corporis erat apud Patrem, non erat communicata hominibus: incarnato autem Verbo manifeſtata eſt nobis per Chriſtum. It was ſo manifeſted, that the Apoſtles ſaw with their Eyes and their Hands handled the Word of Life. (f) Et quis eſt, qui manibus tractet verbum, niſi quia verbum caro factum eſt, & habitavit in nobis? The Word of Life was not more viſible

(w) Petav. T. 4. l. 2. c. 1.

(x) Dion. Carthuſ. in loc.

(y) S. Aug. in loc.

(z) Dion. Carthuſ. in loc.

(a) Idem ibid.

(b) Idem ibid.

(c) Idem ibid.

(d) Idem ibid.

(e) Cajetan. in l. c.

(f) S. Aug. in loc.

and palpable to the Apoſtle, then this is viſible and palpable in his Diſcourſe, that he conſidereth in it the Word of Life as manifeſt in the Fleſh, and that this is to conſider him as incarnate; that he conſidereth him in his ſtate of manifeſtation in the Fleſh, and that this is to conſider him in his ſtate of Incarnation, and to conſider him in his ſtate of Incarnation, is to conſider him in this ſtate of Manifeſtation; therefore his Incarnation was not in time antecedent to his Manifeſtation. His Nazaretical Generation or Bethlehemitical Nativity was not his Incarnation, but his Incarnation began, when his publick Miniſtry began; for at that time he became by officiary dignity The Word of Life; was ſent down from Heaven (where he was in his ſtate of Deiformity) and was manifeſted in Humane Fleſh. Are we ſo dull, as not to underſtand the time of his Manifeſtation, who verily was fore-ordained before the Foundation of the World, but was manifeſt in theſe laſt times for us? Expoſitors ſay In carne, and they ſay true: but could he be manifeſted before the time, that he was made manifeſt unto Iſrael? (g) before he was ſent into the World, came into the World, and came a Light into the World? Till this time there were no Apoſtles, to hear, ſee and handle the Word of Life: nor was there any Word of Life by officiary dignity ſuch, that might be heard, ſeen and handled; nor could Eternal Life be manifeſted till this time. Therefore the manifeſtation of the Word of Life, and conſequently his manifeſtation in the Fleſh or his Incarnation, could not be before this time.

II. An acceſſion of clearneſs and certitude will accrue to theſe Reaſonings, if we turn our Eyes from the beginning of S. John's firſt Epiſtle to the beginning of his Goſpel. For if the Senſe of any part of the Bible may be thought clear and certain, this muſt be thought a clear and certain Principle, that S. John in the beginning of his Goſpel overlooketh our Saviour's Generation, and beginneth it with his miſſive œconomy, as that ſignifieth his Miniſtry, and his officiary Dignity, whereby he is The Word of Light and Life. This is ſo bright a Principle, that ſome glimmerings of it cannot but ſhine into the Eyes of every careful and unprejudic'd Reader of the Goſpel; and accordingly a late ingenious Writer of the Harmony of the Evangeliſts ſaith, (h) S. John's Preface about the Divinity of the Logos is an Introduction to our Saviour's Miniſtry, at which he beginneth his Goſpel. Let us ſuppoſe therefore, that he beginneth his Goſpel at our Saviour's Miniſtry, and the conſequence will be this, (i) Filium carnem ſumpſiſſe ad œconomiam implendam, The Son of God took on him Humane Fleſh, to fulfill his œconomy. And the time when he entred upon his Miniſtry or œconomy, this was the time of his Incarnation. For ſeeing the Evangeliſt wholly overlooketh our Saviour's Generation, therefore his celebrated Hiſtorical Maxim Verbum caro factum eſt, cannot belong to our Saviour's generative œconomy, but it neceſſarily ſynchronizeth and is connex'd with his entrance upon his Miniſtry or his miſſive œconomy (as the Word of Light and Life) at which this Evangeliſt beginneth his Hiſtory. And that this is his Senſe, will plainly appear, if we take a view of the whole of his celebrated Hiſtorical Maxim and of the ſeveral parts of it. If we read the whole of it (The Word was made Fleſh and dwelt among us, and we beheld his Glory, full of Grace and Truth) and ask at what time all this was done? The anſwer muſt be this; It was done at the time of our Saviour's Miniſtry (or his œconomy in the Fleſh) and not before; for before that time he did not dwell amongſt the Apoſtles, nor did they ſee his Divine Glory, or the fulneſs of Grace and Truth which is in Chriſt and the Chriſtian Religion. To take a view and make a right Judgment of the ſeveral parts of this celebrated Hiſtorical Maxim, we muſt reflect upon that Account, which a Popiſh Biſhop (expounding his Text Verbum caro factum eſt) hath given of the Benefits of Chriſt incarnate. (k) Coming in Fleſh he gave unto Fleſh Life and Light, Life by the participation of Grace, and Light by the knowledge of the Truth. This Account of the benefits of Chriſt incarnate is (doubtleſs) the true Expoſition of thoſe Names and Titles, which the Evangeliſt hath given to our Saviour, the Light and Life, which denote and ſignifie The Word (which he mentioneth) to be The Word of Light and Life Evangelical. Of this Word of Light and Life the Evangeliſt ſaith, He became Fleſh, and when he became Fleſh, he was by officiary dignity and imploy The Word of Light and Life Evangelical; therefore his Miniſtry began, ſo ſoon as he became Fleſh, and conſequently his Incarnation and Miniſtry ſynchronize. When he became Fleſh The Word of Light and Life was manifeſted, which was not manifeſted, till his Miniſtry commenced; therefore his Incarnation and his Miniſtry ſynchronize. So ſoon as he became Fleſh, he did appear in the World, and he did appear as the Word of Light and Life Evangelical (for ſo the Evangeliſt repreſenteth his appearance;) therefore his Miniſtry and Incarnation ſynchronize. When the Evangeliſt had ſaid, that the Word was made Fleſh, he immediately ſubjoyneth, and dwelt among us, (l) which words are a more plenary explication of his Incarnation. So ſoon therefore as he became Fleſh, he dwelt amongſt the Apoſtles (as the following words ſhew, And we ſaw his Glory:) but he did not dwell amongſt the Apoſtles till the time of his Miniſtry; therefore his Miniſtry and his Incarnation ſynchronize. Theſe three things (according to the Evangeliſt) are immediately connex and conſequent, The Word became Fleſh, dwelt among the Apoſtles, and they ſaw his Glory (there could not be the interval of many Years between the Word's becoming Fleſh and the Apoſtles ſeeing his Glory, as the Scholaſtic Incarnation ſuppoſeth:) but his Glory they did not ſee till the time of his Miniſtry; therefore his Miniſtry and his Incarnation ſynchronize. If he had dwelt among them, long before the time of his Miniſtry, they muſt have ſeen Divine Glories in him long before that time: but the only Divine Glory which the Evangeliſt mentioneth them to have ſeen in the Son of God, was that which they ſaw in the time of his Miniſtry, when they ſaw him full of Grace and Truth as Author of the Chriſtian Religion, which is the Religion of Saving Grace and Truth. Laſtly; As for the Soul to be in Fleſh, and to be in her Miniſtry, (m) is according to the Chaldee Oracles the ſame thing: ſo for the Son of God to become Fleſh and to be in his Miniſtry, is according to our Evangeliſt the very ſame thing.

Secti-

(g) See Dr. Hamm. on Joh. 1. Not. a. Grot. Not. in Joh. 1. 9.

(h) Mr. Whiſton, p. 201.

(i) Petav. T. 4. l. 5. c. 10. S. 12.

(k) In carne adveniens carnem vita & luce donavit, vitam quidem gratiæ participatione, lucem vero veritatis notitia. Stephan. Paris. fol. 22.

(l) Petav. T. 4. l. [illegible] c. 10. S. [illegible]

(m) P. 66.

SECTION III.

The Third Diſagreement.

I. THE Scholaſtic Incarnation ſuppoſeth that Binary of Generations, which this Theology diſtinguiſheth, and (ſo marvellouſly are things of an oppoſite Nature confounded) is the ſame thing with the Scholaſtic Temporal Generation of the Son of God. For this is the Hypotheſis that hath prevailed in the Church, which impoſeth her Scholaſtic Explications as Articles of the Catholic Faith (n) that the only begotten Son of God was again generated of a Virgin, and that for us he ſuſtain'd a Generation. The Word who was incomplex according to his divine, paternal and ſempiternal Generation, became Complex according to his maternal and temporal and corporeal Generation. (o) By the ancient Writers the Abſtract Son of God (called by them the Spirit and Ray of God) is ſaid, to have choſen an Holy Virgin, into whoſe Womb he might inſinuate himſelf, to come down from Heaven, to deſcend and ſlide into this Holy Virgin, and to be made Fleſh in her Womb. So when Neſtorius was boaſtfully preaching his Crotchets touching the Son of God, one of the People in the Aſſembly to reprove his Impudence (which he could not bear) proclaim'd with a loud voice (p) The Word that was before all Worlds, did undergo a ſecond Generation according to the Fleſh. Such are the Maxims of ancient times touching the Incarnation, which (ſo far as they are Scholaſtic Maxims touching the Incarnation) have nothing elſe to recommend them, but that they are the Maxims of ancient times; for they are altogether Alien from the Holy Scriptures. Which if ſome had as diligently inquir'd into, as they have read the Fathers, they would not have pronounc'd with a mighty Confidence (q) a twofold Nativity or Generation of Chriſt is expreſly declared in the ſacred Books: One whereby he is born of the Father before the World; the other whereby he is procreated from his Mother the Virgin and the Family of David. Of this Binary of Generations there is no Footſtep in the ſacred Books, it is an Humane Conceit not founded upon Scripture, not conſiſtent with it ſelf, but (as many other of the Scholaſtic Maxims) it is Self-ruinous. For in our Saviour's Temporal Generation (if it was his Generation) there muſt be a generative Father as well as a Mother; and in the Original of it, the Kind and Quality and Product thereof it muſt be Humane-divine: But theſe Propoſitions are ruinous to the Scholaſtic Theology, which therefore calleth this Generation the maternal and corporeal Generation in contradiſtinction to the divine and paternal Generation (r) neque Chriſtus quâ homo eſt, gignitur à Deo. But how then is the Incarnation a Generation, a ſecond Generation? Sometimes the Scholaſtic Divines ſay (s) humana Chriſti natura non illa quidem generatione procedit (the Humane Nature of Chriſt is not generated) but anon they tell us (t) verè genita eſt eadem natura hominis ex virgine (that ſame Humane Nature was truly generated of the Virgin) and Chriſt was (u) γεγεννημένος ἀληθῶς, truly generated of a Virgin, as Ignatius ſaith. Some of them will not allow us to ſay, that (w) Chriſt is Maſter and Servant to himſelf, or that the Word was Lord of the Man whom he aſſum'd: But others of them diſpute (x) that Chriſt according to his Humane Nature is Servant to himſelf as God, that as Man he properly obey'd and perform'd Religious Worſhip to his own Perſon as exiſting in the Divine Nature. (y) They agree, that he had the Holy Spirit from himſelf, ὅτι παρ' ἑτέρου οὐ δέεται λαβεῖν, that there was no need for him, to receive from another. And uſually they ſay, (z) that he created himſelf as Man, applying hereto the words of Solomon, Wiſdom hath built her an Houſe, whereby they mean, that ſibi domicilium ex Virginali corpore fabricavit, he made to himſelf an Houſe out of the Virginal Body. Whenceſoever this ancient Conceit was deriv'd, it is certain, it was not deriv'd from the Holy Bible, which knoweth no ſuch incongruous Maxims as theſe, ipſe conditoris templum, ipſe conditor templi: Ipſe auctor operis, ipſe opus auctoris. He was the Temple and the Builder of it: The Work and the Author of it. This Workmanſhip and Building was (as the Scholaſtic Theology calleth it) a Generation, and therefore Chriſt's building his own Houſe, implieth, that he was his own Father, according to that of S. Hilary (a) ſibi ipſi origo naſcendi eſt. So in this Theology it is a generally received Maxim (b) tota Trinitas incarnationem operata eſt, the Incarnation was the Work of the whole Trinity. The Incarnation which was a Generation (as this Theology calleth it) and wherein there muſt be a generative Father, is ſaid to be the Work of the whole Trinity; which implieth, that the whole Trinity is the Father of Chriſt as Man, and that he is the Son of it, which involveth a Syſtem of Abſurdities.

II. The Scholaſtic Theology miſunderſtandeth theſe following Texts of Scripture, which it ſuppoſeth, to ſpeak of the Incarnation. Rom. 1. 3. Concerning his Son Jeſus Chriſt our Lord, which was made of the Seed of David according to the Fleſh. Rom. 9. 4, 5. Who are Iſraelites, whoſe are the Fathers, and of whom as concerning the Fleſh Chriſt came. Theſe places manifeſtly ſpeak of our Saviour's Birth-nobilitation (yet ſo as to complicate it with Humane Infirmity, ſignify'd by the word Fleſh;) for to be of the Regial Family and Royal Stem of David, of Iſrael and of the Fathers, was part of his Birth-nobilitation. They cannot therefore be interpreted of his wondrous Self-denying, and Self-humbling Incarnation without confounding things of an oppoſite Nature. But there is another Text of the Apoſtle uſually expounded touching the Incarnation which is not altogether impertinent thereto. Gal. 4. 4. But when the fulneſs of time was come, God ſent forth his Son made of a Woman, made under the Law, to redeem them that were under the Law. This Text is of different conſideration; for one part of it concerneth the miſſive, and the other concerneth the generative Oeconomy of our Saviour. As our Saviour came forth from God, (Joh. 8. 42.) ſo the Apoſtle ſaith, that God ſent forth his Son nempe è cœlo (as ſeveral Expoſitors ſay) which Miſſion of our Saviour is the ſame thing with his Incarnation. This Son of God whom he ſent forth, could not be his Son but by a generative Oeconomy;

(n) Petav. T. 4. l. 5. c. 14. S. 8. & l. 3. c. 12. S. 8.

(o) Iſte Dei radius delapſus in Virginem quandam & in utero ejus caro figuratus fuit. Ibid. l. 3. c. 7 S. 1. Deſcendens de cœlo ſanctus ille ſpiritus Dei, ſanctam virginem cujus utero ſe inſinuaret, elegit. Dei ſpiritus deſcendit in Vulvam. Ibid. l. 5. c. 15. S. 4.

(p) Verbum quod erat ante ſecula, ſecundam ſubiiſſe generationem ſecundum carnem. Ibid. l. 6. c. 5. S. 8.

(q) Nativitas, ſive generatio, duplex Chriſti in Sacris libris disertè prodita eſt, una quâ de patre ante ſecula natus eſt, altera quâ de matre virgine, deque Davidis ſtirpe procreatus eſt. Ibid. l. 3. c. 8. S 6.

(r) Ibid. l. 7. c. 5. S. 5.

(s) Ibid.

(t) Ibid. l. 7. c. 6. S. 5.

(u) Ibid. l. 8. c. 8. S. 1.

(w) Ibid. l. 7. c. 9. S. 16, 17.

(x) Gonet. Clyp. T. 11. Diſp. 4. p. 180, 188.

(y) Petav. ſupr. l. 6. p. 594. & l. 8. c. 12. S. 18. & l. 7. c. 3. S. 4.

(z) Ibid. l. 7. c. 10. S. 2, 11, 12.

(a) Ibid. l. 8. c. 9. S. 2.

(b) Ibid. l. 7. c. 9. S. 17. & c. 5. S. 14.

conomy; this therefore the Apoſtle conſidereth, when he giveth him theſe deſcriptive Attributes made of a Woman and made under the Law. In four Manuſcripts as Beza ſaith, the Greek word is γεννώμενος, which ſignifieth our Saviour, to have been begotten or born of a Woman; and in the ſame ſenſe he is ſaid to have been made of a Woman; for the word made (c) is often us'd in a large Senſe, to ſignifie any Production, and is ſynonymous with begotten. Theſe attributes made of a Woman and made under the Law, the Apoſtle giveth to the Son of God, to ſignifie, that he ſymboliz'd with us originally as being of this natural and this legal Condition. And becauſe his words ſignifie natural and legal Condition (our natural and legal Condition and the Son of God's ſymbolizing with us in it) therefore they cannot ſignifie the Incarnation. For the Incarnation is a compound of what is Supra-legal, Super-natural and Sub-natural, what is above Nature and Law, and below Nature. As to be in the form of God and to become in the likeneſs of Men not tranſcending Servi-formity; to be rich at the rate of God, and to become poor; to be with God, and to be God and to become Fleſh.

The Scholaſtic Incarnation is more eſpecially injurious to this celebrated Text of the Evangeliſt The Word was made Fleſh. For although the Evangeliſt manifeſtly beginneth his Hiſtory with our Saviour's Miniſtry and wholly over-looketh his Generation, yet the Scholaſtic Theology will have this part of the beginning of his Hiſtory to be meant of his Generation, ſo contradicting the Nature and Character of the beginning of his Hiſtory, and deſtroying the neceſſary Order and Concinnity thereof. For if after the Evangeliſt hath related many things touching our Saviour's Miniſtry, that his Light ſhined in Darkneſs, and the Darkneſs comprehended it not; that John Baptiſt was ſent to bear Witneſs of him; that he was in the World and came unto his own, who received him not; if after all theſe Hiſtorical Relations touching our Saviour's Miniſtry he ſhould relate his maternal and corporeal Generation and Birth (by ſaying the Word was made Fleſh) this would not be the writing an Hiſtory but a Cento; not a writing our Saviour's Hiſtory, but only a relating certain Paſſages thereof ſo incoherently and diſorderly, as to put the Head of this Hiſtory in the Heel's place. A tolerable unexactneſs in obſerving Order is not to be criminated in Hiſtorians or in our Evangeliſt; and of the Nature (according to our Interpretation) is this Hiſtorical Paſſage The Word was made Fleſh; for theſe words are well and orderly enough ſubjoin'd to thoſe Hiſtorical Relations of our Saviour's Miniſtry that went before, becauſe the Incarnation belongeth to our Saviour's Miniſtry and is immediately connex'd with the matter in hand. But if we ſuppoſe them to be meant of his maternal and corporeal Generation, they are widely remote and diſtant from the matter in hand; and they are much what as incongruouſly and diſorderly plac'd, as if after his Relation of our Saviour's appearing to his Diſciples and breathing on them (after his Reſurrection) his Diſcourſe with Thomas about believing on him and with Peter about loving him, this Evangeliſt ſhould ſubjoin theſe words, and he was born of the Bl. Virgin.

SECTION IV.

The Fourth Diſagreement.

I. THE Scholaſtic Incarnation is more than meerly an Incarnation, which is an Argument, that it is a Miſtake. (d) For thereby this Theology meaneth, that the Abſtract Son of God was made Man. And if we ask, what it meaneth by being made Man? The anſwer is, he aſſum'd Humane Nature, which is Humane Fleſh endow'd with an intelligent Soul (perfect Man) and this is the Scholaſtic Idea of the Incarnation. This Theology therefore keepeth not to the Language of Scripture, but taketh the boldneſs to depart from it. For the Scripture ſaith, the Word was made Fleſh, did partake of Fleſh and Blood, take hold of the Seed of Abraham, took on him the form of a Servant, was made in the likeneſs of Men, and became poor, but never ſaith, that he was made Man. This ſort of Language maketh a great noiſe in the Scholaſtic Theology, but the Scripture is altogether a ſtranger to it; which is an Indication, that this Theology hath departed as much from the Senſe as from the Phraſe and Language of the Holy Writers, and that the Incarnation of the Son of God was an Inhumanation in reſpect of the Fleſh only (or bodily part of Man) and conſequently the Word that was made Fleſh, was not an Abſtract Logos, but the Humane-divine Perſon of the Word (e) Homo Cæleſtis, as Chriſt is called by P. Chryſologus.

II. The Scholaſtic Theology ſuppoſeth, that the Abſtract Son of God in his Incarnation aſſumed an Humane Soul, whereas there is not a Syllable of ſuch Language in Scripture, which only ſaith, the Word was made Fleſh. This was obſerv'd by many in ancient times, whence ſome inferr'd, that Chriſt had no Human Soul, but that the Logos ſupply'd the place of an Humane Soul (f) which is ſaid, to have been the Conceit of the Arians. The Apollinarians ſuppos'd, that our Saviour had an animative Soul, yet had not that eminent part of an Humane Soul the Νοῦς or Mind, but that the Logos ſupply'd the place of it. And the reaſon of this their Conceit was, Verbum caro factum eſt, which implieth, that in his Incarnation our Saviour did not aſſume an Humane Soul. (g) Origen was of opinion, that the Humane Soul of our Saviour was united to the Logos in his præ-exiſtent State (antecedently to our Saviour's Birth) he did not therefore ſuppoſe, that in his Incarnation he aſſumed an Humane Soul. In favour of this Opinion of Origen a Philoſopher and Divine of our own thus argueth. (h) Hence perhaps it is ſeaſonable, to put us in mind of the Reaſon, why in the Incarnation of the Meſſias no mention is made of the Soul, as Joh. 1. 14. And the Word was made Fleſh; as if the naked Logos was united with Fleſh, no Soul intervening. But the Reaſon is, becauſe the

(c) Petav. de Trin. l. 6. c. 6. S. 10.

Joh. 1. 5.-14.

(d) Etenim Deus Dei Filius tempore conſtituto, aſſimulata interim majeſtate, ab æthereа ſede profectus in prædeſtinatæ virginis templo ſibimet caſtrametatur, quibus latenter infunditur, in hominem gignitur. Petav. T. 4. l. 3. c. 7. S. 6. Qui enim ſine matre in cælis aterne genitus, ipſe in terris ſine patre in utero virginis homo de ſpiritu ſancto creatus eſt. Ibid. S. 10. Verbum caro factum, id eſt, homo. Ibid. l. 4. c. 12. S. 7. Perfectum hominem ex anima rationali & corpore aſſumpſiſſe. Ibid. l. 5. c. 11. S. 2. Quid eſt humanitatis natura, niſi caro intelligente anima prædita? Ibid. l. 4. c. 8. S 9.

(e) Ibid. l. 14. c. 5. S. 10.

(f) Ibid. l. 5. c. 11. S. 1 & 12. S. 2.

(g) Ibid. l. 1. c. 15. S. 5.

(h) Atque hinc forte an opportunè moneri poſſumus, cur in incarnatione Meſſiæ nulla animæ facta ſit mentio, ut Johan. 1. 14. & Logos caro factus eſt, quaſi nudus Logos cum Carne unitus eſſet, nullâ animâ interveniente. Sed ratio eſt, quia unio animæ Meſſiæ cum Logo infinitis ferè ante ſeculis facta intelligitur. Dr. H. More op. Philoſ. Vol. 1. p. 582.

Union of the Soul of the Meſſias with the Logos is underſtood to have been done almoſt infinite Ages before.

III. The Scholaſtic Divines themſelves in noticing the Incarnation of our Saviour often omit the Soul and his Aſſumption thereof. For the Word by his Incarnation, ἐσκήνωσεν ἐν ἡμῖν, dwelt among us, as our Tranſlation hath it. Joh. 1. 14. But ſome Criticks ſay (i) ἐσκήνωσεν, idem eſt quod corpus aſſumpſit Σκῆνος, idem quod σῶμα, apud Heſych. & Democritum nec non, 2 Cor. 5. 1. They that thus Criticize touching the word ἐσκήνωσεν, notice the Incarnation meerly by the Aſſumption of an Humane Body (called by the Pythagoreans Σκᾶνος,) and ſuppoſe, that the Incarnation is only an Incorporation. So Macarius noticeth the Incarnation (k) θεὸς ἐσωματοποίησεν ἑαυτὸν ϗ ἐσμίκρυνεν αὐτὸν, God imbodied himſelf and leſſen'd himſelf. 1 Tim. 3. 16. God was manifeſted in the Fleſh (that is) incorpore humano, ſaith Piſcator. So the Incarnation is called by S. Hilary (l) corporatio, which word is alſo us'd by Tertullian. Agreeably whereto our Saviour is called by S. Ambroſe (m) biformis geminæque naturæ, conſors divinitatis & corporis, Biform and of a double Nature, namely of the Divinity and the Body. Greg. M. thus expoundeth theſe words of the Angel to the Bl. Virgin, The power of the Higheſt ſhall over-ſhadow thee (n) id eſt corpus in te humanitatis accipiet incorporeum lumen divinitatis, the incorporeal Light of Divinity ſhall take in thee a Body of Humanity. Many notices of the Incarnation of like Nature there are in the ancient Writers of the Church, but none of ſo great remark as that which in the Acts of the Council of Epheſus is taken from the Council of Nice, which thus noticeth the Perſon of Chriſt (o) una perſona compoſita ex divinitate cæleſti & humana carne. One Perſon compounded of a celeſtial Divinity and of Humane fleſh.

IV. The Scholaſtic Divines themſelves have obſerv'd, that the term Incarnation is not expreſſive of their Inhumanation or becoming Man. For Cajetan and other Schoolmen ſay (p) by Scholaſtic cuſtom of Speech the term Incarnation ſignifieth the Aſſumption of intire Humane Nature by the Word: But by Impoſition, Inſtitution and in its own Nature the term Incarnation ſignifieth only, that the Divine Word put on Fleſh. The Evangeliſts Maxim therefore the Word was made Fleſh, although by Scholaſtic cuſtom it ſignifieth, that intire Humane Nature was aſſumed by the Word, yet the words of it by their Impoſition, Inſtitution and in their own Nature ſignifie no more, but that the Divine Word put on Fleſh. Fleſh ſometimes in Scripture ſignifieth Man (the whole Man) as Rom. 3. 20. By the Deeds of the Law ſhall no Fleſh be juſtified. Pſal. 56. 4. I will not fear what Fleſh can do unto me. Sometimes Fleſh ſignifieth only the bodily part of Man. Matth. 26. 41. The Spirit is willing, but the Fleſh is weak. Act. 2. 31. Neither his Fleſh did ſee corruption. So in Eccleſiaſtical Writers (q) there is one Perſon of the Word, the rational Soul and the Fleſh. (r) As every one of us conſiſteth of Fleſh and a Soul: So Chriſt from the time of his Incarnation conſiſteth of the Divinity, of Fleſh and a Soul. Fleſh being thus of an ambiguous ſignification, ſometimes ſignifying the whole Man (Synecdochically) and ſometimes only the bodily part of Man; the Queſtion is, in which of theſe ſignifications is it us'd in the Scriptural Doctrine of the Incarnation? For the Reſolution of which Doubt we will lay down theſe two following Rules. Rule 1. When Fleſh ſignifieth Man (the whole Man) the terms are identical and ſynonymous, and one of them may be put inſtead of the other; but when one of them cannot be put inſtead of the other, then Fleſh doth not ſignifie Man, but only the bodily part of Man. When the Apoſtle ſaith, By the Deeds of the Law ſhall no Fleſh be juſtify'd, we may put Man inſtead of Fleſh, and ſay, his Senſe is, By the Deeds of the Law ſhall no Man be juſtify'd. But when the ſame Apoſtle ſaith, God was manifeſted in the Fleſh, we cannot put Man inſtead of Fleſh, nor ſay thus, God was manifeſted in Man: We can only ſay, God was manifeſted in Humane Fleſh. 1 Joh. 4. 2, 3. Another Apoſtle ſaith, Jeſus Chriſt is come ἐν σαρκὶ, in Fleſh or in the Fleſh: But we cannot put Man inſtead of Fleſh, and ſay, his Senſe is, Jeſus Chriſt is come in Man. In the Scriptural Doctrine of the Incarnation therefore Fleſh doth not ſignifie Man, but only the bodily part of Man. And conſequently the Evangeliſt's Hiſtorical Maxim the Word was made Fleſh, doth not ſignifie (in the ſenſe of the Scholaſtic Theology) the Word was made Man. Rule 2. When Fleſh ſignifieth only that which is manifeſt, exterior and viſible, it doth not ſignifie Man, but only the bodily part of Man. And thus it ſignifieth in this Scriptural Doctrine of the Incarnation, God was manifeſted in the Fleſh. For to be manifeſted in that which is not manifeſt, exterior and viſible, is ſo to be manifeſted, as not to be manifeſted. The Apoſtle's Senſe may be very much illuſtrated from this following Paſſage of the Alexandrian Cyril. (s) The Divinity is not tangible, but the Logos became tangible as by his own Fleſh. Inviſible he was by Nature, but was viſible (or manifeſt) by the Body. The Word that was with God (1 Joh. 1. 1.) became audible, viſible, tangible, and was manifeſted in and by the Fleſh, as that ſignifieth only the bodily part of Man. So it ſignifieth in thoſe places of Scripture, wherein we read of the Body of his Fleſh, the vail of his Fleſh, the days of his Fleſh, and that he was put to death in the Fleſh.

V. The Scholaſtic Birth-humiliation of the Son of God is wholly Unſcriptural and Antiſcriptural, ſuch therefore is his being made Man in the Senſe of the Scholaſtic Theology. For his being made Man in the Senſe of this Theology is his Birth-humiliation, which it accounteth a principal part of his Humiliation. (t) What manner of humbling was this, that Conditor ſolis, ſhould be Conditus ſub ſole, ſhould be an Embrio, a little piece of unfaſhioned Fleſh; that Verbum longum ſhould be Verbum abbreviatum (as Bernard upon the Nativity;) that he who filleth Heaven and Earth with his Preſence, whom the Heaven of Heavens cannot contain, ſhould be himſelf as it were ſo narrow'd and curtail'd, as for nine Months ſpace to be ſhut up and included intra virginei ventris anguſtias, within ſo narrow a circuit as the Womb of the Virgin Mary; that he who was begotten of his Father before all time, ſhould be made of a Woman in the fulneſs of time; that Verbum ſhould be Infans; the ancient of days but a Child of a day old; that Sydera regens ſhould be Ubera lambens; that he who meted out Heaven with a Span, ſhould himſelf be a Child but of a Span long; that

(i) Pool's Syn. in Job. 1.14.

(k) Hom. 4.

(l) Valentia T. 1. Diſp. 1. Qu. 1. Punct. 1.

(m) De Incar. c. 4.

(n) Lib. 18. Moral. c. 12.

(o) Petav. T. 4. l. 3. c. 12. S. 5.

(p) Valentia ſupr.

(q) Petav. T. 4. l. 12. c. 19. S. 7, 8.

(r) Ibid. l. 4. c. 2. S. 8. & S. 3. & Ibid. c. 12. S. 5.

(s) Καίτοι τὸ θεῖον ἐστιν ἀναφὲς, ἀλλὰ γέγονεν ἁπτὸς ὁ λόγος ὡς διὰ τῆς ἰδίας σαρκὸς, ἀόρατος κατὰ φύσιν, ἀλλ' ἦν ἐμφανὴς διὰ σώματος. T. 5. p. 57. adv. Neſtor. l. 3.

(t) Mr. Jeanes mixture of Scholaſt. Div with Pract. p. 93. Ed. 1.

Verbum ſhould be Mutum, the eternal Word without a Word, not able to utter a Word or Syllable; that Tonans ſhould be Vagiens the great Thunderer of Heaven an Infant crying in a Manger! This is a wonderful Humiliation indeed, and being ſo prodigiouſly ſtrange, it is wonderful, that the Scripture hath not moſt expreſly taken notice of it, (if it was true) and decypher'd it in as lively colours as the Scholaſtic Divines have done. But ſeeing the Scripture is totally ſilent concerning it, and on the contrary always repreſenteth our Saviour's Conception and Nativity as his Birth-nobilitation, therefore the Scripture doth not underſtand by them his Incarnation or being made Man in the Senſe of the Scholaſtic Theology.

VI. The Soul of the Son of God was in part his true ſubſtantial Self, and therefore could not be a thing aſſumptitious by, and adventitious to, his Perſon. All wiſe Men ſay (u) The Soul of Man is himſelf, not the external and viſible Figure of Man; the Soul is the true Man (the Perſon) Man is a Soul carrying a Carcaſe, we take care of the welfare of our Souls, that is, of our ſelves, I (my true ſubſtantial Self) am diſtinct from the Body. So our Saviour ſuppoſeth, that the Soul of Man is his true ſubſtantial Self (that which truly and ſubſtantially is his Perſon) when he ſaith Matth. 10. 28. Fear not them which kill the Body, but are not able to kill the Soul. Matth. 16. 26. What is a Man profited, if he ſhall gain the whole World and loſe his own Soul? In S. Luk. ch. 9. 25. the words are, What is a man advantaged, if he gain the whole world and loſe himſelf? The Soul is himſelf, and accordingly the Syriack rendreth theſe words in S. Luke, If he gain the whole World and loſe his Soul. Luk. 23. 43. Jeſus ſaid unto him (the penitent Thief) verily, I ſay unto thee, to day ſhalt thou be with me in Paradiſe. His Soul only could be that day in Paradiſe, yet he is ſaid to be there that day, his Soul being his true ſubſtantial Self. Such is the Soul of every Man, and ſuch was our Bl. Saviour's Soul. For as it was his true ſubſtantial Self, that S. Stephen commended into the Hands of Chriſt ſaying, Lord Jeſus receive my Spirit. Act. 7. 59. So it was his true ſubſtantial Self in part which Chriſt commended into the Hands of his Father, Luk. 23. 46. Father into thy Hands I commend my Spirit. His Soul ſignifieth his true and inmoſt, his ſubſtantial and central Self, Job. 12. 27. Now is my Soul troubled. Matth. 26. 38. My Soul is exceeding ſorrowful even unto Death. The Son of God (as good Men do) look'd upon his Soul as his Eſſence and as Himſelf. He was not two Perſons (the one as God the other as Man) but one only Perſon, and this one only Perſon counteth his Soul his Eſſence and Himſelf as all good Men do (ſo plainly, that it is not poſſible otherwiſe to expound his words;) therefore his Soul was not to his Perſon as an Accident to a Subſtance, meerly a preter-eſſential, adventitious and aſſumed thing, but he was and is eſſentially God-man, and conſequently, there never was any ſuch thing as an Abſtract Logos (or Abſtract Son of God) that by a Scholaſtic Incarnation aſſum'd an Humane Soul. As our Saviour accounted his Soul his true ſubſtantial Self, ſo doth S. Ambroſe, when conſidering him in that interval of time that was between his Paſſion and Reſurrection, he ſaith of him (w) ipſe inter mortuos liber. His meaning is (x) when without Fleſh and denudated of that Body which he had aſſumed, he that was Life it ſelf deſcended to the Region of the Enemies. Thus himſelf was free among the dead and his Soul was himſelf. It was not therefore an Abſtract Logos or Verbum that became Fleſh (or was incarnate) the Incarnation was not the Scholaſtic Inhumanation or being made Man: But it was the Humane-divine Perſon of the Meſſiah that became Fleſh, as thoſe words of the great Evangeliſt moſt naturally ſignifie, that Jeſus Chriſt is come in the Fleſh. 1 Joh. 4. 2, 3.

SECTION V.

The Fifth Diſagreement.

I. THE Shoclaſtic Incarnation like the Scholaſtic Trinity is eminently, not a Myſtery of Religion and Sanctity, but a myſterious Riddle of School-philoſophy, which is an evident Argument, that it is a miſtake. When matter of Sanctity as ſuch maketh any thing myſterious, it muſt be called a Myſtery of Sanctity: But if there be much of Matter of Philoſophy in it, which is ſtrangely myſterious and enigmatical, this may juſtly denominate it a myſterious Riddle of Philoſophy. And as the Scholaſtic Tranſubſtantiation is eminently, not a Myſtery of Sanctity, but a myſterious Riddle of Philoſophy, the Scholaſtic Theology having chang'd the Myſtery of the Holy Eucharist into a Syſtem of unholy, unpopular, unintelligible Conceits: So this Theology hath chang'd the Myſtery of the Holy Trinity, of our Saviour's Perſon and Incarnation from being Myſteries of Sanctity, to be myſterious Riddles of School-philoſophy eminently ſuch. For at a great rate this Theology magnifieth the enigmatical Philoſophy of the Trinity, and at the ſame rate it magnifieth the enigmatical Philoſophy of the Incarnation. Of the Trinity it obſerveth (y) that S. Baſil calleth it ænigma novum (which ſpeaketh it a Syſtem of enigmatical Philoſophy) that Gr. Nyſſen calleth it ænigma à communi ſenſu abhorrens, and that Pope Hormiſdas ſaith of it ſecretum Trinitatis nec ulla viſibilium nec inviſibilium creaturarum potuit inveſtigare natura. So the Incarnation is called by the Alexandrian Cyril, ænigma ſacratiſſimum, quod nulla mens creata poteſt intelligere. (z) Wonderful and beyond Mind and Speech (Conception and Expreſſion) is the manner of the Incarnation. This Wiſdom conſiſteth (a) ἐν ἀποῤῥήτοις τισὶ βαθέσι τε ϗ ἀκαταληψίαις, in certain recondite ineffable depths and incomprehenſibles.

II. The Union of the two Natures in Chriſt is according to this Theology alike myſteriouſly Philoſophical, as the Union of the three Perſons in the (Scholaſtic) Trinity. (b) The Trinity of Perſons are but one Subſtance or Eſſence; and the three Subſtances or Eſſences in Chriſt (whereof two are intelligent) are but one Perſon. The Union of theſe three Subſtances into one Perſon is commonly called incomprehenſible and ineffable. For Chriſt's Divine Nature is united to his

(u) Mens cujuſque eſt quiſque, non ea figura quæ digito demonſtrari poteſt. Cic. Ἡ ψυχὴ αὐτὸς ὁ ἄνθρωπος. Plotin. En. 4. l. 7. c. 1. Verum hominem ipſam animam eſſe teſtatur. Macrob. in Som. Scip. l. 2. c 12. Anima revera ipſa eſt homo. Coſri. Νȣ̃ς κυρίως ϗ πρὸς ἀλήθειαν ἄνθρωπός ἐςι. Philo. Ψυχάριον εἶ βαςάζον νεκρόν. Gat. Not. in Ant. p. 155, 382. Quid ſumus homines niſi animæ corporibus illigatæ? Audetis ridere nos, quod animarum noſtrarum provideamus ſaluti, id eſt, nobis ipſis: Quid enim ſumus homines, niſi animæ corporibus clauſæ? Arnob. adv. Gent. ἄλλος εἰμι τȣ̃ νεκρȣ̃. Epictet. diſſ. l. 4. c. 7.

(w) De Incarn. c. 5.

(x) Euſeb. Dem. Ev. l. 8. p. 134.

(y) Gonet. Clyp. T. iv. Diſp. 2. p. 60, 61.

(z) Παράδοξος δὲ ϗ ὑπὲρ νȣ̃ν ϗ λόγον τῆς μετὰ σαρκὸς οἰκονομίας ὁ τρόπος. S. Cyr. c. Jul. l. 8. p. 280.

(a) Idem adv. Neſtor. l. 2. T. 6. p. 61.

(b) Bernard. l. 5. de conſid. ad. Eugen. c. 8.

his Humane Nature (ſaith a Scholaſtic Divine) in ſuch a manner, as no mortal can comprehend. It is not in Man to define (ſaith Alexander of Hales) what manner of Communication this is, whereby the Humane Nature is communicated to The Word. (c) Curiouſly to ſearch into the manner of the Incarnation, or of the Unition of the Word with the terrene Fleſh, is not without detriment (ſaith the Alexandr. Cyril) τὸ γὰρ ὑπὲρ νοῦν καὶ λόγον βασάνου κρεῖττον ἀεὶ, for that which is above Mind and Speech, is beyond diſquiſition. The Deity and Humanity did concur ineffably, and ſo as none can underſtand or expreſs, to conſtitute ſome one thing; ſo ſaith Gr. Nyſſen. And Hippolytus (with whom Theodoret agreeth) ſaith of this Unition; It is altogether inapprehenſible by the knowledge of any Creature.

(c) V. Petav. T. 4. l. 3. c. 1. ſ. 1.

III. The Scholaſtic Trinity and Incarnation are alike grand Innovations in Philoſophy (as the Scholaſtic Theology affirmeth) alike repugnant to the ancient Maxims thereof; and ſo far theſe far better Articles ſymbolize with the prodigious Dogma of Tranſubſtantiation. For as by accident through the Folly and Vicioſity of Men the Chriſtian Religion hath ingendred Tranſubſtantiation: in like manner it hath introduc'd a Scholaſtic Trinity and Incarnation. And as the Scholaſtic Theology hath diſcarded or diſtorted all the Principles of the Philoſophic Arts and Sciences, to ſerve the Intereſt of Tranſubſtantiation: ſo it hath dealt with the ancient Maxims of Philoſophy, to ſerve the Intereſt of a Scholaſtic Trinity and Incarnation. For upon this account in two Points (d) the Scholaſtic Theology contradicteth the ancient Philoſophy. For the ancient Philoſophy ſuppoſeth, that a ſingular Nature or Subſtance is not common to more or communicable: but the Scholaſtic Theology affirmeth, that one and the ſame numerical Scholaſtic Divine Eſſence (although it is ſingular and individual) is common and communicated to the three Divine Perſons of the Trinity. The ancient Philoſophy ſuppoſeth, that every ſingular individual Nature (ſuch as the Nature of a Man) is ſubſiſtent by its ſelf (or hath its proper ſubſiſtence) not in and by another: but the Scholaſtic Theology affirmeth, that the Humane Nature in Chriſt is not ſubſiſtent by it ſelf, but in and by the Logos or Verbum. And thus this Theology ſerveth the Intereſt of its Trinity and Incarnation (having made them myſterious Riddles of Philoſophy) by diſcarding and contradicting the Senſe and Maxims of the ancient Philoſophy, which are far to be preferr'd before the Maxims of the Scholaſtic Theology; both becauſe they are the dictates of plain and clear Reaſon, and becauſe they are the dictates of impartial and unbiaſs'd Reaſon, not excogitated to ſerve a Turn and an Intereſt, as the Maxims of the Scholaſtic Theology manifeſtly are. Its Articles of Faith are certain new Maxims of Philoſophy repugnant to the ancient; if therefore God had deſign'd thoſe Articles to be Articles of the Chriſtian Religion, doubtleſs (at the riſe of Chriſtianity) he would have introduc'd into the World a new Philoſophy, to make them intelligible and credible.

(d) Cùm in Ariſtotelia philoſophia & apud humanæ ſapientiæ auctores omnis οὐσία vel φύσις, hoc eſt, ſubſtantia quælibet ac natura ſingularis, ſe tota differat ab alia natura vel ſubſtantia ſingulari, & ſit ἰδιοσύστατος, quod eſt per ſe ſubſiſtens, & ab alterius cujuſlibet conſortio & copulatione divulſa: duo quædam ab illis diverſa Chriſtiana ſapientia didicit totidem exprimariis religionis noſtræ myſteriis, Trinitatis & Incarnationis: alterum, non omnem naturam particularem incommunicabilem eſſe; quod ex priore dogmate ſumus edocti. Nam divina Natura cùm ſit una & ſimplex, & eatenus individua, perſonis tribus eadem numero communis eſt. alterum; non omnem individuam naturam eſſe ἰδιοσύστατον, hoc eſt per ſe & non in altero, vel alterius ope conſiſtentem & cohærentem: quod ex Incarnationis myſterio percepimus: in quo humana natura & ſi ſingularis & una numero ſit, non tamen per ſe ſubſiſtit. Utrumque veteribus philoſophis ignotum propterea fuit, quod nulla humana ratio eò pertingere potuit: nec aliter iſtud quàm fide ac divina ſignificatione capere. Petav. T. 4. l. 6. c. 1. S. 3.

IV. The Scholaſtic Trinity and Incarnation are alike unintelligible by any but the Sons of Art and School-philoſophy; yet theſe by their Superlative Subtilties and Intrigues of Diſtinction have intricated theſe Articles rather than made them intelligible. (e) Porphyry contendeth, that there is a ſort of Gods, which at certain times are changed into Men, but he doth not ſuppoſe, that they are chang'd into Men by the Scholaſtic kind of Incarnation or Inhumanation. (f) The Heathen Gods made themſelves viſible by putting on Bodies and forming themſelves into the ſhape of Men. (g) Jupiter is ſaid by Julian, to have generated amongſt the Intelligibles Æſculapius out of himſelf, who made a progreſs from Heaven upon Earth (where he became conſpicuous by the fecund Life of the Sun) and appeard ἐν ἀνθρώπου μορφῇ, in the form of Man about Epidaurus, whence he diſpread his ſalutary power over the whole Earth. If Æſculapius and other Heathen Deities were ſuppoſed to come and live in terrene Humane Bodies, and to animate them (as Humane Souls do) yet there is no great difficulty in the Notion of this their Inhumanation, the conception of it is not very puzzling to an ordinary Underſtanding, it is nothing like the Scholaſtic Inhumanation, which is, (h) poſt SS. Trinitatis myſterium maximè admirabile, moſt wonderful of all things next to the Sacroſanct Myſtery of the Trinity, as Cajetan ſaith. (i) Such as are unexerciſed in Metaphyſical Speculations, that have not ſo much as conſidered the Union of their own Soul with their Body, nor once heard of diſtinction real and formal, and other ſettled Notions requiſite for the more expreſs apprehenſion of ſuch high points as the conjunction of the Divinity and Humanity in Chriſt and the Triunity of the Godhead, the beſt Inſtruction that can be given to them is, that they would make that up in humble Adoration that they want in Knowledge. They muſt be well exercis'd in Metaphyſical Speculations, that have any tolerable inſight into the Myſtery of the Scholaſtic Incarnation (which conſiſteth in underſtanding Being, modes of Being, individual Subſtance, Hypoſtaſis or ſuppoſitum, perſona, Hypoſtatical Union, Unum per ſe, Incommunicability, the difference between Exiſtence and Subſiſtence, and between being perfect in Eſſence and Exiſtence) and when they have travell'd a long Journey in Metaphyſical Speculations touching this Myſtery, they will find themſelves not at all wiſer than they were at their firſt ſetting out, and that their Maſters darken Counſel by words without knowledge, that they talk of things whereof they have no Notion, and that at the long run they muſt acquieſce in that of the Ancients, Generationem ejus quis enarrabit? (k) Which according to S. Leo referreth not only to the Eternal, but alſo to the Temporal Generation of Chriſt God-man. (l) Ipſa Jeſu in carne apparitio & ineffabilis eſt ſermone omni, & omni ignota intelligentiæ. The Scholaſtic Theology hath ſo marvellouſly intricated the Article of the Incarnation, that there have been more Scholaſtic Diſputes about it than any other Article.

(e) S. Cyr. c. Jul. l. 8. p. 287.

(f) Dii falſi ſe aſpectabiles reddebant — inducntes ſe corporibus, ut ait Serv. ἑαυτοὺς εἰδοποιοῦντες εἰς ἀνθρώπους. Gothofr. exercit. 2. in 1 Tim. 3. 16. p. 3379.

(g) S. Cyr. ſupr.

(h) Valentia T. 4. Diſp. 1. Qu. 1. punct. 2.

(i) Dr. H. More Myſt. of Godl. B. 9. c. 3.

(k) Valentia ſupr.

(l) Idem ibid.

V. The Trinity and Incarnation of the Scholaſtic Theology are alike deſcrib'd in it, in Terms and Phraſes enigmatical, and not only enigmatical but unintelligible. For the Metaphyſical and Scholaſtic Genius delighteth, to make Riddles of the Trinity, whence we have, (m) numerabilis Unitas, & in Unitate ac cum Unitate conſiſtens numeri conditio (a numerable Unite, number in Uniteneſs and conſiſtent with Uniteneſs) and the Trinity is called by the counterfeit Dionyſius, (n) τριὰς ὑπερούσιος ϗ ὑπέρθεος, the Triad Super-eſſential and Super-God. And in like manner the Incarnation is thus deſcrib'd; (o) God being ſuper-ſubſtantial and tranſcendent to all ſuper-ſubſtantiality, being minded to deſcend unto Subſtance, was ſuper-ſubſtantially ſubſtantiated. At this rate ſome that are well exercis'd in Metaphyſical Speculations, treat of Divine Matters: others in deſcribing the Incarnation uſe terms more modeſt, but not leſs unintelligible; for thus they deſcribe the Hypoſtatical Union. (p) This Union to the Divine Perſon and Nature addeth nothing but a Relation, but it maketh a change in the Humane Nature, which is by this means elevated to the higheſt perfection: for it is made a quaſi proper adjunct of the Divine Perſon by whom it is aſſumed: a quaſi part of the ſame whole God-man, of which the Divine Nature is another quaſi part: and as to ſubſiſtence a quaſi effect ſingularly ſuſtained by the Divine Nature: and alſo a quaſi ſubject which the Divine Nature ſingularly inhabiteth. This is an uſual mode of Theologizing (touching the Incarnation) of which it is obſervable, (1.) That it is not conſiſtent with it ſelf. For if the Divine and Humane Nature in Chriſt are but quaſi parts, the whole (θεάνθρωπος) can be but a quaſi whole. And if the Humane Nature as to ſubſiſtence is but a quaſi Effect, the Cauſe can be but a quaſi Cauſe. (2.) By this mode of Theologizing we do not in Theology contemplate things, but only quaſi things. As if in Mathematicks we ſhould contemplate only a quaſi Triangle or a quaſi Cube; in Metaphyſicks only a quaſi Ens, quaſi Eſſentia; in Phyſicks only quaſi Matter and Form; in Logicks only quaſi Cauſe and Effect; which would be a deſtroying all the Sciences (by deſtroying the Objects of them;) for in Science we are to contemplate things, not quaſi things. (3.) This mode of ſpeaking doth not ſignifie what things really are, but what really they are not ſave only in pretenſion or reſemblance. It may be rightly us'd therefore touching things, of which there are or may be meer pretenſions or reſemblances (as Chriſt may be rightly called a quaſi Sinner:) but that there is or can be a quaſi part and a quaſi whole, or that one's true ſubſtantial ſelf can be a quaſi adjunct of his Perſon, is not intelligible. (4.) This mode of ſpeaking is one mode of making Riddles, ſuch as that of the Greeks a little alter'd, (q) A quaſi Man (an Eunuch) ſaw a quaſi Bird (a Bat) ſit on a quaſi Tree (Giant-Fennel) and threw (a Pumice-ſtone) a quaſi Stone at it.

VI. The Scholaſtic Trinity and Incarnation are alike incapable of an Illuſtration by ſimilitude or compariſon. For of the Trinity the Scholaſtic Theology ſaith, (r) There is nothing like it to be found in any kind of things. The Order of things natural and the Capacity of the Humane Mind it tranſcendeth at the greateſt rate. (s) Jerom of Prague was accus'd in the Council of Conſtance, to have cauſed a Shield or Eſcutcheon to be painted in repreſentation of the three Perſons in Trinity, comparing them therein to Water, Snow and Ice; and this fact of his he defended with this pretence, that God had ſtamped in natural matters ſome countenance of ſupernatural Myſteries. But doubtleſs he was not happier in his compariſon than others have been, that have made Compariſons of the Trinity without any conſiderable ſimilitude, and likened it to things extremely unlike: nor have they been happier in their attempts, by Compariſons to illuſtrate the Scholaſtic Incarnation. (t) For we cannot produce any thing like this Myſtery, no ſimilitude can reach it. But ſome have thought, that the dependence of Chriſt's Humanity upon the Perſon of the Word may be reſembled to the ſupportance of an Accident in its Subject: but then we muſt abſtract (ſay they) the Subject muſt be conſider'd as not potential in reſpect of the Accident (as not being to be formed and in ſome ſort perfected by it) and the Accident muſt not be conſider'd as inherent, that is, it muſt not be conſider'd as an Accident. So repugnant is this Myſtery to all things in Nature and natural Science, that the poſſibility of it (u) is not clearly intelligible by Natural Light.

SECTION VI.

The Sixth Diſagreement.

AGainſt the Scholaſtic Incarnation ſeveral Objections are made in the Scholaſtic Theology, which have ſo much weight in them, that they plainly ſhew it, to be a miſtake. For the School-Divines have the Arguments of Hereticks to anſwer (which is a main part of their Buſineſs;) among themſelves they are ill agreed and love to bandy and diſpute Party againſt Party; and of themſelves they are prone to ſtart Difficulties, to find themſelves work (to tye Knots and unlooſe them;) whence they generally incumber their Theories with numerous Objections, and ſo it fareth with their Theory of the Incarnation.

I. A principal Objection is from the Compoſition of Chriſt's Perſon. (w) For the Humane Nature belongeth to the Eſſence of Chriſt's Perſon: but it doth not belong to the Eſſence of the (Scholaſtic) Verbum; therefore the Perſon of Chriſt and the Perſon of the Verbum is not the ſame Perſon. If we ſuppoſe alſo, that after the Incarnation the Humane Nature did belong to the Eſſence of the Perſon of Chriſt, which before this Incarnation did not belong to the Eſſence of the Perſon of the Word, from thence it followeth, that after this Incarnation the Perſon of the Word was chang'd and extinguiſh'd and a Perſon of a different Eſſence ſucceeded inſtead of it; for as an Unite added unto, or taken from Number, maketh another Number: ſo an eſſential part being added or taken away, the Eſſence is chang'd

(m) Petav. T. 1. l. 2. c. 8. S. 21.

(n) Myſt. Theol. c. 1.

(o) Ὁ Θεὸς ὑπερούσιος ὢν, ϗ ὑπερουσιότητος ἁπάσης ὑπερανεστηκὼς, εἰς οὐσίαν ἐλθεῖν βουληθεὶς, ὑπερουσίως οὐσιώθη. Petav. T. 4. l. 8. c. 12. S. 22.

(p) Unio hæc perſonæ & naturæ divinæ nihil addit niſi relationem, in humana verò natura facit commutationem, dum elevatur hoc pacto ad ſummam perfectionem: fit enim quaſi adjunctum proprium divinæ perſonæ, à quâ aſſumitur: quaſi membrum ejuſdem integri θεανθρώπου, cujus divina natura eſt quaſi pars altera: & quoad ſubſiſtentiam quaſi effectum ſingulariter à divina natura ſuſtentatum: ac etiam quaſi ſubjectum, in quo divina natura ſingulariter habitat. Ameſ. medul. Theol. l. 1. c. 18.

(q) Athen. Dipnoſ. l. 10. Plato de Rep. l. 5.

(r) Nec ei quod ſimile ſit, in nullo rerum genere inveſtigari poteſt. Petav. de Trin. l. 14. c. 13. S. 4. Myſterium maximum cujus ſimile in rerum natura non datur. Ordinem rerum naturalium & captum mentis humanæ longiſſimè excedit. Henichius.

(s) Fuller's Lives, p. 26.

(t) Verbi incarnati rationem nulla poteſt undecunque capta ſimilitudo conſequi. Petav. ſupr. l. 3. c. 16. S. 11. Neque enim poſſumus aliquid huic myſterio ſimile proferre, quod per omnia quadret. Valentia T. 4. Diſp. 1. Qu. 1. punct. 2.

(u) Gonet. Clyp. T. 11. Diſp. 2. Art. 2.

(w) Pete T. 4. l. c. 16. S. 14.

chang'd and deſtroy'd. To this great Objection the only Anſwer (that looketh like an Anſwer) which the Scholaſtic Theology can make, is altogether impertinent. For it anſwereth, that the Humane Nature doth not belong to the Eſſence of the Perſon of the Word, but is only accidens & adventitium. Whereas the Objection argueth, that the Humane Nature belongeth to the Eſſence of the Perſon of Chriſt, and therefore neceſſarily belongeth to the Eſſence of the Perſon of the Word. That the Humane Nature belongeth to the Eſſence of the Perſon of Chriſt, is manifeſt from his Idea, and is abundantly acknowledg'd and conſtantly aſſerted by this ſelf-contradicting Scholaſtic Theology, which ſaith, (x) The Name Chriſt ſignifieth not either God or Man alone, but properly ſignifieth both God and Man. The Perſon of Chriſt is both God and Man, as S. Auſtin ſaith, It is a mixture of God and Man. Chriſt is two according to his Natures. (y) Chriſt is one Perſon of a twofold Subſtance (as every Man is a Perſon of a Rational Soul and Humane Fleſh) for he is God and Man. (z) Chriſt is one Hypoſtaſis or Perſon of the Trinity having two Natures, the Divine and Humane. Amongſt Chriſtians (that are Trinitarians) no doubt can be made, but that the Humane Nature belongeth to the Eſſence of the Perſon of Chriſt. From whence it followeth, that the Perſon incarnated was the Humane-divine Perſon of Chriſt, and there can be no Abſtract Logos. For if the Humane Nature belongeth to the Eſſence of the Perſon of Chriſt, and doth not belong to the Eſſence of the Perſon of the Logos, the Perſon of Chriſt and the Perſon of the Logos cannot be the ſame Perſon, as the Objection argueth.

(x) Chriſti vocabulum propriè utrumque ſignificat, Deum ſimul & hominem. Petav. T. 4. l. 11. c. 8. S. 12. Mixtura eſt Dei & hominis. Ibid. l. 3. c. 16. S. 2. Duo eſſe Chriſtum ſecundum naturas. Ibid. c. 9. S. 15.

(y) Ibid. l. 3. c. 11. S. 10.

(z) Ibid. l. 5. c. 3. S. 6.

A further and greater Objection againſt the Scholaſtic Incarnation ariſeth from the Compoſition of Chriſt's Perſon, which is ſuppos'd to conſiſt of two intellectual Natures, the one the Scholaſtic Divine Eſſence, the other his Humane Soul, which are not ſuppos'd, to be united into one third Nature, but ſo as to conſtitute one Perſon; whereas if one Intellect, Reaſon and Will neceſſarily conſtituteth one Perſon, two Intellects and two Wills muſt neceſſarily conſtitute two Perſons. To avoid this Conſequence, one of theſe intellectual Natures (that is a Perſon) is ſaid, to aſſume the other ad ſuam ſubſiſtentiam (to its Subſiſtence) affording it a Termination, Complement, Perſonality (one intellectual Nature communicateth its Subſiſtence to the other, that hath Exiſtence, but wanteth Subſiſtence) and herein the Incarnation is ſuppos'd, to conſiſt; which therefore is bad Theology and worſe Philoſophy, as will hereafter appear.

II. Another Objection againſt its Incarnation this Theology raiſeth from the component parts of Chriſt s Perſon (a) who is perſona compoſita, compounded of the Godhead and the Manhood, that are the parts of Chriſt, of which and in which he ſubſiſteth. (b) So Maximus the Martyr ſaith, That Chriſt is in his two Natures as the whole in the parts, and that the parts of Chriſt are the Deity and Humanity. J. Damaſcen. calleth each of them ἓν τῶν μερῶν, one of the parts. Leontius ſaith, We often denominate the whole from a part, and call a part by the name of the whole, when we call the Word the Son of Man, and by ſuch more Names. And a modern Scholaſtic Theologer ſaith; Chriſt is ſaid, to have ſuffered and have been dead, and to have exiſted from Eternity ſimply and without addition (nec additur quâ ſui parte aut naturâ id illi conveniat) nor do we add according to what part of him or what Nature it agreeth to him. In the Incarnation the Manhood is neceſſarily a part, and conſequently the Godhead muſt be a part (the part of a Compoſitum:) but to be a part, is to be imperfect, which is incompetible to the Godhead. To this Objection this Theology maketh an Anſwer, wherein theſe ſeverals are obſervable. (1.) It affirmeth, (c) "That the Compoſition which is "in Chriſt (as all agree) doth not conſiſt of "Parts properly ſo called. Every Part properly ſo called is ſomething that is imperfect, "as being oppoſite to the Whole (which is in a "manner the ſame with perfect) and by a certain habitude it relateth to another Part, "wherewith by its Nature and ingenit Propenſion it requireth to be joyned; and by the "ſame Nature and Condition it reſpecteth the "Whole, and (by a kind of natural Appetite) "it would be in the Whole and conſtitute the "Whole. This therefore is a Part properly ſo "called, which is produced by God, not for it "ſelf, nor to ſubſiſt by it ſelf and alone, but "that in compoſition with ſome other thing "it might make a third, a deſigned Whole; for "the nature of things is from the Will of God. "From whence it followeth, that the Soul of a "Man, although it liveth when he is dead, yet "is not perfect, but muſt be counted a Part, "becauſe it is created by God, that it might "be the form of an Humane Body, and being "conjoyned with it might be component of the "whole Man. But ſuppoſe, that the Name of a Part properly ſo called, be limited and confined to that which is a proper part and natively ſuch, yet that which is not ſuch a part may be in juſt account and denomination a part and factively ſuch. As ſuppoſe, that the Heathen God Æſculapius ſhould aſſume Humane Nature into the Unity of his Perſon, ſo making a complex Perſon and Phyſician; the Manhood in this complex Perſon would neceſſarily be one part and the Godhead would be another, as being (factively) a comcomponent and conſtituent part of this complex Perſon. And the Godhead that was before an intire complete Perſon and God, would by this Incarnation be minorated into but a part of a Perſon and of a God, and of ſuch an one who is in part a Man. Which Minorations of the Godhead are incompetible to the true Godhead. And it is alſo repugnant to a Perſon, to be but a part of a Perſon, and conſequently but a part of an Hypoſtaſis or Suppoſitum. Moreover, Chriſt's Humanity is neceſſarily one conſtituent part of his Perſon, and his Divinity is the other, which therefore cannot be the Scholaſtic Logos, that is antecedently to his Humanity of it ſelf complete and abſolute, and is neither conſtituted by the preſence of it, nor diminiſh'd by the abſence of it. (2.) This Theology affirmeth (d) touching the Compoſition of Chriſt's Perſon (called by the Fathers διπλοῦς, biformis, and of whom Gr. Naz. ſaith, ἓν ἐκ τῶν δύο γενέσθαι, that he was made one of two) that it is not like the other that are uſual in the nature of things; for here is no Compoſition of Parts properly ſo called, as in thoſe other; in other Compoſitions the Whole exiſteth not before the Parts are united, whereas Chriſt was from Eternity; in other Compoſitions the Compoſitum is not called by the Names of the ſeveral Parts, whereas Chriſt is called God and Man.

This

(a) Ibid. l. 3. c. 15.

(b) Ibid. S. 2. & l. 4. c. 16. S. 2, 3, 9.

(c) Ibid. l. 3. c. 15. S. 4.

(d) Ibid. S. 9. & c. 15. S. 9.

This Compoſition therefore is ſui ac proprii generis, of a kind proper and peculiar to it ſelf. But in all reaſon this Theology ought to diſtinguiſh in Chriſt (at leaſt) a twofold Compoſition: The one is of his Humane Nature, which is compounded of Soul and Body, and is ſuch a Compoſition, which is uſual in the Nature of things. And ſeeing this Compoſition is agreeable to the Nature of things, it ought to be look'd upon as an Indication, that the other Compoſition of his Divinity and Humanity is not ſo great an Heteroclit, as that there is nothing like it in Nature or Grace. (3.) This Theology acknowledgeth in Chriſt (e) not an interiour, but only an exteriour Compoſition; not ſuch as that of Matter and Form (which is an interiour Compoſition) but ſuch as is like that of Subſtance and Accident, whence nothing accrueth to the ſubject but that which is quodammodo externum non intimum (in ſome ſort external not intimious; for the Conjunction or Unition of the Manhood and Godhead is only (in ſubſiſtendi proprietate) in ſubſiſting, the Manhood being aſſum'd (ad ſubſiſtendi communionem) to Communion of ſubſiſting. This exteriour Compoſition is the only Compoſition, which this Theology acknowledgeth, which yet (Self-contradictiouſly) talketh of the Humanity being wholly inſerted into the Divinity, of immixing the whole Natures, of their mutual inexplicable Immeation and Unition, and that the Union between God and Man is cloſer than that of Soul and Body. (4.) By this exteriour Compoſition this Theology deſigneth to ſalve the abſolute Simplicity (uncompoundedneſs) of the Godhead notwithſtanding its Compoſition with the Humane Nature, which is ſaid to be (f) accidentis inſtar ad perſonam Verbi, as it were an accident to the Perſon of the Word (g) Humanitas velut appendicis & accidentis inſtar eſt ad ſubſtantiam, the Humanity (to the Perſon of the Word) is as an Appendix and an Accident to a Subſtance. Yet this Manhood doth not inhere, as an Accident doth; nor doth it affect the Godhead, as a Form (or Accident) doth the Subject-matter; nor (as the Schools ſpeak) doth any eſſe accidentarium, or Additament of Perfection accrue to the Godhead from it (which accrueth from Accidents to their Subject-ſubſtance;) and whereas the Godhead is incapable of a Compoſition of Subſtance and Accident (as being deſtructive to its Simplicity) a Compoſition of the Manhood with the Godhead is not incompetible thereto. In a juſt Computation of things therefore the Manhood is not by far ſo much as an Accident to the Perſon of the Word, but is hugely ſhort of it. Yet this contemptible Manhood leſs than an Accident is no leſs than our Saviour's intellectual Nature (which cannot be his Nature, unleſs it be conſtitutive of him) and nothing leſs than his very Soul, as much to him as the precious immortal Soul of a Man is to the Man, which is ſomewhat better than all Accidents, and is not to be degraded into an Appendix or Hang-by, as this Theology calleth the Humanity of Chriſt.

(c) Ibid. c 15. S. 10, 11.

(f) Ibid c. 15. S. 11. & l. 16. c. 5. S. 3.

(g) Ibid. l. 4. c. 8. S. 6.

III. Another Objection (againſt the Incarnation) this Theology raiſeth from the immutability of God; for the Word by the Incarnation ſeemeth to be chang'd in the intrinſic Conſtitution of his Perſon, becoming thereby aliud (if not alius) he that was meerly θεὸς becometh θεάνθρωπος, perſona ſimplex is chang'd to perſona compoſita, he that was but one intellectual Nature, is chang'd to be of two intellectual Natures, from purely incorporeal to corporeal, and in ſome reſpect to be animative of an Humane Body, and from being impaſſible he is chang'd, to be paſſible and mortal. (h) It importeth a real and intrinſecal Mutation, for God to be made Man, and to take into his perſonal being our Nature. To this objected Difficulty the School-doctors anſwer, That the Word is not the Subject of the Humanity by receiving it intrinſecally, nor is potentially receptive thereof, but only affordeth it a Termination and Subſiſtence; and therefore is not chang'd intrinſecally by the Acceſſion of it and Union with it. But if Subject and Adjunct are rightly defin'd by Logicians, the Word (in the Scholaſtic Incarnation) is neceſſarily the Subject and the Humane Nature the Adjunct of it. And becauſe the intellectual Nature of the Word muſt be intrinſic to his intellectual Nature (his Humane intellectual Nature to his Divine) therefore the Word muſt be the Subject of the Humane Nature by receiving it intrinſecally, which is an intrinſic Mutation and Alteration. There is a περιχώρησις of theſe two Natures, ſay the Fathers, whereby they mean (i) a mutual Inexiſtence and Commeation, which they illuſtrate by a Globe of Iron plac'd in the Air all-fiery, and by a drop of Vinegar poured into the Sea; both which (the Globe of Iron and the Vinegar) are intrinſecally receiv'd into the Air and into the Sea: The Humane Nature therefore was receiv'd by the Divine intrinſecally, and the Ancients ſay, the Humane Nature was deify'd, (k) the whole of which the Divinity in ſome ſort transform'd into it ſelf, and being conjoined and wholly inſerted into it (the Divinity) ſo far as was poſſible, made it like unto it ſelf. The Perichoreſis immixing the whole Natures, and inſerting the one into the other. The Divine Nature once having made an Immeation through the Fleſh, gave to it an inexplicable Immeation into it ſelf, which is called Unition. Which Immeation and Unition of the Divine Nature and the Fleſh muſt be an intrinſic Mutation of them both, as the Souls Immeation of the Body and their Unition is an intrinſic Mutation both of Soul and Body. And it muſt be accounted ſuch, becauſe this Union between the Divine and Humane Nature can be no leſs intrinſic than a vital Union. For the Scholaſtic Theology affirmeth (u) that the Union between God and Man is far greater than between Soul and Fleſh. It diſputeth (w) that the perſonal Union of the two Natures is (next to the Union of the Perſons in the Trinity) the greateſt and cloſeſt Union. If therefore the Humane Nature is an Adjunct of the Divine Nature, it is receiv'd by it at a great rate intrinſecally, which cannot be without an intrinſic Mutation of it.

(h) Gonet. T. 11. Diſp. 2. Art. 1. S. 3. Valentia T. 4. Diſp. 1. Qu. 1. Punct. 2. Jeanes mixture of Scholaſt. Divin. with Pract. p. 82. ed. 1.

(i) Petav. T. 4. l. 4. c. 14. S. 3, 5.

(k) Quippe quam totam in ſeſe quodammodo transformavit divinitas, & ſibi concertam ac penitus inſitam, quàm potuit fieri ſimillimam effecit. Περιχώρησις totas in ſe naturas immiſcens & inſerens. Divina natura cum per carnem ſemel immeavit, dedit etiam carni inexplicabilem in ſeipſam immeationem, quam unitionem vocant. Idem Ibid. S. 7, 9, 12.

(u) Ibid. l. 4. c. 13. S. 14.

(w) Valentia T. 4. Diſp. 1. Qu. 2. Punct. 6.

IV. A further Objection is in this Theology rais'd (againſt its Incarnation) from the conſequent Incarnatian of the other Divine Perſons. For this was the Aſſertion of a certain Clerk in Anſelm (x) either the Father, Son and Holy Ghoſt muſt be ſaid to be three Gods, or if theſe three are one God, it muſt ſaid, that the Father and the Holy Ghoſt were incarnate, if the Son was incarnate. For if the Deity of theſe three is one, and this was united to the Humanity, the three Perſons muſt be united thereto; the Deity being the Eſſence common to the three three Perſons, if this was united to the Humanity, it could not be, but that every Perſon muſt be united thereto. This Clerk could not ſuppoſe the ſame numerical Scholaſtic Divine Subſtance, to be incarnate and not incarnate: Or that it was incarnate, yet two Perſons indiſtinct from it (the Divine Nature and a Divine Perſon being una ſimpliciſſima res) were not incarnate. Agreeably to his Argument the Schoolmen introduce this Objection againſt their own Theology. (y) That which belongeth to the Divine Nature, is common to all the Divine Perſons: But the Divine Nature aſſum'd the Humane Nature and was incarnate; therefore all the three Perſons. In anſwering this Objection the School-doctors are divided in their Opinion. (z) For Durandus (with whom ſome others ſymbolize in great degree) is of Opinion, that in the Incarnation there were two Unions: The firſt and chief is of the Humane Nature and the Divine, whereby he ſuppoſeth the dependence of the Humane Nature to be primarily terminated, and not by the perſonal Propriety of the Word. The other is of the Humane Nature and the Perſonality of the Word, whereby he ſuppoſeth the Aſſumption (or Incarnation) to have been completed, and that this is the Reaſon, why the Word only is incarnate, not the Father or the Holy Ghoſt. But the generality of the School-doctors accuſe this Opinion of Durandus, that it inferreth the Incarnation of all the Divine Perſons, and therefore they reject it, and their Opinion is an inverſion of it. For they ſuppoſe, that the Union of the Humane Nature was primarily and immediately by and in the perſonal Propriety of the Word, and ſecondarily with the Divine Eſſence that he is. Which Divine Eſſence (howſoever modify'd and determin'd by the perſonal Propriety of the Word) is no other than the one Scholaſtic Divine Eſſence common to the three Divine Perſons This one Scholaſtic Divine Eſſence therefore was incarnate, and conſequently the Scholaſtic Divine Eſſence of the Father was incarnate (though not as his Eſſence) and the ſame muſt be ſaid of the Scholaſtic Divine Eſſence of the Holy Ghoſt. And in this Senſe ſome School-doctors ſay (a) res quæ eſt pater (id quod eſt pater) incarnata dicitur, nempe eſſentia divina. The thing that is the Father, namely the Scholaſtic Eſſence of his Perſon, was incarnate. And if the Scholaſtic Eſſence of his Perſon was incarnate, it is not poſſible, but that himſelf muſt be incarnate. (b) For nothing is ſo intimious to a thing, ſo inward and next to it as its Eſſence. And the Eſſence of a Perſon is not his perſonal Propriety (which in the Divine Perſons is a Relation) but his Nature it ſelf. Moreover, the perſonal Propriety of the Father and the Scholaſtic Eſſence of his Perſon are una ſimpliciſſima res, there is no diſtinction between them ex parte rei; therefore the Incarnation of the Scholaſtic Eſſence of his Perſon implieth the Incarnation of his perſonal Propriety. And thus it appeareth, that the Article of the Incarnation in the Senſe of the Scholaſtic Theology implieth and inferreth the Incarnation of the whole Trinity.

(x) Vaſq. in 3. Par. Th. T. 1. Diſp. 23. c. 1.

V. Some marvellous incredible Incongruities ſeemingly ſuch (c) the Scholaſtic Theology obſerveth in its own Scheme of the Incarnation; whence a Judgment may be made touching the true account of it. For in our Hypotheſis touching the Incarnation there is nothing that carrieth the face of an incredible Incongruity. That God by proper natural Generation did of a pure Virgin beget a Son, his imperial Son (and therefore Creature-tranſcendent) a Perſon of the imperial Eſtate of the Godhead, an imperial Head of the Holy Empire, eſſentially an Humane-divine Perſon (according to his Generation) and of an Eſſence that is Humane-divine, this hath nothing in it of incredible Incongruity (ſeemingly ſuch) but the whole of it is according to the natural and agreeable order of things. Nor is there any thing of Incongruity in ſuppoſing, that this Divine Prince was in the form of God, but to fulfil an Oeconomy (diveſting himſelf of his exteriour Deiformity by a wondrous Humiliation) he became real Humane Fleſh. For this change of his exteriour Subſtance (his true σάρκωσις, or Incarnation) is of as eaſie Conception as his Transfiguration into Glory on the Holy Mount, and his diveſting himſelf of that Glory and returning to his former meanneſs of Humanity. Nor is there any thing of Incongruity in this, that Origen accounteth a marvellous ſeeming Incongruity, that the very Logos of the Father, the Wiſdom of God it ſelf, ſo great a Power of the Divine Majeſty, muſt be ſuppos'd within the Circumſcription of a Man that appear'd in Judea; for theſe great things are imply'd in his Idea, as he is the Divine imperial Son. But this Father had much more reaſon, to account this common Hypotheſis a marvellous ſeeming Incongruity, that the very Wiſdom of God (the Abſtract Logos) entred the Privy Parts of a Woman, was born a little Infant and cried like other crying Children. This he deſervedly accounteth a marvellous ſeeming Incongruity; and conſequently it is a marvellous ſeeming Incongruity, that the Abſtract Logos ſhould ſuſtain a Generation for us, and that without any neceſſity or reaſon imaginable. For if he wanted an Humane Body, therein to fulfill an Oeconomy, he might have aſſum'd one without a Generation, and then we might have ſaid, as the Ancients ſpeak (d) Verbum Dei humano ſe miſcuit corpori, the Logos of God commix'd himſelf with an Humane Body. But this the Scholaſtic Theology (e) ſuppoſeth to have been done by a Generation (Deus conceptus eſt in utero ſanctiſſimæ matris & genitus, non tamen quà Deus eſt, ſed ut homo;) for by a marvellous ſeeming Incongruity this Theology ever and anon calleth it a Generation, and yet ever and anon denieth it to have been a Generation. By a like Incongruity it ſuppoſeth one intellectual Nature, to have aſſumed another, which intellectual aſſuming Nature was a Divine Perſon (the Abſtract eternal Logos) and not meerly a Divine Nature, which ſome chuſe to ſubſtitute inſtead of a Divine Perſon.

(f) I believe in his only Son Jeſus Chriſt, in whom beſides Humane Nature there is alſo a Divine, which was not only exiſtent before his Nativity of the Virgin Mary, but from Eternity.

SECTION VII.

The Seventh Diſagreement.

I. IN the Scholaſtic Incarnation there are ſeveral Difficulties complicated with great Abſurdities touching Exiſtence, Subſiſtence, Hypoſtaſis and Perſona, not only as they concern the Divinity, but as they concern the Humanity of Chriſt. For amongſt the School-doctors it is a Controverſie (warmly debated) whether the Humanity of Chriſt be a proper Exiſtent (or hath its proper Exiſtence) or whether it exiſteth only by the Exiſtence of the Word (having no Exiſtence of its own) which is a Queſtion, that cannot but be out of all Queſtion with all Men, that have not their Underſtandings deprav'd by the vain Speculations of Scholaſticiſm. For if the Humanity of Chriſt hath not its proper Exiſtence (g) it muſt be reputed a non-exiſtent, non-ens, non-extra cauſas productum, nihil in natura rerum. Thus the Humane Nature (the principal part whereof is the great Reality and Subſtantiality) is dwindled into a Non-entity, and who will ſet his Eyes upon that which is not? But how abſurd ſoever this Conceit is (that the Humane Nature with all its Properties and Perfections is not a proper Exiſtent) it ſerveth to intricate and perplex the Scholaſtic Incarnation. (h) For ſome think the Humane Nature's proper Exiſtence incompoſſible with the Hypoſtatical Union, inconſiſtent with the Bl. Virgin's being the Mother of God, or but ſcarce conſiſtent with the ſubſtantial Union of the two Natures.

(y) Valentia T. 4. Diſp. 1. Qu. 3. Punct. 1.

(z) Idem ibid. & Vasq. ſupr. Diſp. 26 & 28. Petav. T. 4. l. 2. c. 4. & l. 4. c. 8. & l. 5. c. 1. & l. 8. c. 8. S. 15.

(a) Valentia ſupr.

(b) Petav. T. 4. l. 8. c. 10. S. 15.

(c) Orig. περὶ ἀρχῶν. l. 2. c. 6.

(d) Jul. Firm. de error. prof. rel. p. 51.

(e) Petav. T. 4. l. 16. c. 4. S. 7.

(f) Credo in filium ejus unigenitum Jeſum Chriſtum, in quo præter naturam humanam eſt etiam divina, quæ non tantum ante nativitatem ejus ex Maria Virgine, ſed etiam ab æterno extitit. Curcel. Diſſ. de Voc. Trin. n. 4.

Exiſtence and Subſiſtence are nicely diſtinguiſhed in the Modern Scholaſtic Theology: But touching the Scholaſtic Theology of the Church in general it muſt be ſaid, that there is in it a vaſt confuſion and ambiguity in the uſe of theſe terms οὐσία, φύσις, ὑπόστασις, Eſſence, Nature, Suppoſitum, Perſon, Subſtance, Subſiſtence, Exiſtence. (i) Exiſtence and Subſiſtence amongſt the ancient Scholaſtic Divines of the Church are uſed as concrete Names; for this is the Faith which they profeſs touching the Trinity unam eſſe ſubſtantiam, ſubſiſtentias tres, that there is one Subſtance (or Eſſence) three Subſiſtences, whereby they mean Perſons, and ſo they define a Perſon incommunicabilis exiſtentia, an incommunicable Exiſtence. But amongſt the School-divines of later times Exiſtence and Subſiſtence ſignifie as Aſtract Names; and ſo Exiſtence is the mode of Being commonly known by that Name (and better known by that Name alone than by a Definition;) and of Subſtance Aquinas ſaith (k) As it exiſteth by it ſelf and not in another, it is called Subſiſtence: For we ſay, thoſe things ſubſiſt, which exiſt in themſelves not in another. This mode of Exiſtence which is perſeity of Exiſtence, is ſignified by Subſiſtentia, which (as Aquinas ſaith) anſwereth to the Greek Hypoſtaſis. The Name Subſiſtence therefore is in this Theology ſometimes of a larger and ſometimes of a ſtricter Acceptation. It is of a larger ſignification, when it ſignifieth only that perſeity of Exiſtence, which conſtituteth Subſtance in contradiſtinction to Accidents, whoſe Eſſence is, to be inherent in another as in a Subject ſupporting them, without which they cannot exiſt or ſupport themſelves. But Subſtance is a thing not ſo inhering in another, not ſubjected in it, nor ſo ſupported by it, but exiſting by it ſelf. And this is one of the Significations of Hypoſtaſis Subſiſtence (l) it ſignifieth (quod per ſeſe extat, quales ſunt primæ & individuæ ſubſtantiæ) that which exiſteth by it ſelf, ſuch as are the firſt and ſingular Subſtances, excluding Accidents which are not called Hypoſtaſes or Subſiſtences. So the Alexandrian Dionyſius taketh Hypoſtaſis for Subſtance by it ſelf exiſtent, ſuch as is called by Philoſophers the Firſt, ſingular or individual Subſtance. But in this Theology Subſiſtence ſignifieth in a narrower Acceptation; moſt uſually it ſignifieth that mode or perſeity of Exiſtence, which conſtituteth a Scholaſtic Suppoſitum.

II. For this is one of the Ambiguities of this Theology; oftentimes it telleth us (m) that what the Greeks call Hypoſtaſis is with us Subſtantia (n) it largely diſcourſeth, that according to the primary Signification of Words the Greek Hypoſtaſis is in Latin Subſtantia, and alſo (o) that the Latin Subſiſtentia is the ſame with the Greek Hypoſtaſis, and Hypoſtaſis is the ſame with Suppoſitum (p) and that Scholaſticks mean by Subſiſtence that mode, whereby a thing produced into Being ſo exiſteth, as to be by it ſelf, and not inherent in another (as Accidents;) it ſo defineth Suppoſitum, as if it meant the firſt or ſingular Subſtance without any diſtinction or limitation of Senſe (q) Suppoſitum nihil aliud eſt quàm natura ſingularis per ſe Subſiſtens, and at the ſame rate it uſually defineth a Perſon which is Suppoſitum rationale (r) perſona eſt rationalis naturæ individua ſubſtantia, as if a rational individual Subſtance was the definition of a Perſon, and an individual Subſtance was the definition of a Suppoſitum. Such an appearance of things there is in this Theology, but in the interiours of it they are of another Aſpect; for there we find, that a ſingular or individual Subſtance in the ordinary Senſe is not ſufficient, to conſtitute a Scholaſtic Suppoſitum; and that the perſeity of Exiſtence conſtitutive of a Suppoſitum is of another Notion than that which is conſtitutive of a Subſtance. For a Suppoſitum is a ſingular Subſtance, that is a thing of that Subſiſtence by it ſelf, which is an intire Subſiſtence of its own, and therefore of ſuch a mode of Exiſtence, which is a ſeparate proper Exiſtence, oppoſite to exiſting in another either as a part in the whole, or as an Adjunct in the Subject, oppoſite to the being properly a Component part or an incomplete Being (made for the Completion of another) oppoſite to the being terminated and ſuſtained by another (s) and becauſe it is a ſingular Subſtance it is not notionally communicable (common to more) as Univerſals are; nor is it really communicable as exiſting in another, or as part is communicated to part (with which it is conjoined, to make one whole that is unum per ſe) or otherwiſe inconſiſtently with the condition of a complete and ſeparately exiſtent Subſtance; for it is of an intire Subſiſtence of its own. Whence it is definitively denominated ἰδιοσύστατον, that which is of ſole, ſeparate, intire Conſiſtence, ἰδιοπεριόριστον, that which is of its own Termination and Circumſcription, ἰδιοϋπόστατον, that which hath its proper intire Subſiſtence.

III. Hypoſtaſis in the Scholaſtic Incarnation is of a Senſe peculiarly Scholaſtical, alien from the Scriptural and the many popular ſignifications of it. In the New Teſtament three times in our Tranſlation it is rendred Confidence, but ſometimes it is rendred Subſtance, and ſo Kircher in his Concordance no leſs than eight times rendreth it Subſtance, which ſeemeth to be the genuine Verſion of it, Heb. 11. 1. Faith is the Subſtance of things hoped for; for as to us the future Hopes of Believers have a Reality, Solidity and Subſtance by Faith, which is the Nature and eminent Property thereof. Agreeably to which Senſe (t) S. Chryſoſtom, Theodoret, Oecumenius and ſeveral others interpret the place. In another place of this Divine Author ὑπόστασις, is rendred Subſtance by the vulg. Latin (u) and ſeveral of the ancient Writers. Heb. 1. 3. Who being the brightneſs of his Glory and the expreſs Image of his Subſtance. So thoſe ancient Writers render it, nor is our Tranſlation, which rendreth it Perſon, diſſonant in Senſe from their Verſion, if by Perſon we underſtand his perſonal Subſtance (or Eſſence) or his Perſon as to his Subſtance (or Eſſence) meaning his Divine vital Eſſence. But in ſtating and repreſenting the Article of the Trinity ὑπόστασις, as it ſignifieth Eſſence, Nature and Subſtance, muſt be carefully diſtinguiſh'd from ὑπόστασις, as it ſignifieth Perſon, as the Church found neceſſary by ſad Experience (w) when great Troubles aroſe in the Eaſtern Parts meerly from the Ambiguity of the term Hypoſtaſis, when the Catholicks at Antioch made a Schiſm amongſt themſelves, one Party (that of Meletius) confeſſing three Hypoſtaſes, the other Party (that of Paulinus) denying three Hypoſtaſes; and when the Eaſtern and Weſtern Churches were at great variance upon this account; the Greeks aſſerted three Hypoſtaſes and one Eſſence, the Latins aſſerted one Hypoſtaſis and three Perſons. Hypoſtaſis in the Article of the Trinity hath been us'd to ſignifie Nature or Eſſence, but in the Article of the Incarnation it is us'd only to ſignifie a Perſon or a Suppoſitum, that is conſtituted ſuch by Subſiſtence (which is different from Exiſtence as being narrower than it, and as being τρόπος ὑπάρξεως, a mode of Exiſtence) and as it ſignifieth a Suppoſitum, it is of a ſenſe peculiarly Scholaſtical.

(g) Petav. T. 4. l. 5. c. 6.

(h) Vaſq: in 3. Par. Th. T. 1. Diſp. 71. c. 1. Gonet. Clyp. T. 11. Diſp. 8. Art. 2.

(i) Petav. de Trin. l. 4. c. 3. S. 6. &c.

(k) Secundum quod per ſe exiſtit & non in alio vocatur ſubſiſtentia. Illa enim ſubſiſtere dicimus, quæ non in alio ſed in ſe exiſtunt. 1a Qu. 29. Art. 2.

(l) Petav. ſupr. l. 4. c. 1. S. 5. & c. 3. S. 6. & c. 1. S. 13.

(m) Ibid. l. 4. c. 1. & c. 2. S. 9.

(n) Vaſq. in Th. 1. Par. T. 2. Diſp. 124. c. 5

(o) Idem in 3. Par. T. 1. Diſp. 32. c. 1.

(p) Petav. ſupr.

(q) Idem T. 4. l. 8. c. 2. S. 1.

(r) Idem de Trin. l. 4. c. 9.

(s) Ibid. c. 8. & T. 4. l. 5. c. 5. S. 5.

(t) Idem de Trin. 4. c. 2. S. 7.

Perſon (according to this Theology) compriſeth (x) the common Nature or Eſſence (Generical and Specific) and conſequently thoſe Properties, which are called φυσικὰ ἰδιώματα, the natural and eſſential Properties, which are common to the whole Species and to all the individuals thereof. The actual Exiſtence alſo of this Nature or Eſſence, whence it defineth an Hypoſtaſis (naturam communem in individuo aliquo reipſa & actu exiſtentem) the common Nature actually exiſting in ſome individual. A Complexion alſo or Conglobation of ὑποστατικὰ ἰδιώματα, hypoſtatical or perſonal Properties, Accidents and Qualities, which are individuating, and whereby one individual is diſcern'd and diſtinguiſh'd from another. Alſo the hypoſtatical Property (ὑποστατικὸν ἰδίωμα,) eminently ſuch, which is that mode of Exiſtence, whereby a particular Subſtance per ſe ſubſiſtit, or hath an intire Subſiſtence of its own, whereby it is not only individual in the ordinary Senſe, but ſo individual as to be incommunicable. And ſo this Theology (which ſuppoſeth, that a Perſon together with thoſe other Requiſites compriſeth an intellectual Nature, as all acknowledge) underſtandeth that uſual definition of a Perſon before-mention'd, Eſt rationalis naturæ individua ſubſtantia, it is an individual (incommunicable) Subſtance of a rational Nature. Thus the Scholaſtic Theology in its Notices of Exiſtence, Subſiſtence, Suppoſitum, Hypoſtaſis and Perſona (as they concern the Incarnation) appeareth to be operoſe and full of difficulties; but that is not all; for this Theology complicateth them alſo with no ſmall Abſurdities, ſuch as theſe following.

IV. This Theology is not content with ſuch an Hypoſtaſis or Suppoſitum, which is agreeable to Nature and natural Science, but introduceth ſuch a Notion thereof which is agreeable to its ſupernatural Myſteries, but is alien from Nature and natural Science, and againſt the Senſe of Philoſophy. For Philoſophy doth not acknowledge the Scholaſtic Hypoſtaſis or Suppoſitum, that is different from and ſuperadditional unto a ſingular or individual Nature and Subſtance (which is a complete Subſtance;) this being purely a product of the Scholaſticiſm of Chriſtendom, meerly excogitated to ſerve the Hypotheſis of its Trinity and Incarnation, and therefore they that know not thoſe Hypotheſes, cannot ſo much as dream of the Scholaſtic Hypoſtaſis or Suppoſitum. (y) Ariſtotle was utterly ignorant of Suppoſitum or Hypoſtaſis, as it is uſed in the Schools, and as it differeth from Nature or Subſtance. Ariſtotle's Nature or Subſtance doth not conſtitute a Scholaſtic Suppoſitum; for Deus præciſè, or the Scholaſtic Divine Eſſence is not a Scholaſtic Suppoſitum. The Scholaſtic Subſiſtence or Suppoſitality (according to the Schools) may be ſeparated from Ariſtotle's Nature or Subſtance, which being ſeparated, the Nature or Subſtance (although remaining ſuch) is not a Scholaſtic Suppoſitum, which therefore containeth a Superadditional to Ariſtotle's Nature or Subſtance, and accordingly Scholaſtic Divines Diſpute amongſt themſelves, what it is, that Suppoſitum ſuperaddeth to Nature or Subſtance? (z) Ariſtotle and the reſt of the Philoſophers they explode, and accuſe them, to be the Fountain of Hereſies, of the Sabellians (that held but one Divine Perſon, becauſe there is but one Divine Eſſence or Subſtance) of the Arians and the Tritheites, that held three Eſſences as well as three Perſons. (a) This is that which to the Hereticks is the cauſe of Error, they ſuppoſe, that Nature and Hypoſtaſis are the ſame. For this is their Opinion, that if any Nature be perfect, nothing more is requiſite to make it an Hypoſtaſis, or, if it be of the rational kind, a Perſon. Which Opinion is chiefly taken from the Philoſophy of Ariſtotle. According to the Greek Philoſophy they call Natures Hypoſtaſes and Perſons; and do not ſay three Hypoſtaſes in the Holy Trinity, leſt they ſeem to affirm three Natures: Nor two Natures in Chriſt, leſt they ſeem to confeſs two Hypoſtaſes and Perſons in him. So far they were erroneous indeed (if they did not acknowledge three Hypoſtaſes in the Holy Trinity and two Natures in Chriſt:) But if by a perfect Nature they meant an individual Subſtance perfect in Eſſence and a complete Subſtance (not made for the Completion of any other) they were not erroneous, but truly Orthodox in ſuppoſing, that ſuch a Nature is an Hypoſtaſis or Perſon, and in theſe Philoſophical Points they followed far better Leaders (the ancient Philoſophers) than the Scholaſtic Divines. But is it not a grand abſurdity, to ſuppoſe, that Chriſtianity conſiſteth in Philoſophical Points, ſuch as introduce a grand alteration in natural Science, ſuch as quite tranſcend it and the Schools of ſecular Learning in Metaphyſical Subtilty, and ſuch as all natural Science is againſt? Chriſtianity maketh no alteration in the Rights of Men to the Goods of this World, their Powers and Privileges in Civil Societies: Nor doth it make any alteration in the natural Sciences, but preſerveth

(u) Ibid. l. 6. c. 6.

(w) Ibid. l. 4. c. 4.

(x) Ibid. c. 7, 8. & T. 4. l. 2. S. 12. & l. 3. c. 14. S. 2 & l. 5. c. 7. S. 8. & l. 6. c. 1. S. 7.

(y) Suppoſitum vel Hypoſtaſin, quatenus uſurpatur in Scholis, & ut ab natura vel ſubſtantia differt, funditus ignoravit Ariſtoteles. Ibid. l. 8. c. 2. S. 2.

(z) Idem de Trin. l. 4. c. 1. S. 4.

(a) Hoc eſt quod hæreticis errorem objicit, quod idem eſſe naturam & hypoſtaſim arbitrantur. Sic enim perſuaſum habebant: Naturam omnem perfectam & ſuis abſolutam numeris, nihil deſiderare amplius, quo minus hypoſtaſis, & ſi quidem è genere ſit rationalium, perſona cenſeatur. Quod ex Ariſtotelis præſertim Philoſophia ſumptum eſſe demonſtravimus. T. Petav. 4. l. 5. c. 7. S. 1.

veth theſe things, as it found them. Hypoſtaſis, Suppoſitum, Perſona, are firſt found in Nature, and therefore the Idea of them muſt neceſſarily belong to Naturaliſts and natural Science. But the Scholaſtic Theology (with reſpect to its Trinity and Incarnation) formeth ſuch an Idea of them, as can never enter into any meer Naturaliſt's Head. (b) Without the Myſtery of the Incarnation the Philoſophers perhaps could not arrive at the diſtinction of Nature and Suppoſitum. No Humane Reaſon could reach thither. But is it credible, that no Philoſophy, no Humane Reaſon could underſtand, how Hypoſtaſes or Perſons are to be defin'd and diſtinguiſh'd? Water, Wood, Stone, Metals, Minerals are Hypoſtaſes, and is it the Priviledge of School-divines (that are no Naturaliſts) to define and determine, whether theſe be Hypoſtaſes, and whether Men and Women are Perſons or not?

V. This Theology formeth the Idea of Hypoſtaſis, Suppoſitum, Perſona, with ſo great irregularity, as plainly proveth it erroneous and illegitimate. For it is not conſiſtent with it ſelf in defining Hypoſtaſis. (c) From the ſenſe of the Ancients one may define Hypoſtaſis the common Nature actually and indeed exiſting in ſome individual. But if Scholaſtic Divines would ſtand to this definition, they muſt ſuppoſe Chriſt's Humane Nature to be no Adjunct, but in conſort with the Divine a Suppoſitum. There is an irregular Ambiguity in an irregular repetition of Perſeity in their Definitions. For (d) ſubſtantia eſt res per ſe ſubſiſtens, ſo Subſtance is defin'd: And Suppoſitum (which muſt be conſidered as different from Subſtance;) is thus defin'd (e) individua ſubſtantia per ſe ſubſiſtens. A Suppoſitum is conſtituted ſuch by Subſiſtence; and if we aſk, what is Subſiſtence? Their Anſwer is (f) per ſe eſſe, which is definitive of Subſtance, and is irregularly repeated in the Definition of Suppoſitum and of the Subſiſtence, which is ſuppos'd to conſtitute it. Regular Definitions are ſhort and perſpicuous: But generally the Sholaſtic Divines Definitions of a Suppoſitum are irregularly long and irregularly obſcure; nor can they be otherwiſe, if they be ſuch, as themſelves account accurate. Which is a manifeſt Indication, that their Scholaſtic Myſteries put them unavoidably upon unfair Dealing, elſe they would not make ſuch irregular Definitions as theſe are. (g) Suppoſitum eſt ſubſtantia ſingularis, completa & incommunicabilis. (h) Eſt individua ſubſtantia per ſemetipſum exiſtens (vel Subſiſtens) & propria terminatione circumſcripta. A Suppoſitum muſt not be defin'd meerly an individual Subſtance complete, but the term incommunicable muſt be added, elſe the Scholaſtic Divine Eſſence will be a Suppoſitum and a Perſon. And a Suppoſitum muſt not be defin'd meerly an individual Subſtance or Nature complete, but the terms per ſe ſubſiſtens, ἰδιοπεριόριστος, (or the like) muſt be added, elſe the Humane Nature of Chriſt will be much more than an Adjunct or Accident. And thus the Scholaſtick Divines accommodate their Definitions of a Suppoſitum, to agree with their own Prejudices (their Trinity and Incarnation) whereas they ought to judge of the Truth of them by the regular and genuine Definition of a Suppoſitum, which muſt conſiſt of a generical Nature and a ſpecific difference. The generical Nature (as all agree) is an individual Eſſence, Nature or Subſtance. The term complete added hereto is manifeſtly the ſpecific difference. For by an Hypoſtaſis or Suppoſitum is not meant, that which is ſo incomplete, that it only belongeth to a Suppoſitum, or that which is naturally deſign'd for the Completion of a Suppoſitum, but if ſeveral things concur, that is the Hypoſtaſis or Suppoſitum, which is not naturally a part and incomplete, not naturally deſign'd for the Completion of any other, but things concur to the Completion of it. Which is a complete Eſſence, Nature or Subſtance, (i) hath an intire Subſiſtance of its own, whoſe ſuppoſitality importeth an eminency of Subſiſtence, and the utmoſt perfection of Exiſtence in things unintelligent. All the Properties and Attributes that School-Divines deſcribe it by, ſpeak it complete, and in all their Definitions of it the term complete is one part of the ſpecific difference. But they ought to make it the whole of the ſpecific difference; for their copulative Definitions of a Suppoſitum are irregular and illegitimate; the term complete virtually compriſeth all the differencing Properties, which are rightly aſcrib'd to a Suppoſitum, is the ſummary of them all, and is radical to them all. For therefore the Hypoſtaſis or Suppoſitum doth per ſe ſubſiſtere, is notionally and really incommunicable, becauſe it is a complete Subſtance, not made for the Completion of any other. And if this is the genuine Definition of it ſingularis ſubſtantia completa, the Scholaſtic Divine Eſſence (or Deus preciſè apprehenſus) is neceſſarily a Suppoſitum and a Perſon, but ſuch is not the Divine Nature in Chriſt; and conſequently the Scholaſtic Trinity and Incarnation conſiſteth not with the genuine Definition of a Suppoſitum.

VI. The Scholaſtic Theology both aſſerteth and denieth Chriſt's Human Nature, to be a Suppoſitum, and both irregularly. The School-doctors are of various Opinions touching what Suppoſitum (or Hypoſtaſis) addeth unto Nature: (k) But the generality of them agree, that the Complement added to a Nature whereby it is conſtituted a Suppoſitum, is (ſomewhat poſitive) that mode of Exiſtence commonly called modus per ſe exiſtendi, upon account whereof the Exiſtence of a Nature is called Subſiſtence, whereby a Nature or Subſtance is conſtituted a complete Subſtance (l) which is a Suppoſitum. But ſuch is not Chriſt's Humane Nature, ſuch are not the Parts of Humane Nature, that upon this account and for this only reaſon are incomplete Subſtances, becauſe they are properly and naturally Parts, they are naturally deſign'd, to be Parts of one Whole, and have an habitude thereto, and to each other as Parts, that require to be conjoyn'd for the Compoſition thereof. (m) In compoſitionem totius imperfecta veniunt tanquam ipſius partes. But if they were not Parts properly ſo called, if each of them was properly and naturally (n) totum aliquid & integrum quod

(b) Myſterio Incarnationis dimiſſo. Philoſophi fortaſſe non potuiſſent devenire ad diſtinctionem naturæ & ſuppoſiti. Scheibler. Met. l. 2. c. 2. Art. 5. Punct. 5. Nulla humana ratio eò pertingere potuit. Petav. T. 4. l. 6. c. 1. S. 3.

(c) Licebit hypoſtaſim ex antiquorum ſenſu definire, naturam communem in individuo aliquo reipſa & actu exiſtentm. Ibid. l. 6. c. 1. S. 7.

(d) Ibid. l. 2. c. 3. S. 9.

(e) Ibid. l. 3. c. 12. S. 2. & l. 8. c. 2. S. 1.

(f) Vaſq. in Th. 3. Par. T. 1. Diſp. 32. c. 4.

(g) Scheibl. ſupr. 2. Punct. 2.

(h) Petav. ſupr. l. 3. c. 12. S. 2.

(i) Hypoſtaſis ſignificat ſubſtantiam particularem, non quocunque modo, ſed prout eſt in ſuo complemento. Aquin. 3. Qu. 2. Art. 3.

(k) Vaſq. in Th. 3. Par. T. 1. Diſp. 31.

(l) Completam habet eſſentiam, non ſolùm quia numeris omnibus ſuis, hoc eſt, gradibus ſive partibus eſſentiam conſtituentibus abſolvitur: ſed etiam quia caret habitudine partis ad totum, neque ex naturæ ſuæ conditione poſtulat, ut cum altero in compoſitionem totius cujuſpiam propriè dicti ac naturam veniat: quo uno rationis particeps anima ab hypoſtaſis & perſonæ proprietate ſecernitur. Tum verò perfectum ſubſiſtendi modum obtinet, qui eam ab alterius cujuſcunque nexu & conſortio vindicat. Petav. T. 4. l. 5. c. S. 9.

(m) Ibid. l. 3. c. 9. S. 4.

(n) Ibid. l. 5. c. 5. S. 5.

quod ἰδιοσύστατον Græci nominant, each of them would have an intire Subſiſtance of its own, and would be a complete Subſtance or a Suppoſitum. Humane Nature therefore unleſs it can be a Part properly and naturally ſuch, muſt neceſſarily be a complete Subſtance, (o) not only in reſpect of Eſſence, but alſo in reſpect of its mode of Exiſtence. But according to this Theology (p) Humane Nature cannot be properly and naturally a part (nec humana ipſa natura eſt imperfecta, neque pars eſſe poteſt naturæ alterius) therefore according to this Theology Chriſt's Humane Nature is a Suppoſitum and a Perſon. As that mode of Exiſtence Subſiſtence incapacitateth any Subſtance, to be a Part properly ſo called: So whatever Subſtance is incapable of being a Part properly ſo called, for that reaſon hath that mode of Exiſtence. That which cannot exiſt but as a complete Subſtance (not made for the completion of any other) cannot exiſt but as an Hypoſtaſis. And ſuch is Chriſt's Humane Nature, as the Scholaſtic Theology implieth, which as irregularly denieth what it irregularly aſſerteth; for it ſuppoſeth Chriſt's Humane Nature, to be adjoyn'd and apply'd to a Divine Perſon, that it may ſubſiſt.

VII. The Scholaſtic Theology (touching the Incarnation) maketh Chriſt's Humane Nature no Subſtance. For that which is a Subſtance, and is not a part properly ſo called, muſt be an Hypoſtaſis, ſubſtantia ſingularis completa, not made for the completion of any other. That perſeity of Exiſtence which conſtituteth a Subſtance, wanteth nothing, to make it that perſeity of Exiſtence, which conſtituteth a Suppoſitum, but only this Negation, The not being a part properly ſo called. Such is Chriſt's Humane Nature according to this Theology, which alſo denieth it to be an Hypoſtaſis, and therefore implicitly denieth it, to be a Subſtance. And not only implicitly, but more expreſly this Theology denieth the Humane Nature of Chriſt, to be a Subſtance. For a Subſtance that ſubſiſteth muſt ſubſiſt by it ſelf as a Subſtance and by being ſuch: But according to this Theology Chriſt's Humane Nature doth not ſubſiſt by it ſelf as a Subſtance and by being ſuch; it giveth a very different account of the Subſiſtence thereof, (q) that it doth ſubſiſt, although not by its own but another's ὑποστατικὸν ἰδίωμα, hypoſtatic Propriety, that it could ſubſiſt by its own Propriety, if being left to it ſelf it exiſted ſeparately; that this one thing conſtituteth it a Subſtance (proprio poſſe modo ſubſiſtere) that it can ſubſiſt by its proper mode: but really and actually to ſubſiſt by its proper efficacy and mode, this is not eſſential to a Subſtance, as the actual uſe of Reaſon is not eſſential to a rational Animal. But there is the ſame reaſon for Subſtance as for the other Predicaments (of Quantity and ſuch more;) for a Subſtance can no more have its ſubſiſtence by the Subſtance of another, than a Body can have Quantity by the Dimenſions of another. As a Body would be without Quantity, if it was not for its own Dimenſions: So a Subſtance would be without Subſiſtence, if it did not ſubſiſt by it ſelf as a Subſtance. To ſay, that it could ſubſiſt, if being left to it ſelf it exiſted ſeparately, is to ſay, that it is but potentially, not really and actually a Subſtance, as Infants are but potentially and aptitudinally, not actually rational. This is the utmoſt of Subſtantiality, which this Theology attributeth to the Humane Nature of Chriſt; (r) it is ἐνυπόστατος, as ſubſiſting in the Logos, and ſubſiſting by the Subſiſtence thereof; it is ἀνυπόστατος, as being no Hypoſtaſis; and it is thus far ἀνούσιος, unſubſtantial, it wanteth (proprio ſubſtantiæ modo ac velut forma) the proper mode of Subſtance and as it were the form thereof. Yet Subſtance it is, if the Scholaſticks rightly define Subſtance. (s) The firſt Subſtance is defined, That which is of aptitude, to ſubſiſt by it ſelf and not in another. Thus the true Nature and Notion of things is perverted, to comply with the Scholaſticiſm of the Incarnation, which alloweth this reaſoning; The Humane Nature is a Subſtance; if therefore it exiſteth, it exiſteth as a Subſtance: but it cannot allow this reaſoning; The Humane Nature is a Subſtance; if therefore it ſubſiſteth, it ſubſiſteth as a Subſtance; for it muſt ſubſiſt by the ſubſiſtence of the Logos; elſe it will be an Hypoſtaſis and an Humane Perſon. But there is no fear of ſuch a Conſequence, if the Abſtract Logos and Subſiſtence therein be remov'd from our Saviour's Eſſence; which is The divine vital Eſſence (as it is Vital Sanctity the derivative) wherewith the Humane Nature is eſſentially in Union and Conjunction. This complex Eſſence is an Hypoſtaſis and a Perſon, and ſo is the Humane Nature, but not otherwiſe than as in Union and Conjunction with the Divine (ſo far it is an Hypoſtaſis and a Perſon;) the Humane Nature alſo ſubſiſteth and ſubſiſteth as a Subſtance but not otherwiſe than as in Union and Conjunction with the Divine, whence our Saviour is neceſſarily an Humane-divine Perſon. Thus natural and eaſie are things (if taken by the right Handle) which the Scholaſtic Theology hath infinitely perplex'd and intricated.

VIII. For this Theology (touching the Incarnation) ſuppoſeth, that the Hypoſtaſis of the Logos became the Hypoſtaſis of the Humane Nature, (t) aſſuming the Maſs of Humane Nature (Fleſh animated by an intelligent Soul) he cauſed it to ſubſiſt in his Hypoſtaſis αὐτὸς γενόμενος τῇ σαρκὶ ὑπόστασις, himſelf becoming an Hypoſtaſis to the Fleſh, αὐτὸς γέγονεν ὑπόστασις τῷ προσλήμματι, himſelf became an Hypoſtaſis to that which he aſſumed. So Jo. Damaſcen. Euthymius and the reſt of the Scholaſtic Divines deſcribe the Incarnation; that the Logos is an Hypoſtaſis to which the Humane Nature belongeth, that the Humane Nature did not exiſt otherwiſe than in and by the Logos (as ſubſiſting in it (which terminated and ſuſtain'd it by his Hypoſtatic Propriety, not ſuffering it to have any other Hypoſtatic Propriety adjoyn'd to it but his Divine Hypoſtatic Propriety (that mode and propriety of ſubſiſting) wherewith it was modify'd and determin'd; and the Perſonality of the Logos (in a certain Senſe) became alſo the Perſonality of the Humane Nature, ut eadem eſt perſona hominis & albi, as the perſon of Peter and of candid Peter is one and the ſame. How clear ſoever the Conceptions may be, that School-divines have of theſe enigmatical matters, to others they will ſeem unconceivable, incredible, impoſſible. And the truth of them ought to be ſupported by clear Divine Revelation (which they are clearly deſtitute of, but) which ſupport they need at at a greater rate than the Humane Nature needeth to be ſupported by the Scholaſtic-Divine. For this Scholaſtic Suſtentation of the Maſs of Humane Nature (as it is called) is wholly needleſs thereto; which being the firſt Subſtance it can per ſe ſubſiſtere, as the Schola-

---

(o) Ibid. c. 8. S. 7.

(p) Ibid. l. 3. c. 9. S. 4.

(q) Ibid. l. 5. c. 8. S. 4.

(r) Ibid. S. 1, 3, 4.

(s) Subſtantia prima definitur, quæ ad hoc apta eſt, ut per ſe, & non in alio ſubſiſtat. Ibid. l. 7. c. 6. S. 10.

(t) Petav. de Trin. l. 3. c. 3. S. 12. & T. 4. l. 3. c. 13. S. 3.

ſtic Theology acknowledgeth. This Suſtentation of the Humane Nature therefore is in great degree a deſtroying the Subſtantiality of it (making it but an Accident) and it is an unnatural violence done to the Humane Nature; for the Scholaſtic Logos will not ſuffer it, to have its own Subſiſtence, (u) that which belongeth to it and that which it would have, if it was not hindred by a Divine Power. The Fleſh which is a Body (according to this Theology) ſubſiſteth by the ſubſiſtence of a Spirit, a bodily Shadow ſubſiſteth by the ſubſiſtence of a Divine Eternal Subſtance, one ſpecifically diſtinct Nature or Subſtance ſubſiſteth by the ſubſiſtence of another (as if we ſhould ſuppoſe a Plant to ſubſiſt by the ſubſiſtence of an Animal;) one Spirit is ſuppoſed to ſubſiſt by the ſubſiſtence of another without a ſubſiſtence of its own, which is as incongruous and impoſſible, as for one Body to be ſolid by the ſolidity of another without a ſolidity of its own. The Hypoſtatical Union is ſaid to be (w) in ſola ſubſiſtendi proprietate (only in the propriety of ſubſiſting) and what can it ſignifie to the ſubſiſtence of the Humane Nature (x) to communicate to it this Hypoſtatic Propriety, which is but a relation filietas divina? This muſt be thought the Hypoſtatic or Perſonal Propriety of the ſecond Perſon of the Scholaſtic Trinity, whereby he becometh a Subſiſtence, Hypoſtaſis and a Perſon, although it is manifeſt to common ſenſe, that an individual Perſon is in order of Nature antecedent to a Paternal or Filial Perſon. (y) The Propriety of a Son as it agreeth to Men, is in order of Nature poſteriour to the Origin and Generation, whereby a Man exiſteth. For we conceive of Socrates as produc'd by his Father Sophroniſcus, before we ſay, he is his Son.

IX. The Scholaſtic Theology (touching the Incarnation) denieth, that the Humane Nature in Chriſt is a conſtitutive of his Perſon. (z) If there be an acceſſion of ſome other Nature to the Divine, that is not at all connatural, but accident and adventitious; which neither conſtituteth the Suppoſitum (that is of it ſelf already complete and abſolute;) nor by being taken away diminiſheth or changeth it. The Perſon of Chriſt is definitively (according to this Theology) and therefore eſſentially a complex Perſon of two Natures (Divine and Humane) it conſiſteth of theſe two Natures, and yet one of theſe two Natures muſt not be ſuppos'd to conſtitute it, nor muſt it be called a conſtitutive part. His Perſon is perſona compoſita (as this Theology copiouſly aſſerteth and proveth) it is compounded and therefore conſtituted of theſe two Natures, yet the Humane Nature muſt not be ſuppos'd to conſtitute it. But it is not unuſual with this Theology, to acknowledge, that the Humane Nature in a large acceptation and the ſenſe of Ariſtotle is a part of Chriſt: (a) Ut ea partes vocentur, in quas dividitur, aut ex quibus conſtat id quod totum appellatur. (b) So the ancient Writers call his Divinity and Humanity parts (in a large ſenſe) ἐξ ὧν σύγκειται τὸ ὅλον, Chriſt is called a Totum (uſually) and this whole is conſtituted by them or conſiſteth of them; the Humane Nature therefore is a conſtitutive part of Chriſt's Suppoſitum. It is his Subſtance, (c) and he hath from it not meerly a being Humane, but his being Man (which is not an eſſe accidentarium, ſed naturale ac ſubſtantivum;) and his Soul is not as an Accident or an Adjunct, but belongeth to his conſtitutive Nature and Eſſence; which demonſtrateth, that there can be no ſuch thing as the Scholaſtic Incarnation, or an Abſtract Logos, that wanteth an eſſential part of Chriſt's Perſon.

X. The Scholaſtic Theology (touching the Incarnation) ſpoileth the Conſtitution of Chriſt's Perſon, which muſt be of apteſt compoſure and greateſt concinnity. For ſeeing all the Creation-works of God (even the meaneſt Inſects) have in them a wonderful artifice and curioſity of Contrivance, it is not poſſible, that the Conſtitution of Chriſt's Perſon (the nobleſt of God's Productions) ſhould be meerly a rude tying and adjoyning of Man's Nature to a God, inſtar accidentis & appendicis ad ſubſtantiam, as an accident and an hang-by to a ſubſtance. But it hath far'd with the Scholaſtic Theology, as if a rude Country-man hearing of a Zoophyton or Plant-animal, ſhould form an Idea thereof by tying together and adjoyning to one another a Plant and an Animal (whereas he ought to have compounded together the Properties of a Plant and an Animal;) for ſuch an Idea the Scholaſtic Theology hath formed of θεάνθρωπος, God-man. Who according to his true Idea is of the Humane Nature and Species, but ſo as to be of the Saint and Son of God-kind, and ſo as to be in this kind of this high Rank and Graduality, The Imperial Son, and therefore An Humane-divine Perſon or God-man; for ſuch is The Imperial Saint of God-kind of Son.

SECTION VIII.

The Eighth Diſagreement.

I. THE Scholaſtic Theology touching the Incarnation doth not befriend Chriſtianity (and therefore is not likely to be one of the Truths of it) but is very prejudicial to the Intereſt of Religion. In great degree it is unintelligible and incredible, maketh Chriſtianity ſuch, and is a mighty Stumbling-block to Unbelievers. They that believe it, find their Faith puzzled by it and their Underſtanding nonpluſt. (d) Nam de natura & ſuppoſito prout eſt in perſonis divinis, ex lumine rationis ferè nihil dici poteſt, for touching a Nature and Suppoſitum as they are in Divine Perſons, almoſt nothing can be ſaid from the Light of Reaſon. It is a great reproach and diſhonour to the Religion of Chriſtians, that profeſs the knowledge of Chriſt (the Center of their Religion, the Author and Object of it) yet do not tolerably underſtand him; they know not what to make of his Perſon, Divinity, Incarnation, the Ideas which the Scholaſticks of the Primitive Church had of him were multifarious unholy Nugacities and inexcuſably ignorant Conceits, with theſe the Church hath been filled from the early days of it and with the fierceſt digladiations about them, as if the Chriſt of God was of the ſame Character that the Stoick gave of us Men, εἰς παραδοξίαν ἐφύμεν, we are born to be a Paradox. The principal Hereſies and Schiſms (almoſt all of them) thoſe of the largeſt diſpread, the longeſt continuance, the greateſt miſchief to Chriſtianity and the Church, have been rais'd upon the Article of the Incarnation, and were Hereſies touching the Natures and Perſon of Chriſt. Many of them were Scholaſtic kind of Hereſies, the more principal

(u) Ibid. T. 4. l. 3. c. 15. S. 6.

(w) Ibid. S. 11.

(x) Ibid. c. 14 S. 3.

(y) Scire attinet, filii proprietatem, quatenus hominibus convenit, natura eſſe poſteriorem origine, ac generatione, qua homo exiſtit. Prius enim Socratem à patre Sophroniſco productum intelligimus, quàm ejus dicamus eſſe filium. Ibid. l. 7. c. 4. S. 6.

(z) Quod ſi alterius cujuſpiam quam divinæ ad illam naturæ fiat acceſſio, ea minimè connaturalis eſt, ſed accidens & adventitia; quæ nec ſuppoſitum conſtituat, quod ex ſeſe jam completum eſt & abſolutum; nec decedendo minuat aut immutet. Ibid. l. 3. c. 16. S. 14.

(a) Idem de Trin. l. 3. c. 3. S. 12.

(b) Vaſqu. in Tō. 3. par. T. 1. Diſp. 16. c. 4.

(c) Petav. T. 4 l. 16. c. 5. S. 3.

(d) Scheibler. Met. l. 2. c. 2. Art. 5. punct. 1.

cipal and eminent were ſuch, they were a Scholaſticiſm levell'd againſt the Scholaſticiſm of the Church, and rais'd up in oppoſition to it; and thus far they had their origin from it, they had never been, if the Scholaſtic Incarnation had not been. One of theſe eminent Scholaſtic kind of Hereſies was that of Neſtorius, which is ſaid to be of vaſt diſpread in the Eaſtern Parts unto this Day. But the deepeſt Wound was given to the Church by the Hereſie of Eutyches (another eminent Scholaſtic kind of Hereſie) which branched it ſelf into numerous Parties (not without Prodigies of Sedition and Bloodſhed) the Acephali, οἱ Διακρινόμενοι, Heſitantes, Corrupticolæ, Incorrupticolæ (Aphthardocites) Theopaſchites, Tritheites, Angelitæ, Agnoetæ. The Monothelites alſo (amongſt whom were the greateſt Perſons in the Church) muſt be reckon'd amongſt the Scholaſtic Hereſies and a Branch of the Eutychian. For although every Orthodox Chriſtian muſt be in ſome ſenſe a Monothelite (an oppoſer of two Intellects and Intellections, two rational Wills and Volitions in Chriſt) yet the ancient Monothelites commix'd Truth with ſuch abſurd Conceits, as may juſtly be reckon'd Scholaſtic Hereſie. Amongſt theſe Scholaſtic Hereſies that in ſome ſort had their origin from the Scholaſtic Incarnation, we may alſo reckon the Hereſie of Felix and Elipandus, who affirm'd, that Chriſt as Man, was not the natural but the adopted Son of God. Into which Opinion they were manifeſtly led by the Scholaſtic Theology (which yet condemn'd them) which affirmeth, that Chriſt as Man is not the natural Son of God by Generation. Yet it alſo affirmeth (ſelf-contradictingly) that the Son of God (e) took Humane Nature and true Fleſh of the Virgin (vera generatione) by true Generation. From the Scholaſtic Generation we muſt in great degree derive the origin (not only of the Scholaſtic Hereſies that have infeſted the Church, but) of the Muhammedan Religion, that lerna malorum and deadly Steam of the bottomleſs Pit, which in great part hath diſpread it ſelf through the Earth and Air. (f) For when Muhammed ſaw, that Men were weary of the Diſſenſions of the Chriſtian Religion (chiefly about the Perſon and Natures of Chriſt) he deviſ'd his new Religion.

II. The Scholaſtic Theology (none of the leaſt of the Church's Evils) muſt be counted a Production of the Scholaſtic Incarnation (as being in ſome reſpect ſuch) which hath alſo produc'd an alteration in the natural Sciences (that are new modell'd into a compliance with it) whereby the true Notices of things, and Teſts of diſcrimination between Truth and Falſhood are loſt, and by this Artifice innumerable Impoſtures may be introduc'd into Religion, and ſucceſsfully obtruded upon Mankind; which is a ſpoiling us by vain Philoſophy, not Philoſophia Theologiæ ancillans. The Scholaſtic Incarnation ſpoileth alſo the Wiſdom and reaſonableneſs of the œconomy of the Chriſtian Religion (wherein the Wiſdom of God ought to ſhine moſt illuſtriouſly) making the Son of God to be Father and Son, Creator and Creature, Lord and Servant, Prieſt and Mediator to himſelf. And it muſt be counted very injurious and diſhonourable to God by ſuppoſing the Eternal Almighty God, the great God that formed all things, to have become Man, to have put on our Rags, to have been lodg'd in a dark Womb, to have cried like an Infant, to have done thoſe Actions which are proper to our Humane Imperfections (and are common to us with Brutes) and to have ſuffered thoſe Evils which our frail Mortality is ſubject to. Nor is this Hypotheſis of the Incarnation leſs Injurious to our great and only Saviour the Perſon of Chriſt Jeſus. For it implieth, that it was an Abſtract Logos (Platonic or Ariſtotelian) not the Perſon of Chriſt Jeſus, who being the only Son and Heir of God and the Son of his Love, was ſanctified and ſealed by him and ſent into the World (not without requiſite Instructions and Credentials) whom he gave to the World, to Labours, and Dolours, and Agonies, and Torments (that we might live through him) whom he appointed our Mediator and High Prieſt, the Founder of the Holy Empire and the Saviour-King thereof (and ſent him into the World on that Errand) giving him by degrees all Power and all Judgment, and to be the Head over all things to the Church. This Hypotheſis of the Incarnation implieth, that it was an Abſtract Logos, not the Perſon of Chriſt Jeſus, who was the ſuperlative lover of our Souls, that out of love to us took upon him, to be our Redeemer and our Saviour, our Exemplar and our Sin-bearer; that came into the World to ſave Sinners and to adminiſter all the matters of our Salvation; that took upon him, to become poor, though he was rich, diveſted himſelf of the form of God and took upon him the form of a Servant, emptied and abaſed himſelf (to the depth of a ſtupendious Humiliation) left Heaven for Earth, Glory for Meanneſs and Diſgrace, offered himſelf to Mortality, Infirmity, Servility, to be God's Meſſiah and our Saviour-prince, and came down from Heaven not to do his own Will, but the will of him that ſent him. All theſe things were done by an Abſtract Logos, none of theſe things were done by the Perſon of Chriſt Jeſus, as this Hypotheſis implieth, and accordingly theſe matters are repreſented in the currant Scholaſtic Theology of Chriſtendom (both of elder and latter times;) ſo much this Scholaſtic Incarnation doth, and ſo far it goeth in bereaving the Lord Jeſus of the Eſteem and Affections of his People and of his rightful honourary Attributions.

But this is not all; for to the Logos that was Abſtract, but is now ſuppos'd to be hypoſtatically united to our Saviour's Humanity, inſhrined and intempled therein, to this God or Eternal Deity thus incarnated Chriſtians are taught by this Scholaſtic Theology to do the Divine Honours; Chriſt as Man (g) is called Homo dominicus, θεοφόρος ἄνθρωπος, The God-carrying Man, and his Humanity is called The Temple, Houſe and Habitation of this Deity (the Eternal Logos) his Inſtrument, Veſtment, Indument, Sponſa. Our Saviour that only ſpeaketh of the Temple of his Body, did not ſuppoſe his whole Humanity the Temple of his Godhead: but in this Theology he is of this Idea; whence he is compar'd (h) to a vaſt Globe made all of ſolid Gold ſaving one very ſmall Section of Silver (his Humanity) ſo that the Eternal Godhead outſhineth every thing in this Object of Devotion. To this therefore Chriſtians are taught to direct their Devotions and Devotional Affections. But they are concern'd to conſider, whether in ſo directing their Devotions they do not look upon Chriſt Jeſus as nothing more than an adventitious Adjunct, Accident and Appendix, having the ſame Notion of him, which Athanaſius hath, when he ſaith,

(i) The

(e) Petav. T. 4. l. 5. c. 14. S. 4.

(f) Mahomet Arabs & Iſmaelita homo ambitioſus, aſtutus, & ad totius mundi perniciem natus, cùm homines videret pertæſos diſſidiorum Chriſtianæ religionis, novum dogma commentus eſt. Melanth. Exam. Theol. p.m. 238.

(g) Petav. T. 4. l. 7. c. 10, 11, 12, 13.

(h) Dr. H. More Myſt. of Godl. B. 9. c. 2.

(i) The Son of God in the conſummation of Ages deſcending from the Boſom of the Father of an immaculate Virgin, τὸν ἡμέτερον ἀνείληφεν ἄνθρωπον Χριστὸν Ἰησοῦν, aſſum'd our Man Chriſt Jeſus. Having aſſumed Fleſh, he was called Jeſus καλεῖται καὶ ἄνθρωπος, as alſo Man. Is this the mode of glorifying Chriſt Jeſus, to make him as ſuch no Perſon, no Divine Perſon, no Son of God, but meerly an appendant Humanity and our Man? But at this rate (according to this Theology) Chriſt Jeſus muſt be depriv'd of Glory, and Chriſtians muſt give Glory and do Divine Honours to the Scholaſtic Eternal Logos, to whom they owe no Duty, nor are ever commanded to perform any.

III. The Scholaſtic Theology touching the Incarnation is at a ſuperlative rate injurious to the choiceſt Article of Chriſtianity, which is Chriſt's Paſſion. For according to the conſtant tenour of it, (k) The Son is both impaſſible and paſſible: impaſſible (juxta quod Logos) as he is the Logos; but paſſible (ut caro factus eſt) as he is made Fleſh: impaſſibilis divinitate, paſſibilis carne. According to that Nature which he hath in common with the Father, he is increate, inviſible, uncircumſcrib'd, immutable, impaſſible, incorruptible, the maker of all things: but according to our Nature and that of his Fleſh he is create; paſſible, circumſcrib'd, comprehenſible. (l) As Man is in his Soul immortal, mortal in Fleſh: ſo Chriſt was in his Divinity impaſſible, paſſible in Fleſh. All agree, that the Godhead is ἀπαθὴς, impaſſible, and ſo Athanaſius attributeth (m) to the Fleſh, Paſſion, to the Divinity τὸ ἀπαθὲς καὶ ἄτρεπτον, impaſſibility and immutability. So the ancient and modern Scholaſtic Divines diſtinguiſh the Proprieties of theſe ſeveral Natures. (n) He was not troubled according to his Divinity, but his Soul was troubled, he was troubled according to his aſſumption of Humane Frailty, and becauſe he aſſum'd a Soul, he aſſum'd the Paſſions of it. To ſuffer, to be wounded and to die, are proper to the Humane Nature, incompetible to the Dinine Nature. They diſtinguiſh a duplicity of Chriſt's Operations, which they attribute to his duplicity of Natures. (o) His Miracles they attribute to his Divinity, as he is of the Father and God, ἐνεργεῖ τὰ θαύματα, he worketh Miracles: but Hunger, Thirſt, Wearineſs, Sleep, Fear, Grief, Anxiety, Tears, and the ſuffering Pain and Death, they attribute to the imbecillity of his Humane Nature, who aſſum'd Humane Fleſh with the proper Paſſions thereof; as he is of the Virgin and Man, τὸν σταυρὸν καὶ τὸ πάθος ὑπέμεινε, he underwent the Croſs and Paſſion. (p) He that was impaſſible ſuffered by that paſſible Nature, which he aſſumed, and he that could not die, died. Theſe Sayings muſt be underſtood in the ſenſe of the Scholaſtic Theology, and ſo underſtood their meaning is; that the Son of God was a Perſonal Eternal Deity (the Logos) who in his own Nature could not ſuffer any thing, but only in an aſſum'd Humane Nature.

IV. The Scholaſtic Incarnation therefore implieth, that Chriſt's Paſſion muſt be conſider'd as his Paſſion no Paſſion, and himſelf as a Sufferer no Sufferer, as Athanaſius ſaith, (q) αὐτὸς ἦν ὁ πάσχων καὶ μὴ πάσχων, he was a ſufferer and no ſufferer; he ſuffer'd becauſe his own Body ſuffer'd: but he did not ſuffer ὅτι τῇ φύσει Θεὸς ὢν ὁ λόγος ἀπαθής ἐστι, becauſe being by nature God the Word he is impaſſible. So S. Ambroſe ſaith of Chriſt, Idem patiebatur & non patiebatur. And Fulgentius ſtileth him, inviolabilis in vulnere, impaſſibilis in paſſione, invulnerable in his Wounds, impaſſible in his Paſſion. So the Synod of Toledo ſaith of him, ipſe impaſſibilis patiens, in his Suffering he was impaſſible. Vigilius an African Biſhop diſcourſeth, that God and the Fleſh did not in Chriſt ſuffer alike. (r) We ſay, that the Word did bear the Injuries of the Paſſion, yet did not feel the Paſſions: But becauſe his Fleſh not only bare them, but felt them and they were ſuperiour to it, therefore we rightly ſay, that our Lord was ſenſibly affected with them in his Fleſh without any ſenſe or mutation of his Divinity. The Humane Nature therefore (as Petavius ſaith) had a ſenſe of Grief and Pain, which the Divinity had not. (s) The Soul although it dieth not with the Body, yet ſuffereth with the Body and is affected by it: but from the aſſumed Nature in Chriſt nothing of Infirmity redoundeth into the Aſſumer. (t) As Man he underwent his Paſſion, as God he continu'd above Paſſion. This is the ſenſe of that Theology which hath prevailed in the Church touching our Saviour's ſufferings; The reality of them was confined to his Humanity, did not reach his perſonal Deity, which is of an impaſſible nature, utterly remote and exempt from all Paſſion, was not hurt at all, nor wounded, nor touch'd by our Saviour's ſufferings, had no ſenſe nor feeling of them. But if his Divinity was thus totally exempt from Sufferings, how is it, that this Perſonal Divinity is ſaid, to have born them? Can any one be ſaid, to bear thoſe Sufferings, of which he hath no (afflictive) Senſe or Perception? To this the Scholaſtic Theology anſwereth, (u) That this is done by way of imputation, and by that mode of ſpeaking called the Communication of Properties. God the Word (ſaith S. Cyril) of himſelf and by the condition of his proper ſubſtance, is exempt from all ſuffering and temporary Affliction: But becauſe he ſo aſſumed human Nature and conjoyned it with himſelf, as to become one and the ſame with it, and to have it appropriated to himſelf and his own, therefore whatever befalleth it, he imputeth to himſelf, God himſelf is ſaid to have ſuffered it, and it is ſaid, to have befallen him. (w) Ἐλογίσθη δὲ τὸ πάθος εἰς τὴν θεότητα, καίτοιγε τῆς θεότητος ἀπαθοῦς οὔσης. Ὅτι οὕτως εὐδόκησεν ἐλθὼν ὁ ἅγιος καὶ ἀπαθὴς Θεὸς λόγος. The Paſſion is imputed to the Deity, although the Deity is impaſſible. For ſo the holy Logos the impaſſible God coming amongſt us would have it to be, which is ſuch a thing, as if one cloathed with a Garment defiled with Blood ſprinkled on it, which cometh not at the Body of him that is cloathed with it: λογίζεται δὲ ὁ σπίλος, yet the Spot that is from Blood is imputed to him, that is cloathed with this Garment, ſaith Epiphanius. Thus according to the Scholaſtic Incarnation Chriſt's Paſſion is a Paſſion no Paſſion, himſelf a Sufferer no Sufferer.

V. According to the Scholaſtic Incarnation Chriſt's Paſſion is not to be counted a great and dreadful Paſſion, it is nothing ſo much a Paſſion as (i) T. 1. p. 394, 397. Com.

(k) Petav. T. 4. l. 3. c. 7. S. 4. & l. 7. c. 4. S. 9. & l 4. c. 16. S. 8.

(l) Ibid. l. 7. c. 4. S. 9.

(m) Ibid. l. 6. c. 13 S. 7.

(n) Ut homo dubitat, ut homo turbatur: non turbatur ejus virtus, non turbatur ejus divinitas, ſed turbatur anima, turbatur ſecundum humanæ fragilitatis aſſumptionem, & ideo quia ſuſcepit animam, ſuſcepit & animæ paſſiones. Ibid. l. 8. c. 9. S. 3. Propria ſunt humanæ naturæ pati, vulnerari, mori. Natura divina non vulneratur, non moritur. Melanth Exam. Theol. p. 309. 310.

(o) Petav. T. 4. l. 8. c. 7, 8, 9.

(p) Paſſus eſt impaſſibilis per paſſibilem quem ſuſcepit, & immortalis mortuus eſt. Ibid. l. 4. c. 15. S. 16.

(q) Petav. ibid. l. 4. c. 16. S. 4.

(r) Verbum Dei dicimus paſſionis injurias pertuliſſe, non tamen paſſionem ſenſiſſe. Sed quia Caro ejus non ſolùm pertulit ſed & ſenſit & ceſſit, meritò ac jure dicimus, Dominum his omnibus paſſionum conditionibus ſenſibiliter affectum in carne ſua, ſine ſenſu vel mutatione divinitatis ſuæ. Ergo humana natura ſenſum habuit doloris & paſſionis, quem divinitas non cepit. Ibid. l. 8. c. 9. S. 9.

(s) Anima etiamſi non moritur cum corpore, tamen compatitur, ſeu afficitur à corpore: ſed ab aſſumpta natura in Chriſto nihil redundat infirmitatis in aſſumentem. Melanth. ſupr. p. 270.

(t) Ὡς ἄνθρωπος τὸ πάθος ὑπέμεινεν· ὡς Θεὸς κρείττων πάθους μεμένηκε. Petav. ſupr. l. 4. c. 16. S. 9.

(u) Ibid T. 4. l. 6. c. 17. p. 599.

(w) Ibid. l. 7. c. 13. S. 6.

no Paſſion, himſelf was nothing ſo much a Sufferer as no Sufferer. This conſequence is clearly deducible from the Tenor of the Scholaſtic Theology, which we have cited already, and which we ought to read over again, to conſider (not what it expreſſeth, but) what it implieth and inferreth. For we do not blame the Scholaſtic Theology for exempting the Deity from Suffering, but our Diſpute is againſt this Theology's Incarnation of a Scholaſtic abſtract Logos, a perſonal eternal God. For it is manifeſt, that according to this Scholaſtic Incarnation this following Judgment muſt be made of our Saviour's Paſſion. (1.) It is not credible, to be a deſigned Paſſion. For as it is incredible, and impoſſible, that God ſhould ſend into the World, to ſuffer Afflictions, ſuch an immortal Soul, which is utterly incapable of any afflictive Senſe or Perception: So it is alike incredible and impoſſible, that God ſhould ſend into the World, to ſuffer Pains and Dolours, ſuch a God the Logos, that is utterly incapable of ſuffering and feeling any. That God may ſend into the World, to ſuffer Pains and Dolours, ſuch a Logos that aſſuming Humane Nature is capable of ſuffering them in it, this is as poſſible, and credible, as that God may ſend into the World, to ſuffer Afflictions, ſuch an immortal Soul that aſſuming an Humane Body is capable of ſuffering Afflictions in it. But the Scholaſtic eternal God the Logos is of a contrary Character; whence Gelaſius Biſhop of Cæſarea in Paleſtine ſaith of Chriſt (x) He was bound, he was wounded, he was crucify'd, he was rudely handled, he bare ſtripes and the marks of them and the ſcar of the Spear. All theſe things that Body which was brought forth by Mary endur'd: But that which was generated by the Father before the Worlds (the Scholaſtic eternal God the Logos) no one could hurt. So blind are theſe Scholaſticks, they think, they do Honour to their Saviour, when they do the greateſt diſparagement to his Perſon and Paſſion, and falſifie his Religion. For whereas Chriſtianity aſſureth us, that God gave and ſent his Son, to ſuffer Loads of Pain and Grief for us, they tell us (contradicting all this) that God ſent us ſuch an Abſtract Son, that neither out of Humane Nature, nor in Humane Nature was capable of ſuffering any thing. Such is the Wiſdom of the Scholaſtic Theology, that calleth it ſelf the Catholick Faith. (2.) It was not a Paſſion in his Eſſence or Subſtance. For according to the Scholaſtic Theology and Incarnation our Saviour's Humanity is not his Eſſence, but only an Adjunct, Appendix and as an Accident. It ſuppoſeth (y) humanam naturam quaſi appendicis & acceſſionis inſtar ad divinam adhæreſcere, that Chriſt's Humane Nature adhereth to his Divine as an Appendix and an Acceſſion. If therefore in our Saviour's Sufferings nothing did endure Sufferings but his Humanity, it muſt be ſuppos'd (according to this Theology) that nothing did endure Sufferings but only an Appendix and an Acceſſion to his Eſſence. (3.) It was not a Paſſion in his true ſubſtantial Self or Perſon. (z) Chriſt did not diſcourſe to us of enduring Sufferings, ſaith S. Chryſoſtom, himſelf being out of Danger and exempt from Dolour: But himſelf underwent Agonies and Dolours, to be (as the Scripture propoſeth him) a Pattern unto us of virtuous enduring Sufferings. But the Scholaſtic Theology and Incarnation maketh Chriſt no tolerable accommodate Pattern unto us of virtuous enduring Sufferings. For if we ſuffer our true ſubſtantial Self ſuffereth, which in Chriſt's Sufferings (according to this Theology) ſuffer'd nothing, but was wholly exempt and free from Sufferings, and only that which was ſomething of him endur'd Sufferings. (a) He that ſuffer'd in the Fleſh (ſaith Fulgentius) was no other than he, that in the true Paſſion of the Fleſh continu'd altogether impaſſible. In his Paſſion he ſuffer'd nothing in his true ſubſtantial Self (according to this Theology;) for his Hang-by cannot be ſuppos'd his true ſubſtantial Self. (4.) It was a Paſſion only in his exteriour Superficials (not in his intrinſic Centrals;) for according to the Scholaſtic Theology and Incarnation his Humanity (as we have ſeen before) is the Temple, Houſe and Habitation of this perſonal Deity (the Scholaſtic eternal Logos) his Inſtrument, Veſtment, Indument. (b) The Similitude of a Garment is deſign'd to ſignifie the immutability of the Divinity in Chriſt, that whatever of Paſſion and vility in Life and Death God took upon him, he is believed, to have taken and receiv'd it as it were extrinſecally, in that Man which he carried, as in a Garment; but that it did not reach to his Subſtance. (c) Who was it therefore, that was ſeen to hang on the Tree, who was it that was Dead? The Man whom he had put on and carried with himſelf. (5.) The blaſphemous Celſus ſaith (d) what generous thing did Jeſus as a God, deſpiſing Men and deriding, and ſporting at that which befell him? As he would have thought it generoſity in our Saviour, thus to have behav'd himſelf in his Paſſion: So Scholaſtic Divines think it generous, to ſay (as Athanaſius doth) of the Paſſions of our Saviour's Humane Nature (e) οὐχ ἥπτοντο κατὰ τὴν θεότητα αὐτοῦ, they did not touch him according to his Divinity or Godhead. But ſuch Sayings according to the Scholaſtic Theology and Incarnation imply and infer, that his Paſſion was not in his Eſſence or Subſtance, nor in his true ſubſtantial Self or Perſon, nor in his intrinſic Centrals, but only his exteriour Superficials. The Scholaſtic God the Logos therefore may be repreſented as a Deity ſitting in his Temple ſafe and untouch'd by any external Storms and Diſaſters: Or as the Mind and Soul of a Stoical or Sceptical Philoſopher, who (as he pretendeth) is ſo internally fortified againſt all acerbities of Pain and Grief, that they cannot paſs the Porch of his Soul. And now it is eaſie, to make a Judgment, what the Paſſion of our Saviour (dreadful to the height of wonder and aſtoniſhment, and beyond the ſize and dimenſion of our Conceptions and Expreſſions) amounteth to according to the Scholaſtic Theology and Incarnation. All Men therefore are concern'd to conſider, whether they will diſcard the Scholaſtic Theology Trinity and Incarnation: Or whether they will hold to ſuch a Theology and Incarnation, which unavoidably in the conſequence of it at an horrible rate

(x) Vinctus eſt, vulneratus eſt, crucifixus eſt, attrectatus eſt, vibices geſtavit, lanceæ cicatricem admiſit, hæc omnia corpus ex Maria editum ſuſtinuit, quod autem ante ſecula ex patre genitum eſt, ei nocere nemo potuit. Petav. T. 4 l. 8. c. 8. S. 10.

(y) Ibid. l. 7. c. 13. S. 7.

(z) Chryſoſt. in Johan. Hom. 67.

(a) Nec alius in carne paſſus eſt niſi ille, qui in vera carnis paſſione impaſſibilis omninò permanſit. Petav. ſupr. l. 8. c. 9. S. 8.

(b) Divinitatis immutabilitas in Chriſto ſimilitudine veſtis exprimitur; dum quicquid perpeſſionis ac vilitatis in vita, obituque ſuſcepit, quaſi extrinſecus, eo quem geſtabat homine ceu veſtimento, excepiſſe Deus creditur; non autem ad ipſius pertinuiſſe ſubſtantiam. Petav. ibid. l. 7. c. 13. S. 6.

(c) Quis eſt ergo viſus in patibulo pendere, quis mortuus eſt? Homo quem induerat, & ſecum ipſe portabat. Ibid. l. 3. c. 7. S. 3.

(d) Τί δὲ καὶ γενναῖον ἔδρασεν οἷον θεὸς, καταφρονῶν ἀνθρώπων καὶ διαγελῶν καὶ παίζων τὸ συμβαῖνον ὁ Ἰησοῦς; Orig. c. Celſ. l. 2. p. 80.

(e) Petav. T. 4. l. 8. c. 8. S. 5.

nullifieth and vilifieth the Paſſion of their Saviour. But of his dreadful Paſſion there is no diminution, nothing of diſparagement in our Hypotheſis touching his Perſon and Incarnation. It ſuppoſeth him, to be eſſentially God-man or an Humane-divine Perſon, ſo far eſſentially adapted to a deſign'd Paſſion, and fully adapted to it by diveſting himſelf of his Deiformity and becoming Humane Fleſh. It ſuppoſeth his Paſſion to have been in his Eſſence (ſuch was his Holy and Divine Soul) in his true ſubſtantial Self and the intrinſic Centrals of his Perſon.

VI. The Scholaſtic Incarnation is injurious to this eminent benefit of Chriſt's Paſſion, Heb. 2. 18. For in that he himſelf hath ſuffered being tempted, he is able to ſuccour them that are tempted. He knows how to ſupport and ſuccour us under Infirmities, becauſe he himſelf hath born them, and he is diſpoſed to do it. V. 17. He was made like unto his Brethren in all things, that he might be a merciful and faithful High Prieſt. Becauſe he was like unto us in our Infirmities and Diſtreſſes, he is rarely well qualified for our purpoſe; as they that have known the want of Bread and Water, and what it is, to have ungracious Children, are apt to pity others that want Bread and Water, or have untoward Children. So the Son of God is diſpoſed, to Compaſſionate, Relieve and Succour us. Are we afflicted with Hunger? He knoweth what it is, to be pinch'd with it? Are we tormented with Thirſt? He cried out upon the Croſs I Thirſt. Are we ſurrounded with Sorrow? The Son of God knoweth what it is, to bear a Load of it. Are we rack'd and gibbeted? So was his Body upon the Croſs. Are we tortur'd? In the days of his Fleſh he felt the Nails and Spear. But if in the days of his Fleſh he was no greater a Sufferer, than as the Scholaſtic Incarnation implieth (a Sufferer as no Sufferer) what can his Sufferings ſignifie, to qualifie and diſpoſe him, to ſuccour us in our Sufferings? Beſides, if his Humane Nature ſuffer'd deeply, yet this can ſignifie nothing to our advantage, unleſs either this Humane Nature hath the power of adminiſtring our Affairs, or doth incline that Nature, which hath the power of adminiſtring them, to compaſſionate and relieve us. But according to the Scholaſtic Theology the Humane Nature hath not the power of adminiſtring our Affairs according to its Propenſions and Pleaſure (it ſelf being under the power of the Scholaſtic Divine Nature:) Nor can it incline the Scholaſtic Divine Nature (which is ſuppos'd to have the power of adminiſtring our Affairs) to compaſſionate and ſuccour us, no more than the fearfulneſs of the Humane Nature can incline the Scholaſtic Divine Nature unto fearfulneſs.

Non ignara mali, &c.

VII. Throughout our Saviour's Paſſion there is not any appearance of the Scholaſtic God the Logos (the ſecond Perſon of the Scholaſtic Trinity) but the contrary, whence the Scholaſtic Theology appeareth to have miſtaken the Incarnation. It aſſerteth in our Saviour two intellectual Natures and two rational Wills, yet throughout the whole Tranſaction of our Saviour's Paſſion it can find no appearance of any more than one intellectual Nature and one rational Will. It aſſerteth, that the ſecond Perſon of the Scholaſtic Trinity was incarnate in our Saviour, yet it acknowledgeth, that throughout the whole Tragedy of his Sufferings nothing of him is diſcernible; but as a Divine of our own repreſenteth the Senſe of it (f) the Faculties of the Divine Nature were totally ſuſpended upon ſuch Occaſions, and he proceeded in them not in any degree as God, but intirely as a meer and real Man. The Scholaſtic Divinity in our Saviour therefore (according to this Theology) was wholly exempted both from ſuffering any thing and from doing any thing in his Paſſion; whence an ordinary underſtanding will infer, that really no ſuch perſonal Deity was incarnate in our ſuffering Saviour. For if he had been there, then was the time (if ever) of exerting his Virtues and Operations, when our Saviour was in the deepeſt plunge, ingaged in the greateſt conflict, and was to bear the heavieſt load of Preſſures (too heavy for any Atlas to bear) which made him ſink and faint under them. But becauſe there is no appearance of ſuch an Agent in our Saviour's Paſſion, and becauſe his Behaviour in it is thought incongruous to the ſecond Perſon of the Scholaſtic Trinity, therefore all his Devotion and Reſignation at his Paſſion, his Humility and Lamb-like Meekneſs, his invincible Patience and Divine Charity (with all other Divine Graces and Duties reſplendent in it) the Scholaſtic Theology imputeth to his meer Humane Will. And is it not a great injury and diſparagement to his Divine Paſſion, to write upon it this Inſcription, Hic Deus fecit nihil, here Man did all? For howſoever this Language may be interpreted, it is not honourable (but diſgraceful) to our Saviour's Paſſion; nor is it tolerably proper. For his Divine Graces and Duties (thoſe Divine Excellencies and Accompliſhments) proceeded from a Divine Principle, and he proceeded in them upon a Principle Divine (elſe they could not be Divine Graces and Duties;) theſe are the things that are of God, the Saint of God and Son of God-kind of things, and are therefore peculiarly the things of his Divinity of Nature and Perſon (not of his Humanity) and the things of his Deity; for he hath no other Divinity or Deity but his being The Son of God. To ſuppoſe, that his Miracles in external matters are peculiarly the things of his Divinity (or Deity) and muſt be attributed thereto as ſuch; and that his Miracles of Grace, his Divine Virtues and Duties, are the things of his Humanity peculiarly, and muſt be attributed thereto as ſuch, is to ſet up the natural Man's kind of things above the things of Kind and Quality Divine. S. Chryſoſtom ſaith of our Saviour's Divine Prayer before his Paſſion, It was not the Prayer of his Divinity, but of his aſſumed Nature; for God doth not pray. But in that Prayer our Saviour calleth God his Father, and in ſo ſtiling him, we cannot reaſonably ſuppoſe, that he ſpake and pray'd meerly as Man, but as the Son of God. His Paſſion could not have been Satisfactory and Meritorious, nor the Son of God's kind of Paſſion, if it had not been replete with the Divine kind of Excellencies and Precioſities (Paſſive, Self-reſigning, Soul-melting Obedience and Love;) in theſe the Divinity of his Nature illuſtriouſly ſhone, and conſequently the Operations of it were far from being ſuſpended.

But his reluctance to Sufferings, his being diſmay'd and diſturb'd in Spirit, theſe proceeded from a Principle purely Humane (the imbecility of Humane Nature) and theſe demonſtrate, that our Saviour was liable to ſuch a State of Deſertion and of Frowns, ſuch a withdrawing of the (f) Dr. Stanhope Ser. on Luk. 22. 42. p. 248.

the Divinity in reſpect of Comfort, as is not reconcileable with his being the ſecond Perſon in the Scholaſtic Trinity. Nor with this Notion which a Divine of our own hath of the Incarnation. * This is the true Notion of a God Incarnate, The God liveth and acteth in Human Nature, is the principle of all its actions and motions, and doth all that becometh a God in the Nature of Man. Several Scholaſticks have not been able, to think with Patience, of theſe Phenomena of his dreadful Paſſion. (g) Our Saviour in the Hiſtory of his Paſſion is ſaid to have been ſore amazed, vehemently ſorrowful and very heavy, which many have thought unworthy the Perſon of the Son of God. Origen conceiteth, that Chriſt was not ſo vehemently ſorrowful, but only began to be ſorrowful. The Hiſtory of the bloody Sweat and the Angel ſtrengthening him ſome have expung'd out of S. Luke. Theophylact endeavoureth to elude thoſe Deſcriptions by inſerting as it were. Epiphanius expoundeth the Angel's ſtrengthning him to this Senſe, as if the Angel had ſaid to Chriſt, Thine is the Power and Fortitude. Many others alſo will not have the Cup which Chriſt prayed might paſs from him, to be meant of his Paſſion, but of the deſtruction of Jeruſalem and of the Jews. If our Saviour was the ſecond Perſon of the Scholaſtic Trinity incarnate, he could no more be deſtitute of Divine Omnipotent Aſſiſtance, than he could be deſtitute of vital Sanctity. And conſequently an Angel ſtrengthning him is according to that Hypotheſis a moſt unaccountable Phænomenon. It is poſſible, that Chriſt might then be deſtitute of the aſſiſting and comforting influences of the Holy Spirit: But ſuppoſing the Scholaſtic Incarnation he could no more be deſtitute of the Virtues and Influences of the Scholaſtic Logos, than he could be deſtitute of himſelf; for this Scholaſtic Logos is ſuppos'd to be himſelf, his Humane Nature being only an Appendix. Yet Grotius ſaith, * Chriſtus deſtitutus Divinitatis in ſe habitantis virtute, humanaque natura relictus, ac proinde minor factus angelis, opus habuit angelorum ſolatio. Chriſt being deſtitute of the Power of the Divinity that dwelt in him and left to Humane Nature, and therefore made lower than the Angels, needed their Support and Comfort.

* Dr. Sherlock Scripture Proofs. p. 211.

(g) Multi fuerunt, quibus viſum fuit, indignum eſſe perſona filii Dei, tanta conſternatione conflictari, ſicut in hiſtoria paſſionis deſcribitur vocabulis ἐκθαμβεῖσθαι, ἀδημονεῖν, περίλυπος. Origines philoſophatur, non contriſtatum Chriſtum, ſed cœpiſſe contriſtari. Quidam totam hiſtoriam de ſudore ſanguineo & Angelo confortante ex Luca expunxerunt. Theophylactus deſcriptiones illas per particulam ὡσεὶ conatur eludere. Epiphanius confortationem Angeli exponit, quaſi Angelus dixerit Chriſto, tua eſt potentia & fortitudo. Multi etiam alii calicem quem Chriſtus à ſe transferri petit, nolunt intelligi de paſſione Chriſti, ſed de perditione Judæorum, everſione Hieroſolymorum. Chemnit. de 2. in Chriſt. natur. p. 16. vid. Lactant. l. 4. c. 30.

* Not. in Luc. 22. 43.

VIII. If the Scholaſtic Incarnation had not been, there had been no Theopaſchites, all of them were Scholaſtic Theopaſchites. (h) Some of them held, that the whole Trinity ſuffer'd, and theſe were diſtinguiſh'd from the Patripaſſions, who held, that only the Father ſuffer'd. Others of them held only, that the Divinity of the Logos was nailed to the Croſs and laid in a Grave. (i) The Hereſie of the Apthardocites (Incorrupticolæ) who held, that Chriſt's Body was not in this Life obnoxious to Corruption and Death, to ſenſe of Pain, ſinleſs Affections and Paſſions, had manifeſtly its Origin from the Scholaſtic Incarnation; for it is but the common Opinion touching the impaſſibility of Chriſt's Scholaſtic Divinity enlarged and amplified and extended to his Body. S. Hilary entertain'd this horribly bad Conceit (making our Saviour's Paſſion no Paſſion;) for he affirmeth our Saviour, to have been beaten, wounded, bound, hanged on high without any ſenſe of Pain. He was really free from all Pain (ſaith he) quia Deus eſt, whence it is manifeſt, that the Scholaſtic Incarnation was the Origin of his foul miſtake. From the ſame Origin we muſt derive this groſs Conceit of Felix the Spaniſh Biſhop. (k) It ought not to be ſaid, that God the Son of God the Father ſuffered or was crucified, but the Man aſſumed by him; grounding himſelf upon this Example. Not Iſaac who was led by his Father to be ſacrificed, was ſarcificed, but a Ram was ſacrificed for him: as if in Iſaac the Son of God was figur'd, and in the Ram the Son of Man.

(h) Petav. T. 4. l. 1. c. 16. S. 8 & c. 17. S. 7, 8.

(i) Ibid. c. 15. S. 11, 14. & c. 7. S. 3. Daille use of the Fathers B. 2. p. 79, 80.

(k) Petav. T. 4. l. 1. in fine.

SECTION IX.

The Ninth Diſagreement.

I. THE Scholaſtic Incarnation is combin'd with multifarious abſurd Conceits that reflect a Diſparagement upon it, and (in ſome degree) confute it. Such as this marvellous Abſurdity wherein all the Scholaſtic Divines agree (l) that as to the Faculty of aſſuming Humane Nature there is no difference amongſt the Divine Perſons; the Father and the Holy Ghoſt as well as the Son might Hypoſtatically aſſume Humane Nature and become incarnate, whence it is uſual with them, to make large Diſcourſes, to ſhew, that it was more convenient, that the Son in the Scholaſtic Trinity ſhould be incarnate rather than either of the other Divine Perſons. Not underſtanding or not conſidering, that a Man cannot be the Holy Spirit, nor can the Holy Spirit be a Political Perſon as Man is. Nor is it poſſible, that God the Father ſhould be a Son (incarnate and born of a Virgin) or that he ſhould be out of his Imperial Eſtate (as the Son was, when he was a Man on Earth) nor is the Imperfection which the being a Man implieth, competible unto God definitively and abſolutely ſo, whoſe Being is being unvile in abſolute Perfection. And becauſe it is plainly demonſtrable, that an Incarnation is incompetible to the other Divine Perſons, from thence it followeth, that an Incarnation would be incompetible to God the Son, if he was meerly a Divine Perſon; and that a certain Incarnation is competible unto him peculiarly for this Reaſon, Becauſe he is eſſentially an Humane-divine Perſon. Againſt which Combination of God and Man in one Perſon the Followers of Socinus argue (m) That God and Man are ſuch Oppoſites as are called Diſparata, which cannot be truly affirmed of one and the ſame Subject, much leſs of one another, becauſe they involve a Tacit contradiction. For God and Man differ as Man and not Man, Animal and not Animal; therefore God and Man cannot be ſimply and abſolutely affirmed of Chriſt. But we do not combine God and Man thus extravagantly or without due limitation of Senſe, nor in any other Senſe than the New Teſtament every where combineth the Son of God and the Son of Man, which is the ſame thing as the combining God and Man.

(l) Valentia T. 4. Diſp. 1. Qu. 3. Punct. 2.

(m) Crell. de uno Deo. l. 2. S. 2. c. 7.

The Scholaſtic Incarnation is link'd and combin'd with this ſecond Scholaſtic Conceit; That all the Divine Perſons may at the ſame time aſſume and be Hypoſtatically united with one and the ſame Humane Nature. And with another Scholaſtic Conceit near of Kin to it; That one Divine Perſon may aſſume and be Hypoſtaſtically united with ſeveral Human Natures. The generality of the School-Doctors (n) admit theſe Conceits and diſpute for them, only Scotus (with ſome very few others) is a Diſſenter as to this Propoſition; That all the Divine Perſons may at once aſſume and be Hypoſtatically united with one and the ſame individual Humane Nature: But the other Grandees of his Faculty pretend to aſſoil all his Objections, and all other difficult Queſtions and Objections, which incumber theſe ſtrange Propoſitions. If we ſuppoſe one and the ſame individual Humane Nature, to be at once aſſumed and Hypoſtatically united by all the Divine Perſons, it is a queſtion, by what Name theſe Perſons muſt be called, and whether they muſt be counted one Man or more? Some ſay, they muſt be counted but one Man, others count them three Men, and others will have them counted neither one nor three. If they muſt be counted but one Man (as Aquinas and his Followers ſay) ſeeing every one of the Divine Perſons communicateth to this one Man his perſonal Propriety, this one Man muſt neceſſarily be God the Father, God the Son, and God the Holy Ghoſt, which is ſuch a Trinity in Unity, as every one but a School-man will count a Prodigy. So if one Divine Perſon doth at once aſſume and hypoſtatically unite two individual Humane Natures, Aquinas and his Followers ſay, this Perſon muſt be counted but one Man, not two Men. For as their Scholaſticiſm hath compounded the Perſon of Chriſt of two intellectual Natures, ſo it compoundeth one Man of two individual Humane Natures, as if an individual Humane Nature was not a Man. But ſuppoſe (ſay ſome Objectors) that a Divine Perſon ſhould aſſume an Humane Nature, and at the ſame time aſſume the Nature of a Lion, would he be but one Animal? To this theſe School-doctors anſwer affirmatively; and that this one Animal may belong both to the Species of a Man and the Species of a Lion. With theſe vain and profane Crotchets the Scholaſticks entertain themſelves, and theſe they derive from that Fountain their Scholaſtic Incarnation of Chriſt; for they are Children of that Parent. And ſeeing the Children reſemble the Parent, the Scholaſtic Incarnation of Chriſt muſt not be thought of a very good Character; for theſe its derivatives are of a very bad one.

II. This Scholaſtic Incarnation is combin'd with this Fourth Scholaſtic Conceit, That by a Divine Perſon any ſubſtantial Nature (complete) may be aſſum'd into Unity of Perſon or Hypoſtaſis, although it be an unreaſonable and ſenſleſs Nature. (o) This the generality of the School-doctors aſſert with great aſſurance (proving the Truth of it from Chriſt's Body, which when it was dead and inanimate, was hypoſtatically ſuſtain'd by the Logos:) But ſome of them aſſert it with much greater Modeſty than others. For Cajetan ſaith, Although God without any Diſparagement to his Majeſty may be united to the vileſt Creatures, yet we ſhould abſtain from a particular mention of them, becauſe of our Infirmity, and that we may not be offenſive to pious Ears. For pious Ears will ſcarce endure to hear, what ſome of theſe School-doctors are not afraid to ſpeak, viz. That theſe Propoſitions are poſſible, Deus eſt Lapis, Deus eſt Aſinus, Deus eſt Homo damnatus, Deus eſt Diabolus. Such kind of Propoſitions that are dreadful Contumelies of the Holy God, are the genuine Iſſue and Progeny of the Scholaſtic Incarnation, they are inſeparable from it (as to their poſſibility) and are implicitly contained in it; and ſhould not the Cauſe be taken away, if the Effects of it are ſo bad, nothing better than horrendous Blaſphemies againſt God? But ſay the School-doctors (p) it cannot be proved, to be poſitively indecent and unbecoming God, to aſſume an irrational Nature, & naturam irrationalem in concreto de ipſo prædicari, illumque belluam, equum aut ſuem denominari, and to be denominated a Beaſt, an Horſe, or a Sow. To call God a Beaſt, an Horſe or a Sow, is with theſe impure Sophiſters no reproach to the Divine Majeſty; and that we may underſtand from what Fountain they derive this their impure Scholaſtic Atheology they tell us (q) that God in aſſuming Man, in ſome ſort aſſumed the Nature of Angels, Animals, Plants, Stones and things inanimate; and as by the Aſſumption of Humane Nature there is ſuch a Communication of Properties between God and Man, that by reaſon thereof God is ſaid to be Homo & riſibilis: So it is no indecency, quòd aſſumptâ naturâ equi diceretur equus & hinnibilis.

This Scholaſtic Incarnation the School-doctors (in the Fifth place) have combin'd with fooliſh and abſurd Queſtions and Aſſertions touching the Aſſumption of imperfect Natures and their Hypoſtatical Union with God; which ſpeaketh them extremely vain in their Imaginations, and therefore their Scholaſtic Incarnation of Chriſt looketh as of Kin to their Scholaſtic Vanities. One of theſe fooliſh and abſurd Queſtions which they debate (for they are of different Minds) and touching which they bandy their Arguments pro and con is (r) whether Materia prima without a ſubſtantial Form may be aſſumed to the Divine Subſiſtence? Another Queſtion which theſe ſubtil Doctors gravely debate, is touching the Aſſumption of Accidents. For although they do not doubt, but that Accidents inhering in their Subſtance may be aſſumed by God: Yet it is with them a Queſtion of difficulty, whether Accidents may be immediately (without their Subject) aſſum'd to the Perſonality and Subſiſtence Divine? Some affirm it, others deny it, and others tread in a middle Path. Theſe ſay, that no Accident can be aſſumed, to ſubſiſt by the Divine Subſiſtence, but may be aſſumed to exiſt by the Divine Exiſtence. And as Accidents may be ſupernaturally ſeparated from their Subject, and have a certain mode of exiſting per ſe (as appeareth in the quantity of the Bread in the Euchariſt:) So ſubſtantial material Forms may be ſupernaturally ſeparated from the Matter, and have a certain mode of ſubſiſting (given them by God) and therefore they may be aſſumed by and hypoſtatically united unto God, becauſe the Divine Subſiſtence may ſupply that mode of ſubſiſting, which they were capable of receiving from God. The ſeparate Soul of Man tranſcendeth theſe ſubſtantial material Forms, and therefore they make no doubt, but that a Divine Perſon may aſſume a rational Soul ſeparate from the Body by deſtroying its proper Subſiſtence and ſubſtituting inſtead of it the Divine Subſiſtence. Or God may create a rational Soul and hinder its proper Subſiſtence from reſulting from it, that the Divine Perſonality may be ſubſtituted inſtead of it. Touching integral parts (as the Hand, the Head, the Arm) theſe grave Scholaſticks diſcourſe, that ſo long as they continue united to the whole Compoſitum, they cannot be aſſumed to the Divine Subſiſtence, unleſs the Compoſitum be aſſumed: but if they be divided from the whole, thereby they acquire a proper Subſiſtence and Exiſtence (diſtinct from that which they had, when they were united to the whole) and having a Subſiſtence of their own, they may be immediately aſſumed by God (although the whole Compoſitum be not aſſumed) and may ſubſiſt by the Divine Subſiſtence.

(n) Petav. T. 4. l. 5. c. 1. Vaſq. in Th. 3. Par. T. 1. Diſp. 29. Valentia T. 4. Diſp. 1. Qu. 3. Punct. 3, 4. Gonet. Clyp. T. 11. Diſp. 8. Art. 4, 5.

(o) Vaſq. ſupr. Diſp. 30. Valentia ſupr. Qu. 4. Punct. 1. Gonet. ſupr. Diſp. 9. Art. 1.

(p) Gonet.

(q) In homine omnes gradus Univerſi quodammodo continentur; intelligit enim cum Angelis, vivit cum plantis, ſentit cum Animalibus, & exiſtit cum lapidibus & aliis inanimatis: Unde aſſumpto homine quodammodo totum Univerſum aſſumitur. Idem.

(r) Idem ibid. Art. 2. & 3.

III. The Scholaſtic Incarnation is (in the ſixth place) combin'd with (s) a multitude of vain Speculations, Queſtions and Altercations touching the matter, manner and order of the Aſſumption, and is complicated with a Debate touching the Blood and Humours, (t) whether the Divine Verbum ſo aſſumed an Humane Body, as that theſe were hypoſtatically aſſumed? It is paſt doubt with theſe Maſters, that the Fleſh and Bones and all the organical and integral parts of the Body were aſſumed to the Subſiſtence of the Divine Verbum: the only difficulty is, touching the Blood and other Humours, the Vital and Animal Spirits, Tears, Sweat, Spittle (and other Excrements) touching the Teeth alſo the Hair and Nails. Of the Blood they have different Opinions; for ſome ſay, that no Blood was aſſumed by the Verbum. Others ſay, that all the Blood that was in Chriſt (while he was in a Mortal Body) did ſubſiſt by the Subſiſtence of the Divine Word. And others diſtinguiſh Blood into nutrimental and natural, which latter (as they ſuppoſe) was aſſumed by the Word, but not the former. The natural Blood (as they ſay) appertaineth to the ſubſtantial Integrity of Humane Nature and an Humane Body (whence there will be Blood in the Reſurrection-bodies) this therefore by the Divine Word was aſſumed to his Subſiſtence. And not only the Blood which was in Chriſt's Body when living, but alſo that which remained ſeparated from his Body in triduo mortis, was hypoſtatically united to the Divine Word. For although this was once a matter of great diſpute inter fratres Minores & Prædicatores, yet now the Schools are ſo confident of the truth of it, that they count the contrary Opinion little better than Hereſie. They are confident alſo, that there are ſeveral parcels of Chriſt's Blood, which he left behind him here on Earth (kept as ſacred Relicks for the conſolation of the Faithful:) but they do not ſuppoſe, that theſe retain the Hypoſtatical Union, notwithſtanding that celebrated Maxim Quod ſemel aſſumpſit nunquam dimiſit. Yet ſome few of them are otherwiſe minded; they are alſo divided in their Opinion touching the Nails and Hair, which the moſt of them ſuppoſe, to have been hypoſtatically united to the Verbum. The Teeth alſo (they ſay) were perſonally united to the Divine Word, but not Tears, Sweat, Spittle and other Superfluities and Excrements of an Humane Body. But becauſe Blood appertaineth to the Verity and Integrity of Humane Nature, and was therefore aſſumed by the Divine Word: So for the ſame reaſon Phlegm, Choler and Melancholy had the ſame aſſumption. And conſequently, if the Blood ſhed by Chriſt in his Paſſion was reaſſumed by him in his Reſurrection, and carried to Heaven with him (ſave only ſome parcels of it kept as Relicks) as the School-Doctors ſuppoſe, Phlegm, Choler and Melancholy muſt have the ſame reaſſumption. Such is the Wiſdom of the Schools of Chriſtendom in their Doctrine of the Incarnation.

IV. This Scholaſtic Incarnation is combin'd alſo with a diſagreeing Account of the Grace of Chriſt's Perſon, which in the Scholaſtic Theology is diſtinguiſh'd into (u) The Grace of Union or the Subſtantial, The Grace habitual or of Unction, The Grace of the Head influxive upon others. But ſome of the School-Doctors ſay, (w) That this Grace of the Head is not to be counted a diſtinct Grace from the other two; for by theſe Chriſt is qualify'd, to be an Head of Influence unto others, according to that of the Apoſtle, of his fulneſs have all we received. But becauſe in his fulneſs the holy Spirit which Chriſt communicateth, is comprehended, it ſeemeth reaſonable, that the Grace of the Head ſhould be diſtinguiſh'd from the Grace of Union and habitual Grace. There is more reaſon, to call in queſtion this diſtinction of his Grace into that of Union and the habitual; for this ſeeming twofold Grace of Chriſt may reaſonably be thought one and the ſame Grace under ſeveral Conſiderations; His Eſſence which is Vital Sanctity being both the Grace of Eſſential Union to his Humane Nature and alſo Eſſential-habitual Grace to it. The Fathers look upon Chriſt's Divinity as the Unction of his Humanity, whereby he was ſanctify'd. (x) Χρίσις δὲ ἡ θεότης τῆς ἀνθρωπότητος, The Divinity is the Unction of the Humanity. God anointed the Humanity with the Divinity (ſaith Gr. Naz.) for this is the Unction of the Humanity. Not anointing him by Energy or Operation, as others are anointed; παρουσίᾳ δὲ ὅλου τοῦ χρίοντος, but by the preſence of the whole of that which anointeth. They ſuppoſe Chriſt's Humane Nature by its conjunction with the Divine Nature, (y) θεωθῆναι, θεοποιεῖσθαι, τεθεῶσθαι, to be deify'd (in ſome ſort) and to be made Divine. They know not any ſuch thing as an habitual Grace in Chriſt diſtinct from the Grace of Union. This is purely an Opinion of Modern Scholaſtic Divines, and ſeveral of theſe that are School-Doctors (z) diſcourſe very heſitantly and dubiouſly touching this diſtinct habitual Grace, and ſay, it is not certain, that it is of Faith. But it is certain, that by the Grace of Union his Humane Nature was ſanctified, as both the Fathers and the School-Doctors agree. (a) They call the Saints Chriſts (anointed,) but they make theſe differences between them and Chriſt. He is not anointed by ſome participation of Sanctity, ſed ipſamet ſanctitate per eſſentiam quæ eſt divinitas, but by Eſſential Sanctity it ſelf which is the Divinity. To the Saints the Divinity is Sanctity and Unction only cauſaliter (it cauſeth that Sanctity and Grace whereby they are formally anointed and ſancti-

(s) An natura humana manens in propria perſona aſſumi potuerit? An natura humana in Chriſto habeat inclinationem & appetitum ad proprium ſuppoſitum? An verè & propriè dici poſſit, perſona divina aſſumpſit hominem? Utrum Filius Dei debuerit aſſumere humanam naturam abſtractam ab omnibus individuis? Utrum Filius Dei naturam humanam aſſumere debuerit in omnibus individuis? Utrum conveniens fuerit, quòd Filius Dei humanam naturam aſſumeret ex ſtirpe Adæ? Utrum Dei Filius debuerit aſſumere verum corpus? Utrum Dei Filius aſſumere debuerit corpus terrenum, ſcilicet carnem & ſanguinem? Utrum Filius Dei aſſumpſerit animam? Utrum Filius Dei aſſumere debuerit Intellectum? Utrum Filius Dei aſſumpſerit carnem mediante anima? Utrum Filius Dei aſſumpſerit animam mediante ſpiritu, ſeu mente? Utrum anima à Dei filio priùs fuerit aſſumpta quàm caro? Utrum caro Chriſti prius fuerit à verbo aſſumpta, quàm anima unita? Utrum tota natura mediis partibus ipſius aſſumpta fuerit, an contra partes media tota natura? Utrum humana natura ſit aſſumpta mediante gratia? An gratia habitualis fuerit medium aut diſpoſitio ad unionem hypoſtaticam? Vaſqu. in Th. 3. par. T. 1. Diſp. 33, &c.

(t) Gonet. ſupr. Art. 7.

(u) Gratia unionis vel ſubſtantialis, gratia habitualis vel unctionis, gratia capitis influxiva in alios. Gonet. ſupr. T. 12. p. 3.

(w) Valentia, T. 4. Diſp. 1. Qu. 8. punct. 1.

(x) Ibid. c. 8. S. 1, 8. Vaſq. in Th. 3. par. T. 1. Diſp. 41.

(y) Petav. ſupr. l. 11. c. 7. S. 7. & c. 12. s. 7.

(z) Vaſqu. ſupr. Valentia, T. 4. Diſp. 1. Qu. 7. punct. 1.

(a) Vaſqu. ibid. c. 3. n. 19. Gonet. ſupr. p. 7.

ſanctified;) but to Chriſt's Humanity the Divinity is (unctio & ſanctitas formalis) the formal Unction and Sanctity. To his Humanity alſo Sanctity is οὐσιώδης, eſſential or ſubſtantive, not appertaining to it by accident and ſeparably, as it appertaineth to the Saints. For which reaſon (b) ſome Scholaſtic Divines would not have it counted the habitual Grace, but derive it from the Grace of Union, that ſo it may be more intimate, natural, eſſential and ſubſtantive. The School-Doctors alſo repreſent it as intimate and ſubſtantive, when they argue, that the Humanity of Chriſt is ſanctified as a red hot Iron or a live-burning Coal is made fiery (by the ſubſtance of Fire receiv'd into it and pervading it;) and ſeveral of them content themſelves to ſay, that the Divinity is (forma ſanctificans) the ſanctifying form. But others of them more nicely inquire, what is meant by this Divinity that ſanctifieth? And theſe ſay, (c) that the Divinity as diſtinct from the Perſonality of the Verbum, or the Divine Nature which by means of that Perſonality is united with the Humane Nature, formally ſanctifieth the Humanity. But againſt this Account the Authors of it object, that if this Divinity is formally the Vital Sanctity of the Humanity, it muſt be a Radical and Phyſical Principle of a ſupernatural Life and the vital actions thereof; it muſt be united to the Humanity (ut forma phyſica) as a phyſically informing form; whereas ſuch a phyſical information ſpeaketh an Imperfection repugnant to the Divine Nature. Which is moſt true, if by the Divine Nature we underſtand a Divine Perſon, who cannot be a phyſically informing form. Nor is it imaginable, that the Divine Nature can be the Divine Nature of the Humanity, if it is not immediately united thereto. Which ſheweth, that the Divinity which is formally Sanctity to the Humanity, is not a Divine Perſon, but only a Divine Nature, that is like a phyſically informing form. And becauſe in Chriſt there is but one Divine Nature (not ſuch an habitual Grace and ſuch a Grace of Union that are two diſtinct Divine Natures) upon this account chiefly the diſtinct habitual Grace ought to be rejected.

V. The Scholaſtic Incarnation is combin'd with a diſagreeing account of the perfection and dimenſions of the Grace of Chriſt's Perſon. For the Scholaſticks of later times having imagin'd an habitual Grace in Chriſt different from the Grace of Union, agreeably to this fundamental miſtake reſolve theſe following Queſtions. Whether the fulneſs of Grace was in Chriſt? Whether it was the higheſt poſſible? Whether it was infinite? Whether it could be increas'd? Theſe Inquiries are touching the Dimenſions of their imaginary habitual Grace, not of the Grace of Union; for this (with the Fathers) they count abſolutely immenſe and infinite: but the habitual Grace of Chriſt (d) this they generally account finite and ſuch as may be augmented by God's abſolute Power, not the higheſt poſſible ſave only according to God's ordinary Power, nor the fulneſs of Grace ſave only in a certain limited Senſe. Inconſiſtently with themſelves therefore they introduce into the Soul of Chriſt an habitual Grace; for as their habitual Grace, ſo their Grace of Union is ſuppos'd to be in the Soul of Chriſt, which is anointed and formally ſanctified by it, and is made holy by it in ſuch manner as a live burning Coal is made fiery. According to their Theology therefore it muſt be ſaid, that the Grace which is in the Soul of Chriſt, is at once finite, and not finite, the higheſt poſſible, and not the higheſt poſſible, that which may be augmented, and that which cannot be augmented, a fulneſs of Grace which is not abſolutely full, but hath ſtint and limitation, and yet knoweth no limitation. So they interpret this place of Scripture God giveth not the Spirit by meaſure unto him, to be meant not only of the Grace of Union, but of the habitual Grace, which therefore muſt be boundleſs and immeaſurable, yet this is the Grace which they ſay, hath ſtint and meaſure. Yet they ſay of it alſo, that it tranſcendeth all the Grace of all the Saints and of all the Angels taken all together; therefore it tranſcendeth all Grace that hath Bounds and Limits, and muſt be infinite and unlimited. And becauſe it tranſcendeth all the Grace of all the Saints and Angles taken all together, therefore it is Creature-tranſcendent, and conſequently it is deifying to Chriſt and to his Soul. Yet the Scholaſticks ſay of it, (e) The Grace of Chriſt is a created quality inherent in his Soul, which is a Creature too; therefore it muſt neceſſarily be finite. So Aquinas argueth, (f) Habitual Grace is in the Soul of Chriſt as in the Subject of it: but the Soul of Chriſt is a Creature, and of a finite Capacity; the Grace therefore, which exceedeth not the Subject of it, cannot be infinite. Yet this grand Scholaſtic himſelf ſaith of the Humanity of Chriſt, (g) omne quod pertinet ad perfectionem gratiæ collatum ei fuit. So the Apoſtle ſaith of Chriſt in reſpect of his Manhood (as all Men underſtand it) It pleaſed the Father, that in him ſhould all fulneſs dwell. In which magnifying Character the Apoſtle muſt be ſuppoſed, to mean, that all fulneſs of Grace dwelleth in the Humanity of Chriſt without limitation or reſtriction; for to ſuppoſe, that it dwelleth in Chriſt's Manhood only in ſome ſort, in a certain Senſe, ſecundum quid, and improperly, ſo to limit his ſenſe (as ſome Scholaſtic Divines do) is to do manifeſt violence to his words, that cannot be made more general and emphatical than they are. The deſign of them is manifeſtly, to attribute to Chriſt Creature-tranſcendence; for Creatures can have but ſome fulneſs and abundance, it is proper to God only, to be All, to ſay unto him All my Springs are in thee, and to have all fulneſs. The Apoſtle therefore attributeth to the Manhood of Chriſt ſuch a fulneſs of Grace which is Creature-tranſcendent, which is proper to the only begotten Son (whoſe fulneſs is incompetible to any Creature) ſuch a fulneſs as belongeth to him, who hath (not a Portion of the Holy Spirit, but) the Holy Spirit without Bound or Meaſure; and ſuch a fulneſs which is peculiar to him, that hath all the fulneſs of the Godhead dwelling in him; and how is it poſſible, that his fulneſs can be leſs than abſolutely boundleſs and immeaſurable? This is the fulneſs which the holy Writers celebrate in Chriſt; they know not any ſuch limited fulneſs of habitual Grace, which the Modern Scholaſticks have introduc'd, of which they ſay, (h) all that the habitual Grace of Chriſt importeth, is communicable to a meer Creature. The habitual Grace is only a certain diminute and imperfect participation of the Divine Nature and of Sanctity. And this limited Grace they ſuppoſe, to be one and the ſame Grace with gratia capitis, the Grace which is in Chriſt as Head of the Church, who as ſuch filleth all in all; whoſe Riches are not only Plenty, but Immenſity; whoſe Fulneſs is that of a Spring and Fountain indeficient and inexhauſtible, of a publick Treaſury and Storehouſe,

(b) Petav. T. 4. l. 11. c. 12. S. 11.

(c) Gonet. ſupr. T. 12. Diſp. 11. Art. 2.

(d) Vaſqu. ſupr. Diſp. 45, 46, 47. Valentia, ſupr. punct. 2. Gonet. ſupr. Diſp. 13

(e) Davenant. in Col. 1. 19. Jeanes of Chriſt's fulneſs, p. 235. ed. 1.

(f) 3. Qu. 7. Art. 11.

(g) Gonet. ubi ſupr. Art. 3. S. 2.

(h) Gonet. ibid. Diſp. 14. Art. 1. S. 1. [illegible] & Diſp. [illegible] Art. 1. S. [illegible] houſe, of an univerſal cauſe and principle of Grace (ſuch is the King of Saints) which therefore muſt neceſſarily be in him in infinite fulneſs. No partial finite meaſures of Grace can be ſufficient for univerſal endleſs Communications. One that hath but a finite Eſtate cannot be always on the liberal ſpending Hand, as Chriſt is, who hath promis'd to all his followers plenty and exundancy of the Water of Life, Joh. 7. 38. The fulleſt plenitude of Life poſſible and conceivable muſt neceſſarily be in him, who is the Reſurrection and the Life. And this the School-Doctors acknowledge; for although they limit their habitual Grace, yet they ſuppoſe, that by the Grace of Union a communication is made of the whole Divinity and the whole Divine Sanctity. (i) All Grace was poured upon that Temple (the Manhood of Chriſt) we indeed have received of his fulneſs, but that Temple received intirely the whole of Grace. The Vital Sanctity of this Humane Soul is his Divine Vital Eſſence, which is Grace and Holineſs in infinite fulneſs.

VI. The Scholaſtic Incarnation is combin'd with abſur'd Conceits touching the origin of Chriſt's habitual Grace, his Filiation and Predeſtination. For touching the origin of his habitual Grace the School-Doctors affirm, (k) That Chriſt had the plenitude of it, not ſucceſſively and by parts (as we) but had the whole abundance of it in the firſt inſtant of his conception (wherein his bleſſed Soul was created) ſo that he never made any growth in ſanctifying Grace: And that he had this plenitude of habitual Grace at that time by the diſpoſition of his free Will and by an act of Divine Charity, as the Holy Angels had their habitual Grace by an act of Divine Charity, which they put forth in the firſt inſtant of their Creation. Theſe are marvellous Conceits; that the Holy Angels by Free-will prepared themſelves for habitual Grace, and before they had it, put forth an Act of Charity; that an Infant in the firſt moment of his Conception exercis'd Free-will, diſpos'd himſelf for habitual Grace and burned with Divine Charity. But ſo theſe Scholaſticks ſuppoſe, (l) that Chriſt in the firſt moment of his Conception freely and out of Charity made an Oblation of himſelf (and thereby merited) and thus they interpret the Apoſtle, Heb. 10. 5.

Touching the Filiation of Chriſt theſe Scholaſticks affirm, that (m) gratia habitualis non conſtituit Chriſtum ſpiritualiter genitum, habitual Grace doth not conſtitute Chriſt ſpiritually begotten. If it did conſtitute him ſpiritually begotten, it muſt conſtitute him the Son of God, and conſequently his Temporal Generation muſt be his Birth-nobilitation, which is deſtructive to the Scholaſtic Incarnation. Yet this habitual Grace is that Divine Nature, into which the Children of God are regenerated, whoſe Regeneration is a Divine Generation, their habitual Grace conſtituteth them ſpiritually begotten; therefore the Schools that ſuppoſe it, to be in Chriſt, ought to ſuppoſe, that it conſtituteth Chriſt ſpiritually begotten. They muſt ſuppoſe him, to be born of the Spirit; for ſuch is every one that hath habitual Grace in him; and he that is born of the Spirit, is (doubtleſs) ſpiritually begotten.

The Predeſtination of Chriſt according to the Scriptures hath nothing of difficulty in it: but Scholaſticiſm will create difficulties, if it findeth none. For receding far and wide from the ſenſe of the Scriptures it ſuppoſeth, (n) that Chriſt as Man (ſubſiſting in Humane Nature) was predeſtinated to be the natural Son of God (by Union) and that this is primarily and principally the Predeſtination of Chriſt. And this is the Predeſtination (that the Scriptures know nothing of, but) which S. Auſtin mightily inſiſteth upon, making it an Example and Specimen of the Predeſtination of the Saints by Grace (without Merits;) for he ſuppoſeth (as other Scholaſticks do) that Chriſt as Man was not the natural Son of God by Generation, but became ſuch by Union and by Grace, and was predeſtinated thereto by Grace. (o) We are made Saints by Grace without Merits, as that Man aſſumed into perſon by the Eternal Word became the only begotten Son of God without Merits. Of this Unition of the Man to the Eternal Logos and his predeſtination thereto, S. Auſtin interpreteth the Apoſtle's words, which belong to a matter extremely remote and diſtant, Rom. 1. 3, 4. (p) Jeſus was predeſtinated, that he who was to be the Son of David according to the Fleſh, might yet be in virtue the Son of God (q) by an hypoſtatical union of the Humanity with the Word. But againſt this unſcriptural Predeſtination of Chriſt the Scholaſticks themſelves make this Objection, which they can never clearly anſwer; If Chriſt as Man is predeſtinated to natural Sonſhip unto God, it is the Perſon of Chriſt, that is ſo predeſtinated: but the Perſon of Chriſt cannot be ſo predeſtinated, becauſe natural Sonſhip unto God is included in the Perſon of Chriſt, which neceſſarily conſiſteth of the natural Son of God and the Humanity in Hypoſtatical Union.

VII. The Scholaſtic Incarnation is combin'd with many Abſurdities and ſome remarkable Verities touching the Science of the Soul of Chriſt. His Science (or Knowledge) the School-Doctors diſtribute into Create and Increate; and his Create Science they diſtribute into three ſorts: Scientia beata, infuſa, acquiſita, His beatific, infuſed and acquired Knowledge. In which diſtributions of our Saviour's Knowledge and the Account which they give of them there are ſome remarkable Verities. For,

(1.) They rightly attribute to the Perſon of Chriſt a Creature-tranſcendency of Knowledge. To his Perſon belongeth an increate Knowledge, as that ſignifieth Creature-tranſcendent. For if he is a Creature-tranſcendent Lord, Prince and Potentate. He muſt be Creature-tranſcendent in reſpect of the ſcire, velle, poſſe. To be the Imperial Son of God, is Creature-tranſcendency (or God-eminency) of Perſon, Knowledge and Power. And this Creature-tranſcendency of Knowledge the Diſciples attribute to our Saviour, Joh. 16. 30. and 21. 17. our Saviour attributeth it to himſelf, ſtiling himſelf καρδιογνώστης, he that ſearcheth the Reins and Hearts, Apoc. 2. 23. It is one thing, to know the Secrets of the Hearts of Men by a prophetic kind of Divine Revelation, which is competible to a Creature (for God may ſo reveal them to whom he pleaſeth;) another thing to know them by Divine Intuition, which is an incommunicable

Prerogative

(i) Πᾶσα ἡ χάρις ἐξεχύθη εἰς τὸν ναὸν ἐκεῖνον· ἡμεῖς μὲν γὰρ ἐκ τοῦ πληρώματος αὐτοῦ ἐλάβομεν· ὁ δὲ ναὸς ἐκεῖνος ὁλόκληρον τὴν χάριν ἔλαβε. S. Chryſoſt. T. 1. p. 633.

(k) Gonet. ſupr. Diſp. 13. Art. 2. S. 4. 5. & Diſp. 12. Art. 1. S. 3.

(l) Ibid. Diſp. 21. Art. 1. S. 4.

(m) Ibid. Diſp. 12. Art. 1. S. 2.

(n) Ibid.

(o) Reſpondeatur quæſo: Ille homo ut à verbo patris coæterno in unitatem perſonæ aſſumptus, Filius Dei unigenitus eſſet, unde hoc meruit? Ea gratia fit ab initio fidei ſuæ homo quicunque Chriſtianus, qua gratia homo ille ab initio ſuo factus eſt Chriſtus. De Prædeſt. Sanct. l. 1. c. 15.

(p) Prædeſtinatus ergo Jeſus, ut qui futurus erat ſecundum carnem filius David, eſſet tamen in virtute filius Dei.

(q) Valentia, T. 4. Diſp. 1. Qu. 23 punct. 2.

Prerogative and Peculiarity of a Divine and Creature-tranſcendent Perſon.

(2.) They rightly attribute a Creature-tranſcendency of Knowledge to the Soul of Chriſt. Some of them ſay, (r) The Soul of our Lord had all Wiſdom, Divine and Humane, all Knowledge of the things that were, and are, and ſhall be, not by Nature, not by Grace, ſed propter unionem perſonalem, but becauſe of the Perſonal or Hypoſtatical Union. Some of them derive the Knowledge which the Soul of Chriſt hath from the Hypoſtatical Union in ſo high a manner, as the reſt account a pitch of extravagance. For Hugo de S. Victore ſaith, (s) that the Soul of Chriſt is wiſe, ipſamet ſapientia increata Dei, communicata per unionem hypoſtaticam, by the very increate Wiſdom of God communicated by the Hypoſtatical Union. But there is nothing of reputed Extravagance in thoſe great things, which they affirm touching the Beatifick Science, which they attribute to the Soul of Chriſt, of which they ſay, (t) That Chriſt by that knowledge clearly knew all things, that God knew by the Science of Viſion (as it is called) that is, all things that actually are, were or ſhall be. The Soul of Chriſt knoweth in the Word all things that exiſt in time preſent, paſt or to come. The Knowledge of the Soul of Chriſt being create may ſeem to be finite, yet theſe Doctors ſay, The Soul of Chriſt in the Word knoweth infinite things, as the Cogitations of the Bleſſed and of the Damned through all Eternity. Thus far they extend the Beatifick Science of the Soul of Chriſt: but they ſay alſo, (u) Chriſt by an infuſed Science knew all natural Objects, all Singulars, preſent, paſt and to come. (w) By this Science he knew all things that belong to Humane Sciences, and all things made known to Men by Revelation; but did not know the Divine Eſſence it ſelf by this Science. (x) Aquinas affirmeth, that Chriſt by this infuſed Science knew all things beſides the Divine Eſſence. The Soul of Chriſt therefore by an infuſed Science knew the ſecret Cogitations of the Hearts of Men and future Contingents. The infuſed knowledge of the Secrets of Men it ought to have, he being Lord and Judge of all. (y) The Catholic Faith againſt Hereticks teacheth, that Chriſt knew all Futurities, and that there was in him no Ignorance at all. (z) It belongeth to the Perfection of the Soul of Chriſt, that he not only know all things, but alſo with every poſſible manner and kind of knowledge. Upon which account the School-Doctors have introduc'd theſe three modes and kinds of Knowledge, The beatifick, infuſed and acquiſite, all which they attribute to the Soul of Chriſt, thus far extending its Knowledge, and making only this following limitation of it. (a) They ſuppoſe, that in the Divine Eſſence all things are beheld as in a Looking-glaſs, and that every one of the Bleſſed doth in Verbo know all things that belong to him; and becauſe to Chriſt and his Dignity all things in ſome ſort belong, thence they infer, that the Soul of Chriſt did always in God know and ſee all things paſt and future, all things ſaid, done or thought. Yet they do not think, that the Soul of Chriſt is ſimply omniſcient, becauſe it doth not comprehend the Divine Eſſence (for that which is finite, cannot comprehend that which is infinite) non comprehendit eſſentiam divinam, nec omnia Deo poſſibilia novit, it doth not comprehend the Divine Eſſence, nor know all things that are poſſible to God. But notwithſtanding theſe Limitations and Reſtrictions which they make of the Science of the Soul of Chriſt, it is manifeſt, that the School-Doctors attribute thereto much of Creature-tranſcendency of Knowledge, and that they are not of the ſame Opinion with thoſe that ſay, (b) the knowledge of the Humane Soul of Chriſt is neceſſarily limited to the Capacity of a Creature. Nor is there any reaſon, that we ſhould be of this Opinion: for although the Soul of Chriſt is of it ſelf finite, yet it is eſſentially united with that which is infinite; and his Soul is of the ſame nature and denomination with his Perſon, and therefore muſt be called eſſentially Humane-divine. To this Humane-divine Soul the miraculous or creature-tranſcendent Wiſdom, Knowledge or Science belongeth, as alſo the miraculous or creature-tranſcendent Vigour, Efficacy or operative Power. Nor can we criminally miſtake in attributing thereto Allfulneſs of both (the miraculous or creature-tranſcendent Knowledge and Power) if we take care, not to contradict the Holy Scriptures, nor to injure the Honour of God the Father. For whoſe Honour the School-Doctors expreſs a regard, when they argue, that he that made him Lord and Judge of all, and gave him all authoritative Power, giveth him all Wiſdom requiſite for the management thereof (Iſa. 11. 2.) and the knowledge of all things that ought to come within his cogniſance. But their laudable Argumentations touching the Science of the Soul of Chriſt are not ſo many as their Abſurdities and Extravagancies, which are ſuch as theſe following.

(1.) They affirm, that the Soul of Chriſt from the firſt inſtant of his conception had the Beatifick Viſion (ſaw the Divine Eſſence) and was a comprehenſor from that time.

(2.) They ſuppoſe therefore, that from that time he had the ſupreme Beatitude (as to his Soul) and conſequently they make his dreadful Paſſion to be no dreadful Paſſion; for he could not be in the higheſt joy and delectation and the deepeſt ſorrow at the ſame time. Yet ſome of them ſay, (c) Simul in eadem Chriſti anima reperiebatur gaudium comprehenſoris & triſtitia viatoris.

(3.) They ſuppoſe, that the Soul of Chriſt ſeeth in the Divine Eſſence or in Verbo as in a Glaſs (d) all things paſt, preſent and to come, all things that God knoweth, ſay ſome; all things that concern his Glory, ſay others; all things poſſible, not any thing future, ſay others; not all things poſſible, but all things future, ſay others; and ſome ſay, that he ſeeth in Verbo all things that God knoweth, not actually, but habitually. All which Scholaſticiſm touching his ſeeing things in the Divine Eſſence is pure Phantaſtry and Extravagance.

(4.) As they ſuppoſe Chriſt from the inſtant of his Conception, to have been abſolutely and perfectly full of Grace, ſo they ſuppoſe him from the ſame time, to have been abſolutely and perfectly full of Truth; that (e) when he was an Infant in reſpect of the natural uſe of Reaſon, he was perfectly wiſe as to his ſcientia beata & infuſa,

(r) Gonet. ſupr. Diſp. 17. Art. 1. S. 3. Art. 4. S. 1.

(s) Vaſqu. T. 1. in 3. par. Diſp. 50. c. 1.

(t) Chriſtum per iſtam ſcientiam clarè cognoviſſe omnia, quæcunque Deus cognovit ſcientiâ, ut vocant viſionis, id eſt, quæcunque actu ſunt, fuerunt aut erunt. Anima Chriſti in verbo cognoſcit omnia exiſtentia ſecundum quodcunque tempus. Anima Chriſti in verbo infinita cognoſcit. Valentia T. 4. Diſp. 10. Qu. 10. punct. 2. Gonet. ſupr. Diſp. 16. Art. 3. S. 1.

(u) Chriſtus per ſcientiam infuſam omnia objecta naturalia cognovit, omnia ſingularia, præſentia, præterita & futura. Ibid. Diſp. 17. Art. 2. S. 1.

(w) Aquin. 3. par. Qu. 11. Art. 1.

(x) Aſſerit S. Doctor Chriſtum cognoviſſe per ſcientiam infuſam omnia præter Dei eſſentiam. Anima Chriſti igitur per ſcientiam infuſam occultas cordium cogitationes & futura contingentia cognovit. Gonet. ſupr. Art. 4. S. 1.

(y) Chriſtum cognoviſſe omnia futura, nec ullam in eo fuiſſe ignorantiam, fides Catholica contra hæreticos docet. Vaſq. ſupr. Diſp. 51. c. 2.

(z) Ad perfectionem animæ Chriſti pertinet, quod non ſolum omnia cognoſcat, ſed etiam omni modo & genere cognitionis poſſibili. Gonet. ſupr. Diſp. 17. Art. 5. S. 2.

(a) Le Blanc. Theſ. Poſthum. 4.

(b) Mr. Thorndike Epi. B. 2. c. 17.

(c) Gonet. ſupr. Diſp. 21. Art. 1. S. 3.

(d) Vaſqu. ſupr. Diſp. 50. c. 2.

(e) Valentia, T. 4. Diſp. 1. Qu. 9. punct. 2. Bellarm. T. 1. de Chriſto, l. 4. c. 2.

infuſa, although he wanted his Scientia acquiſita. And with this Limitation they ſuppoſe, that as he made no Proficiency in ſanctifying Grace, ſo he made none in Wiſdom, nor learned any thing afterwards which he did not know before, contrary to the Evangeliſt. Luk. 2. 40, 52.

(5.) If a Scholar ſhould be Born with a natural Faculty of reading and underſtanding Hebrew in the Bible, and we ſhould tell him, that this is not enough, he muſt underſtand Hebrew by Inſpiration; and not only ſo, but he muſt alſo learn and underſtand it by his Induſtry; every one would count us extremely abſurd and impertinent. Yet this our abſurd impertinency is a Parallel to what the School-doctors ſay of the Soul of Chriſt; for they ſuppoſe him, to know (from the inſtant of his Conception) the ſame knowable Objects in Verbo by his beatific Science; and (this being not enough) extra Verbum alſo by an infuſed Science; and not only ſo, but (theſe modes of Science being not ſufficient) by his Scientia acquiſita.

(6.) They ſuppoſe Chriſt (f) to have been a great Naturaliſt, of an excellent natural Wit, wherein he excelled all Men (even Adam himſelf) and that he acquired the Natural and Humane Sciences by his own Acts (as a great Party of them ſay) and ought ſo to do, ne intellectus agens maneret in eo otioſus, that his agent Intellect might not be idle and unimploy'd.

(7.) They will not allow, that Chriſt did learn any thing from the Angels, or had any Conſolation from them. At the beginning of his Paſſion God began to hide his Face from him, (and therefore Comfort was withdrawn, becauſe God was withdrawn) then he began to take upon him the Perſon and Diſpoſition of a punitive Judge to his own Son, and Chriſt had the apprehenſion and ſenſe of it, the weight whereof he felt ſo heavy, as made him ready to ſink under it, and it rais'd his Griefs and Fears to ſuch a pitch, that he needed the Conſolation of an Angel. No, ſaith a School-doctor (g) Angelus nullam Chriſto adhibuit conſolationem, the Angel gave no Conſolation to Chriſt, the meaning of his ſtrengthning him is, that the Angel attributed ſtrength unto him, congratulated his Fortitude, and (although in his Agony he was almoſt overwhelmed with Griefs and Fears, yet) prais'd and extoll'd his ſtoutneſs and greatneſs of Mind. So the plaineſt words of Scripture muſt be perverted and made to ſignifie nothing, when they are againſt prejudicate Conceits. Some of old blotted this Text out of their Bible (becauſe they ſuppos'd it to befriend Arianiſm) and the School-men might as well expunge it, as interpret it by a downright contradicting it. But at a like rate other Texts are interpreted, that are inconſiſtent with their Scholaſtic Incarnation, which is neceſſarily of the ſame Nature with their Scholaſtic Theology, touching which any Man may be rationally ſatisfied, that it is not true or legitimate.

(f) Gonet. ſupr. Diſp. 18. Art. 2. S. 1. & 2.

(g) Vaſq. ſupr. Diſp. 56. c. 2.

CHAP. IX.

1. Of the Chriſtian Religion as it is the new Creation. Chriſt's Attribute of Creator proveth his Divinity of Perſon. 2. According to the Scholaſtic Theology he is the Deity of the old Creation, and a common univerſal Providence. 3. The Deity alſo of the Old Teſtament. 4. A Recapitulation of Arguments againſt it. 5. Some are from the Light and Law of Nature which are inſiſted upon. 6. More from the ſilence of the Old Teſtament. 7. From the Benefits we have by Chriſt and the Duty we owe to him. 8. From the New Teſtament's Nominations and Deſcriptions of the Deity of the old Creation, and from the Heathen Idolatry. 9. From the Idea of the Son, the Holy Ghoſt, and of the Trinity. 10. From the evident Senſe of many places of the New Teſtament. 11. From evident Reaſons for ſuppoſing the Creation attributed to our Saviour, to be meant of the new Creation. 12. From the Attributes connex'd by the Apoſtle with Chriſt's Creatorſhip. 13. From ſeveral other Indications in the Apoſtle's Divine Panegyrick to the Coloſſians. 14. Objections anſwer'd. 15. Of the Firſt Chapter to the Hebrews and the Creatorſhip there mention'd.

I. IF the Chriſtian Religion is rightly denominated The new Creation, there muſt be in it a creating things and perſons, a new creating them; and Chriſt Jeſus the Author and Founder of this new Religion muſt be a Creator, a new Creator. Which Name manifeſtly ſpeaketh his Creature-tranſcendency (which is his Divinity or Deity of Perſon) that he is Lord of the Creature, of the Creator's not the Creature's Party, and conſequently he is (natively and by officiary Dignity) a Perſon of the Godhead, no Creature-ſon. So the Fathers uſually argue (with great ſtrength of Reaſon) that he cannot be a Creature, who is the Creator, and their Argument is as applicable to the new as to the old Creation. (h) For the Maker of all things is not a Creature and a thing made, but the Work is renew'd in the Maker, according to that Saying of Paul; we are his Workmanſhip created in Chriſt Jeſus. (i) How can that which is created create? Or how is the Creator created? (k) If the Son be Creator as the Father, he is not a Creature; and if all things are made by him, he is not of the number of the things that are made. (l) He is not τῶν πάντων εἷς, one of all that is the Maker of all and is not number'd with them. (m) If he is ἕν τι τῶν γεγονότων, one of the things that were made, how is it true, that all things were made by him? (n) Whence it is manifeſt, that he was not made, by whom all things were made. And if he was not made, he is not a Creature. (o) Quis hunc induxit errorem, ut eum qui creavit omnia, qui fecit omnia, diceret creaturam? (p) Creation is θεότητος δηλωτικὸν, demonſtrative of Deity (thereby God proveth his Deity in the Old Teſtament) let us not confound the Creator and the Creature. He is ſaid to be πρωτότοκος, the firſt Begotten, not πρωτόκτιστος, the firſt Created,

(h) Οὐ γὰρ ὁ ποιητὴς τῶν ἁπάντων κτίσμα καὶ ποίημά ἐστιν, ἀλλὰ τὸ ποίημα ἐν τῷ ποιητῇ ἀνανεοῦται κατὰ τὸ λεγόμενον ὑπὸ τοῦ Παύλου· αὐτοῦ ἐσμὲν ποίημα κτισθέντες ἐν Χριστῷ Ἰησοῦ. S. Athanaſ. de human. nat. ſuſcept. p. 467. Com.

(i) Πῶς δύναται τὸ κτιζόμενον κτίζειν; ἢ πῶς ὁ κτίζων κτίζεται; Idem ad Afric. p. 720.

(k) Ἐι δὲ κτιστὴς ὢν ὡς ὁ πατὴρ ὁ υἱὸς, οὐκέτι κτίσμα· καὶ εἰ δι' αὐτοῦ κτίζεται τὰ πάντα, οὐκ ἔστι τῶν κτιζομένων. Idem ad Serap. T. 2. p. 23.

(l) S. Cyr. Theſaur. p. 169.

(m) Gr. Nyſſen. c. Eunom. l. 1. p. 131.

(n) S. Aug. de Trin. l. 1. c. 6.

(o) S. Ambroſ. de Fide l. 1. c. 6.

(p) S. Chryſoſt. in Joan. Hom. 4. in Coloſſ Hom. 3.

therefore he was not created. So all thoſe Fathers ſuppoſe, who do not expreſly acknowledge his eternal Generation (Athenagoras, J. Mart. Theophilus, Tatianus, Tertullian, Lactantius;) for theſe agree, that the Son was produc'd πρὸ πάντων ἁπλῶς τῶν κτισμάτων, abſolutely before all Creatures, and therefore they ſuppoſe him to be no Creature. (q) By the Lord Chriſt all things were created; his Proper Name therefore is the Creator, not Creature; for common ſenſe will not allow, that the Creator is a Creature, becauſe Creation is by the Creator. The Son therefore muſt be (r) ἐντὸς ὅρων τῆς δεσποζούσης οὐσίας, within and not without the Boundaries of the dominant Eſſence, τὸ δουλικὸν ἀναβεβηκὼς μέτρον, tranſcending the Boundary of the Subject-ſervient Party. Thus the Fathers argue againſt thoſe that did σπείρειν ἐλαττώματα, diſſeminate minorations of Chriſt, creaturizing (which is vilifying) the Son of God, and they have both clearneſs of Argument and the Sentiments of Piety on their ſide. They have alſo obſerv'd, that the imperfections and diſparaging Properties of Creatures are incompetible to the Son of God. (s) For Creatures are many and various, but the Son is not one of the many, ἀλλ᾽ εἷς ἐστιν ὡς πατὴρ, but he is one as the Father. He is alſo an univerſal imperial Head: But all Creatures (as the Sun and Moon, Angels and Men) have their diſtinct places to which they are confin'd. Creatures are but particular Goods and are for particular Uſes, they are not univerſal All-ſufficient Goods, as the Son of God is. They need Help and Salvation themſelves, ſo as that not any of them is capable of being the univerſal Saviour. He is not deſtroyable or annihilable as they, nor are they omnipotent and immutable as he is; for it is poſſible, that any Creature may lye, but ſo cannot God or the Son of God. To beſtow Sanctification and Vivification, is alſo incompetible to any of the Creatures; for it belongeth to them, to receive it, not to beſtow it. They are Sons of God by Grace, but one is the Son of God φύσει ϗ ἀληθείᾳ, by Nature and in Truth.

II. The Attribute Creator putteth out of all Queſtion our Saviour's Deity: But it is a great Queſtion, of what Creation he is the Deity? All Chriſtians agree, that a new Creation is ſpoken of in the New Teſtament (which muſt be called peculiarly the Evangelical or New Teſtament-creation) that this new Creation is in the New Teſtament attributed to our Lord Chriſt (and muſt be called the Chriſtian Creation) and that it cannot be attributed to an Abſtract Son of God. But the Scholaſtic Theology ſuppoſeth, that beſides this new Creation the old Creation is attributed to the Son of God in the New Teſtament, and that this creative Son is the ſecond Perſon in the Scholaſtick Trinity an Abſtract Son of God. With this Creatorſhip this Theology complicateth a governing univerſal Providence, and not without Cauſe. For this World (the Region of Animals) was founded by Parental Providence, wherewith governing Providence is neceſſarily conjoin'd. If therefore the Son of God created this Region of Animals, he is neceſſarily both a parental and a governing Providence to the World, as the Scholaſtic Theology aſſerteth. (t) We ſee, that every thing is done with the greateſt reaſon in the making of all things, even the meaneſt and moſt abject, the Bodies of little Animals (Gnats, Fleas, Cimici) their propagation, increaſe, nouriſhment, number, and whatever ſeemeth unworthy the Majeſty of God, to take notice of particularly. Whence it is manifeſt, that that Reaſon which is the Logos, that is, the Word, or eternal Reaſon, and the Son of God, doth not only take care to fabricate them with ſo great Artifice, but hath as much care to cheriſh and preſerve them. Origen ſaith, The Logos by which all things were made, is not a Body, becauſe he pervadeth the Univerſe of things, that all things may be done with Reaſon, not as to Man only, but thoſe that are accounted the leaſt things, and which are govern'd by Nature. Theſe have no Reaſon, yet act as if they had Reaſon, the Cauſe whereof is, ſaith Origen (u) ὁ πρεσβύτατος υἱὸς πάντων βασιλεὺς, the moſt ancient Son of God, who being the King of all Creatures, made irrational Nature, affording thoſe the help of Inſtincts, to whom he did not vouchſafe to give Reaſon. To the ſame Cauſe he imputeth the Conſtitution of Civil Society and Government, of Empires and Commonwealths, of the Laws and various Arts wherewith they are furniſh'd, and the Logos is by him intituled (w) ὁ διοικῶν τὰ ὅλα λόγος, the Logos that adminiſtreth the Univerſe of things. Clemens calleth the Nature of the Son (x) The moſt Perfect, the moſt Holy, the moſt Dominant, the moſt Imperant, the moſt Regial and moſt Beneficent, which is next to the alone Almighty, and is the greateſt Eminence, ἣ τὰ πάντα διατάσσεται κατὰ τὸ θέλημα τοῦ πατρὸς, ϗ τὸ πᾶν ἄριστα οἰακίζει, ἀκαμάτῳ ϗ ἀτρύτῳ δυνάμει πάντα ἐργαζομένη, which ordereth all things according to the Will of the Father, and governeth the Univerſe in the beſt manner, doing all things by an indefatigable and immenſe Power. This is he (ſaith Clemens) That giveth Philoſophy to the Greeks by the lower Angels, taketh care of all, and (to ſpeak compendiouſly) πᾶσα ὠφέλεια βιωτικὴ, κατὰ μὲν τὸν ἀνωτάτω λόγον, ἀπὸ τοῦ παντοκράτορος θεοῦ, τοῦ παντὸς ἐξηγουμένου πατρὸς, δι᾽ υἱοῦ ἐπιτελεῖται, Every utility for the Life of Man, according to the higheſt Reaſon, from the Almighty God, the Father that preſideth over all, is perfected (or perform'd) by the Son. Of the Logos Theophilus ſaith, (y) οὗτος λέγεται ἀρχὴ, ὅτι ἄρχει, ϗ κυριεύει πάντων τῶν δι᾽ αὐτοῦ δεδημιουργημένων, He is called Arche, becauſe he ruleth and is dominant over all things that are made by him. (z) God made uſe of his Counſel and Artifice in making the World (ſaith Lactantius) and when he began the Fabrication of it (illum primum & maximum Filium præfecit operi univerſo) he ſet that his firſt and greateſt Son over the Univerſe that he made. Omni diſpoſitioni ſuæ voluntatique præfecit, he appointed him to preſide over his whole Ordination and Diſpoſition of things, (a) ſaith Tertullian. (b) We affirm (ſaith the Alexandrian Cyril) that the living and effective and ſubſiſtent Logos of God is the Maker of all Things that be produc'd into Exiſtence, ζῶά τε χερσαῖα, νηκτὰ ϗ ἔνυδρα, both the Land-animals and thoſe that ſwim and the Water-animals, δι᾽ οὗ ϗ ἐν ᾧ καθεξουσιάζει ὁ θεὸς τῶν ὅλων, by whom and in whom God ruleth over the Univerſe of Things. The Abſtract Logos in the Scholaſtic

---

(q) Per Dominum Chriſtum creata omnia ſunt, & idcircò ei proprium nomen, ut creator ſit. Quid operis nomen opifici imponimus? Humanæ intelligentiæ ſenſus hæc reſpuit, ut creator creatura ſit, quia creatio per creatorem eſt. S. Hilar. de Trin. l. 12.

(r) S. Cyr. Theſaur. p. 301.

(s) S. Athanaſ. ad Serap. T. 2. p. 23. & T. 1. p. 362. ad African. p. 722. Or. 2. c. Arian. p. 150. & Or. 3. p. 207, 240, 265. Com.

(t) Videmus ſumma ratione omnia eſſe facta, etiam tenuiſſima quæque & abjectiſſima, ut ſunt culicum, cimicum, pulicumque corpuſcula, eorumque propagationes, incrementa, nutricatus numerum, & quidquid eſt, quod ſciri à Deo ac regi ſigillatim, majeſtate illius indignum videtur. Ex quo evidens eſt, rationem illam quæ eſt ὁ λόγος, id eſt, Verbum ſive Ratio ſempiterna, Deique ſoboles, ad illa non modo tanto artificio fabricanda: Sed etiam non minore induſtria fovenda, tuendaque deſcendere. ——— Verbum, per quod omnia facta ſunt, corpus non eſſe, dicit Origines, quod Verbum univerſa pervadit: Ut ratione omnia fiant, non hominetenus, ſed uſque ad ea quæ minima videntur, & à natura gubernantur. Petav. T. 1. l. 8. c. 4. S. 13.

(u) C. Celſ. l. 4. p. 217.

(w) Ibid. l. 8. p. 399.

(x) Str. l. 7. p. 504, 505. & l. 6. p. 498.

(y) Ad Autol. l. 2. p. 88.

(z) Lactant. l. 2. c. 9.

(a) C. Marcion. l. 2. c. 27.

(b) C. Jul. l. 7. p. 241. & l. 8. p. 268.

Theology is ſuppos'd (c) providere rebus omnibus & mundum adminiſtrare.

III. Accordingly he is ſtiled by Euſebius (without Arianizing) οὗτος ἡ καθόλου πρόνοια, κηδεμὼν οὗτος καὶ διορθωτὴς τοῦ παντὸς, This is the Providence whereby all things are govern'd, this is the Curator and Rectifier of the Univerſe. Who alſo thus expatiateth in his Praiſes. (d) "As being "the Power of God and the Wiſdom of God "he iſſueth from the paternal Deity and Regality, an excellent Off-ſpring of an excellent "Father, the common Saviour of all, permeateth and irrigateth all things, and diffuſing "unto all of Reaſon, Wiſdom and Light and "all Goods from his own fulneſs, he not only "irrigateth thoſe things that are near, but "thoſe alſo that are far diſtant, whether they "be in Earth or Sea or any other Region in "Nature. To all which he appointeth (as is "moſt juſt) Limits and Regions and Laws and "Lots ἐξουσίᾳ βασιλικῇ by his Kingly Power diſtributing and affording to every one what "is convenient. To ſome ὑπερκοσμίους ἁψῖδας, the "ſupramundane Arches, to others the Habitation of Heaven, to others the Etherial Manſions, to others the Air, and to others the Earth. "And again, tranſlating them from thence into other places, making a right Judgment of "the Life of every one, and recompenſing their "Manners. Taking care of the Livelyhood "and Food, not only of Rationals, but of Irrationals, that are for the uſe of the Rationals. "Affording to ſome only a mortal temporary Life, to others an immortal, doing all "things as the Logos of God, being preſent to "all and pervading all things by his rational "Power. This is the common Cultivator of "all things, by whom the Subſtance of all "things germinateth and flouriſheth, being irrigated by the Showers that are from him "continually, and is adorn'd with a new vigour and elegant Beauty Having the Reins "in his Hand εὐθεῖα περαίνει, he carrieth on all "things in a ſtraight courſe according to the paternal Will, ſteering the great Ship of the whole "World. Such an excellent Artificer the only "begotten Son the God over all as an excellent Father having generated an excellent "Fruit, gave this greateſt Good unto this "World, as a Soul to an inanimate Body, infuſing his own Logos (or Reaſon) into the "irrational Nature of Bodies, illuſtrating and "animating the Subſtance that was without "Form and Species, without Soul and Figure, "by the Divine Power of the Logos whom we "ought to conſider and contemplate as a conſtant indweller in the Matter and the Elements of Bodies, giving to all things vitality "and fecundity; but himſelf is an intellectual Light and Son of the ineffable Light. Such is the common univerſal Providence which (not the Holy Scriptures but) the Scholaſtic Theology attributeth to the Abſtract Son or Logos, which is alſo ſuppos'd (as a Deity of the Old Teſtament-times and Affairs) more eſpecially to have preſided over, and taken care of the Church in the times of the Old Teſtament, to have ſpoken by the Prophets, and God is ſuppos'd, by his Miniſtery to have ſpoken to the Fathers of the Old Teſtament (e) and theſe Matters are ſuppos'd to belong to the rule of Faith. Many are of Opinion, that the Logos gave the Moſaic Law to the Children of Iſrael, that he conducted them through the Wilderneſs to their promiſed Land, deliver'd the Jews from the Babylonian Captivity, and that God by him adminiſtred the Kingdom of Old Iſrael, that the Logos was the God of Iſrael, or (as ſome will have it) that the Soul of the Meſſiah conjoin'd with the eternal Logos was the God of Iſrael. Clemens thus argueth. (f) If all things were made by him, and without him nothing was made, Prophecy and the Law were made by him.

This Creatorſhip and univerſal Providence is ſuppos'd to belong to Chriſt upon account of his Divine Nature, whence by a Communication of Properties it is commonly ſaid, that Chriſt created all things in the old Creation, as S. Hilary before cited ſaith, per Dominum Chriſtum creata ſunt omnia. (g) Chriſt is the eternal Virtue of God by which he made the things that were not, ſaith another. So ancient Writers ſay, (h) that Chriſt was πρὸ αἰώνων ὡς λόγος, before all things as being the Logos, and that he always dealt with Men (with the Patriarchs and Prophets) in the Name of God the Father. Agreeably to which Scholaſtic mode of ſpeaking an ancient Saxon Prefacer thus readeth the Fourth Commandment (i) for in Six Days Chriſt made the Heaven and Earth. (k) The Senate and People of Rome in a late Inſcription in the Capitol give notice, that that place was once dedicated to Jove, but they had made it ſacred to the true God, to Jeſus Chriſt the Author of all good Things. A certain Writer of our own relateth (l) a certain Puritan ſeeing me a young Scholar wear horned Shooes, accoſted me in theſe Words: Why do'ſt thou make thy Foot longer than Jeſus Chriſt hath made it? To whom I preſently anſwer'd in theſe Words; Why doſt thou make thy Hair ſhorter than Jeſus Chriſt hath made it? Thus in ordinary Diſcourſe Men have learn'd to ſpeak the Language of the Scholaſtic Theology, which attributeth to Chriſt all the Names, Titles and Attributes, that are ſuppos'd to belong to the Abſtract Logos or Son of God. Chriſt is (according to this Theology) ars patris (the fabricatory Art of God) idea & exemplar rerum fabricandarum (the Idea and Exemplar of the things to be made) δημιουργικὸς λόγος, (the Demiurgic Reaſon) ἰδέα καὶ ἐνέργεια, (the Idea and formative Energy of univerſal Nature) every Man's natural Reaſon is a Participation of Chriſt, every one naturally is in Chriſt, and in Chriſt he liveth and moveth and hath his Being.

IV. To diſprove this Scholaſtic old Creatorſhip and common univerſal Providence attributed to Chriſt, the ſame Arguments are available, which have been us'd to diſprove the mundane Creatorſhip and common univerſal Providence attributed to the Holy Ghoſt For (1.) Chriſt according to his Divine Nature is the proper Subject of the Science of Sanctity, Chriſtianity and Regeneracy: But in this Scheme of Theology Chriſt according to his Divine Nature is of ſuch Kind and Quality, that he is the proper Subject of the common Sciences of Metaphyſicks, Phyſiology, Natural Theology, Pagan Theology; for there is nothing better than Paganiſm (what is agreeable to the mundane Syſtem-Theiſts) in this Scheme of Theology. And as ſome have turn'd the Holy Ghoſt into a mundane Soul, ſo communizing and profaning the Sanctity and Divinity of the Chriſtian Religion (by communizing and profaning the Matters of its Sanctity and Divinity:) In this Scheme of Theology Chriſt according to his Divine Nature is turn'd into a

Coſmical

(c) Petav. T. 4. l. 8. c. 11. *S.*8.

(d) Or de laud. Conſtant. p. 639, 640.

(e) Tertull. de præſcript. c. 13.

(f) Strom. l 6. p.m. 487.

(g) S. Ambroſ. in Rom. 1. 20.

(h) Petav. T. 4. l. 11. 8. S. 33.

(i) Cited by D. Teniſon of Idol. p. 335.

(k) Ibid. p. 61.

(l) Scrivener Body of Divin. p. 540.

Coſmical Zeus (that which is no better than parental Nature and common Providence) or into a Platonic mundane Logos (mundane-Syſtem Logos) which is an enormous Philoſophic-paganizing the Matters of the Chriſtian Theology. Inſtead of the Matters of Regeneracy and Saving Grace this Theology ſubſtituteth the things of Unregeneracy, common Nature and Philoſophic-paganiſm, which do not belong to Chriſt as Chriſt, nor are they his kind of things; for at beſt they are no better than the Platoniſts exotick Philoſophy touching their Scholaſtic creative Logos, and from their School the ancient Scholaſticks of the Church deriv'd them. For the creative Logos of (m) Clemens, (n) Origen (o) and Euſebius is the very ſame with the Platoniſts demiurgic Logos, which alſo was ſuppos'd, to be an univerſal Providence: (p) ἄγεται δ᾽ ὑφ᾽ ἡνιόχῳ θεῷ λόγῳ τὸ πᾶν, the Univerſe is not Self-mov'd, nor by Chance, or irrational Nature, but by the governing Logos of God, which is called by Philo (q) ὁ συνέχων καὶ διοικῶν λόγος τὸ σύμπαν, the Logos that containeth and adminiſtreth the whole. And as Platoniſm hath thus much of Arianiſm eſſential to it, the Platonic Logos is a ſecond God: So Clemens repreſenteth the Logos (r) as a Nature next to the Almighty and the ſame with the Platonic Logos. (s) Origen calleth him δεύτερον θεὸν, the ſecond God, (t) and ſo doth Euſebius. His Elogy of the Logos is in great degree tranſcrib'd from the Platoniſts, he ſpeaketh their Language (ὑπερκοσμίους ἀψῖδας, εὐθεῖα περαίνει) and Valeſius obſerveth touching the ancient Divines of the Church (u) Patris quidem quietem ac beatitudinem propriam eſſe aiebant, filii verò operationem, (they ſuppoſe quietude and beatitude proper to the Father, Operation to the Son) which is an eminent ſtroke of Platoniſm. Such is alſo this Paſſage of a late Preacher ſpeaking of Chriſt (w) This Angel is deſcrib'd by the wiſe Man, She is the Emanation of the Power of God, a pure influence flowing from the Power of the Almighty, from whom as from a living Fountain all Forms flow, who is the great Preſident of the Univerſe; for the Emanation of this Angel is that which the Platoniſts call the Soul of the World. The main Eſſentialities of the Platonic Logos are ſtill retain'd by the Scholaſtic Theology of later times (which hath diſcarded ſome of the properties and attributes of the Platonic Logos; for theſe are ſtill definitive Notices of the Scholaſtic creative Logos, It is the Region of the Exemplar Ideas of all mundane things, and the demiurgic Art of God. (2.) This Theology uſually diſtorteth the New Teſtament from ſignifying what is Evangely, to ſignifie what is School-philoſophy. As if Chriſt is intituled the Logos of God, this Theology underſtandeth by that Name a School-philoſophical Logos (x) that is the ſubſtantial Intellection of God, wherein the λόγοι, Reaſons or Ideas of all things are comprehended. If the Goſpel ſtileth him Chriſt the Wiſdom of God and the Power of God, this Theology will have theſe Attributes to ſignifie (y) That he is the demiurgic Art and ſubſtantive Energy of God, whereby all things are made and done. But thus to interpret the Goſpel, is not to interpret it as the Goſpel, but μεταβαίνειν εἰς ἄλλο γένος, to make it of a quite diſſonant Nature, and to ſpeak of quite diſſonant kind of things from the Evangelical. Yet at this rate the Goſpel muſt be interpreted, if this be the Senſe of the Holy Writers of it, that Chriſt is the Deity of the old Creation. (3.) God the Father as being (in the old Creation) the univerſal Creator and Benefactor, the Vivificator, Preſerver and providential Governour of all things, is as ſuch in a large Senſe a Father in Nine ſeveral Reſpects, as is ſhew'd in our Idea of the Holy Ghoſt. If therefore the Son of God is (in the old Creation) the univerſal Creator and Benefactor, the Vivificator, Preſerver and providential Governour of all things, he is in no leſs than Nine ſeveral Reſpects God the Father, which is a grand Repugnance to the Idea of the Son, and to his Idea whoſe Propriety it is to be God the Father as the Maker of Heaven and Earth, the Parent of the Univerſe. (4.) According to the Popular-pagan Theology (with which the Chriſtian in this point agreeth) God as he is parental Nature or Providence, that pervadeth the World, and is the true Zeus or Vivificator of the World (that vegetateth and animateth it) muſt be apprehended, conſider'd and notic'd, not as the Son, but as the Father only. For the Popular Pagans did not look upon their Coſmical Zeus as a Son, but as Ζευπάτωρ, Jupiter-Father, the great Father of Nature, πατὴρ τοῦδε τοῦ παντὸς, the Father of this Univerſe, the Father of Gods and Men. And the Apoſtle thus far agreeth with this Theology, Act. 17. 25, 28. he acknowledgeth, that the true Zeus (Creator and Vivificator of the World) is the true God, that he is the Father of Mankind, and that in conſidering God as one inviſible that pervadeth the World, and is a mundane parental Providence, the Popular Pagans were ſo far right in their Theology. He conſidereth therefore this mundane parental Providence, that is the Creator and Vivificator of the World, not as the Son, but as the Father only.

V. If the Son of God was the Deity of the old Creation (in ſuch Senſe God that made the World) the Sun, Moon and Stars muſt be the Preachers of him to the Pagans (as ſome would have them to be) he muſt be a Deity of natural Light and Religion (as God is) and the inviſible things of him from the Creation of the World muſt be clearly ſeen. For God the Son in the Scholaſtic Trinity is a Sovereignty or Imperial Eſtate; if therefore in the old Creation he created the Univerſe of Beings, he created them, that they might be his Subjects and Servants, or as a Scholaſtic Divine diſcourſeth (z) That they might be ſubſervient to his Glory as manifeſting his Divine Power and Goodneſs infinite. From Eternity Chriſt hath and fully poſſeſſeth infinite Glory: But by creating the World he manifeſted this his Glory to us, and oblig'd all Creatures to the Duty of glorifying him. Chriſt therefore in the Creation of things intended this his Glory. Theſe are but reaſonable and neceſſary Conſequences of Chriſt's creating all things (in the old Creation) the Creatures were intended for his Service and to glorifie him; and that intelligent Creatures may be plenarily oblig'd to ſerve and glorifie him, his Exiſtence, Power and Goodneſs muſt be manifeſted by the Creation. And ſo Athanaſius pretendeth (a) that the Son of God is known by his Works. And another ancient Writer ſaith (b) æterna virtus Dei Chriſtus eſt, per quem inſtituit quæ non erant, & manent in eo, cujus ſi dudum perſona agnita non eſt, opera tamen manifeſta ſunt. But this is not S. Paul's mode of

Theo-

(z) Ut inſervirent gloriæ ejus, quatenus manifeſtant divinam ejus potentiam & bonitatem infinitam. Habet Chriſtus & plenè poſſidet gloriam infinitam ab æterno: Sed creando mundum manifeſtavit hanc ſuam gloriam nobis, & obligavit omnes creaturas ad hoc officium ſui glorificandi. ——— Chriſtus igitur in creatione rerum intendebat hanc ſuam gloriam. Davenant. in Col. 1. 16.

(m) Str. l. 5. p. m. 436.

(n) C Celſ. l. 6. p. 308.

(o) Pr. Ev. l. 11. c. 8.

(p) Ibid. c. 7.

(q) De vit. Moſ. l. 3.

(r) Str. l. 5. p. 436, & l. 7. p. 504.

(s) C. Celſ. l. 5. p. 258. & l. 6. p. 318.

(t) Petav. T. 2. l. 1. c. 11.

(u) Annot. in Euſeb. p. 282.

(w) Dr. Gell Ser. on Deut. 32 8, 9. p. 12.

(x) Petav. T. 1. l. 4. c. 4. S. 5. & c. 11. S. 9.

(y) Ibid. l. 5. c. 8, 9.

(a) De Incarn. Verb. p. 69. Com.

(b) S. Ambroſ. in Rom. 1. 20.

Theologizing, which is ſo hugely diſſonant from it, that theſe ſtrange Imaginations of the ancient Writers touching Chriſt and his Works cannot reaſonably be thought the Theology of the New Teſtament. Which would contradict common Senſe, if it ſuppos'd, that Chriſt is a Deity knowable by natural Reaſon or by the Creatures, or that his Exiſtence, Power and Goodneſs is manifeſted by the Creation. If according to the Scholaſtic Theology he was the Deity of the old Creation, then he created univerſal Nature, yet took no care, that there ſhould be any Notice or Footſtep of him in univerſal Nature. Which is extremely diſagreeable and incompetible to the Creator, who muſt be known by his Works, who cannot but intend, to reveal and manifeſt himſelf by the Creation, that he may be ſerv'd and glorify'd, and whoſe Creation is neceſſarily the Foundation of his Religion. If the Son of God was the Creator of univerſal Nature, his Religion muſt neceſſarily be founded by that Creation; but the Religion of the Son of God was not founded by that Creation; therefore that Creation was not his Work. At and in the Creation God was unto Men the Imperial Eſtate of God, which he could not be without obliging them, to ſerve and glorifie him as God. He could not be God, if he did not claim of all capable Creatures the Rights and Dues of his Godhead. If therefore at the time of the old Creation the Son was in conſort with God (c) God Almighty, Lord and King and Creator of all things, he muſt neceſſarily at that time claim of all capable Creatures the Rights and Dues of his Godhead, and to be ſerv'd and glorify'd as God in conſort with God. Upon the account therefore of his Godhead (which is Majeſtas Imperii) he muſt neceſſarily make himſelf known to them by his Creation, take care, that they have in their Minds Notices of him and of their Duty to him, and plant in their Natures Inſtincts of Religion towards him, as we find, that the great Author of Nature hath done. He cannot have his Godhead otherwiſe. Otherwiſe it will be infinitely unreaſonable, to interpret theſe words of the Apoſtle touching the Son, to be meant of the old Creation; all things were created by him and for him. For is it imaginable, that in the old Creation he made all things and made them for himſelf, yet hath not taken care, that in the whole comprehenſion of that Creation there ſhould be any Notice of his Right of Sovereignty, nor ſo much as any Notice of his Exiſtence? (d) Every Creature is of Subject-ſervient Condition to the Logos, being (in the old Creation) created and made by him, ſaith Athanaſius. But the Logos doth not, nor ever did claim and demand Subjection and Service of the Creatures as their Creator in the old Creation; which is a certain Argument, that he is not the Deity of that Creation. Nor can we ſuppoſe him to be ſuch, without ſuppoſing him to be in Nature our Father, which is not his agreeable Appellation.

But in the Scholaſtic Theology Chriſt is ſuppos'd, to have given all Phyſical Laws to Nature, to the univerſal Matter, and the Law of Reaſon to Adam, and conſequently the Law of Nature as it is ſuch, is the Law of Chriſt. It muſt be ſuppos'd, to be his Law, if he is the Creator of Nature: But this Suppoſition, that the Law of Nature (as it is ſuch) is the Law of Chriſt (or of the Son of God) is ſo extremely alien from the Goſpel-Theiſm, and the whole Frame of reveal'd Religion, that the Scripture cannot be ſuppos'd to teach it; and therefore it may not be ſuppos'd to teach, that Chriſt is the Creator of univerſal Nature. If the Law of Nature (as it is ſuch) is the Law of Chriſt, he is neceſſarily the Deity of that Law: But that Law (as it is ſuch) is not the Law of Religious Duty to the Son of God; therefore he is not the Deity of it, nor is it his Law, nor is he the Creator of Nature. He is not in this Law (as he is in the new Law) the Imperial Eſtate of the Son of God to Mankind, nor are they oblig'd by it, to perform the Duties that belong to ſuch a Sovereignty. From their Deity of the Law of Nature all legitimate civil Governors have deriv'd their governing Power; and if the Son of God was this Deity, they were his Vicegerents. They deriv'd their governing Power from God, as he is the Creator and providential Governor of this World of Humane Civil Society (conſiſting of the cives hujus mundi;) and they muſt neceſſarily derive it from the Son of God, if he is alſo the Creator, Founder and providential Governor of this World of Humane Civil Society: But then they muſt be Chriſt's Officers and Miniſters, as they are Governors of Civil Society (Parents, Maſters, Magiſtrates) which is a Suppoſition not agreeable to Chriſtianity. It is much leſs agreeable to Chriſtianity, to ſuppoſe the Son of God, to be the Deity of the Law of Nature, as it is the Spiritual-religious Moral Law. For this Law (as it is a Settlement and Diſpenſation of things) is not the Law of ſaving, but of making condemned Sinners, the Law or Religion of their criminal and penal State, of their Naturaliſm and Unregeneracy, and of their Spiritual Servitude, not of their Liberation and Freedom. Which if the ancient Scholaſtic Divines had underſtood, they would not have celebrated their Abſtraſt Son or Logos (the Deity of the Law of Nature) as in his univerſal Empire and Government the Saviour of the Univerſe. For ſo Euſebius conſidereth his Abſtract Logos as preſiding over the Univerſe, imparting to all Light, Wiſdom and all Goods, and as being κοινὸς ἁπάντων σωτὴρ, the common Saviour of all. So Clemens conſidereth the Abſtract Son in his providential Government (e) and becauſe of his Beneficence therein he ſuppoſeth, that the Apoſtle ſtileth him σωτὴρ πάντων ἀνθρώπων, the Saviour of all Men. Theſe ancient Writers conceiv'd, that the Son of God muſt be a Saviour-King of the Univerſe: But therefore they ought to have ſuppos'd him the Deity of a Saving Religion, not of the Law, which is Law not Saving Grace, but the oppoſite thereto and to the Salvation of Men. Such a Law-deity inſtead of making Satisfaction, would require, that Satisfaction ſhould be made to him for the Violation of his Law. Chriſt therefore never was ſuch a Law-Deity. God the Father that was a Law-deity, is not become a Goſpel-deity without great methods of Mediation: But the Son of God without any ſuch methods is a Goſpel-deity; which plainly argueth, that he never was a Law-deity, but is natively a Goſpel-kind of Son, and meerly the Deity of Saving Grace and the Law thereof, as he is repreſented by the Evangeliſt. Joh. 1. 14.

VI. If the Son of God was the Creator of univerſal Nature and a governing univerſal

(c) Petav. de Trin. l. 2. c. 11. S. 3, 5.

Col. 1. 16.

(d) Δούλη τοῦ λόγου πᾶσα ἡ κτίσις, δι' αὐτοῦ γενομένη καὶ ποιηθεῖσα. S. Athanaſ. Or. 3. c. Arian. p. m. 193.

(c) Strom. l. 6. p. m. 458.

Providence, the Scriptures of the Old Teſtament could not be ſilent of it, at ſuch a rate as they are. For Moſes, the Prophets, the Hagiographa ſay nothing of it; but they attribute (the Old) Creation and Providence wholly and only to the God of Iſrael, who is not our Lord Chriſt, but his God and Father, Act. 3. 13, 25, 26. Joh. 8. 54. Heb. 1. 1, 2. It is to God definitively ſuch, that the Old Teſtament attributeth the Creation, not to an Eternal Trinity, nor to an Abſtract Son of God, which are as unknowable by the Light of the Old Teſtament, as they are by the Light of Nature. All Men acknowledge, that an eternal creative Trinity is but obſcurely ſignified in the Old Teſtament, and thoſe obſcure ſignifications of it (ſo reputed) when they are carefully conſider'd, are found to ſignifie juſt nothing. The Scholaſtic Divines therefore are extremely criminal, inſiſting in their Diſputes with the Jews upon ſeveral Texts of the Old Teſtament (which are not Prophecies of the Meſſiah) to prove the Article of the Trinity; whereas they ought to content themſelves, to prove this one Article, that Jeſus is the true Meſſiah, which will infer his Divinity and the truth of the Chriſtian Trinity. But to prove ſo great an Article as the Trinity only by little Phraſeologies and modes of ſpeaking in the Plural Number (and thoſe alſo diſtorted from their genuine ſenſe) what is it, but to expoſe Chriſtianity to the ſcorn of Unbelievers? If no better proofs of the Trinity than theſe little Phraſeologies can be found in the Old Teſtament, the ancient Writers had great cauſe to ſay, (f) that the Trinity was but obſcurely notic'd there; and ſome ſay, it ought to be ſo for this reaſon, becauſe weak Eyes cannot bear too much Light. As if the Eye-ſight of Men was in great danger by the refulgent Light of the Scholaſtic Trinity, cujus recta confeſſio eſt ignoratio ſcientiæ, (g) as S. Jerom ſaith. This could not be the reaſon, why the Trinity was but obſcurely notic'd in the ancient Scriptures: but the matter is quite otherwiſe than the ancient Writers ſuppos'd; for the Trinity is not at all notic'd in the Old Teſtament (otherwiſe than by Prophecies of the Meſſiah) no ſuch thing as a creative Trinity or an abſtract creative Son of God is to be found there. Yet there if any where in the Bible theſe Articles ought to be found: For there and there alone it is, that the Hiſtory of the old Creation is largely related, the old Creation-work is largely celebrated in devotional Hymns and Pſalms, a Sabbath-day is inſtituted to commemorate the old Creation-work, to ſignifie, that the Iſraelites God was the great God that formed all things, and that they were the Worſhippers and Religioniſts of the Creator of Heaven and Earth. Therein God propoſeth himſelf, to be ſerv'd and worſhipp'd as the great Creator and providential Governour of the World, and that ſacred Volume is a voluminous Inſtitution of the Duties of Piety to the great Creator and his Providence. To know him and acknowledge him as the only true God, to contemplate and admire him and his Works, to take him for our God and to make him our God, our Hope, Truſt and Dependence, to honour and obſerve him and to have a reſpectful Eye to his Providence in all our Ways and Affairs, to be duely humble towards him, thankful for his Mercies, obedient to his Laws and Inſtitutions, reſigned to his Will, ſubmitted to his Diſpoſals, devoted to his Service, to miniſter his Divine Service, and out of a dutiful regard to him, to practiſe the Duties of Juſtice and Charity towards Men, to make him our fear and our dread, and to love him infinitely above all. To theſe Duties of Piety (and ſuch more) the Old Teſtament is a voluminous Inſtitution. But why is it, that in this voluminous Inſtitution of Piety Mankind are not inſtituted to any one Duty of Piety to a creative providential Trinity? nor to an abſtract creative and providential Son of God? If he was the Creator and providential Governour in the Times of the Old Teſtament, why is it, that throughout that ſacred Volume Mankind are never called upon, to contemplate his Works, to depend upon his Providence, to honour him and do him ſervice, and to give him thanks for their Souls and Bodies and the manifold Accommodations of Life? Why is it, that neither a Trinity, nor an abſtract Son of God are ever taken notice of (in the Old Teſtament) as a Deity of Religion? Why is it, that there is no mention of either in all the deſcriptions of the Old Creation in the Old Teſtament? But on the contrary Creation and Providence is only attributed to God definitively ſo called, to the God of Iſrael as the true God in oppoſition to falſe Gods, Jonah 1. 9. I am an Hebrew, and I fear the Lord the God of Heaven, which hath made the Sea and the dry Land. Jer. 51. 14, 15. The Lord of Hoſts hath made the Earth by his Power, he hath eſtabliſhed the World by his Wiſdom, and hath ſtretched out the Heaven by his Underſtanding.

VII. The Scholaſtic Hypotheſis (that the Son of God was the Creator of Univerſal Nature and a governing Univerſal Providence) is extremely diſſonant from the New Teſtament in the whole ſtream and tenour of it, whereby it appeareth, that the only Benefits which we have from the Son of God, are the choice and ſaving Benefits (the Benefits of the Goſpel of our Salvation, of the Religion of Regeneracy and of the Kingdom of God) to be waſh'd from our Sins and made the Saints of God, to dwell in his Purity and in his Peace, to be ſaved from our deadly criminal and penal Evils, from our ghoſtly deadly Enemies, and to be made Heirs of the Heavenly Glory and Felicity. The infinitely valuable Soul-goods (whereby we are ſav'd from the contrary deadly Evils) the true Light and Wiſdom, the true Life and Health, the true Liberty and Safety, the only true Nobility and Honour, the true Treaſure and Pleaſure, the true Bread, the true Vine and the true Riches, theſe are the only Goods that we have from Chriſt (of which the ſenſitive Goods are but Shadows) theſe are his only Riches, and theſe are the Chriſtians Wealth. This is the record, that God hath given to us Eternal Life, and this Life is in his Son, 1 Joh. 5. 11. (g) As the Heathen Gods had their ſeveral Powers and Provinces, and were donours of ſeveral Benefits, Ceres of Corn, Bacchus of Wine, Æſculapius of Health: So unius pontificium Chriſti eſt dare animis ſalutem, the Salvation of Souls is Chriſt's only Power, Province and Benefit. In Nature and Providence (the comprehenſion of Creation and Providence) this earthly life is abundantly taken care of, but the wants of Souls are not provided for. As Creator and Providential Governour of this World God hath made to the Sons of Adam a donation of the Earth and of the good things that are here; hath made them to live in Society (in Families, Cities and Nations) and to enjoy the vaſt Advantages and

Comforts

(f) Petav. de Trin. l. 2. c. 7. S. 1, 2.

(g) Proœm. in l. 18. Com. in Eſai.

(g) Arnob. adv. Gent. l. 2. p. 89.

Comforts of civil Peace and Society; he hath appointed Order and Government in the leſſer and greater Societies of Men, governeth them by his Vicegerents, is a Civil-religious Lawgiver and Judge of Men and Nations, rewardeth civil Virtues and puniſheth Vices and Crimes, exerciſeth abundance of goodneſs to the World (in being a Patron of the Poor, making the barren Woman to keep Houſe, giving us fruitful Seaſons) and great Clemency (for in the courſe of his Providence he is not inexorable and implacable) and ſo exuberant is his Bounty (h) ut pronæa noſtra Epicurea fuiſſe videatur, that Parental Providence may ſeem to have been an Epicurean. In Nature and Providence Mankind are furniſhed with all the common humane kind of Goods (Parts, Arts, Sciences, civil Virtue:) but no proviſion is made of the ſaving Goods and Benefits ſave only in Chriſt, nor is there any having them ſave only in ſaving Chriſtianity; and theſe only are the Goods of the Kingdom of God, of Sanctity and Chriſtianity imperial; theſe only are the Goods of Chriſt's introducing, and theſe only are his Buſineſs, for which he is appointed of God as the Founder and Donour of them. Thus Chriſt is repreſented throughout the New Teſtament: but according to the Scholaſtic Theology all our common Goods and Bleſſings of Creation and Providence are from Chriſt, the Logos and his governing Providence is the cauſe ἁπάντων τῶν ἀγαθῶν, of all Goods, (i) ſaith Clemens, which is a Conceit ſo extremely alien from the New Teſtament, as ſcarce any thing can be more. If the holy Writers of it had ſuppos'd, that Chriſt is the Author and Donour of all our common Goods and Bleſſings, they would have taught us, to be thankful to him for our Being and Well-being in the World, for our natural Faculties, the parts and powers of our Souls and Bodies, for our Bodily Food, Health, Strength and Beauty, and the manifold Accommodations of this Earthly Life, for the Lights of Heaven and the Fruits of the Earth, and plenty of Corn and Wine, for Wife and Children, Arts and Sciences, and for Civil Laws and Government. But doth the Religion of Chriſtians oblige them, to pay their Thankſgivings to Chriſt for theſe common Bleſſings in Nature and Providence? Are theſe reputed his Gifts and Chriſt's Benefits, and is he upon account of them celebrated amongſt intelligent Chriſtians as the great Benefactor to the World? Do Chriſtians love Chriſt and devote their Life to him for this reaſon, becauſe in Nature and Providence he hath given them Life and Breath and all things? If this was the ſenſe of the New Teſtament, that Chriſt is the great Creator of our Nature and of the World, the holy Writers of it muſt have told us, that we owe unto him as ſuch our Subjection and Service; they muſt have claim'd and demanded our Homage and Fealty upon that account; they muſt have taught us, to contemplate and admire his Creation-works in Nature, and how is it poſſible, that they could forget, to call upon all Mankind, to remember, love and obey this their Creator? But this Opinion ſignifieth nothing in Religion, it is not the Foundation of any Duty, the ground of any Piety; therefore it is not a Truth of Religion, nor the Senſe of the New Teſtament.

How marvellouſly diſſonant the ancient Writers are from the ſenſe of the New Teſtament, appeareth from this their Philoſophic-paganizing Theology touching the Son and the Holy Spirit. Athanaſius ſaith of our Saviour, that when he was here on Earth in an Humane Body, (k) being in the whole Creation and containing all things, he vivificated the Univerſe of things. Another ſaith, (l) In him we live, and move, and have our being. A third ſaith, (m) He is Life according to his Nature vivificating all living things. Which attribution to the Son of God (that maketh him to be the Zeus of the World) is as incongruous as that of a late Writer of the Life of Faith, who ſuppoſeth, that the Walls of Jericho fell down at the ſound of the Rams-horns, becauſe Chriſt ſtood on the top of them, ſo making us a Military kind of Chriſt. But the ſame ancient Writer further ſaith, (n) That the Logos of God is in all things that are moved as the vivificator of them, we do affirm, and the moſt wiſe Paul will confirm it, who hath written this. There is one God, who is above all, and through all, and in all (O wonderful diſtortion of Scripture!) for otherwiſe that which is created and produc'd out of nothing could not continue in good eſtate, if it did not partake of the incorruptible and true God. He ſuppoſeth therefore, that the Son is of a demiurgic nature, fecund and vivific and of a different nature from all thoſe that have Life from him. But this vivification of every thing that needeth Life, is by the Holy Spirit, as the Son himſelf ſomewhere ſaith, it is the Spirit that quickeneth. And the fabrication of all things that are made is perfected from the Father by the Son in the Spirit. So what (o) Plotinus ſaith of the Mundane Soul this Father attributeth to the Holy Spirit, making the Platoniſts Soul of the World the ſame with the Holy Spirit (only changing the Name, for the Thing is the ſame.) At ſuch a rate the humour of Philoſophic-paganizing the matters of the Chriſtian Theology hath prevailed in the Church.

VIII. The Faith of the Creation, the Creator and of governing Providence is on this ſide the Faith of Chriſt, which we do not proceed to, till we proceed to the Faith of Redemption, of the New Creation and the New Teſtament; for the Faith concerning Redemption and the New Teſtament is the ſame with the Faith of Chriſt. In all places of the New Teſtament therefore, wherein the holy Authors are not treating of the matter of Redemption and the New Teſtament, but only of the matter of the Creation and the Creator, they make no mention of Chriſt; which ſheweth, that they did not ſuppoſe him, to be the Deity of the old Creation. In all ſuch places they make ſuch nominations and deſcriptions of him as plainly diſtinguiſh him from Chriſt; for every one knoweth, who it is that our Saviour meaneth, when he ſaith of our Father which is in Heaven, He maketh his Sun to riſe and his Rain to deſcend on the Juſt and Unjuſt. If God ſo cloath the Graſs of the Field. He which made them in the beginning, made them Male and Female. In thoſe days ſhall be Affliction, ſuch as was not from the beginning of the Creation which God created. The meaneſt Chriſtian being taught by

---

(h) Cic. de N. D. l. 2.

(i) Str. l. 7. p. m. 506.

(k) Ἐν πάσῃ τῇ κτίσει ὢν καὶ περιέχων τὰ ὅλα ἐζωοποίει τὰ ὅλα. De Incarn. Verb. p. 69. Com.

(l) Ἐν αὐτῷ ζῶμεν ϗ κινούμεθα ϗ ἐσμέν. Gr. Naz. or. 36. p. 591.

(m) Ζωὴ κατὰ φύσιν ἐστὶ, πάντα ζωογονῶν. S. Cyr. Theſaur. p. 108.

(n) Ὅτι γὰρ ἐν πᾶσιν ἐστὶ τοῖς κεκινημένοις ὡς ζωοποιὸς ὁ τοῦ Θεοῦ λόγος, ἰσχυριζόμεθα ϗ ἡμεῖς. πιστώσεται δὲ γεγραφὼς ὁ πάνσοφος Παῦλος· εἷς Θεὸς ὁ ἐπὶ πάντων ϗ διὰ πάντων, ϗ ἐν πᾶσιν.—— οἶδεν οὖν ἄρα δημιουργικῆς ὄντα φύσεως τὸν υἱὸν, γονιμόν τε ϗ ζωοποιὸν, ϗ ἑτέρας ὄντα φύσεως παρὰ πάντα τὰ παρ' αὐτοῦ ζωῆς δεκτικά. ζωοποιεῖ δὲ πᾶν τὸ ζωῆς ἐπιδεὲς ἐν ἁγίῳ πνεύματι. ὡς γὰρ αὐτός που φησὶν υἱὸς, τὸ πνεῦμά ἐστι τὸ ζωοποιοῦν, ϗ πᾶσα τῶν γεγονότων ἡ πρᾶξις τελεῖται παρὰ πατρὸς δι' υἱοῦ ἐν πνεύματι. S. Cyr. c. Jul. l. 8. p. 274.

(o) Ibid. p. 275.

by our Saviour, underſtandeth, at whoſe Hands in his daily Prayers he ought to ask his daily Bread; which he doth not ask at the Hands of of the Logos (who is ſuppos'd by Euſebius, to take care of the Food of all Animals) but at his Hands who is repreſented by the Pſalmiſt as giving Food to all Fleſh and as the great Houſekeeper of the World. Agreeably to our Saviour's Diſcourſes the whole New Teſtament ſpeaketh (in all ſuch places which treat not of the matter of Redemption and the New Creation) the ſame diſtinguiſhing Nominations and Deſcriptions pervade it; and it alſo repreſenteth the Faith of the Creation, of the Creator and of governing Providence as commenſurate with the Faith of the true God, ſo that the one extendeth not beyond the other; they are the ſame, and both are on this ſide the Faith of Chriſt. Every Creature of God is good, which God hath created to be received. That which thou ſoweſt, thou ſoweſt not that Body that ſhall be: but God giveth it a Body, as it hath pleaſed him, and to every Seed his own Body. Let them that ſuffer according to the Will of of God, commit the keeping of their Souls to him as unto a faithful Creator. Through Faith we underſtand, that the Worlds were framed by the (ῥῆμα) Word of God. In theſe places (and innumerable ſuch more) it cannot be ſuppos'd, that the holy Writers would have Chriſt, to be conſider'd as the Deity of the old Creation; and in many other places it is apparent, that they would not have him to be conſider'd as ſuch a Deity. For when they call him the Chriſt of the Creator, they would not have him to be counted the Creator, Act.4. 24, 25. Lord, thou art God, which haſt made Heaven and Earth and the Sea, and all that in them is. Againſt whoſe Chriſt the Rulers were gathered together. When the Apoſtle confronteth the two Adams (the Firſt and the Second) as Natural and Spiritual, as Earthly and Heavenly, without making any other difference between them, it is manifeſt, that he would not have the Second Adam to be conſider'd as the Creator of the Firſt Adam, 1 Cor. 15. 45,—50. So the Divine Author to the Hebrews confronteth Moſes and Chriſt, and thus oppoſeth them; the one was a meer Servant in the Family of old Iſrael, the other is the (imperial) Son, the builder of the Family of Chriſtians; without making any other difference between them, Heb. 3. 5, 6. And becauſe in his Diſcourſe he maketh no other difference between them, it muſt be ſuppos'd, that in this Diſcourſe he would not have Chriſt to be conſider'd as the Creator of Moſes. The foregoing words therefore (wherein God and Man are oppos'd) muſt not be interpreted of Chriſt, but of God definitively ſo called, to whom Moſes was related as a meer Servant, but Chriſt as an imperial Son. Every Houſe is builded by ſome Man, but he that built all things is God. And Moſes verily was faithful in all his Houſe as a Servant; but Chriſt as a Son over his own Houſe, whoſe Houſe are we, Heb. 3. 4, 5, 6. As in this nomination and deſcription of the Deity of the old Creation Chriſt is diſtinguiſh'd from the Deity of the old Creation: ſo in the Book of the Apocalypſe, He that ſitteth upon the Throne is diſtinguiſh'd from the Lamb, and the old Creation is not attributed to the Lamb, but only to him that ſitteth on the Throne, Apoc. 4. 9, 11. To him only that is the Scriptural oppoſite to the falſe Gods this Divine Book attributeth the old Creation, Apoc. 14. 7. And who is it, that is the ſole Scriptural Oppoſite to the falſe Gods? The Creator as ſuch is the Scriptural Oppoſite to the falſe Gods. Chriſt is not the Scriptural Oppoſite to the falſe Gods. Therefore Chriſt is not the Creator. It was not to Chriſt according to his Divine Nature, an Abſtract Logos or Son of God, that the Heathen World of Idolaters were horribly irreligious, their Idolatry concern'd only the true God and the Religion of the true God, who as the true God diſtinct from Chriſt is the Scriptural Oppoſite to the Heathen falſe Gods and their Idolatry, which was a worſhipping and ſerving the Creature inſtead of the Creator, Rom. 1. 25. The true God as ſuch is the Creator, and the Creator as ſuch is the true God, and this true God the Creator (the ſcriptural oppoſite to the Idols and falſe Gods) is diſtinct from Chriſt; for he is nominated and deſcrib'd as the Deity of natural Light, Rom. 1. 19, 20. In which nominations and deſcriptions the New Teſtament meaneth, that Chriſt ſhould not be conſider'd as the Deity of the old Creation; for it would not have Chriſt to be conſider'd as the Deity of natural Light, the oppoſite to the Heathen Idols and Idolatry. And ſo in the Apoſtle's Diſcourſe to the Athenians and Lycaonians the Apoſtle oppoſeth to their Idols and Idolatry the Deity of the old Creation, and this Deity he nominateth and deſcribeth as the Deity of natural Light, and therefore in this nomination and deſcription alſo he would not have Chriſt to be conſider'd as the Deity of the old Creation, Act. 17. 24,—28. God that made the World and all things therein, hath made of one Blood all Nations of Men, for to dwell on all the Face of the Earth, that they ſhould ſeek the Lord (having natural notices of him) if haply they might feel after him and find him. Act. 14. 15,—18. We preach unto you, that ye ſhould turn from theſe Vanities unto the living God, which made Heaven and Earth and the Sea, and all things that are therein; who in times paſt ſuffer'd all Nations to walk in their own ways. Neverthleſs, he left not himſelf without Witneſs (of his Exiſtence and Goodneſs) in that he did good and gave us Rain from Heaven and fruitful ſeaſons. As by this note the true God is diſtinguiſh'd from falſe Gods, he is the Creator of Heaven and Earth, (r) hâc notâ Deus optimè diſtinguitur à Diis falſis: So the God of the old Creation is hereby diſtinguiſh'd from the Logos or Son of God, he is a Deity of natural Light and the ſcriptural oppoſite to the Idol-Gods, which the Son of God is not. So the Apoſtle in oppoſition to the Philoſophic Pagans ſtileth the External Creation the Wiſdom of God, 1 Cor. 1. 21. And this their Atheouſneſs he counteth their principal crime, that by the Wiſdom of God (the External Creation) they knew not God. The Deity therefore of the old Creation is he, whoſe Wiſdom is reſplendent in the External Creation, and who is very knowable by the Phænomena of Nature. In which nomination and deſcription of the Deity of the old Creation, it is manifeſt, that the Apoſtle would not have Chriſt to be conſider'd as the Deity of that Creation.

IX. The true Idea of the Son, the Holy Ghoſt and the Trinity plainly infer, that Chriſt is not ſuch a Creator of univerſal Nature and ſuch a governing Providence as the Scholaſtic Theology ſuppoſeth. For univerſal Nature iſſueth from God, as he is Parental Nature (or Providence;) if therefore Chriſt is the Creator of Univerſal Nature, he muſt be thought the Son of God, as God is Parental Nature, and conſequently he cannot be an holy imperial kind of Son, nor better than a Pagan and mundane kind of Son, agreeable only to the pagan and mundane kind of Theiſts. Nor can the Son and the Holy Spirit be underſtood to be in God as he is mundane parental Nature, but only as he is the Imperial Eſtate of Sanctity Imperial. And therefore it is not agreeable to the genuine notices and right underſtanding of God, to ſuppoſe his Son or his Holy Spirit, to be the Creator and providential Benefactor of this Animal world, the Goods whereof are thoſe that belong to mundane Nature and common Providence, and are of natural Diſpenſation. Nor are the Operations of common Providence and the Formation of this Earth with its Animal-inhabitants of any Affinity with the Operations of the Holy Spirit and the Buſineſs of the Holy Imperial Son. Nor is there any Reaſon imaginable, why in the old Moſaic Creation (which is of a very different Nature from the new Creation) there ſhould be a Ternary of Omniſcient and Omnipotent creative Agents; for there could be no need of doing the ſame thing three times over. But diſtinct Cauſalities in the Creation (ſuch as they are) are allotted them (s) by the Fathers that ſymbolize with the Platoniſts making the Son the Demiurgus, who therefore according to this Theology hath much more right to the Name of the Maker of Heaven and Earth than the Father. Nor is he ſuppos'd, to be alone the Father in the Creation; for it is a Maxim in the Scholaſtic Theology (t) tota Trinitas eſt Pater noſter per creationem & gubernationem, the whole Trinity is our Father by Creation and governing Providence. And if ſo, the Holy Ghoſt is our Father, and the whole Trinity is the Father of Chriſt as Man (as Man he is ſuppos'd, to have been made by the whole Trinity) who therefore is his own both Father and Son, and the Holy Ghoſt alſo is his Father by Creation. (u) The creative Virtue or Power according to this Theology is common to the whole Trinity, and belongeth to the Unity of Eſſence, not to the diſtinction of Perſons. But howſoever that be, and how undivided ſoever their Operations are, yet the Creation is ſuppos'd, to be the Work of a Trinity of Perſons as the Deity thereof. And it hath been commonly fancied, that in the old Creation Impreſſions of the Trinity were made upon the Creatures. But the moſt ſagacious Naturaliſts could never yet diſcover any ſuch Impreſſions. There are no Notices of a Trinity in the comprehenſion of Nature and Providence. And if we tranſcend Nature, and proceed to Law, nothing of a Trinity is to be found there. A Trinity appeareth not on this ſide Chriſtianity Imperial, to which it muſt be confin'd, becauſe the Perſon of Chriſt as Deus-homo, is an eſſential Ingredient thereof. And if there is no Trinity out of Chriſtianity Imperial, there can be no Trinity creative of univerſal Nature. If the Trinity was the Deity of the old Creation, all created capable Creatures by their Creation muſt neceſſarily be oblig'd to Religious Honour, Subjection and Service to this creative Trinity, and conſequently the old Creation muſt neceſſarily found the Religion of a Trinity. But the Myſtery of the Trinity is not knowable by natural Reaſon or by the Creatures (w) as the Schoolmen generally affirm: Nor was the Religion of a Trinity the Religion of the Old Teſtament-times. And if the old Creation did not found the Religion of a Trinity, it cannot be ſuppoſed, that the Trinity, or the Son of God as one of the Trinity was the Deity of that Creation. And there is this plain Demonſtration againſt it. In the old Moſaic Creation no Kingdom of God, no Holy Empire was made, it was not the Saint of God-kind of Creation. And therefore it was not the Holy Spirit's kind of Creation; nor was it the Son of God's kind of Creation, nor was it God the Father's kind of Creation. Whence it is manifeſt, that the Trinity was not the Deity of that Creation, nor was the Son of God the Deity thereof. But it will not follow, that God the Father was not the Deity thereof. For although he is the Imperial Eſtate of Sanctity Imperial, and the Moſaic Creation was therefore not his kind of Creation, yet he might be and was the Author of it (not as iſſuing from paternal Sanctity, but) as iſſuing from parental Nature and Providence.

(r) Grot. Not. in loc.

X. The Creation attributed to Chriſt in the New Teſtament is in many places of it evidently meant of the Chriſtians new Creation. For Expoſitors generally agree, that the Apoſtle, Eph. 3. 9. ſpeaketh of the New Teſtament-creation, and it may be plainly proved from the Text it ſelf. For the old Creation is altogether remote and alien from the Subject-matter that the Apoſtle there treateth of, which is the Goſpel and the calling of the Gentiles, both which he calleth The Myſtery which from the beginning of the World hath been hid in God, who created all things by Jeſus Chriſt. To the intent that now unto the Principalities and Powers in heavenly places might be known by the Church the manifold Wiſdom of God. According to the eternal Purpoſe which he purpoſed in Chriſt Jeſus our Lord. God created all things by Jeſus Chriſt, ſo as to manifeſt and make known the Myſtery, which from the beginning of the World had been hid in God. This is the Apoſtle's ſenſe; as is plain from the Nature of this Creation (which is the Execution and Manifeſtation of the Divine Decree) and from the following Words. For God created all things by Jeſus Chriſt (ſaith the Apoſtle) to this end or intent, that unto the Principalities and Powers might be known by the Church the manifold Wiſdom of God. Chriſt's Creation therefore (here ſpoken of) is that which manifeſteth or maketh known the great Goſpel-arcanum, which was hid in God; therefore his Creation is the Chriſtians new Creation. And this will further appear by comparing the Apoſtle's Expreſſions. For the Myſtery which from the beginning of the World was hid in God, and the eternal Purpoſe which he purpoſed in Chriſt Jeſus, are identical Expreſſions, and both ſignifie the Goſpel-œconomy as Recondite in the Divine Decree. By Chriſt's Creation this Recondite Goſpel-œconomy was brought into open actual Exiſtence, and his Creation of all things was to this intent, that this Recondite Goſpel-œconomy might be known and known by the new created Church; which is plainly expreſſive of the new Creation. Theſe things have the Evidence of common Senſe and the certitude of Mathematical Demonſtration. Chriſt's Creation hath the Name of an univerſal Creation (the Creation of all things) and this his Creation accor-

(s) Δῆλον ὅτι τῶν αὐτῶν πραγμάτων τοὺς τύπους ἐνσημαίνεται μὲν ὁ πατὴρ, ἐπιτελεῖ δὲ ὁ λόγος, οὐ δουλικῶς, οὐκ ἀμαθῶς, ἀλλ᾽ ἐπιστημονικῶς τε καὶ δεσποτικῶς, καὶ οἰκειότερον εἰπεῖν πατρικῶς. Gr. Naz. Or. 35. p. 584.

(t) Aquin. in 1. Cap. Ep. 2. ad Corinth. v. 1.

(u) Vaſq. in Th. 1. Par. T. 2. Diſp. 131.

(w) Barlow Exercit. 4. p. 77, 78, 82, &c.

ding

by our Saviour, underſtandeth, at whoſe Hands in his daily Prayers he ought to aſk his daily Bread; which he doth not aſk at the Hands of of the Logos (who is ſuppos'd by Euſebius, to take care of the Food of all Animals) but at his Hands who is repreſented by the Pſalmiſt as giving Food to all Fleſh and as the great Houſekeeper of the World. Agreeably to our Saviour's Diſcourſes the whole New Teſtament ſpeaketh (in all ſuch places which treat not of the matter of Redemption and the New Creation) the ſame diſtinguiſhing Nominations and Deſcriptions pervade it; and it alſo repreſenteth the Faith of the Creation, of the Creator and of governing Providence as commenſurate with the Faith of the true God, ſo that the one extendeth not beyond the other; they are the ſame, and both are on this ſide the Faith of Chriſt. Every Creature of God is good, which God hath created to be received. That which thou ſoweſt, thou ſoweſt not that Body that ſhall be: but God giveth it a Body, as it hath pleaſed him, and to every Seed his own Body. Let them that ſuffer according to the Will of of God, commit the keeping of their Souls to him as unto a faithful Creator. Through Faith we underſtand, that the Worlds were framed by the (ῥῆμα) Word of God. In theſe places (and innumerable ſuch more) it cannot be ſuppos'd, that the holy Writers would have Chriſt, to be conſider'd as the Deity of the old Creation; and in many other places it is apparent, that they would not have him to be conſider'd as ſuch a Deity. For when they call him the Chriſt of the Creator, they would not have him to be counted the Creator, Act. 4. 24, 25. Lord, thou art God, which haſt made Heaven and Earth and the Sea, and all that in them is. Againſt whoſe Chriſt the Rulers were gathered together. When the Apoſtle confronteth the two Adams (the Firſt and the Second) as Natural and Spiritual, as Earthly and Heavenly, without making any other difference between them, it is manifeſt, that he would not have the Second Adam to be conſider'd as the Creator of the Firſt Adam, 1 Cor. 15. 45,—50. So the Divine Author to the Hebrews confronteth Moſes and Chriſt, and thus oppoſeth them; the one was a meer Servant in the Family of old Iſrael, the other is the (imperial) Son, the builder of the Family of Chriſtians; without making any other difference between them, Heb. 3. 5, 6. And becauſe in his Diſcourſe he maketh no other difference between them, it muſt be ſuppos'd, that in this Diſcourſe he would not have Chriſt to be conſider'd as the Creator of Moſes. The foregoing words therefore (wherein God and Man are oppos'd) muſt not be interpreted of Chriſt, but of God definitively ſo called, to whom Moſes was related as a meer Servant, but Chriſt as an imperial Son. Every Houſe is builded by ſome Man, but he that built all things is God. And Moſes verily was faithful in all his Houſe as a Servant; but Chriſt as a Son over his own Houſe, whoſe Houſe are we, Heb. 3. 4, 5, 6. As in this nomination and deſcription of the Deity of the old Creation Chriſt is diſtinguiſh'd from the Deity of the old Creation: ſo in the Book of the Apocalypſe, He that ſitteth upon the Throne is diſtinguiſh'd from the Lamb, and the old Creation is not attributed to the Lamb, but only to him that ſitteth on the Throne, Apoc. 4. 9, 11. To him only that is the Scriptural oppoſite to the falſe Gods this Divine Book attributeth the old Creation, Apoc. 14. 7. And who is it, that is the ſole Scriptural Oppoſite to the falſe Gods? The Creator as ſuch is the Scriptural Oppoſite to the falſe Gods. Chriſt is not the Scriptural Oppoſite to the falſe Gods. Therefore Chriſt is not the Creator. It was not to Chriſt according to his Divine Nature, an Abſtract Logos or Son of God, that the Heathen World of Idolaters were horribly irreligious, their Idolatry concern'd only the true God and the Religion of the true God, who as the true God diſtinct from Chriſt is the Scriptural Oppoſite to the Heathen falſe Gods and their Idolatry, which was a worſhipping and ſerving the Creature inſtead of the Creator, Rom. 1. 25. The true God as ſuch is the Creator, and the Creator as ſuch is the true God, and this true God the Creator (the ſcriptural oppoſite to the Idols and falſe Gods) is diſtinct from Chriſt; for he is nominated and deſcrib'd as the Deity of natural Light, Rom. 1. 19, 20. In which nominations and deſcriptions the New Teſtament meaneth, that Chriſt ſhould not be conſider'd as the Deity of the old Creation; for it would not have Chriſt to be conſider'd as the Deity of natural Light, the oppoſite to the Heathen Idols and Idolatry. And ſo in the Apoſtle's Diſcourſe to the Athenians and Lycaonians the Apoſtle oppoſeth to their Idols and Idolatry the Deity of the old Creation, and this Deity he nominateth and deſcribeth as the Deity of natural Light, and therefore in this nomination and deſcription alſo he would not have Chriſt to be conſider'd as the Deity of the old Creation, Act. 17. 24,—28. God that made the World and all things therein, hath made of one Blood all Nations of Men, for to dwell on all the Face of the Earth, that they ſhould ſeek the Lord (having natural notices of him) if haply they might feel after him and find him. Act. 14. 15,—18. We preach unto you, that ye ſhould turn from theſe Vanities unto the living God, which made Heaven and Earth and the Sea, and all things that are therein; who in times paſt ſuffer'd all Nations to walk in their own ways. Nevertheleſs, he left not himſelf without Witneſs (of his Exiſtence and Goodneſs) in that he did good and gave us Rain from Heaven and fruitful ſeaſons. As by this note the true God is diſtinguiſh'd from falſe Gods, he is the Creator of Heaven and Earth, (r) hâc notâ Deus optimè diſtinguitur à Diis falſis: So the God of the old Creation is hereby diſtinguiſh'd from the Logos or Son of God, he is a Deity of natural Light and the ſcriptural oppoſite to the Idol-Gods, which the Son of God is not. So the Apoſtle in oppoſition to the Philoſophic Pagans ſtileth the External Creation the Wiſdom of God, 1 Cor. 1. 21. And this their Atheouſneſs he counteth their principal crime, that by the Wiſdom of God (the External Creation) they knew not God. The Deity therefore of the old Creation is he, whoſe Wiſdom is reſplendent in the External Creation, and who is very knowable by the Phænomena of Nature. In which nomination and deſcription of the Deity of the old Creation, it is manifeſt, that the Apoſtle would not have Chriſt to be conſider'd as the Deity of that Creation.

IX. The true Idea of the Son, the Holy Ghoſt and the Trinity plainly infer, that Chriſt is not ſuch a Creator of univerſal Nature and ſuch a governing Providence as the Scholaſtic Theology ſuppoſeth. For univerſal Nature iſſueth from God, as he is Parental Nature (or Providence;) if therefore Chriſt is the Creator of Univerſal Nature, he muſt be thought the Son of God, as God is Parental Nature, and conſequently he cannot be an holy imperial kind of Son, nor better than a Pagan and mundane kind of Son, agreeable only to the pagan and mundane kind of Theiſts. Nor can the Son and the Holy Spirit be underſtood to be in God as he is mundane parental Nature, but only as he is the Imperial Eſtate of Sanctity Imperial. And therefore it is not agreeable to the genuine notices and right underſtanding of God, to ſuppoſe his Son or his Holy Spirit, to be the Creator and providential Benefactor of this Animal world, the Goods whereof are thoſe that belong to mundane Nature and common Providence, and are of natural Diſpenſation. Nor are the Operations of common Providence and the Formation of this Earth with its Animal-inhabitants of any Affinity with the Operations of the Holy Spirit and the Buſineſs of the Holy Imperial Son. Nor is there any Reaſon imaginable, why in the old Moſaic Creation (which is of a very different Nature from the new Creation) there ſhould be a Ternary of Omniſcient and Omnipotent creative Agents; for there could be no need of doing the ſame thing three times over. But diſtinct Cauſalities in the Creation (ſuch as they are) are allotted them (s) by the Fathers that ſymbolize with the Platoniſts making the Son the Demiurgus, who therefore according to this Theology hath much more right to the Name of the Maker of Heaven and Earth than the Father. Nor is he ſuppos'd, to be alone the Father in the Creation; for it is a Maxim in the Scholaſtic Theology (t) tota Trinitas eſt Pater noſter per creationem & gubernationem, the whole Trinity is our Father by Creation and governing Providence. And if ſo, the Holy Ghoſt is our Father, and the whole Trinity is the Father of Chriſt as Man (as Man he is ſuppos'd, to have been made by the whole Trinity) who therefore is his own both Father and Son, and the Holy Ghoſt alſo is his Father by Creation. (u) The creative Virtue or Power according to this Theology is common to the whole Trinity, and belongeth to the Unity of Eſſence, not to the diſtinction of Perſons. But howſoever that be, and how undivided ſoever their Operations are, yet the Creation is ſuppos'd, to be the Work of a Trinity of Perſons as the Deity thereof. And it hath been commonly fancied, that in the old Creation Impreſſions of the Trinity were made upon the Creatures. But the moſt ſagacious Naturaliſts could never yet diſcover any ſuch Impreſſions. There are no Notices of a Trinity in the comprehenſion of Nature and Providence. And if we tranſcend Nature, and proceed to Law, nothing of a Trinity is to be found there. A Trinity appeareth not on this ſide Chriſtianity Imperial, to which it muſt be confin'd, becauſe the Perſon of Chriſt as Deus-homo, is an eſſential Ingredient thereof. And if there is no Trinity out of Chriſtianity Imperial, there can be no Trinity creative of univerſal Nature. If the Trinity was the Deity of the old Creation, all created capable Creatures by their Creation muſt neceſſarily be oblig'd to Religious Honour, Subjection and Service to this creative Trinity, and conſequently the old Creation muſt neceſſarily found the Religion of a Trinity. But the Myſtery of the Trinity is not knowable by natural Reaſon or by the Creatures (w) as the Schoolmen generally affirm: Nor was the Religion of a Trinity the Religion of the Old Teſtament-times. And if the old Creation did not found the Religion of a Trinity, it cannot be ſuppoſed, that the Trinity, or the Son of God as one of the Trinity was the Deity of that Creation. And there is this plain Demonſtration againſt it. In the old Moſaic Creation no Kingdom of God, no Holy Empire was made, it was not the Saint of God-kind of Creation. And therefore it was not the Holy Spirit's kind of Creation, nor was it the Son of God's kind of Creation, nor was it God the Father's kind of Creation. Whence it is manifeſt, that the Trinity was not the Deity of that Creation, nor was the Son of God the Deity thereof. But it will not follow, that God the Father was not the Deity thereof. For although he is the Imperial Eſtate of Sanctity Imperial, and the Moſaic Creation was therefore not his kind of Creation, yet he might be and was the Author of it (not as iſſuing from paternal Sanctity, but) as iſſuing from parental Nature and Providence.

(r) Grot. Not. in loc.

X. The Creation attributed to Chriſt in the New Teſtament is in many places of it evidently meant of the Chriſtians new Creation. For Expoſitors generally agree, that the Apoſtle, Eph. 3. 9. ſpeaketh of the New Teſtament-creation, and it may be plainly proved from the Text it ſelf. For the old Creation is altogether remote and alien from the Subject-matter that the Apoſtle there treateth of, which is the Goſpel and the calling of the Gentiles, both which he calleth The Myſtery which from the beginning of the World hath been hid in God, who created all things by Jeſus Chriſt. To the intent that now unto the Principalities and Powers in heavenly places might be known by the Church the manifold Wiſdom of God. According to the eternal Purpoſe which he purpoſed in Chriſt Jeſus our Lord. God created all things by Jeſus Chriſt, ſo as to manifeſt and make known the Myſtery, which from the beginning of the World had been hid in God. This is the Apoſtle's ſenſe; as is plain from the Nature of this Creation (which is the Execution and Manifeſtation of the Divine Decree) and from the following Words. For God created all things by Jeſus Chriſt (ſaith the Apoſtle) to this end or intent, that unto the Principalities and Powers might be known by the Church the manifold Wiſdom of God. Chriſt's Creation therefore (here ſpoken of) is that which manifeſteth or maketh known the great Goſpel-arcanum, which was hid in God; therefore his Creation is the Chriſtians new Creation. And this will further appear by comparing the Apoſtle's Expreſſions. For the Myſtery which from the beginning of the World was hid in God, and the eternal Purpoſe which he purpoſed in Chriſt Jeſus, are identical Expreſſions, and both ſignifie the Goſpel-œconomy as Recondite in the Divine Decree. By Chriſt's Creation this Recondite Goſpel-œconomy was brought into open actual Exiſtence, and his Creation of all things was to this intent, that this Recondite Goſpel-œconomy might be known and known by the new created Church; which is plainly expreſſive of the new Creation. Theſe things have the Evidence of common Senſe and the certitude of Mathematical Demonſtration. Chriſt's Creation hath the Name of an univerſal Creation (the Creation of all things) and this his Creation accor-

---

(s) Δῆλον ὅτι τῶν αὐτῶν πραγμάτων τοὺς τύπους ἐνσημαίνεται μὲν ὁ πατὴρ, ἐπιτελεῖ δὲ ὁ λόγος, οὐ δουλικῶς, οὐκ ἀμαθῶς, ἀλλ' ἐπιστημονικῶς τε καὶ δεσποτικῶς, καὶ οἰκειότερον εἰπεῖν πατρικῶς. Gr. Naz. Or. 35. p. 584.

(t) Aquin. in 1. Cap. Ep. 2. ad Corinth. v. 1.

(u) Vaſq. in Th. 1. Par. T. 2. Diſp. 131.

(w) Barlow Exercit 4. p. 77, 78, 82, &c.

ding to the Apoſtle is The Chriſtians new Creation.

And ſuch it is according to the Apocalypſe, wherein our Saviour is intituled, Apoc. 3. 14. The beginning of the Creation of God; which according to the beſt learned Expoſitors (x) ſignifieth the Chriſtians new Creation, and this Senſe is demonſtrable from the Text it ſelf, and from all the Terms that are in it. For it will hereafter appear, that in all the places of the New Teſtament, wherein our Saviour is call'd ἀρχὴ, (the beginning) the beginning of the new Creation is meant. Which is ſo plain, that the Fathers have learn'd from thence, to ſtile our Saviour (y) ἀρχὴ τῆς καινῆς κτίσεως, the beginning of the new Creation. The Creation of God ſignifieth διακριτικῶς, diſtinctively, hereby this Creation is diſtinguiſh'd from the old Moſaic Creation. For the Creation of God ſignifieth alſo κατ' οἰκείωσιν, in a Senſe of Affinity and Alliance, that this Creation is of God originally ſo as to be of his Kind and Quality, and of his Kind of Nobleneſs and Excellency, as being The Divine and Saint of God-kind of Creation, which the the Moſaic Creation was not. For the Creation of God ſignifieth in a Senſe of Excellency and Nobilitation, as amongſt the Pagans θεῶν τροφὴ, Deorum Cœna ſignifieth ſuperlative eximious Food and Entertainment, and as the Lamb of God, the Bread of God, the Armour of God, the Peace of God, the Elect of God, the City of God, ſignifie in Scripture. As the Bread of God is the divine eximious Food, ſo the Creation of God is the divine eximious Creation, far more excellent than the Moſaical, which in reſpect of the Goods and Excellencies of it was a meer Humane kind of Creation and did not tranſcend the Humane things. That was not firſt which was Spiritul, but that which is Natural. The beginning of the Creation of God therefore is a great Attribute and a great Nobilitation of the Perſon of our Saviour; for it denoteth him, to be of the Creator not the Creature-party; it denoteth the Precellency of his Creation above the old Moſaic Creation; and it is plainly an Attribute of his Humane-divine Perſon, which proveth this Creation of God, to be the Chriſtians new Creation. For it is not an Abſtract Logos, to which the Creation of God is here attributed, but to the crucify'd Jeſus as ſuch. Theſe things ſaith the Amen, the faithful and true Witneſs, the beginning of the Creation of God. As all God's Miſſionaries (the Prophets and Apoſtles) were Divine Witneſs-bearers, ſo a principal Branch of the Work and Office of the Meſſiah (z) was teſtifying and bearing Record. The Prophets were (a) ἀξιόπιστοι μάρτυρες τῆς ἀληθείας, Witneſſes of the Truth of Chriſtianity worthy to be believ'd: But Chriſt (becauſe of the eminency of his Perſon, his ability to Teſtifie, the excellency and certainty of his Teſtimony, the unexceptionable Fidelity and Integrity, and his unparallel'd Sufferings for his Teſtimony) is the Prince of Martyrs and Divine Witneſs-bearers, the moſt authentick and creditable Witneſs that ever was or can be; and therefore he is ſtiled The Amen, the faithful and true Witneſs. Under this Notion he is conſider'd in this Apocalyptick Text; wherein therefore he is conſider'd as the Founder and Maker of Chriſtianity real and perſonal (the things of it and the perſons of it;) for ſuch he was as the faithful and true Witneſs.

In many other places of the New Teſtament the Creation attributed to Chriſt is evidently meant of the Chriſtians new Creation, and they are ſo expounded by all Chriſtians. (b) The new Creature is our Regeneration. (c) The Spiritual Reformation of Men into new Men and new Creatures. (d) The Word created is uſed to ſignifie the ſecond Creation, our Regeneration by the Grace of Chriſt. (e) Διττὴ ἡ κτίσις, there is a twofold Creature, that which is made and that which is renew'd. When our Soul grown old in Sin is throughly made new by Baptiſm, created again as it were, this is καινὴ κτίσις, a new Creation. (f) Our Renovation is called Creation, and we a new Creature. And in this ſenſe we are ſaid in Scripture, to be created by God, the Workmanſhip of God created in Chriſt Jeſus, the new Man created according to God, the new Man renew'd according to the Image of him that created him, and a new Creature, and the Creation of God or the Work of his Creation. The Church of Regenerate Chriſtians therefore is (g) nova Creatio vel novus Mundus (a new Creation or a new World) and the making it is called nova creatio mundi Evangelici. (h) Regnum Chriſti eſt novus mundus, the Kingdom of Chriſt is the new World. He that is entred into the Church of Regenerate Chriſtians (i) εἰς ἑτέραν ἦλθε δημιουργίαν, is come into another Creation, which is brought into Exiſtence, that the manifold Wiſdom of God might be known by the Church to the heavenly Principalities and Powers. But it is not only the actual Regeneration of Men, that is the Chriſtians new Creation; for the Religion of their Regeneration and the making thereof is alſo their new Creation. Whence they obſerve the Lord's Day anſwerably to the old Sabbath in Commemoration of our Redemption, which they account the new Creation. (k) The Sabbath had reference to the old Creation; But in Chriſt we are a new Creature, a new Creation by him, and ſo to have a new Sabbath. They look upon the new Creation as finiſh'd at our Saviour's Paſſion and Reſurrection. (l) The Serpent's Head being bruiſed (perfecta nova creatione) the new Creation being finiſh'd, the Sabbatiſm ought to be tranſlated to that day, on which theſe things were done. (m) Quo nempe Chriſtus novæ creationis & redemptionis opus complevit, namely, that day on which Chriſt accompliſh'd the Work of the new Creation and Redemption, which was (n) nova creatio ſtatus Evangelici, the new Creation of the Evangelical State. Thus all Chriſtians and Divines are taught by the Tenour of their Religion and the ſtile of the New Teſtament, to contradiſtinguiſh and oppoſe two Creations, two kinds of Creation; The Old and the New, the Humane and the Divine Kind, the Natural and the Evangelical (or the Chriſtian) the one in Nature the other by Grace, the one is from God in Nature (for ſo we are the Sheep of his Hand) the other is from God in and by Chriſt. This latter is not the former, but an oppoſite Creation (an oppoſite kind of Creation;) and ſeeing thoughout the New Teſtament no other Creation is attributed to Chriſt, but that which is from God in and by Chriſt, there-

---

(x) Ribera, Grot. Ham.

(y) S. Athanaſ. or. 3. c. Arian. p. 237. Com.

(z) Joh. 3. 11, 32, 33. ch. 4. 44. ch. 8. 13, 14. ch. 18. 37. 1 Joh. 5. 8.

(a) J. Mart. Dial. cum Tryph. p. 224, 225.

(b) Nova Creatura eſt regeneratio noſtra. S. Ambroſ. Com. in Gal. 6.

(c) Vorſt. in Eph. 2. 10.

(d) Τὸ δὲ ἐκτίσθη ἐπὶ τῆς δευτέρας διὰ τῆς χάριτος τοῦ Χριστοῦ ἀναγεννήσεως. S. Baſil. in Pſal. 32. p. 206.

(e) S. Chryſoſt. in Galat. p. 762. & T. 8. p. 145, 148.

(f) Renovatio noſtri dicitur creatio, & nos creatura nova. Et hoc ſenſu dicimur nos in Scripturis à Deo creati. Eph. 2. 10. Ποίημα τοῦ Θεοῦ κτισθέντες ἐν Χριστῷ Ἰησοῦ. Et c. 4. 24. Καινὸς ἄνθρωπος ὁ κατὰ Θεὸν κτισθείς. Et Colloſſ. 2. 10 Νέος ἄνθρωπος ἀνακαινούμενος κατ' εἰκόνα τοῦ κτίσαντος αὐτόν. Et nova creatura. 2 Cor. 5. 17. Gal. 6. 15. Et κτίσις τοῦ Θεοῦ. Apoc. 3. 14. Vel κτίσμα αὐτοῦ. Jac. 1. 18. Epiſcop. Reſp. ad Def. Cameron. p 18.

(g) Lightfoot Hor. in Matth. 28. 1. Joh. 21. 22.

(h) Forer. in Iſa. 65. 17.

(i) S. Chryſoſt. in 2 Cor. Hom. 11.

(k) Bp. Andrews Speech ag. Trask. p. 72, 73.

(l) Lightfoot. ſupr.

(m) Spencer. de Leg. Hebr. l. 1. c. 4. S. 13.

(n) Lightfoot ſupr.

therefore it never attributeth the Old Creation to Chriſt, nor is this the Senſe of any place in it.

XI. There are other evident Reaſons, why we ſhould ſuppoſe, that the Creation attributed to Chriſt in the New Teſtament is always meant of the new Creation. For (1.) Chriſt muſt be denominated the Deity of the New Teſtament, to ſignifie, that God's Peculiarities and Creature-tranſcendencies belong to Chriſt in reſpect of the New Teſtament-times and Affairs; and in many reſpects what God was as to the Old Teſtament-times and Affairs, that Chriſt is as to the New Teſtament-times and Affairs. The Truth whereof may be ſomewhat illuſtrated by a mode of ſpeaking (before obſerv'd) not unuſual with the Holy Writers of the New Teſtament, which is, to ſpeak of the Old Teſtament-affairs in the New Teſtament-language. As 1 Pet. 1. 11. the Prophetic Spirit of the Old Teſtament-times is called the Spirit of Chriſt, not becauſe Chriſt was the Donor of it in thoſe times (which is a groundleſs and incongruous Conceit) but becauſe in the times of Chriſtianity and in the apprehenſion and conſideration of Chriſtians the Prophetic Spirit is the Spirit of Chriſt as the Donour of it. So the reproach of God's People in the Old Teſtament-times is called the reproach of Chriſt, Heb. 11. 26. Not becauſe the old literal Iſrael were Chriſt's People, but becauſe the reproach of Gods People now is the reproach of Chriſt, to which the reproach of God's People in ancient times anſwereth. (o) What is the reproach of Chriſt? Τὸ ὀνειδίζεσθαι τοιαῦτα οἷα ἡμεῖς, to be ſo reproach'd as we Chriſtians are. (p) Thoſe Contumelies which the Iſraelites ſuffer'd, which were a Figure of thoſe that Chriſtians ſuffer for Chriſt, are called the reproach of Chriſt. As there is a correſpondence between the Old and New Teſtament-times and Affairs: So Chriſt in reſpect of the New Teſtament-times and Affairs is repreſented as anſwering to God in reſpect of the old Teſtament-times and Affairs. For in the Prophetic Scripture of the New Teſtament Chriſt is ſtiled Alpha and Omega, the firſt and the laſt, becauſe he is ſuch in reſpect of the New Teſtament-times and Affairs, as God was ſuch in reſpect of the Old Teſtament-times and Affairs. And as thoſe Attributes are an Aſcription of Deity unto God in the Old Teſtament: So they are an Aſcription of Deity unto Chriſt in the New Teſtament. Iſa. 44. 6. and 48. 12. Apoc 1. 11, 17. and 22. 13. Chriſt in the New Teſtament is repreſented as the Redeemer and only Saviour in reſpect of the New Teſtament-times and Affairs; and ſo God is repreſented in the Old Teſtament as the Redeemer and only Saviour in reſpect of the Old Teſtament-times and Affairs. Iſa. 44. 6. and 43. 11. In the Old Teſtament God was Righteouſneſs and Salvation to the literal Iſrael, and this was his Divine Peculiarity and Creature-tranſcendency; and in the New Teſtament Chriſt is Righteouſneſs and Salvation to the Spiritual Iſrael, and this is his Divine Peculiarity and Creature-tranſcendency. Jer. 23. 6. This Name the Lord is Chriſt's Attribute in the New Teſtament, as it is the Attribute of God in the Old Teſtament; and ſo to bring up Children in the Nurture and Admonition of the Lord in the ſtile of the New Teſtament, is not only to bring them up in Piety towards God, but in Chriſtian Piety. Eph. 6. 4. To ſearch the Heart, to try the Reins, to circumciſe the Heart, to pour out the Spirit, to kill and to make alive (q) are God's Divine Peculiarities in the Old Teſtament; and they are Chriſt's Divine Pecularities in the New Teſtament. In the Old Teſtament God challengeth this as one of his Creature-tranſcendencies; every Knee ſhall bow to me and every Tongue ſhall confeſs to God. And in the New Teſtament Chriſt (by his Apoſtle) challengeth it as one of his Creature-tranſcendencies. Rom. 14. 11. Phil. 2. 11. In the Old Teſtament one of God's Peculiarities and Creature-tranſcendencies is to be the Hope and Truſt of Iſrael; and in the New Teſtament it is one of Chriſt's Peculiarities and Creature-tranſcendencies, to be our Hope and our Truſt. Jer. 14. 8. and 17. 5. Col. 1. 27. Eph. 1. 12. So the Religious Worſhip, the Service of Prayer and Invocation, that belong'd to God peculiarly in the Old Teſtament, belongeth to Chriſt in the New Teſtament. Pſal. 50. 15. Matth. 4. 10. Joh. 5. 23. 1 Cor. 1. 2. Chriſt therefore muſt be conſider'd as the Deity of the New Teſtament (in conjunction with God the Father) he muſt be conſider'd as the Deity of the New Teſtament in reſpect of the New Teſtament-times and Affairs, that anſwereth to the Deity of the Old Teſtament in reſpect of the Old Teſtament-times and Affairs. He muſt not therefore be conſider'd as the Deity of the Old Teſtament in reſpect of the Old Teſtament-times, Affairs, Creation. (2.) If the Holy Writers of the New Teſtament did attribute to Chriſt the old Moſaic Creation, they would contradict themſelves. For they attribute to him the new Creation (the Creation of God) as his Character, and as διακριτικῶς, diſtinctively his Creation, which is to ſay, that the old Moſaic Creation was not his Creation. His Honour and Glory is, that not the Humane, but the Divine kind of Creation is his Creation. (r) Divinior hæc creatio quàm prior illa. This is a Diviner Creation than that former Creation, that did but produce Man and Woman out of the Earth, provide Suſtenance for them, gave them the Goods of Humane Life, and did not tranſcend the Humane Things. (3.) When the Holy Writers of the New Teſtament wrote of Chriſt's Creatorſhip, it is not probable, that their thoughts were employ'd about the old Creation, but the new Creation. For the old Creation was vaſtly remote and diſtant, could not reaſonably much affect them, was not nearly ally'd to them and the matters which they were converſant about, nor was it the Creation of their Religion: But the new Creation was new and proximate, could not but much affect them, was nearly ally'd to them and the matters of the New Teſtament which they were converſant about, was their Creation (peculiar to Chriſtianity) and their Religion. And as if we ſuppoſe Chriſt, to have been the Deity of the old Creation, and immediately to have had a People of that Creation, it would be reaſonable to ſuppoſe, that this Creation would be much in their thoughts, and that they would celebrate it and the Author of it: So it is as reaſonable, to ſuppoſe, that Chriſt's People being thoſe of the new Creation, this was the Creation, which they had in their Minds in their Celebrations of his Creatorſhip. (4.) The Creation attributed to Chriſt by the Holy Writers of the New Teſtament is certainly that Creation, which ought to be the Subject-matter of the New Teſtament, which is not the old, but the new Creation. For it cannot be ſaid of the old Creation, that it is the Creation,

(o) S. Chryſoſt. in loc.

(p) Grot. Not. in loc.

(q) Deut. 30. 6. Jer. 7. 10. Joel 2. 28. Joh. 5 21. Act. 2. 17. Col. 2. 11. Apoc. 2. 23.

(r) Grot. Not. in Eph. 3. 9.

tion, which ought to be the Subject-matter of the New Teſtament: But this muſt be ſaid of the new Creation, becauſe it is the new Creation, the Creation of the New Teſtament-times and Affairs, and the Chriſtians proper Creation. This alſo is the Creation, which is ally'd to the Son of God according to his true Idea (as he is the Holy Empire's Imperial Son) which the old Creation is not. For the forming Gnats, Fleas, Cimici's, ζωά τε χερσαῖα ϗ ἔνυδρα, and Land and Water-animals (which is attributed to the Evangelical Logos) cannot be thought a Creation that is ally'd to the Son of God according to his true Idea. There is alſo this difference between the old and new Creation; the former is a Creation as to matters Phyſiological, the latter is a Creation only as to matters Theopolitical, which are the Theologicals. And for this reaſon the new Creation (and that only) ought to be the Subject-matter of the New Teſtament, becauſe it is the Creation, not of the Phyſiologicals, but the Theopoliticals and Theologicals. It is of great conſideration alſo, that the Creation which the Holy Writers of the New Teſtament attribute to Chriſt, they never attribute to an Old Teſtament-Son of God, but always to a New Teſtament-Son of God (as will be plainly demonſtrated;) therefore the Creation which they attribute to him, is not the old, but the new Creation.

XII. They make Divine Panegyricks of our Saviour, inſiſt upon his Glories and Magnificences in an highly laudatory ſtrain, make large Aſcriptions of Deity (or Creature-tranſcendency) to his Perſon: But in all theſe Aſcriptions they conſider him as the Deity of the New Teſtament only; and his Creation which they inſiſt upon, they connex with ſuch Attributes, as plainly ſhew, that they mean only his New Teſtament-creatorſhip. This will appear by illuſtrating two places of Scripture. Col. 1. 13--19. Who hath delivered us from the power of darkneſs, and hath tranſlated us into the kingdom of his dear Son. In whom we have redemption through his blood even the forgiveneſs of ſins. Who is the image of the inviſible God, the firſt-born of every Creature: for by him were all things created that are in heaven, and that are in earth, viſible and inviſible, whether they be thrones, or dominions, or principalities, or powers, all things were created by him and for him. And he is before all things, and by him all things conſiſt. And he is the head of the body of the church, who is the beginning, the firſt-born from the dead, that in all things he might have the pre-eminence. For it pleaſed the father, that in him ſhould all fulneſs dwell. Heb. 1. 2 — 6. God hath in theſe laſt days ſpoken unto us by his Son, whom he hath appointed heir of all things, by whom alſo he made the Worlds. Who being the brightneſs of his glory and the expreſs Image of his perſon, and upholding all things by the word of his power, when he had by himſelf purged our ſins, ſat down on the right hand of the majeſty on high. Being made ſo much better than the angels, as he hath by inheritance obtained a more excellent name than they. For unto which of the angels ſaid he at any time, thou art my Son, this day have I begotten thee? And again, I will be to him a Father, and he ſhall be to me a Son. And again, when he bringeth in the firſt-begotten into the world, he ſaith, and let all the angels of God worſhip him. There is great Affinity (or rather Identity) between theſe two illuſtrious places of Scripture. For as the Author to the Hebrews intituleth Chriſt The brightneſs of his Glory and the expreſs Image of his Perſon: So the Apoſtle to the Coloſſians ſtileth him The Image of the inviſible God. As the Author to the Hebrews ſtileth him The Firſt-begotten and the Heir of all things: So the Apoſtle to the Coloſſians ſtileth him The Firſt-born of every Creature. The one ſaith, He upholdeth all things by the Word of his Power: The other ſaith, By him all things conſiſt. The one ſaith, By him God made the Worlds: The other ſaith, By him were all things created that are in Heaven and that are in Earth. This Creatorſhip theſe Holy Writers connex with ſuch Attributes of our Saviour, as plainly ſhew, that they mean by it only his New Teſtament-creatorſhip. For

(1.) In the Apoſtle's Divine Panegyrick Col. 1. 13. this is the firſt Attribute; Who hath deliver'd us from the Power of Darkneſs, and tranſlated us into the Kingdom of his dear Son. He attributeth to Chriſt the Kingdom-eſtate of the New and Goſpel-kingdom of God, which ſignifieth him to be The Imperial Eſtate of Chriſtianity Imperial, and that the Apoſtle conſidereth him only as the Deity of the New Teſtament. So the Divine Author to the Hebrews repreſenteth him. Ch. 1. 8. Unto the Son he ſaith, Thy Throne, O God, is for ever and ever, a Sceptre of Righteouſneſs is the Sceptre of thy Kingdom. He conſidereth Chriſt as in his Kingdom-eſtate (on the Throne) and attributeth Deity to him, but no other than the Deity of the New Teſtament; for his Kingdom (whoſe Scepter is the Scepter of Righteouſneſs) is no other than the Kingdom of Chriſtianity; nor is his Kingdom-eſtate any other than that, to which he was rais'd by God's anointing him with the oil of gladneſs above his fellows, and by ſaying unto him ſit on my right hand until I make thine enemies thy footſtool. Heb. 1. 9, 13.

(2.) A ſecond Attribute is Col. 1. 14. In whom we have redemption through his blood. Which Attribute implieth the Deity of Chriſt (for that ſacred Blood which is the price of our Redemption, can be no leſs than divine Blood) but it neither expreſſeth nor implieth any other Deity of Chriſt than that of the New Teſtament.

(3.) A third Attribute is Col. 1. 15. Who is the Image of the inviſible God. The Apoſtle is not contemplating a Scholaſtic Abſtract Son of God, but Chriſt in his preſent Kingdom-eſtate, who being as ſuch a Divine Imperial Perſon, the Imperial Eſtate of Chriſtianity Imperial and of Imperial-perſonal Deiformity, is the Image of the inviſible God. But a Scholaſtic Abſtract Son is not the Image of that God, who is the Imperial Eſtate of Sanctity Imperial; nor can ſuch a Metaphyſical kind of Son be the Image of any other than a Metaphyſical kind of Father; nor is ſuch an Abſtract Son of God leſs inviſible than the inviſible God. Whereas in the Apoſtle's Words (s) tacita Antitheſis ſubintelligenda eſt, an Antitheſis muſt be underſtood; for Chriſt is ſtiled the Image of the inviſible God, to ſignifie, that he is like unto God inviſible, but not a like inviſible. By this Divine Attribute therefore the Apoſtle aſcribeth no other Deity to Chriſt but only the Deity of the New Teſtament. As appeareth alſo from 2 Cor. 4. 4, 6. where the Light and Glory which he is as the Image of God, the Apoſtle conjoineth with the Light of his glorious Goſpel; and the Light of the Glory of God and of the Knowledge of the Glory of God (which ſhineth) in the Face of Jeſus Chriſt, is ſaid to be the Light which ſhineth neth in Regenerate Chriſtians. The Apoſtle therefore conſidereth him as the Deity of the Goſpel and of our Regeneracy; and ſo Expoſitors agree, that the Apoſtle's deſign in this place (wherein Chriſt is conſider'd as the Image of God) is, to commend the Light and Splendor of the Goſpel-miniſtry, and that he alludeth to the refulgency of the Face of Moſes. Beza ſaith, (t) He is the Image of God, that is, in him God is repreſented to us, and may be perſpicuouſly beheld and contemplated. For now Paul doth not call Chriſt the Image of God otherwiſe than in reſpect of his Office: So that they are not things pertinent (although true) which ſome of the Ancients have in this place diſcours'd touching Conſubſtantial. The words of the Apoſtle, Heb. 1. 3. Who being the brightneſs of his Glory and the expreſs character of his Perſon, are expounded by the ſame Author (Beza) not as meant of an Abſtract Son, but of the Humane Divine Perſon of the Son of God. Which Expoſition is not without great reaſon; for it is certain, that the Apoſtle writeth Chriſtianity, and that his words ought to be underſtood according to Chriſtianity. The expreſs Image of his Perſon therefore ſignifieth, The moſt God-like Imperial Perſon according to Chriſtianity poſſible or conceivable. This the Humane-divine Perſon of Chriſt is; but this a Scholaſtic Abſtract Son cannot be ſuppos'd to be.

(s) Davenant in loc.

(4.) A fourth Attribute is The firſt-born of every Creature, Col. 1. 15. which honourary Title is not to be expounded according to that vulgar Rule, ſolet in ſcripturis primogenitum vocari, quodcunque in ſuo genere excellens atque ſummum, whatever in its kind excelleth and is the higheſt, is uſually in Scripture called the Firſt-born; as the firſt-born of the Poor, of Kings, of Death, ſignifieth the chief of the Poor, of Kings and of Death. At this rate of expounding the Apoſtle calleth our Saviour one of the Creatures, but moſt excellent and higheſt, as the Arians and the followers of Socinus expound his Senſe, making him expreſly to contradict himſelf; for in the next words he repreſenteth our Saviour as Creator not Creature. This Attribute therefore is an Attribute of Creature-tranſcendence, and conſider'd as ſuch ſome will have it to ſignifie, not the Firſt-born or the Firſt-begotten, but the begotten or him that was brought forth before all Creatures. (u) But this is thought an harſh Conſtruction, and therefore others ſuppoſe, that the Firſt-born by a Metonymy ſignifieth the Heir, and the Heir is the Lord (in the Imperial Law, Hæres pro Domino accipitur;) the Firſt-born of every Creature therefore ſignifieth the Lord of every Creature. This commonly receiv'd and good Interpretation is agreeable to that parallel place, Heb. 1. 2. Whom he hath appointed Heir (Lord) of all things. And it is agreeable enough to the Apoſtle's Phraſe; for by the Firſt-born of every Creature he may reaſonably be ſuppos'd to mean every Creature's firſt-born in reſpect of dominant and imperial condition. Athanaſius affirmeth, (w) that our Saviour is never called in Scripture πρωτότοκος τοῦ Θεοῦ, the primogenit of God: but this is a great miſtake. He is called the primogenit of God, not ſo much with reſpect to time, but becauſe he is unto God the Heir and the Imperial Son (as the primogenit is amongſt Men) hath the dignity of the primogeniture, and is the begotten that is firſt, before and above all Creature. Unto God the Imperial Son is the primogenit as a Son to a Father; but he is alſo every Creature's primogenit, as being in reſpect of every Creature The Lord the Son. Which imperial condition accrueth to him both natively and by officiary dignity. It accrueth to him by officiary dignity; for by him were all things created that are in Heaven and that are in Earth, Col. 1. 16. And it accrueth to him natively, (x) For as the firſt-begotten of the Kingdom is begotten Lord of the Kingdom, and the firſt-born of the Empire is the Lord of the Empire: ſo he is called the firſt-begotten of every Creature, as being begotten Lord of every Creature: For the right of the firſt-begotten is the Dominion of the Paternal Inheritance. In this ſublime Attribute the Firſt-born (or Lord) of every Creature our Saviour is conſider'd, not as an Abſtract Son, but as the Deity of the New Teſtament; as is plain from that parallel place, Heb. 1. 2. Whom he hath appointed Heir of all things. (y) So Athanaſius, Cyril. Alex. Gr. Nyſſen, S. Chryſoſtom, S. Auſtin, Fulgentius, and a Council of Toledo ſuppoſe, and diſpute, that Chriſt is denominated primogenit only with reſpect to his Humane Nature. They ſuppoſe therefore, that when he is ſo denominated in Scripture, he is conſider'd as the Deity of the New Teſtament.

(5.) A fifth Attribute is, Col. 1. 17. He is before all things and by him all things conſiſt. Which words (before all things) are by ſome Expoſitors underſtood to ſignifie Chriſt's pre-exiſtence before any Creatures were made: but others underſtand them to ſignifie his precedence before all Creatures in dignity of State and Place, his univerſal Primacy and Supremacy. And that this is the true meaning of them will appear by connecting them with the antecedent and ſubſequent words. For connected with the antecedent words they run thus; All things were created for him (to rule over) And he is before all things. Connected with the ſubſequent words they run thus; He is before all things, and he is the Head of the Body the Church. The words are an Idea of the new conſtituted Univerſe of Beings; for ſuch an Univerſe wherein Chriſt ſtandeth at the Head, wherein he is before all things and by him all things conſiſt, is manifeſtly the preſent Chriſtian conſtituted Univerſe. And the words are plainly expreſſive of Chriſt's preſent ſtate of Exaltation, wherein he is before all things (of Creature-tranſcendent Imperial condition) and therefore of the Godhead; for he is of the Godhead, that is before all things and by whom (in conſort with God) all things conſiſt, upholding all things by the word of his power (his omnipotent command) Heb. 1. 3. This great Imperial Potentate can diſſolve and deſtroy the World by the word of his power: but thereby he conſerveth it from running to rack and ruine, it is kept in frame and conſiſtence by him. As it is his doing, that it is conſtituted, as now it is: ſo it belongeth to him, who is that great Imperial Potentate, the Lord of the Univerſe, to keep it in frame and conſiſtence (till the time of the diſſolution of all things) chiefly with reſpect to his own Kingdom and ſo far as the concerns thereof do require. So all things, places and perſons are put into the Hands of Chriſt and are ſubjected to his diſpoſal. He is not a Parental Providence (omnia fovens & conſervans)

not

(t) Qui eſt imago Dei, id eſt, in quo ſeipſum perſpicuè conſpiciendum præbet Deus, ut 1 Tim. 3. 16. Neque enim Dei imaginem nunc vocat Paulus Chriſtum, alio quàm officii ipſius reſpectu: ut licet vera, tamen ſint ἀπροσδιόνυσα, quæ nonnulli ex veteribus hoc loco περὶ τοῦ ὁμοουσίου, diſſeruerunt.

Iſa. 14. 13. Pſal. 89. 27. Job 18. 13.

(u) Davenant in loc.

(w) C. Arian. or. 3. p. 235. Com.

(x) Quemadmodum enim primogenitus regni genitus eſt dominus regni, & primogenitus imperii genitus eſt dominus imperii: ita dicitur primogenitus omnis creaturæ, pro quanto eſt genitus dominus omnis creaturæ; jus enim primogeniti eſt dominium hæreditatis paternæ. Cajetan. in Col. 1. 15.

(y) Petav. de Trin. l. 2. c. 4. S. 2, 3. Davenant ſupr.

nor is he the providential Governour of the World, as God is; yet he is thus far an Univerſal Providence; It is a Branch of his Imperial Potentacy over all, to uphold all things by the word of his power, ſo far he preſideth over the new conſtituted Univerſe; the Polity, Order and State of it dependeth upon him (and therefore by him all things conſiſt) who is the Head of all Principality and Power. He is conſider'd by the Apoſtle as ſuch, and as preſiding over the new conſtituted Univerſe; therefore he is conſider'd as the Deity of the New Teſtament.

(6.) The remaining Attributes are, He is the Head of the Body the Church, who is the beginning, the firſt-born from the dead, that in all things he might have the pre-eminence. For it pleaſed the Father that in him ſhould all fulneſs dwell. In theſe Attributes he is ſo manifeſtly conſider'd as the Deity of the New Teſtament, that all Men acknowledge it; for (z) they refer to the repaired Creature, that is, to the Church. As he is denominated The imperial Head of the Church, and The beginning (the Archical cauſe of the Chriſtians all things) he is conſider'd as the Deity of the New Teſtament. His honourary Name The firſt-born from the dead doth not only or chiefly ſignifie, that he was the firſt-begotten to Life Immortal; but he is ſo denominated, becauſe he only is The Imperial Son of the Reſurrection, and therefore hath the Primacy and Pre-eminence; (a) πάντα γὰρ τίμια ϗ βασιλικὰ τὰ ἐν αὐτῷ, ϗ ἐν πᾶσι αὐτὸς πρωτεύει, for all things in him are regial (or imperial) and therefore honourary, and in all things he hath the pre-eminence, which is Creature-tranſcendence. For his Pre-eminence is the Pre-eminence of the Imperial Son, whence his Attributes are Branches of Creature-tranſcendence, and they are alſo ſuch as belong to him as the Deity of the New Teſtament. Of this Nature is the laſt Attribute of All-fulneſs, which belongeth to him as the Mediator and the Head of the Church (as Expoſitors ſay) and by Divine Appointment. Thus all the Attributes and Creature-tranſcendences wherewith our Saviour's Creatorſhip is link'd, combin'd and encompaſs'd in this place to the Colloſſians, do belong to him as he is the Deity of the New Teſtament, and denote him to be the Deity of the New Teſtament. Therefore his Creatorſhip which in this place is one of his Attributes and Creature-tranſcendencies joyn'd with the reſt) doth belong to him as he is the Deity of the New Teſtament, denoteth him to be the Deity of the New Teſtament, the Apoſtle in celebrating it conſidereth him as the Deity of the New Teſtament, and conſequently it meaneth only the New Creation. So the Creatorſhip which the Divine Author to the Hebrews attributeth to Chriſt, appeareth to belong to him, as he is the Deity of the New Teſtament, becauſe all the Attributes and Creature-tranſcendencies wherewith it is link'd and combin'd by that Divine Author are ſuch as belong to him as he is the Deity of the New Teſtament, and they proclaim him, to be only the Deity of the New Teſtament. Such as, Thou art my Son, this Day have I begotten thee. Sit thou on my Right-hand, until I make thine Enemies thy Footſtool. By inheritance he hath obtained a more excellent Name than the Angels.

(7.) Not only of theſe Attributes (which we have recounted) but of all the other Attributes and Creature-tranſcendencies of our Saviour (the whole number of them) it muſt be ſaid, that they belong to him only as he is the Deity of the New Teſtament. Such as The Son of God, The choſen of God, The Chriſt of God, The Logos of God, Chriſt the Wiſdom and Power of God, The Light, The Life, The Way, The Truth, The Reſurrection, our Wiſdom, Righteouſneſs, Sanctification and Redemption, The great Apoſtle and High-prieſt of our Profeſſion, The Saviour, The Captain of our Salvation, The Shepherd, The Door, The Vine, The true Manna, The Lamb of God and our Paſſover, The true Melchizedek, The Lion of the Tribe of Judah, The Root of David, The Morning Star, The Meſſenger of the Covenant, The Rock, The Corner-ſtone, The Fountain of living Water, The only begotten, The firſt-begotten, The Lord of all, The Lord of Glory, The Prince of Life, The King of Kings and Lord of Lords, The Name above every Name, God manifeſt in the Fleſh, God bleſſed for ever, The firſt and the laſt, The Amen. All which Creature-tranſcendent Nobilitations (and ſuch more) do belong to our Saviour only as he is the Humane-divine Perſon of Chriſt, the Deity of the New Teſtament; whereby a Judgment may be made touching the meaning of that Creatorſhip which the Apoſtle attributeth to him, Col. 1. 16. For by him were all things created, that are in Heaven, &c.

XIII. In this Divine Panegyrick to the Colloſſians there are ſeveral other Indications, that this Creatorſhip (which is part of it) is not meant of the old but of the new Creation. Which Indications have been obſerv'd by ſeveral Divines, that are Scholaſtick Trinitarians, who therefore have interpreted the word Creature and Creation in this Panegyrick, not to reſpect the old Creation. The words immediately foregoing our Saviour's Creatorſhip (the firſt-born of every Creature, are interpreted by (b) S. Chryſoſtom and many others as meant of the new Creation. A Divine of our own Nation ſaith, (c) In the new Creation Chriſt was the Image of the inviſible God, the firſt-born of every Creature, having the pre-eminence in all things, and he is before all things and by him all things conſiſt, Col. 1. 15, 17, 18. In the raiſing of the whole Creation which is by a new and ſpiritual Life and Holineſs communicated unto all the parts of it, the Work is carry'd on immediately by the Perſon of Chriſt the Mediator.——— Chriſt is the Head, the Beginning or Idea of the new Creation; the firſt-born of every Creature: whatever God deſigneth to us therein, he firſt exemplify'd in Chriſt Jeſus. Another Divine of our own interpreteth the Apoſtle's words touching the Creation of Angels, to ſignifie their Ordination or Political Creation. For of the Text, *Col.*1.15. Who is the Image of the inviſible God, the firſt-born of every Creature; he ſaith, (d) which ſurely may not be incommodiouſly expounded, The Prince of the whole Hierarchy, or the Prince of the whole Ordination or Creation taken politically. For κτίσις ſo ſignifieth, 1 Pet. 2. 13. Submit your ſelves to every κτίσις, Ordinance of Man, whether it be to the King as ſupreme, or unto Governours. And there is nothing more uſual in Latin than the Phraſe of creating Magiſtrates. He is rightly called the Prince of the Political Creation, both becauſe he is the firſt-begotten in reſpect of God the Father, (z) *Davenant in Col.*1.17.

(a) S. Cyr. Com. in Joann. p. 388.

(b) T. 8. p. 145.

(c) Owen πνευματολ. *p.*452, 492, 493.

(d) Quod certè non incommodè exponi poteſt, princeps totius Hierarchiæ, vel princeps totius ordinationis vel creationis politicè ſumptæ. nam κτίσις ſic ſignificat, 1 Pet.2.13. ὑποτάγητε οὖν πάσῃ ἀνθρωπίνῃ κτίσει, εἴτε βασιλεῖ ὡς ὑπερέχοντι, εἴτε ἡγεμόσιν. Eſtque nihil magis tritum apud Latinos quàm phraſis creandi magiſtratus. rectè autem dicitur princeps creationis politicæ, tùm quòd ipſe ſit πρωτότοκος, reſpectu Dei patris, qui hoc regnum huic primùm commiſit, omne dans illi judicium ac poteſtatem in cælo atque terra; tùm quòd iſte poſteà omnes ſub ſe magiſtratus creaverit. Nam per eum creata vel ordinata ſunt omnia quæ in cælis ſunt & quæ in terra, viſibilia & inviſi-

Father, who firſt committed this Kingdom to him, giving him all Judgment and Power in Heaven and Earth; and alſo becauſe afterwards he created all Magiſtrates under him. For by him were created or ordinated all things that are in Heaven and that are in Earth, viſible and inviſible, whether they be Thrones or Dominions, or Principalities or Powers. If this place of the Apoſtle to the Coloſſians is plainly meant of the old Creation, it is marvellous, that Scholaſtic Trinitarians ſhould recede from that Interpretation. Would they recede from it, did they not diſcern Improbabilities in it, and plain Indications of another Senſe? Such a plain Indication is this obvious obſervation, that the holy Writers of the New Teſtament aſcribe Creation to the Son of God in thoſe Diſcourſes, wherein they are celebrating ſuch Creature-tranſcendencies, that belong to him as he is (God-man) the Humane Divine Perſon of Chriſt Jeſus. As in this place to the Coloſſians, ch. 1. 16. (e) Quæ præcedunt, oſtendunt hic de Chriſto agi, quod hominis eſt nomen, what goeth before ſheweth, that the Apoſtle ſpeaketh of the Perſon of Chriſt, which Name denoteth an Humane Nature. If the foregoing and ſubſequent words are meant of the new Creation, this muſt be the ſubject-matter which the Apoſtle is treating of, and conſequently Chriſt's Creatorſhip (here ſpoken of) muſt be interpreted of the new Creation. And this we may infer from the great affinity and paralleliſm that is obſerved between the Epiſtle to the Epheſians and this to the Coloſſians (Grotius obſerveth, that the Apoſtle wrote his Epiſtle to the Coloſſians, cùm adhuc quæ ad Epheſios ſcripſerat, in animo hærerent;) for as the Apoſtle to the Epheſians, ch. 1. 20,—23. deſcribing our Saviour's exaltation to his Godhead of Eſtate inſiſteth upon theſe two Branches of it; his univerſal imperial Potentacy (all things being put under his Feet) and his imperial Headſhip over the Church which is his Body, the fulneſs of him that filleth all in all: So in this Epiſtle to the Coloſſians deſcribing our Saviour's Divinity and Godhead of Eſtate, he inſiſteth upon theſe two Branches of his Sublimity; the one is, that all things were created by him, and he is before all things, which ſpeaketh his univerſal imperial Potentacy; the other is his imperial Headſhip over the Church and his having all-fulneſs. As theſe two Epiſtles to the Epheſians and Coloſſians are of great reſemblance and affinity: So there is ſuch reſemblance and affinity between theſe two places of theſe two Epiſtles (in the Subject-matter, their Notions and Expreſſions) that they ought to be look'd upon as parallel places, and the one ought to be interpreted by the other. To the Epheſians the Apoſtle repreſenteth the Univerſe of (Rational) Beings as ſubjected to the Meſſiah; every Name that is named, not only in this World, but alſo in that which is to come. To the Coloſſians the Apoſtle repreſenteth the Univerſe of (Rational) Beings as created by the Meſſiah; all things that are in Heaven and that are in Earth, viſible and inviſible. To the Epheſians the Apoſtle repreſenteth all Principality, and Power, and Might, and Dominion as ſubjected to the Meſſiah: To the Coloſſians he repreſenteth Thrones and Dominions, Principalities and Powers as created by the Meſſiah. Writing to the Epheſians he conſidereth Chriſt as The Imperial Son of the holy popular kind (the King Meſſiah, the Deity of the New Teſtament) when he repreſenteth all things as ſubjected to him: writing to the Coloſſians he conſidereth Chriſt as The Imperial Son, when he repreſenteth all things as created by him. For when he ſaith, that Thrones, Dominions, Principalities and Powers were created by Chriſt, he hath plainly reſpect to Empire and Dominion (his words ſound Empire and Dominion;) therefore he conſidereth him as The Imperial Son, the Deity of the New Teſtament. The ſame Inference may be drawn from the contexture of theſe words to the Hebrews, ch. 1. 2. Whom he hath appointed Heir of all things, by whom alſo he made the Worlds. For in theſe words the Divine Author conjoyneth our Saviour's Creatorſhip (his making the Worlds) with this other Creature-tranſcendence, The appointed Heir of all things, which is the ſame with The Imperial Son. Therefore in attributing to him the making the Worlds he conſidereth him as the Meſſiah, the Deity of the New Teſtament. Moreover, God's making the Worlds by his Son is a thing connex'd with the appointing him Heir of all things (Lord of all things:) but the old Creation hath no connexion at all with the appointing him Heir of all things; therefore the making the Worlds here ſpoken of muſt not be underſtood of the old Creation by the Abſtract Son or Logos; of whom it would be abſurd to ſay, that in the old Creation he was the Almighty Creator of all the Angelical Powers, and God hath exalted him above them; who is neither Son, nor Imperial Son of the holy popular kind, nor ever was, nor ever will be an Imperial Eſtate of Sanctity Imperial; and therefore all things were not created for him, as Religion requireth, and as they are for Chriſt, Col. 1. 16. To Chriſt the Apoſtle attributeth a Creation which is connex'd with the beginning that he ſpeaketh of: but it is not reaſonable to ſuppoſe, that he attributeth to Chriſt a Creation that was done and paſt ſeveral thouſand Years before this beginning. Nor is our Saviour ever ſaid in Scripture, to have created Heaven and Earth and the Sea, which are the Phraſes, that the Scripture always uſeth, to expreſs the old Creation, to the Coloſſians the Apoſtle ſaith only, that all things that are in Heaven and that are in Earth, were created by him. This the followers of Socinus obſerve and urge, and it is a material Obſervation, how much ſoever ſome contemn it.

XIV. But although this illuſtrious Text to the Coloſſians muſt be interpreted of the new Creation, yet not in the uſual Notion of it. For ſuch an Interpretation would be liable to theſe Objections. (1.) All viſible things, the things that are in Earth, cannot be ſaid, to be new created; for the greateſt part of Mankind (the Unregenerate) are not new made. (2.) All the inviſible things, the things that are in Heaven (the ſeveral Orders of Angels) were never new created to Righteouſneſs and true Holineſs, nor have they any need of it. (3.) In the new Creation by Chriſt all things are not made for him; for he is a Mediator for God, to reduce Mankind to their Obedience and Subjection to him, and when he hath accompliſh'd his work of Mediation and deſtroy'd all Enemies, he ſhall deliver up his Kingdom to his Father. But this Objection proceedeth upon a miſtake, that Chriſt is a meer officiary Mediator, whereas he is the Mediatory Sovereign, and ſuch a Mediator that is the Imperial Lord the Son and an Imperial Eſtate of Religion. All things therefore were created for him as the final cauſe (although bilia, ſive throni, ſive imperia, ſive poteſtates. Dr. H. More op. Philoſoph. Vol. 1. p. 513.

(e) Grot. Not. in Col. 1. 16.

though not as the ultimate final cauſe) as his Religion, Chriſtianity and Godlineſs requireth. But this cannot be ſaid of a Scholaſtic Abſtract Son, and therefore the Objection may be retorted upon the Objectors. The two firſt Objections are Impertinencies, as will appear by diſtinguiſhing the ambiguity of the word creating. For all the things that are in Heaven and in Earth, viſible and inviſible (the Univerſe of Rationals) are not ſuppos'd, to be ſo created by Chriſt, as to be in the uſual ſenſe his Creation (or new Creation) as the regenerate Chriſtian Church is: but whether they be Thrones, or Dominions, or Principalities, or Powers, they were created by him as to his right and ſtate of Empire and Dominion over them (ſo far they were of his creating) and this is manifeſtly the Apoſtle's Senſe, which Senſe will be clearly underſtood by theſe following orderly Notices of our Saviour's Creatorſhip.

(1.) When the holy Writers of the New Teſtament ſpeak of our Saviour's creating the Univerſe, they have reſpect to a new making or creating it, and they affirm, that it was his doing. As when the Apoſtle ſaith of God, who created all things by Jeſus Chriſt, he hath reſpect to that creating all things, which belongeth to the new Teſtament and the Deity thereof: ſo when the holy Writers ſpeak of Chriſt's creating the Univerſe, they have reſpect to a new making or creating it, that which belongeth to the New Teſtament. And they affirm, that this was his doing; which is to ſay, that the Univerſe was made by him as to the New Teſtaments making or creating it. They ſay therefore, the Univerſe was created by him as being of new and Chriſtian creating, and as it is of new and Chriſtian creating. It is created and made by him, ſo as to be a new and Chriſtiano-conſtituted Univerſe, and as it is ſuch a conſtituted Univerſe. Which is to ſay, It is created by him as to the Theopoliticals, the Chriſt-imperials or Chriſtian Imperials.

(2.) It doth not belong to an Evangelical Imperial Son, to create the World's Phyſiologicals (ſuch as the Land and Water-animals) theſe things are alien from his Character: but it belongeth to an Evangelical Imperial Son, to be Fundator imperii, the founder and maker of his Empire, which is the new Kingdom of God and the new Creation (uſually ſo called) a Theo-polity and Chriſto-polity. Which Divine Polity (like other Polities) is founded upon a ſettlement of rights and dues, and this ſettlement of rights and dues is the Chriſtian Religion, which was made by Chriſt (or which God made in and by Chriſt) who is Fundator Eccleſiæ, Opifex Domûs, Architectus Domûs, the Founder of the Church Catholic, the Maker and Architect of his Houſe, Heb. 3. 3, 6. which is not ſo to be underſtood, as if he was only The maker of the Catholic Church on Earth (which is but an handful of People in compariſon:) but he is the maker of the great Catholic Church (that above as well as that below) which is commenſurate with Chriſtianity Imperial and the new Kingdom of God. For Chriſt is the maker of the Catholic Church on Earth by making the Chriſtian Religion, which is the Settlement, Law and Religion, not only of the Catholic Church on Earth, but it is actually the Religion of the whole Kingdom of God, which is one Kingdom and Empire, one new Kingdom and Empire. It was deſign'd to be ſuch a Kingdom, when our Saviour made the Chriſtian Religion, which was not properly made for the Holy Angels, but for this World of Sinners; yet in the making this Religion it was deſign'd, to be the Religion of the Holy Angels (although not in all reſpects) and the new Kingdom of God upon Earth was made with deſign, that the Holy Angels ſhould be Subjects and Citizens thereof, Col. 1. 19, 20. Eph. 1. 10.

His Religion is jurally the Religion of the Univerſe as being the Religion of the Kingdom of God.

(3.) By making the Settlement of the Chriſtian Religion (which compriſeth the making a new Lord and a new Law) the Univerſe of capable Creatures became of right and by obligation (at leaſt by remote obligation) Chriſt's Subjects and Servants, his Imperial Potentacy became commenſurate with the extent of the Univerſe, as being both the Lord of the Church and the Lord of the World. So that thereby a new and Chriſtiano-conſtituted Univerſe did emerge into Exiſtence, which is of a twofold nature, and muſt be conſider'd as it is the Intrinſic and the Extrinſic. The new and Chriſtiano-conſtituted Univerſe as it is the Intrinſic, is the Catholic or Chriſtian Church (the new Kingdom of God:) The new and Chriſtiano-conſtituted Univerſe as it is the Extrinſic, is the World without the Church, which is therefore a new and Chriſtiano-conſtituted Univerſe Extrinſic, becauſe Chriſt is an Extrinſic Imperial Head thereof. The former of theſe is the New and Chriſtian kind of Creation, and therefore fitly called The new Creation: The latter of them is not fully of kind and quality ſuch a Creation, nor may it be called The new Creation without due diſtinction of Senſe; but a new Creation it is, as being of Chriſt's creating. The great diſtance between theſe two (The new and Chriſtiano-conſtituted Univerſe as it is the Intrinſic and the Extrinſic) doth not hinder a very cloſe connexion between them. For if the new Kingdom of God is made, Chriſt (who is the intrinſic Imperial Eſtate of it) is neceſſarily an Imperial Potentate over all the World. There is alſo a connexion between the creating the whole and the parts. For the Worlds as they are the new and Chriſtiano-conſtituted Univerſe, were of Chriſt's making. All things that are in Heaven and that are in Earth, as they are the new and Chriſtiano-conſtituted Univerſe, were of his creating. And this World and all capable Beings are of his creating, as they are parts of the new and Chriſtiano-conſtituted Univerſe, and ſo as to be parts thereof.

(4.) All things are conſtituted under Chriſt (and it is his doing, that they are ſo conſtituted) both as to his right and eſtate of Empire and Dominion over them. For they are jurally unto him (as Creatures are defined) the Subject-ſervient Party; and they are ſtated as Underlings to him, who is of Creature-tranſcendent Imperial Eſtate. Conſider'd therefore as to their Theopoliticals (or Chriſt-imperials) both of right and ſtate, or as they are to him pars ſubdita, both of right and in ſtate, they are of his creating. And their Creation muſt be denominated, not a Phyſiological, but a Theopolitical (or Chriſtopolitical) Creation. Of this nature is that Creation which the Apoſtle ſpeaketh of in his Panegyric to the Coloſſians; it is the new Creation underſtood, not in the uſual and ſtricter, but in the larger Senſe.

XV. Of the ſame nature is that Creation which the Divine Author to the Hebrews attributeth to the Son of God, by whom he made the Worlds, Heb. 1. 2. For the Worlds in this Divine Author may reaſonably be thought of the ſame ſignification with all things in Heaven and in Earth ſpoken of by the Apoſtle in his Panegyrick; and conſequently this Divine Author by making the Worlds meaneth no other than a Creation in reſpect of Theopoliticals. But againſt this Interpretation it is objected, that the Divine Author in this place (δι' οὗ καὶ τοὺς αἰῶνας ἐποίησεν, by whom alſo he made the Worlds) uſeth the ſame Phraſe as in that other place of his Epiſtle, Heb. 11. 3. Πίςει νοοῦμεν κατηρτίσθαι τοὺς αἰῶνας ῥήματι Θεοῦ, through Faith we underſtand, that the Worlds were framed by the Word of God; from whence it is inferr'd, that theſe two places ſpeak of one and the ſame Creation. But this Inference is not at all well grounded; for the diſagreement between theſe two places is far greater than the agreement. Both of them ſpeak of a Creation of the Univerſe, and in both of them the Divine Author uſeth τοὺς αἰῶνας, to ſignifie the Univerſe, and this is all the agreement that is between them. But in the one of them, Heb. 11. 3. the Divine Author ſpeaketh of a Creation, which he receiv'd by Divine Revelation: In the other, Heb. 1 2. he ſpeaketh of a Creation, which he only teacheth as a Divine Revelation. In the one of them he ſpeaketh of a Creation, which he receiv'd by a Faith in the Old Teſtament; in the other he ſpeaketh of a Creation, which he pretendeth not to have receiv'd by any ſuch Faith, but only teacheth it as a Propoſition of the New Teſtament. In the one he ſpeaketh of a Creation by the Imperial Son of God; in the other he ſpeaketh of a Creation, which he attributeth not at all to the Son of God, but wholly and only to the omnipotent Command of God.

But there is another and a grand Objection againſt our Interpretation of this Divine Author. (f) For ſhewing that greater things have been ſpoken of him than ever were attributed to any of the Angels, amongſt the reſt he ſaith; The Scripture ſpake unto the Son, Thy Throne, O God, is for ever and ever. And not only ſo, but alſo, Thou Lord in the beginning haſt laid the Foundation of the Earth, and the Heavens are the Work of thine Hands. They ſhall periſh, but thou remaineſt, and they all ſhall wax old as doth a garment. And as a Veſture ſhalt thou fold them up, and they ſhall be changed: But thou art the ſame, and thy Years ſhall not fail. Whoſoever the Perſon be, to whom theſe words were ſpoken, it cannot be denied but that he was the Creator of the World. But theſe Words were ſpoken to the Son of God as the Apoſtle himſelf acknowledgeth, and it appeareth out of the Order and Series of the Chapter, the deſign of which is to declare the ſupereminent excellency of our Saviour Chriſt. Nay the Conjunction And, referreth this place of the Pſalmiſt plainly to the former, of which he had ſaid expreſly, unto the Son he ſaith. As ſure then as thy Throne, O God, is for ever and ever, was ſaid unto the Son; ſo certain it is, Thou Lord haſt laid the Foundation of the Earth, was ſaid unto the ſame. This is the Objection (repreſented in its full ſtrength) which I will clearly aſſoil, having premiſ'd this Obſervation; that theſe Texts of the Pſalmiſt cited by the Divine Author and mention'd in the Objection, are devotional Sayings, Attributions or Doxologies, and that the Objection rightly connecteth them together; for the latter of them (though not in words, yet) in ſenſe is the ſame with the former. Thou Lord in the beginning haſt laid the Foundation of the Earth, and the Heavens are the Work of thine Hands. They ſhall periſh, but thou remaineſt, and they all ſhall wax old as doth a Garment, and as a Veſture ſhalt thou fold them up, and they ſhall be changed: But thou art the ſame, and thy Years ſhall not fail. Which is as much as to ſay, Thy Throne, O God, is for ever and ever (which is the ſummary of this long devotional Attribution) and this is the Divine Attribute, which the Divine Author inſiſteth and dwelleth upon. Which Divine Attribute and others of like Nature ought to be underſtood and conſider'd, not as primarily and in the firſt place the Attributions of the Son of God, but as primarily the Attributions of God (his Doxologies) and as communicated to the Son. Let us ſuppoſe, that the Text of this Divine Author ran in this form of Words, But unto the Son he ſaith, the Lord killeth and maketh alive: We muſt ſuppoſe, that this Attribute (the Lord killeth and maketh alive) is underſtood and conſider'd by this Divine Author as primarily an Attribution of God (and a Doxology belonging to him) and communicated to the Son, and that this Communication of it is meant by this Divine Author's Expreſſion, But unto the Son he ſaith. So this Divine Attribute Thy Throne, O God, is for ever and ever, is underſtood and conſider'd by this Divine Author as primarily an Attribution of God, one of his Doxologies, and communicated to the Son (for to whomſoever theſe words are ſpoken, they are a Divine Attribute communicated to him) and this Communication of it is ſignified by this Expreſſion, But unto the Son he ſaith. In like manner the latter Text of the Pſalmiſt, as it is cited by this Divine Author, muſt be expounded; Thou Lord in the beginniug haſt laid the Foundation of the Earth, and the Heavens are the Work of thine Hands: They ſhall periſh, but thou remaineſt. This is primarily and in the firſt place an Attribution, not of Chriſt, but of God; for it cannot be pretended, that in the proper literal ſenſe of his words the Pſalmiſt ſpeaketh of Chriſt; they that expound this Pſalm or any part of it, to be meant of Chriſt, expound it in a myſtical Senſe, which is quite remote from the buſineſs in hand. For this Divine Author taketh the Pſalmiſt's Words in the proper literal Senſe, and therefore underſtandeth and conſidereth them as primarily an Attribution of God, and one of his Doxologies. So they are in the Pſalmiſt (plainly and undeniably) and ſo they are in this Divine Author, who muſt not be ſuppos'd, to pervert plain Scripture to an alien Senſe. But this Attribution of God, as it is one Divine Attribute, a communicable Attribute, and in Senſe the ſame with that before cited, Thy Throne, O God, is for ever and ever, he looketh upon as communicated to the Son of God, and therefore by the Particle And he connecteth theſe two Texts of the Pſalmiſt. His Senſe is; the Pſalmiſt communicateth to the Son this Attribution of God, Thy Throne, O God, is for ever and ever; and in ſo doing (virtually and implicitly) the Pſalmiſt communicateth to the Son this Attribution of God, as it is in Senſe the ſame with the former; Thou Lord in the beginning haſt laid the Foundation of the Earth, and the Heavens are the Work of thine Hands. They ſhall periſh, but thou remaineſt, and they ſhall wax old as doth a Garment. And as a Veſture ſhalt thou fold them up, and they ſhall be changed: But thou art the ſame and thy Years ſhall not fail. This Attribution of God the Pſalmiſt doth not communicate to the Son otherwiſe than as it is one Attribute in Senſe the ſame with the former (Thy Throne, O God, is for ever and ever;) nor doth this Divine Author otherwiſe communicate it; and conſequently it is not his intention, to communicate to the Son the Creatorſhip of Heaven and Earth. This is not the Attribute, that he inſiſteth upon, nor doth he cite the Pſalmiſt's words concerning it otherwiſe than as an Introduction to, and an illuſtration of the Attribute which he inſiſteth upon, and becauſe they are connex'd with it, and it ſo dependeth upon them, that it could not be cited without citing them alſo. In the immediately antecedent and ſubſequent Words (as is undeniably plain and evident) his only ſcope and intention is, to prove Chriſt in ſuch a ſtate of Exaltation which is Creature-tranſcendence; to which purpoſe the attributing unto him the Creatorſhip of Heaven and Earth is altogether impertinent. And it would be an extreme impertinence and impropriety, in this Author, to compare Chriſt with the Angels, to collect Arguments and Teſtimonies to prove his Precellency above them, if he look'd upon Chriſt as the Creator of Heaven and Earth, and did by plain Teſtimony of Scripture prove him ſo to be. Nor would it be a leſs impertinence and impropriety, to command the Angels to Worſhip Chriſt (when he was brought into the World) if he was their Creator in their old Creation; for could the Angels be ignorant of their Creator or of the Duties of Religious Worſhip which they owe to the Creator? Beſides, the Old Teſtament being only a Prophecy of the Son of God, it cannot be ſuppos'd to attribute the old Creation to him.

(f) Bp. Pearſon on the Creed Art. 2. p. 225, 226. Ed. 1.

The Objection that pretendeth to prove the contrary, is only a puzzling difficulty, no ſolid Proof. That we may clearly extricate our ſelves out of this difficulty, we ſay, that the Words (Thou Lord in the beginning haſt laid the Foundation of the Earth, and the Heavens are the Work of thine Hands) are and are not ſpoken to the Son of God, and that we deny the truth of this Propoſition, whatſoever the Perſon be, to whom theſe words were (in any ſenſe) ſpoken, he was the Creator of the World. For the words are not by the Pſalmiſt ſpoken to the Son attributively, but only deſcriptively, as deſcribing, and as part of the deſcription of a Divine Attribute of the Father prefigurative of the Son. They are ſpoken to the Father attributively (as attributing to him the old Creation) and deſcriptively as deſcribing his Immutability and Eternity, and as part of the deſcription of this his Divine Attribute, which is prefigurative of the Son. For (as we have ſeen before) that which is ſpoken of God in ſeveral Texts of the Old Teſtament, is apply'd to Chriſt in the New Teſtament. Which Texts of the Old Teſtament muſt be called prefigurative; for they ſpeak of God the Father primarily, and in the firſt place, but of the Son prefiguratively, ſo as to preſignifie and propheſie what the Son ſhould be, or do and ſuffer. This place of the Pſalmiſt is one of theſe prefigurative Texts. It attributeth to the Father immutability and eternity of duration prefiguratively of the ſtable and immutable duration of the Sons Throne and Kingdom. It attributeth therefore to the Son an immutable and ſtable duration of Throne and Kingdom as prefigur'd in this deſcription of the Father's immutability and eternity of duration. But it doth not attribute any thing to him as prefigured by the Father's laying the Foundation of the Earth and framing the Heavens in the beginning. Thoſe words are only part of the deſcription of the Father's immutability and eternity of duration, which is prefigurative of the Sons immutability and ſtability of Throne. They are not ſpoken therefore to the Son attributively, but only deſcriptively, as part of the deſcription of the Father's immutability and eternity of duration, which is prefigurative of the ſtable and immutable duration of his Throne. This is that God-eminence or Creature-tranſcendence which according to the Apoſtle is attributed to the Son in that Text of the Pſalmiſt, Thy Throne, O God, is for ever and ever. With which Text of the Pſalmiſt the Apoſtle by the Conjunction And connecteth this other (touching the immutability and eternity of God) as attributing to the Son the ſame God-eminence (or Creature-tranſcendence) an immutable and eternal duration of Throne; for this is here prefiguratively attributed to the Son of God. And thus the Senſe of this Divine Author (without any diſtortion of Scripture) is clearly explained.

CHAP. X.

1. Of the creative Logos in the Proem of S. John's Goſpel, that he is not a Scholaſtic Abſtract Logos, but God's Imperial Son as being the Word of the Chriſtian Religion. This proved from the Reaſon of his Name according to ſeveral ancient Writers. 2. According to ſeveral modern Divines. 3. From the New Teſtament. 4. From Chriſt's Evangely. 5. The Evangeliſt's Logos not any ſort of Abſtract Logos. Not the Platanic Logos. 6. Not the Stoical Logos. 7. Not the Targumic Logos. 8. Not the Old Teſtament's creative Logos. 9. Not the Logical Logos. 10. Not the uſual Scholaſtic Logos. 11. Of an Aprocryphal Logos. 12. Of the Attributes connex'd with the Evangeliſts Logos. Of the Notion of Life in general. 13. That it is the great and only concern of Men. 14. Of the Good that Life is. 15. Life the ſummum bonum. 16. Piety requireth, that Life be our great and only Concern. 17. Wiſdom requireth, that Life be our great and only Concern. 18. Our Saviour is called the Life as being the Gift and Benefit of Life eternal. 19. This proved from ſome of our Saviour's Diſcourſes. 20. With other places of Scripture. 21. The Senſe of this Name the Life argu'd. 22. Scholaſticiſm profaneth Life. 23. In like manner it perverteth the Light. 24. Maldònate's good Account of it. 25. The Light which Chriſt is illuſtrated. 26. Further illuſtrated. 27. A Conſectary from theſe Attributes the Life and Light.

1. THERE are other illuſtrious places of the New Teſtament, wherein our Saviour's Creatorſhip is celebrated; for as the Chriſtian Logos he is repreſented as creative, and a Creation is expreſly attributed to the Logos in the Proem of S. John's Goſpel, (g) which term Logos is of various ſignifications and may be rendred Word, Speech, the Reaſon or Cauſe we aſſign of any thing, the Eſſence or Definition of a thing, Supputation, Proportion, Notion, Reaſon (whereby we are Rational) Learnings alſo are called in Greek λόγοι, (h) and the learned Diſſertations of Epictetus collected by Arrianus (which were certain Diſcourſes of his at Home amongſt his own Domeſticks or thoſe that came to viſit him) are called Ἐπικτήτου λόγοι. So the Greek Writers of Hiſtory divide their Commentaries εἰς λόγους, into Diſſertations. A Diſſertation is a ſort of Speech, and Speech is that which Logos (i) properly and primarily ſignifieth, whence Eraſmus, Vatablus, Beza (and others) would have the Evangeliſt's Logos rather tranſlated Sermo than Verbum. Some tranſlate it ratio and others definitio, but (without ſcrupulouſly examining theſe different Verſions) the true rendring of it will clearly enough appear by conſidering the Perſon, to whom it is applied and whom it denoteth and ſignifieth. For all Expoſitors agree, that it is the Name of a Divine Perſon, and denoteth the Son of God, who is unqueſtionably the Word of the Goſpel (the Chriſtian Theology and Religion) and not a few of them agree, that the Name is given him upon this account. For although many of them aſſign other Reaſons, yet they ſuppoſe, that this is a principal Reaſon, why the Evangeliſt hath ſtiled the Son of God the Logos, becauſe he is the Word of the Chriſtian Theology, and the ancient Writers have diſcours'd touching the Reaſon of the Name very agreeably to this account of it. He is called the Logos, ſaith J. Mart. (k) Ἐπειδὴ τὰς παρὰ τοῦ πατρὸς ὁμιλίας φέρει τοῖς ἀνθρώποις, becauſe he bringeth the Speeches of the Father unto Men. Some reſemblance there is according to this Father, between the Son of God and Mercury the Son of Jupiter, whom he calleth (l) λόγον τὸν ἑρμηνευτικὸν ϗ πάντων διδάσκαλον, The interpretative Logos and the Teacher of all. Athanaſius diſcourſeth (m) that the Logos proceeding from the Father is rightly called ἑρμηνεὺς ϗ ἄγγελος, the Interpreter and Meſſenger of his Father. Epiphanius ſaith (n) He is called Logos ἐπειδὴ ἑρμηνεύς ἐστι τῶν τοῦ θεοῦ βουλημάτων, becauſe he is the Interpreter of the Counſels of God. (o) Verbum patris ideo dictum eſt, quia per ipſum innoteſcit pater, He is called the Word of the Father, becauſe the Father is made known by him, ſaith S. Auſtin. Διὰ τὸ συναφὲς ϗ τὸ ἐξαγγελτικὸν, becauſe he is in Conjunction with the Father, and becauſe of his declaring him, ſaith Gr. Naz. The Son may be call'd the Word or Speech (ſaith Origen) becauſe he maketh manifeſt the ſecret things of his Father. He is rightly called the Word, by whom the knowledge of the Father is made manifeſt, ſaith Rich. Victorinus. Quæ eſt doctrina patris niſi verbum patris? Ipſe ergo Chriſtus doctrina patris, ſi verbum patris. What is the Doctrine of the Father but the Word of the Father? Chriſt therefore is the Doctrine of the Father, if he is the Word of the Father, ſaith the Alex. Cyril. The ſame Author ſaith, that he is called the Angel of the great Counſel, becauſe he is the living Logos of God, the Interpreter of the Mind and Will of the Father. According to Theophylact the Son is called the Logos, becauſe he declareth his Father's arcana (p) quoniam ipſe eſt verbum, qui agnitionem patris facit, becauſe he is the Word, that cauſeth the knowledge of the Father, ſaith Irenæus. S. Chryſoſtom ſaith (q) the Son of God is called the Logos by the Evangeliſt, ἐπειδὴ τὰ τοῦ πατρὸς ἡμῖν ἔμελλεν ἀπαγγέλλειν, becauſe he was to declare to us the things of the Father. For all things (ſaith he) that I have heard of my Father, I have made known unto you. S. Chryſoſtom therefore conſidereth the Meſſiah in his Miſſionary Oeconomy, and ſuppoſeth him as ſuch, to be denominated the Logos of God. (r) Therefore he is called the Word, becauſe he revealeth the ſecrets of the Mind of God. (s) For if Speech proceedeth from Men, we think, that Mind is the Fountain of it, and attending to the Speech we diſcern the Mind ſignified thereby; how much more vividly and excellently beholding the Word do we form a Conception of his Father, as our Saviour himſelf ſaith, he that hath ſeen me, hath ſeen the Father? (t) He was the Word for this Reaſon, becauſe God would uſe his Voice to the People, becauſe he was to be the Maſter of the Doctrine of God and of bringing the heavenly ſecret unto Men, becauſe God did firſt ſpeak to him, that by him he might ſpeak to us, and he might reveal the Word and Will of God to us. With great Reaſon therefore he is called the Speech and Word of God. (u) The Word is he that hath τὴν ἐνδεικτικὴν ϗ παιδευτικὴν ἡγεμονίαν, the Chieftainſhip of ſhewing and teaching, of whom we learn frugality, not to be faſtuous, to love the true liberty, to love Mankind alſo and that which is good. Ταύτῃ οὖν ϗ σωτὴρ ὁ λόγος κέκληται, for this Reaſon the Name of the Word is given to our Saviour, ſaith Clemens. (w) The only begotten Son is ſent down from the boſom of the Father, λόγος τῆς πίστεως, the Word of Faith. (x) S. Peter in his Preachment νόμον ϗ λόγον τὸν κύριον προσεῖπεν, called our Lord the Law and Word; the Law as well as the Word of God, one that revealed God's whole Evangelical Will to us as a Law-giver. (y) Hujus indulgentiæ, gratiæ diſciplinæque arbiter & magiſter, Sermo & filius Dei mittitur. Of this Indulgence Grace and Diſcipline the Maſter and Diſpoſer the Word and Son of God is ſent who as ſuch is (z) λόγος σωτήριος the Word of Salvation, as Origen ſpeaketh, who alſo calleth our Saviour (a) the Doctor of Theology.

(t) Verbum, ea ſcilicet ratione, quia voce ejus ad populum fuerat uſurus, quod ille magiſter futurus eſſet doctrinæ Dei, & cæleſtis arcani ad homines perferendi, quod ad ipſum primò locutus eſt, ut per eum ipſe ad nos loqueretur, & ille vocem Dei ac voluntatem nobis revelarit. Meritò igitur Sermo & Verbum Dei dicitur. Lactant. l. 4. c. 8.

(g) Petav. de Trin. l. 6. c. 1.

(h) Salmaſ. in Epict. p. 237.

(i) Ibid. p. 181.

(k) Dial. cum Tryph. p. 358.

(l) Apol. 2. p. 67.

(m) Or. c. Gent. p. 34. Com.

(n) Hær. 73.

(o) Petav. ſupr. l. 6. c. 3. S. 1, 2. & c. 5. S. 7. & l. 3. c. 3. S. 18.

(p) Iren. l. 4. c. 14.

(q) In Joann. Hom. 2.

(r) Orig. Peri Archon. l. 1. c. 2.

(s) Athanaſ. ſupra.

(u) Clem. Pædag. l. 1. c. 12.

(w) Ibid. c. 3.

(x) Idem p. 579. Dr. Hammond on Pſal. 2.

(y) S. Cypr. de Idol. Van.

(z) Orig. c. Celſ. l. 2. p. 83.

(a) C. Celſ. p. 157.

II. Modern Divines and Expoſitors generally agree, that the Son of God is called the Logos, becauſe he is the Word of the Goſpel. (b) The Nature of a Word is to expreſs or repreſent the Mind of the Speaker. (c) That may be called the Word of any one (quod eſt manifeſtativum ejus) which maketh him manifeſt. (d) Verbo æternus pater ſecretiora mentis ſuæ arcana revelat. By his Word the eternal Father revealeth the ſecrets of his Mind. (e) The Son of God is intituled Logos, not only becauſe he is born by Cogitation, but alſo (quia eſt perſona proferens Evangelium ex ſinu æterni patris) becauſe he is a Perſon that bringeth the Goſpel out of the Boſom of the eternal Father. (f) As a Man maketh himſelf known to others by his Word, ſo is the Father by Chriſt revealed to the World. —— And that we may expound Scripture by Scripture, methinketh that of the Author to the Hebrews is a Comment upon this Title, when he ſaith, God in theſe laſt days hath ſpoken to us by his Son, who therefore is his Word. (g) Chriſt is called the Word in reference to the Word uttering, becauſe he is the Interpreter of his Father's Will, and declareth his Father's Mind to the Sons of Men. So λόγος is ſometimes beſt tranſlated an Interpreter, as in this Saying of Philo. (h) Μωσῆς

μὲν

(b) Mr. Lawſon The polit. p. 2.

(c) Aquin. 1. Qu. 34. Art. 2.

(d) Gonet. Clyp. T. 5. p. 511.

(e) Melanthon. Exam. Theol. p. 178.

(f) Mr. Hardy Lect. on 1 Joh. 1. p. 40, 41.

(g) Dr. Arrowſmith θεανθρ. p. 19.

(h) Op. ſc. p. 64.

μὲν ἐστι νοῦς ὁ καθαρώτατος, Ἀαρὼν δὲ λόγος αὐτοῦ, Moſes is a moſt pure Mind, and Aaron his Logos or Interpreter. Accordingly Eugubinus (notwithſtanding his Humour of extravagant Philoſophic-paganizing) thus expoundeth the Evangeliſt's Logos or Verbum. (i) The Name Logos ſignifieth not, as I ſuppoſe, a ſpiritual Nativity by a Cogitation, but a Speaker and Interpreter. The Word of God is as it were the Speech of God, and the Hebrews uſe the denominations inſtead of the denominated; as a Saviour they call Salvation, and a Redeemer Redemption. (k) From the holy place in the Tabernacle God declared his Mind and Will. From thence God gave out to Moſes his λόγια, ſuch words of Direction and Command as were neceſſary for the good Government of his People. This was a great Favour; but in Chriſt God revealed his Mind more clearly and abundantly, and told ſuch things as never came from the former Holy Place. He was the λόγος, in this reſpect, becauſe he acquainteth us with the ſacred Will of God, and uttereth things ſecret from the Foundation of the World. He was not only the Interpreter of God's Mind, as the Prophets were, but the immediate Interpreter, as the word which we ſpeak, is of ours. For he was in the Boſom of the Father; he knew his Father's Mind, not by the Mediation of Angels, or Viſions or Dreams, but by a more intimate diſcovery of God's Counſels to him, as a Perſon that was one with him. — The Article ὁ λόγος, ſheweth, that the Title belongeth to him particularly and eminently; he hath declared moſt perfectly the Mind and Will of God to us. (l) Chriſt is called ὁ λόγος, Joh. 1. becauſe he doth reveal and make known the Will of God to us. Beza inclineth to think, that the Son of God is called the Logos by the Evangeliſt, becauſe he is the ſole Interpreter of his Father's Mind. Zegerus ſaith, The Son of God is therefore called the Word, becauſe by him God the Father ſpake forth his Divine Will to us. Qui arcanum Dei conſilium de noſtra ſalute nobis expoſuit, ſaith Piſcator. Gomarus muſt be reckon'd one of this Sentiment; and the Jeſuit Maldonate liketh their Opinion, who ſuppoſe, that the Word is ſo called, becauſe he is the Interpreter of his Father's Mind and Will, as our vocal Word is the Interpreter of our Mind and Will. He citeth Origen, Clemens Alex. Epiphanius, Chryſoſtom, Baſil, Gr. Naz. Theophylact and Euthymius as of this Opinion; to which we may add (m) the Dort-interpreters; and Camero ſaith, ſententia quidem non eſt incommoda, it is an Opinion, not to be diſlik'd. Some Expoſitors (as Druſius) to illuſtrate the Evangeliſt's Logos, alledge the Alcoran, which ſtileth our Saviour כלמה אללה The Word of God. It acknowledgeth him alſo, to be God's Embaſſador, and the Goſpel to be the Word of God. So that it ſeemeth, that Muhammed ſtiled our Saviour The Word of God with reſpect to his Goſpel: (n) But the Commentators upon the Alcoran will have him ſo called, becauſe he was born without a Father meerly by the Word and Command of God.

III. If in theſe numerous Sayings there is a good Sence and diſcernment of things, it muſt be ſuppos'd, that the Evangeliſt's Logos is not an Abſtract Logos, but an Humane-divine Perſon; for theſe Sayings import, that the Logos is the Son of God under this formal Conſideration, as being the Word of the Goſpel. Which is to ſay, that the Logos is the Son of God, not conſider'd in his primary, but in his officiary Capacity as the Chriſt.. The Son of God conſider'd in his primary Capacity (being the Imperial Son) is according to his true Idea an Humane-divine Perſon, how much more muſt we ſuppoſe him to be ſuch conſider'd in his officiary Capacity as the Chriſt, who is manifeſtly a complex Perſon? The Evangeliſt's Logos is the Word of the Goſpel conſider'd as ſuch; and the Word of the Goſpel conſider'd as ſuch is no other than the Chriſt of God, who cannot be ſuppos'd, to be an Abſtract Logos. A Scholaſtic Abſtract Logos is not ſuch a kind of Logos as the Word of the Goſpel (conſider'd as ſuch) he is not a God-kind or a Saint of God-kind of Logos as the Logos of God neceſſarily is: The Evangeliſt's Logos therefore is not any Scholaſtic Abſtract Logos. Of this we may have greater Aſſurance from ſeveral diſtinct Conſiderations of this Name the Logos. For,

(1.) The Logos of God cannot (conſiſtently with common Reaſon and Sence of Religion) be counted an unholy Philoſophical Name, but it muſt be conſider'd as a Biblical or Scriptural Name; and not only ſo, but it muſt be conſider'd as the ſame Name with that of the Bible, which is uſually called the Word, the Word of God. Apoc. 19. 13. And if we ask, what it is, that the Holy Writers call the Word, and the Word of God, it muſt be anſwer'd, that it is the Word of ſupernatural Revelation (the Oracles of God) the divine Doctrine, the holy People's Word, the Word of their Religion. The Evangeliſt's Logos therefore is the Word of ſupernatural Revelation, and of divine Doctrine, the holy People's holy Word, the Word of our Religion. Which in the perſonal Acceptation is not any Abſtract Logos, but conſider'd as ſuch is eſſentially the Perſon of the Lord Chriſt. For if the Word ſpoken by Angels was ſtedfaſt, and every Tranſgreſſion receiv'd a juſt Recompence of Reward; how ſhall we eſcape, if we neglect ſo great Salvation, which at the firſt began to be ſpoken by the Lord? Heb. 2. 2, 3. As the Word ſignifieth Doctrine in Scripture; ſo in Origen's Phraſeology. * Antichriſtus falſus eſt Sermo, falſum Verbum, Verbum mendax. Videamus nè quis nos ſeducat vel Sermo vel virtus. Seducuntur à falſis intellectibus & Verbis venientibus in nomine Chriſti, qui eſt Verbum & Veritas. Chriſt is the Word and Truth in the ſame Senſe, that Antichriſt is a Lying Word.

(2.) The Logos of God (θεοῦ λόγος,) is the ſame with Theology. And as that which the holy Writers and the holy People call the Word and the Word of God is Theology (the Word which is their Theology:) So he whom the Evangeliſt calleth the Word and the Word of God is Theology (the Word which is the Chriſtians Theology) and the Evangeliſt uſeth λόγος, (Sermo) in ſuch a Senſe, as the Arabians uſe (o) Alcalam (Sermo) whereby they ſignifie Theology. But the term Theology is ambiguous; for uſually the Greek Fathers mean by it Theology in the ſenſe of honourary Divinity. (p) As θεολογεῖν τὸν λόγον, θεολογεῖν τὸν υἱὸν τοῦ θεοῦ, θεολογεῖν τὸν Χριστὸν, is, to Theologize concerning the Logos, Chriſt or the Son of God, in the ſenſe of honourary Divinity; and to ſpeak of Chriſt κατὰ θεολογίαν, according to Theology, they contradiſtinguiſh to the ſpeaking of him κατ' οἰκονομίαν, according to his

(i) Dicitur Verbum ſive locutio, quaſi locutor & interpres Dei. —— Eſt enim Verbum Dei quaſi locutio ejus & Sermo, Miſſio, Interpres, Legatus. Et ſolet Hebraiſmus pro denominatis abuti denominationibus, ut ſervatorem appellant ſalutem, & redemptorem redemptionem. —— Λόγος rectiùs vertitur Sermo, locutio, quàm Verbum. Sonat enim id nomen locutorem, internuntium, non nativitatem, ut reor, ſpiritualem. De Per. Philoſ l. 1. c. 23, 26.

(k) Bp. Patrick Witneſſ. Par. 2. p. 177, 87.

(l) Burgeſs Vind. Leg. Lect. 8. p. 80. Ed. 1.

(m) Curcell. diſſ. de voc. Trin. n. 24.

(n) Hotting. Hiſt. or. p. 105. Ed. 1.

* Tract. 27. & 29. in Matth.

(o) Pocock. Spec. p. 195, 198.

(p) Heinſ. Ariſt. Sac. p. 273, 274. Petav. T. 1. Proleg. c. 1.

his humanity or œconomy in the Fleſh. So they ſay of God, that amongſt the Hebrews alone ἐθεολογεῖτο, he was accounted God; and of Chriſt ἄνω θεολογεῖται, above he is accounted God. And hence it is that our Evangeliſt had the Name of θεόλογος (the Divine) becauſe at a greater rate than the other Evangeliſts he inſiſteth upon and illuſtrateth the Divinity of our Saviour, who is the Object of Theology in the Senſe of honourary Divinity. But no Logos either is or ever was the Object of Theology in the Senſe of honourary Divinity, ſave only the Perſon of Chriſt Jeſus. There is neither Precept nor Example in Nature or Scripture for the religious honouring or worſhipping any Abſtract Logos. No Logos but the Perſon of Chriſt Jeſus is according to Religion, to be loved, ador'd and celebrated; therefore our Evangeliſt's Logos is (not an Abſtract Logos, but) the Perſon of Chriſt Jeſus. Who is called by Ignatius θεοῦ γνῶσις, which is the ſame with θεογνωσία (the Title of one of Gr. Nyſſen's Books) or Theology. This the Evangeliſt's Logos is unto us (Theology both inſtitutive and conſtitutive) the Evangeliſt in drawing his Pourtraiture and repreſenting his Idea conſidereth him as of the regenerate Chriſtian's Family and as Author of the regenerate Chriſtians Religion and Theology of Life and Light; therefore he conſidereth not his Logos as Abſtract, but as the Perſon of Chriſt Jeſus.

(3.) The Name Logos in the Evangeliſt is anſwerable to one of the Jews Names of the Old Teſtament, which is הדבור ὁ λόγος, the Word, (q) and ſo in the New Teſtament the Goſpel is uſually called the Word, as we uſually read of preaching the Word, receiving the Word, doing the Word; and of thoſe that obey not the Word, ſtumble at the Word; of the Miniſtry of the Word, the Word of Chriſt, the Word of the Truth of the Goſpel. The Goſpel is the Word in a Doctrinal Acceptation, and Chriſt as connoting and conſignifying his Goſpel is the Word in a Perſonal Acceptation. Chriſt and the Goſpel (ἡ τοῦ Ἰησοῦ διδασκαλία, (r) the Diſcipline of Jeſus) are inſeparably connex'd, and are ſo much the ſame, that they are not only called by one common Name The Word, but this one common Name in ſome places of the New Teſtament may be expounded indifferently either of Chriſt or the Goſpel. For as connoting his Goſpel he is the Word of Grace, the Word of Life, the Word of Salvation, (s) by which Names the Goſpel is called. But the Word of Grace, Act. 20. 32. is by ſome expounded, to be meant of Chriſt, and others expound it of the Goſpel. S. Luke ſpeaketh of the Eye-witneſſes and Miniſters of the Word, and the Word which he ſpeaketh of, is by ſome expounded of Chriſt and others expound it of the Goſpel. Touching the Word of Life, Phil. 2. 16. Calvin ſaith; It may be expounded two ways, either of Chriſt or of the Goſpel. So (t) ὁ τῶν χριστιανῶν λόγος, the Word of the Chriſtians; μαθόντες ἀπὸ τοῦ θείου λόγου, thoſe that have learned from the Divine Word; ὑποτάξας ἑαυτὸν μόνῳ τῷ θεῷ καὶ τῷ λόγῳ αὐτοῦ, he that ſubjecteth himſelf to God alone and to his Word; οὐδὲ τοῦτον ἐπιτρέπει ἡμῖν ὁ τοῦ θεοῦ λόγος, the Word of God doth not permit us ſo much; all theſe Expreſſions may be underſtood either of Chriſt or the Goſpel. Conſidering therefore the ſignification of ὁ λόγος in the New Teſtament, and alſo the connexion and identity between the Doctrinal and the Perſonal Logos, it is not imaginable, that ὁ λόγος ſtanding in the front of the New Teſtament is of a ſignification altogether alien from the ſignification of the term in the New Teſtament, or that it ſignifieth an Abſtract Logos altogether remote from the New Teſtament and of no affinity with the Goſpel. Ὁ λόγος ſtanding in the front of the New Teſtament muſt ſignifie agreeably to the Senſe and Languge of the New Teſtament, and therefore muſt ſignifie Chriſt (or the Son of God) connoting his Goſpel. Which ſignification of it is inconſiſtent with an Abſtract Logos. Grotius obſerveth, (u) ſolent enim quæ Evangelio conveniunt Chriſto tribui ejus promulgatori ac factori; Thoſe things that agree to the Goſpel are wont to be attributed to Chriſt the promulger and maker thereof. So the Name λόγος which belongeth to the Goſpel, is attributed to Chriſt.

(4.) The word (ὁ λόγος) ſignifieth The word of Life; for ſo our Evangeliſt himſelf interpreteth it. (w) Nor is there a better way of expounding, than to illuſtrate every Author (who hath his peculiar Idioms and Phraſes) with his like kind of ſpeaking. For who can be a better Interpreter than every one of himſelf? The Alexandrian Dionyſius obſerveth, (x) That the Proem of S. John's Goſpel and the beginning of his firſt Epiſtle συνᾴδουσι μετ᾽ ἀλλήλοις, are conſonant to each other. So Oecumenius obſerveth, that this Sentence in the front of our Evangeliſt's Goſpel, In the beginning was The Word, is like that in the front of his firſt Epiſtle, That which was from the beginning The Word of Life. Our Saviour is called The Word in the ſame Senſe, that he is called The Word of Life. The Word of Life he cannot be but as connoting the Chriſtian Religion (therein only he is Life to us;) therefore he is called the Word as connoting his Goſpel. He is not called The Word of Life as an Abſtract Logos; therefore he is not called the Word as an Abſtract Logos. But the Name ſignifieth this truly great thing The Perſon of Chriſt as to his officiary dignity. So ſome Diſcourſes of the ancient Writers imply, that they ſuppos'd a great affinity between the Name of John the Baptiſt and of our Saviour, A Voice, and The Word, and that theſe Names were given them upon a like account. * In Evangelio non vox cernitur, ſed ſermo qui voce præſtantior eſt. —— à Johanne annunciatus eſt Chriſtus; videamus ergo quid Vox de Verbo annunciet. In the Goſpel it is not the Voice that is heard, but the Word, which is more excellent. John ſhewed Chriſt (that was his buſineſs) let us ſee therefore what the Voice declareth touching the Word. The Word ſignifieth what the Meſſiah is as to his Office, The Evangelical Word.

IV. This Name The Word (or ὁ λόγος) muſt be interpreted to ſignifie the Perſon of Chriſt, becauſe ſtanding in the front of the New Teſtament it muſt be interpreted, to ſignifie the Deity of the New Teſtament. And ſtanding in the front of Chriſt's Evangely it muſt be interpreted to ſignifie a thing or perſon Evangelical, which an Abſtract Logos is not. As theſe Phraſes uſual in the Chriſtian Religion, to be born again, dead to Sin, a new Creature, muſt be expounded touching the matters of Chriſtianity, in the Chriſtian Senſe, and it muſt be conſider'd, how they ſignifie in the Chriſtian Religion: ſo it muſt be conſider'd, how this Name The Word ſignifieth in Religion and in the Chriſtian Religion, agreeably whereto the Evange-

(q) Ἀντονομαστικῶς ſic apud Rabbinos Verbum Dei appellatur, juxta illud הדבור פירוש מטו explicatio eſt ex Verbo.

(r) Orig. c. Celſ. l. 8. p. 396.

(s) Act. 13. 26. and 14. 3. and 20. 32. Phil. 2. 16.

Luk. 1. 2.

(t) Orig. c. Celſ. l. 3. p. 159. & l. 7. p. 363. & l. 8. p. 401, 404.

(u) Not. in Joh. 6. 33.

(w) Nec enim interpretandi ratio melior, quàm ut ſuo quemque auctorem dicendi genere ſimili illuſtres. Quis enim melior quàm ſui quiſque interpres exiſtat? Schot. Ep. Henr. Gravii. Annot. in Ep. S. Hieron. præmiſſa.

(x) Euſeb. Hiſt. Eccl. l. 7. c. 25.

* Origen in Luc. Hom. 1. & 21. So Clem. παιδαγωγ. p. m. 6.

liſt's Logos muſt be expounded. This Evangelical Name muſt be underſtood to ſignifie in a Senſe properly Evangelical, the Chriſtian and Evangelical kind of Word, as all the other Names and Attributes of our Saviour in the New Teſtament muſt be underſtood in the Chriſtian and Evangelical Senſe. Such as thoſe which S. Auſtin conjoyneth, (y) He is called The Word and the Truth, The Power and the Wiſdom of God. If Chriſt in the Goſpel is intituled the Truth, this muſt be underſtood of him as connoting his Goſpel and the ſaving truth of Chriſtianity (it would argue a Man unholy, to diſtort ſuch an Attribute to a graceleſs unholy Senſe;) if Chriſt therefore in the Goſpel is intituled the Word, this muſt be underſtood of him as connoting his Goſpel and our ſaving Chriſtian Theology. A Man muſt be egregiouſly unſkilful in the word of Righteouſneſs, that thus argueth with Thammerus, (z) The Power of God, and the Wiſdom of God, was known to the Gentiles; therefore Chriſt who is the Power of God and the Wiſdom of God, was known to the Gentiles. For theſe honourary Names and Attributes Chriſt the Power of God and the Wiſdom of God muſt be underſtood in a Senſe properly Chriſtian and Evangelical; and conſequently this honourary Name the Word is of like Interpretation, and muſt be ſuppos'd, to ſignifie his Perſon, who connoteth his Goſpel and is therefore (a) ὁ θεῖος ἡμῶν λόγος, our Divine Word. Connoting his Goſpel he is the Word of Eternal Life; and therefore Abul-pharagius in the beginning of his Hiſtory of Dynaſties hath fitly conjoyned the Word with Life Eternal. Praiſe be to God, who is the firſt without beginning and the laſt without end (qui verbum poſſedit unicum) who poſſeſſed the one only Word and Eternal Life. This one only Word that is Eternal Life, is only the Word of the Goſpel (as ſuch;) and we muſt ſay of him (b) many things God taught us by the Prophets, (ſed quanto majora ſunt quæ Filius loquitur, quæ Dei ſermo propria voce teſtatur ?) but how much greater things are they, which the Son ſpeaketh, which the Word of God teſtifieth with his own Voice?

Theſe Arguments will be conſiderably ſtrengthened, if we conſider the Object of the Evangeliſt's Contemplation. For there are ſeveral Indications in this Proem, that he contemplateth the Son of God as in his miſſionary œconomy. He conſidereth him as coming into the World, v. 9. coming as a Light, v. 7, 8. as the Light of Men, v. 4. as a Light ſhining in Darkneſs, v. 5. and as uſher'd into the World by John the Baptiſt his harbinger and forerunner, v. 6, 7, 8. The Evangeliſt therefore contemplateth the Son of God as in his miſſionary œconomy, in which œconomy he was the Word of the Goſpel; therefore by the Word the Evangeliſt meaneth not any Abſtract Logos, but him only that is The Word of Chriſtianity conſider'd as ſuch. He contemplateth our Saviour as the Word of Chriſtianity, but ſo as withall to contemplate his Divinity (or Deity) of Perſon; for he ſetteth forth τὴν θεότητα τοῦ λόγου, the Deity of the Word in ſaying The Word was with God and the Word was God. The Object therefore of his Contemplation is auguſt and illuſtrious, no leſs than the Son in and of the Godhead: but there was great reaſon, that the Evangeliſt in the entrance of his Evangely ſhould contemplate this Creature-tranſcendent Son under the Name and Notion of the Word, becauſe his intent was, to repreſent and deſcribe the Author of the Chriſtian Religion as ſuch, and ſo θεολογεῖν τὸν υἱὸν τοῦ θεοῦ, to theologize the Son of God (or ſet forth his Divinity) as withall to ſet forth τὸ θειάσμον τοῦ χριστιανισμοῦ, the Divinity of the Chriſtian Religion. He is unto us the Religion of Chriſtianity, and muſt be known as the Author of it; and as ſuch he is the Life and the Word of it, nor is there any other Word of Life. He is ſo the Word as to be all the ſuperlative good things and realities, of which he is The Word and Evangely. For ſo in Hebrew to be called is to be, and דבר ſignifieth both a Word and a Thing, and is rendred ῥῆμα or λόγος (Word) when it denoteth a matter or thing; as Exod 8. 12. על דבר ἐπὶ λόγῳ βατράχων, about the Word (the thing or buſineſs) of the Frogs. So 1 King. 14. 19. the reſt of the Acts of Jeroboam are in the Hebrew the reſt of the דברי which ſignifieth words and things. So Luk. 2. 15. this ῥῆμα, word or thing which is done. So Act. 8. 21. Mark 1. 45. Luk. 1. 37. with God no word or thing ſhall be impoſſible. Agreeably whereto the Evangeliſt muſt be expounded, when he intituleth our Saviour the Evangelical Word; for he doth not mean to repreſent him as a meer Doctrine or Preachment, meerly that Verbality: but he deſigneth to repreſent him as that Verbality and that Reality. He is ſo the reality of the word of Life, as to be the verbality of it: and he is ſo the Verbality of the word of Life, as to be the reality of it. Theſe Notices are worthy of a Chriſtian Evangeliſt and agreeable to his Character.

But not any ſort of Abſtract Logos poſſible or conceivable is agreeable to his Character. Theſe are of great variety, and all of them claſh with one another (ſo that the Evangeliſt's Logos cannot be all of them, nor can it reaſonably be ſuppos'd to be any one of them; for all of them may with equal right and reaſon pretend to be this one Logos) all of them claſh with the certain Rules of interpreting Holy Scripture, and all of them claſh with the certain acknowledg'd Attributes of the Evangeliſt's Logos; for not one of them is a Chriſtian-Saint of God-kind of Logos, nor a Saint of God-kind of Creative Logos as ſuch; all of them are of kind and quality Non-chriſtian, the moſt of them are ſuch graceleſs unholy kind of Logos's, as are extremely diſſonant from the Evangeliſt's Logos, who is full of Grace. Of theſe there is cauſe to complain, (c) that ſome of the ancient Chriſtians ſo put on Chriſt, as not ſufficiently to put off Plato. Nor can it modeſtly be deny'd by any, that they diſtorted the moſt recondite Myſteries of the Goſpel to Philoſophical Senſes, not without loſing in great degree Divine Truth, and great miſchief to the Church. To run to the Schools of Heathen Philoſophers, to interpret the Evangeliſt's Logos, is the crime of Philoſophic-paganizing the matters of the Chriſtian Theology. The recondite Myſteries of the Goſpel are the matters of the Science of Sanctity (which belong to the Saints of God as ſuch) and therefore are not common and unholy things, that are on this ſide Sanctity; nor are they the Peculiarities of Scholaſticks and Secular Philoſophy. The Doctrines of the Bible are the holy Peoples Learning, which therefore cannot be unholy or unpopular. To diſtort them to ſuch a Senſe, is inſtead of the holy and ſaving Truths of the Chriſtian Religion to ſubſtitute ſpurious and illegitimate Futilities.

V. The

(y) De Fid. & Symb. c. 2.

(z) Melanchthon Exam. Theol. p. m. 29.

(a) Clem. Pæd. l. 1. c. 9.

(b) S. Cypr. de orat. dom. init.

(c) Veterum Chriſtianorum nonnullos ita Chriſtum induiſſe, ut non ſatis exuerint Platonem. Neque ſanè verecundè à quoquam negari poteſt, reconditiſſima Evangelii myſteria in ſenſus Philoſophicos eos detorſiſſe, non ſine magnâ veritatis divinæ jacturâ atque Eccleſiæ noxâ. Owen. Θεολ. παντοδ. Præfat. Petav. de Trin. Præfat. c. 3.

V. The Platonic Logos is one of theſe Futilities; for being nothing better than τὸ ὂν or Ens, it is not an holy kind of Logos (not the holy Peoples holy Logos, the Logos of their Religion) nor was it the Deity of any Religion (of any affinity with Religion or Religious People, Pagan, Chriſtian or other) but was one of the Peculiarities of the Myſtic-metaphyſical Ontologiſts and Theamatiſts. Had the popular Pagans known this Philoſophic-pagan Deity (the Platoniſts ſecond God) it had been the moſt ſuitable Object of their Devotion imaginable; they being World-worſhippers and this Platonic Logos being the intelligible archetypal World, and according to Plato, (d) θεῶν ἰδέα, the Idea of all the Pagan Gods. (e) The Logos and Son of God which Platoniſm acknowledgeth and in ſome ſort deifieth, is nothing better than the World, the intelligible World, and in conjunction therewith the ſenſible World, which two Worlds in Platoniſm are Brothers and Brother-Gods. So Philo platonizing extravagantly, (f) will have, not only the intelligible, but the ſenſible World, to be the Son of God. The Platonic Logos therefore is not the only begotten Son of God: nor can he be the Evangeliſt's Logos, unleſs the Platonic Hen or T'Agathon is the true God. But we have plainly demonſtrated, that this Platonic T'Agathon is not the true God; therefore the Platonic Logos cannot be the Evangeliſt's Logos. His mundane Brotherhood ſpeaketh him the mundane Syſtem-Logos and a mundane kind of Logos. And becauſe he is definitively Idearum regnum (the Kingdom of the Platonic Idea's) he is no better than a Figment, that can have no Exiſtence; nor can there be any ſuch Beings as the Platoniſts call Noes, whence their abſtract Intellect or Logos can have no real Exiſtence; nor is ſuch an Intellect meet to be the Demiurgus, that neceſſarily produceth all things in the way of ſeminal forms. But ſome ſort of Exiſtence this imaginary Deity had in their Theurgy, wherewith it hath great affinity. (g) For the Egyptians are ſaid, to have repreſented this Deity by a Serpent; the Platonic Ideas were the Magick Oracles intelligible Jynges; (h) by the Methods of Theurgy the Platoniſts pretend to unite their Souls τῷ ἀϊδίῳ λόγῳ, to the Eternal Logos; and Hecate pretendeth, that her Oracles are always true, that ſhe never made any falſe Predictions. (i) But ſhe deſcending from the all-ruling Mind of the Father (the Logos) always ſhineth with truth. A Logos of this Character is ſaid by Clemens, (k) to be the Son in the Holy Trinity, by whom all things were made according to the Will of the Father. (l) The Logos of God ſaith, I am the Truth; he is therefore to be contemplated by the Mind. But Plato in his Phœdrus ſaith, that Truth is Idea, and Idea is ἐννόημα τοῦ θεοῦ, the Notion of God, which the Barbarians (the Hebrews and Chriſtians) have called λόγος τοῦ θεοῦ, the Logos of God. So Origen ſaith, (m) that the Soul of Jeſus was united τῇ ἀκρᾷ μετοχῇ τοῦ Αὐτολόγου, by the higheſt participation of Logos it ſelf never to be ſeparated. If theſe Learned Men had contented themſelves to ſay, as Origen ſometimes doth, (n) that the Logos in the Chriſtian Trinity is analogous to the Logos in the Platonic Triad, this had been Prudent and Chriſtian, and a great recommendation of Chriſtianity to the admirers of the Platonic Philoſophy: but to confound things Profane and Holy, Secular and Spiritual, Natural and Evangelical, Paganical and Chriſtian, as alſo the Old and New Teſtament (which is the uſual way of the ancient Writers of the Church) is extremely injurious to the Scriptures and to the Sanctity and Divinity of the Chriſtian Religion, and in ſeveral Inſtances deſerveth as ſevere a cenſure as a Learned Man hath given of the Verſes of the Paraphraſt Nonnus, which are full of Platonic bombaſt, (o) inſtead of Sacred Poeſie, in very many places he ſeemeth to have left us (recoctum Paganiſinum) recocted Paganiſm. Nothing is more incongruous to a Chriſtian than ſo to commonize and vulgarize Chriſtianity (which is of a Saint of God-kind of Excellency and Precioſity) as to make it of one piece with the vileneſs of Heathen Philoſophy. Nothing is in it ſelf more incongruous, than to aſſert, that the true God was not known in Paganiſm, and yet to affirm, that the true Logos and Son of God was known in it; and not only ſo, but that the true Trinity was known in Paganiſm. Yet thus inconſiſtently (p) Clemens (q) and the Alex. Cyril diſcourſe. But it is not poſſible, that ſhould be the Chriſtian Trinity, the belief whereof is not the Chriſtian Faith, and which is not characteriſtical and diſtinctive of our Profeſſion: nor can the Platonic Logos be any more the Chriſtian Logos, than the Mundane Pſyche is the Holy Spirit, although S. Auſtin ſaith, (r) the chief of the Heathen Philoſophers ſpake of the Father and the Son, but not of the Holy Spirit; as if the Philoſophic Pagans had good Notices of the Father and the Son in the Holy Trinity, without having Notices of the Holy Spirit. But if touching the Son there was a great agreement between the Philoſophic Pagans and the Chriſtians in S. Auſtin's time, either the Philoſophic Pagans hugely chriſtianiz'd, or the Chriſtians hugely paganiz'd in their Notices of the Son of God. And this (not that) was indeed the truth of the caſe, (s) whence the Academicks boaſted, that the Chriſtians had ſtolen their Dogmata from Plato, eſpecially thoſe illuſtrious Sentences which S. John hath placed in the front of his Goſpel, as if theſe were meant of the Platonic Logos. If I meet with ὁ λόγος in the Writings of the Metaphyſical Platoniſts, I am bound to underſtand it of a λόγος τῶν ὄντων, (as they underſtood it in their Metaphyſicks:) but meeting with it in the Goſpel-Theology I am bound, to underſtand thereby a Logos that is of kind and quality (not Exotick, but) Chriſtian and Evangelical. The Platonic-pagan Theiſm is not the Goſpel-Theiſm.

VI. The Evangeliſt's Logos is not the Stoical Logos (the Soul and Mind of the World, an artificial Reaſon compriſing all the Spermatic Reaſons) as Lactantius and Eugubinus ſuppoſe, and Tertullian (t) favoureth the Conceit. So J. Mart. diſcourſing of the Stoicks ſaith; The Demons hate thoſe that live (u) according to their part of Spermatic Reaſon, according to the knowledge and contemplation of the Logos of the Univerſe, which is Chriſt. So Voſſius ſaith of the Arcadian great God Pan, (w) that Pan amongſt the Heathen did not only ſignifie univerſal mundane nature naturate, but alſo univerſal mundane nature naturant (which is ὁ λόγος διὰ πάντων διήκων, an univerſal reaſon pervading all things) in which Notion Pan (as he ſuppoſeth) is the ſame with the Evangeliſt's Logos, by whom all things were made, and without whom not any thing was made that was made. Accordingly he interpreteth the Story in (d) *Procl. Plat. Theol.l.*3.*c.*19.

Plutarch's

(e) *Plotin. En.*3.*l.*2.*c.*2.

(f) *Petav. T.*4.*l.*12.*c.*11.*S.*7.

(g) *Witz. Ægypt.l.*1.*c.*3.

(h) *Jambl. de Myſt. S.*10.*c.*6.

(i) Ἀλλ' ἀπὸ παγκρατέοιο νόου πατρόθεν κατιοῦσα Αἰὲν ἀληθείης σφραγίζεται. Gale in Jambl. p. 222, 223.

(k) *Str.l.*5.*p.m.*436.

(l) *Ibid. p.*403.

(m) *C.Celſ. l.*6.*p.*308, 309. l. 7. *p.*342.

(n) Ibid. l. 6. *p.*281.

(o) Heinſ. Ariſt. Sac. p. 92.

(p) *Str.l.*6. p. m. 495, 497. & l. 5. *p.*436.

(q) *C.Jul. l.*7. *p.*232. & l. 8. p. 270. & l. 9. p. 294.

(r) Qu. 25. in Exod.

(s) *Baron. ad an.*384. n. 36.

(t) Apol. c. 21.

(u) Κατὰ σπερματικοῦ λόγου μέρος, κατὰ τὴν τοῦ παντὸς λόγου, ὅ ἐστι Χριστοῦ, γνῶσιν καὶ θεωρίαν. Apol. 1. p. 45.

(w) *De Idol.l.*7 *c.*4.

Plutarch's Book of the Defect of Oracles touching the Demons howling and lamenting the death of the great God Pan, that thereby the death of Chriſt was ſignify'd. But if in this Paganical Story (which may relate to ſome cuſtomary Rite of Mourning in the Kingdom of Darkneſs) the death of the great God Pan was interpreted to ſignifie, not the death of Chriſt, but the ſpoiling of one of the Pagans Principalities and Powers by his death, the Interpretation would be much more regular and Chriſtian-like. For to ſuppoſe, that the Heathens great God Pan is Chriſt and the only begotten Son of God, is a Chriſtianizing the Heathen, the height of profaning God and his Son, a confounding God and Baal, Chriſt and Belial, the Iſraelitical and the Goſpel-Theiſm with the Pagan Theiſm, Nature and Grace, Heathen mundane Nature and the Kingdom of Darkneſs with the Kingdom of God and his Chriſt. The Heathens great God Pan may not be thought the true God, much leſs the Logos in the Chriſtian Trinity; for in the beſt Notion of him (as the ſame with the Stoicks Logos or Coſmical Jupiter) Pan is nothing better than the deifying Soul of the World (animative mundane Nature) one of the Deities and the ſupreme Deity of the Pagans Theopolity. But there is great Reaſon, to think, that Pan or the Stoical Logos is the ſame with that celebrated Egyptian Deity Cneph, as he was a Popular-pagan Deity (eximiouſly worſhipped amongſt the Egyptians eſpecially by the Thebans, and whom they accounted the Opificer of the World;) for although in the Egyptians Acroamatical Theology (x) Cneph is the ſame with the Platonic Logos, yet the Popular-pagan Cneph could be no other Deity than the Stoical Logos, the regial Mind and Soul of the World. He was painted with a Plume upon his Head and in all probability had his Name from כנף a Wing, (which was to ſignifie (y) that he is a Logos (Reaſon) not eaſily found out, hidden, not externally appearing that he is the Origin of Life, and a King, and is mov'd intellectually. An uſual Symbol of this Deity was a winged Serpent with the Head of an Hawk (which doth not ſpeak him of Affinity with God and his Son;) his hidden Nature ſpeaketh him the ſame Deity (z) that the Egyptians called Ammon or Hammon (which ſignifieth occult or hidden) which is the ſame Deity with Bel, Moloch, Iſis, Minerva, Serapis, Oſiris, Bacchus, Jupiter, Pluto, Ceres, Venus, Diana, Cybele, Proſerpina (Hecate) Juno, Bellona, Rhamnuſia, Janus, Apollo. If therefore the Evangeliſts Logos is the God Pan, he was all in all amongſt the Pagans, no leſs than the vaſt Rabble of their Deities. So in ſome Athenian Solemnities all things were referr'd to the Honour of Pan, numinis univerſa numina complexi, a Deity (ſaith Voſſius) that compris'd all the Deities. But one of theſe Deities is of ſingular Remark; (a) for according to Phurnutus Pan and Jupiter (the Soul of the World) is Priapus, that filthy Deity, whoſe obſcene Symbol (too immodeſt to be nam'd) was deſign'd to repreſent his abundance of Seminal Virtue. And by a like immodeſt Symbol Mercury was repreſented; δείκνυσι δὲ καὶ τὸν σπερματικὸν λόγον τὸν διήκοντα διὰ πάντων, the naſty Symbol was deſign'd to ſignifie and repreſent (the Stoical Logos) that ſpermatic Reaſon which pervadeth all things. In an obſcene Picture at Samos (b) Jupiter was repreſented as having to do with Juno in a nameleſs manner; and the meaning of the Picture was (according to Chryſippus) Juno repreſented and ſignified the matter τοὺς σπερματικοὺς λόγους τοῦ θεοῦ παραδεξάμενα, receiving the Seminal Reaſons of Jupiter the Stoicks God. This is the venerable Deity (the Pagans obſcene Jupiter, Mercury, Priapus) that the Son of God muſt be, if he is the great God Pan, or the Stoicks Logos; and at this rate we abuſe our ſelves and our Saviour by an extravagant and irreligious paganizing the Matters of the Chriſtian Theology. (c) Frater and Soror amongſt the Pagans ſignified in a laſcivious Senſe, whence the Pagans ſuppos'd that they ſo ſignified amongſt the Chriſtians: So amongſt the Pagans Logos ſignified τὸν ἐν ὕλῃ λόγον τὸν θεὸν, the God artificial Reaſon in the Matter, and by a like miſtake as the Pagans committed, it is ſuppos'd, ſo to ſignifie in Chriſtianity. And (which is marvellous) Chriſtian Divines that have a mighty Zeal againſt Paganizing the true God, yet make no ſcruple of Paganizing the true Son of God. Origen often expreſſeth a great Zeal againſt Paganizing the true God, yet touching the Son of God thus he writeth. (d) According to Celſus the Logos of the Univerſe is God himſelf: But according to us, he is not God himſelf, but his Son. So the Platoniſts ſuppos'd, and this was a point of difference between the School of the Stoicks and that of Plato, who yet were of one Religion and both Orthodox Pagans. And if the Chriſtians do agree with either of them touching the Logos and Son of God, there ought to be no great variance between Origen and Celſus, Chriſtianity and Paganiſm.

VII. The Targumic Logos is a creative Logos; for thus we read in the Jeruſalem Targum, Gen. 1. 27. The word of the Lord created man in his ſimilitude. Gen. 3. 23. The word of the Lord ſaid, behold Adam whom I have created one and alone in my world, as I am one and alone in the high heavens. In the Targum of Jonathan, Iſa. 45. 12. I by my word made the earth, and created man upon it. The Chaldee Paraphraſes or Targumim uſually ſpeak in this Stile; inſtead of יהוה and Elohim they often ſubſtitute Memra Domini (the Word of the Lord) by which Name they have been ſuppos'd, to mean a divine Perſon, yet a diſtinct Perſon from God, the ſame with the Evangeliſt's Logos (the Second Perſon in the Trinity and the Meſſias;) for is it not reaſonable, to think, that the Evangeliſt uſed ὁ λόγος, (the Word) in the received Notion of the Jews of his Age? But this account of the Evangeliſt's Logos is at firſt ſight extremely ſurpriſing and improbable. For ſeeing in all the Hebrew Text of the Old Teſtament there is no appearance of the Evangeliſt's Notion of the Logos, it is not imaginable, that the Targumiſts ſhould have any notice of it, unleſs (as Philo) they deriv'd their notices from the School of Plato; and if ſo, their Logos is nothing of kin to the Evangeliſts. But there is no appearance, that the Targumiſts were Platoniſts; and as for the Jewiſh Church ſhe could not furniſh them with notices of the Evangeliſt's Logos her ſelf being unfurniſh'd by the ancient Scriptures; and if ſhe had known the Exiſtence of this divine perſonal Logos, the Religious Worſhip, not of God only, but of God the Son alſo, muſt neceſſarily have been her Religion in the Old Teſtament-

(x) Jambl. de Myſt. p. 158. Gale not. in loc.

(y) Ὅτι λόγος δυσεύρετος, καὶ κεκρυμμένος, καὶ οὐ φανός, καὶ ὅτι ζωοποιός, καὶ ὅτι βασιλεύς, καὶ ὅτι νοερῶς κινεῖται. Huet. Dem. Ev. Prop. 4. p. 123. Ed. 2. Euſeb. pr. Ev. l. 3. c. 12. Voſſ. ſupr. l. 9. c. 11.

(z) Voſſ. ibid. l. 7. c. 2, 3.

(a) Voſſ. ibid. l. 2. c. 7. & 32. Annot. in Min. Fel. p. 184.

(b) Orig. c. Celſ. l. 4. p. 196.

(c) Annot. in Min. Fel. p. 82.

(d) Ἀλλὰ καὶ ὁ τῶν πάντων λόγος ἐστι κατὰ μὲν Κέλσον αὐτὸς ὁ θεός· κατὰ δὲ ἡμᾶς υἱὸς αὐτοῦ. C. Celſ. l. 5. p. 247.

ment-times, when there was no Inſtitution of any ſuch Religion, no ſuch Religious Worſhip (the Worſhip of two divine Perſons) was required, no Religious Worſhip of the Son (e) could then be duly practis'd, nor was any ſuch Worſhip practis'd by the Jewiſh Church, whoſe Worſhip was the legal Moſaic-religious Worſhip. The common Opinion hath been, that the Chaldee Paraphraſes are the moſt ancient Monuments of Jewiſh Learning, that they were made at firſt for the benefit of the People, who (becauſe of the Babylonian Captivity) better underſtood Chaldee than Hebrew, that two of them (that of Onkelos on the Pentateuch and Jonathan on the Prophets) were made about our Saviour's time and were read in the Synagogues, whence it became a known thing amongſt the Jews, that Memra Domini (the Word of God or the Logos) was a divine Perſon, yet a diſtinct Perſon from God, and that by this divine perſonal Logos all things were made. But how well theſe things were known amongſt the Jews let Origen determine. (f) I have had Conteſts with many Jews, and ſuch as were accounted their wiſe Men, yet I never heard of any one of them, who ſuppos'd, that there is a Logos, who is the Son of God. The Evangeliſt therefore doth not uſe ὁ λόγος, (the Word) in the received Notion of the Jews of his time; Nor doth he uſe it in the Notion of the Chaldee Paraphraſts. For I do and muſt affirm, that Bilibra Veritatis hath made it uncontrollably plain and evident, that although the Chaldee Paraphraſts uſe Memra Domini (the Word of the Lord) in very various Senſes, yet they never mean by it the Second Perſon of the Trinity, or an Abſtract Scholaſtic Logos, or the Meſſias; whence it is manifeſt, that the Targumic Logos is not the Evangeliſt's Logos. The Allegations of Rittangel to the contrary are groſs Impertinences.

Uſually the Chaldee Paraphraſts by Memra Domini (the Word of the Lord) mean the firſt divine Perſon called יהוה and Elohim in the Old Teſtament (which Names they uſually render by Memra Domini) according to the received Notion of the Jews, of which denomination theſe Paraphraſts were. So the Learned Hebricians obſerve, (g) that מימר Word in theſe Paraphraſts is the ſame with נפש Soul or Perſon, and that his Word is to be interpreted by αὐτὸς, ipſe, as the Statutes made between his Word and the Children of Iſrael, are the Statutes made between himſelf and them. (h) במימריה reddi poteſt Dominus per ſeipſum, vel Dominus ipſe. מימרא Sometimes ſignifieth only Ego, Tu, Ipſe, and is apply'd unto Men. Job 7. 7. and 27. 3. A League between Me and Thee is in the Targum A League between my Word and thy Word. 2 Chron. 16. 3. A Covenant between him and between all the People and between the King is thus rendred in the Targum, A Covenant between his Word and between all the People and between the Word of the King. 2 Chron. 23. 16. In the Targum it is ſaid of Jacob (i) דבירא ὁ λόγος, the Word deſir'd to ſpeak with him. The Phraſe is obſervable, ſaith Buxtorf; for the Targum ſaith, the Word deſir'd to ſpeak with him. In Bereſ. Rab it is, God deſir'd to ſpeak with him. It is a Phraſeology extremely out of the road, to call God the Word, his Word, and the Word of God: But this is the Chaldaic Paraphraſtical Phraſeology. As the Jews conſider an Intelligent Being or a Perſon as a Speaker of Words, inſomuch that Animal loquens is their definition of a Man, and a rational Soul is called by Onkelos, Anima loquens, Gen. 2. 7. So by theſe Jewiſh Paraphraſts every Perſon is conſider'd as a perſonal Word, and this is the Targumic Logos. But more eſpecially and eminently the God of the Jews (who was to them that vocal Word, the Word of divine Revelation, which is the Word in a ſenſe of Eminence) is conſider'd by theſe Targumiſts as the perſonal Word, and this divine Perſon is that which is uſually their Logos. We have hitherto conſider'd them as of good Antiquity and Authority: But there are thoſe that Diſcourſe with great Reaſon (k) that not one of theſe Chaldee Paraphraſts was made till after the times of our Saviour and his Apoſtles, that there was no need of making Chaldee Paraphraſes about our Saviour's time, that Joſephus maketh no mention of them, nor any of the ancient Fathers (not Origen or S. Hierom) that ſome of the Targums make mention of the Talmud (which ſheweth, that they were written after it) and that they were at firſt made after the deſtruction of Jeruſalem by the Jews in their diſperſion at Babylon, whither many of them reſorted and ſet up their flouriſhing Schools there. For various Reaſons therefore the Chaldee Paraphraſts ſignifie little in giving an account of the Evangeliſts Logos. Yet a conſiderable Conformity there is between the Targumiſts and the Evangeliſts Logos. For as the Targumiſts Logos, ſo our Evangeliſts Logos is conſider'd and repreſented as a perſonal Word. Both to the Targumiſts and our Evangeliſts Logos the Name of God and the Creation of all things is attributed. As the Targumiſts Logos, ſo our Evangeliſts Logos is a divine Perſon. (l) Paraphraſtes ſæpiſſimè hoc nomen divinum יהוה efferre ſolet per מימרא דיי ut Johannes dicit ὁ λόγος. The Paraphraſt very often uttereth this divine Name Jehovah by the Word of the Lord, as S. John ſaith the Word.

VIII. If the Son of God is not the Targumic Logos, he muſt not be thought that creative Word (or Logos) to which the Old Teſtament attributeth the Creation, and which is repreſented in the Moſaic Hiſtory as a vocal Word (or Speech) of God, that may be called the Moſaic Logos. But if we inquire of Expoſitors, where and whence the Evangeliſt had his Name ὁ λόγος? Some of the beſt of them anſwer (m) he took it from the Old Teſtament and the Moſaic Hiſtory of the Creation, wherein God is ſaid, to have created all things by his Word. God ſaid, Let there be Light. By the word of God the heavens were of old. 2 Pet. 3. 5. So Pſal. 33. 6. and 148. 8. Heb. 11. 3. whether theſe Expoſitors have made a good Conjecture touching the reaſon of the Name of the Evangeliſts Logos, may appear by comparing their reaſon of it with our foregoing account of it. But we muſt further inquire of them, whether thoſe places of the Old Teſtament which affirm, that God created all things by his Word, do mean, that he created all things by the Evangeliſts Logos? For ſo we are told, that this Doctrine of the Evangeliſt touching his Logos, that all things were made by him (n) is no new Doctrine, but only an Interpretation of thoſe Scriptures, which told us, God made all things by his Word. For God ſaid, Let there be Light. And ſo, by the word of the Lord were the heavens made and all the hoſt of them by the breath of his Mouth. Pſal. 33. 6.

(e) V. S. Cyr. Com. in Joan. p. 773.

(f) Ἐγὼ δὲ καὶ πολλοῖς Ἰουδαίοις καὶ σοφοῖς ἐπαγγελλομένοις εἶναι συμβαλὼν, οὐδενὸς ἀκήκοα ἐπαινοῦντος τὸ, λόγον εἶναι τὸν υἱὸν τοῦ Θεοῦ. C. Celſ. l. 2. p. 79.

(g) Hotting. Hexaem. p. 52, 54, &c.

(h) Dr. Lightfoot Hor. in Joh. 1. 1.

(i) Buxtorf. Lex. Talm. col. 497.

(k) Hoornbeek c. Jud. Proleg. p. 49. Simon. Hiſt. Crit. l. 3. c. 24.

(l) Buxtorf. Lex. Talm. Col. 125.

(m) Grot. Capell. Camero. Lightfoot.

(n) Bp. Pearſon on the Creed, Art. 2. p. 233.

(o) Petav. de Trin. l. 2. c. 7.

(o) For in this place of the Pſalmiſt the Lord, Word and Spirit, ſignifie ſo many Perſons; which is the received interpretation from the common conſent of all the Greek and Latin Fathers. It muſt be acknowledg'd, that the Fathers with one conſent thus interpret the Scriptures of the Old Teſtament; when thoſe ancient Scriptures ſay, that God created all things by his Word, they interpret them to ſignifie the Evangeliſts Logos: But if the Fathers were not of greater regard in matters of Piety and for ſettling the Rule of Faith than for interpreting the Holy Scriptures (for it is one thing to err from the Rule of Faith, another thing to err in expounding the Scriptures) they would be of no great regard in Theology. By interpreting the Scriptures at their rate it is an eaſie matter, to find the Chriſtian Trinity in the Firſt Chapter of Geneſis. For there we read (p) that God ſaid, Let there be Light, let there be a Firmament (there is the Father and the Word mention'd) and the Spirit of God moved upon the face of the Waters. 'Ουκοῦν διαμνημονεύει ϗ μάλα σαφῶς πατρὸς ϗ ὑιȣ̃ ϗ ἁγίȣ πνεύματος; doth not the Text then make mention and very clearly, of the Father, Son and Holy Ghoſt? Such are the Grounds of the Scholaſtic Theology; it is founded upon the Fathers uſual mode of interpreting Scripture, which (in reſpect of the matter in hand) is manifeſtly blind miſtake in five reſpects. For,

(p) S. Cyr. c. Jul. l. 1. p. 21, 22, 54. Athanaſ. c. Arian. Or. 3. S. Baſil. adv. Eunom. l. 5. p. 123. S. Aug. de C. D. l. 11. c. 32.

(1.) They turn the creative Word of the Old Teſtament into a Word of another kind. Their creative Word is λόγος ἐνυπόστατος, a ſubſtantial and perſonal Word, Verbum Dominus; whereas the creative Word in the Old Teſtament is only Verbum Domini, λόγος ἀνυπόστατος, an unſubſtantial and imperſonal Word. It is repreſented as a vocal Word or Speech of God (for the breath of his Mouth literally and properly ſignifieth a vocal Word, λόγον σημαντικὸν, a ſignifying Word) the Text of the Pſalmiſt therefore, By the word of the Lord were the heavens made, and all the hoſt of them by the breath of his mouth, cannot ſignifie the Evangeliſts Logos. But the beſt Expoſitors do not ſuppoſe, that the World was made by a vocal Word of God, but only Verbo voluntatis & imperii, by the Word of his Will and Command (q) ψιλῷ τῷ βȣλεσθαι, meerly by willing. We will ſuppoſe therefore (according to Expoſitors) that this is the Pſalmiſt's creative Logos, the meer Will and Command of God; and it is manifeſt, that he ſpeaketh of no other but this one Logos; therefore he cannot mean, that the Heavens were made by a commanded Logos. But,

(q) Petav. T. 1. l. 5. c. 8. S. 2.

(2.) The Fathers have multiply'd this one creative Logos into two creative Logos's: The one the Word of Command, the other the commanded Word. So Irenæus interpreteth the Text of the Pſalmiſt, Pſal. 148. 5. (r) He commanded and they were created, he ſpake and they were made. To whom did he give Command? To his Word, by which the Heavens were compacted, and all the Hoſt of them by the Spirit of his Mouth. In the ſame manner Origen, not only in his other Works, but in ſeveral places of his Book againſt Celſus interpreteth the Pſalmiſt. (s) If God commanded (ſaith he) and the Creatures were made, who according to the Mind of the Prophetic Spirit could be able to fulfil ſuch a Command of the Father, ἢ ὁ ἔμψυχος λόγος ϗ ἀλήθεια τυγχάνων, but he that is his living Word and the (Platonic) Truth? (t) Touching thoſe Commands, Fiat hoc aut hoc, we ſay, that the next immediate Opificer of the World is the Son of God the Logos, who is as it were αὐτȣργὸς τȣ̃ κόσμȣ, the Maker of the World with his own Hands: But the Father of the Logos τῷ προστεταχέναι τῷ υἱῷ ἑαυτȣ̃ λόγῳ ποιῆσαι τὸν κόσμον, becauſe he gave Command to his Son the Logos, to make the World, is the primary Opificer. The Father is ſuppos'd, to have given thoſe Commands, Let there be Light, let there be a Firmament: But the commanded Son or Logos executed them, as Origen affirmeth, προσταχθέντα τὸν λόγον πεποιηκέναι πάντα, the commanded Logos made all things, made all things that the Father commanded him. (u) So the Alexandrian Cyril diſcourſeth (w) and ſo Euſebius uſually, who alſo in like manner interpreteth the Pſalmiſt. Τȣ̃το δὲ ὁ ψαλμῳδὸς ᾐνίττετο, This the Pſalmiſt ſignified (ſaith he) when diſcourſing of the firſt Cauſe he ſaith, He ſpake and they were generated, he commanded and they were created. Ἄντικρυς τὴν τȣ̃ πρώτȣ πρὸς τὸ δεύτερον αἴτιον ὡς ἂν πατρὸς πρὸς υἱὸν, διάταξίν τε ϗ παρακέλευσιν ὑφιστάμενος, he manifeſtly affirmeth, that there was an Order and Command of the Firſt Cauſe to the Second, as of a Father to a Son. So Tertullian ſpeaking of the Moſaic Creation calleth the Father (x) eum qui jubet, Him that commandeth, and the Logos he calleth eum qui facit, Him that executeth. At the ſame rate (y) Cyril of Jeruſalem, S. Baſil, Novatianus de Trinitate, Proſper, Marius Victor, the Author de Incarnatione in S. Auſtin's Works diſcourſe. Theophylact on Joh. 1. 3. compareth God making the World to a King commanding his Son to build a City; and Athanaſius ſo interpreteth the Pſalmiſts Words (he commanded and they were created) that he will have the Father to have given Command to the Son.

(r) Ipſe præcepit & creata ſunt, ipſe dixit & facta ſunt. Cui ergo præcepit? Verbo ſcilicet: Per quod, inquit, cœli firmati ſunt, & ſpiritu oris ejus omnis virtus eorum. Adv. Hær. l. 3. c. 8.

(s) L. 2 p. 63.

(t) L. 6. p. 317.

(u) C. Jul. l. 1. p. 54.

(w) Hiſt. Eccl. l. 1. c. 1. Pr. Ev. l. 7. c. 13, 14. Dem. Ev. l. 5.

(x) C. Prax. c. 12.

(y) Petav. de Trin. l. 2. c. 7. S. 7.

(3.) They confound the Faith of the Old Teſtament and of the New Teſtament properly ſuch; for to believe the Creation that is by the Logos or Son of God, is the New Teſtament-Faith properly ſuch; but it is made to be the Faith of the Old Teſtament by ſo expounding it, as to teach this Faith, that God created the World by his Son and by commanding his Son to create it. In miſinterpreting the Old Teſtament at this marvellous rate there was no difference between the Catholicks and the Arians, they agree in it, and they agree alſo in thundring out their Anathema's againſt all that do not ſymbolize with them in their Dogma, which (in part) was founded upon it. (z) If any one confeſſing one God, doth not confeſs Chriſt to be before all Worlds God and the Son of God, and to have been obſequious to the Father in the Creation of all things, let him be Anathema.

(z) Si quis unum dicens Deum, Chriſtum autem Deum, ante ſecula Filium Dei, obſecutum Patri in creatione omnium, non confitetur, Anathema ſit. S. Hilar. de Synod.

(4.) They expound the Scriptures contrarily to the Evidence of common Sence. For is there any thing more plain and evident, than that the creative Word ſpoken of in the Old Teſtament is only the Imperial Command of God? A modern Author ſaith (a) there is none that is not perſwaded, that the Word that formed the Heavens and the Breath or Spirit of the Mouth of God are the ſame thing. But in ſo ſaying he miſtaketh; for his Self-evident Expoſition is contradicted by the general conſent of the Fathers. It ſeemeth very plain and evident, that the voice which Adam is ſaid to have heard in the Garden, ſignifieth only a vocal Word: But Theophylus ad Autolycum (b) will have it to ſignifie the Son of God, becauſe he is called Sermo or Verbum,

(a) Mr. Jurieu Accompliſh. of the Proph. Par. 2. p. 207.

(b) L. 2. p. 100.

bum. They that ſee not with diſtorted Eyes, can diſcern but one creative Word in the Texts of the Old Teſtament, and cannot but diſcern, that this one creative Word is imperſonal (only a vocal Word or a mental Command of God:) But the generality of the Fathers have introduc'd two creative Words of two different kinds into the Texts of Moſes and the Pſalmiſt; and S. Auſtin who contradicteth the other Fathers, and acknowledgeth but one creative Word, maketh this one creative Word of a quite different kind from that which the Holy Writers of the Old Teſtament mean. For their creative Word is οὐκ ὑφεστὸς, a non-ſubſiſtent Word, that muſt have Subſiſtence by the Performance of it (Fire and Hail, Snow and Vapour, ſtormy Wind fulfilling his Word, Pſal. 148. 8.) But this Father's ſole creative Word is δύναμις οὐσιώδης ϗ ἐνυπόστατος, a ſubſtantial and perſonal Power. (c) What is this that they ſay, the Son created all things the Father commanding, as if the Father did not create, but only command to be created by the Son? Let them that are carnally wiſe imagine, by what other words the Father commanded his one Only Word. As the Greek Fathers ſuppoſe, that the Son in a Metaphyſical and Scholaſtic Senſe is (d) voluntas Patris (the Will of the Father) which is an Incongruous and Anti-ſcriptural Notion: So S. Auſtin hath a like Incongruous and Anti-ſcriptural Notion, that the only command of the Father touching the Creation of all things was the Generation of the Son.

(5.) This is an Inſtance, that they diſtort the plaineſt things in the Bible from an Holy-popular to a School-philoſophic Senſe. For this Father affirmeth, ipſam juſſionem Patris ut fierent omnia, non eſſe niſi Verbum Patris, per quod facta ſunt omnia. The Command of the Father for the making all things is only the (perſonal) Word of the Father, by whom all things were made. Agreeably whereunto he interpreteth our Saviour's Saying, This Commandment have I received of my Father. (e) The Word did not receive a Commandment from a Word, but every Commandment is in the only begotten Word of the Father. But thus to expound our Saviour's Sayings (He gave me a Commandment what I ſhould ſay; as the Father gave me Commandment, even ſo I do) is expreſly to contradict the Text. And if there was no word of Command touching the Creation of all things beſides the perſonal Word of God, this inferreth, that at the Moſaic Creation God gave no ſuch Commandment as Fiat Lux, Fiat Firmamentum, Fiant Luminaria. Thus the Fathers account of the creative Logos of the Old Teſtament is come to a very fair iſſue, which is a total deſtroying it. Doubtleſs, it is high time for us to awake, to relinquiſh theſe ancient Follies, to bethink our ſelves of a better Idea of our Saviour and a better Interpretation of the New Teſtament than the ancient Writers were acquainted with, whoſe miſinterpreting the New Teſtament was a principal Cauſe of their miſinterpreting the Old Teſtament.

IX. The Evangeliſt's creative Logos is by Eccleſiaſtical Writers interpreted Reaſon, which may be called the Logical and Phyſiological Logos, and muſt be defin'd that generated demiurgic Reaſon, which Eccleſiaſtic Writers call the Logos J. Mart. ſaith (f) God firſt before the Production of any Creatures generated of himſelf δύναμίν τινα λογικήν, a certain rational Power, by whom he created and adorn'd all things. (g) λόγον οὗ πᾶν γένος ἀνθρώπων μετέσχε, the reaſon of which all Mankind (and all Rationals) participated, whence he is ſtiled (h) τοῦ παντὸς λόγος, the Logos of the Univerſe (the mundane Syſtem Logos) and with reſpect to him Reaſon in Man is ſtiled σπερματικὸς λόγος, the ſeminary Reaſon (that which is ſown in our Nature) μέρος τοῦ σπερματικοῦ θείου λόγου, part of the ſpermatic divine Logos. (i) Socrates and Heraclitus ϗ οἱ μετὰ λόγου βιώσαντες, and ſuch as lived according to Reaſon, are ſaid by this Father, to have been (in ſome Senſe) Chriſtians, Chriſt was ἀπὸ μέρους, in part known unto Socrates, and he ſuppoſeth alſo, that what S. John hath ſaid of the Logos (k) was very well underſtood by the Heathen, and that the Logos is the ſame with their Minerva, only he ridiculeth them for making Reaſon a Woman. Becauſe they knew (ſaith he) ἐννοηθέντα τὸν θεὸν διὰ λόγου τὸν κόσμον ποιῆσαι, ὡς τὴν πρώτην ἔννοιαν ἔφασαν τὴν Ἀθηνᾶν· that God cogitating did make the World by Reaſon (or Logos) this as being the firſt intelligence they called Minerva. Athenagoras undertaketh, to tell the Heathen, what we Chriſtians mean by the Son of God, and thus he deſcribeth him. (l) God was from eternity Rational and had (λόγον) Reaſon in himſelf: But becauſe all material things were without quality as alſo the Earth, which were only Subject-matter (to be impregnated with Form) and the thicker parts were jumbled with the lighter above them, therefore Reaſon (λόγος) came forth, to be unto the Matter ἰδέα ϗ ἐνέργεια, Form and Efficiency. The Son of God is λόγος τοῦ πατρὸς ἐν ἰδέᾳ ϗ ἐνεργείᾳ, the Reaſon of the Father in Idea and Efficiency; for from him and by him all things were made. Νοῦς ϗ λόγος τοῦ πατρὸς, the intelligent Mind and Reaſon of the Father is the Son of God. By Tatianus the Logos is called (m) λόγος ἐκ τῆς λογικῆς δυνάμεως, Reaſon from the Rational Power of the Father. And he repreſenteth the Logos (n) as with and in the Father διὰ τῆς λογικῆς δυνάμεως, by a rational Power. Τοῦτον ἴσμεν τοῦ κόσμου τὴν ἀρχήν. This (Logos) we know to be the archical Cauſe of the World. Theophilus ad Autol. diſtinguiſheth the Logos (as in Logick) into a λόγος ἐνδιάθετος, internal and προφορικὸς, prolatitious. (o) The internal Logos God always had within him (as being his Intelligent Mind and Prudence and therefore his Counſellor:) But when he would put in Execution his Counſel and make the Creatures, he generated this Logos prolatitious. So Tertullian ſaith, that before the Univerſe was conſtituted, he was not alone (p) for he had with him that which he had in himſelf his Reaſon. For God was Rational, and Reaſon was firſt in him (before Sermo or the Word was produc'd) and ſo all things were from him. This the Greeks call Logos. Accordingly he ſuppoſeth, that Logos in our Evangeliſt ſhould rather be rendred Ratio than Sermo, becauſe Reaſon is elder than Speech: But the matter (as he ſaith) is indifferent; for God having order'd and made a diſpoſal of all things in his Reaſon, ipſum protulit Sermonem, in quo ineſt hæc ipſa ratio, produc'd the Word himſelf, wherein this Reaſon is, that all things might be made by him. (q) Hic eſt virtus Dei, hic ratio, hic ſapientia ejus, this is the Power of God, this is his Reaſon and Wiſdom, ſaith S. Cyprian. Clemens telleth us (r) that Epicharmus maketh expreſs mention of the Logos, when he ſaith, ὁ λόγος ἀνθρώπȣς κυβερνᾷ, Reaſon governeth Men, thereby they preſerve their Life (by Food) thereby they find out Arts, and are taught what is uſeful; and this Reaſon of Men πέφυκ' ἀπὸ τȣ̃ θείȣ λόγȣ, hath its Origin from the Reaſon of the Gods. In this Author's Writings generally the Word and Reaſon are terms ſynonymous, and to live according to the Word (or Logos) and according to Reaſon is the ſame thing. So according to Origen (s) the Logos that was in the beginning is the Fountain and Original, whence Reaſon is communicated to all rational Beings; and as the Logos is the Image of the Father, ſo rational Beings as ſuch are εἰκόνες τῆς εἰκόνος, the Images of this Image. (t) The Participation of Chriſt as he is the Logos, cauſeth all Rationals to be rational. According to his Theology (u) he is Αὐτολόγος, Reaſon it ſelf, and he pervadeth all things, that all things διὰ λόγȣ γένηται, may be made by Reaſon. The Greek Fathers generally prove the Exiſtence of the Son of God from eternity by this Argument (w) God was never ἄλογος, without Reaſon. The Son is called by Athanaſius ἐκ λογικȣ̃ λόγος, Reaſon from him that is Rational. Paſchaſius the Deacon calleth him Reaſon, and S. Ambroſe ſaith, ipſe Filius ratio dicitur, the Son himſelf is called Reaſon. Theodotus Ancyranus diſcourſing againſt Neſtorius ſaith (x) vidiſti λόγον, id eſt, rationem, ſupra rationem omnem naſci. The Logos is interpreted Reaſon; and with theſe Ancients the modern Scholaſtic Divines ſymbolize (y) for they ſuppoſe, that the Logos hath his Name, becauſe by him Rationals are made ſuch, and that we are made after the Image of the Logos, becauſe we are made Rational. But this Image in Mankind is ſuppos'd, to be greatly obliterated by Brutiſhneſs of Life and Heatheniſm of Religion, whereby they are become rather ἄλογοι, Irrationals than Rationals, and therefore it was neceſſary, that the Logos (Reaſon) of God ſhould come, to recover and repair them (z) as Athanaſius diſcourſeth. So Jobius in Photius will have the Evangeliſts Logos, to ſignifie Reaſon ſent to repair Mankind, that were become Irrational, and this Logos he calleth πλαστȣργόν, the Former of all things. (a) Some eximiouſly learned Men carp at ſome ancient Writers of the Church as ſpeaking of God the Logos, of the Irrationality of Men and the Participation of the Logos in a Philoſophical way and ſtile, not a Theological. But it is ill Nature and want of Grace, to ſay of thoſe learned Men, that they carp at the ancient Writers; for theſe Ancients are highly culpable as Paganizing the Chriſtian Logos in the firſt place into Reaſon and in the next place into demiurgic Reaſon.

(c) Quid eſt, quod dicunt, jubente Patre omnia creaſſe Filium, tanquam Pater non creaverit, ſed à Filio creari juſſerit? Cogitent qui carnaliter ſapiunt, quibus aliis verbis juſſerit Pater unico verbo. S. Aug. ap. Petav. ſupr.

(d) Ibid. T. 1. l. 5. c. 8, 9. T. 2. l. 8. c. 4.

(e) Verbum non à Verbo accepit mandatum: Sed in Verbo unigenito Patris eſt omne mandatum. Tract. 47. in Johan.

(f) P. 284, & 44.

(g) P. 83.

(h) P. 45, 51.

(i) P. 48, 83.

(k) P. 97.

(l) P. 10.

(m) P. 146.

(n) P. 145.

(o) P. 88, 102.

(p) Habebat enim ſecum quam habebat in ſemetipſo, rationem ſuam ſcilicet. Rationalis enim Deus, & ratio in ipſo prius: Et ita ab ipſo omnia. Hanc Græci λόγον dicunt. C. Prax. c. 5, 6.

(q) S. Cypr. de Idol. van.

(r) Str. l. 5. p. m. 441.

(1.) As Paganizing the Chriſtian Logos into Reaſon (Philoſophic-paganizing the Matters of the Chriſtian Theology) not diſtinguiſhing (as they ought) between Nature and Grace, Natural and Evangelical, Holy and Prophane, Phyſiology and Theology, Logical and Theological, the mundane Syſtem and the Kingdom of God, Heathen People (and Philoſophers) and God's People, common Science (which treateth of Reaſon) and the Science of Chriſtian Sanctity which is the knowledge of Chriſt Jeſus. They that are pleas'd with a Godleſs kind of God and a Chriſtleſs kind of Chriſt may find them in theſe ancient Writers Interpretations of the Logos and their Expoſition of the Proem of S. John's Goſpel, which are devoid of Divine Senſe, diſſonant from the Genius of the New Teſtament, and alien from Chriſt (the Deity thereof) who if in reſpect of his Divine Nature he is (definitively) Reaſon, and was chiefly deſign'd, to repair and improve Humane Reaſon, ought to have founded an Academy of Scholars, and not a Church or Commonwealth of Saints. According to this mode of Theologizing (which deſerveth Caſaubon's Cenſure, that it is a toying and trifling in Divine Matters) this is the Senſe of the firſt Verſe of our Evangeliſt, In the beginning Reaſon was, and Reaſon was with God, and Reaſon was God (b) and thus a late Paraphraſt hath render'd it. A Paganical kind of Deity is the Divine Logos of theſe Ancients; for ſuch is their Logical and Phyſiological kind of Logos (c) as Origen will have it. Some of them obſerve (d) that Logos (Sermonem ſignificat & Rationem) ſignifieth both Speech and Reaſon, and they are willing, that in our Evangeliſt's Text and in the ſame place it ſhould be underſtood in both theſe Notions, which they underſtand no otherwiſe than as the ancient Heathen did (e) who made their Mercury the Preſident (utriuſque λόγȣ, tum rationis tum orationis) of both Logos's of Reaſon and Speech. But that in our Evangeliſt's Text it cannot ſignifie in their unholy Senſe Reaſon, is demonſtrable from that parallel place the firſt Verſe of his firſt Epiſtle, where ὁ λόγος τῆς ζωῆς, cannot be rendred the Reaſon of Life. The Word is a Religious Name (it denoteth that which is Religion) and it is a Name diſtinctive of the Second Perſon in the Chriſtian Trinity from the other Perſons of the Godhead: But Reaſon is no diſtinctive Name of a Perſon in the Chriſtian Godhead, it is only a Name diſtinctive of the Second Perſon in the Godhead of the School of Plato and thoſe few Fathers, who Platonize ſo far, as to ſuppoſe God the Father (f) κρείσσων ἢ πᾶσα λογικὴ φύσις, tranſcendent to all rational Nature. In the Platonic Phyſiology and mundane Syſtem the ſecond archical Hypoſtaſis muſt be the firſt Intellect or Reaſon; the Name Reaſon is fit and accommodate for this Platonic Son of God; for meer Intellect or Reaſon is that which conſtituteth and diſtinguiſheth him: But it doth not conſtitute, diſtinguiſh and denominate a Son of God, much leſs the only begotten Son of God. Reaſon is not his proper Eſſence, nor ſpecific Nature or Difference, nor that which is characteriſtical and diſtinctive of him; it is not that which he is of definitive notion or proper kind, nor his proper kind of thing; ὁ λόγος therefore as it ſignifieth Reaſon, cannot be his Name and Character. To ſuppoſe it ſuch, is to make Reaſon his forma ultima (forma ultima denominat) which is a commonizing and prophaning him. For meer Reaſon is a vile and common kind of Good and Excellency (on this ſide the Saint of God-kind of Goods and Excellencies) and is it likely, that the Evangeliſt ſhould notice and characterize the Son of God by that which is on this ſide a Saint of God, and which is common to wicked Men and Devils? That he ſhould characterize him by that which is not ἰδιότης χαρακτηρίζων, a characteriſtical property, and characterize his Divinity by that which is of Kind and Quality but Naturaliſm and Unregeneracy? Some ſay, that λόγος was a term of Art, whereby the Gentiles in the Apoſtles days expreſs'd a Divine Perſon, agreeably whereto the Evangeliſt muſt be ſuppos'd to ſpeak; and therefore

---

(s) T. 1. Com. in Joh. p. 25, 46, 47.

(t) Periarchon. l. 1. c. 3

(u) C. Celſ. l. 5. p. 258. l. 6. p. 325.

(w) Petav. de Trin. l. 6. c. 1. S. 2. & c. 9. & c. 11. S. 4.

(x) Idem T. 4. l. 5. c. 19. S. 3.

(y) Idem de Trin. l. 6 c. 5. S. 13. l. 7. c. 12. S. 16.

(z) Idem T. 4. l. 2. c. 15. S. 4. Le

(a) Veteres quoſdam Eccleſiæ Scriptores cavillantur viri quidam eximiè eruditi, quaſi de Deo λόγῳ, hominum ἀλογίᾳ & illa τȣ̃ λόγȣ μετοχῇ Philoſophico dicendi modo ſtyloque, & non Theologico uterentur. Montacut. Appar. 1. n. 55.

(b) M. Le Clerk.

(c) C. Celſ. l. 5. p. 247.

(d) Tertull. c. Prax. c. 5. Apol. c. 21. S. Aug. de 5. Hær. c. 6. Lactant. l. 4. c. 9.

(e) Voſſ. de Idol. l. 2. c. 32

(f) Euſeb. pr. Ev. l. 7. c. 13.

Orpheus, Timæus Locrus, the Stoicks and the Platoniſts with their Logos are with great pomp brought upon the Stage, to interpret the Evangeliſt's Logos, although their Logos is no better an Interpretation of the Evangeliſt's Logos than Philo Byblius's Ἐλιοῦν is of the Hebrews Gneljôn, the words are the ſame, but the things are vaſtly diſſonant. The Pagan Theiſts were univerſally Mundane Theiſts, and their Logos was the Logos of their Mundane Theiſm, which Chriſtians muſt account Exotick and Heterogeneous; for how vaſtly diſſonant is the God-kind of Logos from their common Reaſon and Underſtanding.

(2.) As Paganizing the Chriſtian Logos into Demiurgic Reaſon. For Athenagoras noticeth our Divine Logos in the ſame manner that Anaxagoras notic'd his Νοῦς or Demiurgic Mind. Πάντα χρήματα ἦν ὁμοῦ· εἶτα Νοῦς ἐλθὼν αὐτὰ διεκόσμησε· All things were jumbled together; then came Mind and made a regular diſpoſal of them. J. Mart. hath made a medly of two very diſſonant paganical Logos's the Platonic and Stoical. For ſometimes (g) he confoundeth our Logos with the Platonic Demiurgic Logos: but his ſeminary Divine Reaſon he borroweth from the School of the Stoicks, who call God (their God) σπερματικὸν Λόγον τοῦ κόσμου, the ſeminary Reaſon of the World. By Seneca he is called ratio faciens (Demiurgic Reaſon) which Stoical Notion of the Deity (h) Grotius hath cited (together with certain counterfeit Sayings of Orpheus) to interpret or illuſtrate the Evangeliſt's Logos. Multitudes of the like Notices touching a Demiurgic Mind and Reaſon occur in the Heathen Writers, which (ſo far as they are true) are the ſuggeſtions of Natural Reaſon, and are of great regard in meer Theiſm or Natural Religion, but do all the Heathen Naturaliſts Notices of a Demiurgic Reaſon advance any Man one Hair's-breadth towards the knowledge of Chriſt Jeſus? They are Branches of Natural Theiſm, but are they alſo Branches of Goſpel-Theiſm? If Reaſon and a Demiurgic Wiſdom is the Evangeliſt's Logos, we muſt comment upon theſe words of his, All things were made by him, (v. 3.) as a late Paraphraſt doth. (i) Theſe things concern not Cerinthus, who did not deny, that all things were made by Reaſon: but they are ſpoken, that Chriſtians might underſtand, that to be true which Philo and other Jews before him taught touching the Creation of the World by the Logos. They are oppos'd to the Doctrine of the Epicureans, which was, that all things were made fortuitouſly and without Reaſon. If it be reaſonable, to ſuppoſe, that Chriſt's Evangeliſts write their Goſpels againſt Epicurus and Lucretius and their fortuitous concourſe of Atoms, then it is reaſonable, to ſuppoſe, that Reaſon and Demiurgic Reaſon is our Evangeliſt's Logos: but till this marvellous Incongruity appeareth, to be reaſonable and agreeable, we muſt agree with S. Auſtin, who upon the firſt Verſe of our Evangeliſt (In the beginning was the Word, and the Word was with God, and the Word was God) thus commenteth. (k) Hoc autem animalis homo non percipit, this the Natural Man doth not underſtand. He ſuppoſeth therefore, that our Evangeliſt's Logos and his honourary Attributes are matter of ſupernatural Revelation; and not only ſo, but that they are the Chriſtian and Divine Good and Excellency, which the Heathen Naturaliſts (notwithſtanding their Diſcourſes of a Demiurgic Reaſon) do not underſtand. S. Chryſoſtom ſaith of our Evangeliſt, (l) οὐδὲν ἀνθρώπινον τῶν τούτου, ἀλλὰ θεῖά τε καὶ οὐράνια ἐστι τὰ διδάγματα, Nothing of this Evangeliſt is Humane, but his Doctrines are Divine and Heavenly. But if Reaſon and a Demiurgic Reaſon is our Evangeliſt's Logos, his Doctrines are not Divine and Heavenly, they are no better than Humane-kind of Documents, and as good Notices of things are in meerly Humane and Heathen Authors, and in every Man's Underſtanding that is not an Atheiſt. Such a Logos properly belongeth to the Pagans Mundane Phyſiology.

X. A ſixth ſort of (Abſtract) Creative Logos is the uſual Scholaſtic Verbum, which hath been conſider'd already, and muſt now again come under conſideration, becauſe it pretendeth, to be the Logos of our Evangeliſt. Logos ſometimes ſignifieth a Notion of the Mind (ἔννοια) which Philoſophers call Verbum Mentis, and in this Acceptation the Son of God is ſuppoſed, to be called Logos, (m) as being Proles Mentis the Iſſue (from Eternity) of the Intelligent Mind of the Father, as in us Verbum Mentis (a Notion of the Mind) hath its origin from our Intelligence. If our Mind perfectly comprehendeth it ſelf, our mental Word containeth and expreſſeth our whole Mind, of which it is the Image, and whatever is in it is repreſented in our mental word: ſo the word of God (his Verbum Mentis) containeth in it and expreſſeth the whole Father. (n) It is the Image both of the Divine Subſtance and Hypoſtaſis which is the Father, and of all thoſe things, which in any ſort are therein contain'd. And becauſe all created Beings are contained in God as in their Cauſe and Idea, therefore they are all delineated and deſcrib'd in this Divine Mental Word, whereby God created all things as by their Idea and Exemplar. But there is this difference between the Mental Word in God and in us; in us it doth not proceed from our Eſſence and it is non-ſubſiſtent: but the Divine Subſtance (ipſa eſt intellectio) is it ſelf Intellection (the knowledge of himſelf and of all things) from which Intellection (otherwiſe called dictio interna) the Divine Mental Word hath its origin and is the terminus of it; whence it is ſaid, to proceed from and be born of, the Eſſence and Subſtance of God. And becauſe this Divine Mental Word is from the very Subſtance of God by true Generation, and that Generation it ſelf is the Subſtance of the Genitor (not an Action ſuperadded to the Subſtance) therefore this Divine Word is eſſential, ſubſtantial, ſubſiſtent, living, intelligent, wiſe, and not different from the producer of it by any property of Eſſence. In this account of their Mental-conceptional Verbum the School Divines agree, but not without conſiderable diſagreements amongſt themſelves, and greater diſagreements of their Verbum from the Evangeliſt's Logos. For,

(1.) They ſay of the Logos, (o) when he is called Verbum, he is not compared to External Speech, which is properly Sermo, which conſiſteth of ſeveral words: but to the Interiour Notion and Conception, which is called by Philoſophers Verbum mentis non ſermo, which is of a ſimple uncompounded nature, not like an Oration, a thing conſiſting of divers parts. The Divine Notion therefore which is moſt ſimple, ought to have much rather the Name of Verbum than of Sermo, ſeeing by one only word, not by more and repeated words, God the Father ſaid and made all things. This Mental-conceptional or Notional

(g) Apol. 2. p. 93.

(h) Not. in Joh. 1. 1.

(i) Hæc nihil ad Cerinthum, qui non negabat à Ratione omnia eſſe facta: ſed dicuntur, ut intelligerent Chriſtiani, verum eſſe quod Philo aliique ante eum Judæi docebant de creatione mundi per Λόγον. Oppoſita ſunt doctrinæ Epicureorum, qui ſine ratione & caſu omnia facta eſſe contendebant. M. le Clerk.

(k) Tr. 1. in Johan.

(l) Hom. 2. in Johan.

(m) Petav. de Trin. l. 3. c. 10. S. 2. l. 5. c. 8. S. 7. l. 6. c. 2.

(n) Ibid. l. 6. c. 4. S. 8. & c. 2 S. 6, 8. Aquin. 1. Qu. 34. Art. 1. & 2.

(o) Petav. ibid. l. 6. c. 4. S. 5.

Word is like a Vocabulum or a Word that is but a part of Speech; it is not like an Oration or Sermo (a perfect Speech) ſuch as a Propoſition or Diſcourſe. But the Evangeliſt's Logos is Sermo; therefore he doth not mean by it this Scholaſtick Verbum. The word Logos (deriv'd from λέγω) uſually and properly ſignifieth Sermo, (p) the Scholaſtic Divines acknowledge, that it rather ſignifieth Sermo than Verbum, in all the Latin Fathers it is rendred Sermo, agreeably whereto the Syriac rendreth it; Eraſmus is of Opinion, that it ought to be ſo rendred, and he is follow'd by Calvin, Beza and ſeveral others. The Scholaſtic Divines that diſpute for their Verbum (q) ſometimes render it Sermo. And Chamier ſaith, (r) that λόγος cannot ſignifie Verbum niſi abuſive, and that it rather anſwereth to Sermo or Ratio. The Evangeliſt's λόγος muſt be ſuppos'd to ſignifie Sermo, which is nothing like the Scholaſtic Verbum.

(2.) A brangling Diſpute there is amongſt the Schoolmen touching the Identity of intellectio & dictio interna (Intellection and internal Saying:) but the chief of them affirm, that Cogitation or Intellection which is our Mental-conceptional or Notional Word, (s) locutio ſive dictio nominatur, is that which is called ſpeaking or ſaying; for to ſay within our ſelves, is nothing elſe, but to think within our ſelves. But it is manifeſt, that a Man may think of Blaſphemy or other falſe and fooliſh things without ſpeaking Blaſphemy, Falſhood and Filthineſs. In the Holy Scriptures thoſe that are ſaid, to ſpeak or ſay within themſelves, are not thoſe that only form a ſimple Notion or Conception in their Mind, but thoſe that form in their Mind and aſſent to a Propoſition. The Scripture is not acquainted with any dictio interna or Verbum mentis, which is not a Speech formally or equivalently (an Affirmation, Negation, Command or the like;) the Verbum mentis therefore or dictio interna of the Schools (which is not like a Speech, but a part of Speech only) is not tolerable Senſe or Language in Theology; nor any where elſe ſave only in the Schools, of ſubtil philoſophizing, where all our Cogitations, Conceptions and Intellections are called λόγος ἐνδιάθετος, an Internal Speech. Which yet is not ſo to be underſtood, as if we were ſuppoſed to ſay all the falſe and fooliſh things that come into our Mind: but we are ſuppoſed internally to ſpeak of them, which is that which Philoſophy meaneth by λόγος ἐνδιάθετος, Internal Speech. If our Mind therefore thinketh of it ſelf, or if God is the Object of his own Cogitation, the Schools, if they will ſpeak truly and properly, (t) ought not to ſay dicit ſeipſum, but dicit de ſeipſo. And if they would ſpeak thus truly and properly the production of an infinite perſon by their dictio interna would appear to themſelves, to be a very vain and fond Imagination. Beſides, their Senſe and Language is altogether alien from the Scripture, and therefore cannot be the Senſe of it touching our Divine Logos.

(3.) The generality of the School-Divines affirm, that their Notional Verbum is a Verbum properly ſuch, as proper is oppos'd to tropical: but Chamier (who in the main is a Scholaſtic Divine) diſputeth and proveth, (u) that this Scholaſtic Verbum is but a Metaphorical Verbum, and ſome of the Pontifician Divines (Salmero and Lucas Brugenſis) are of his Opinion. And the thing is plain and manifeſt from the Phraſeology of the School-Divines. For they ſay of their Notional Verbum, (w) habitudinem habet ad dicentem (it importeth a relation to a Speaker;) the Cogitation which this Verbum is, locutio ſive dictio nominatur (is called Speaking or Saying) dicere in patre eſt Verbum proferre (ſaying in the Father is a producing the Verbum) all which Phraſeology is plainly Metaphorical. But therefore the Evangeliſt's Verbum cannot be the Scholaſtic Verbum; for his Verbum is the Word of Life and Salvation, and the Word of God in the ſenſe of the New Teſtament, which cannot be ſuppos'd, to be a meer Metaphorical Verbum. Nor may we ſuppoſe his being conceived, begotten and born, to be only improper and metaphorical, and himſelf, to be only an improper and metaphorical Child and Son of God. Yet ſuch he is according to this Scholaſtic Theology, which ſuppoſeth his Conception to be only Notional; his being begotten and born to be only Mental-conceptional (which it impudently calleth true Generation;) and his being a Child or Son to be only a Child of the Mind (a Thought or Notion) as is before diſcours'd. If we ſtile our Saviour Verbum mentis as expreſſive of the Mind of his Father in an Holy-popular Senſe, this is his true Character. But to ſtile him Verbum mentis in the Senſe of Schoolmen and Metaphyſicians, is deſtructive to the truth and propriety of his Generation and Sonſhip, as is viſible in S. Auſtin's Phraſeology, which is manifeſtly Metaphorical. (x) Dicere & eructare idem eſſe ait ac generare. Quid eſt dico? Verbum profero. Yet in this Theology it is a maxim, (y) eo ipſo Filius quòd Verbum, he is therefore a Son or Child becauſe he is a Notional Verbum, a Child of the Mind and born of it. But who ſeeth not, that in this Appellation of Verbum (in the Scholaſtic Senſe) there is a double impropriety? For a Notion of the Mind is but improperly Verbum, and is much more improperly Filius. Scholaſtic Divines therefore are ill obſervers of their own Rule, which is to follow the proper ſignification of words; for they have ſlighted our Evangeliſt's proper Appellation, which is Verbum vitæ, the vital Word, and ſubſtituted an hugely improper Appellation of their own, which is Verbum mentis, the mental Word.

(4.) The Proceſſion of the Divine Verbum is by and from Intellect (and the Proceſſion of the Holy Spirit is from the Divine Will) as the Appellation of Verbum mentis ſignifieth. But againſt this receiv'd Doctrine of the Schools Durandus argueth, (z) that the Creatures have not a generative fecundity by or from Intellect, but antecedently thereto by their (Vital) Nature; therefore it is ſo in God. This Argument will appear, to have great ſtrength in it, if we conſider, that Generation is a propagation of the Species, and conſequently of the Vital Nature conſtitutive of every Species. In Men and other Animals Generation is the production of the Animal-vital Nature; therefore Generation in divinis is definitively the Communication of the Divine Vital Nature, and conſequently the proximate Principle of it is not Intellect. As none but unholy Scholaſticks can believe, (a) that the Divine Nature and Eſſence is conſtituted by Intellection (which is common to Wicked Men and Devils:) ſo one would hope, it ſhould be peculiar to Men of that Character, to believe, that not Grace, (Life and Nature Divine) in us, but Notion (empty and unholy Notion) anſwereth to the Son of God, and is of like original, being alike the Operation of Intellect. Another Argument Durandus urgeth; The condition of Intellect is oppoſite to Fecundity, (Theory is barren, there is no productive cauſality

---

(p) Ibid. S. 4.

(q) Ibid. l. 3. c. 10 S. 6. Gonet. Clyp. T. 5. Diſp. 9. p. 546.

(r) Panſtrat. T. 2. l. 1. c. 7.

(s) Petav. ſupr. l. 6. c. 2. S. 2.

(t) V. Vaſqu. in 1. Thom. T. 2. Diſp. 141.

(u) Ubi ſupr. c. 7, 8.

(w) Petav. ſupr. l. 3. c. 10. S. 6. l. 6. c. 2. S. 5, 7.

(x) Ibid. l. 7. c. 14. S. 6.

(y) Ibid. S. 3. & in Addend. p. 875.

(z) 1. Diſt. 6. Qu. 2.

(a) Gonet. Cyp. T. 1. Diſp. 2. p. 225.

lity in ſpeculative Intellect ſave only of Notion;) therefore it cannot be the principle of an Act, which is the production of a Divine Perſon. If a Divine Perſon might be produc'd by a meer Act of ſpeculative Intellection, a like Act might produce the whole Creation without any ſuch Divine Volitions, as Fiat Lux, Fiat Firmamentum. But this is not all that Durandus hath to ſay againſt the Doctrine of the Schools; for he argueth, that Intellection, one and the ſame Intellection is in all the three Divine Perſons; if therefore the Intellection of the Father is the Scholaſtic Verbum, or is productive thereof, the Intellection of the Son and of the Holy Ghoſt alſo muſt be ſo. By the Eſſential Intellection in God (called Logos (b) by Irenæus) no Scholaſtic Verbum is produc'd; therefore no ſuch Verbum is produc'd by the Perſonal Intellection. This ſound Argument gravell'd the Monk Jobius (c) as Photius obſerveth: but the Schoolmen (that will not ſeem to be baffled) pretend to anſwer it. One anſwereth, (d) that the Verbum is not produc'd by every Intellection, but by that only which hath the reſpect of Production: but it is very plain, that there is no ſuch Intellection, as there is no ſuch Speculation, which hath the reſpect of Production. Another anſwereth, (e) that it is intellection modify'd with the relation of Paternity which produceth the Verbum; as if the relation of Paternity was not poſteriour to Generation, which is the Foundation of it. Another Scholaſtic Divine anſwereth, (f) that the Intellection productive of the Verbum, is that which expreſſeth the ſimilitude of him that is underſtood (which all Intellection doth;) or it is Intellection endow'd with a certain Fecundity; and he might as well talk of barren Theory endow'd with a certain Fecundity. A fourth Schoolman anſwereth from Aquinas, (g) that we muſt diſtinguiſh between (intellectionem & dictionem) Intellection common to all the Perſons and Saying proper to the Father. Which Anſwer deſerveth Chamier's cenſure, (h) immanis βαττολογία eſt, propter terminorum identitatem; it is an huge nugacity becauſe of the identity of the terms, which differ in ſound, but in ſenſe are the ſame. So a principal Schoolman determineth, that (i) intellectio, dictio interna, verbum mentis, are in us the very ſame, and there is no reaſon, why they ſhould be diſtinguiſh'd in God, as Chamier rightly affirmeth.

(5.) The principal Maxims of the Schoolmen touching their Verbum mentis are diſlik'd by ſeveral Scholaſtic Divines, and their Argumentations are cenſur'd as of no validity. Zanchy ſaith, (k) What the Schoolmen write touching God the Father, that by ſeeing and conſidering himſelf he generated the Logos, and that the emanation of the Son from the Father is according to the emanation of Intellect, and other things of that nature, which have no teſtimony from the Word of God, but are only excogitated by Humane Subtilty, theſe, if they be Aſſertions, are to be rejected by us as temerarious and vain, to ſay no worſe. For who knoweth, how the Father generated the Son, whether by way of Intellect, or by way of Love, or ſome other way? The Schoolmen know not, that the Proceſſion of the Son is from Intellect, and Self-cogitation, nor that he proceedeth from the cognition of all the Divine Perſons and of all poſſible Creatures, nor how all created Beings are in God, nor that they are deſcrib'd and delineated in the Divine Logos; they know not any thing of theſe Metaphyſical Matters, of which they talk with the greateſt confidence. And they are as good at deducing Conſequences as the Hebrew Doctors (that can infer quidlibet ex quolibet) for there is no Conſequence in theſe Scholaſtic Argumentations. The Intellection of God is his Eſſence and Subſtance; therefore a Verbum mentis is produc'd by it, that hath the Divine Eſſence, Nature and Subſtance. The Intellection of God the Father is the Eſſence and Subſtance of God; therefore his Verbum mentis muſt be a Subſiſtent, Subſtantial, and Divine Perſon diſtinct from God the Father. An ordinary Underſtanding would rather make this Inference. If the Intellection of God the Father is the Eſſence and Subſtance of God, his Verbum mentis cannot be any thing diſtinct from God the Father; at leaſt not any thing more diſtinct than the Verbum mentis of a Man or Angel is diſtinct from the Intellectualiſt. Accordingly Vaſquez ſaith, (l) before the Myſtery of the Trinity was reveal'd, one might grant, that there is Intellection in God, (ſed eam eſſe ipſammet eſſentiam Dei, non autem productionem alicujus Verbi) but that this Intellection is the very Eſſence of God, not the Production of any Perſonal Verbum. The Intellection of God and his Mental-conceptional Verbum are abſolutely the ſame, and if both are the ſame with the Eſſence and Subſtance of God, there cannot be in God the production of a diſtinct perſonal Verbum by Intellection; and conſequently there is no ſuch thing as the Scholaſtic Logos. The Intellection of God the Father being the ſame with his Eſſence and Subſtance is not producible; therefore his Verbum mentis is not producible, and conſequently it is not the Evangeliſt's Logos.

(6.) The Logos of the School-Divines as it is unpopular is toto genere diſſonant from the Evangeliſt's Logos. If we ſuppoſe, that his Logos is the ſame with theirs, we muſt ſuppoſe him a School-philoſophic Writer, that he uſeth the Name Logos in a School-philoſophic Senſe, and that he writeth his Evangely only for the uſe and benefit of a few, namely, the School-philoſophic Men, who call their Logos or Verbum, (m) divina notio (the Divine Notion) and they reſemble it to that Interiour Notion of the Mind of Man (quæ à philoſophis verbum mentis nominatur) which is called by Philoſophers The Word of the Mind. (n) As Verbum ſignifieth the Exteriour Word, ſo it is underſtood by all, that underſtand and ſpeak the Latin Tongue: (At de interiori pauci tantum, nempe philoſophi) but they are few, namely Philoſophers only, that underſtand it of the Interiour Word, or Verbum mentis. The Evangeliſt's Logos therefore by the School-Divines is interpreted, (o) de obſcuris paucorum Scholaſticorum cogitationibus, of the obſcure Cogitations of a few Scholaſticks. But our Evangeliſt (p) was a poor Fiſherman, not converſant in what the World calleth Learning, either before or after he convers'd with Chriſt; no Rhetorician, no Sophiſt, no Philoſopher, but unacquainted with the Secular Wiſdom. And he wrote his Evangely for the common Edification of the Faithful and the common Salvation of all Men. Beza therefore thinketh it not at all probable, that the Evangeliſt by his Logos meant the Scholaſtic Verbum. (q) Mihi non fit veriſimile, tam ſubtiliter illum voluiſſe hoc loco diſſerere. Another ſaith, (r) This Interpretation hath too much Subtilty in it, to be agreeable to the Simplicity of Evangelical Doctrine. (s) Chriſt is called ὁ λόγος, not in reſpect of any ſuch Scholaſtical Senſe (ſaith another) but becauſe he doth reveal and make known the Will of God to us. Scholaſtic Divines ſee reaſon, to diſcard the Scholaſtic Verbum, and there is the ſame reaſon, to diſcard the Platonic Logos.

(b) L. 2. c. 48.

(c) Col. 631.

(d) Vaſqu. ſupr. Diſp. 112. c. 4.

(e) Gonet. ſupr. T. 5. Diſp. 2. p. 54.

(f) Petav. ſupr. l. 6. c. 4. S. 6. l. 3. c. 10. S. 2.

(g) Valentia T. 1. Diſp. 2. Qu. 1. punct. 3.

(h) Supr. c. 8.

(i) Vaſqu. ſupr. Diſp. 112. c. 4. & Diſp. 141. c. 4.

(k) De 3. Elohim par. 1. l. 5. c. 8.

(l) Supr. Diſp. 112. c. 4.

(m) Petav. ſupr. l. 6. c. 1. S. 5.

(n) Chamier. Panſtrat. T. 2. l. 1. c. 8.

(o) Ibid. c. 7.

(p) S. Chryſoſt. Hom. 2. in Johan.

(q) Annot. in Joh. 1. 1

(r) Gomarus.

(s) Burgeſs vindic. Leg. Lect. 8. p. 80. ed. 1.

(7.) The Scholaſtic Verbum and the Platonic Logos are of great affinity, for both are expreſſive and alſo factive of the Univerſe. Whence the Scholaſtic Divines ſay of God, (t) God did firſt ſay as it were in himſelf the Univerſe of Creatures, before he made it according to and by that ſame word or locution of his. S. Auſtin calleth the Word of God a certain Art of the omnipotent and wiſe God full of all Reaſons living and incommutable. So the Platonic Logos is (u) omniformis formarum omnium ratio, an Univerſe of all Reaſons, abſtract (living) Forms and Species. Agreeably to what the Platoniſts ſay of their Logos the Scholaſtic Divines ſay of their Verbum (w) Eſt Idea quam & λόγον, id eſt, rationem, ſive deſcriptionem futuri operis appellant veteres. It is the Idea, which the Ancients alſo call Logos, that is, the reaſon or deſcription of the future Creation-work. It is the Art and Idea of the ſupreme Artificer. The Ideas both in the Platonic Logos and the Scholaſtic Verbum are called (x) δημιουργικοὶ λόγοι, demiurgic Reaſons, (y) both of them are alike accommodate for Speculation (for according to S. Auſtin the Angels ſpeculate all things in Verbo;) and ſo great is the affinity between theſe two Logos's, that ſome of the principal Scholaſtic Divines (z) are willing, that they ſhould be accounted the very ſame, if the Arianiſm which the Platonic Triad involveth, be taken away. This great affinity between them inferreth, that if the one of theſe Logos's is ſpurious and illegitimate, the other cannot be true and genuine.

(t) Priùs in ſe quaſi dixiſſe cunctam creaturam, quàm eam ſecundum eandem & per eandem ſuam locutionem conderet. Anſelm. ap. Petav. T. 1. l. 4. c. 11. S. Auguſtinus Verbum Dei artem quandam vocat omnipotentis atque ſapientis Dei, plenam omnium rationum viventium incommutabilium. Ibid.

(u) Ficin. in Plotin. p. 46.

(w) Petav. de Trin. l. 6. c. 3. S. 9. l. 3. c. 6. S. 11.

(x) Idem T. 1. l. 4. c. 11.

(y) Ibid. c. 2.

(z) Ibid. c. 9.

(8.) The Scholaſtic Logos as unholy (a common and unholy kind of thing) is toto genere diſſonant from the Evangeliſt's Logos, (a) Cur hoc ſanctum venerandumque ſecretum ad profanos actus adulterata profeſſione transfertis? Why is it, that you transfer this holy and venerable Secret to common and profane Acts (of Mental Notion and Intellection) by your illegitimate profeſſion of Scholaſticiſm? For a bare word is not that which holy People call The Word, nor the Evangeliſt's Word, which belongeth not to common Learning. As the Idea of God, ſo the Idea of the Son or Logos of God cannot belong to the common Learning of Metaphyſicks, which treateth of Entity, but not of Sanctity, and is not genuine Theology, but Ontology. Agreeably whereto the ancient Scholaſtic Divines of the Church have ſtiled their Metaphyſical Logos or Son of God, (b) τὸ ὄντως ὄντα, τὸ πᾶσι τοῖς οὖσι τοῦ εἶναι παρεκτικόν, He that truly is, that giveth Being to all Beings. In their Diſpute againſt the Arians they maintained, that the primigenial τὸ ὂν did belong to the Son, and were careful to load him with ſuch Metaphyſical Attributes as theſe; (c) ἐξ ὑποστάσεως ὑπόστατος, καὶ ἐξ οὐσίας οὐσιώδης καὶ ἐνούσιος, καὶ ἐξ ὄντος ὤν. He is ſubſiſtent from Subſiſtence, from Subſtance ſubſtantial and eſſential, and (ex Ente Ens) Being from Being. It is poſſible, to make a tolerable good ſenſe of theſe Attributes, but they are not agreeable Notices of the Son of God, nor ſavour of the Chriſtian Theology, they are alien from his kind of Attributes, and they miſrepreſent him as a Platonic and Metaphyſical kind of Logos.

(a) Jul. Firmic. de error. p. 40.

(b) S. Baſil. c. Eunom. l. 2. p. 56. S. Cyr. c. Jul. l. 8. p. 265.

(c) S. Athanaſ. c. Arian. or. 5. p. 303. Com.

(9.) The Evangeliſt's Logos is of the ſame nature with other honourary Names and Attributes of our Saviour, which ought to be underſtood in an Holy-popular and Evangelical ſenſe, but in the Scholaſtic Theology are diſtorted to an Unchriſtian and School-philoſophic ſenſe. For ſo this Theology proveth, (d) that the Son was generated antecedently to any Will of God (before God did will any thing) becauſe the Son is the Wiſdom of God, and Wiſdom is before Will. The Apoſtle calleth Chriſt The Power of God and the Wiſdom of God becauſe of the illuſtrious exerciſe of thoſe Divine Attributes in the Evangelical Oeconomy, 1 Cor. 1. 24. But this Theology underſtandeth theſe Attributes in a School-philoſophic ſenſe (as we have ſeen before) and ſuppoſeth them to be meant of the Scholaſtic Verbum, as he is the Idea and the Art of the ſupreme Artificer. (e) Omnia in ſapientia Pater facit: id eſt, omnia per filium fecit, qui eſt virtus Dei & ſapientia. The Father maketh all things in Wiſdom (ſaith S. Ambroſe:) that is, he made all things by the Son, who is the Power and Wiſdom of God. So he is ſtiled by the Alexandrian Cyril, (f) ἐνέργεια δημιουργική, δύναμις ἐνεργητική, the demiurgic Energy and Efficiency, the energetic force of the Father, whereby he was and is and ever will be operative and energetic to make all things. So S. Auſtin ſtileth God, (g) Pater verbi & ſapientiæ ſuæ, Pater virtutis ſuæ, per quam cuncta formavit. The Father of the Word and of his (demiurgic) Wiſdom, the Father of his Power by which he formed all things. (h) If Chriſt is the Wiſdom of God, and the Pſalmiſt ſaith, thou haſt made all things in Wiſdom; as all things were made by him, ſo they were made in him (ſecundum artem continet omnia antequam fabricet) he containeth all things according to art, before he maketh all things. Wiſdom is ſuppos'd to ſignifie that demiurgic Idea, Art and Reaſon, which the Scholaſtic Verbum is. But how much more Chriſtianly and Evangelically doth S. Ambroſe interpret our Saviour's Attribute of Wiſdom, when he ſaith of him, (i) ſapientia appellatur, quia de corde Patris adveniens arcana cœleſtia credentibus reſeravit. He is called Wiſdom, becauſe coming out of the Boſom of the Father he revealed the Heavenly Secrets to Believers. Such ſtrictures of very valuable truth there are in the Scholaſtic Theology, which yet in great part is nothing better than a diſtortion of the Holy Scriptures to an Unchriſtian School-philoſophy. For if Chriſt is called The Life, this Theology interpreteth it to ſignifie, that the Ideas of all things (in Verbo vita ſunt) are Life in the Scholaſtic Verbum. If Chriſt is intituled The Counſel and Will of the Father, in this Theology it meaneth, that he is (l) ἐνούσιος βούλησις, the ſubſtantive Will of the Father. (m) The Father muſt not be ſuppos'd, to ſpeak unto or command the Son, for ſo there would be two Words in the Godhead; and it would be a Sacrilegious Opinion, to ſuppoſe, that the Father by a Temporal Word ſendeth the Eternal Son. The Scripture therefore in this Theology is thus interpreted. Loqui vel mandare aliquid Filio, eſt ipſum verbum producere. To ſpeak or command any thing to the Son, is to produce the Scholaſtic Verbum. (n) Becauſe all the Creation-works are delineated and deſcrib'd in the Verbum, therefore the Apoſtle ſaith, Col. 1. 16. Omnia in ipſo creata ſunt, all things were created in him. A Theology that at this rate diſtorteth the Scriptures and the Names of our Saviour to Unchriſtian School-philoſophic Notions, muſt in all reaſon be ſuppos'd, ſo to pervert the Evangeliſt's Logos. And conſequently the Evangeliſt's Logos, as it is not The Platonic, nor the Stoical, nor the Targumick, nor the Moſaic, nor the Logical Logos, ſo neither is it the uſual Scholaſtic Logos. None of theſe

(d) Petav. de Trin. l. 6. c. 8. S. 6.

(e) Ibid. l. 4. c. 6.

(f) Ibid. l. 5. c. 8.

(g) Idem T. 1. l. 5. c. 9.

(h) Idem de Trin. l. 4. c. 2.

(i) Ibid. l. 5. c. 9.

(k) Gonet. Clyp. T. 5. p. 540.

(l) Petav. T. 1. l. 5. c. 8.

(m) Idem de Trin. l. 6. c. 4. S. 3, 5.

(n) Ibid. s. 8.

Abſtract Logos's is the Logos of our Evangeliſt.

XI. There can be no Son of God in the Senſe of Chriſtianity and the New Teſtament, which is not a Saint of God. The Evangeliſt's Logos is ſuch a Saint of God-kind of Son, and the Son of God in the ſenſe of Chriſtianity and the New Teſtament. Joh. 1. 18. But not any of thoſe multifarious Abſtract Logos's (Platonic, Stoical, Targumic, Logical, Phyſiological, or uſual Scholaſtical) is of this his eſſential Character; therefore not one of them is the Logos of our Evangeliſt. Nor is there any Abſtract Logos any where to be found, that is not like thoſe, which we have enumerated and conſider'd, and of which we may not affirm, that it may be clearly prov'd, not to be our Evangeliſt's Logos. He is thought to be ſignify'd in ſome few obſcure places of the Books called the Aprocrypha: But there is no probability of finding him there. For it is not likely, that the Deity of the New Teſtament (peculiarly ſuch) is to be found in thoſe Books, that underſtand and notice nothing of the Matters of the New Teſtament, nor ſay any thing of the Meſſias, which was in all times a great Article of the Jews Religion, and is in great part the Subject-matter of the Old Teſtament. If theſe Books did deſignedly notice the Son of God, they would deſignedly notice the Meſſias: but of him they have no notices. Nor is it likely, that they notice an Abſtract Logos the Son of God, ſeeing there is no ſuch notic'd Son of God, to be found in the Scriptures of the Old Teſtament, whence theſe Apocryphal Books derive their notices. And agreeably whereto the Book of Wiſdom muſt be interpreted, Ch. 18. 15, 16. Thine almighty word leapt down from heaven, out of thy royal throne, as a fierce man of war into the midſt of a land of deſtruction, and brought thine unfeigned commandment as a ſharp ſword, and ſtanding up filled all things with death, and it touched the Heaven, but it ſtood upon the Earth. For it is viſible, that this Story and Idea of a mighty Fierce, Military and deſtroying Executioner is altogether oppoſite to the Character of our Evangeliſt's Logos; and that this Apocryphal Paſſage is nothing elſe but the Story of the deſtroying Angel in Egypt amplified and magnificently deſcrib'd. For in the coming forth of that Angel conſider'd in complication with God's Almighty Imperial Word of Command, his almighty word leapt down from heaven, out of his royal throne, and his commandment was brought as by a fierce man of war. The Son of Sirach ſaith, Ch. 51. 10. I called upon the Lord, the Father of my Lord. But in this Author (o) Father is the Name of a Governour. The Father of my Lord is the Governour of my Lord. And he ſpeaketh of my Lord the King, from whom he was in danger of his Life, V. 6. The Book of Baruch ſaith, Ch. 3. 36, 37. This is our God, he hath found out all the way of knowledge, and hath given it unto Jacob his ſervant and to Iſrael his beloved. Afterward did he ſhew himſelf upon earth, and convers'd with men. In which words there is no appearance of an incarnate Logos, nor of any Logos or Son of God, nor of any converſe with Men in Humane Fleſh. The Author manifeſtly ſpeaketh of the God of Iſrael, the God of their Law and their σέβασμα, (whom they ſerved with their Religious Worſhip) who having ſettled Religion in the Territory of Jacob, afterward ſhewed himſelf upon Earth (exhibited a viſible appearance of himſelf, which is the Schecinah) and converſed with Men by his Oracles and otherwiſe as a God with his People. This ſeemeth to be the ſenſe of this Apocryphal Text.

XII. The Logos is but one of the Names, whereby our Evangeliſt noticeth the Perſon of whom he writeth; there are other honourary Names and Attributes, whereby he noticeth, deſcribeth, and ennobleth him; for in the Proem of his Goſpel he conjoineth the Logos and the Life. And if we can ſhew, that Life in the ſenſe of Chriſtianity and the New Teſtament is only to be found in the Chriſtian Religion, and in the Founder thereof as ſuch; and that it is the peculiarity of his Human-divine Perſon, to be and to be intituled the Life in the ſenſe of Chriſtianity and the New Teſtament; this will ſufficiently fix and determine the Evangeliſt's Senſe, and we ſhall know his Logos by the Life that he ſpeaketh of, Joh. 1. 4. In him was life, and the life was the light of men. Becauſe in him Life was (p) the benefit of life unto us; therefore the Evangeliſt denominateth him the Life, as our Saviour denominateth himſelf Joh. 11. 25. and 14. 6. And ſo the Evangeliſt denominateth him in a parallel place, The life was manifeſted, and we have ſeen it. 1 Joh. 1. 2. Life may be conſider'd in genere Entis & in genere Boni, and may ſignifie only in a ſenſe of Being (an indifferent ſenſe) and it may ſignifie in a ſenſe of Well-being. For every Subſtance in ſome ſort actively Vital hath ſome ſort of Life or Vitality in it; and they that live in Sin and Miſery to extremity, although their Life is a deadly kind of living, yet in ſome ſenſe are alive. And the Jews ſay (q) Res cujus nomen eſt homo, eſt res compoſita ex vita & ratione. But Life uſually ſignifieth (in a ſenſe of Well-being) the good and benefit of Life (Life is in its Nature a good (r) ſaith Ariſtotle) and if any live in extremity of Pain and Miſery, this is counted ἀληθῶς οὐ βίος, ἀλλὰ ξυμφορά, not to be truly Life, but Calamity, as Euripides ſpeaketh of this mortal Life, which yet hath ſomething of the good and benefit of Life in it, and our Saviour reputeth it a valuable good. Matth. 6. 25. Accordingly, Life ſignifieth, that which hath the value of Life, and ſuch a Life which is not to be valued as the good of Life, is called βίος ἄβιος, a life-leſs Life (no living Life) which is the ſenſe of thoſe common Sayings, Non eſt vita vivere, ſed valere. Vita in exilio vitalis non eſt. Nec voluptas ſine vita, nec vita ſine voluptate. Life is valuable, as it is more or leſs a Life of felicitative Enjoyment, which is an uſual ſignification of Life; (s) for the Scripture calleth our formal Felicity vitam quandam noſtram, and all Men ſpeak of Life and living with reſpect to felicitative Enjoyment. As the Phraſe of the jolly Heathen in their Revels was, Amici, dum vivimus, vivamus (by ſuch Monitions they excited one another to their Vita ἀπολαυστικὴ, Life of ſenſual Enjoyments;) the Jews Salutation to Kings was, O King live (in Felicity and Proſperity) for ever; and when they uſe this Phraſe in drinking one to another לחיים to your Life, they include Welfare and Proſperity in the ſignification of Life. So do the Holy Writers, 2 Pet. 3. 8 He that will love life and ſee good days. 1 Theſſ. 3. 8. Now we live (as to living comfortably) if ye ſtand faſt in the Lord. Becauſe of the manifold troubles of this Life a Poet ſaith (t) It is but a little part of our life that we live,

---

(o) Ch. 23. 1, 4.

(p) Maldonat. in loc.

(q) Hotting. Diſſ. de nom. Dei p. 313.

(r) Eth. Nicom. l. 9. c. 9.

(s) Valentia T. 2. p. 41. vid. Grot. Not. in Gal. 3. 12.

(t) Exigua pars eſt vitæ quam nos vivimus. Cæterum omne ſpatium non vita, ſed tempus eſt. Gat. Not. in Ant. p. 180.

the whole ſpace of it is not life but time only. As Life may be no Life, ſo (if the good and comfort of Life be wanting, and Men live in extreme ignominy and miſery) it may be worſe than none; as in thoſe days when Men ſeek Death and cannot find it. Apoc. 9. 6. The Name of Life therefore is duly appropriated to a Life (more or leſs) felicitative; and Life being the oppoſite to Death, it importeth a freedom from Death (more or leſs) and all that Death importeth. Which may be conſider'd as it importeth the criminal kind of Evils; but more eſpecially and eminently it importeth the penal kind of Evils, and in this ſenſe Life and Death are oppos'd. Deut. 30. 15. I have ſet before thee life and good, and death and evil. Prov. 12. 28. In the way of righteouſneſs is life, and in the path-way thereof there is no death. As Life and Death are oppoſites, ſo the ineſtimable value and concern of the benefit of Life will beſt appear, if it be conſider'd in complication with its oppoſite Death, agreeably to the Phraſe of Scripture, wherein the benefit of Life is thus uſually expreſs'd, that we may live and not die. Gen. 42. 2. and 43. 8. and 47. 19. Numb. 4. 19. Deut. 33. 6. 2 King. 18. 32. Pſal. 118. 17. Ezek. 18. 21, 28. and 33. 15. Life thus repreſented will appear (by many Reaſons) to be the great and only concern of Mankind, and they ought to conſider it as ſuch, that they may underſtand how unſpeakable an Excellency, and how ineſtimable a Benefit the Logos and Life of God is.

XIII. Mankind ought to account Life (that they may live and not die) their great and only Concern in Conformity to natural Inſtinct and Inclination. (u) For all Animals make it their chief Concern, to conſerve their Life, and to provide the neceſſaries thereof (ſuch as their Food and Coverts) to this they are carry'd by natural Inſtinct, and it muſt be reckoned amongſt the prima naturæ. The prime regard of all living Creatures is to Life, therein Mankind agree with other Animals and amongſt themſelves. They differ about Arts and Sciences, their Pleaſures, Faſhions and Ornaments: But they agree in the love of Life (ſome ſort of Life) and hate and fear and flee form Death with no ſinall Concern. (w) We do not all Philoſophize (ſaith Clemens) but do we not all follow after Life? This temporal Life although full of labour and trouble (x) yet is deſir'd by all, both Old and Young, Princes and Peaſants, Wiſemen and Fools. Men in exquiſite Torments yet deſire to live, if they have but Hopes to be freed from them; and ſo long they retain their deſire to live, till Pain and Torture quite ſurpaſs the ſweetneſs of Life, and extinguiſh the Senſe of it. Some have deſired to live in any Condition, though in the moſt exquiſite Torture, yet they would not die by any Means (y) as Mæcenas would rather undergo Deformity, Debility and the dolours of the Croſs, than not live. Which blind unreaſonable fondneſs for this mortal Life as an inſtance ſheweth, how deeply the love of Life is implanted in Humane Nature, as Self-love is, which is the love of Life. For the Life of a Man is himſelf; if his Life be ſav'd, he is ſav'd; if his Life is loſt, he is loſt. To ſay of Chriſt, that he gave Himſelf for us, and that he gave his Life are ſynonymous Expreſſions. Gal. 2. 20. Matth. 20. 28. (*) How do'ſt thou love thy ſelf, εἰ μὴ φιλοζωεῖς, if thou loveſt not life? Bodily Life is the ſame thing with the ſenſitive Soul, whence Saul ſaith to David, My ſoul was precious in thy ſight (becauſe his Life was precious) and Life eternal is of the ſame regard and value with the rational immortal Soul. For if Life eternal be loſt, the Man muſt be put to death as to the Soul (ſubjected to Death and dying for ever;) which is a State of Puniſhment like that of S. Baſil's Diſtemper, of which he ſaid (z) tantum vivere permittens quantum ad dolorem ſentiendum opus eſt. Whence Tatianus calleth it θάνατον ἐν ἀθανασίᾳ, S. Auſtin, mortem ſine morte, Death without dying. (a) So the Soul is loſt, and the Man is loſt, when Life is loſt. As the Soul therefore is of Value ineſtimable, of Sovereign peerleſs Regard (all worldly Things are as nothing in compariſon of the Soul;) ſo is Life, all things muſt be vilify'd and nullify'd in compariſon of Life, that the Soul may live and not die. The Soul muſt be regarded, as much as any thing can be regarded, being of immeaſurable Worth and Moment, and of the ſame Worth and momentous Importance is Life. As the Soul is our one thing and our All (nothing elſe is of very conſiderable regard) nothing more is requiſite, to make our Happineſs conſummate, than to ſave the Soul; nothing more is requiſite, to make our Miſery conſummate, than to loſe the Soul (all is loſt, if the Soul is loſt:) So the whole of Man's intereſt, is to enter into Life; and if Life is loſt, all is loſt that is valuable and deſireable (all our Honours and Comforts, all our Excellency and Felicity) and we our ſelves are loſt and caſt away. So all this World is gone, when bodily Life is gone, and in ſuch ſenſe Life may be ſtiled totus Theſaurus hominis.

XIV. Life is ſo great a Good, that in all reaſon Mankind ſhould account Life (that they may live and not die) their great and only Concern. This they ought to do, not only in compliance with blind Inſtincts, but with the plain and certain notices of Reaſon touching the good of Life. For

(1) Life is the excellency and ennoblement of a Being, and a Being is the more excellent, as the life of it is more excellent. Dead Bodies are extremely vile (κοπρίων ἐκβλητότεροι, viler than Dung) having loſt their life and livelineſs, which was their nobleneſs, amiableneſs and uſefulneſs. A dead Lion is worſe than a living Dog. Eccl. 9. 4. And in ſome reſpect what S. Auſtin ſaith is true (b) Muſca Sole præſtantior, a Fly is better than the Sun. For although in ſeveral reſpects a Fly is nothing in compariſon of the Sun, yet thus far it is a nobler Being, it hath an higher kind of Perfection than the Sun hath, having a ſenſitive Soul and Life. The Men of Country-buſineſs uſually diſparage Goods by calling them Dead-goods, and this mortal Life is duly diſparaged, when it is denominated vita minimè vitalis. The Goods of it are jejune and diſpirited things, that have in them nothing more than an overly and ſuperficial Vital ſweetneſs, and in themſelves and to us they are but as dead Carcaſes (cadaverous kind of things) the things of mortality and corruption. Matth. 8. 22. So the Muhammedans ſay (c) mundus cadaver eſt,

(u) Principio generi animantium omni eſt à natura tributum, ut ſe, vitam corpuſque tueatur: declinetque ea, quæ nocitura videantur. Omniaque quæcunque ad vivendum ſint neceſſaria, inquirat & paret: ut paſtum, ut latibula. Cic. de Off. l. 1.

(w) Clem. Pæd. l. 3. c. 11.

(x) Expetitur tamen ab omnibus & optatur: hanc enim tàm ſenes quàm pueri, tàm reges quàm infimi, tàm denique ſapientes quàm ſtulti cupiunt. Lactant. l. 3. c. 12.

(y) Debilem facito manu
Debilem pede, coxâ
Tuber adſtrue gibberum
Lubricos quate dentes
Vita dum ſuper eſt, bene eſt,
Hanc mihi vel acutâ
Si ſedeam cruce, ſuſtine.

* Clem. ſupr.

1 Sam. 26. 21.

(z) Baron. ad an. 372. n. 39.

(a) S. Aug. de C. D. l. 6. c. 12.

(b) De 2. animabus c. 4. vid. Gat. Not. in Ant. p. 205.

(c) Hotting. Hiſt. or. p. 319. Ed. 1.

eſt, & petentes eum canes. But life, living, he that liveth for ever and ever, and Lahai (he that liveth) in the Name of Hagar's Well, Gen. 16. 14. are the honourary Names and Attributes of God. Vita eſt optimus modus Entis. Life is the higheſt of all Excellencies and Perfections, it is higher than Power, which is below underſtanding; and it is higher than underſtanding, the light whereof is ſubſervient to virtuous Life, and the excellency whereof conſiſteth in its ſubſerviency to Life felicitative. The excellency of knowledge is, that wiſdom giveth life to them that have it. Eccl. 7. 12. The greateſt difference amongſt Beings is made by their different Lives, whereby they become either of the Divine or Diabolical Kind. And as none can be more vile than thoſe of the Diabolical, ſo none can be more excellent than thoſe of the Divine Kind. Which height of Excellency accrueth to them from their Life (of Grace and Glory) for * ἕκαστος ὡς ζῇ, τοῦτό ἐστιν, every one as he liveth, this he is, whether Good or Evil, Virtuous or Villainous, Happy or Miſerable. The Gnoſticks therefore ought to have preferr'd Ζωὴ, Life, and to have ſet it before all the reſt of their προβολαὶ, or Emiſſions (d) as Irenæus obſerveth.

* Procl. in Polit. p. 351.

(d) Peccaverunt autem & circa Zoen dicentes eam ſexto loco emiſſam, quam oportebat omnibus præparare. Adv. Hær. l. 2. c. 18.

(2.) Life is the neareſt and deareſt of Goods, as that uſual Expreſſion implieth, meum Cor, mea Vita. It is the neareſt Good, the moſt intimate and central, as being the Eſſence of all things living (it toucheth us to the quick) as near us as we are to our ſelves and as our own Soul. And it is the deareſt and choiceſt of Goods and Comforts (the choiceſt Jewel in our Cabinet is the Jewel of Life;) for nothing is ſo ſweet as Life, which hath a vital Solace and Refreſhment in it (Souls were called by the Pagan Theologers (e) μέλισσαι, Bees becauſe of the ſweetneſs of Life) nothing Men account ſo precious as the precious Life. Pro. 6. 26. I pray thee, let my life be precious in thy ſight, ſaith a Captain to Elijah. 2 King. 1. 13. The laying down our Life for any Perſon is the higheſt Expreſſion of ardent love to him, becauſe it is a parting with our choiceſt Treaſure. Job. 13. 38. As Death is the King of Terrors, ſo Life is the (duly reputed) King of Goods, that tranſcendeth and preponderateth all other. Skin after skin, and all that a man hath, will he give for his life. Job 2. 4. When Men would expreſs what is deareſt to them, they mention their Life and Fortune. The greateſt Good that can be done to Men, is to ſave Life, and the greateſt Hurt is to deſtroy Life, whence the one is that which conſtituteth a Saviour, the other a Deſtroyer. Luk. 9. 56. The Stoicks contempt of Life therefore and of Death is a manifeſt inſtance of their Prophaneneſs and unpopular Humour. Uſque adeone mori miſerum eſt? Non eſt res magna vivere. Such were the inhumane Maxims of their School (they thought it no great matter to live or die) their gallantry counted it Pedantry, to fear Death or to value Life, out of which (as they ſuppos'd) they might go forth when they pleas'd. But really the Life and vital Blood of a Man is a ſacred thing. Gen. 9. 5, 6. The great Ones of the World will have their Subjects, to Swear by their Life, whence it appeareth, that they account it the moſt ſacred and precious thing they have. So Joſeph ſware by the Life of Pharaoh, Ittai by the Life of David, and Eliſha by the Life of Elijah. The Primitive Chriſtians ſware (f) per ſalutem (by the Welfare or Life of the Emperours) God himſelf ſweareth by his own Life, and when Holy Men Swear (in the Old Teſtament) uſually it is by the living God, or as the Lord liveth, which form of Swearing is expreſſive of the Sacredneſs and Precioſity of Life. And the Moſaic Law in the Prohibition of eating Blood ſeemeth, to deſign, that ſuch a Sacredneſs muſt be put upon the vital Blood of Animals, it muſt not be commoniz'd as Food is, for this Reaſon, becauſe the blood is the life of all fleſh. Lev. 17. 14. (g) The Blood of Animals being the Life of Animals this conciliateth a ſort of venerableneſs to it, and therefore God injoin'd a Religious Abſtinence from it.

Vita eſt ipſum eſſe viventis.

(e) Voſſ. de Idol. l. 2. c. 28.

Sam.15. 1.
King. 2.

(f) Tertull. Apol. c. 32.

(g) Spencer. de Leg. Hebr. l. 1. c. 7. S. 2.

(3.) Life is the ſolid and ſubſtantial Good, Subſtance, not Shew or Shadow, as the Soul is an animatively vital Subſtance, which is the ſame thing with Life. Pſal. 26. 9. Gather not my ſoul with ſinners, nor my life with bloody men. So this earthly Life of Man conſiſteth in being a living Soul (Gen. 2. 7.) this Life therefore muſt be reputed in ſome ſort a ſubſtantial Good. For although it is but mutilately and diminutively Life, and if compar'd with a Diviner Life all the Vitality that is in it, is but ſuperficial and evanid, yet it is not exteriour ſhew, but ſuch a Good as Seneca wiſheth for; da mihi bonum, quod ſentiam, non quod oſtendam. And if it be compar'd with umbratile Notion and Theory, and with the impertinent Grandeurs and Fineries of the World, it muſt be counted the ſolid and ſubſtantial Good of a Man. So in Religion Spiritual Life is the ſolid and ſubſtantial Good, but the exterior Ritualities and Opinions that are devoid of it, are only ſhew and ſhadow.

(4.) Life is the firſt of all Goods and of all Neceſſaries; for there is no living virtuouſly or felicitatively without Life. Beings without Life may be uſeful to others, but without a perceptive Life themſelves can have no enjoyment of any thing; and as the Faculties and Appetites of Life decay in any, all their felicitative Enjoyments diminiſh, die and wither away. As in old Barzillai's wither'd Body; I am this Day Fourſcore Years Old: and can I diſcern between Good and Evil? Can thy Servant taſt what I Eat or what I Drink? Can I hear any more the Voice of ſinging Men and ſinging Women? All felicitative Enjoyment is founded upon Life, and groweth from that Root, which therefore is the prime fundamental Good and the firſt of all Neceſſaries. Many things Men may ſpare for this Reaſon, becauſe they can live without them (as one ſaid of Metaphors poterimus vivere ſine illis:) But they ſay uſually, They muſt live, and therefore they comply with the Vices of the World, becauſe (as they pretend) without ſo doing they cannot live. Their concern is, to live in the World, and this they account neceſſary, which is not neceſſary without due Limitation. For there are various degrees of Neceſſity, but the one thing neceſſary, which is of infinite indiſpenſable Neceſſity, is to live and not die eternally; for there is no (tolerable) living in the Region of the Second Death, no living without gaining and ſecuring eternal Life. Whence the choice of an Holy Life is not only reaſonable and of great Concern, but is to all Men matter of infinite and indiſpenſable Neceſſity; for otherwiſe they cannot live. There is no premiant Life for them, that neglect the Holy Life; they that live and die in their Sins, muſt die the Death. A neceſſity there is of having Food and Raiment: But the Meat that endureth to everlaſting Life, is of far greater Neceſſity. The light of Life is far more neceſſary than the bodily Eye-ſight; Sin unpardon'd is far worſe than peſtilential Air; and the cure of mortal Sins is a matter of far more urgent and indiſpenſable Neceſſity than the cure of mortal Diſeaſes, which if not cur'd, will certainly iſſue in Death. And is it poſſible, that Men ſhould be unconcern'd in a Matter of infinite indiſpenſable Neceſſity, and in a Caſe wherein their Life lieth at ſtake? That they ſhould not beſtir themſelves like the Gibeonites for their Lives (that they might live though but as hewers of Wood and drawers of Water) or like the Diſciples when they were ſinking and drowning (Luk. 8. 24.) or that they ſhould not Petition with Benhadad, that they may live, live upon any terms? 1 King. 20. 32.

2 Sam.19. 35.

(5.) Life is the laſt and higheſt in the Series, Order and Progreſſion of Goods, ultimum & extremum bonorum, and the final iſſue of all our Goods. For as all the Evils of the Wicked tend to and end in Death: So all the Goods of the Righteous tend to and end in Life and Immortality, which denoteth the beatitude of Heaven, that hath its Excellency and Nobilitation from Life, the Book of Life, the Tree of Life, the Crown of Life, and Life Eternal, which is (h) τὸ ἀληθινῶς ζῆν, living indeed (i) ζωὴ ὄντως, the true Life (as Plato ſpeaketh) becauſe without any mixture of the contrary: As he is a true King (k) according to Ariſtotle, whoſe Sovereignty is not mix'd with any Subjection. Eternal Life is therefore the true Life, becauſe it knoweth no death or dying, is ſubject to no withering or decay. It comprehendeth and includeth the true Joy, that knoweth no Sorrow; the true Friendſhip, that knoweth no Falling out; the true Beauty, that knoweth no Blemiſh; the true Health, that knoweth no Sickneſs; the true Glory, that knoweth no Stain or Sullying; the true Banquet, that knoweth no want of Feſtival Entertainment; the true Treaſure, that knoweth no Thief, nor Moth, nor Ruſt; the true Inheritance, that feareth no Ejection by force or fraud; the true Serenity, where no Storms or Tempeſts ariſe (where no Clouds cover the Sky, nor any toſſing Waves do come;) the true Reſt, that knoweth not any Toil or Inquietude; the true Honour, that knoweth not any Diſgrace; the true Vigour and Activity, that knoweth not any Wearineſs; the true Sweetneſs, that knoweth not any Satiety; the true Comfort, that neither feeleth nor feareth any Croſs or Calamity; the true Pleaſure, that knoweth no Pain, nor any want of Pleaſure; where Want and Weakneſs and Sin and Sorrow are baniſh'd beyond the Lines of Communication, Joy and Solace are in an eternal Spring, and all the truly vital Goods are ever ever flowing. Life eternal is the unſtained Pulchritude of Life and Living, there can be no mean and beggarly and inglorious Living, no wretched caytiff miſcreant kind of Living, no foul or ſordid way of living in Life immortal, incorruptible and eternal, which is the fulleſt height of Life and Living in conſummate Glory and Felicity. This is the Life, which as being the true Life, Life without want of Life (deletery of all that is deadly and deſtructive of Death and Mortality) and as being the final Eſtate of Life (oppoſite to the final Eſtate of Death) the New Teſtament uſually meaneth by the Name of Life. Which as it is the fulleſt height of Life, ſo it is the fulleſt height of Good; for there is no Good higher than this Zenith, to live with God and as God liveth, and to bear his Image in Immortality. When we have attain'd to this State of Life, we have attain'd our Conſummation and the height of our Perfection. Phil. 3. 12. The Myſtery of God is then finiſh'd, and all that Religion deſigneth is at an end; for nothing higher, nothing further, nothing more can be propos'd, promis'd, deſign'd or deſir'd than eternal Life. Of this Life it muſt be ſaid (l) καλλιςὸν τί ἐςιν ἡ ζωὴ, Life is a thing eximious and ſuperlative.

(6.) Life is the ultimate and final Good, as that ſignifieth the final Cauſe of all things; for there muſt be aliquid ultimum in expetendis (ſaith Ariſtotle) which is the laſt thing intended and aim'd at; all is in order to it, and it is in order to none, which therefore is the ultimate and final Good οὗ ἕνεκα, for which all things are. This ultimate and final Good as to us and our Intereſt is Life; for other things are but the way to this end (the way that leadeth unto life, Matth. 7. 14.) they are ſubordinate and ſubſervient unto Life, and are deſireable upon account of it: But Life is (m) καθ' αὐτὸ ἀγαθὸν, Self-deſirable; other Goods may be deſirable alſo for their own ſake, but they are alſo deſirable in order to Life: But (as to us and our Intereſt) Life is not deſirable in order to any further Good, all things refer to it, and it to none. The Life is more than Meat, as the End is above the Means. Matth. 6. 25. Houſes and Lands, Meat, Drink and Clothing, and all the Furniture of the Earth, Air and Sea, are deſign'd to be (n) vitæ ſubſidia, Helps of Life, by theſe things men live. Iſa. 38. 16. Reaſon and Underſtanding, Arts and Sciences, are for the uſe of Life, and ſo are our Hands and the Organs of our Body. (o) Ut facere ad vitam poſſimus quæ foret uſus. So Laws and Government are for Life, that Men may live well and happily; and what is not Life or conducive and ſubſervient to Life, is no needful good of Man, but is impertinent and inſignificant. There are many ſubordinate Ends and Goods; Health is the end of Phyſick, Refreſhment is the end of Food, Wiſdom is the end of Study, but all is for Life. Give me underſtanding and I ſhall live. Pſal. 119. 144. All things in * Religion are Life or deſign'd for Life. Bleſſed are they that do his commandments, that they may have right to the tree of Life. Apoc. 22. 14. Seek good and not evil, that you may live. Amos 5. 14. The Precepts of Religion are the Statutes of Life. Ezek. 33. 15. The Promiſe of it is Life. Deut. 32. 47. 2 Tim. 1. 1. The Reproofs and Inſtructions of it are the way of Life. Pro. 6. 23. The holy Oracles of it are the word of Life. Phil. 2. 10. The Scope of its Counſels, Exhortations, Beſeechings and Expoſtulations is, to bring Men to Repentance unto Life, and to ſave their Souls from Death. Iſ. 55. 3. Jam. 5. 20. The Goods and Benefits which it affordeth, are vitalia Beneficia, Bread, Water, Wine and Milk, which are the Suſtenance of Life. Iſa. 55. 1. Come eat of my bread, and drink of the Wine that I have mingled. Prov. 9. 5. Such is the Banquet, which Wiſdom provideth for her Gueſts, an Entertainment whereby they may live. But what is not requiſite to Life (more Knowledge, or more Riches than are requiſite to Life) Wiſdom accounteth vain and ſuperfluous, according to our Saviour's Argument. Luk. 12. 15. Take heed

and

(h) Orig. c. Celſ. l. 8. p. 392.

(i) Procl. in Polit. p. 356.

(k) Polit. l. 3. c. 16.

(l) Oenomaus ap. Euſeb. pr. Ev. l. 5. c. 35.

(m) Ariſt. Eth. Nicom. l. 9. c. 9.

(n) Elmenhorſt. in Arnob. p. 184.

(o) Ibid. p. 73.

* Beata vita ad quam omnia referuntur. Cic. de Fin. l. 4 and beware of Covetouſneſs: for a Man's Life conſiſteth not in the abundance of the things which he poſſeſſeth.

XV. Life (that he may live and not die) is the ſummum bonum of Man and his ſummum bonorum, which therefore he ought to make his great and only concern. That good as good is to be deſir'd (bonum & appetibile convertuntur) that the chiefeſt and greateſt good is chiefly to be deſired, that there is a ſubordination amongſt Goods, ſome are higher, others are inferior and ſubordinate, and (ſeeing there are degrees of Goods) that there muſt be ſome one which is the chief and higheſt of Goods, τὸ μέγιστον ϗ ἄριστον, the beſt and greateſt of Goods (the paramount, peerleſs and incomparable Good) thus far Mankind do agree. They are agreed, that there is a Sovereign and Supreme Good (the ſummity and top-flower of Goods) but what it is, and where it is to be found, in this they are not well agreed. The old Philoſophers (that profeſs'd the ſtudy of Wiſdom) had endleſs debates and uncertain conjectures touching the chief good, which a Man ſhould deſire above all other. But this Problem which extremely puzzled theſe Heathen Sages, is no difficulty to Chriſtians; for according to their Science of Sanctity (f) the ſummum bonum is Life Eternal and the ſummum malum is Eternal Death. To which account of the Supreme Good the Philoſophers made ſome approach; for with them (g) ſummum bonum is the ſame thing with beata vita: but the principal reaſon, why they were bewildred in their inquiries after it, was becauſe they fondly ſuppos'd, that it might be enjoy'd in this Life. But Plato ſaw, that no ſuch thing as perfect happineſs is to be had in this World; the enjoyments of this Life are no great happineſs, the want of them is no great miſery, and death will ſpeedily put a period both to our wants and our enjoyments: but the Goods and Evils of Life and Death Eternal are boundleſs and immeaſurable both for weight and duration. Theſe gravitating upon a conſiderative Mind will make her look no more at the things that are ſeen; for the things that are ſeen are Temporal, but the things that are not ſeen are Eternal. (h) Mittamus animum ad iſta quæ æterna ſunt, contemnamus omnia quæ adeo precioſa non ſunt, ut an ſint omninò dubium ſit. Nothing elſe is a great matter, or of great concern; but theſe are of great and infinite concern, and (ſpeaking comparatively) the only concern of Man. For there is no compariſon, no proportion between the common external Goods and the ſaving Saint of God-kind of Goods; nor between the things that are ſeen and the great unſeen things; the Goods and Evils of a Moment and of Eternity. All fleſhly Goods are but flaſhy Goods, all earthly Riches are but Pelf, all earthly Glory is but Pageantry, all worldly Fineries are but Fallacies and Fancies, all ſenſitive Delights are but Deluſions, and all earthly Subſtance is as a Shadow: but ſuch is not the everlaſting Treaſure. So the Pains of Death (celebrated for their Bitterneſs) and all the Torments which the Wit of Man can invent, or Tyrants can inflict, are but Flea-bitings in compariſon of the never-dying Death, which is the upſhot and conſummation of Death, the fulneſs and extremity of Evil (Sorrow that knoweth no Joy, Miſery without any want of Wo;) for Man cannot be made more miſerable than Sin and Hell and the Wrath of God will make him.

Life is ſummum bonorum, the ſummary and aggregate of all Goods, (i) as perfect happineſs is defin'd. For Life is Felicitative Good and Felicitative Good is Life (of kind and quality ſuch:) as Death is the deadly kind of thing, and every deadly kind of thing is of kind and quality Death, whence every Egyptian Plague and Calamity being of a deadly nature is ſtiled Death, Exod. 10. 17. Intreat the Lord your God, that he may take away from me this Death. As all deadly Calamities are comprehended under the Name of Death, and fall under that Title: So all manner of felicitative Goods are compris'd under the Name of Life (which ſignifieth omnimodam felicitatem) Pſal. 36. 9. With thee is the Fountain of Life. Life ſignifieth felicitative Good as Peace doth (Qui dicit pacem, dicit omnia bona) for they are terms ſynonymous. Mal. 2. 5. My Covenant was with him of Life and Peace. Rom. 8. 6. To be ſpiritually minded, is Life and Peace. In the Old Teſtament the premiant good is Life (the felicitative good which importeth a freedom from the deadly things, the oppoſites to Life;) ye ſhall keep my Statutes and my Judgments, which if a Man do, he ſhall live in them, Lev. 18. 5. In the New Teſtament Life uſually ſignifieth the final eſtate of Life, wherein there is a deliverance from all Evil, and the enjoyment of all Good; all Wants are therein ſupply'd, all Capacities are filled, all Deſires are fully ſatisfy'd, and therein we ſhall fully acquieſce, Joh. 6. 35. He that cometh to me, ſhall never hunger, and he that believeth on me, ſhall never thirſt; that is, he ſhall have Life Eternal, and ſhall never be pinch'd with the ſenſe of want and penury any more. As it is commonly thought, that in the Moſaic Creation all the ſcatter'd Beams of Light were at length gather'd together into one Body of Light, which made the Sun on the fourth Day: ſo all the vaſt variety of Goods is collected and ſumm'd up into this one Life Eternal.

XVI. Piety and Virtue (the holy kind of Virtue) requireth, that Life (that we may live and not die eternally) be our great and only regard and concern. For if God and the Soul, if the Buſineſs of Piety and Life Eternal, is of no regard with us, or but of underling regard, this is Carnality, Wickedneſs and Worldlineſs of Mind and Life, the very Life and State of Ungodlineſs. This conſtituteth, diſtinguiſheth and denominateth thoſe that are after the Fleſh, that chiefly mind the things of the Fleſh, the earthly things and the things that are ſeen; that ſow to the Fleſh, and are the worldly kind of labourers for the Meat that periſheth, the Servants of Mammon, or the lovers of Pleaſure (more than lovers of God) the Children of this World and the Friends of it. Which are the oppoſite Kind and Family to thoſe that are after the Spirit, that chiefly mind the things of the Spirit, ſeek the things that are above, look at the things that are not ſeen, and with the beſt of their care and endeavour ſtrive to enter in at the ſtrait Gate, which is the entrance into Life. Of theſe two oppoſite Kinds and Families the one is the wickedly and worldly affected and addicted, the other is the Godly affected and addicted; the one is the World's Partiſans and Adherents, the other

Rom. 8. 5.
Phil. 3. 19.
2 Cor. 4. 18.

(f) S. Aug. de C. D. l. 19. c. 4.

(g) Beata vita quæritur, idque eſt unum, quod philoſophia ſpectare & ſequi debet. Cic. de Fin. 5. Cùm ea cauſa impulerit eos, qui primi ſe ad philoſophiæ ſtudium contulerunt, ut omnibus rebus poſthabitis totos ſe in optimo vitæ ſtatu exquirendo collocarent. Idem Tuſc. 5.

(h) Sen.

(i) Ἀγαθὸν ἐκ πάντων ἀγαθῶν συγκείμενον. Plato. Omnium bonorum complexio. Cic. Status omnium bonorum aggregatione perfectus. Boeth.

is God's faithful Adherents; the one is the Mundane, Unregenerate and Heathen kind, that are mainly intent upon the Goods and Evils of this animal ſenſitive Life (who are therefore of the Heathen kind, becauſe in the main at leaſt they are aliens from God and Piety) the other is the Holy Heavenly kind, that duely alienate their Souls from this ſinful World and Fleſh, and in their eſtimation of things, their Affection, their Election and Endeavours, their Aim and Deſign they are Holy and Heavenly, making account, that they have no very valuable Country or Home, or Eſtate and Inheritance on this ſide Heaven; that ſet all things under Heaven at nought in compariſon of the Favour of God his Service and Rewards, duely vilifie and nullifie this World with all its deluſive Proſperities, Treaſures and Pleaſures, taking care of the Soul and of an Heavenly Felicity far above all the World, making the one as All the other as nothing, accounting nothing too much, nothing too dear to gain Eternal Life and to eſcape Eternal Perdition. Such is the Life and Virtue of the Saints of God, (k) who are in the Fleſh, but do not live after the Fleſh; that partake of theſe things of the World as Citizens, but dwell in their native Country as Strangers, that eſteem the reproach of Chriſt greater Riches than the Treaſures in Egypt, and ſo run the Race of Piety, that they will lay hold on Eternal Life at any rate. They could not be Holy, if they were not Heavenly (for their Hearts would be alienated from God and Piety, and they would be devoid of the Saint of God-kind of Life and Virtue) neglect and ſlight Piety and the Heavenly Felicity, purvey for and pleaſe the Fleſh, affect and mind the World, be intent upon riſing and thriving in it, to gain and enjoy a worldly happy Eſtate, this is the atheous courſe of Life diametrically oppoſite to the Saint of God-kind of Life and Virtue (that looketh with eſtrangement upon the World and is duely out of love with it) which is the only ſaving Virtue and the Virtue that Chriſtianity deſigneth. For a Religion that only deſigneth our Sanctity and Salvation, that pretendeth not to any Mundane and Fleſhly Felicity, but to alienate the Soul from it; that is a Religion of bearing the Croſs and ſuffering the loſs of all things for Righteouſneſs ſake, of mortifying ſenſitive Nature, of dying to Sin, of being crucify'd to the World, of renouncing it and forſaking all things (ſo far as they come in competition or compariſon with the Service of Chriſt and Life Eternal;) that injoyneth the forſaking this mortal life and all its Intereſts, ſo as not to make any great reckoning of them, and a great unconcernedneſs for the many things that ſtand againſt the one thing neceſſary; that forbiddeth the worldly kind of caring for worldly things (that we may live a life of diviner cares) and injoyneth a Fleſh-diſpleaſing courſe of life ἀνήδονος τῶν τῇδε, alien from the Pleaſures that are here (as Plotinus ſpeaketh;) that requireth the ſerving God with our beſt and our All and at any rate (with the whole Man and the whole Soul) the doing the work of Godlineſs with all diligence and with all our might (with the moſt zealous and aſſiduous induſtry) in order to the gaining Life Eternal; ſuch a Religion deſigneth, that Life Eternal ſhould be our chief and only regard and concern. Chriſtianity therefore is the Buſineſs of deſigning, ſeeking and gaining Life Eternal, prizing it at the higheſt rate of prizing, ſticking at no Difficulties, Labours or Sufferings for ſo Divine a Purchaſe, the ſeeking a better Country, a labouring to enter into God's reſt (not with faint and cold attempts, but with ardent deſires and endeavours, and the greateſt care and diligence) a working out our Salvation, a fighting the good fight of faith and warring a good warfare, a preſſing forward toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God, an agoniſtical wreſtling, running and ſtriving for the incorruptible Crown.

If this Saint of God-kind of Life and Virtue is wanting in a Man, the Eſſence, Subſtance and Summary of Chriſtianity and Godlineſs is wanting. (l) The firſt Virtue and the All of Virtue is, to be one of this World's Pilgrims and Strangers, and not (culpably) to have any thing in common with the things that are here, but to be parted from them as a Stranger. As the Worldly Concupiſcence is the All of Wickedneſs, ſo to be an Alien from the World, is the All of Godlineſs; and they that are not Aliens from the World are totally Aliens from the Chriſtian Life, and are not entred into Chriſtianity and Godlineſs. For the firſt thing that Chriſtianity requireth, is, ἀποτάσσεσθαι, ἀπαρνεῖσθαι, to abandon all things, to deny and forſake our Earthly All for the Kingdom of God's ſake, ſo far as this Saint of God-kind of Life and Virtue requireth. Every one that becometh a Chriſtian (a Convert to God) of a wicked, carnal and worldly kind of Man becometh a ſpiritual, holy and heavenly kind of Man; the bent of his Heart and Life is turned another way, and he hath another kind of chief Good, and another chief Buſineſs and Concern than before; which is not to pleaſe his Fleſh and enjoy the World (the Profits, Pleaſures and Braveries thereof) but to pleaſe and enjoy God, and that premiant good which his ſervice affordeth, Life Eternal, which therefore becometh his chief and only concern and ultimate deſign, and all the Intereſts of this Life (which were before the intereſt that bore ſway in him) are now but as Cyphers in his Arithmetick. Every Man propoſeth to himſelf ſome End and Deſign, which he chiefly aimeth at and intendeth, and is moſt concern'd and ſollicitous about. Eſt aliquid quò tendis, & in quod dirigis arcum. And ſuch as the End is, ſuch is the Man, whether a truly pious or a deadly atheous kind of Man. For the truly pious are thoſe that are for gaining the everlaſting Kingdom: The deadly atheous are thoſe that are for making their preſent Markets.

XVII. Wiſdom requireth, that Life (that we may live and not die eternally) be our great and only regard and concern. For the firſt part of Philoſophy or Wiſdom (m) is to give all things their due valuation (pretia rebus imponere) to eſtimate aright how much every thing is worth and what it amounteth to (πόσου ἕκαστον ἄξιόν ἐστι, Quanti quidque ſit judicare;) And the ſecond part of Philoſophy is de impetu touching the vigorous proſecution of things, which ought to be leſs or greater according to the worth and weight of them, Impetus ex dignitate rei cujuſque concipitur. If Life Eternal therefore is of infinite worth and weight, it ought to be valu'd at the higheſt rate (elſe it is undervalu'd;) if it is infinitely the greateſt concern of all Men, Wiſdom requireth, that it ſhould be of infinitely the greateſt conſideration and regard with all Men, and that they proſecute it with the greateſt zeal and diligence. But it is madneſs and dotage ſo to eſtimate and proſecute the things of this Life, which ſhrink into non-entities (hoc aliquid nihil eſt) when compar'd with Life Eternal. It is Wiſdom and Reaſon, that the concerns of an Immortal Heaven-born Soul ſhould be incomparably preferr'd before the concerns of a vile Body, and the concerns of Eternity before thoſe of an ἐφήμερος ζωὴ (as the Philoſophers call this Life, a Day-life) and the favour and frowns of God before the favour and frowns of Men. A Godly Life with all its hardſhips and incumbrances that iſſueth in Life Eternal, ſhould in reaſon and prudence be preferr'd incomparably before the fooleries and gulleries of ſenſitive pleaſure, that iſſue in Eternal Death. In the juſt computation of things a little ſorrow ought to ſignifie nothing, that will be compenſated with Eternal Joys, and ſaveth from Eternal weeping and gnaſhing of Teeth. And what ſignifie the trivial gauds and grandeurs of this World (which is but a Pedlar's Pack of Small Wares) or its ſadneſſes and ſufferings if compar'd with eternal living and dying? When Alexander had travell'd through India, and overrun many large and great Countries, and ſome brought him word of his Souldiers taking ſome ſmall Towns in Greece, methinks, ſaid he in contempt of their News, I hear Homer's tale βατραχομυομαχία, a Battel of Frogs and Mice. So all the Affairs of this Life, all the Buſineſs, Succeſſes and Miſadventures of it, all its Greatneſſes and Diſgraces, its Enjoyments and its Wants, and all its Tragi-comedies ſeem Impertinencies and Inſignificances, make no appearance and are of no regard, when we lift up our Eyes to Life Eternal. There is no reaſon, that any thing elſe ſhould be of great regard, ſo vain and vile are Senſual Pleaſures and all the goodly admired things of this World, that will quickly be, as if they had never been. It is not reaſon, but deliration, to prefer theſe puffy Vanities, gilded nothings, Shells without a Kernel, Briars and Thorns (indeed) before the weight of Eternal Life, and to ſell that for a Meſs of Pottage, which cannot be bought at too dear a rate. Not only becauſe it is an unfathomable Felicity, but becauſe the gaining this unfathomable Felicity is connex'd with the eſcaping an unfathomable Miſery, which is otherwiſe unavoidable. If there were not too final Eſtates, the one of living, the other of dying for ever, the choice of an Holy Life and the concern of Life Eternal would not be indiſpenſably neceſſary; for many like the Reubenites and Gadites could be well contented, to take up their Portion on this ſide Jordan without entring into Canaan; they would not value the gaining Heaven, if the loſs of it did not ſink them into Hell. But the World of Mankind (thoſe more eſpecially to whom the Chriſtian Religion is revealed) muſt be dichotomiz'd into the Children of Light and Darkneſs, of Life and Death, the Heirs of Salvation and the Sons of Perdition. As a Man therefore can deſire nothing more than to be a Child of God and of the Divine Family, ſo he muſt be ſatisfy'd with nothing leſs; for if he is not of the Divine Family, he is of the Infernal Family. A Man can deſire nothing more than Life Eternal, and he muſt be ſatisfy'd with nothing leſs; for if he loſeth Life Eternal, his Portion unavoidably will be Eternal Death: Loſe Salvation, and what remaineth? nothing but Perdition. Joſh.12.6.

(k) J. Mart. Ep. ad Diognet. p. 476.

(l) Ἡ πρώτη ἀρετὴ, καὶ ἡ πᾶσα ἀρετὴ, τὸ ξένον εἶναι τοῦ κόσμου τούτου καὶ παρεπίδημον, καὶ μηδὲν κοινὸν ἔχειν πρὸς τὰ ἐνταῦθα πράγματα, ἀλλ' ἀπηρτῆσθαι αὐτῶν ὥσπερ ξένον. S. Chryſoſt. in Hebr. or. 24.

(m) Sen. Ep. 89. Epictet. diſſ. l. 2. c. 23. Lactant. l. 6. c. 5.

If Life Eternal is not our great and only regard and concern, it will be loſt by negligence and wickedneſs. For none chuſe and live the holy Life, duely mind the buſineſs of Godlineſs, or are faithful to God and his Service, but they that make the gaining Life Eternal their great and only deſign. The reſt of Mankind perſiſt in their Graceleſneſs and Wickedneſs, and neglect Godlineſs having other Fiſh to fry. They eagerly purſue Shadows, but neglect and loſe the Subſtance; whence in all their gettings they get nothing, that is of any great advantage (becauſe nothing to their eternal advantage;) in all their doings they do nothing to purpoſe, nothing to their true end (which they ought to propoſe to themſelves:) but all their gettings and their doings are an undoing themſelves, which is contrary to their own end; for Happineſs in general they would not loſe, nor incur Miſery for ever. They love themſelves, yet ruine themſelves (ſo far are they from being good to themſelves,) they have not a wiſe and virtuous care of themſelves, their regard is not for their only valuable and conſiderable ſelf; this they loſe for nothing or as good as nothing, and rather chuſe to endure an Hell of Blackneſs, and Flames, and Torment, than not to pleaſe a vain fancy, not to gratify a fooliſh Luſt, not to enjoy a merry Hour: Theſe are Prodigies of Fooliſhneſs and Madneſs, and if any acted as extravagantly in their Secular Affairs as the generality of Men act in their Soul-affairs, they would be begg'd for Fools, or ſent to Bedlam as diſtracted Men. They that in their Secular Affairs are hugely thoughtful and careful, vigilant and provident, that will take pains and venture hard for this Earthly Life, that will be true to their Intereſt (as the French ſay, Intereſt will not lye) will not barter away their precious Commodities for a trifle, nor loſe an Hogg for an half-penny worth of Tar, that will have a care of the main chance, and will not run into Debt and Poverty (but keep it off with a long Staff) will not be perſwaded to be ſo wiſe touching their Soul-affairs, nor (as to thoſe great Affairs) to conduct their Lives by their own prudential Maxims. They that will be ſollicitous for a Moment, will not imploy their care and ſollicitude for Eternity. They that will ſwallow many a bitter Pill and Potion, and endure lancing, cutting, cauterizing and diſmembring, to preſerve a vile Body alive a few Days, and count it their Wiſdom ſo to do (for they that throw away their Lives, as ſome deſperate diſcontented Perſons do, are thought unnatural, immoral and out of their Wits) will not be perſwaded, to endure the very tolerable Cares and Sorrows, and Labours and Hardſhips which are in Godlineſs, that they may live and not die eternally. They have but one Work to do in the World, but this one Buſineſs, the Buſineſs of Piety in order to Life Eternal (and Secular Buſineſs as Piety requireth.) This is their one thing and their All (in point of Duty and Intereſt) and 'tis the height of unreaſonableneſs, that their All with them ſignifieth nothing; it would be their Wiſdom, to make it their great and only concern.

XVIII. In the œconomy of our Religion the great and only concern of God and of the Son of God is Life, that we may live and not die eternally, which is Life in the Senſe of Chriſtianity and the New Teſtament. For the only deſign of God in ſending his Son was, that we might live through him (live now and for evermore) 1 Joh. 4. 9. That whoſoever believeth in him, ſhould not periſh, but have everlaſting Life, Joh. 3. 16. This was the whole deſign and end of his Undertaking, and all the benefit that he affordeth, is compris'd in this one word Life. I am come, that they might have Life, ſaith the Son of God, Joh. 10. 10. This is the Will of him that ſent me, that every one which ſeeth the Son and believeth on him, may have everlaſting Life, Joh. 6. 40. Ye will not come to me, that ye might have Life, Joh. 5. 40. Our Saviour inviteth Men to come to him, that they might have Life, and ſo do the holy Writers, Joh. 20. 31. Theſe things are written, that ye might believe, that Jeſus is the Chriſt the Son of God, and that believing ye might have Life through his Name. 1 Joh. 5. 11. Theſe things have I written unto you, that believe on the Name of the Son of God; that ye may know, that ye have Eternal Life, and that ye may believe (continue to believe) on the Name of the Son of God. All that is got by gaining Chriſt is Life, and all that is loſt by loſing Chriſt, is Life, 1 Joh. 5. 12. He that hath the Son, hath Life, and he that hath not the Son of God, hath not Life. Joh. 3. 36. He that believeth on the Son, hath everlaſting Life; and he that believeth not the Son, ſhall not ſee Life. This is the Stile and Tenour of the New Teſtament, and eſpecially of our Evangeliſt; from whoſe illuſtrious often-repeated Notices of our Saviour it appeareth, that (as to what He is) He ought to be thus repreſented; He is the gift and benefit of Life Eternal unto Men (that is, the gift and benefit of Life Eternal is in Chriſt) and this is his true Idea. As moſt clearly appeareth in our Evangeliſt's Summary of the Chriſtians Creed, 1 Joh. 5. 11. This is the Record, that God hath given to us Eternal Life, and this Life is in his Son. The Teſtimony or Record of God concerning his Son is both the ground of a Chriſtian's Faith and the matter of it (both the formal and material Object of Faith;) for our Faith is founded upon the infallible Teſtimony of God, and the matter of it is The witneſs of God which he hath teſtify'd of his Son; namely, that Jeſus is the Son of God, the true Meſſiah, the Saviour of the World; which is the ſame thing, as to teſtifie, that the Gift and Benefit of Life Eternal is in him and in him only. This Divine Teſtimony implieth, that an Eternity is deſign'd for Men, and that Men are deſign'd for Eternity; that the World of Mankind in their Naturaliſm and Unregeneracy (being a World of Ungodly Sinners) are debarr'd from Life Eternal and are ſubjected to Eternal Death; which is a great Article of Chriſtianity; for tolle morbos, tolle vulnera, nulla eſt medicinæ cauſa. If Mankind in their now original ſtate had not been a World of deadly Sinners, in the ſtate of Sin and of Death, and under the Domination of their ghoſtly deadly Enemies, they had not needed a Saviour. Nor had they needed a Saviour, if Life Eternal might be obtain'd by Law-juſtice, by Humane Merit, by Natural Religion or Natural Light, or by the Judaical Law-religion: this Divine Teſtimony is expreſs, that there is but one way to Life Eternal, this Life is in his Son (in his Religion) and therefore they muſt be in Chriſt, that are the Heirs of Life Eternal. It is not to be obtain'd but by the New Teſtament, and in the New Teſtament it is repreſented as the great and only concern of Man, the tranſcendent Gift of God and his free Gift through the Merit of Chriſt; who therefore is of this Idea (as to what He is) He is the Gift and Benefit of Life Eternal unto Men. It is not an Abſtract Logos, but it is the Humane-divine Perſon of Chriſt, that is of this Idea; which alſo appeareth in our Saviour's account of his Religion, Joh. 17. 3. This is Life Eternal, that they might know thee the only true God, and Jeſus Chriſt whom thou haſt ſent. Which words import, that to be a genuine Chriſtian Religioniſt (a true Religioniſt of the true God and the true Meſſiah) is Life Eternal to a Man, and there is no other way of attaining it. For if ye believe not that I am he (ſaith our Saviour) ye ſhall die in your Sins, Joh. 8. 24. The Jews expected Life Eternal from their Religion, and the Gentiles had as great expectations from their Heathen Piety: but to a World of Sinners there can be no other Religion of Life Eternal but the Chriſtian: Which is therefore the Religion of Saving Grace, that as Sin hath reigned unto Death, ſo might Grace reign through Righteouſneſs unto Eternal Life by Jeſus Chriſt our Lord, Rom. 5. 21. The available promiſe of Life is peculiarly in Chriſt Jeſus, 2 Tim. 1. 1. His Religion and His alone maketh its Believers Heirs according to the hope of Eternal Life, Tit. 3. 7. This is the promiſe that he hath promiſed us (the Chriſtian Religioniſts) even Eternal Life, 1 Joh. 2. 25. The Humane-divine Perſon of Chriſt therefore (the founder of the Chriſtian Religion) is The Life, as being (in his Religion) the Gift and Benefit of Life Eternal unto Men. And if Scripture muſt be interpreted by Scripture, if one place of the New Teſtament muſt be interpreted agreeably to the whole ſtream and tenour of it, if our Evangeliſt muſt be ſuppos'd, to ſpeak the Senſe of the New Teſtament; he muſt be ſuppos'd, to ſtile the Son of God The Life as being (in his Religion) the Gift and Benefit of Life Eternal unto Men. And to what purpoſe ſhould he (in his Proem) ſtile the Son of God The Life, but to renown and recommend (the Goſpel) the Chriſtian Religion and the Author of it as ſuch?

XIX. The Life in the Proem of our Evangeliſt's Goſpel muſt be an Attribute of the Humane-divine Perſon of Chriſt, and muſt denote and ſignifie him, if therein this Evangeliſt ſpeaketh his own Senſe (that which is his Senſe throughout his Goſpel and his other Writings;) and in all reaſon he muſt be allow'd, to be his own Interpreter. Optimus Interpres verborum quiſque ſuorum. Peruſing his Goſpel and his other Writings it is apparent and clear as the Day, that throughout the tenour and current of them Life ſignifieth Life Eternal, and Life Eternal ſignifieth The benefit of Life Eternal (or Salvation) which the Humane-divine Perſon of Chriſt is in his Religion unto Men. This appeareth from many other bright and illuſtrious places (beſides thoſe already cited) and from thoſe more eſpecially, wherein Life is the Elogy and Blazonry of our Saviour, his honourary Name and Title. For ſo in this Evangeliſt Life is the royal ſtile of the Son of God, and his Title of Honour, deſign'd to ſhew the Illuſtriouſneſs of his Perſon and the ineſtimable worth, precioſity and importance that he is of; He is all that unſpeakable good, excellency and felicity which his honourary Names and Titles ſignifie; ſome of which are theſe following.

(1.) Our Saviour in this Evangeliſt implicitly ſtileth himſelf The fountain and donour of Life, Joh. 4. 10. If thou kneweſt the gift of God (ſaith he to the Woman of Samaria) and who it is that ſaith ſaith to thee, give me to drink; thou wouldeſt have asked of him and he would have given thee living Water. Our Saviour ſtileth himſelf the Gift of God; for he telleth the Woman, that the reaſon why ſhe did not ask of him the Water of Life (a better kind of Water than he requeſted of her) was becauſe ſhe did not know the Gift of God; which Words are expounded in the next following; ſhe did not know, who he was, that ſaid unto her, give me to drink. Our Saviour therefore ſtileth himſelf the Gift of God, and he is ſo both in the perſonal and in the real Acceptation. He is the Perſon that is the Gift of God (a Gift of the greateſt Kindneſs and Beneficence;) for God ſo loved the World, that he gave his only begotten Son. Joh. 3. 16. And he is the thing (or reality) that is the Gift of God tranſcendent to all other Gifts, which is Life eternal. For when our Saviour ſaith to the Woman, If thou kneweſt the Gift of God, and who it is that ſaith to thee, give me to drink, his Senſe is; If thou kneweſt, that the Gift and Benefit of Life eternal is in me (or that I am the Gift and Benefit of Life eternal unto Men) thou wouldeſt have asked, and I would have given thee living Water. By which living Water ſome Expoſitors underſtand the Doctrine of the Goſpel, others the Mercy and Grace of God which Chriſt diſpoſeth of, and ſome ancient Writers ſay, it is the Water of Baptiſm: But theſe Interpretations are too far remote from the matter which our Saviour manifeſtly ſpeaketh of, to which the Interpretation of ſome others maketh a great approach; for they ſuppoſe, that by living Water is meant the Holy Spirit called Rivers of living Water. Joh. 7. 39. But this Interpretation is not rightly nor fully expreſſive of our Saviour's Senſe; for the thing that he ſpeaketh of, is Life eternal, as manifeſtly appeareth from V. 13, 14. Whoſoever drinketh of this Water ſhall thirſt again: But whoſoever drinketh of the Water that I ſhall give him, ſhall never thirſt: But the Water that I ſhall give him, ſhall be in him a Well of Water ſpringing up into everlaſting Life. That Water which totally exempteth a Man from Thirſt (from being in want of Water or from being afflicted with the Senſe of Want and Penury any more) can be nothing on this ſide Life eternal. Living Water therefore ſignifieth Life eternal; which if we will diſtinctly underſtand (as to the conſtitutive Ingredients of it) it muſt be conſider'd (as a live Spring that is ever ever flowing and ſcaturient) as an ebullient Fountain of felicitative Life ſpringing up to an eternity of Living. It is puteus aquæ vivæ, as the Jews call their Law. For Life eternal is (n) ſempiternal Vitality, and vital Sanctity in a Man (or the Holy Spirit) as it is ſempiternal Vitality, is a Well of living Water (a Fountain of this felicitative Life) ſpringing up to an eternity of Living. Our Saviour therefore repreſenteth himſelf to the Samaritan Woman as in his Religion and to his Believers the Gift and Benefit of Life eternal.

(2) Our Saviour in this Evangeliſt ſtileth himſelf the Food of Life to us. Joh. 6. 35, 48. I am the bread of life. V. 51. I am the living bread that came down from heaven: If any man eat of this bread, he ſhall live for ever: And the bread that I will give is my fleſh, which I will give for the life of the World. 55. For my fleſh is meat indeed, and my blood is drink indeed. Chriſt repreſenteth himſelf as the true Manna and the true Bread, his Fleſh and his Blood (that is, his Sacrifice, or himſelf ſacrific'd and crucify'd) as Meat indeed and Drink indeed, to ſignifie, that he is the Food of Life to us, which is his officiary Dignity, and one of his illuſtrious Names and Titles. For this Name denoteth, that he is of the ſame Uſe and Benefit to us, and of the ſame Neceſſity that our Food is, We live by it and cannot live without it. Agreeably to our vital food and ſuſtenance Chriſt crucify'd is life to us, life eternal. Food reſtoreth the Soul, Pſal. 23. 3. Men that were Dying and giving up the Ghoſt have been by Food recover'd from the Grave's Mouth. 1 Sam 30. 12. So Men live by their Food: And ſo by Chriſt crucify'd the dead World is recover'd to Life, his Death is the revivification of Souls, as being thereby the procuring cauſe the Author and Founder of the State of Life and Salvation for them. His Fleſh therefore is Meat indeed and his Blood is Drink indeed, becauſe by his Sacrifice (in a Sacrifice the Blood was parted and ſeparated from the Fleſh, which therefore is ſignified by Fleſh and Blood) we Sinners dead in Sin and ſubjected to dying for Sin, live as to Life eternal, and there was no living without it. For thereby (o) τὸν θάνατον εἰς ζωὴν ἀνεσταύρωσεν, he crucify'd Death into Life; by his Bloodſhed he became to us (p) πηγὴ ζωοποιὸς, a vivific Fountain (his Blood was as Water of Life to us;) and the Iſraelites Manna (which was to them the Food of Life) was a Type of Chriſt chiefly upon this account, becauſe it was a Type of his ſacrific'd Fleſh or Body. For Manna was Bread, and Bread is an Emblem or Symbol of the Body (the ſame word in Hebrew that ſignifieth the Body, ſignifieth Bread;) the Manna therefore was a Type of Chriſt, becauſe that Bread repreſented and ſignified Chriſt's Body, which by the Sacrifice of it procur'd Life for us, who otherwiſe muſt have dy'd in our Sins. As Manna was the Food of bodily Life to the Iſraelites, but not till it was broken and bruiſed, Numb. 11. 8. So Chriſt's Fleſh or Body could not be the Bread of Life to us but by being broken, bruiſed and ſacrific'd. By his Pains we have Eaſe, by his Dolours we have Comfort, by his Sacrifice we have Expiation of Sin, and by his Death we have Life, the Life that knoweth no Death. The Iſraelites Rock in the Wilderneſs (a Type of Chriſt) did not afford them their Water of Life, till it was ſmitten by the Rod of Moſes: So if Chriſt had not been ſmitten by the Rod of the Law (ſacrific'd and ſlain) nothing had iſſu'd from him, that is as Water of Life to us, nothing that affordeth us vital Conſolation, Eaſe, Reſt, and Peace for our Souls, no cooling Water of Mercy and Pardon for our Refreſhment, nor had he been of uſe and value to us for Life and Salvation. He is the Food of Life to us (that Bread and Water of Life, of which Old Iſrael's Manna and Water out of the Rock were Types) but as ſacrific'd and crucify'd; and as all vital Goods and Comforts are in Scripture ſet forth and ſignified by bodily Food, Meat and Drink, Pro. 9. 5. Iſa. 55. 2. So Chriſt crucify'd is all the Soul-vital Goods and Comforts to us, in compariſon of which all our bodily vital Comforts are ſhadowy, and ſapleſs, lean, lifeleſs, and diſpirited, cold comforts, or as Lycophron calleth an evil Wife ψυχρὸν παραγκάλισμα, a cold Arm-full. But a certain delicious reliſh there is in bodily Food, it nouriſheth and corroborateth them that eat and drink of it, and affordeth them not bare Life only, but a vital ſolace, livelineſs and vigor, 1 Sam. 14. 27. 1 King. 4. 20. So to Divine Believers nothing is of ſo delicious a reliſh as

(n) Petav. T. 1. l. 3. c. 3. S. 6.

(o) Clem. προτρεπτ. p. m. 53.

(p) Ibid. p. 51. Eſt cibus qui ſalutem largitur & vitam, qui hominem ſummo Deo commendat, qui languentes relevat, errantes revocat, lapſos erigit, qui morientibus æternæ immortalitatis largitur inſignia. Jul. Firmic. de Error. Prof. Rel. p. 36.

Chriſt crucify'd (hoc tibi ſapiat Manna) by him they are ſav'd from their doleful forlorn Condition, they have in him a Magazine of Conſolations (which diſconſolate Souls reliſh) and he is to them that were without ſtrength (Rom. 5. 6.) Vivacity, Strength and Vigor, and Life Spiritual and Eternal. Joh. 6. 57. As the living Father hath ſent me, and I live by the Father: So he that eateth me, even he ſhall live by me. But as nothing is ſo neceſſary for us as our Food, without it we faint and droop and pine away and die (if we are without it but a few Hours we are in a melancholy languiſhing Condition:) So without Chriſt Sacrific'd there is no Life in us, nor Life for us, but we are in a forlorn famiſh'd Condition and ſink into eternal Death. Chriſt is therefore the Food of Life to us analogous to bodily Food: But his Name alſo denoteth the Eminency and Tranſcendency of that Food of Life that he is. For whereas other vital Food is of an earthly Nature and Original, and is only Food for the Body; Chriſt is the Food typify'd by Manna, that came down from Heaven beſides and beyond the ordinary courſe of Nature, and was a Celeſtial or Angelical ſort of Food. So Chriſt is Food come down from Heaven, that is of Kind, Quality and Excellency Divine and Heavenly, and the Food of Life to our diviner part. Our bodily Subſtance is in continual Flux and Waſt, and tending to Death; our bodily Food is mortal and periſhing in it ſelf and its effect, and will ſcarce preſerve our ruinous Cottages a few days from tottering into a Grave: But Chriſt is another-kins Food of Life, as being the Gift and Benefit of a never-dying Life to us. The Bread of God is he which cometh down from Heaven, and giveth Life unto the World. He that cometh to me, ſhall never hunger (he ſhall have Life eternal) and he that believeth on me, ſhall never thirſt. Significatur æterna ſatietas, ubi nulla egeſtas. S. Aug. Verily, verily I ſay unto you, he that believeth on me, hath everlaſting Life. I am that Bread of Life. Your Fathers did eat Manna in the Wilderneſs and are dead. This is the Bread which cometh down from Heaven, that a Man may eat thereof and not die. I am the living Bread which came down from Heaven: If any Man eat of this Bread, he ſhall live for ever. (For he is an Heir of Life eternal.) He that eateth me, he ſhall live by me. (He ſhall have Life eternal by me, and be ſav'd from eternal Death.) This is the Bread that came down from Heaven: Not as your Fathers did eat Manna and are dead: He that eateth of this Bread (ſhall have Life eternal) ſhall live for ever. Thus amply and copiouſly doth God's Meſſiah under the Name and Emblem of the Food of Life declare his officiary Dignity, which is to be the Gift and Benefit of Life eternal to us.

Joh. 6. 33--35. and v. 47--58.

(3.) Our Saviour in this Evangeliſt repreſenteth himſelf as the Food of Life, that muſt be eaten and drunk in order to Life eternal, as bodily Food muſt be eaten and drunk in order to live by it. Except ye eat the Fleſh of the Son of Man and drink his Blood, ye have no Life in you. Whoſo eateth my Fleſh and drinketh my Blood, hath eternal Life, and I will raiſe him up at the laſt day. I am the living Bread, which came down from Heaven: If any Man eat of this Bread, he ſhall live for ever. Chriſt as ſacrific'd is in his Religion and conſequently to his Believers the Food of Life. He gave himſelf in Sacrifice (his Body and Blood) to be unto them the Food of Life. Chriſtian Believers as ſuch are Believers on him, on him as ſacrific'd, on him as the Food of Life. Their being Chriſtian Believers conſiſteth in taking and receiving him and his Sacrifice as the Food of Life; and what a Man taketh for his Food of Life, he eateth and drinketh either corporally, or mentally and ſpiritually as we eat our (q) λογικὴν τροφὴν, λογικὸν βρῶμα, rational Food and Nutriment. The taking and receiving Food, the taking and receiving it as Food, is an eating and drinking it. The taking and receiving therefore the Food of Life which Chriſt is, the taking and receiving it as the Food of Life is the eating and drinking (both by way of Duty and of Benefit) that Food of Life which he is. As his becoming Chriſt is his becoming the Food of Life to his Religioniſts, ſo our becoming his Religioniſts is eating and drinking that Food of Life, which Chriſt and Chriſt ſacrific'd is. And this may be call'd the computational eating him, eating and drinking his Body and Blood, which is that which our Saviour inſiſteth upon and requireth; for it is the believing on him that he inſiſteth upon Joh. 6. 29, 35, 36, 37, 40, 44, 47, 64, 65. But to this computational eating and drinking we muſt add the Sacramental (a Branch thereof;) for Chriſt's Religioniſts are the Religioniſts of his Sacrifice. And as in all other Religions (that of Jews and Gentiles) the Religioniſts ate and drank of the Sacrifices: So Chriſt hath inſtituted the Holy Euchariſt, which is Epulum ſacrificiale ac fœderale, a confederating with him by feaſting upon his Sacrifice. This is the Subject of our Saviour's Diſcourſe, and is it poſſible, that his Diſcourſe upon this Subject (the Chriſtian Sacrifice) ſhould have no Relation to that Sacrament, which is a feaſting upon that Sacrifice? His Diſcourſe of being born of Water and of the Spirit cannot but relate to his Inſtitution of Baptiſm: So his Diſcourſe of eating his Fleſh and drinking his Blood cannot but relate to his Inſtitution of the Holy Euchariſt. They that heard this Diſcourſe, ought to have conſider'd, that our Saviour was diſcourſing as the Author and Founder of his Religion or Inſtitution; that (although the Holy Euchariſt was not yet particularly and expreſly inſtituted, yet) in this Diſcourſe he plainly maketh his Religion an Inſtitution in general of eating his Body and drinking his Blood; and if they ſaw, that afterwards he inſtituted a ſolemn Rite or Sacrament of eating his Body and drinking his Blood, how could they doubt, that in his general Diſcourſe concerning it, he had this ſolemn Rite in his Eye, and that his Words had reſpect thereto? Eſpecially if they conſider'd, that his Religion is eſſentially the Religion of his Sacrifice, that in the Holy Euchariſt his Religioniſts communicate in Chriſt crucify'd (or in his Sacrifice) that his general Diſcourſe ought to be underſtood from the whole of his Inſtitution, and conſequently his intention in it was, that his Religioniſts ſhould not only eat his Body and drink his Blood mentally and ſpiritually, but alſo ſymbolically and ſacramentally, and that to them who ſo eat it Chriſtianly, he intended, that his Sacrifice ſhould be the Food of Life. To this our Saviour's Diſcourſe relateth, but ſo as to import nothing more than the tenour of Chriſtianity importeth, namely, that without his Sacrifice and our being the Religioniſts thereof (one mode whereof is a due receiving the Holy Euchariſt) there is no Life for us. But it doth not import, that abſolutely without receiving the Holy Euchariſt there is no Life for us; much leſs doth it import the literal eating and and drinking Chriſt's real corporeal Fleſh and Blood, as the Jews miſtook. For the rectifying whoſe Error our Saviour addeth V. 62, 63. What and if ye ſhall ſee the Son of Man aſcend up where he was before? This will confute your groſs miſtake touching the eating and drinking literally my corporeal Fleſh and Blood that I bear about me, and which within a while will be removed to a vaſt diſtance from you. It is the Spirit that quickneth, the Fleſh profiteth nothing: The words that I ſpeak unto you, they are Spirit and they are Life. It is that which is Spiritual, that is, Vivificative; the literal eating my corporeal Fleſh is of no avail: The eating and drinking which I Diſcourſe of (ſaith our Saviour) is the Spiritual-vital, or is a Spiritual-vital Buſineſs both in reſpect of the Duty-part and the Benefit-part, which is the State of Life, Spiritual Life, Eternal Life. From which account of our Saviour's Senſe it appeareth, that the many Allegations which ſome Expoſitors have made from that whiſling Allegoriſt Philo touching his Logos and that nutriment of the Soul which Wiſdom and Virtue is, are hugely alien from our Saviour's Diſcourſe, and do not at all illuſtrate it. For all Humane Inſtitutions of Virtue are hugely alien from thoſe divine Words, of which our Saviour ſaith, They are Spirit and they are Life. Nor is it our Saviour's Doctrine (Truth and Wiſdom) which he propoſeth as the Food of Life, but himſelf as ſacrific'd and crucify'd. And what Affinity is there between a Platonic Logos and Chriſt crucify'd?

(q) Orig. c. Celſ. l. 7. p. 372.

XX. In the entrance of this Diſcourſe our Saviour thus repreſenteth himſelf as the Gift Joh. 6. 27. and Benefit of Life eternal unto Men. Labour not for the Meat which periſheth, but for that Meat which endureth unto everlaſting Life, which the Son of Man ſhall give unto you: For him hath God the Father ſealed. Expoſitors have various Conjectures touching this Meat (which it would be tedious to examine) but it is ſufficient to ſay, that it may ſignifie the Food of our regenerate Life (which in the effect of it is Meat that endureth to Life everlaſting;) and it may ſignifie only ſempiternal Vitality, as it ſuſtaineth us in Life to Eternity; for as it ſo ſuſtaineth us, it is Suſtenance of Life (or Meat) which endureth to everlaſting Life. And this latter is moſt probably our Saviour's Senſe, becauſe (in theſe Words) his Deſign is only to repreſent himſelf as the Meſſiah, whom God hath ſealed (authoriz'd and appointed) to be the Gift and Benefit of Life eternal unto Men. Accordingly, he ſaith Joh. 14. 6. in our Evangeliſt, I am the Way (the only Way of going to God) and the Truth (his Doctrine and the Doctrine concerning him being the only Saving Truth) and the Life, as being the Gift and Benefit of Life eternal unto Men. He is ſo in various reſpects and degrees. For ſometimes he is renowned as the only Doctor of Life Joh. 6. 68. eternal and the way to it. Lord, to whom ſhall we go? Thou haſt the Words of eternal Life. Sometimes as the only Publiſher of Life (that is to 2 Tim. 1. 10. us of any avail) who hath aboliſh'd Death, and hath brought Life and Immortality to Light through Rom. 8. 2. the Goſpel. Sometimes as the Author and Foun- 2 Cor. 3, 6, 8. der of (the only Religion of Life) the Law of Joh. 20. 31. the Spirit of Life, of the miniſtration of the Spirit and of Life. Sometimes as the procuring Cauſe Rom. 5. 17, 18, 21. of Life (the meritorious impulſive Cauſe of it) we have Life through his Name. By the Righteouſneſs of one the free Gift came upon all Men unto Juſtification of Life. They which receive abundance of Grace and of the Gift of Righteouſneſs, ſhall reign in Life by one, Jeſus Chriſt. That as Sin hath reigned unto Death, even ſo might Grace reign through Righteouſneſs unto eternal Life, by Jeſus Chriſt our Lord. Sometimes as the Fountain of Life. He ſhew'd me a pure River of Water of Life Apoc. 22. 1. proceeding out of the Throne of God and of the Lamb. Sometimes as the Head of the Family of Life, Apoc. 21. 27. and 3. 5. and 2. 7. and the Lord and Owner of Life, as being the Sovereign Keeper of the Book of Life, and ſtanding at the Head of it; whence it is call'd the Lamb's Book of Life. To him that overcometh he promiſeth; I will not blot out his Name out of the Book of Life. To him I will give to eat of the Tree of Life. He is the Lord and Owner of eternal Life (of the ſupernal Paradiſe with its Tree of Life) it is in his Hands, and he beſtoweth it on whom he pleaſeth. For as the Joh. 5. 21, 26. Father raiſeth up the dead and quickneth them: Even ſo the Son quickneth (to Life eternal) whom he will. And as the Father hath Life in himſelf; ſo hath he given to the Son, to have Life in himſelf. As in the Father, ſo in the Son there is an infinite fulneſs of Life ὀντωδῶς, eſſentially and conſtitutively, as Vivens (living in himſelf;) and alſo ἐνεργητικῶς, efficient-cauſally and operatively as Vivificans (making others alive;) whence the Apoſtle ſaith of the Second Adam, He is a quick- 1 Cor. 15. 44. ning Spirit. As to his Body Chriſt is now wholly Spiritual and Heavenly, Divine and Immortal (therefore rightly called a Spirit;) and he is vivificative to others; for he will quicken and enliven all his Members into Life incorruptible and immortal. I am he that liveth and Apoc. 1. 18. was dead; and behold, I am alive for evermore, and have the Keys of Hell and of Death. He ſo liveth, as that he is Lord of Life and Death eternal; whom he pleaſeth, he can let out of the Region of Death, and raiſe all his Followers to the ſame immortal Life, that himſelf enjoyeth. Whence he promiſeth unto them a Reſurrection unto Life (that he will raiſe them up at the laſt Day) and in our Evangeliſt he ſtileth himſelf the Reſurrection and the Life. He is Joh. 6. 40. and 11. 25, 26. the Author of the Reſurrection to Life eternal; he that believeth in him, though he be dead and in a Grave, yet ſhall he live (becauſe Chriſt will raiſe him to Life immortal;) and if any Man be alive and believeth in him, he ſhall never die, becauſe Chriſt will give unto him the never-dying Life. My Sheep hear my voice (ſaith he) and Joh. 10. 27, 28. I know them and they follow me. And I give unto them eternal Life and they ſhall never periſh. Chriſt is therefore the Authoritative Donour of Life eternal. Thou haſt given him Power over all Act. 3. 15. Joh. 17. 2. Apoc. 2. 10. fleſh, that he might give eternal Life to as many as thou haſt given him. Be thou faithful unto Death, and I will give thee a Crown of Life. Sometimes he is repreſented as the Imperial Potentate of Life (or Salvation;) for ſo the Apoſtle repreſenteth him to the Jews his Murderers. Ye have killed the Prince of Life. Act. 3. 15. He is the Gift and Benefit of Life eternal therefore in reſpect of all that he is, and in the various degrees thereof. For in reſpect of his Doctrine he is the Word of Life. Phil. 2. 16. Joh. 6. 68. In reſpect of his Sacrifie he is the Food of Life. Joh. 6. 51. In reſpect of his New Teſtament he is the Promiſe of Life. 2 Tim. 1. 1 In reſpect of his Holy Spirit (the Diſpenſation thereof) he is the Fountain of Life. Joh. 7. 38. And at the laſt Day he will be the authoritative Donour of the Crown of Immortality, and Mortality ſhall be ſwallowed up of Life. 2 Cor. 5. 4.

He is the Benefit of Life eternal to us in the ſeveral degrees of Inchoation and Perfection. For the State of Life (the oppoſite to the State of Sin and of Death) which he is to his Believers, is an Inchoation of Life eternal. Rom. 5. 18. And ſuch is alſo (the Spirit of Life) the Life of Divine Grace and Sanctification, one Branch whereof is the Light of Life which he promiſeth to his Believers. Joh. 8. 12. And at the laſt Day he will be the Perfection and Conſummation of Life eternal to his People; when Chriſt who is our Life (the Author and Donor of our glorious felicitative Life) ſhall appear, then ſhall ye alſo appear with him in Glory. Col. 3. 4.

XXI. By this time (one may juſtly ſuppoſe) we are certainly acquainted with the Senſe of the New Teſtament, when it ſpeaketh of Life, and more eſpecially with the Senſe of our Evangeliſt; whence we may thus argue touching the meaning of this Name the Life in the Proem of his Goſpel and his Firſt Epiſtle. Either in thoſe Proems he ſpeaketh of the Life in a Senſe quite diſſonant from himſelf (throughout his Writings) and quite diſſonant from the Tenour of the New Teſtament: Or elſe in thoſe Proems by this Name the Life he meaneth only that Gift and Benefit of Life eternal, which only the Humane-divine Perſon of the Meſſiah (not any Abſtract Logos) is unto Men. But he cannot be ſuppos'd, to ſpeak in thoſe Proems ſo diſſonantly from himſelf and the New Teſtament; therefore this honourary Name the Life in thoſe Proems (being underſtood in the perſonal Acceptation) denoteth only the Humane-divine Perſon of the Meſſiah, not any Abſtract Logos. It is not a natural Life, but only Life ſpiritual and eternal, which the Religion of Chriſtianity and the New Teſtament concerneth it ſelf about; and conſequently our Evangeliſt in his two Proems meaneth only this Life, which not an Abſtract Logos, but only the Humane-divine Perſon of the Meſſiah in his Religion is unto Men, therefore this honourary Name the Life in thoſe Proems denoteth only the Humane-divine Perſon of the Meſſiah not any Abſtract Logos. It is not poſſible, to argue with any firmitude and certainty touching the Senſe of the Holy Writers, if theſe Arguments do not aſcertain our Evangeliſts Senſe in his two Proems, of one of which we will take a ſhort view; for it ought to be conjoin'd with thoſe many other places of the New Teſtament which we have remark'd. 1 Joh. 1. 1, 2. That which was from the beginning, which we have heard, which we have ſeen with our Eyes, which we have look'd upon, and our Hands have handled of the Word of Life; For the Life was manifeſted, and we have ſeen it, and bear Witneſs, and ſhew unto you that eternal Life, which was with the Father and was manifeſted unto us. If we enquire what the Word of Life ſignifieth in other places of the New Teſtament (beſides theſe two Proems) we find, that it always ſignifieth the Word of the Chriſtian Religion, which alone is the Word of Life. Joh. 6. 68. Act. 5. 20. Phil. 2. 16. So it always ſignifieth, when it is underſtood in the real Acceptation; therefore in theſe two Proems wherein it is underſtood in the perſonal Acceptation, it denoteth only the Humane-divine Perſon of the Meſſiah (who alone is this Word of Life) not any Abſtract Logos. If we alſo inquire what Life this Holy Writer meaneth, when he ſtileth a certain Perſon of Honour the Life and the Word of Life; himſelf interpreteth his own meaning; for in the ſame Contexture of Words he ſtileth the ſame Perſon that eternal Life; and is it an Abſtract Logos, who in the Senſe of the New Teſtament and of our Evangeliſt is that eternal Life? Is it not only the Humane-divine Perſon of the Meſſiah? We ought to conſider further (r) that the Apoſtles were to be Men, that could and did Witneſs upon the Credit of their Eyes and Ears what they publiſh'd. This perſonal Quality was requir'd in them, to Witneſs what they had ſeen our Lord do, the Words that they had heard him ſpeak, upon their own Knowledge, and to Teſtifie of him and the miraculous Things that befel him (eſpecially his Reſurrection) as thoſe that had ſeen the Lord, that ſo (being to preach the Goſpel to all Nations) they might be able to ſatisfie all Men touching the Truth of the Goſpel. Act. 1. 21, 22. Joh. 15. 27. 1 Pet. 5. 1. 2 Pet. 1. 16. 1 Cor. 9. 1. This Holy Writer therefore ſpeaketh as an Apoſtle (an Apoſtolical Eye-witneſs) and his Words relate to his Apoſtolical Witneſs-bearing, when he ſaith, That which was from the beginning, which we have heard, which we have ſeen with our Eyes, which we have look'd upon, and our Hands have handled of the Word of Life. This Proem therefore muſt be underſtood agreeably to the Apoſtolical Witneſs-bearing, not touching an Abſtract Logos (which the Apoſtles were not concerned to bear Witneſs to, nor were they capable of it) but touching the Humane-divine Perſon of the Meſſiah and that Benefit of Life eternal which he is in the Chriſtian Religion. So Tertullian (ſometimes) rightly interpreteth our Saviour's Name. (s) They that knew him to be the Word of Life, continued accompanying him to the end. We have great Aſſurance that in this Proem of our Evangeliſt the Word or Logos and the Life, denote and ſignifie not an Abſtract Logos, but the Humane-divine Perſon of God's Meſſiah; and conſequently they ſo denote and ſignifie in the Proem of his Goſpel. The Life therefore ſo manifeſtly ſignifieth the Benefit of Life eternal, which only the Humane-divine Perſon of Chriſt is in his Religion, that even Grotius (who as much as he can, befriendeth an Abſtract Logos) giveth this wiſe Caution. (t) Vitam hic cave aliam accipias quam vitam æternam. Take heed, that you do not miſunderſtand this Name the Life, to be meant of any other Life but Life eternal. Agreeably to Grotius the Jeſuit Maldonate largely diſcourſeth. And theſe Words the Life was manifeſted and we have ſeen it, are thus expounded by Ven. Bede upon the place. Illam vitam dicit, quæ in Evangelio loquitur, ego ſum reſurrectio & vita.

XXII. S. Baſil taketh Notice (u) that our Evangeliſt calleth the Son of God ϗ φῶς ϗ ζωὴν ϗ ἀνάστασιν, the Light, the Life, and the Reſurrection; whence he ought to have obſerv'd, that the Life which he meaneth, is that which is connex'd with the Reſurrection. But although he overlooketh this obſervable, he ſubjoineth this good rule, (w) When you hear him called the Light, do not think him to be this ſenſible and viſible Light; and when you hear him called the Life, do not think him, to be this common Life, which even Brute-animals live. To ſuppoſe, that this Name the Life denoteth the Son of God,

---

(r) Mr. Thorndike of the Govern. of the Church p. 3, 4.

(s) Qui ſcierunt illum vitæ eſſe Verbum & à Deo veniſſe, perſeveraverunt in Comitatu ejus uſque ad finem. De præſcript. c. 3.

(t) Not. in Joh. 1. 4.

(u) Hom. in Joh. 1. 1. p. 505.

(t) Οὔτε φῶς ἀκούσας, ἐπὶ τὸ αἰσθητὸν τοῦτο ϗ ὀφθαλμοῖς ὁρατὸν καταφέρῃ· οὔτε ζωὴν ἀκούσας, τὴν κοινὴν ταύτην νόει, ἣν ϗ τὰ ἄλογα ζῇ.

God, to be the common Animal Life, is alike abſurd, as to ſuppoſe, that this Name The Light denoteth him to be the common Light of the Sun. Yet at this rate the Scholaſtic Theology miſ-interpreteth the Scripture and the Proem of S. John's Goſpel; and at this rate S. Baſil himſelf contradicteth his own Rule. For he ſuppoſeth, that the Abſtract Son of God is called The Life, as being by an eternal proceſſion, (x) ἐκ τ ὄντως ζωῆς ἡ ζωοποιὸς πηγὴ, from that which is Life indeed a vivific Fountain; and he explaineth what he meaneth by this vivific Fountain; for he ſtileth the Abſtract Son (or Logos) of God, (y) τ ὄντως ὄντα, τὴν πηγὴν τ ζωῆς, τ πᾶσι τοῖς ἐστι τοῦ εἶναι παρεκτικὸν, The Being that truly is, the Fountain of Life, that giveth Being to all Beings. His Senſe is the ſame with this of Athanaſius, who ſaith of the Son, (z) As from the Fountain of the Father He is Life, in whom all things (all Animals) have Vivification and Conſiſtence. So the Alexandrian Cyril (before cited) ſaith, (a) The (Abſtract) Son proceeding from the Eſſence of the Father as from an everliving Fountain is naturally Life, vivificating all things. So S. Chryſoſtom ſuppoſeth, that theſe words of our Evangeliſt, In him was Life, do ſignifie, (b) the everflowing and inexhauſtible Virtue of the (Abſtract) Divine Logos, both to procreate and conſerve all created Beings. So (c) Origen, (d) Gr. Naz. (e) and others of the ancient Writers ſuppoſe, that the Logos (or Son of God is called The Life, becauſe he is the Fountain of Natural Life (the procreative and conſervative cauſe thereof) and in him we live our Natural Life. But ſeeing it is plainly demonſtrative from the whole tenour of the New Teſtament and from our Evangeliſt himſelf, that in ſtiling the Son of God The Life he meaneth no other Life but Life Eternal, therefore this Expoſition of the ancient Writers is demonſtratively a Scholaſtic and Unchriſtian miſtake, and ſuch is alſo their Philoſophic Demiurgic Logos. It is reaſonable and agreeable, that in the Goſpel of the Son of God he ſhould be called by ſuch Names, that denote what he is by Office and Dignity, and as Author of the Goſpel or the Chriſtian Religion: but this Expoſition is altogether remote from the Idea of the Son of God as Author of the Goſpel, altogether alien from the Evangelical kind of things, from the purport and intent of Chriſt's coming and from the buſineſs of Chriſtianity. If our Evangeliſt had been writing of Natural Religion and the Duties thereof, it had been pertinent and agreeable, to have told us of the Fountain of our Being and our Natural Life: but he is not writing of any ſuch matters, nor doth the knowledge of the Son of God at all belong to Natural Theology and Religion; therefore he cannot be the procreative and conſervative cauſe of Natural Life, nor is it the Evangeliſt's intention, ſo to repreſent him. If it had been the intention of the holy Writers of the New Teſtament, ſo to repreſent him, they would have told the Heathen, that by their Idolatry they were alienated from this the true Zeus, that is, αἰτία τοῖς ζῶσι τοῦ ζῆν, the cauſe of life to all living things: but they never made uſe of ſuch Notices as theſe in preaching the Son of God to the Heathen. In our Evangeliſt the Son of God is intituled the true Bread, the true Vine, and the true Light, his Fleſh and Blood is called Meat and Drink indeed (in compariſon of which all other is but ſhew and ſhadow;) and it cannot be ſuppos'd, that by this honourary Name The Life he meaneth any thing leſs than (f) τὴν ὄντως ζωὴν, δι᾽ ἣν ζῶμεν τὴν ἀληθῆ ζωὴν, the Life indeed by which we live the true life. So by Ignatius (g) Jeſus Chriſt is called τὸ ἀληθινὸν ἡμῶν ζῆν, our true Life, and he ſaith of him, (h) οὗ χωρὶς τὸ ἀληθινὸν ζῆν οὐκ ἔχομεν, without whom we have not the true Life. The Son of God therefore muſt be ſuppoſed, to be denominated The true Life unto us, which cannot be the Natural Life: And as theſe Names the true Bread, the true Vine, and the true Light, cannot ſignifie, that he is both the common Bread, a common Vine and the common Light, and alſo the true Bread, the true Vine, and the true Light: So this Name The true Life cannot mean, that he is both the Natural Life to us and the true Life. Yet thus inconſiſtently (and jumbling together things Natural and Evangelical) it is interpreted by S. Chryſoſtom and S. Gr. Nazianzen. For the former having interpreted The Life, to ſignifie, that the Son of God is the procreative and conſervative cauſe of Natural Life, proceedeth to ſay, That the Evangeliſt beginneth with the Reſurrection and with wonderful things Evangelical. (i) For Life being come to us the dominion of Death is diſſolv'd, and the Light ſhining to us it is no more Darkneſs with us, but Life always remaineth in us, and Death cannot vanquiſh it. This indeed is a genuine Interpretation of theſe Evangelical Names (The Life and The Light) and the genuine Evangelical Character of the Son of God: but to interpret his Name The Life, to ſignifie the Fountain of common Nature and Natural Life: This is to make the things of Unregeneracy the proper Subject-matter of the Theology and Religion of Regeneracy; This is to make Chriſt ſuch a Son of God as ought to be treated of in Phyſiology and Natural Theology: This is not to interpret the Goſpel as the Goſpel touching things Evangelical. But thus Gr. Naz. will have this Name The Life, to ſignifie, not only that we have the Holy Spiritual Life from the Son of God, but (k) κατὰ τὴν διπλῆν τοῦ ἐμφυσήματος δύναμιν καὶ πνοὴν according to the twofold Inſpiration, the one of Natural, the other of Spiritual Life, and that he is πάσης λογικῆς φύσεως σύστασις καὶ οὐσίωσις, efficiently the Conſtitution and Eſſentiation of all Rational Nature. The ancient Writers that in their Diſputes with the Hereticks declaim againſt the Wiſdom of this World, at this rate diſtort the things Evangelical to School-philoſophic Notions, that profane Life and the Divinity of the Chriſtian Religion. And we that ſhould tranſcend them in Wiſdom (as living in an Age more Learned than they) yet in the Theology of the Godhead have not advanc'd one jot beyond their Scholaſtic Vanities, as appeareth from the Expoſition, which a Divine of our own hath lately made of our Evangeliſt's Proem, and the Life and Light which he ſpeaketh of. (l) The Word was the Fountain of Life, even of the Rational Life. In him was Life and the Life was the Light of Men. He enlightned Mankind with Natural Reaſon and Underſtanding. (m) He is the Fountain of all Rational Life. In him was Life and the Life was the Light of Men.

(x) Adv. Eunom. l. 2. p. 59.

(y) Ibid. p. 56.

(z) Αὐτὸς ὡς ἐκ πηγῆς τοῦ πατρός ἐστι ζωὴ, ἐν ᾧ τὰ πάντα ζωογονεῖται καὶ συνέστηκεν. C. Arian. or. 4. p. 252. Com.

(a) Ὁ δὲ κατὰ φύσιν υἱὸς, ὥσπερ ἀπό τινος πηγῆς ἀεὶ ζώσης, ἐκ τῆς τοῦ πατρὸς οὐσίας προελθὼν, ζωὴ κατὰ φύσιν ἐστὶ τὰ πάντα ζωογονῶν. Com. in Johan. p. 50.

(b) Hom. 5. in Johan. p. 580.

(c) Peri-archon. l. 1. c. 2.

(d) Or. 36. p. 591.

(e) Euthym. Theophyl.

(f) Clem. Strom. l. 7. p. m. 507.

(g) Ep. 1. p. 3.

(h) Ep. 6. p. 51.

(i) Τῆς γὰρ ζωῆς παραγενομένης πρὸς ἡμᾶς λέλυται τοῦ θανάτου τὸ κράτος, καὶ τοῦ φωτὸς λάμψαντος ἡμῖν οὐκέτι τὸ σκότος ἐστίν.

(k) Or. 36. p. 591.

(l) Dr. Sherlock of the Scripture proofs of Chriſt's Divin. p. 125.

(m) Ibid. p. 139.

The ancient Writers ſuppoſe, that the Son of God is the Fountain of Natural Life (of Vegetative Life to Plants, of Senſitive Life to Animals, of Rational Life to Men) by the Intervention of the Holy Spirit, ſo diſtorting the things of the New Teſtament, which are the Saint of God-kind of things, into things of another nature, kind and quality; at once turning the Holy Spirit (that peculiarly belongeth to the Church and Saints of God and is meerly a Saint of God-kind of thing) into an univerſal Principle of Natural Life, an Anima mundi (as it were) or Spirit of the World (a Mundane Vivificative Spirit) and perverting the Holy Imperial Son of God (who peculiarly belongeth to the Church and Kingdom of God, and is eſſentially a Saint of God-kind of Imperial Son) into a principle of Common Life and a Mundane-Syſtem-kind of Logos like that of the School of Plato. Whence S. Auſtin (whom the Schoolmen follow) deriv'd his Philoſophic-pagan kind of Expoſition of our Evangeliſt s Text, In him was Life. For connecting with theſe words part of the former Verſe, he thus readeth the Evangeliſt's Text (as many others have done) Quod factum eſt, in ipſo vita erat, every thing that was made or created, was in him (the Abſtract Logos) Life: which he thus illuſtrateth; (n) Suppoſe an Artificer to make an Atk; it muſt be conſider'd, as it is in the Artificer's Art, and as it is in the Work done. As it is in the Work done, it is not Life: but as it is in the Artificer's Art, it is Life; becauſe the Soul of the Artificer liveth, where all theſe things are, before they are produc'd. Thus a frigid and frivolous Scholaſtic Subtilty is brought upon the Stage, to expound a Text, that is of infinite importance to Life and Salvation; and what ſignifieth it to Life and Salvation, whether things made according to Art live in the Mind of the Artificer or not? If this is the Senſe of our Evangeliſt's Text Amelius and other Pagan Platoniſts that knew not God or the Son of God, were much more fit to be Expoſitors of it than S. Auſtin and the Schoolmen. For their Abſtract Logos in this reſpect degenerateth from the Platonic; the Idea's that are in it, are not any Realities or Subſtantialities, not any one of them is an Eſſence and Life, they are meer Notionalities and conceptional kind of Species, not any one of them is ſuppos'd to have ſuch a Life, which conſtituteth it alive and living, as to any thing in it ſelf every one of theſe Idea's is devoid of Life, and therefore cannot properly (but only metonymically and figuratively) be ſaid to be Life, much leſs Life it ſelf. Yet they ſay, that between Humane Artificers and this Divine Artificer (the Abſtract Logos) there is this difference; although the Idea of a thing in ſome ſort liveth in the Mind of an Humane Artificer, yet non eſt vita, becauſe his Intellection is not his Eſſence: but in God his Intellection is his Eſſence and his Life, and whatever is in God, is not only Life, but Life it ſelf. Which is moſt true of the Platoniſts Logos, that is called by them ζωὴ, Life, and ζῶον, Animal, (or that which liveth) not only becauſe it is Intelligence (which is called by them (o) θεωρία ζῶσα, living Theory) but alſo becauſe the Idea's of it are ſuppos'd to be, not the meer Notionalities, but the great Realities and Subſtantialities of things, each one of them is an Eſſence, Life, Intellect, (all things live there) and all of them are Animals and Gods. Of this Platonic Logos Amelius the Platoniſt interpreted our Evangeliſt's Text (not receding from the Principles of his Art, like the Muſician that defin'd the Soul an Harmony) his reading of the Text was the ſame with that of S. Auſtin; ὃ γέγονεν ἐν αὐτῷ ζωὴ ἦν, that which was made (or created) in him was Life. And this was his Interpretation; ἐν ᾧ τὸ γινόμενον ζῶν, ϗ ζωήν, ϗ ὂν πεφυκέναι, In whom whatſoever was made, was Living and Life and true Being. This Platonic Interpretation ſo far agreeth with that of S. Auſtin and the Schoolmen; they both ſuppoſe touching their Abſtract Demiurgic Logos, that before all things were created by him, they were contain'd in him (which is a Mundane Syſtem) and the divineſt kind of thing which they attribute to their Abſtract Demiurgic Logos, is common Intellection or Idea, that may be found in the damned, and is foreign or exotic to the Son of God, the Life of God and Life Eternal.

XXIII. The other Attribute which our Evangeliſt connecteth with his Creative Logos is The Light, v. 4, 5, 7, 8, 9. The life was the light of Men. And the light ſhineth in darkneſs, and the darkneſs comprehended it not. John came for a witneſs, to bear witneſs of the light. He was not that light, but was ſent to bear witneſs of that light. That was the true light, which lighteth every Man that cometh into the World. Some Scholaſticks in the Interpretation of this Attribute have proceeded to great extravagances, as Gaſſendus relateth. (p) There have been Catholicks, who have held, that God is the Intellectus agens, who is the true Light, that lighteth every Man coming into this World. This Conceit was deriv'd from ſome of Ariſtotle's Interpreters (Greeks and Arabians) Plato doth not acknowledge an Intellectus agens, but his Abſtract Logos is ſuppos'd to be an intelligible Sun, that affordeth intellectual light to Mankind in their Philoſophic Contemplations; and this Platonic Intelligible Sun a Divine of our own accounteth the true Son of God. (q) What Ariſtotle attributes to a Light within us (ſaith he) Plato referreth to a Sun without us; to him who is the true Light, that inlightneth every one that cometh into the World, I mean to the Eternal Son of God.—— Platoniſts had as good reaſon, to conceive, that S. John was one of their Tribe from the ninth as from the firſt Verſe of the firſt Chapter of his Goſpel. Mankind is illuminated by Chriſt the Eternal Word and Wiſdom of God. This Illumination hath place in Metaphyſical Contemplations. So Plato ſuppoſeth; but his Metaphyſical Contemplation is Phantaſtry, not Wiſdom; his intelligible Sun is as grand a Figment as the Ariſtotelians Intellectus agens, and they that confound his intelligible Sun with the Evangeliſt's Son of God, may as well confound the Chriſtian Converſion with the Platonic Converſion (or ἐπιστροφὴ) which is a turning the Mind to the intelligible Idea's and ſuper-intelligible Good. The Platonic Contemplation and Illumination is not ſo good as the Light of Nature and common Reaſon, of which the Abſtract Son of God is commonly ſuppos'd, to be the Fountain, and the Evangeliſt is commonly ſuppos'd, to ſtile him The Light, becauſe he is the Fountain of it. Some (as Beza and Piſcator) ſuppoſe, that he is ſtiled The Light for this only reaſon, becauſe he is the Fountain of Natural Light, and according-

(n) Attendite arcam in arte & arcam in opere. Arca in opere non eſt vita: arca in arte vita eſt: quia vivit anima artificis, ubi ſunt iſta omnia, antequam proferantur. Tr. 1. in Johan. Gonet. Clyp. T. 5. p. 500.

(o) Plotin. En. 3. l. 8. c. 7.

(p) Fuiſſe Catholicos, qui putaverint Deum Intellectum agentem, qui eſt Lux vera, quæ illuminat omnem hominem venientem in hunc mundum. T. 2. p. 433.

(q) Sarſon. Analyſ. of 1 Tim. 1. 15. See another monſtrous extravagance in J. Bapt. Criſp. Quin. Prim. p. 45.

ly Theophylact and the Alexandrian Cyril expound the Evangeliſt. (r) He ſaith, The Life was the Light of Men, that is, The all vivificating God the Logos, The Life in all Beings, illuminateth the rational Animal, and affordeth a largeſs of Intelligence to thoſe Animals that are capable of it. To this Senſe ſome Expoſitors confine the Evangeliſt's words: but the generality of the Ancient Scholaſtic Divines do not thus confine the Evangeliſt's words; although they expound them, to ſignifie, that the Logos is the Fountain of Natural Light, yet they alſo ſuppoſe them to ſignifie, that he is the Fountain of the ſpiritual ſaving Light, which is peculiar to regenerate Chriſtians. Origen, who ſuppoſeth all Men, that partake of Reaſon, to partake of Chriſt, yet ſuppoſeth ſome only to have, (s) τὸ νοητὸν γνώσεως φῶς, φῶς ἀληθινόν, ϗ φῶς τοῦ κόσμου, ϗ φῶς τῶν ἀνθρώπων, the intelligible Light of Knowledge, the true Light, the Light of the World and the Light of Men. Theſe are they, that do not worſhip the Heavenly Bodies becauſe of their ſenſible Light, (t) that underſtand how God is Light, and how the Son of God is the true Light. According to this Father (of whoſe Philoſophy touching Light it is remarkable, that he ſeemeth to think (u) all Light to be from Flame or Fire as the effulgency of it) the Light which our Evangeliſt ſpeaketh of, is the Light which ſhineth into our Hearts, and giveth us the light of the knowledge of God πρὸς φωτισμὸν τοῦ εὐαγγελίου, to illuſtrate the Goſpel. That Light which the Scripture ſpeaketh of, when it ſaith, thy Law is a Light unto my Feet, and a Lamp unto my Paths. That Light which aroſe to us that ſate in Darkneſs and the Region of the Shadow of Death. That Light of which the Scripture ſaith; the People that ſate in darkneſs, have ſeen a great light. It is the light of the wiſe Virgins, and that which is in the Scriptures, wherein this Light is conſerv'd and ſhineth. And ſo Clemens clearly explaineth, in what Senſe he ſuppoſeth Chriſt to be the Light, in thus exhorting an Heathen, to become a regenerate Chriſtian. (w) Receive Chriſt, receive thy Sight, receive thy Light. Hail Light: for from Heaven Light is riſen upon us, that were buried in Darkneſs, and ſhut up in the Shadow of Death, Light more pure than the Sun, ſweeter than this Life. That Light is Life Eternal and whatever partake of it live. Make haſt thou that art as blind as Tireſias, believe thy Sight (the cauſe of it) the Sun's Illumination is not ſo bright as Chriſt's, by whom the Eyes of the blind ſee. The Night will be put to flight, the Fire will be profligated, Death will be driven away. He that diſcourſeth ſuch things as theſe (although he mentioneth not our Evangeliſt's Text, as Origen doth) muſt be ſuppos'd, to mean, that the Son of God is in our Evangeliſt's Proem called The Light, as being in himſelf and to us that ſpiritual ſaving Light that is in Chriſtianity and Regeneracy, which is a true Idea of the Son of God. Gr. Naz. ſaith, He is called The Light (x) as being the brightneſs of Souls that are cleanſed in Speech and in Life. For if Darkneſs is Ignorance and Sin, Light muſt be Knowledge and Life Divine. S. Auſtin ſaith, (y) The Illumination of us Chriſtians is a participation of the Word, namely, of that Life which is the Light of Men. In his Expoſition of our Evangeliſt and elſewhere he requireth an antecedent purging and cleanſing our ſelves, to qualifie us for the reception of this Light, which therefore is not the Natural Light. So S. Chryſoſtom (expounding our Evangeliſt's Proem) requireth a cleanſing the Soul from all Paſſions (vile Affections) to qualifie us for a participation of this Light; and he ſpeaketh to us theſe divine words. (z) This Light cometh by Faith, and when it is come, it plenteouſly for the future illuminateth the receiver, and if thou liveſt a pure life agreeable to it, it remaineth with thee continually, dwelling within. This Light he reckoneth amongſt thoſe Soul-goods, which the Son of God παρέσχεν ἡμῖν ἐλθών, afforded us coming amongſt us, which the Evangeliſt (ſaith he) hath ſignify'd by one word, And the Life was the Light of Men. Agreeably to theſe Fathers Jul. Firmicus ſaith of this Light. (a) It cannot ſhine, unleſs an immaculate Conſcience and an incorrupt Life guardeth and commendeth us; then the Grace of true Light will riſe unto us: then the Author of Light will inſinuate himſelf into us: then we may both receive and ſee the true Light. By this Name our Evangeliſt calleth the Light which he ſpeaketh of, and this Name demonſtrateth the miſtake of thoſe ancient Writers, who interpret the Light (in our Evangeliſt's Proem) to ſignifie both the Natural and the Evangelical Light. For (as we have before argu'd) this Name the true Bread and the true Vine cannot ſignifie both common Bread and a common Vine, and alſo the true Bread and the true Vine: So this Name The true Light cannot ſignifie both the common Light of Reaſon and the true Light. The Light and the true Light in our Evangeliſt certainly ſignifieth the Evangelical Light (which only is of this denomination;) therefore it doth not ſignifie the Natural Light.

XXIV. This Point the Jeſuit Maldonate ſtrenuouſly proveth in this following Diſcourſe, that is truly Divine and Chriſtian. (b) "As we have ſaid, that by Life in this place is not meant Natural Life, whereby we live to the World, but Spiritual Life, whereby we live unto God: So it is paſt doubt with me, that it is not the Natural Light, that is here meant, but the Spiritual Light, whereby we know and diſcern the things of the Spirit of God. For the Evangeliſt is teaching us, how the Word is Life to us, namely, by illuminating every Man coming into the World, for the Life was the Light of Men.

(r) Διὰ τοῦτό φησι, ϗ ἡ ζωὴ ἦν τὸ φῶς τῶν ἀνθρώπων, τουτ' ἔστιν, ὁ πάντα ζωογονῶν θεὸς λόγος, ἡ ἐν πᾶσι τοῖς οὖσι ζωή, ϗ τὸ λογικὸν φωτίζει ζῶον, ϗ τοῖς συνέσεως δεκτικοῖς τὴν σύνεσιν ἐπιδαψιλεύεται. S. Cyr. Com. in Joh. p. 54.

(s) C. Celſ. l. 5. p. 237.

(t) Ibid. p. 238.

(u) Οἷον ἀπὸ πυρὸς ἐξάπτεσθαι φῶς ἐν τῇ ψυχῇ. Ibid. l. 6. p. 278.

(w) Ἀπόλαβε τὸν Χριστόν, ἀπόλαβε τὸ βλέπειν, ἀπόλαβέ σου τὸ φῶς. Χαῖρε φῶς· ὅτι φῶς ἡμῖν ἐξ οὐρανοῦ τοῖς ἐν σκότει κατορωρυγμένοις, ϗ ἐν σκιᾷ θανάτου κατακεκλεισμένοις ἐξέλαμψεν, ἡλίου καθαρώτερον, ζωῆς τῆς ἐνταῦθα γλυκύτερον. τὸ φῶς ἐκεῖνο, ζωή ἐστιν ἀΐδιος· ϗ ὅσα μετείληφεν αὐτοῦ ζῇ· σπεῦσον τειρεσία· πίστευσον ὄψει· Χριστὸς ἐπιλάμπει φαιδρότερον ἡλίου, δι' ὃν ὀφθαλμοὶ τυφλῶν ἀναβλέπουσιν, νὺξ σε φεύξεται, πῦρ φοβηθήσεται, θάνατος οἰχήσεται. Προτρεπτ. p. 52, 55.

(x) Ὡς λαμπρότης ψυχῶν, ϗ λόγῳ ϗ βίῳ καθαιρομένων· εἰ γὰρ σκότος ἡ ἄγνοια, ϗ ἡ ἁμαρτία, φῶς ἂν εἴη ἡ γνῶσις, ϗ βίος ὁ ἔνθεος. Or. 36. p. 591.

(y) Illuminatio noſtra participatio verbi eſt, illius ſcilicet vitæ quæ lux eſt hominum. De Trin. l. 4. c. 2.

(z) Παραγίνεται δὲ τοῦτο τὸ φῶς διὰ πίστεως ϗ παραγινόμενον καταλάμπει λοιπὸν μετὰ πολλῆς τῆς δαψιλείας τὸν ὑποδεξάμενον, κἂν βίον αὐτοῦ παρέχῃς καθαρὸν μένει διηνεκῶς ἐνοικοῦν ἔνδον. Hom. 5. in Johan. p. 581.

(a) Lucere non poteſt, niſi immaculata nos conſcientiæ ornamenta protexerint, niſi integra nos & incorrupta vita commendet, tunc orietur nobis veri luminis gratia: tunc ſe nobis lucis auctor inſinuet: tunc verum lumen & accipere poſſumus & videre. De error. prof. rel. p. 39.

(b) Com. in Joh. 1. 4.

“ This manifeſtly appeareth, to be his Senſe both from thoſe things that follow, and from the uſual Language of Scripture. In the fifth Verſe the Evangeliſt addeth, The Light ſhineth in Darkneſs and the Darkneſs comprehended it not. Therefore he doth not ſpeak of the Natural Light, which all Men comprehend, but of the Spiritual Light, which few have comprehended. He addeth in the ninth Verſe; This was the true Light, which enlightneth every Man coming into the World; where doubtleſs he ſpeaketh of the ſame Light and of the Spiritual Light, Joh. 3. 19. when he ſaith, Light is come into the World, and Men loved Darkneſs rather than Light, doubtleſs he ſpeaketh of Spiritual Light, as of Spiritual Darkneſs. When Chriſt ſaith, ch. 8. 12. I am the Light of the World, he that followeth me, walketh not in Darkneſs, but ſhall have the Light of Life: It is manifeſt, that Light and Darkneſs are taken Spiritually. Ch. 9. 5. he ſaith, While I am in the World, I am the Light of the World. And ch. 12. 35, 36. Walk while ye have the Light, while ye have the Light, believe in the Light, that ye may be the Children of Light. Hereunto the Prophecies agree; for S. Matthew interpreteth this following Prophecy of Chriſt and his Preaching, Iſa. 9. 2. The People that walked in Darkneſs have ſeen a great Light: they that dwell in the Land of the Shadow of Death, upon them hath the Light ſhined. Iſa. 49. 6. I have given thee for a Light to the Gentiles, that thou mayeſt be my Salvation unto the end of the Earth. Every where Light ſignifieth the Spiritual Illumination of Men; and I do not know, that any Inſtance can be produc'd from Scripture, where Light ſignifieth Natural Reaſon. On the contrary, Darkneſs which is oppos'd to the Light of Chriſt, is always taken for bad Manners and the Errors of Life, from which Chriſt reclaimeth us. For we go out of the way, when we walk in Darkneſs, Rom. 13. 12. Let us caſt off the Works of Darkneſs and put on the Armour of Light. 2 Cor. 6. 14. What communion hath Light with Darkneſs. Eph. 5. 8. Ye were ſometimes Darkneſs, but now are ye Light in the Lord. S. John ſaith in a place moſt like unto this whereof we diſcourſe, 1 Joh. 1. 5, 6. God is Light, and in him is no Darkneſs at all. If we ſay, that we have fellowſhip with him, and walk in Darkneſs, we lye. And ch. 2. 9. He that ſaith, he is in the Light, and hateth his Brother, is in Darkneſs even until now. From which words of the Apoſtle this Commentator (that diſcourſeth ſo like a Chriſtian Divine) might have obſerv'd, that Darkneſs in the Chriſtian Theology and the New Teſtament ſignifieth the ſtate of Unregeneracy. Agreeably whereto himſelf interpreteth, Joh. 1. 5. The Light ſhineth in Darkneſs, and the Darkneſs comprehended it not. (c) The Light he calleth Chriſt and his Doctrine, of which he had ſpoken in the next foregoing words; In him was Life, and the Life was the Light of Men. Darkneſs he calleth Men, who were in their Sins, that is, in Darkneſs, as S. Paul ſaith; ye were ſometimes Darkneſs, but now are ye Light in the Lord. What Tatianus ſaith of the Soul in general, is in the Senſe of the Chriſtian Theology true of an Unregenerate Soul, (d) ſhe is Darkneſs and hath nothing of Light. To paſs from an unregenerate into a regenerate ſtate is (e) to paſs from Darkneſs into Life. (f) There Foulneſs, and Darkneſs, and the horrour of a perpetual Night are in Domination. If thou deſireſt, that at leaſt ſome ſlender Beam of Light may ſhine into thee, lift up thine Eyes to him that ſaid, I am the Light of the World. It is not the Natural Light, that Chriſt meaneth, when he ſaith, I am the Light of the World; therefore the Evangeliſt doth not mean it, when he ſaith, The Life was the Light of Men. The Evangeliſt diſcourſing of the Light is writing his Goſpel, which muſt be interpreted as the Goſpel touching the things (and conſequently the Light) Evangelical. All the ſaving Light that Mankind have, they have it from Chriſt, who introduc'd his Evangelical Light into a World of Heathen Sinners (of no better Character) that were in the atheous Darkneſs of Ignorance, of Sin and of Miſery; for ſuch is the Darkneſs of Unregeneracy (as on the contrary in the ſtate of Regeneracy there is the Light of Saving Knowledge, of Grace and of Comfort;) Uunregenerate Mankind at Chriſt's coming (as being in their Graceleſneſs and Wickedneſs) were invelop'd in Darkneſs; and therefore the Evangeliſt ſpeaking the Language of the New Teſtament calleth them The Darkneſs, Joh. 1. 5. To this comprehenſion of Darkneſs the Natural Light belongeth: but ſo doth not the Light which our Evangeliſt in his Proem attributeth to Chriſt (it belongeth to an oppoſite Comprehenſion;) therefore by the Light which is Chriſt's Attribute our Evangeliſt doth not mean the Natural Light, but the Light of the glorious Goſpel of Chriſt, 2 Cor. 4. 4. The Light which is in Chriſtianity and Regeneracy, 2 Cor. 4. 6. Eph. 5. 8. 1 Joh. 2. 9. The benefit of ſaving Light, 1 Joh. 2. 8. and 5. 20. Our Evangeliſt in the Proem of his Goſpel ſpeaketh of the true Light both in the perſonal and real acceptation (for the true Light in the perſonal is the true Light in the real acceptation;) he ſpeaketh of the true Light in his firſt Epiſtle; and who can doubt, but that he meaneth by the true Light, not the Natural Light which is in Darkneſs, but the Saving Light which is in Chriſtianity and Regeneracy? For the Darkneſs is paſt (ſaith he to Regenerate Chriſtians) and the true Light now ſhineth, 1 Joh. 2. 8. It is evident therefore to common Senſe, that this is our Evangeliſt's Senſe in the Proem of his Goſpel; The Saviour of the World was the benefit of Saving Light to the benighted World. The Life was the Light of Men in Darkneſs.

XXV. This Light was not receiv'd or admitted into the comprehenſion of Darkneſs (the Darkneſs comprehended it not, ſaith the Evangeliſt) it is the Light which is receiv'd by Faith and rejected by Infidelity; which ſheweth, that it is not the natural Light.

(g) We Sons of Adam that are born Blind are illuminated by

(c) Lucem vocat Chriſtum ejuſque doctrinam, de qua proximis verbis dixerat, In ipſo vita erat, & vita erat lux hominum. Tenebræ homines qui in peccatis, id eſt, in tenebris erant; ſicut D. Paulus ait, Eratis aliquando tenebræ, nunc autem lux in Domino. Idem Com. in loc.

(d) Anima per ſe tenebra eſt, & nihil habet lucis: hinc illud, Tenebræ non comprehendunt lucem. Tatian. or. c. Græc. p. 152.

(e) Μεταβαίνειν ἐκ τοῦ σκότους εἰς ζωήν. Clem. Strom. l. 1. p. m. 259.

(f) Illic ſordes, ſquallor, caligo, tenebræ, & perpetuæ noctis dominatur horror. Si vis ut tenuis ſaltem tibi ſplendor luminis luceat, erige vultus, & demerſos erige oculos, & deſertis his ad eum te confer qui dixit: Ego ſum lux mundi. Jul. Firmic. de error. prof. rel. p. 39.

(g) Ego ſum lumen mund, qui me ſequitur, non ambulabi our Lord having the Eye-ſalve of Faith; but the mixture of the Spittle with the Clay is antecedent thereto. For it is not an Abſtract Logos, from whom we have this Illumination, or who is this Light, but only the Humane-divine Perſon of the Meſſiah. And this is evident to common Senſe; for every one knoweth, who it is, to whom John Baptiſt was a Witneſs and Fore-runner as to the true Light, Joh. 1. 6, 7, 8. And this is he, who alone is the Light that our Evangeliſt ſpeaketh of; which therefore is not the natural Light. Nor is it leſs than palpable Nonſence, to ſuppoſe, that John Baptiſt was ſent to bear Witneſs unto natural Light, or to an Abſtract Demiurgic Logos the ſuppos'd Fountain thereof. He came to bear Witneſs unto him only, whom all Men are called by the Goſpel, to believe on; and therefore he only is the Light in the perſonal and real Acceptation. V. 6, 7, 8. There was a man ſent from God, whoſe name was John. The ſame came for a witneſs, to bear witneſs of the light, that all men through him might believe. He was not that light, but was ſent to bear witneſs of that light. John was a burning and ſhining Light, but not to be compar'd with Chriſt, conſidering the Light that he is as his kind of good and excellency, eſſentially and in infinite fulneſs in himſelf, and he is it unto us alſo. (h) We that were formerly fooliſh and blind wandering in the darkneſs of Death, being illuminated by the light of Grace, let us hold on in the path of Life, our Lord being our guide and governour. (i) We are in Chriſt, that is, in the Sun and the true Day. We are in Chriſt, that is, always in the light. (k) If thou haſt begun to be a Man of light, do the things of Chriſt; for Chriſt is light and day. So in Scripture he is intituled the Sun of Righteouſneſs (or Salvation) which ſpeaketh him the great Luminary (to whom John Baptiſt was a Fore-runner as the Phoſphorus is to the Sun) and another of his Scriptural Names is Oriens ex alto, the Day-ſpring from on high. Luk. 1. 79. Becauſe of which Name of the Meſſiah (l) ſome have an extravagant reſpect for the Eaſtern part of the World; the day alſo of his Nativity hath been called Ἐπιφάνεια, the appearance of Light, the Night before it vigiliæ luminum (becauſe of abundance of Candles that were then lighted) and at this time our Anceſtors ſent Candles to one another. Candles were alſo lighted, when the Goſpel was read (certainly not to ſignifie natural Light) the new-baptiz'd Perſon carried a lighted Candle in his Hand, and put on white Garments, to denote, that he was a Son of Light. Which Ritualities, although they were deviſ'd by dark Superſtition (which ſinketh Religion into exteriour Rites and neglecteth the Subſtance) yet were introduc'd into the Church, to ſignifie that eximious Evangelical Light for which Chriſt is celebrated in Scripture, but no where ſo much as in our Evangeliſts Proem. To his Followers he is the light of Life, the light of the holy Life into which they are regenerated, which leadeth unto Life eternal. From him they have a φωτεινὸν ὄμμα, luminous Eye; and becauſe Mankind have loſt their Eye-ſight in matters of Sanctity and their Salvation, the deſign of his coming was (m) ut in agnitionem veritatis ocularet, to give us our Eye-ſight to the acknowledgment of the Truth, as Tertullian ſpeaketh, (n) ἥλιος ψυχῆς, the Sun of the Soul is his agreeable Name; and accordingly our Evangeliſt repreſenteth him like the Sun, as in his Cauſality univerſally illuminative. V. 9. That was the true light, which lightneth every man, that cometh into the world. Some learned Expoſitors ſuppoſe (o) that theſe laſt words coming into the World do not refer to Man, but to the true Light; becauſe in the Evangeliſts theſe Expreſſions coming and coming into the World are frequently us'd touching our Saviour, his Name is ὁ ἐρχόμενος, he that cometh. Joh. 4. 25. Matth. 11. 3. Luk. 19. 38. And uſually his coming into the World is mention'd in our Evangeliſt and elſewhere. Joh. 3. 19. and 6. 14. and 11. 37. and 12. 46. and 18. 37. 1 Tim. 1. 15. According to this moſt probable Expoſition the Evangeliſt's Text ſhould be thus rendred; That was the true Light, which coming into the World enlightneth every Man. But how can it be ſaid of the Meſſias, that he enlightneth every Man? (p) Did Chriſt preach the Goſpel to all the World (ſaith a Divine of our own) or was the Goſpel preached to all the World and to every Man in the World, at the time when S. John wrote this? Or was every Man in the World enlightned by it? This as to matter of Fact was falſe, and therefore could not be the Evangeliſt's meaning. And there is this demonſtration, that this is not his meaning; becauſe all this according to this Expoſition relateth to what Chriſt did in the Fleſh, whereas the Evangeliſt attributeth all this to the Word before the Incarnation. Something material there is in this Argumentation, which yet is not levell'd ſo much againſt Socinianiſm, as againſt the Sanctity and Divinity of the Chriſtian Religion, that is ſadly profan'd by that Scholaſtic Theology, which ſuch Argumentations as theſe are deſigned to uphold and maintain. Which therefore do not convince, but make Socinians, who are not without the uſe of their Faculties, to diſcern the abſurdities of the Scholaſtic Theology; nor can they fail to diſcern the abſurdity of the laſt part of this Argumentation, which is called a Demonſtration. For no Man of Sence can imagine, that John Baptiſt's Witneſs-bearing to our Saviour as to the true Light was before his Incarnation; yet his being the Life and Light unto Men, is no more attributed to the Word before the Incarnation, than John Baptiſt's Witneſs-bearing is attributed to him before the Incarnation But there is in our Evangeliſts Narratives an unexactneſs in obſerving the time and order of things, of which this Evangeliſt's mentioning the Word made Fleſh is a palpable and acknowledg'd Inſtance. Diſmiſſing therefore this pretended Demonſtration, we will conſider the more material part of this Argumentation, which is touching our Saviour's lighting every Man, and which may ſeem a great difficulty. But there is really no more difficulty in expounding this Text of our Evangeliſt, than in expounding theſe other Texts. 1 Tim. 4. 10. Who is the Saviour of all men. 1 Cor. 15. 22. In Chriſt all ſhall be made alive. Rom. 5. 18. By the righteouſneſs of one the free gift came upon all men unto juſtification of life. For as Chriſt is the benefit of Salvation, of Life and of Righteouſneſs unto all Men, but it is in his Religion and by in tenebris; quia Dominus illuminat cæcos. Illuminamur ergo fratres, habentes collyrium fidei. Præceſſit ejus ſaliva cum terra, unde inungeretur qui cæcus eſt natus. Et nos de Adam cæci nati ſumus. S. Aug. Tr. 34. in Joann.

---

(h) In tenebris mortis errantes improvidi & cæci prius fuimus, luce gratiæ illuminati iter vitæ, duce & rectore Domino teneamus. S. Cypr. de Orat. Dom.

(i) In Chriſto, hoc eſt, in ſole & die vero ſumus. In Chriſto, hoc eſt, in lumine ſemper ſumus. Idem ibid.

(k) Si homo lucis eſſe cœpiſti, quæ ſunt Chriſti gere; quia lux & dies Chriſtus eſt. Idem de Zelo & Liv.

(l) Joh. Gregor. Not. & Obſ. c. 18. & 22.

(m) Tertull. Apol. c. 21.

(n) Clem. προτρεπτ. p. m. 34.

(o) Grot. Hammond.

(p) Dr. Sherlock Scripture-proofs. p. 127.

“ This manifeſtly appeareth, to be his Senſe both from thoſe things that follow, and from the uſual Language of Scripture. In the fifth Verſe the Evangeliſt addeth, The Light ſhineth in Darkneſs and the Darkneſs comprehended it not. Therefore he doth not ſpeak of the Natural Light, which all Men comprehend, but of the Spiritual Light, which few have comprehended. He addeth in the ninth Verſe; This was the true Light, which enlightneth every Man coming into the World; where doubtleſs he ſpeaketh of the ſame Light and of the Spiritual Light, Joh. 3. 19. when he ſaith, Light is come into the World, and Men loved Darkneſs rather than Light, doubtleſs he ſpeaketh of Spiritual Light, as of Spiritual Darkneſs. When Chriſt ſaith, ch. 8. 12. I am the Light of the World, he that followeth me, walketh not in Darkneſs, but ſhall have the Light of Life: It is manifeſt, that Light and Darkneſs are taken Spiritually. Ch. 9. 5. he ſaith, While I am in the World, I am the Light of the World. And ch. 12. 35, 36. Walk while ye have the Light, while ye have the Light, believe in the Light, that ye may be the Children of Light. Hereunto the Prophecies agree; for S. Matthew interpreteth this following Prophecy of Chriſt and his Preaching, Iſa. 9. 2. The People that walked in Darkneſs have ſeen a great Light: they that dwell in the Land of the Shadow of Death, upon them hath the Light ſhined. Iſa. 49. 6. I have given thee for a Light to the Gentiles, that thou mayeſt be my Salvation unto the end of the Earth. Every where Light ſignifieth the Spiritual Illumination of Men; and I do not know, that any Inſtance can be produc'd from Scripture, where Light ſignifieth Natural Reaſon. On the contrary, Darkneſs which is oppos'd to the Light of Chriſt, is always taken for bad Manners and the Errors of Life, from which Chriſt reclaimeth us. For we go out of the way, when we walk in Darkneſs, Rom. 13. 12. Let us caſt off the Works of Darkneſs and put on the Armour of Light. 2 Cor. 6. 14. What communion hath Light with Darkneſs. Eph. 5. 8. Ye were ſometimes Darkneſs, but now are ye Light in the Lord. S. John ſaith in a place moſt like unto this whereof we diſcourſe, 1 Joh. 1. 5, 6. God is Light, and in him is no Darkneſs at all. If we ſay, that we have fellowſhip with him, and walk in Darkneſs, we lye. And ch. 2. 9. He that ſaith, he is in the Light, and hateth his Brother, is in Darkneſs even until now. From which words of the Apoſtle this Commentator (that diſcourſeth ſo like a Chriſtian Divine) might have obſerv'd, that Darkneſs in the Chriſtian Theology and the New Teſtament ſignifieth the ſtate of Unregeneracy. Agreeably whereto himſelf interpreteth, Joh. 1. 5. The Light ſhineth in Darkneſs, and the Darkneſs comprehended it not. (c) The Light he calleth Chriſt and his Doctrine, of which he had ſpoken in the next foregoing words; In him was Life, and the Life was the Light of Men. Darkneſs he calleth Men, who were in their Sins, that is, in Darkneſs, as S. Paul ſaith; ye were ſometimes Darkneſs, but now are ye Light in the Lord. What Tatianus ſaith of the Soul in general, is in the Senſe of the Chriſtian Theology true of an Unregenerate Soul, (d) ſhe is Darkneſs and hath nothing of Light. To paſs from an unregenerate into a regenerate ſtate is (e) to paſs from Darkneſs into Life. (f) There Foulneſs, and Darkneſs, and the horrour of a perpetual Night are in Domination. If thou deſireſt, that at leaſt ſome ſlender Beam of Light may ſhine into thee, lift up thine Eyes to him that ſaid, I am the Light of the World. It is not the Natural Light, that Chriſt meaneth, when he ſaith, I am the Light of the World; therefore the Evangeliſt doth not mean it, when he ſaith, The Life was the Light of Men. The Evangeliſt diſcourſing of the Light is writing his Goſpel, which muſt be interpreted as the Goſpel touching the things (and conſequently the Light) Evangelical. All the ſaving Light that Mankind have, they have it from Chriſt, who introduc'd his Evangelical Light into a World of Heathen Sinners (of no better Character) that were in the atheous Darkneſs of Ignorance, of Sin and of Miſery; for ſuch is the Darkneſs of Unregeneracy (as on the contrary in the ſtate of Regeneracy there is the Light of Saving Knowledge, of Grace and of Comfort;) Uunregenerate Mankind at Chriſt's coming (as being in their Graceleſneſs and Wickedneſs) were invelop'd in Darkneſs; and therefore the Evangeliſt ſpeaking the Language of the New Teſtament calleth them The Darkneſs, Joh. 1. 5. To this comprehenſion of Darkneſs the Natural Light belongeth: but ſo doth not the Light which our Evangeliſt in his Proem attributeth to Chriſt (it belongeth to an oppoſite Comprehenſion;) therefore by the Light which is Chriſt's Attribute our Evangeliſt doth not mean the Natural Light, but the Light of the glorious Goſpel of Chriſt, 2 Cor. 4. 4. The Light which is in Chriſtianity and Regeneracy, 2 Cor. 4. 6. Eph. 5. 8. 1 Joh. 2. 9. The benefit of ſaving Light, 1 Joh. 2. 8. and 5. 20. Our Evangeliſt in the Proem of his Goſpel ſpeaketh of the true Light both in the perſonal and real acceptation (for the true Light in the perſonal is the true Light in the real acceptation;) he ſpeaketh of the true Light in his firſt Epiſtle; and who can doubt, but that he meaneth by the true Light, not the Natural Light which is in Darkneſs, but the Saving Light which is in Chriſtianity and Regeneracy? For the Darkneſs is paſt (ſaith he to Regenerate Chriſtians) and the true Light now ſhineth, 1 Joh. 2. 8. It is evident therefore to common Senſe, that this is our Evangeliſt's Senſe in the Proem of his Goſpel; The Saviour of the World was the benefit of Saving Light to the benighted World. The Life was the Light of Men in Darkneſs.

XXV. This Light was not receiv'd or admitted into the comprehenſion of Darkneſs (the Darkneſs comprehended it not, ſaith the Evangeliſt) it is the Light which is receiv'd by Faith and rejected by Infidelity; which ſheweth, that it is not the natural Light.

(g) We Sons of Adam that are born Blind are illuminated by

(c) Lucem vocat Chriſtum ejuſque doctrinam, de qua proximis verbis dixerat, In ipſo vita erat, & vita erat lux hominum. Tenebræ homines qui in peccatis, id eſt, in tenebris erant; ſicut D. Paulus ait, Eratis aliquando tenebræ, nunc autem lux in Domino. Idem Com. in loc.

(d) Anima per ſe tenebra eſt, & nihil habet lucis: hinc illud, Tenebræ non comprehendunt lucem. Tatian. or. c. Græc. p. 152.

(e) Μεταβαίνειν ἐκ τοῦ σκότους εἰς ζωήν. Clem. Strom. l. 1. p. m. 259.

(f) Illic ſordes, ſquallor, caligo, tenebræ, & perpetuæ noctis dominatur horror. Si vis ut tenuis ſaltem tibi ſplendor luminis luceat, erige vultus, & demerſos erige oculos, & deſertis his ad eum te confer qui dixit: Ego ſum lux mundi. Jul. Firmic. de error. prof. rel. p. 39.

(g) Ego ſum lumen mundi, qui me ſequitur, non ambulabit our Lord having the Eye-ſalve of Faith; but the mixture of the Spittle with the Clay is antecedent thereto. For it is not an Abſtract Logos, from whom we have this Illumination, or who is this Light, but only the Humane-divine Perſon of the Meſſiah. And this is evident to common Senſe; for every one knoweth, who it is, to whom John Baptiſt was a Witneſs and Fore-runner as to the true Light, Joh. 1. 6, 7, 8. And this is he, who alone is the Light that our Evangeliſt ſpeaketh of; which therefore is not the natural Light. Nor is it leſs than palpable Nonſence, to ſuppoſe, that John Baptiſt was ſent to bear Witneſs unto natural Light, or to an Abſtract Demiurgic Logos the ſuppos'd Fountain thereof. He came to bear Witneſs unto him only, whom all Men are called by the Goſpel, to believe on; and therefore he only is the Light in the perſonal and real Acceptation. V. 6, 7, 8. There was a man ſent from God, whoſe name was John. The ſame came for a witneſs, to bear witneſs of the light, that all men through him might believe. He was not that light, but was ſent to bear witneſs of that light. John was a burning and ſhining Light, but not to be compar'd with Chriſt, conſidering the Light that he is as his kind of good and excellency, eſſentially and in infinite fulneſs in himſelf, and he is it unto us alſo. (b) We that were formerly fooliſh and blind wandering in the darkneſs of Death, being illuminated by the light of Grace, let us hold on in the path of Life, our Lord being our guide and governour. (i) We are in Chriſt, that is, in the Sun and the true Day. We are in Chriſt, that is, always in the light. (k) If thou haſt begun to be a Man of light, do the things of Chriſt; for Chriſt is light and day. So in Scripture he is intituled the Sun of Righteouſneſs (or Salvation) which ſpeaketh him the great Luminary (to whom John Baptiſt was a Fore-runner as the Phoſphorus is to the Sun) and another of his Scriptural Names is Oriens ex alto, the Day-ſpring from on high. Luk. 1. 79. Becauſe of which Name of the Meſſiah (l) ſome have an extravagant reſpect for the Eaſtern part of the World; the day alſo of his Nativity hath been called Ἐπιφάνεια, the appearance of Light, the Night before it vigiliæ luminum (becauſe of abundance of Candles that were then lighted) and at this time our Anceſtors ſent Candles to one another. Candles were alſo lighted, when the Goſpel was read (certainly not to ſignifie natural Light) the new-baptiz'd Perſon carried a lighted Candle in his Hand, and put on white Garments, to denote, that he was a Son of Light. Which Ritualities, although they were deviſ'd by dark Superſtition (which ſinketh Religion into exteriour Rites and neglecteth the Subſtance) yet were introduc'd into the Church, to ſignifie that eximious Evangelical Light for which Chriſt is celebrated in Scripture, but no where ſo much as in our Evangeliſts Proem. To his Followers he is the light of Life, the light of the holy Life into which they are regenerated, which leadeth unto Life eternal. From him they have a φωτεινὸν ὄμμα, luminous Eye; and becauſe Mankind have loſt their Eyeſight in matters of Sanctity and their Salvation, the deſign of his coming was (m) ut in agnitionem veritatis ocularet, to give us our Eye-ſight to the acknowledgment of the Truth, as Tertullian ſpeaketh, (n) ἥλιος ψυχῆς, the Sun of the Soul is his agreeable Name; and accordingly our Evangeliſt repreſenteth him like the Sun, as in his Cauſality univerſally illuminative. V. 9. That was the true light, which lightneth every man, that cometh into the world. Some learned Expoſitors ſuppoſe (o) that theſe laſt words coming into the World do not refer to Man, but to the true Light; becauſe in the Evangeliſts theſe Expreſſions coming and coming into the World are frequently us'd touching our Saviour, his Name is ὁ ἐρχόμενος, he that cometh. Joh. 4. 25. Matth. 11. 3. Luk. 19. 38. And uſually his coming into the World is mention'd in our Evangeliſt and elſewhere. Joh. 3. 19. and 6. 14. and 11. 37. and 12. 46. and 18. 37. 1 Tim. 1. 15. According to this moſt probable Expoſition the Evangeliſt's Text ſhould be thus rendred; That was the true Light, which coming into the World enlightneth every Man. But how can it be ſaid of the Meſſias, that he enlightneth every Man? (p) Did Chriſt preach the Goſpel to all the World (ſaith a Divine of our own) or was the Goſpel preached to all the World and to every Man in the World, at the time when S. John wrote this? Or was every Man in the World enlightned by it? This as to matter of Fact was falſe, and therefore could not be the Evangeliſt's meaning. And there is this demonſtration, that this is not his meaning; becauſe all this according to this Expoſition relateth to what Chriſt did in the Fleſh, whereas the Evangeliſt attributeth all this to the Word before the Incarnation. Something material there is in this Argumentation, which yet is not levell'd ſo much againſt Socinianiſm, as againſt the Sanctity and Divinity of the Chriſtian Religion, that is fadly profan'd by that Scholaſtic Theology, which ſuch Argumentations as theſe are deſigned to uphold and maintain. Which therefore do not convince, but make Socinians, who are not without the uſe of their Faculties, to diſcern the abſurdities of the Scholaſtic Theology; nor can they fail to diſcern the abſurdity of the laſt part of this Argumentation, which is called a Demonſtration. For no Man of Sence can imagine, that John Baptiſt's Witneſs-bearing to our Saviour as to the true Light was before his Incarnation; yet his being the Life and Light unto Men, is no more attributed to the Word before the Incarnation, than John Baptiſt's Witneſs-bearing is attributed to him before the Incarnation. But there is in our Evangeliſts Narratives an unexactneſs in obſerving the time and order of things, of which this Evangeliſt's mentioning the Word made Fleſh is a palpable and acknowledg'd Inſtance. Diſmiſſing therefore this pretended Demonſtration, we will conſider the more material part of this Argumentation, which is touching our Saviour's lighting every Man, and which may ſeem a great difficulty. But there is really no more difficulty in expounding this Text of our Evangeliſt, than in expounding theſe other Texts. 1 Tim. 4. 10. Who is the Saviour of all men. 1 Cor. 15. 22. In Chriſt all ſhall be made alive. Rom. 5. 18. By the righteouſneſs of one the free gift came upon all men unto juſtification of life. For as Chriſt is the benefit of Salvation, of Life and of Righteouſneſs unto all Men, but it is in his Religion and by in tenebris; quia Dominus illuminat cæcos. Illuminamur ergo fratres, habentes collyrium fidei. Præceſſit ejus ſaliva cum terra, unde inungeretur qui cæcus eſt natus. Et nos de Adam cæci nati ſumus. S. Aug. Tr. 34. in Joann.

---

(h) In tenebris mortis errantes improvidi & cæci prius fuimus, luce gratiæ illuminati iter vitæ, duce & rectore Domino teneamus. S. Cypr. de Orat. Dom.

(i) In Chriſto, hoc eſt, in ſole & die vero ſumus. In Chriſto, hoc eſt, in lumine ſemper ſumus. Idem ibid.

(k) Si homo lucis eſſe cœpiſti, quæ ſunt Chriſti gere; quia lux & dies Chriſtus eſt. Idem de Zelo & Liv.

(l) Joh. Gregor. Not. & Obſ. c. 18. & 22.

(m) Tertull. Apoſt. c. 21.

(n) Clem. προτρεπτ. p. m. 34.

(o) Grot. Hammond.

(p) Dr. Sherlock Scripture-proofs. p. 127.

his officiary Dignity that he is ſo, and therefore he is effectually ſo to none, but thoſe that enter into his Religion: So he is the benefit of ſaving Light to every Man, but it is in his Religion and by his officiary Dignity that he is ſo, and therefore he is effectually ſo to none but thoſe that enter into his Religion, whoſe Baptiſm is called φωτισμός, Illumination. He is therefore the benefit of Saving Light to every Man, ſo that all that enter into his Religion are ſavingly illuminated by him, and (to which we muſt add) ſo that all that are ſavingly illuminated, are illuminated by him. For S. Auſtin well ſuppoſeth, that this is (in part) the Senſe of our Evangeliſt's Text he lighteth every Man (q) every Man that is ſavingly illuminated, hath his Illumination from him. Agreeable to this Expoſition are the Words of a pious Writer Expoſitory of our Evangeliſt's Text. (r) As the Son a Creature of God is one and the ſame in the whole World: So the Light and preaching of the Truth every where ſhineth, and enlightneth all Men that are willing to come to the knowledge of Truth. Of this Evangelical Light not an Abſtract Logos, but only the Humane-divine Perſon of Chriſt is the Fountain; therefore it is not an Abſtract Logos, but only the Humane-divine Perſon of the Meſſiah, which our Evangeliſt intituleth the Light; and it is not of the Natural, but only of this Evangelical Light that he muſt be underſtood to ſpeak in the Proem of his Evangely. Such as the Life is, that he ſpeaketh of, ſuch is the Light. (s) The Greeks and Latins and the Hebrews alſo uſually conjoin Life and Light as being of great Affinity. With thee is the Fountain of Life, and in thy Light ſhall we ſee Light. Pſal. 36. 9. But the Life which our Evangeliſt ſpeaketh of, is only the Evangelical, of which the Humane-divine Perſon of the Meſſiah is the only Fountain, not the natural Life; therefore ſuch is the Light which he ſpeaketh of; and conſequently it is not an Abſtract Logos, but only the Humane-divine Perſon of the Meſſiah, which our Evangeliſt intituleth the Life and the Light.

(q) De C. D. l. 10. c. 2. de peccat. merit. l. 1. c. 25.

(r) Sicut ſol creatura Dei in univerſo mundo unus ac idem eſt: ſic & lumen & prædicatio veritatis ubique lucet & illuminat omnes homines volentes ad cognitionem veritatis venire. Herman. Hamelman. de Tradit. Apoſtol. p. 50.

(s) Grot. Not. in Joh. 1. 4.

XXVI. The Jews call their Rabbins Lights (t) becauſe they are ſuppoſ'd to enlighten the Minds of Men by their Doctrine. And our Evangeliſt muſt be ſuppoſ'd, ſo far to ſymbolize with them, as to call the Son of God the Light of Men, becauſe of his illuminating Men by his Doctrine (in various degrees) and whereby he enlightned both Jews and Gentiles. Matth. 4. 16. Act. 26. 18. As the Life which he is, and which our Evangeliſt ſpeaketh of in his Proem, is that which he is in his revealed Word: So the Light which he is, and which our Evangeliſt ſpeaketh of in his Proem, is that which he is in his Doctrine and revealed Word. So the Muhammedans call their Alcoran (u) Light, the Jews call their Law אוריתא which ſignifieth (w) both Light and Doctrine, and the Holy Writers ſay, The Law is Light. Pſal. 19. 8. Pro. 6. 23. Νόμος δὲ φῶς ὁδοῦ, the Law is the Light of the way of Life (x) ſaith Clemens. (y) Τὸ φῶς τῆς ἀληθείας φῶς ἀληθὲς, the Light of Truth is the true Light (ſaith he) which is moſt true of the Evangelical Light, that is not umbratile Shew, but ſubſtantial Truth and Reality. (z) Sweet is the Word that hath enlightned us above Gold and precious Stone, more deſirable than Honey and the Honey-comb. For is not that deſirable, that hath made a Mind buried in darkneſs (living and) operative, and the luciferous Eyes of the Soul ſharpſighted? As if the Sun was not, all would be Night notwithſtanding the other Stars: So if we had not known the Word and been enlightned by it, we had not differ'd from fed Birds, that are fatned in darkneſs and nouriſh'd for Death. (a) I urge thee to be ſaved (ſaith he to an Heathen) this Chriſt would have; in one word he would give thee Life. And what is this Word? Learn it compendiouſly, the Word of Truth, the Word of Incorruption, that regenerateth a Man, that reduceth him to Truth, is the Spur of Salvation, that profligateth Corruption, putteth to flight Death, buildeth a Temple in Men, to ſeat God in Men.

(t) Lightfoot Hor. in Joh. 8. 12.

(u) Hotting. Hiſt. Or. p. 151. ed. 1.

(w) Idem Exercit. Anti-Mor. p. 5.

(x) Strom. l. 1. in fin

(y) Strom. l 6. p. m. 49?.

(z) Idem προτρεπτ. p. m. 52.

(a) Σωθῆναί σε ἐπείγομαι· τοῦτο Χριστὸς βούλεται· ἑνὶ λόγῳ ζωήν σοι χαρίζεται· κ̀ τίς ἐστιν οὗτος; μάθε συντόμως, λόγος ἀληθείας, λόγος ἀφθαρσίας, ὁ ἀναγεννῶν τὸν ἄνθρωπον εἰς ἀλήθειαν αὐτὸν ἀναφέρων, τὸ κέντρον τῆς σωτηρίας, ὁ ἐξελαύνων τὴν φθορὰν, ὁ ἐκδιώκων τὸν θάνατον, ὁ ἐν ἀνθρώποις οἰκοδομήσας νεὼν, ἵνα ἐν ἀνθρώποις ἱδρύσῃ τὸν Θεόν. Ibid. p. 54.

The Son of God was the Light of the World, not only becauſe illuminative thereof, but becauſe of the illuſtriouſneſs of his Perſon. As upon that account King David was denominated the Light of Iſrael, the Turks call the Grand Senior the Light of the Univerſe, the Jews ſay (b) The firſt Adam was the Light of the World, and the Britains called King Lucius (c) Lever Maur the great Light. The King Meſſiah therefore as ſuch a Perſon of honour and illuſtriouſneſs was the Light of the World and the great Light; whence it appeareth, that for ſeveral Reaſons the Light and the Meſſiah are terms ſynonymous. Such they manifeſtly are in our Evangeliſt; for when he ſaith of John the Baptiſt, he was not that Light, but was ſent to bear Witneſs of that Light; his Senſe is, that John was not the Meſſiah, but was ſent to bear Witneſs of the Meſſiah. He confeſſed and denied not, but confeſſed, I am not the Chriſt. Joh. 1. 20. The Light therefore (as alſo the Word and the Life) is one of our Evangeliſt's honourary Names of the Meſſiah, as the Jews ſay (d) Lux eſt Nomen Meſſiæ, Light is the Name of the Meſſiah. And if the Light and the Meſſiah are terms ſynonymous in our Evangeliſt's Proem, the Light doth not denote an Abſtract Logos, nor the Natural Light (of which he is ſuppoſ'd to be the Fountain) but it denoteth only our Lord Chriſt that Humane-divine Perſon) with his Evangelical Light.

(b) Buxtorf. Lex. Talm. Col. 1321.

(c) Fuller Church Hiſt. p. 12.

(d) Lightfoot Hor. in Joh. 8. 12.

XXVII. From our Evangeliſt's honourary Names of the Meſſiah the Life and the Light we may infer his (Chriſtian) Deity of Perſon. (e) Si Creatura eſt, Deus non eſt: Si Deus non eſt, nec vita eſt. If he is a Creature, he is not God: If he is not God, neither is he Life. So the Fathers argue, inferring the Deity of our Saviour from theſe ſublime Attributes (the Life and the Light;) for they conſider theſe Attributes as Abſtract Terms, and ſo conſidered they are plainly Divine Peculiarities and Creature-tranſcendencies; for no Creature is Life and Light it ſelf, but only hath a Participation of them. Thus far therefore the Fathers Argumentation is unexceptionably ſolid and worthy of all Acceptation, and the whole of it had been ſo, if with a ſolid Chriſtian Verity they had not complicated much of Scholaſtic Vanity. (f) For they ſuppoſe that theſe Abſtract Terms are the Attributes of an Abſtract

(e) S. Ambroſ. de Fide l. 1. Proleg.

(f) Petav. T. 1. l. 2. c. 6. S. 4. &c.

Abſtract Logos, to which our Evangeliſt is a Stranger. They ſuppoſe alſo, that theſe Attributes of Life and Light denote (not only the holy, but) the common Life of Nature and Light of Reaſon, which is another diſagreement from our Evangeliſt. They alledge alſo theſe Divine Attributes, to prove their Scholaſtic abſolute Simplicity and uncompoundedneſs of the Divine Eſſence of the Son, which is a Theory peculiar to Schoolmen and Metaphyſicians, and belongeth not to an Evangeliſt. Sometimes touching theſe Attributes of the Abſtract Form they expreſs themſelves ſo unwarily, as if they ſuppos'd the Son of God, to be Self-originated, and deny'd the derivation of his Eſſence from the Father. (g) That which liveth by another, cannot be Life it ſelf, as that which hath heat from another, cannot be heat it ſelf. But Chriſt our God hath ſaid, I am Life. It is not ſafe, to lay much ſtreſs upon the Scholaſtic Theology of the Fathers; we will rather caſt our Eye upon their Chriſtian Theology touching the Meſſiah; for this clearly inferreth the Chriſtian Deity of his Perſon. Our Evangeliſts Text according to that reading of it which ſome of the Ancients follow (whatever was made, in him is Life) is expounded by S. Ambroſe to mean (h) that every part and ingredient of Chriſt's Oeconomy, his Birth, Infancy, Death, Burial, Reſurrection (and ſuch more) is Life to us. Which is a bad Expoſition, but is ſound and Chriſtian Theology; and this Theology is an Aſcription of Deity to his Perſon. For if to be the Author and Donor of Natural Life is Deity and Creature-tranſcendence; how much more is it Deity and Creature-tranſcendence, to be the Author and Donor of Life Spiritual and Eternal to us? Which Deity is of the Chriſtian kind, and belongeth to him as he is the Deity of the New Teſtament: But to ſuppoſe him an Abſtract Demiurgic Logos; the Fountain of natural Light and Life (a Deity well known in the old Metaphyſical Theology of the Pagans) is to make him a Scholaſtic and Metaphyſical kind of Deity.

(g) Πᾶν γὰρ τὸ δι' ἑτέρου ζῶν, αὐτοζωὴ εἶναι οὐ δύναται. ὡς οὐδὲ τὸ ὑφ' ἑτέρου θερμανθὲν αὐτοθερμότης εἶναι. Ὁ δὲ Χριστὸς καὶ θεὸς ἡμῶν εἴρηκεν· ἐγώ εἰμι ἡ ζωή. S. Baſil. Ep. 141. p. 928.

(h) Quod factum eſt, In ipſo vita eſt. Ipſe noſtra in omnibus vita eſt. Caro facta eſt, in ipſo vita eſt. Infantia facta eſt, in ipſo vita eſt. Judicium factum eſt, in ipſo vita eſt. Mors facta eſt, in ipſo vita eſt. Remiſſio peccatorum facta eſt, in ipſo vita eſt. Vulnus factum eſt, in ipſo vita eſt. Illuſio facta eſt, in ipſo vita eſt. Diviſio facta eſt, in ipſo vita eſt. Sepultura facta eſt, in ipſo vita eſt. Reſurrectio facta eſt, in ipſo vita eſt. Venditio facta eſt, in ipſo vita eſt. Redemptio facta eſt, in ipſo vita eſt. Hæc eſt vita quæ facta eſt hæc eſt vita quæ apparuit, hæc eſt vita quam audivimus hæc eſt vita quæ erat apud Patrem. In Pſal. 35.

CHAP. XI.

1. The Character of our Evangeliſt's Proem, that it is an Hiſtory of the Termination of Chriſt's generative Oeconomy and of the beginning of his miſſive Oeconomy. Agreeably whereto the ſeveral parts of it muſt be expounded. Sect. 1. The beginning in this Proem ſignifieth not Eternity, nor the Moſaic beginning, but an Evangelical beginning, which is the beginning of this Goſpel-hiſtory, or the beginning of the Times of Chriſtianity. Sect. 2. Our Evangeliſt's Proem is an Hiſtory of the beginning of Chriſt's miſſive Oeconomy, wherein he is not conſider'd in his primary, but only in his officiary Capacity. Sect. 3. Not an Abſtract Logos, but the Humanedivine Perſon of Chriſt, is the Logos that was with God. This is proved by ſeveral good Arguments. Sect. 4. Of Chriſt's generative Oeconomy in his primary Capacity, and the Termination thereof in an aſcenſional remove to his being with God. The more than Probability thereof. Sect. 5. The Creation in our Evangeliſt's Proem is the New Teſtament-creation (peculiarly ſuch) which is illuſtrated and proved by great Arguments.

I. THE Account which we have given of the Names and Attributes of Chriſt in our Evangeliſt's Proem the Word, the Life, and the Light, demonſtrateth, that they are not to be underſtood Scholaſtically, but Evangelically, and that they denote him to be by officiary Dignity the Evangelical Word, the Life Evangelical, the Light Evangelical. This account fixeth and determineth the Senſe of our Evangeliſt's Proem, and directeth to a true and genuine Expoſition of the whole of it; which muſt be conſider'd as an Hiſtory (an Encomiaſtic Hiſtory) of the Termination of Chriſt's generative Oeconomy and of the beginning (or commencing) of his miſſive Oeconomy. That this is the true Notion and Idea of it (in ſome degree) appeareth from the Title of it, which is the Goſpel according to S. John. For not only the joyous things of Chriſt's Religion are called the Goſpel, nor only the Preachment of them, nor only the Settlement of them: But the Hiſtory of them is called the Goſpel. (i) Evangelium, id eſt, hiſtoria eorum quæ docuit & fecit Jeſus Chriſtus, jucundiſſimum illud ſalutis nuntium afferens. (k) The Goſpel ſignifieth that bleſſed Story of the Birth, Life, Actions, Precepts and Promiſes, Death and Reſurrection of Chriſt, which of all other Stories in the World we Chriſtians ought to look on with moſt Joy as an Εὐαγγέλιον, or good Word, i. e. a Goſpel. (l) Hiſtoria hæc nominata eſt Evangelium. (m) Definire Evangelium licet Hiſtoriam, Chriſti ad nos adventum actaque continentem. In the Titles and Inſcriptions of our Holy Books A Goſpel is the ſame thing with an Evangelical Hiſtory. The Four Goſpels (n) Commentarios de rebus Chriſti recte appellaveris, you may rightly call Commentaries or Memoirs touching the things of Chriſt. This is plain and Self-evident, there can be no Diſpute or Controverſie touching the Nature and definitive Notion of a Goſpel; from whence it appeareth, that our Evangeliſt's Proem is Hiſtory, Evangelical Hiſtory. Which plain Self-evident

(i) Beza Annot. in Matth. 1.

(k) Dr. Hammond.

(l) Piſcator Arg. in Matth.

(m) Maldonat. Pref. in 4. Evang.

(n) Grot.

evident Principle is plainly deſtructive of the ancient and uſual Scholaſtic Interpretations of it. For as the Scholaſtic Divines have compar'd our Evangeliſt to an high flying Eagle: So themſelves no ſooner begin their Comments upon his Proem, but they ſoar high and aloft into the Philoſophic kind of Sublimities of Scholaſticiſm and Metaphyſical Ontology, quite forgetting, that their Buſineſs is to expound an Hiſtorian, and an Evangelical Hiſtorian, not an Unchriſtian and Unpopular School-man and Metaphyſician. Our Evangeliſt writeth of a certain Perſon, whom he ſtileth the Word; and the Controverſie is, whether by this Name he meaneth an Abſtract Logos or the Humane-divine Perſon of the Meſſiah? To determine this Controverſie fairly and without prejudice, let us bethink our ſelves, which of theſe two Notions is moſt ſuitable and agreeable to the Character of our Evangeliſt and the Book that he writeth. Is not the Word of the Goſpel conſider'd as ſuch moſt ſuitable and agreeable to a Goſpel-hiſtorian? Is it not moſt ſuitable for him, to begin his Goſpel-hiſtory with the Word of the Goſpel in the perſonal Acceptation, the Author and Founder of the Goſpel-religion, conſider'd as ſuch? Doth not every Hiſtoriographer of a famous Perſon at the beginning of his Hiſtory nominate and decypher the very Perſon, whoſe Hiſtory he writeth? And is an Abſtract Logos the very Perſon of Chriſt Jeſus? Or doth our Evangeliſt write the Hiſtory of an Abſtract Logos? An Abſtract Logos cannot be the Subject-matter of an Hiſtory (and therefore is not likely to be the Subject-matter of this Hiſtorical Proem) nor can a Scholaſtical Logos be the Subject-matter of an Evangelical Hiſtory. The Scholaſtic notional Verbum is counted a Word, but it is only by Schoolmen and Metaphyſicians, no Hiſtorian counteth it a Word. The Platonic Logos is not a Logos either of the Hiſtorical or the Evangelical kind. Ὁ γὰρ λόγος φῶς, τὸ γὰρ εἶδος φῶς, ſaith Plotinus. For as the Evangeliſt's Light is not any ſuch kind of thing as Form or Species in Phyſiology: So the Evangeliſt's Logos is not of any Affinity with the Platonic Logos. His Logos is an Hiſtorical and Evangelical kind of Logos, which can be no other than the Humane-divine Perſon of the Meſſiah. So in all other places of his Writings wherein the Son of God is ſtiled ὁ λόγος, the Name manifeſtly and undeniably ſignifieth the Humane-divine Perſon of the Meſſiah. 1 Joh. 1. 1. and 5. 7. Apoc. 19. 13. We have great aſſurance therefore, that no ſuch thing as an Abſtract Logos is to be found in the Book of God. If this Abſtract Logos was the Perſon of Chriſt, there would be great reaſon, that he ſhould be of infinite Precioſity to us: But Chriſt is (o) the Name of a Dignity and of two Natures (although not of two Perſons) an Abſtract Logos cannot be the Perſon of Chriſt, nor any thing better than an exotic Logos to a Chriſtian. Diſmiſſing therefore an Abſtract Logos and its ſeveral ſorts (according to the ſeveral Schools of Metaphyſicians) we muſt affirm, that the Goſpel according to S. John is the Hiſtory of our only Lord and Saviour Chriſt Jeſus, and that the Termination of his generative Oeconomy and the Inchoation of his miſſive Oeconomy is the Subject-mater of our Evangeliſt's Proem, of the remaining parts whereof we will give a diſtinct account.

SECTION I.

Of the Term Beginning.

I. FROM the Character of our Evangeliſt and his Proem (which is Hiſtory, Evangelical Hiſtory) we may determine the Senſe of the primary Words of it In the beginning was the Word, which are commonly thought to ſignifie the Exiſtence of an Abſtract Logos from Eternity. But they that thus underſtand them, are divided in the Interpretation of them. For the Ancients interpret them, to ſignifie his eternal Exiſtence directly and primarily; the Moderns underſtand them, to ſignifie it only by illation and conſequentially. Some of the Ancients obſerve (p) that the Beginning here is not a Relative, nor conjoined with any thing, whoſe beginning it is (as it is, when we ſpeak of the beginning of Life or Wiſdom) but it is put abſolutely. And the beginning in this Acceptation is That which is before all (and nothing is precedent to it) as Eternity is. It denoteth Eternity, as S. Baſil, S. Chryſoſtom, S. Ambroſe, Gr. Naz. S. Cyril, S. Hilary, Fulgentius (and others) interpret it. But ſome of theſe ancient Writers (as S. Baſil and (q) S. Cyril) are not conſiſtent with themſelves in their Interpretation of the beginning; for ſometimes they interpret it, to ſignifie God the Father. And ſo (r) Clem. Orig. Theophil. Antioch. Gr. Nyſſen, Athanaſius, and S. Auſtin interpret the beginning in our Evangeliſt. In like manner the Text of Moſes, In principio creavit Deus cœlum & terram, hath been thus underſtood by many of the ancient Writers (s) In Filio fecit Deus cœlum & terram. Thus the beginning by theſe ancient Interpreters hath been made to ſignifie both Father and Son, and (which is more ſtrange) it hath been made to ſignifie the Son in the Old Teſtament and the Father in the New Teſtament; the Old Teſtament hath been made, to begin with the Son, and the New Teſtament with the Father. This is a ſhrewd Indication, that we are not to expect a good Interpretation of the beginning from the ancient Writers, that make the Old Teſtament, to be the New, and the New, to be the Old Teſtament. But ſo our Evangeliſt is ſuppos'd, to begin his Hiſtory from Eternity infinitely higher than Moſes beginneth his Hiſtory; therefore it is infinitely the more ancient matter of Hiſtory; and conſequently the New Teſtament is made the Old Teſtament, and the Old Teſtament is made the New Teſtament. The beginning in our Evangeliſt is ſuppos'd, infinitely to tranſcend the Moſaic beginning; but if our Evangeliſt in writing his Hiſtory wrote like an Hiſtorian, he could not deſign by the beginning to tranſcend the Moſaic beginning, becauſe when he wrote, the Moſaic beginning was the higheſt beginning, that Hiſtory (true Hiſtory) was acquainted with. Our Evangelical Hiſtorian by the beginning plac'd at the entrance of his Hiſtory certainly meaneth the Æra or Epocha of his Hiſtory, which is an Hiſtory written (not in the other, but) in this World, which knoweth not any Hiſtorical Epocha higher than the Moſaic beginning, nor any Hiſtorical Res geſta higher than that beginning. Moſes by the beginning in the Proem of his Hiſtory meaneth the beginning of

---

(o) S. Chryſoſt. in Johann. Hom. 3.

(p) Petav. de Trin. l. 2. c. 8. S. 2. &c.

(q) Com. in Johann. p. 13.

(r) Petav. ſupr. Maldonat. in loc.

(s) Petav. de Trin. l. 5. c. 5. S. 5. Heinſ. Ariſt. p. 62, 63. Viv. in S. Aug. de C. D. l. 11. c. 32.

of the Res geſtæ of the Old Teſtament-times; therefore our Evangeliſt by the beginning in the Proem of his Hiſtory meaneth the beginning of the Res geſtæ of the New Teſtament-times. His beginning is an hiſtorical beginning: But Eternity (ſuppoſing it to be a beginning) can be no hiſtorical beginning. He that writeth of the Exiſtence of God from Eternity, writeth of a Theological Propoſition, not Hiſtory: So if the Evangeliſt did affirm the Exiſtence of an Abſtract Logos from Eternity, this muſt be thought a Propoſition of Theology, not Hiſtory. But it belongeth not to our Evangeliſt, to write of meer Theological Propoſitions. (t) Propoſitio hæc eſt, Evangelium Jeſu Chriſti. This is his Propoſition, the Evangely of Jeſus Chriſt. (u) Evangeliſta, non Diſputator Johannes erat: Et non eſt officium Evangeliſtæ probare quæ dicit, ſed hiſtoricè narrare. The buſineſs of an Evangeliſt is not that of a Diſputant, to prove what he affirmeth, but to relate things hiſtorically. Accordingly, our Evangeliſt is ſuppos'd to relate the eternal Exiſtence of the Logos per modum hiſtoriæ; and we will alſo ſuppoſe (not grant) that he hiſtorically relateth the Matters of Eternity, and maketh them the matter of his Hiſtory. But if he writeth an Hiſtory of theſe Matters, it muſt not be ſuppos'd, that he writeth it Ἀνιστορήτως, un-hiſtorically, and ſo as not to write an Hiſtory of them, but mutilating it into a meer Dogmatical Aſſertion and Theological Propoſition. As ſuppoſe, that a Pagan Hiſtorian ſhould propoſe to himſelf, to write the Hiſtory of the Goddeſs Minerva, and without making the leaſt mention of her Origin from Jupiter's Brain, ſhould begin his Hiſtory with theſe Words, In the beginning the Wiſdom was, and the Wiſdom was with God, and the Wiſdom was God. If by theſe Words he deſign'd to ſignifie her Exiſtence from Eternity, then he writeth his Hiſtory Ἀνιστορήτως (un-hiſtorically;) for he quite omitteth her eternal Generation, her Natales, that Res geſta, or hiſtorical Paſſage, which ought to have been the prime matter of his Hiſtory; he mutilateth the matter of Hiſtory into a meer Dogmatical Aſſertion, and writeth not like an Hiſtorian (a Regiſter of Hiſtorical Paſſages) but as a Diſputant laying down his Theſis, or as a Writer of meer Theological Propoſitions. But it is impoſſible, that an Hiſtorian, much more that an inſpir'd Evangeliſt ſhould write at this rate; that he ſhould quite omit the eternal Generation of the Son from the Subſtance of the Father, his Natales, that Res geſta or Hiſtorical Paſſage, which ought to have been the prime matter of his Hiſtory, and yet deſign to ſignifie his Exiſtence from Eternity by ſaying theſe Words; In the beginning was the Word, and the Word was with God, and the Word was God.

(t) Bucer. in Johan. Proleg.
(u) Maldonat. in Joh. 1. 1.

II. If the Evangeliſt deſign'd, to ſignifie the Exiſtence of the Logos from Eternity, it had been as eaſie, to have ſaid, that the Logos was eternal, as that he was in the beginning. No reaſon can be ſhew'd, why he declin'd the clear and uſual Terms expreſſive of Eternity, and choſe to uſe an ambiguous Phraſe in an unuſual Senſe; for it is not uſual in Scripture or common Language, to call Eternity the Beginning. The certain way of underſtanding his Senſe of this Phraſe is to conſult his own Writings and the reſt of the New Teſtament (for his Phraſeology muſt be underſtood in his own Senſe and the Senſe of the New Teſtament:) But throughout the New Teſtament there is no appearance, that the beginning denoteth Eternity. In many places of it we read of what was done πρὸ χρόνων αἰωνίων, before the times of the ages of the World: But this vaſt Antecedent to time is not made the Epocha of an Hiſtory, or any part of an Hiſtory, nor is it ever called the beginning, as our Evangeliſt is ſuppos'd to call it; which is to ſay, that he ſpeaketh not agreeably to the Language of the New Teſtament. In our Saviour's Speeches, in the other Evangeliſts, in the Writings of the other Apoſtles, and in other places of our Evangeliſt's Writings the beginning ſignifieth nothing like Eternity. In our Saviour's Speeches ſometimes it ſignifieth the Moſaic beginning. Matth. 19. 4, 8. Mar. 10. 6. and 13. 19. Joh. 8. 44. Agreeably whereto we read in Xenophon (w) ὁ ἐξ ἀρχῆς ποιῶν ἀνθρώπους, He that from the beginning made Men. How great the World ſhould be, and what Paſſages ſhould be in the Life of it κεῖται ἐξ ἀρχῆς, is determined from the beginning (x) ſaith Plotinus. Sometimes in our Saviour's Speeches ἀπ' ἀρχῆς, (from the beginning) ſignifieth (y) ab ipſo tempore quo Chriſtus ipſe Evangelizavit (from the time that Chriſt himſelf Evangeliz'd) Joh. 6. 64. and 8. 25. and 15. 27. and 16. 4. So another Evangeliſt ſpeaketh of thoſe, that from the beginning were Eye-witneſſes and Miniſters of the Word. Luk. 1. 2. His Goſpel he ſtileth a Treatiſe of all that Jeſus began both to do and teach. Act. 1. 1. Sometimes the beginning ſignifieth the beginning of Evangelizing in a larger Senſe, ſo as to comprehend John Baptiſt's Miniſtery (z) whence Evangelizing had its beginning. So S. Mark beginning his Hiſtory from the Baptiſt's preaching prefixeth this Title to it, The beginning of the Goſpel of Jeſus Chriſt the Son of God. (a) The compaſs of the Goſpel-hiſtory in the proper Deſcription of it is from the preaching of the Baptiſt till Chriſt's Aſcenſion, Act. 1. 22. Beginning from the Baptiſm of John, unto that ſame day that Chriſt was taken up from us. Act. 10. 37. That Word which was publiſhed throughout all Judea, and began from Galilee, after the Baptiſm which John preached. In ſome Diſcourſes of the Apoſtles the beginning ſignifieth the beginning of their preaching the Goſpel. Act. 11. 15. The Holy Ghoſt fell on them as on us ἐν ἀρχῇ, at the beginning. Sometimes they call the beginning of preaching the Goſpel to a People the beginning of the Goſpel, Phil. 4. 15. and thoſe that early receiv'd the Goſpel, are ſaid, to be choſen to Salvation from the beginning. 2 Theſſ. 2. 13. Sometimes the beginning is (b) the ſame with ancient time; as when the Apoſtle ſaith, Thoſe which knew me ἄνωθεν or ἀπ' ἀρχῆς, (which are of the ſame ſignification) from the beginning. Act. 26. 4, 5. (c) ἀπ' ἀρχαίου, uſurpatur pro, ab initio. So a Phyſician is ſaid, to reſtore his Patient εἰς τὸ ἀρχαῖον, his former (or ancient) ſtate. So the beſt Expoſitors tranſlate and expound that of the Apoſtle Act. 15. 7. Ye know, that ἀφ' ἡμερῶν ἀρχαίων, from ancient or former Days, or from the beginning (as ſome render the Words) God made choice a-

(w) Ἀπομν. α.
(x) En. 5. l. 7. c 3.
(y) Lightfoot. Hor. in Luc. 1. 2.
(z) Grot. N. t. in Matth. T. t.
(b) Lightfoot. ſupr.
(c) De Dieu & Grot. in Act. 15. 7.

(a) Hiſtoriæ Evangelii ambitus propriè deſcribitur eo tempore, quod ab annunciatione Baptiſtæ ad Chriſti aſcenſum interceſſit. Ut liquet ex Act. 1. 22. & 10. 37. Grot. ibid.

mong us, that the Gentiles by my Mouth ſhould hear the Word of the Goſpel. So Mnaſon (being a Diſciple from the beginning) is called ἀρχαῖος μαθητής, Act. 21. 16. And we often read, that the things of former times, which may ſeem to us not very long paſt, are called the things of ancient Times. For ſo the Canons commonly called The Apoſtles Canons are called, (d) by the Synod of Antioch and S. Baſil, ἀρχαῖοι κανόνες, by the Council of Conſtantinople οἱ παλαιοὶ θεσμοὶ, and by the Council of Chalcedon οἱ πάλαι κανόνες, ancient Laws and Canons. It muſt not therefore ſeem ſtrange to us, that our Evangeliſt, who liv'd long after the other Apoſtles, wrote his Goſpel very late (and probably his Epiſtles alſo) and wrote againſt upſtart Hereſies, looketh upon his Evangelical beginning as of ſome Antiquity, 1 Joh. 2. 7. I write no new Commandment to you, but an old Commandment, which ye had from the beginning: the old Commandment is the Word which ye have heard from the beginning. The beginning ſignifieth nothing higher (as is ſelf-evident and as the beſt Expoſitors ſay) than ab initio Evangelii prædicati vel ſuſcepti, from the beginning of the Goſpel preached or received. So it ſignifieth, v. 24. Let that therefore abide in you, which ye have heard from the beginning. If that which ye have heard from the beginning remain in you. Ch. 3. 11. This is the Meſſage, that ye have heard from the beginning. 2 Joh. 5, 6. Not as though I wrote a new Commandment unto thee, but that which we had from the beginning, that we ſhould love one another. This is the Commandment, that as ye have heard from the beginning, ye ſhould walk in it. So the Synod of Antioch in their Epiſtle to P. Samoſatenus recommend, (e) πίστιν ἣν ἐξ ἀρχῆς παρελάβομεν, the Faith which we have received from the beginning. And the Inſtitution of a Penitentiary Prieſt (f) Sozomen, deriveth ἀρχῆθεν, from the beginning. What is from the Apoſtles, we count from the beginning; but thoſe things are more properly ſo, that are ſtrictly from the commencing of the New Teſtament-times. Theſe are the Times, that Chriſtians uſually have reſpect unto, when they ſpeak of the beginning, which is a beginning far remote from Eternity.

(d) Bevereg. Annot. in Can. Apoſt. p. 4.

(e) Bib.Gr. Pat. T. 1. p. 30.

(f) Hiſt. l. 7. c. 16.

III. But to prove, that in the Books of the New Teſtament The beginning ſignifieth Eternity, (g) ſome alledge, 1 Joh. 1. 1. That which was from the beginning, which we have heard, which we have ſeen with our Eyes, which we have looked upon, and our Hands have handled of the Word of Life. For the Life was manifeſted, and we have ſeen it and bear Witneſs. Which Proem of our Evangeliſt's firſt Epiſtle conſiſteth of an Act and an Object. The Act is, We have heard, we have ſeen with our Eyes, we have looked upon, our Hands have handled, we have ſeen and bear witneſs. All which Expreſſions denote the Apoſtle's teſtifying as Eye-witneſſes. The matter which they teſtify'd as Eye-witneſſes (the Object of their Act) was That which was from the beginning. For that which was from the beginning (ſaith the Evangeliſt) we have heard, we have ſeen with our Eyes, we have looked upon, and our Hands have handled. And the Matter which they teſtify'd as Eye-witneſſes (the Object of their Act) was, that the Life was manifeſted. For the Life was manifeſted (ſaith the Evangeliſt) and we have ſeen it and bear witneſs. According to this Text therefore, that which the Apoſtles teſtify'd as Eye-witneſſes, was That which was from the beginning; That which the Apoſtles teſtify'd as Eye-witneſſes was only this matter of fact, The Life was manifeſted; therefore this matter of fact is That which was from the beginning. But this matter of fact was from no other beginning ſave only the Evangelical; therefore The beginning in this Text ſignifieth only The Evangelical beginning. And if the beginning ſo ſignifieth in the Proem of our Evangeliſt's firſt Epiſtle, it muſt be underſtood, ſo to ſignifie in the Proem of his Goſpel; for theſe are generally acknowledg'd to be parallel places, and they are ſo in reſpect of The beginning notwithſtanding that a Scholaſtic Divine hath diſcours'd, (h) The beginning in S. John*'s Epiſtle is that, in which the Apoſtles ſaw, and heard, and touch'd the Word: The beginning in his Goſpel was that, in which the Word was with God, that is, not ſeen nor heard by the Apoſtles.* For if the Preaching of the Baptiſt, the Evangelizing of Chriſt and of the Apoſtles are ſo conjunct and ſynchronal, that they belong to one Evangelical Beginning, much more The Word's being with the Father and his being manifeſted to the Apoſtle's Bodily Sences were ſo conjunct and ſynchronal, that they belong'd to one Evangelical Beginning. If our Saviour's Reſurrection is, that which was from the beginning; then his being in the Grave is, that which was in the beginning. So if his Manifeſtation is, that which was from the beginning; then his being with the Father is, that which was in the beginning. The Word was heard, ſeen and touch'd by the Apoſtles, and this is, that which was from the beginning, as our Evangeliſt ſaith in the Proem of his firſt Epiſtle: therefore his being with God, not ſeen, heard or touch'd by the Apoſtles, is that which was in the beginning, as he ſaith in the Proem of his Goſpel. This Evangeliſt therefore in the Proem of his firſt Epiſtle and in the Proem of his Goſpel (as appeareth from the Paralleliſm of theſe two places) ſpeaketh of one and the ſame Evangelical Beginning.

(g) Petav. T. 4. l. 16. c. 3. S. 7, 8, &c.

(h) Biſhop Pearſon on the Creed, Art. 2. p. 235. ed. 1.

In another Text of our Evangeliſt wherein he enumerateth the ſeveral ranks of Graduates in Chriſtianity, The beginning is thought to ſignifie Eternity, 1 Joh. 2. 13. I write unto you Fathers, becauſe ye have known him that is from the beginning. I write unto you young Men, becauſe ye have overcome the wicked One. I write unto you little Children, becauſe ye have known the Father. The little Children have ſo much knowledge, as to know the Father of the Regenerate Family. The young Men have not only Knowledge, but ſtrength of Grace. The Fathers are the great Proficients in the Chriſtian Wiſdom, which is the Knowledge of Chriſt, whom the Evangeliſt ſtileth Him that is from the beginning. For the Father he mentioneth afterwards, and it is not agreeable to the Stile of the Scriptures, to ſtile the Father Him that is from the beginning: but it is very agreeable, ſo to ſtile the Son of God, who is our Beginning and Antiquity, (i) as Ignatius ſaith, (ἐμοὶ δὲ ἀρχεῖα ἐστιν Ἰησοῦς Χριστὸς) whoſe Affairs are our Origines Sacræ, and whom we muſt call Him that is from the beginning in a peculiar Senſe, as being Him that is the original Founder of our Inſtitution, Him that is archically that beginning of things which is the Goſpel, and as being Him that is that Word of Life and of our Religion that was from the beginning, as this Evangeliſt ſpeaketh in the entrance of this Epiſtle. That Proem plainly directeth us to this Interpretation of the Name (Him that is from the beginning:) but they have no ſuch direction, that interpret it, to ſignifie Eternity; nor is their Interpretation agreeable to the Evangeliſt's uſual Senſe of the word (beginning) nor do the moſt of them that make this Interpretation agree with themſelves. For if our Evangeliſt's beginning is the Moſaic beginning, as the moſt of the modern Expoſitors ſuppoſe in their Expoſition of his Proems, thoſe of them that interpret this Name (Him that is from the beginning) to be meant of Chriſt, ought ſo to interpret it in this place: but here they are inconſiſtent with themſelves; for all of them agree, in this place to interpret this Name, to ſignifie The Eternal or him that is from Eternity. But the beginning never ſignifieth in any Author Sacred or Profane meer Eternity (as will appear preſently;) nor is it reaſonable, to interpret it, to ſignifie Eternity, unleſs other words be conjoyned with it, that ſo determine the Senſe of it. For is the beginning a word accommodate to ſignifie Eternity, that knoweth no beginning? throughout this Epiſtle doth The beginning ſignifie any ſuch thing as Eternity? Chriſtians ought to be commended by our Evangeliſt for knowing him and adhering to him, that is the original Founder of their Inſtitution (that in ſuch Senſe is from the beginning:) but what ſignifieth it to the Evangeliſt's purpoſe to make mention of his Eternity? But to a Mind prepoſſeſs'd with Prejudices The beginning ſoundeth like Eternity, and Expoſitors will infer from it our Saviour's exiſtence from Eternity, although their Concluſion is a Contradiction to their own Premiſes. For thus a known Expoſitor argueth. (k) What clearer Argument of the Divinity (Eternity) of Chriſt can be deſir'd than S. John's affirmation, that the Word was in the beginning, that is, had no beginning? This Expoſitor interpreteth The beginning (in the Proem of our Evangeliſt's Goſpel) to ſignifie the Moſaic beginning, he denieth, that it ſignifieth Eternity; yet he argueth, that this Saying of the Evangeliſt The Word was in the beginning, doth ſignifie, that he had no beginning, which is to ſay, that The beginning ſignifieth Eternity. The Alex. Cyril argueth, (l) that there cannot be ἀρχὴ τῆς ἀρχῆς, a beginning of the beginning, which is true, if it be underſtood touching the ſupreme cauſal beginning, (m) ἀρχὴ γὰρ ἀγέννητον, for the ſupreme cauſal beginning (or the firſt Principle) is neceſſarily ingenit, all things are from it, and it is from none. But we are not diſcourſing of the ſupreme cauſal beginning, but of the Modal beginning, of which S. Baſil ſaith, (n) ἀρχῆς τὸ ἐξώτερον οὐχ εὑρίσκεται, nothing is beyond the beginning. As the ſupreme cauſal beginning, ſo according to theſe ancient Writers the Modal beginning can have no beginning, it muſt be a beginning-leſs beginning. Our Evangeliſt therefore is ſuppos'd to begin his Hiſtory with a beginning, wherein there is nothing of Hiſtorical beginning; and to call that the beginning, which is properly called The not beginning, as an endleſs end is properly called the not ending. So of our Evangeliſt's Text, In the beginning was the Word, this is the Senſe according to S. Hilary, (o) he was before all beginning. But this cannot be the Senſe of the Evangeliſt's words. It is far better, to interpret words of Scripture agreeably to the uſe of Scripture and the common uſe of Mankind, rather than by a Scholaſtic Subtilty to ſtrain them to ſignifie our imaginary Philoſophic Sublimities. And it is certain, that in Scripture the beginning put abſolutely doth not uſually ſignifie a beginning-leſs beginning, Gen. 1. 1. 1 Chron. 17. 9. Iſa. 1. 26. and 40. 21. and 41. 4, 26. and 46. 10. and 48. 3, 5, 7, 16. Eccl. 3. 11. Jer. 17. 12. Luk. 1. 2. Joh. 16. 4. and 6. 64. and 8. 25, 44. Act. 15. 18. 2 Theſſ. 2. 13. 1 Joh. 2. 7, 24. Heb. 1. 10.

(i) Ep. ad Philadelph. p. 44.

IV. The beginning doth not ſignifie Eternity in any place of the New Teſtament: but ſome with a mighty confidence pretend to ſhew, (p) that it ſo ſignifieth in ſome places of the Old Teſtament. They alledge, Habak. 1. 12. O Lord my God, art thou not מקדם from everlaſting? So the Hebrew word ſignifieth: but it hath other ſignifications; and in this place by the Septuagint and the Vulg. Latin it is rendred à principio, from the beginning. And from hence it is, that theſe argue, that the beginning denoteth Eternity. But this Argument is a fallacy from the ambiguity of a word, and they might as well argue in this manner; The Hebrew word מקדם ſignifieth from Eternity, and it alſo ſignifieth from the Eaſt; therefore the Eaſt in Scripture denoteth Eternity. For as in ſome places of Scripture where it ſignifieth from everlaſting it is rendred by the Seventy and the Vulg. Lat. from the beginning: ſo Gen. 2. 8. it is rendred by Aquila ἀπ' ἀρχῆς (from the beginning) by Symmachus ἐκ πρώτης, by Theodotion ἐν πρώτοις, by Hierom and the Vulg Lat. à principio; but Learned Men of latter times generally ſuppoſe, that it ſignifieth (in this place) Eaſtward, or from the Eaſt, as our Tranſlators have render'd it. The ſame Anſwer may be made to the ſame Argument drawn from the ambiguity of the ſame Hebrew word in the Prophecy of Mic 5. 2. Whoſe goings forth have been from of old (which is render'd by the Seventy and the Vulg. Lat. à principio) from the Days of Eternity. And as for the Senſe of this famous Prophecy, it cannot reaſonably be ſuppos'd, to mean the Eternal Generation of the Meſſiah or his Exiſtence from Eternity, both becauſe that Notion is altogether alien from the Prophecies of the Old Teſtament touching the Meſſiah, and becauſe the Prophecy maniſeſtly ſpeaketh of (not an Abſtract Logos, but) Meſſiah the Prince and Governour of Iſrael as ſuch, and his goings forth to be a Prince and Governour. The Allegation therefore of theſe Texts of the Old Teſtament is altogether impertinent to the Elucidating the Senſe of our Evangeliſt's beginning: but two other Texts are alledg'd from the Old Teſtament, which are of greater conſideration. The one is Eccluſ. 24. 9. πρὸ τοῦ αἰῶνος ἀπ' ἀρχῆς ἔκτισέν με, before the World from the beginning he created me, ſaith Wiſdom. In this place the beginning is antecedent to the whole Creation; and ſo it is in the Book of Proverbs, chap. 8. 22, 23. The Lord poſſeſſed me in the beginning of his way, before his works of old: I was ſet up from everlaſting, from the beginning, or ever the Earth was. Although the Hebrew word which is here rendred from everlaſting

(k) Maldonat. in Joh. 1. 1. p. 196.

(l) Com. in Joh. 10.

(m) Procl. Theol. Plat. l. 6. c. 1.

(n) Hom. 16. p. 504.

(o) De Dei patris & filii unitat.

(p) Petav. T. 4. l. 6. c. 3. S. 7, 8, &c.

laſting is uſually render'd Ab olim, à ſeculo, and may be underſtood, to ſignifie nothing more than from ancient times (that Wiſdom was conſtituted from the moſt ancient times) yet in fair conſtruction the tenour of the words appeareth to be of another importance, and without diſtortion and violence cannot be made to ſignifie any thing leſs than Eternity. But then we ought to diſtinguiſh between a meer Eternity and an originative Eternity, which are thus differenc'd; In an originative Eternity ſomething is ſaid, to have been always originated, generated, created or conſtituted; but there is nothing of this in a meer Eternity. A meer Eternity cannot be called The beginning, nor doth The beginning in any Author, any Scripture, or in common Language, ever denote a meer Eternity. Nor will common Senſe allow it to be called The beginning; for if nothing is begun, there is no beginning: as if nothing is ended, there is no end. If we ſuppoſe (as too many have done) the Uncreatedneſs and Eternity of the Univerſe, and that all things were, as now they are, from Eternity; this meer Eternity cannot be called The beginning, nor can The beginning denote this meer Eternity, wherein nothing is begun, but the Univerſe is ſelf-originated, nor can we ſay of ſuch a World, that it exiſted from the beginning, for there is no beginning. But this meer Eternity is not the Eternity, that Solomon and the Son of Sirach ſpeak of, which is an Originative Eternity (wherein Wiſdom is fictitiouſly and allegorically ſaid to be created and conſtituted) and ſuch an originative Eternity which is primordial and anteceſſional to a created Univerſe that ſucceedeth it, or commenceth into exiſtence after it. Wiſdom therefore is ſaid, to have been from the beginning as being produc'd from ſuch an Eternity (from everlaſting) and as being the firſt of the Operations or Productions of God (the beginning of his way) and conſequently The beginning in theſe Texts of Solomon and the Son of Sirach denoteth ſuch an Eternity which they ſpeak of. But ſeeing The beginning can ſignifie only this originative Eternity, and this originative Eternity as ſo ſignify'd is the origin, that is in (or from) Eternity, therefore The beginning as it denoteth Eternity, doth not denote meerly Eternity, but the origin, that is, in or from Eternity; for this origin is that, which in theſe Texts (of Solomon and the Son of Sirach) is called The beginning. Touching common Language therefore, touching Profane Authors, touching the New and Old Teſtament, touching the Hebrew Writers and the Chaldee Paraphraſts, touching all theſe we muſt affirm, that The beginning as it denoteth Eternity, doth not in any of them ever denote meerly Eternity, but only the origin that is in (or from) Eternity. If therefore in the Proem of our Evangeliſt's Goſpel The beginning doth denote Eternity, it doth not denote meerly Eternity, but the origin that is in (or from) Eternity. If he ſpeaketh of Eternity, he muſt be ſuppos'd, to ſpeak of the originative Eternity (that beginning) as Solomon and the Son of Sirach do. But he cannot be ſuppos'd, to ſpeak of the originative Eternity; for if he had ſpoken of Eternity as the originative Eternity, he muſt have ſaid of the Logos (as Solomon and the Son of Sirach ſay of Wiſdom) that he was then originated, generated, created or conſtituted: but he doth not ſay ſo, nor any thing of that nature; therefore he doth not ſpeak of the originative Eternity, and conſequently he doth not ſpeak of Eternity. If Moſes in the Introduction of his Hexaemeron ſpeaking of originative time, had ſaid, In the beginning Heaven and Earth was, without ſaying any thing of their Origination, his Phraſe had been intolerable, and had implied, that they were in the beginning without any Origination: So if the Evangeliſt in his Introduction ſpeaking of originative Eternity doth ſay, In the beginning the Logos was without ſaying any thing of his Origination, his Phraſe is intolerable, and implieth, that he was in the beginning without any Origination. The Texts of Solomon and the Son of Sirach plainly relate Wiſdom's Natales, and tell us, that ſhe was created, formed and conſtituted from the beginning: but our Evangeliſt in the Proem of his Goſpel hath not ſaid one Syllable of this Nature touching the Logos, nor doth he ſo much as uſe in his Proem theſe terms from the beginning. This Argument is alone ſufficient, to deſtroy the Fathers Expoſition of our Evangeliſt's beginning, it rendreth all their Sublimities concerning it altogether impertinent to the expounding his Proem. His beginning is an Hiſtorical and an Evangelical-hiſtorical beginning: but Eternity is no ſuch beginning.

So the Subſtantive Verb Erat in the front of our Evangeliſt's Goſpel (In principio erat Verbum) is an hiſtorical word: but the ſame Scholaſtic Subtilty hath been us'd in the Interpretation of it, which hath been us'd in the Interpretation of our Evangeliſt's beginning. Some ſay, (q) that Erat ſpoken ἀορίστως, indefinitely, ſtoppeth no where, but extendeth to Infinity (Pre-eternity) and therefore In principio erat Verbum ſignifieth, that the Logos always was and exiſted from Eternity. But at this rate of arguing, if one ſhould ſay, Abrahamus erat, this muſt ſignifie, that he was from Eternity. Some ſay, that this Verb doth not denote a beginning of Exiſtence, nor expreſs any difference of Time, quod ad ſignificandam æternitatem longè eſt aptiſſimum, which is by much the moſt fit to ſignifie Eternity. And it is true, that the Verb Erat doth not expreſs a beginning of Exiſtence; which is one reaſon, why the Evangeliſt made uſe of it; yet not with deſign, to ſignifie the Exiſtence of the Logos from Eternity, but becauſe he deſign'd to give no Hiſtorical Account of his Generation. But it is not true, that the Verb Erat doth not expreſs any difference of Time. For S. Chryſoſtom ſaith, (r) The Verb Erat when it is ſpoken of our Nature, τὸν παρελθόντα χρόνον σημαίνει, ſignifieth the Time paſt and ended: but he addeth, that when it is ſpoken of God, τὸ ἀΐδιον ἐμφαίνει, it denoteth Eternity. And ſo doth Erit as well as Erat. Erat cannot be thought moſt fit to expreſs Eternity, if we are not all extremely miſtaken in our Accounts of the Name Ejeh aſher Ejeh, Ero qui Ero, which in the ancient Writers of the Church is read Ego ſum qui ſum. Several of them ſuppoſe, that the Verb Erat denoteth Perennity and Firmitude, and therefore the Evangeliſt choſe rather to uſe it than Fuit, which denoteth a thing to be paſt, ſo as to ceaſe ceaſe to be. But this Grammatical Subtilty hath nothing of ſolidity in it; for Wiſdom ſaith in the Preter-perfect Tenſe, The Lord poſſeſſed me in the beginning of his way, which doth not imply, that he hath ceaſed, to poſſeſs her. There is nothing of valuable Truth in theſe Remarks of the ancient Writers touching the Verb Erat: But they have obſerv'd, that the Evangeliſt ſaith, the Word was in the beginning, not the Word was made in the beginning (which ſpeaketh him none of the things that were made) which would be an Obſervation of great value, if the Evangeliſts beginning was (as modern Divines ſuppoſe) the Moſaic beginning. But we have ſeen, that the Word of Life was manifeſted, and that according to our Evangeliſt this matter of Fact is that which was from the beginning; his beginning therefore is extremely remote both from Eternity and the Moſaic beginning, and is nothing elſe but the beginning of his Goſpel-hiſtory or of the Times of Chriſtianity.

(q) Petav. de Trin. l. 2. c. 8. ſ. 5. & l. 4. c. 12. ſ. 7.

(r) In Johan. Hom. 3. p. 567.

V. His beginning is certainly a beginning of the matter of his Hiſtory: But he writeth no Hiſtory at all of the Old Teſtament-times and Affairs (but only of the New Teſtament-times and Affairs) yet his beginning is ſuppoſed, to be the Old Teſtament-beginning. An Hiſtorian obſerveth ſome tolerable order, writeth as an Annaliſt, writeth a continu'd courſe of Hiſtory: But our Evangelical Hiſtorian (in the Proem of his Goſpel) is ſuppos'd, to write Hiſtory per Saltum at a prodigious rate. For he is ſuppos'd, to begin his Hiſtory at the Moſaic beginning, yet to skip over all the Old Teſtament-times and Affairs and ſeveral Thouſands of Years (without ſaying one Syllable of them) and preſently after this beginning, in the Fourth Verſe of his Proem, to fall upon things Evangelical, and in the Sixth Verſe of it he falleth upon the Times and Affairs of John the Baptiſt. (s) Several of the beſt Expoſitors ſuppoſe, that in the Fourth Verſe of his Proem he falleth upon the things Evangelical, the Life and Light of the New Teſtament-times. All that he diſcourſeth in this and many ſucceeding Verſes through the main of his Proem (touching the Life, the Light, the ſhining of it in darkneſs, the darkneſs not comprehending it, touching the Baptiſt and his Teſtimony and the Precellency of the Meſſiah) is unqueſtionably the Evangelical beginning and the peculiar matters thereof. Our Evangeliſt therefore in this his Proem certainly writeth of the Evangelical beginning; if he alſo writeth in it of the Moſaic beginning (or of the beginning as it ſignifieth Eternity) then he writeth in this Proem of two beginnings, which is contrary to his Text, which knoweth but one beginning. And this is plainly a demonſtration, that he writeth not of Eternity or the Moſaic beginning. A correſpondence there is between the Old and New Teſtament (as between Literal and Spiritual, Old and New:) But this correſpondence is deſtroy'd by ſuppoſing a Coincidence and Identicalneſs of the Evangeliſts beginning and the Moſaic. If in the Front of a Book of the Old Teſtament we meet with theſe Words in the beginning, the Author muſt be ſuppos'd, to mean thereby the old beginning; for that is his beginning: But by the ſame words in the Front of a Book of the New Teſtament the Author muſt be ſuppos'd, to mean the new beginning; for this is his beginning. Where ſhould we find the old beginning but in the Front of a Book of the Old Teſtament? And where ſhould we find the new beginning but in the Front of a Book of the New Teſtament? An Hiſtorical Writer of the New Teſtament writeth after the new Creation of all things, and after the new and evangelical beginning (perhaps a great while after them:) To ſuppoſe him in the Front of his Book, to overlook this beginning, and by theſe words in the beginning to mean the Moſaic beginning, is as incongruous, as if meeting with this Name Logos in a Stoical Writer, we ſhould interpret it, to mean the Platonic Logos. So we are taught to interpret the Moſaic Hiſtory, as if Moſes was writing S. John's Goſpel; and to interpret S. John's Goſpel, as if he was writing the Moſaic Hiſtory. But if we thus interpret his Proem, we muſt ſuppoſe him, to jumble together things vaſtly diſſonant (without making any thing like a diſtinction between them) the Moſaic beginning and the Evangelical, the things Moſaical and Evangelical, the things Natural and Spiritual, the things Humane and Divine, the things Common and Holy, the times and things of the old Creation and the times and things of the new Creation, an Abſtract Logos and the Humane-divine Perſon of the Meſſiah. Whence they that thus interpret our Evangeliſt, can never frame a tolerably clear and certain, orderly, agreeable and coherent Interpretation of his Proem; but they fall into numerous diverſities of Interpretation, they know not where he endeth his Sayings of things Moſaical, and falleth upon the things Evangelical, nor where he breaketh off his Diſcourſe of an Abſtract Logos, and beginneth with the Humane-divine Perſon of Chriſt; and they jumble together things Natural and Evangelical, Secular and Spiritual, Unholy and Holy, as confuſedly, as they ſuppoſe our Evangeliſt to Diſcourſe. His repetition of the beginning may inſtruct us touching the Senſe of it; for they that follow the ancient and common Expoſition, can give no tolerably good account of this ſtrange repetition, In the beginning was the Word, and the Word was with God. The ſame was in the beginning with God. But according to our Evangeliſt the Goſpel-beginning of things (the beginning of our Saviour's Evangelizing) conſiſteth of theſe two things in Conjunction; The Life was with the Father and was manifeſted unto us. So he ſaith in the Proem of his Firſt Epiſtle, 1 Joh. 1. 2. and ſo he ſaith in the Proem of his Goſpel The Word was with God, and the Life was the Light of Men. Joh. 1. 1, 4. His being with God had reference to his Meſſias-ſhip and Evangelizing (as our Evangeliſt throughout his Goſpel declareth, that Chriſt had been with God, came from God, and was ſent by him;) and if this was the Goſpel-beginning of things (as manifeſtly it was) thence it appeareth, that it is the Evangelical, not the Moſaical beginning, that our Evangeliſt ſpeaketh of. And it is majoris aſſeverationis gratiâ, for the greater aſſurance of ſo ſtrange a thing (of great Importance to be believ'd) and to conciliate Credit and Authority to our Saviour's Meſſiasſhip and Evangelizing, that our Evangeliſt maketh this repetition, The ſame was in the

(s) Grotius, Lighfoot, Maldonate.

Joh. 1. 1, 2.

(t) ó libra veritat. p. 358. beginning with God. (t) Such is the manner of the Hebrew Tongue (ſaith Abarbinel) to repeat a thing twice or thrice for greater Confirmation.

Nothing is more reaſonable, than that the real beginning of Chriſt's Goſpel ſhould be the beginning of it as Hiſtorically written and deſcrib'd. And to this beginning we have great reaſon, to apply the Words of P. Fagius
(u) In Gen. 1. 1. touching the Moſaical beginning. (u) Eſt ראשית nomen abſtractum à primitivo ראש quod caput ſignificat, unde ראשית non ſimplex initium ſive principium ſignificat, ſed primum illud capitale & admirandum. It is the new beginning of all things, that is the great and admirandous beginning, and which (upon many accounts) is far to be preferr'd before the old Moſaic beginning. The Chriſtians Cenſus alſo (as Tertullian ſpeaketh) is not from the old Moſaic beginning (nor from Eternity) but from the new beginning; for with them (in a laudable ſenſe) all old things are paſſed away, all things are become new. Our Evangeliſt's beginning therefore which he celebrateth, is not the old, but the new beginning of all things.

SECTION II.

Of the beginning of Chriſt's miſſive Oeconomy in his Officiary Capacity.

AS they that write of the Jews Affairs diſtinguiſh them into Jews Native and Factive: So the Oeconomy of all officiary Dignities muſt be diſtinguiſh'd; for they are factively officiary Dignities, and what appertaineth to them as ſuch is their factive Oeconomy in their officiary Capacity; but the whole of what appertaineth to them natively and antecedently to their factive Oeconomy in their officiary Capacity is fitly called their generative Oeconomy in their primary Capacity. So every Prophet, Prieſt and King muſt be diſtinctly conſider'd, as to what he is in his generative Oeconomy in his primary Capacity, and as to what he is in his factive Oeconomy in his officiary Capacity. Which factive Oeconomy, if we ſpeak of a Prophet, is moſt fitly called his miſſive Oeconomy. Amos 7. 14, 15. I was no Prophet, neither was I a Prophet's Son; but I was an Herdman and a Gatherer of Sycomore Fruit. And the Lord took me, as I followed the Flock, and the Lord ſaid unto me, go, Propheſie unto my People Iſrael. The Prophet diſtinctly repreſenteth what he was in his generative Oeconomy in his primary Capacity; he was no Prophet, nor Prophet's Son, but an Herdman and a Gatherer of Sycomore Fruit. And he repreſenteth what he was in his miſſive Oeconomy in his officiary Capacity, he was a Prophet of God to the People of Iſrael. In like manner our Bleſſed Saviour muſt be diſtinctly conſider'd, as to what he was in his generative Oeconomy in his firſt or primary Capacity, which was quite terminated, when he entred upon his Meſſias-ſhip; and as to what he was in his miſſive Oeconomy in his officiary Capacity, which commenc'd upon his entrance upon his Meſſias-ſhip and the ſeveral Offices thereof. This is that which we mean by his Miſſion (without regarding the Scholaſtic Notion of Miſſion) and having thus diſtinguiſh'd a twofold conſideration of our Saviour, I do affirm, that our Evangeliſt in his Hiſtorical Proem doth not conſider our Saviour in his generative Oeconomy in his primary Capacity, ſave only that he relateth the Termination of this Oeconomy: But this Proem is properly an Hiſtory of the beginning of his miſſive Oeconomy in his officiary Capacity, connexed with the cloſe of his generative Oeconomy in his primary Capacity. There is a neceſſary Connexion between theſe two Oeconomies (the beginning of the one being the ending of the other, and the ending of the one being the beginning of the other) the Termination or Cloſe of the one and the Inchoation of the other. And the ſame words of the Evangeliſt that ſignifie the Termination of the one (of which an account will be given hereafter) do alſo import the Inchoation of the other. So that the whole of this Proem may and muſt be conſider'd as an Hiſtory of the beginning of Chriſt's miſſive Oeconomy in his officiary Capacity, which is its true Character. For

(1) In the Front of his Proem this Evangeliſt ſtileth our Saviour by no other Name but ὁ λόγος, the Word; and ſeeing it is in his miſſive Oeconomy that he is the Word (the Evangelical Word) thence it appeareth, that in the entrance of his Goſpel he conſidereth the beginning of our Saviour's miſſive Oeconomy. Expoſitors inquire, why the Evangeliſt would rather call him by the Name of the Logos than by the Name of the Son or ſome other Name? The ancient Writers anſwer Scholaſtically (w) that he would not call him the (w) Maldonat. in loc.
Son, leſt Men ſhould phancy any thing of Paſſion, or any thing carnal in his Generation. But this cannot be the reaſon; for within the compaſs of a few Verſes the Evangeliſt ſtileth him the only begotten Son; and there is not the leaſt appearance, that in ſtiling him the Logos he had any reſpect at all to his Generation. Yet for this reaſon the Scholaſtic Theology will have him to be ſtiled the Word, becauſe he is Verbum mentis, as a Notion of our Mind is. Some ſay, he is ſtiled the Logos, becauſe the Logos was very well known amongſt the Jews and the Heathen Philoſophers, and becauſe God created all things by his Word (of Command:) But theſe Reaſons have been conſider'd and confuted. God did not ſpeak to us by his Son until theſe laſt days. Heb. 1. 2. Yet ſome will have him, to be called the Word (or the Word of God) becauſe by his Miniſtery God ſpake unto the Fathers of the Old Teſtament. And ſome ſay, that our Saviour is called the Word objectively, becauſe of him (the Meſſiah) the Word of Promiſe was in the Old Teſtament. But they that aſſign this Reaſon, ruin their own Scholaſtic Theology; for they ſuppoſe, that our Evangeliſt's Logos is not an Abſtract Logos, but the Humane-divine Perſon of the Meſſiah. Which is a great Truth, and the only true Reaſon why this Humane-divine Perſon is ſtiled the Word is aſſign'd by our Evangeliſt himſelf (the beſt Interpreter of his own Senſe;) for he calleth him the Word of Life. 1 Joh. 1. 1. Therefore he is intituled the Word (or Logos) becauſe he is the Word of Life Eternal to us; and he is ſo only in his miſſive Oeconomy, which our Evangeliſt conſidereth in giving him this Name the Word, as we have ſeen from S. Chryſoſtom, and with him a vaſt number of Expoſitors (before cited) thus far agree; they ſuppoſe him to be called called the Word as being the Interpreter of his Father's Mind and Counſel, and becauſe of his Evangelizing.

(2.) The Word (Evangelical) was ſuch by his Miſſion from God. The Evangeliſt therefore in the entrance of his Goſpel conſidering our Saviour as the Word (Evangelical) muſt neceſſarily conſider the beginning of his miſſive Oeconomy. The Goſpel is uſually ſtiled ὁ λόγος, the Word, and ὁ λόγος τοῦ θεοῦ, the Word of God; for that is his Word, which he ſpeaketh unto, and which is ſpoken by his Meſſengers, that have their Miſſion from him. Matth. 13. 20. Mark 16. 20. Luk. 1. 2. and 8. 11, 21. Act. 4. 31. and 6. 2. and 8. 14. Rom. 10. 17. 2 Cor. 2. 17. Eph. 6. 17. Accordingly the Son of God is the Word (Evangelical) as having his Miſſion from God. Joh. 14. 24. The word which you hear, is not mine, but the Fathers which ſent me. Joh. 3. 34. For he whom God hath ſent, ſpeaketh the words of God: for God giveth not the Spirit by meaſure unto him. He ſpeaketh the words of God, ſo as not to ſpeak them at the low imperfect rate of a meer inſpir'd Man, that hath but a degree and meaſure of ſupernatural Inſpiration (ſuch as John Baptiſt;) for God giveth not the Spirit by meaſure unto him.

(3.) The Meſſiah hath not meerly his Miſſion from God, but from his being with God; and his being with God is ſuch, as is connex'd with his being the Word (Evangelical;) for by our Evangeliſt it is connected therewith. In the beginning was the Word, and the Word was with God. In the very entrance of his Goſpel our Evangeliſt conſidereth the Word's being with God, whence he hath his Miſſion; which is an Indication, that in the entrance of his Goſpel he conſidereth the beginning of the Word's miſſive Oeconomy. But of this there is more than an Indication in the Text; for according to this Evangeliſt the Word's being with God is ſuch as is connex'd with his being the Word (Evangelical;) which demonſtrateth, that in the very entrance of his Goſpel he conſidereth the beginning of the Word's miſſive Oeconomy. So Expoſitors agree, that this part of the Firſt Verſe, The Word was with God, and this part of the Eighteenth Verſe, The only begotten Son which is in the Boſom of the Father, are parallel places. With his being in the boſom of the Father the Evangeliſt connecteth his miſſive Oeconomy, which he looketh upon as having its origin from his being in the Boſom of the Father; for he ſaith, he hath declared him. And in like manner in the Firſt Verſe with his being with God the Evangeliſt connecteth his being the Word Evangelical; therefore in this place as in the other the Evangeliſt conſidereth the beginning of his miſſive Oeconomy. So we have ſeen, that the Evangeliſt repeateth and inſiſteth upon his being with God, and his being with God in the beginning (Evangelical;) therefore in the entrance of his Goſpel our Evangeliſt conſidereth the beginning of his miſſive Oeconomy, and his being with God he conſidereth as the origin thereof and in reference to it. So 1 Joh. 1. 2. he ſtileth The Word Evangelical that eternal Life which was with the Father, and was manifeſted unto us; which is a deſcription of the beginning of his miſſive Oeconomy. This he deriveth from his being with God; this he connecteth with his being with God; for his Manifeſtation is the beginning of his miſſive Oeconomy.

(4.) The honourary Names given to our Saviour by this Evangeliſt in the Proem of his Goſpel, ſhew, that it is properly an Hiſtory of the beginning of his miſſive Oeconomy in his officiary Capacity. For although the Evangeliſt relateth the Termination of his generative Oeconomy in his primary Capacity, whence he hath the honouraray Name of God; yet all the other honouraray Names of our Saviour in this Proem, relate to his miſſive Oeconomy in his officiary Capacity. Namely, The Word, the Life and the Light, which denote what he is by officiary Dignity, as he is the Meſſiah. For as he is the Meſſiah, he is by officiary Dignity the Word of Life, the gift and benefit of Life eternal, and the gift and benefit of ſaving Light unto Men. He is by officiary Dignity what his Admirers and Lovers ſtile him (x) ἡ πνοὴ, καὶ ζωὴ, καὶ φῶς, my Breath, my Life, and my Light. The Meſſiah is celebrated for ſhewing Light to the People and to the Gentiles. Act: 26. 23. And an Hebrew Doctor ſaith (y) that in the time of the Meſſiah all Nations ſhould be reduc'd to the knowledge of God.

(5.) Of the Eternal Generation of the Word or Son of God (that generative Oeconomy in his primary Capacity) neither our Evangeliſt nor any other Holy Writer hath ſaid any thing; whence it is reaſonable, to think his Proem an Hiſtory of the beginning of his miſſive Oeconomy in his officiary Capacity. The ancient Writers ſay (z) That Matthew is a Narrator of the Generation according to the fleſh. Mark hath begun his Goſpel from the preaching of John, and Luke alſo beginneth from σωματικαὶ ἀρχαί, corporeal Beginnings. But the Evangeliſt John, who wrote laſt, having elevated his Mind above all that is ſenſible and above all time, aſcended to him that is above all, he alſo teſtifying, that though we have known Chriſt after the fleſh, yet now henceforth know we him no more. For taking hold of the beginning it ſelf, and leaving all corporeal and temporary Cogitations below his Theology, he ſuper-ſounded all former Preachments by the magnificence of his Knowledge. The beginning, ſaith he, is not from Mary, nor from theſe times, but what? In the beginning was the Word, and the Word was with God, and the Word was God, compriſing in few words τὴν ἐξ ἀϊδίου ὕπαρξιν, τὴν ἀπαθῆ γέννησιν, his Subſiſtence from Eternity, his Generation without Paſſion, and ſuch more. (a) The other Evangeliſts with great accuracy explain our Saviour's Genealogy according to the fleſh; which ſort of things S. John little regarded, but by a fervid and igneous motion of Mind he attempted to reach the things that are above the Mind of Man, καὶ τὴν ἄῤῥητόν τε καὶ ἄφραστον τοῦ θεοῦ λόγου γέννησιν ἐξηγεῖσθαι τολμᾶν, and to dare to expound the arcane and ineffable Generation of the God Logos. Sometimes they report (b) that S. John was deſired by ſome Orthodox Perſons to write of the ſupernal Generation and Nativity; and S. Hierom relateth (c) that our Evangeliſt at the deſire of the Biſhops of Aſia wrote his Goſpel againſt Cerinthus and other Hereticks, and chiefly againſt the Dogma of the Ebionites, who aſſert Chriſt not to have exiſted before Mary. Whence he was neceſſitated to declare his Divine Nativity. He that readeth ſuch Diſcourſes as theſe, may expect to find in our Evangeliſt as large an account of our Saviour's eternal Generation and Nativity, as o-

(x) Theophylact in Phil. 1. 21.

(y) Hornbeek c. Jud. l. 3. c. 4.

(z) S. Baſil. adv. Eunom. l. 2. p. 52. S. Chryſoſt. in Johan. p. 572.

(a) S. Cyr. in Johan. p. 8, 10.

(b) Theophylact in Johan. Proœm.

(c) De Script. Eccleſiaſt.

ther Evangeliſts have given of his Genealogy: But he will find himſelf ſadly miſtaken, when he cometh to conſult his Hiſtory and findeth nothing in it (not ſo much as one Syllable or Iota) that ſoundeth like an eternal Generation and Nativity. Nothing of this Nature is expreſs'd, but by Scholaſtic Chymiſtry much of this nature is extracted out of the Name Logos. For the Son of God is ſuppos'd to be (d) S. Baſil. Hom. 16. p. 506. ſo called (d) becauſe he iſſu'd from Mind as a mental Word, becauſe he was generated without corporeal Paſſion, and becauſe he is the Image of the Genitor (as the word which we ſpeak is of our Cogitation) and this Name is ſuppos'd to imply, that his Generation is locutio quædam ac dictio, a certain Saying. But is it poſſible, that a Scholaſtic mental Word and a Grammatical Vocabulum can be thought any thing better than profane trifles? And ſhould it not be thought a childiſh miſtake, to interpret the Divine Word by Analogy thereto? For in Chriſtianity the Word ſignifieth nothing leſs than the Word which is the Goſpel (the Doctrine of the Chriſtian Religion) and in the perſonal Acceptation it ſignifieth nothing leſs than the officiary Dignity of the Meſſiah the Founder of the Chriſtian Religion. To ſuppoſe, that his eternal Generation was a certain ſaying or ſpeaking, is as uncouth a Conceit as that of the Muhammedans, who ſuppoſe, that the Bleſſed Virgin became with Child of him by ſmelling of a Roſe.

(6.) Of the temporary Generation of the Word or Son of God (that generative Oeconomy in his primary Capacity) our Evangeliſt doth not treat in his Hiſtorical Proem: But he writeth the Hiſtory of our Saviour in the ſame manner that he writeth the Hiſtory of John the Baptiſt. For as he thus be- Joh. 1. 6. ginneth his Hiſtory of John; There was a Man, whoſe name was John: So he thus beginneth his Hiſtory of our Saviour, In the beginning was the Word. He taketh no notice of the things that appertain'd to the Baptiſt's generative Oeconomy in his primary Capacity, no notice of his Parentage, his miraculous Birth, or of his manner of Life: But he beginneth his Hiſtory of John with his miſſive Oeconomy in his officiary Capacity, There was a Man ſent from God, whoſe name was John. In like manner he taketh no notice of the things that appertain'd to our Saviour's generative Oeconomy in his primary Capacity (ſave only that he mentioneth the Termination of it, and that Termination belongeth alſo to his miſſive Oeconomy) no notice of his Parentage, his miraculous Birth or of his manner of Life: But he beginneth his Hiſtory of our Saviour with his miſſive Oeconomy in his officiary Capacity, In the beginning was the Word, and the Word was with God, in him was Life, and the Life was the Light of Men. It may ſeem, that theſe words in our Evangeliſt's Proem the Word was made Fleſh, do relate to our Saviour's generative Oeconomy, and are expreſſive of ſuch an Incarnation, as the Scholaſtic Theology treateth of: But for this reaſon they muſt not be ſuppos'd, to belong to his generative Oeconomy, becauſe from many Conſiderations it appeareth, that our Evangeliſt's Proem doth not treat of the generative, but the miſſive Oeconomy of our Saviour. And this account of it agreeth with the account of the ancient Writers (e) that our Evangeliſt wrote his Goſpel (e) Euſeb. H. E. l. 3. c. 24. to ſupply what was wanting in the other Evangeliſts; for they are hugely deficient in their account of our Saviour's miſſive Oeconomy, but abound in their Narratives of his generative Oeconomy. And for this reaſon in the entrance of his Goſpel he choſe rather to call our Saviour by the Name Logos than Filius; for had he called him by the Name Filius, this would have ingag'd him, to give an account of his generative Oeconomy, which he deſign'd not to treat of. If he had deſigned to treat of his generative Oeconomy, he would in his Proem have made uſe of ſuch Names of our Saviour as relate to that Oeconomy; whereas the Names that he uſeth, are ſuch as relate to the miſſive Oeconomy.

(7.) There is an appearance of a want of order in our Evangeliſt's Proem; for he ſpeaketh of theſe Excellencies of Life and Light, and theſe Benefits which the Meſſiah was unto Men by a long anticipation, before he ſaith any thing touching the Word's being made Fleſh, or touching his being in the World. Grotius ſaith (f) That theſe things are preſuppos'd as (f) Grot. in Joh. 1. 4. known to all, and are mention'd when there is occaſion; and ſcrupulouſly to exact order in this ſort of diſcourſing, is to ſeek a knot in a Bulruſh. And this may ſerve to excuſe want of exact order and method in our Evangeliſt's Proem. But doubtleſs there was ſomething in his Mind, that cauſ'd him to diſcourſe at this ſeeming diſorderly rate, and the true reaſon of it was; In the very entrance upon his Goſpel he conſider'd the Perſon of Chriſt as with God, and as with God appointed to his officiary Dignity of the Meſſiah, and therefore ſtileth him the Word, and falleth upon thoſe Excellencies and thoſe Benefits of Life and Light, which belong to him as the Meſſiah, before he taketh any notice of his being made Fleſh, and his being in the World. Before he conſider'd his being in the World and his being made Fleſh he conſider'd (g) quòd Pater in illo vitam lucemque ho- (g) Maldonat in Joh. 1. 4. p. 504. minum conſtituiſſet, that the Father had conſtituted in him the Life and Light of Men, which was the cauſe of his being in the World and his being made Fleſh. And therefore before theſe are mention'd, in a regular and orderly conſideration of things a Diſcourſe of Life and Light hath the Precedence in our Evangeliſt's Proem. From which rational account of his regular and orderly conſideration of things it appeareth, that his Proem from the very entrance of it is an Hiſtory of the beginning of the miſſive Oeconomy of the Meſſiah.

(8.) Our Evangeliſt's Proem ſpeaketh of our Saviour's coming into the World, which ſignifieth the beginning of the miſſive Oeconomy of the Meſſiah. When he ſaith, The Life was V. 4. 10, 11. the Light of Men, he was in the World, he came unto his own, he manifeſtly ſpeaketh of our Saviour's coming into the World, although in thoſe places he uſeth not that Phraſe; and in thoſe places alſo he manifeſtly ſpeaketh of ſuch a coming into the World, which was the beginning of the miſſive Oeconomy of the Meſſiah. But ſome of the beſt Expoſitors have obſerv'd (h) that our Evangeliſt (v. 9.) (h) Grot. Dr Ham. Not. in Joh. 1. 9. uſeth the Phraſe of coming into the World, that it belongeth to the Meſſiah, and that it ſignifieth not to be born, but in Nomine Dei hominibus apparere, to appear unto Men in the Name of God, and ſo to come into the World as God's Meſſiah. For our Saviour diſtinguiſheth his being Born from his coming into the World. Joh. 18. 37. To this end was I born, and for this cauſe came I into the world. In ſuch ſenſe our Saviour ſaith Joh. 3. 19. Light is come into the world. Joh. 12. 46. I am come a light into the world. So the People ſay, Joh. 6. 14. This is of a truth that Prophet, that ſhould come into the world. So Chriſt ſaith, that he was ſent by the Father into the World. Joh. 10. 36. and 17. 18. and (in the ſame place) that the Apoſtles were by him in like manner ſent into the World. This coming into the World therefore (in our Evangeliſt's Proem) doth not refer to Chriſt's Birth in the World, but to the manifeſtation of him to the World, his entring on his Office of preaching the Will of God to them, ſo as his coming may be all one with his being ſent, i. e. his Commiſſion from God to declare his Will to the World, as Joh. 8. 42. I came not of my ſelf, but he ſent me. This is uſed of the Apoſtles, where it cannot poſſibly be underſtood of their Birth. Joh. 17. 18. As thou haſt ſent me into the world, ſo alſo I have ſent them into the world. So 1 Tim. 1. 15. Jeſus Chriſt came into the world. And Joh. 11. 27. I believe, that thou art Chriſt, ὁ εἰς τὸν κόσμον ἐρχόμενος, that cometh into the world, which was certainly deſign'd by Martha as an Expreſſion of her Belief, that he was the Meſſiah. Thus far I have tranſcrib'd the Diſcourſes of two learned Expoſitors, in which I will remark theſe three things. Firſt, That according to theſe Expoſitors our Saviour's coming into the World doth not refer to his Birth, but to the manifeſtation of him to the World, his entring on his Office of Preaching. From whence it followeth, that the Proem of our Evangeliſt's Firſt Epiſtle (which is a Parallel to the Proem of his Goſpel) referreth in the whole of it to our Saviour's miſſive Oeconomy; for the Subject-matter of it is the manifeſtation of the Life and the word of Life. 1 Joh. 1. 1, 2. Another thing I infer from one of theſe Expoſitors; that it was not an Abſtract Logos, but the Humane-divine Perſon of Chriſt, that did come into the World. For ſo he expoundeth 1 Tim. 1. 15. Jeſus Chriſt came into the world. Joh. 11. 27. I believe, that thou art Chriſt the Son of God, that cometh into the world. Both theſe Expoſitors ſuppoſe, (which is a third thing remarkable) that our Saviour's coming into the World and his being ſent are the ſame thing, and that our Saviour's Miſſion was like that of the Apoſtles. Whence I infer, that the Scholaſtic Incarnation was not our Saviour's Miſſion, as the Scholaſtic Theology and the ancient Writers of the Church ſuppoſe.

(9.) Some large parts of our Evangeliſt's ſhort Proem are manifeſtly parts of an Hiſtory of our Saviour's miſſive Oeconomy and of the beginning thereof; which is an Indication, that his Proem is of this Nature and Character, An Hiſtory of the beginning of the miſſive Oeconomy of the Meſſiah. For to ſuch an Hiſtory the Evangeliſt's account of John the Baptiſt manifeſtly belongeth. V. 6, 7, 8. There was a man ſent from God, whoſe name was John. The ſame came for a witneſs, to bear witneſs of the light, that all men through him might believe. He was not that light, but was ſent to bear witneſs of that light. To ſuch an Hiſtory belongeth alſo the Evangeliſt's account of the courſe entertainment, that our Saviour found in the World upon his coming into it, which is mention'd three times in this ſhort Proem. V. 5. The light ſhineth in darkneſs, and the darkneſs (received or) comprehended it not. V. 10. He was in the world, and the world knew him not. V. 11. He came unto his own, and his own received him not. Which Words ſome refer to the univerſality of Mankind (as being Chriſt's own, becauſe he at firſt created them) others much more reaſonably refer them to the Jews only, who are fitly called Chriſt's own; for if we conſider him as a Man, they were peculiarly his own Nation and People. 2 King. 4. 13. If we conſider him as a Prophet, they were his own People, as peculiarly the People of his Miniſtration. Rom. 15. 8. If we conſider him as the Meſſiah, he was their Meſſiah, peculiarly promis'd to them and ſent to them. Matth. 15. 24. They were therefore peculiarly his own as peculiarly ally'd to him, not the Aliens from the Meſſiah, as the Gentiles were. And at theſe Words He came unto his own and his own received him not, we will conclude our Evangeliſt's Proem; for here he breaketh off his proemial deſcription of the Perſon of the Meſſiah, and in the following Verſes maketh a deſcription of regenerate Believers.

(10.) Our Evangeliſt's ſhort Proem ought to be interpreted by his larger Goſpel, which at ſo great a rate inſiſteth on our Saviour's Miſſion from God, that in all reaſon the Proem thereof muſt be look'd upon as an Hiſtory of the beginning of his miſſive Oeconomy. The ſound of this Goſpel is Chriſt's Miſſion from God. God ſent not his Son into the world, to condemn the world. My meat is to do the will of him that ſent me. He that honoureth not the Son, honoureth not the Father which hath ſent him. He that heareth my word, and believeth on him that ſent me, hath everlaſting life. I ſeek not mine own will, but the will of the Father which hath ſent me. The works that I do, bear witneſs of me, that the Father hath ſent me. And the Father himſelf which hath ſent me, hath born witneſs of me. This is the Father's will which hath ſent me, that of all which he hath given me, I ſhould loſe nothing. And this is the will of him that ſent me, that every one which ſeeth the Son and believeth on him, may have everlaſting Life. As the living Father hath ſent me, and I live by the Father. He that ſeeketh his glory that ſent him, the ſame is true. Yet a little while am I with you, and then I go unto him that ſent me. No man can come to me, except the Father which hath ſent me draw him. Though I bear record of my ſelf, yet my record is true; for I know whence I came, and whither I go. My judgment is true; for I am not alone, but I and the Father that ſent me. I am one that bear witneſs of my ſelf, and the Father that ſent me, beareth witneſs of me. He that ſent me, is with me. I muſt work the works of him that ſent me. Becauſe of the people which ſtand by, I ſaid it, that they may believe, that thou haſt ſent me. He that ſeeth me, ſeeth him that ſent me. He that receiveth me, receiveth him that ſent me. All theſe things will they do unto you for my names ſake, becauſe they know not him that ſent me. I go my way to him that ſent me. This is life eternal, that they might know thee the only true God, and Jeſus Chriſt whom thou haſt ſent. As thou haſt ſent me into

Joh. 3. 17.
ch. 4. 34.
ch. 5. 23, 24, 30, 36, 37.
ch. 6. 39, 40, 44, 57.
ch. 7. 18, 33.
ch. 8. 14, 16, 18, 29.
ch. 9. 4.
ch. 11. 42.
ch. 12. 45.
ch. 13. 20.
ch. 15. 21.
ch. 16. 5.
ch. 17. 3, 18, 21, 23, 25.
ch. 20. 21.

to the World, even ſo have I alſo ſent them into the World. That the World may believe, that thou haſt ſent me. I have known thee, and theſe have known, that thou haſt ſent me. As my Father hath ſent me, even ſo ſend I you. Grotius in his Explication of the Title of our Evangeliſt's Goſpel compareth S. Peter and our Evangeliſt to two of Alexander's Friends, of which one was the lover of Alexander, the other was the lover of the King. So he ſuppoſeth, that S. Peter was chiefly φιλόχριστος, the lover of Chriſt, and our Evangeliſt was chiefly φιλιησοῦς, the lover of Jeſus. But ſeeing he hath wav'd the treating of our Saviour's generative œconomy, and the Name which he peculiarly giveth him, denoteth his Meſſias-ſhip; ſeeing all the eximious divine Excellencies which he aſcribeth to our Saviour (in his Apocalypſe and other Writings) are ſuch as belong to him as Chriſt, and almoſt all that his Goſpel (as alſo the Proem of his firſt Epiſtle) ſoundeth forth is the Meſſiah and his miſſive œconomy; it muſt be ſaid, that in his Writings he appeareth to be φιλόχριστος, the lover of Chriſt, rather than φιλιησοῦς, the lover of Jeſus.

(II.) From this Goſpel it appeareth, that our Saviour's being with God had reference to his Meſſias-ſhip and his being the Evangelical Word; and from hence we may infer, that the Proem of his Goſpel is an Hiſtory of the beginning of our Saviour's miſſive œconomy. Joh. 1. 18. When he ſaith, No man hath ſeen God at any time, the only begotten Son which is in the Boſom of the Father, he hath declared him: He plainly affirmeth, that our Saviour had been with God, and his words imply, that he had ſeen him; and when he ſaith, he hath declared him, he ſignifieth our Saviour's officiary dignity as The Word Evangelical, and that his being with God had reference to (his being The Word Evangelical) his declaring him in his miſſive œconomy, and was the beginning thereof. What he hath ſeen and heard that he teſtifieth, Joh. 3. 32. We ſpeak what we do know, and teſtifie what we have ſeen, ſaith our Saviour. Ye have neither heard his voice, nor ſeen his ſhape. He that ſent me is true, whom ye know not: but I know him, for I am from him, and he hath ſent me. Not that any Man hath ſeen the Father, ſave he which is of God, he hath ſeen the Father. I ſpeak that which I have ſeen with my Father; and ye do that which ye have ſeen with your Father. If God were your Father, ye would love me; for I proceeded forth and came from God; neither came I of my ſelf, but he ſent me. My Doctrine is not mine, but his that ſent me. I can of mine own ſelf do nothing, as I hear, I judge. I do nothing of my ſelf, but as my Father hath taught me, I ſpeak theſe things. The words that I ſpeak unto you, I ſpeak not of my ſelf. The word which you hear is not mine, but the Father's which ſent me. He that ſent me is true, and I ſpeak to the World thoſe things which I have heard of him. He that believeth on me, believeth not on me, but on him that ſent me. I have given unto them the words which thou gaveſt me, and they have received them, and have known ſurely, that I came out from thee, and they have believed, that thou didſt ſend me. All things that I have heard of my Father, I have made known unto you. I have not ſpoken of my ſelf; but the Father which ſent me, he gave me a Commandment, what I ſhould ſay, and what I ſhould ſpeak. Whatſoever I ſpeak therefore, even as the Father ſaid unto me, ſo I ſpeak. As the Father gave me commandment, even ſo I do. I have glorified thee on the Earth, I have finiſhed the work which thou gaveſt me to do. I came down from Heaven, not to do mine own Will, but the Will of him that ſent me. The Cup which my Father hath given me, ſhall I not drink it? Say ye of him whom the Father hath ſanctified and ſent into the World, thou blaſphemeſt? When our Saviour ſo often affirmeth, that he came immediately from God, that he had ſeen him and heard his words, received his Doctrine, Miſſion and Commiſſion, Mandate and Meſſias-ſhip from him, he plainly ſignifieth, that he was with him in reference to his being The Word Evangelical (The Meſſiah) and that from this Origin his miſſive œconomy is to be deriv'd. In our Evangeliſt's Goſpel therefore we may plainly read the true Expoſition of thoſe primary words of his Proem The Word was with God. For they ſignifie, that the Word was with God in reference to his being The Word Evangelical which is his miſſive œconomy. From the primary words of this Proem therefore rightly expounded it appeareth, to be an Hiſtory of the beginning of our Saviour's miſſive œconomy.

Joh. 3. 11.
ch. 5. 17, 30.
ch. 6. 46.
ch. 7. 16, 28, 29.
ch. 8. 26, 28, 38, 42.
ch. 11. 42.
ch 12. 44, 49, 50.
ch. 14. 10, 31.
ch. 15. 15.
ch 17. 4, 8.
ch. 18. 11.

SECTION III.

Of the Word that was with God.

I. THE true Character of our Evangeliſt's Proem (which we have now ſettled) will go a great way in reſolving a grand Queſtion, which is involv'd in thoſe primary words of it The Word was with God. For it muſt be conſider'd, whether The Word that was with God, was an Abſtract Logos (the ſecond Perſon of the Scholaſtic Trinity) or the Humane-divine Perſon of the Meſſiah? For the reſolution whereof we may look back to our Idea of the Son of God; for if we have not extremely miſrepreſented his Idea, our Evangeliſt's Logos (the ſame with the only begotten Son, Joh. 1. 18.) can be no Abſtract Logos. In our account of his Incarnation and new Creation we have confuted the Hypotheſis of an Abſtract Logos; and ſince we began to interpret our Evangeliſt, we have ſhew'd, that his Logos is not an Abſtract Logos, that his Beginning, Life and Light are only the Evangelical, and that his Proem is an Hiſtory of the beginning of the miſſive œconomy of the Meſſias; which are Propoſitions inconſiſtent with the ſuppoſition of an Abſtract Logos. But that nothing may be wanting to a due determination of this Queſtion, we will obſerve many other Notices concerning it, that occur in our Evangeliſt's Goſpel and ſome other places of the New Teſtament. From our Evangeliſt we may learn what kind of Logos he ſpeaketh of, if we review the many places which we have (but now) cited from him. For theſe places put together will make this ſhort Hiſtory of his Logos. In the beginning the Word was with God, to the purpoſe of being an Eye and Ear-witneſs of the things Heavenly; he ſaw God, had converſe with him at the moſt intimate rate, heard his Voice, had his Words and his Doctrine from him, was taught by him what he ſhould ſay and what he ſhould ſpeak, was ſent by him into the World, received Mandates from him touching the Work that he was to do, came down from Heaven, and was made (or became) Humane Fleſh, Joh. 1. 14. Came from God and went to God, Joh. 16. 28. In this Hiſtory ſuch a Logos is repreſented to us, which is manifeſtly the Prince of Evangeliſts, that brought down from Heaven the Goſpel of God. The whole of it therefore is hugely agreeable to the Humane-divine Perſon of the Meſſiah: but nothing of it is agreeable to an Abſtract Logos otherwiſe than as diſtorted by Scholaſtic Interpretation, which is alien, exotic and heterogeneous to it; for it is Hiſtory that ought to be hiſtorically underſtood.

II. From our Evangeliſt it appeareth, that the Word was with God (in Heaven) at the time immediately antecedent to his Manifeſtation. For the Life was manifeſted, and we have ſeen it, that Eternal Life which was with the Father, and was manifeſted unto us, 1 Joh. 1. 2. The Word was with God.—— In him was Life, and the Life was the Light of Men, Joh. 1. 1, 4. (i) The Word's being with God (according to the beſt Expoſitors) denoteth his being with God in Heaven in his inviſible ſtate, which is oppoſite to his being in the World, in the Fleſh (in the Senſe of our Evangeliſt) conſpicuous and apparent and in his ſtate of manifeſtation. So the Evangeliſt's words ſignifie (plainly enough) That Eternal Life was with the Father, and was manifeſted unto us. He was with the Father before he was manifeſted and till he was manifeſted (while he was in his inviſible ſtate and inconſpicuous he was with the Father) the Word therefore was with God at the time immediately antecedent to his manifeſtation, which ſucceeded his inviſible ſtate, and if it did ſucceed it, could not but immediately ſucceed it. The time of his manifeſtation is certainly known, and conſequently the time of his coming forth from the Father, coming into the World and coming down from Heaven, is eaſily known, and is clearly enough expreſs'd by John the Baptiſt, Joh. 3. 31. He that cometh from above, is above all: he that is of the Earth is earthly and ſpeaketh of the Earth: he that cometh from Heaven is above all. It is eaſie, to interpret this Phraſe of coming from above and coming from Heaven figuratively and allegorically: but ſo it is eaſie, to allegorize away the Hiſtory of the Bible. As theſe words, he that is of the Earth, are Hiſtory: ſo are theſe words, he that cometh from above, he that cometh from Heaven; they plainly ſignifie, (k) ὁ γὰρ Χριστὸς ἄνωθεν ἡμῖν ἀφίκετο, that Chriſt did come to us from above. And if the Perſon of Chriſt did come to us from above, not an Abſtract Logos (or the ſecond Perſon of the Scholaſtic Trinity) but the Humane-divine Perſon of the Meſſiah did come to us from above, and it is his Divine Honour, that the Baptiſt emblazoneth by intituling him He that cometh from above, He that cometh from Heaven, but eſpecially by this μεγαλυσμὸς, He is above all. For in theſe words he muſt neceſſarily conſider Chriſt as Chriſt, or as the Saint of God-kind of Imperial Son (who is above all in Rank and Graduality and all Excellency;) and ſeeing it is the Humane-divine Perſon of Chriſt (not an Abſtract Logos) that throughout the New Teſtament (l) is celebrated as above all, therefore it is not an Abſtract Logos, but the Humane-divine Perſon of Chriſt, whom the Baptiſt celebrateth, as He that cometh from above, He that cometh from Heaven and is above all. Which alſo appeareth from the Nature of the Baptiſt's Teſtimony; for he was not ſent, to give his Honourary Teſtimony to an Abſtract Logos, but to the Humane-divine Perſon of Chriſt. (m) Qui de ſurſum venit, ſupra omnes eſt, Chriſtus eſt: qui autem eſt de terra, de terra eſt, & de terra loquitur, Joannes eſt. The Baptiſt compareth not himſelf with an Abſtract Logos, but with the Perſon of Chriſt: and he compareth himſelf with Chriſt, not as a Man, but as a Prophet. As a Prophet he was not ſent down from Heaven, but was of the Earth, of Rank and Degree he was but earthly (but an earthly Prophet;) and he ſpake but of the Earth, becauſe as to his revealed Notices of things he was but a Prophet of the Earth: Whereas to the Meſſiah the things of Heaven were notic'd upon his own knowledge; of Rank and Degree he was ſupernal, peerleſs and tranſcendent; and as to his Miſſion he was a Prophet (Prince and Potentate) ſent down from Heaven. Throughout all the Baptiſt's Diſcourſes there is not the leaſt Indication, that he knew any thing of the Second Perſon of the Scholaſtic Trinity; the Diſcourſe which we have now under conſideration, manifeſtly and undeniably in the whole of it relateth to the complex Perſon of the Meſſiah, v. 30. He muſt increaſe, but I muſt decreaſe. V. 29. He that hath the Bride (the Church) is the Bridegroom. V. 27, 28. A Man can receive nothing, except it be given him from Heaven. Ye your ſelves bear me witneſs, that I ſaid, I am not the Chriſt. This was the Divine Perſon, whom John thus intituleth and ennobleth, He that cometh from above, He that cometh from Heaven. And it appeareth, that he came from Heaven, at that time when he came to John to be baptized, and was made manifeſt unto Iſrael, Joh. 1. 32. Until that time the Word was with God (to Men inconſpicuous:) but then the Life was manifeſted and became the Light of Men. Which manifeſtation of the Meſſiah (connex'd with his being with God) was not till about thirty years after his Bethlehemitical Nativity; therefore his being with God was not antecedent to his Bethlehemitical Nativity, nor belong'd to an Abſtract Logos. His being with God immediately preceded his manifeſtation, and therefore belong'd to his Humane-divine Perſon and was introductory to his miſſive œconomy.

III. The Baptiſt calleth Chriſt an Eye and Ear-witneſs of the things in Heaven, Joh. 3. 32. What he hath ſeen and heard, that he teſtifieth. Which Expreſſions the moſt Expoſitors (n) interpret figuratively, departing from the literal Senſe of Scripture without any reaſon or neceſſity, againſt plain reaſon and neceſſity. For the Baptiſt's teſtimony of our Saviour muſt be underſtood as Encomiaſtic Hiſtory; and ſeeing he affirmeth, that the Humane Divine

---

(i) Verbum erat apud Deum. Opponitur hoc ei quod infra dicitur, ὁ λόγος in mundo fuiſſe, caro factus, ſpectatus. vult enim dicere ante eum fuiſſe inconſpicuum. Dicitur enim Deus eſſe ἀόρατος. 1 Tim. 1. 17. & habitare lucem inacceſſam. 1 Tim. 6. 16. Idem indicat in 1 Ep. 1. 2. καὶ ἡ ζωὴ ἐφανερώθη. Et mox ἥτις ἦν πρὸς τὸν πατέρα. & Eph. 3. 9. ſic infra, 17. 5. παρὰ σοι. Grot. Not. in Joh. 1. 1. Acuta etiam eſt & germana, ut mihi videtur, interpretatio Gregorii, lib. 5. Moral. cap. 19. Idem eſſe Verbum fuiſſe apud Deum, & fuiſſe inviſibile, fuiſſe quodammodo abſconditum. Maldonat. in Joh. 1. 1.

(k) S. Chryſoſt. in loc.

(l) Eph. 1. 21. 1 Pet. 3. 21, &c.

(m) S. Aug. Tr. 14. in Joann.

(n) Maldonat. in l. c.

Perſon of Chriſt did come from above and from Heaven, ſhall he not be thought, to affirm, that literally and properly he was an Eye and Ear-witneſs of the things in Heaven? So one Expoſitor well interpreteth his words. (o) Qui de terra eſt, loquitur terrena, & quæ didicit in terra: at qui de cœlo eſt, loquitur quæ didicit in cœlo, ea ſcil. quæ vidit & audiit à Deo. He that is of the Earth, ſpeaketh the things that he learned in the Earth: but he that is from Heaven, ſpeaketh the things that he learned in Heaven, namely, the things which he ſaw and heard from God. But is it imaginable, that this was an Abſtract Logos, who was furniſh'd to be a Prophet by what he learned from God in Heaven, and by what he learned from his Eyes and Ears in Heaven? Not only the Baptiſt, but our Saviour himſelf in many of his Diſcourſes (before-cited) ſtileth himſelf an Eye and Ear-witneſs of the things in Heaven; and ſeeing he requireth, to be believed as the faithful and true Witneſs touching matter of fact, ought he not, to be an Eye and Ear-witneſs, to qualifie him for belief? He was the great Apoſtle of our Profeſſion, and therefore muſt be an Apoſtolical ſort of Teſtifier; which he could not be, unleſs he teſtify'd of the things Celeſtial upon the credit of his Eyes and Ears. And it is not an Abſtract Logos, but only the Humane Divine Perſon of the Meſſiah, that could ſo teſtifie. An Abſtract Logos is not any thing like what all mean by an Eye and Ear-witneſs; nor would any intelligent Perſon call any one ſuch a Witneſs upon account of his having been an Abſtract Logos; ſuch Scholaſticals are quite out of the road of popular Notion and Expreſſion, they are quite alien and remote from what Mankind mean by teſtifying upon the credit of their Eyes and Ears (upon which the force of their Teſtimony dependeth;) the Baptiſt therefore in his Character of our Saviour cannot be ſuppos'd to mean an Abſtract Logos. Nor can our Saviour mean an Abſtract Logos, when he ſaith, Joh. 6. 46. Not that any Man hath ſeen the Father, ſave he which is of God, he hath ſeen the Father. To the ſame Senſe the Evangeliſt ſaith, Joh. 1. 18. No Man hath ſeen God at any time; the only begotten Son which is in the Boſom of the Father, he hath declared him. The Chriſt of God therefore did ſee God, and ſo ſee God, as to be an Exception from this general Rule, No Man hath ſeen God; therefore the Humane-divine Perſon of Chriſt as ſuch did ſee God; for if an Abſtract Logos only did ſee God, this was not properly a Man's ſeeing God, nor an exception from this general Rule, No Man hath ſeen God, nor can it be ſaid of an Abſtract Logos with any tolerable propriety that he hath ſeen God (as it is ſaid of the Juſt with great propriety, that they ſhall ſee God) nor is it a thing of intelligible apprehenſion or conception. (p) The greateſt Scholaſtic Divines pretend not to underſtand any thing of it, nor to have any Notion of it, unleſs this of S. Auſtin may paſs for a Notion. (q) Videre Filii hoc eſt natum eſſe de Patre, the ſeeing of the Son is his being born of the Father. At the ſame rate (as we have ſeen before) the Scholaſtic Theology interpreteth our Saviour's Diſcourſes, Joh. 12. 49, 50. I have not ſpoken of my ſelf; but the Father which ſent me, he gave me a commandment, what I ſhould ſay and what I ſhould ſpeak, Joh. 14. 31. As the Father gave me commandment, even ſo I do. (r) The ſpeaking of God is the generating the (Scholaſtic) Verbum. To teach the Son, is to have generated him learned and knowing (ſo as to be incapable of being taught, and ſo as not to teach him at all.) To give all Judgment to the Son, is to generate him the Judge (ſo as not to give or commit to him any Judgment at all.) Our Saviour uſually ſaith, The Father hath given him: whereby he would have us to underſtand, that the Father generated him (and otherwiſe gave him nothing.) The Father ſpeaketh to the Son (The Word) not by another Word or Speech, but by communicating to him his Nature, wherewith the Son received all that was in the Father, Wiſdom, Knowledge, Will, Commandment, the counſel and purpoſe of creating and doing ſomething in time. In Diſcourſes touching the Creation in the New Teſtament Scholaſtic Divines very much inſiſt, that words ought to be underſtood according to their proper natural ſignification: but how well they obſerve their own Rule, appeareth from the figurative Interpretations and Scholaſtical Expoſitions, which they make of the Baptiſt's Diſcourſes and our Saviour's touching his ſeeing God, hearing the Father, being taught by him, receiving his Doctrine from him, receiving Commandments from him, and Precepts touching Work to be done, his coming forth from him, his deriving his Commiſſion from him, his having all Judgment committed to him, and the Father's giving to the Son, to have Life in himſelf, (with ſuch more) all which amounteth to nothing more than this (as the ancient Scholaſticks ſuppoſe) The Father generated him from Eternity. But thus to ſophiſticate and adulterate Theology by unholy and irrational Interpretations of Scripture (for a Prophet muſt be generated, before he is made a Prophet, and muſt have his Inſtructions, Miſſion, Commiſſion and Credentials after his Exiſtence) thus to wreſt the Divine Diſcourſes of our Saviour (like a Noſe of Wax) to make his words not Senſe, and to ſignifie what is contrary to their ſignification, is doubtleſs a crime next door to expunging them out of the Bible. To which Theophylact proceeded a great way in his Interpretation of one Text God giveth not the Spirit by meaſure unto him, which he thus expounded; To Chriſt he did not give the Spirit at all, for Chriſt hath it eſſentially. What ſhall we ſay to ſuch Theologers, as dare in terminis, contradict the Scriptures, to uphold their own Prejudices? I am ſorry, to cite S. Chryſoſtom as in any degree guilty of ſuch a Crime; but thus he writeth upon Joh. 3. 32. What he hath ſeen and heard that he teſtifieth. (s) The Baptiſt carrieth his Speech to that which is low; for it is humanly ſpoken, to ſay, what he hath heard and ſeen. For his knowing was not by receiving notices of things from ſeeing and hearing; but iſſuing perfect from the Father he had all in

(o) Lightfoot Hor. in loc.

(p) S. Cyr. in Joh. p. 349. S. Aug. Tr. 19. in Joan.

(q) Ibid. Tr. 20.

(r) Loqui Dei, eſt Verbum genuiſſe. Docere Filium eſt Doctum & ſcientem genuiſſe. Judicium dare Filio, eſt judicem ipſum gignere. Plerumque dicit, Dedit mihi pater: in quo vult intelligi, quod eum genuerit pater. Pater loquitur Filio (Verbo) non verbo vel ſermone altero, ſed communicatione ipſa naturæ, qua cum omnia Filius accepit quæ in Patre ſunt, ſapientiam, cognitionem, voluntatem, juſſionem, creandi vel in tempore faciendi aliquid conſilium & propoſitum. Petav. de Trin. l. 2. c. 4. S. 6, &c. l. 6. c. 4. S. 3, &c. l. 8. c. 1. S. 10.

(s) Ἐπὶ τὸ ταπεινότερον τὸν λόγον ἄγει· τὸ γὰρ ὃ ἤκουσε καὶ ἑώρακεν, ἀνθρωπινότερον εἴρηται· οὐ γὰρ ἀπὸ τοῦ παραλαβεῖν ὄψει, οὐδ᾽ ἀπὸ τοῦ ἀκοῦσαι ᾔδει ἃ ᾔδει· ἀλλ᾽ ἐν τῇ φύσει τὸ πᾶν εἶχε, τέλειος ἐκ τῶν πατρικῶν κόλπων προελθὼν, καὶ οὐ δεόμενος τοῦ διδάσκοντος.

his Nature, and needed not one to teach him.---- When he ſaith, as I hear, I judge, and I ſpeak what I have heard of my Father, and we ſpeak what we have ſeen, and other ſuch things, it is not to let us know, that he ſpeaketh what he ſpeaketh being taught, τοῦτο γὰρ τῆς ἐσχάτης ἀνοίας ἐςὶ νομίζειν, for ſo to ſuppoſe, is extreme madneſs; but that nothing which he ſpake might be ſuſpected by the impudent Jews. One may reaſonably ſuppoſe, that John Baptiſt's Character of our Saviour, Joh. 3. 27---34. is truly noble, divine and illuſtrious: But S. Chryſoſtom ſaith τοῖς ταπεινοτέροις ἐνδιατρίβει μάλιςα, he moſt inſiſteth upon the lower ſort of things.

IV. Our Evangeliſt repreſenteth the Logos as ſent from being with God in Heaven (which is neceſſarily the Logos that was with God;) the Miſſion of this Logos ſo ſent was a Prophetic or Apoſtolic Miſſion; therefore this Logos was no Abſtract Logos, but the Humane-divine Perſon of the Meſſiah. By the Prophetic Miſſion I mean ſuch a kind of Miſſion as the Prophets of God have, and which is oppoſite to the Scholaſtic kind of Miſſion. (t) For the Scholaſtic Theology in treating of the Miſſion of the Divine Perſons (the Son and the Holy Ghoſt) hath chiefly regard to their eternal Proceſſion or Egreſſion from the Father, but not to this alone; for the Miſſion of a Divine Perſon in this Theology is thus defin'd. It is the eternal Proceſſion of a Divine Perſon, ſo as to be withall a temporal Operation. (u) So the Miſſion of the Son by the Father unto us and into the World is ſaid to be his eternal Generation, ſo as to be with all intentionally and actually his (Scholaſtic) Incarnation, whereby he appeared unto Men. To come forth from the Father by eternal Generation, and to come into the World by aſſuming Humane Nature (ſo deſcending from his Highneſs to our Meanneſs) is to be ſent (w) as this Theology ſuppoſeth. But thus Scholaſtically to interpret the Scripture, is enormouſly to miſinterpret it; for neither doth our Saviour's coming into the World ſignifie the Scholaſtic Incarnation; nor doth his coming forth from the Father ſignifie his eternal Generation. This ſome of the principal Scholaſtic Divines obſerve and diſcourſe; that our Saviour compareth his coming forth from the Father and his return to the Father, and that the one anſwereth the other. Joh. 16. 28. I came forth from the father, and am come into the world: Again, I leave the world, and go to the Father. (x) Wherefore it is better to interpret both of them in the ſame ſenſe (as appertaining to the Humane Nature) and to apply them to the temporary Miſſion. But if our Saviour's coming forth from the Father muſt be underſtood of his Humane Nature (as the tenor of his Words and this Scholaſtic Divine argue) it muſt be underſtood of ſuch a coming forth from the Father, which is anſwerable to his return to the Father; and conſequently the Humane-divine Perſon of Chriſt muſt be underſtood, to have come forth from God and out of Heaven, as he return'd to God and into Heaven; which is deſtructive to the Hypotheſis of an Abſtract Logos of eternal Generation. The eternal Generation (ſuppoſing it true) or the Emiſſion of a Ray of the Sun (which is a Similitude that the ancient Writers uſe (y) and which Maldonate applaudeth) is of no Affinity with our Saviour's Miſſion; and the Scholaſtic Incarnation is about as far diſtant from it, as the Ark of Bulruſhes wherein Moſes was expos'd, was diſtant from the fiery Buſh in the Wilderneſs, wherein God appear'd to him. To call ſuch things as theſe our Saviour's Miſſion, and to jumble an eternal and temporary Egreſſion into one Miſſion, is contrary to the common Sence of Mankind, and it is marvellous, that the ancient Writers could ſo groſly miſtake in ſo plain a caſe. A principal origin of their miſtake was their not underſtanding the meaning of our Saviour's coming into the World; for although amongſt the Hebrew Doctors coming into the World is an uſual Periphraſis of Men, and denoteth their being born into this World, yet we do not find, that it ſo ſignifieth in any one place of the Bible, and as apply'd to our Saviour it is manifeſtly of another Notion, and is the ſame with his Prophetic kind of Miſſion, which is the only Miſſion, that the Scripture is acquainted with. (z) He that receiveth a mandate from God, to bring any thing, is ſaid to be ſent by him. When our Saviour ſaith, that he came not of himſelf, but God ſent him. Joh. 8. 42. The ſenſe is, he came not (a) as falſe Prophets do, of his own head, but was ſent as a Meſſenger, Malach. 3. 1. and as an Apoſtle, Heb. 3. 1. whence ſome think, that the Name Shiloh ſignifieth ἀπεςαλμένος, or as the vulg. Lat. hath it qui mittendus eſt, which is the Name of the Meſſiah (b) who was ſent by God by ſuch an authoritative Miſſion, as gave him the fulleſt height of Authority. (c) In S. John's Goſpel Chriſt every where declareth, that he was ſent by the Father, and not ſeldom in the ſenſe of teaching, ſaith Grotius. Who ſeemeth to be ſo far carry'd away with common prejudice, as to ſuppoſe, that our Saviour ſpeaketh of his Miſſion in ſeveral Senſes: But he that can find in Scripture any ſuch ambiguity in the word Miſſion, or that our Saviour had ſeveral Miſſions, will make a great diſcovery. He never ſpeaketh but of one Miſſion, that he had from the Father, and often repreſenteth it as an Apoſtolic kind of Miſſion. Joh. 17. 18. As thou haſt ſent me into the world, ſo have I alſo ſent them into the world. Sometimes he repreſenteth it as a Prophetic kind of Miſſion. Matth. 10. 40, 41. He that receiveth you, receiveth me, and he that receiveth me, receiveth him that ſent me. He that receiveth a Prophet in the name of a Prophet, ſhall receive a Prophet's reward. Prophets that are Founders of a Religion, either really have been, or pretend to have been with God. Amongſt the Heathen Numa and Minos pretended in ſome ſort, to have been with God. And the Pythagoreans ſay (d) It is not eaſie to

(t) Petav. ſupr. l. 8. c. 1.

(u) Sic mitti à Patre Filium, eſt gigni, naturam hominis aſſumpturum & ſuo tempore aſſumentem.

(w) A Patre exire, & venire in hunc mundum, mitti eſt. Gonet. Clyp. T. 5. Diſp. 13. Art. 1. p. 762.

(x) Quare eodem ſenſu interpretari ambo illa ſatius ſit, & ad temporariam miſſionem accommodare. Petav. de Trin. l. 8. c. 1. S. 3.

(y) Com. in Joh. 3. 34.

(z) Qui mandatum aliquod à Deo accipit ad aliquid perferendum, is mitti ab eo dicitur. Ut ſupr. 1. 6. & 3. 17 34. & 5. 36, 38. & 6. 57. & 8. 42. Grot. Not. in Joh. 10. 36.

(a) Ut qui falsò ſibi prophetæ munus arrogant. Jer. 3 21. Grot. Not. in loc. Maldonat. in loc. S. Cyr. in Joan p. 940.

(b) Qui ſumma cùm poteſtate à Deo miſſus eſt. Grot. Not. in Gen. 49. 10.

(c) Chriſtus à Patre ſe miſſum paſſim in hoc libro prædicat, nec rarò in illo ſenſu docendi. Idem Not. in Joh. 17. 18.

Mittuntur Prophetæ cum mandatum à Deo accipiunt. Grot. Not. in Joh. 1. 6.

(d) Jambl. de vit. Pythag c. 28.

know what pleaſeth God ἂν μὴ τις ἢ θεῶν ἀκούσῃ, unleſs one either heareth the Gods, or gaineth the knowledge of it by Divination. Moſes the Founder of the Jews Religion was really with God upon Mount Sinai. (e) Muhammed pretendeth, that he was commanded by the Angel Gabriel, to travel up into Heaven, to ſpeak with God Almighty, that this Angel conducted him through Seven Heavens, and that at length he arriv'd at the Preſence of God, from whom he receiv'd his Law, and who conferr'd upon him certain wonderful Prerogatives. Agreeably to the pretended or true Prophets the Evangeliſt ſaith of our Bleſſed Saviour, the Word was with God. Who if he was in a proper ſenſe an Eye and Ear-witneſs of the things in Heaven, if he did ſee God, converſe with him, hear his voice, had his words from him, was taught by him what he ſhould ſpeak, receiv'd a certain Doctrine and Commandments from him (as himſelf ſaith) then he had a Prophetic Miſſion from his being with God in Heaven, which is only competible to his Humane-divine Perſon, not to an Abſtract Logos. On the other hand, if he had a Prophetic Miſſion from being with God in Heaven, then in a proper ſenſe of the words he was an Eye and Ear-witneſs of the things in Heaven, did ſee God and converſe with him, heard his voice, had his words from him, was taught by him what he ſhould ſpeak, receiv'd a certain Doctrine and Commandment from him, and conſequently thoſe numerous Texts of Scripture that ſpeak of theſe matters, muſt be underſtood of his Humane-divine Perſon, and not of an Abſtract Logos, to whom they are unapplicable. His divine Diſcourſes touching theſe matters prove his Prophetic Miſſion from being with God in Heaven; and his Prophetic Miſſion proveth the true ſenſe of his Words (that they muſt be underſtood in a proper ſenſe) which inferreth, that it was his Humane-divine Perſon that was ſent from being with God in Heaven. Joh. 17. 3. This is life eternal, that they might know thee the only true God, and Jeſus Chriſt whom thou haſt ſent. (f) Ut me cognoſcant ut Legatum tuum (Legatum à latere) which ſpeaketh our Saviour, to have had a Prophetic Miſſion from being with God in Heaven. And is there any thing more certain, than that our Saviour as a divine Prophet and Legate brought with him from God his Credentials and the Atteſtations of his Miſſion? The works which my Father hath given me to do, do bear witneſs of me, that the Father hath ſent me. Joh. 5. 36. If I bear witneſs of my ſelf, my witneſs is not true (it is not creditable, no valid proof, nor obligeth any Man to believe it) there is another that beareth witneſs of me. Joh. 5. 31, 32. Our Saviour proved his Miſſion, as a Prophet is oblig'd to do; therefore his Miſſion was the Prophetic kind of Miſſion.

V. The Doctrine of the Scholaſtic Theology touching our Saviour's Miſſion is ſo various, uncertain and inconſiſtent, and ſuch a blunder'd confounded buſineſs, that I will not undertake, either to repreſent or refute the whole of it; but will content my ſelf to remark ſome few of its inconſiſtences. The generality of Scholaſtic Divines do not ſcruple to apply the term Miſſion to the Abſtract Logos; but becauſe Miſſion implieth ſome change of place, Gr. Nyſſen ſaith of this ſecond Perſon of the Scholaſtic Trinity (g) οὐκ ἂν εἰκότως πέμπεσθαι λέγοιτο, he cannot rightly be ſaid to be ſent. So other Scholaſtic Divines ſay, Filius non ſecundum deitatem à Patre miſſus eſt. And S. Chryſoſtom asketh, why doth our Saviour ſay, that he was ſent? To which he anſwereth, παχύτερα λέγει, he ſpeaketh the craſſer ſort of things, which is a very courſe Complement to our Saviour. But to this fine paſs Scholaſticiſm hath reduc'd the Theory of our Saviour's Miſſion, at this rate that Theology muſt be ſaid to interpret his divine Diſcourſes; for even ſuch Scholaſtic Divines who do not ſcruple to apply the term Miſſion to the Abſtract Son (or the Son according to his Deity) yet ſuppoſe (and it is one of their fundamental Maxims) that in his Nature from Eternity he hath all that the Father hath, and receiv'd nothing from the Father ſave only what he receiv'd in the eternal Generation; and therefore could not receive in time a certain Doctrine, Mandate, Miſſion or Commiſſion from him, nor an Authority and officiary Dignity. They ſuppoſe (h) that the Miſſion of the Son as to the Subſtance of it (or the Action it ſelf) was not any thing done in Time, but was from Eternity, yet ſo as that the Miſſion was not complete and perfect until a temporary Generation. But why then are we told of the Abſtract Son (i) that he undertook to execute a Commiſſion in our Fleſh? For the undertaking this Commiſſion importeth a receiving from the Father a certain Doctrine, Mandate, Authority and officiary Dignity, and that in time; for the undertaking this Commiſſion could not be from Eternity. And becauſe this undertaking to execute a Commiſſion, neceſſarily belongeth to the Miſſion of Chriſt and is eſſential thereto, therefore it is deſtructive to his Miſſion from Eternity. For it cannot be ſuppoſed, that in his eternal Generation he undertook to aſſume the Humane Nature and the officiary Dignity of being the Meſſiah; or that he heard and ſaw thoſe things, which our Saviour teſtify'd, and undertook to teſtifie them, to ſpeak to the World thoſe things which he heard of God, and to finiſh the Work that God gave him to do. He did not undertake to execute a Commiſſion in the Generation that he is ſuppos'd to have had from Eternity; therefore in that Generation he did not receive the Goſpel from the Boſom of the Father; and if the Abſtract Son did not then receive it, he could not receive it afterwards; therefore it is only the Humane-divine Perſon of Chriſt that receiv'd the Goſpel from the Boſom of the Father.

As in ſeveral other Inſtances touching our Saviour's Miſſion, ſo in the Interpretation of Scripture there is an Inconſiſtence in the Scholaſtic Theology. For many of thoſe places of Scripture which the Fathers generally interpret, to be meant of our Saviour's Divine Nature ſo called in this Theology (interpreting them agreeably to their Scholaſticiſm) modern Scholaſtic Divines ſuppoſe rather to be meant of his Humane Nature; and theſe are ſuch modern Scholaſtic Divines, that are ſworn to interpret Scripture according to the conſent of the Fathers. Joh. 5. 19, 20. The Son can do nothing of himſelf, but what he ſeeth the Father do: For what things ſoever he doeth, theſe

(e) Dr. H. More Myſt. of Godl. B. 5. c. 9.

(f) Grot. Not. in loc.

(g) Petav. de Trin. l. 8. c. 1. S. 4, 6.

(h) Ibid. S. 10.

(i) Mr. Thorndike Epil. B. 2. c. 17. p. 120.

theſe alſo doeth the Son likewiſe. For the Father loveth the Son, and ſheweth him all things that himſelf doeth ; and he will ſhew him greater works than theſe. Of theſe Words a Scholaſtic Divine ſaith (k) They ſeem properly to relate to Chriſt as Man. For the Father was not about to ſhew unto him any thing new, ſave only as he was Man. The judiciary power and function ſpoken of in the following words (the Father judgeth no Man, but hath committed all Judgment unto the Son) cannot fitly be ſaid, to be communicated to the Word or to Chriſt, as he is God, but as Man. So Joh. 8. 28, 29. As my Father hath taught me, I ſpeak theſe things ; and he hath not left me alone, for I do always thoſe things that pleaſe him. Joh. 6. 38. I came down from heaven, not to do mine own will, but the will of him that ſent me. Quæ omnia & his ſimilia in humanam naturam congruunt. All which and ſuch like belong to the Humane Nature. It cannot be ſuppos'd, that when our Saviour was in Heaven, God did ſhew things, teach things, commit all judgment to the humane Nature, unleſs the humane Nature was in Heaven. And if theſe and the like places muſt be underſtood of Chriſt as Man, they muſt be underſtood, to ſpeak of his Miſſion as Man, and of his temporary Miſſion to preach the Goſpel, in preaching which Chriſt muſt be ſaid, to ſpeak thoſe things, which the Father had taught him as Man ; which plainly implieth and inferreth, that it was not an Abſtract Logos, but the Humane-divine Perſon of Chriſt, that receiv'd and brought the Goſpel from God (the Boſom of the Father) and had his Miſſion and Commiſſion from being with God. The ſame Inference may be made from the Diſcourſes of other Scholaſtic Divines. Joh. 8. 28. I do nothing of my ſelf, but as my Father hath taught me, I ſpeak theſe things. (l) Summa eſt, debere hoc de Chriſto intelligi, quatenus homo eſt. The ſummary of what we ſay of this place, is, it muſt be underſtood of Chriſt as Man. It is the Humane-divine Perſon of Chriſt therefore (not an Abſtract Logos) that receiv'd the Goſpel from God in Heaven, that proceeded forth and came from God, did come, and was ſent into the World, as we have before inferr'd from (m) a late Expoſitor. 1 Tim. 1. 15. Jeſus Chriſt came into the world. Joh. 11. 27. Thou art Chriſt the Son of God, that cometh into the world. Joh. 17. 3. Jeſus Chriſt whom thou haſt ſent. Joh. 10. 36. Whom the Father hath ſanctified and ſent into the world. Joh. 6. 27. The Son of Man whom God the Father hath ſealed. It was the Perſon of Chriſt Jeſus, the Perſon of the Son of Man (which an Abſtract Logos is not) whom God ſanctified, ſealed and ſent.

VI. From the Logos that came down from Heaven we may with great certainty determine, whether the Logos that was with God in Heaven, was an Abſtract Logos or not. For the only Logos that came down from Heaven, is the Humane-divine Perſon of Chriſt. Expoſitors that follow the Scholaſtic Theology, are ſometimes willing to expound our Saviour's deſcent from Heaven figuratively (at the ſame rate that they expound his Divine Diſcourſes before mention'd ;) for theſe words he that came down from Heaven, Joh. 3. 13. are interpreted to mean qui ſingulari Dei dono nobis conceſſus eſt, who is granted us by the ſingular Gift of God. I came down from Heaven, Joh. 6. 38. is thus expounded, à Patre ſingulariter miſſus ſum, I am ſingularly ſent by (or from) the Father. Theſe are the Expoſitions of Grotius, and in this method of expounding he goeth on a great way: But at length he findeth, that this figurative kind of expounding will not do, that our Saviour's words are too expreſs and full, to admit of any ſuch kind of Expoſition, and therefore he betaketh himſelf to the uſual Scholaſtic method of expounding them. Joh. 6. 62. What and if ye ſhall ſee the Son of Man aſcend up, where he was before? (n) That is (ſaith he) into Heaven, where the Logos was before, when he was with God. For Heaven is the Region of God. Chriſt attributeth to himſelf what belongeth to the (Abſtract) Logos. So the Scholaſtic Theology interpreteth both our Saviour's being in Heaven and coming down from Heaven ; and it appeareth to miſunderſtand the former by its apparent miſunderſtanding the latter. For by Union of his inviſible Divine Nature (ſo called in this Theology) to humane viſible Nature he is ſaid to have deſcended from Heaven. The Scholaſtic Incarnation (as this Theology ſuppoſeth) is meant by his coming down from Heaven. Which is a making our Saviour to ſpeak altogether unintelligibly in a point, which moſt nearly concern'd his Meſſias-ſhip, and wherein he was concern'd, to ſpeak moſt clearly and intelligibly to his Hearers. It is a making his words to ſignifie, what they do not ſignifie nor any thing like it. For the Scholaſtic Union of the Divine Nature with the Humane is not any ſuch thing, as all Men mean, when they ſpeak of a Perſon's deſcending from Heaven : As the Union of the Humane Nature with the Divine is not any ſuch thing, as all Men mean by a Perſon's aſcending to Heaven. The Scholaſtic Incarnation may as juſtly be called our Saviour's aſcent to Heaven, as his deſcent from Heaven ; for becauſe of the Hypoſtatical Union (o) the Man Chriſt was in Heaven, and is ſaid, to have aſcended into Heaven (as Scholaſtic Divines ſay ;) and if by his Incarnation ſecundum aliquid ſui he deſcended on Earth, he as much ſecundum aliquid ſui, aſcended to Heaven. The Scholaſtic Divines diſcourſe alſo (p) that the Divine Nature (the Abſtract Logos) is in all places, doth not change place, and cannot properly aſcend and deſcend ; that our Saviour is ſaid, to have deſcended from Heaven, becauſe though he was in Earth before (as well as in Heaven) yet he did not appear, was not ſeen, but having aſſum'd the Humane Nature cœptus eſt repente in terris videri, perinde ac ſi de cœlo deſcendiſſet, he began preſently to be ſeen on Earth, as if he had deſcended from Heaven. (q) By aſſuming the Humane Nature he as it were deſcended from Heaven to the Earth, that is, he as it were relinguiſh'd the heavenly Glory. Thus our Saviour's coming down from Heaven ſo frequently and earneſtly inſiſted on by him is in this untoward Scholaſtic Theology dwindled into a quaſi deſcendit. And whereas our Saviour mentioneth it as the greateſt thing imaginable, this Theology ſaith (r) It ſeemeth ſublime,

---

(k) Petav. ſupr. l. 2. c. 4. S. 9.

(l) Maldonat. in loc.

(m) Dr. Ham.

(n) In cœlum, ubi ante fuit ὁ Λόγος, cùm eſſet πρὸς τὸν Θεόν. Supra 1. 1. Nam Dei regio cœlum. Tribuit Chriſtus ſibi quòd τῷ Λόγῳ convenit.

(o) Homo ille Chriſtus in cœlo fuit, in cœlum dicitur aſcendiſſe. V. Maldonat. in Joh. 3. 13.

(p) Petav. de Trin. l. 8. c. 1. S. 4. Maldonat. ſupr.

(q) Aſſumendo naturam humanam quaſi è cœlo in terram deſcendit, hoc eſt, cœleſti gloriæ ſe quaſi abdicavit. Piſcator in Joh. 3. 13.

(r) S. Chryſoſt. in Joh. Hom. 27.

ſublime, but is very unworthy of his Magnificence; for he is not in Heaven only, but every where and filleth all. An Abſtract Logos indeed would be much better repreſented as filling Heaven and Earth by the immenſity of his Eſſence, than as coming down from Heaven: But this is an Argument, that the Divine Perſon which came down from Heaven, was not the Abſtract Logos, but the Evangelical Logos, the Perſon of the Meſſiah in his Offices. And if this is not demonſtrable from Holy Scripture, I deſpair of underſtanding a Demonſtration.

VII. In the Sixth Chapter of our Evangeliſt's Goſpel our Saviour's coming down from Heaven is ſpoken of no leſs than ten times, and ſix times he is intituled that Bread which came down from Heaven, the true Bread from Heaven, the Bread of God which cometh down from Heaven, the living (or vivific) Bread, the Bread of Life that cometh down from Heaven, and giveth Life unto the World. Our Saviour diſcourſeth of the Iſraelites Manna as a Type and but a fore-ſhadowing Type of himſelf (of Chriſt and him crucify'd) and there is great correſpondence between the Type and the Antitype. For Chriſt ſetteth forth his Office under the Emblem of Food to us, which is vital and vivific, and there is no living without it. As Manna was the Food of bodily Life to the Iſraelites, came down from the aerial Heaven, was a celeſtial bodily Food (noble Food (r) ſaith the Jewiſh Arab:) So Chriſt is originally and of Kind and Quality celeſtial Food to us, the Food of Life (or the Bread of Life) to the World, as being the Gift and Benefit of Life Eternal unto Men. Manna was Bread, Bread is an Emblem and Symbol of the Body, that Bread ſignify'd Chriſt's Body, which given in Sacrifice is to us the Food and Bread of Life; for ſo our Saviour's Sayings mean (s) τεθνήξεται ὁ θάνατος ἐν θανάτῳ τῷ ἐμῷ, Death ſhall die in my death. (t) Manna was at firſt unknown to the Iſraelites, was freely given by God (provided and prepar'd without their Labour) was of a ſweet and pleaſant taſt, white in colour, of equal diſtribution and plenteouſly diſtributed; in all which reſpects it reſembled Chriſt. Before it was eaten, it was bray'd in a Mortar or broken in a Mill; and ſo Chriſt our heavenly Manna was broken upon the Croſs. And as Manna was given only in the Wilderneſs, and ceaſed ſo ſoon as the Iſraelites came to the Land of Promiſe: So is Chriſt our Spritual Food in the Euchariſt, ſo long as we travel in the Wilderneſs of the World, but when we ſhall arrive in the heavenly Canaan, we ſhall have no more need of Sacraments. From which account of the marvellous correſpondence between Chriſt and Manna it appeareth, that Manna was a Type, not of an Abſtract Logos, nor of this Logos as united to an Humane Nature, but of Chriſt in his officiary Dignity (of the Meſſias-ſhip) who as ſuch is our heavenly Manna, and as ſuch came down from Heaven. As he is that Bread, the true Bread, the Bread of God, the Bread of Life, the living (or vivific) Bread, that Bread of Life that giveth Life to the World, he came down from Heaven. As Chriſt therefore in his ſaving Office (or Offices) he came down from Heaven. It is the complex Perſon of Chriſt and this complex Perſon in his ſaving Office that is the Antitype to Manna; as ſuch therefore he came down from Heaven. Chriſt is the Antitype to Manna, as it did literally and properly come down from Heaven; Chriſt therefore did properly come down from Heaven: But neither an Abſtract Logos, nor the Humane Nature of Chriſt as united to the Scholaſtic Logos did properly come down from Heaven. The Jews murmur'd at our Saviour for ſaying, he came down from Heaven, when he had a Father and Mother here upon Earth. Joh. 6. 41, 42. They ſuppos'd therefore this to be our Saviour's meaning, that literally and properly he came down from Heaven. And our Saviour doth not at all find fault with them for miſtaking his Senſe, but on the contrary, he plainly telleth them, V. 46. that he which is of God hath ſeen the Father, and therefore had been with God in Heaven. He only findeth fault with the Jews for not believing his coming down from Heaven, which he accounteth the ſame thing as their not believing his officiary Dignity of the Meſſiah, V. 44, 45. Our Saviour therefore aſſerteth and teacheth, that he the Meſſiah in his officiary Dignity did come down from Heaven, and that his coming down from Heaven and his being the Meſſiah in his officiary Dignity is the ſame thing. But an Abſtract Logos is not ſo much as the Perſon of Chriſt or the Meſſiah; this therefore is not he that came down from Heaven.

Some obſerving that the Scholaſtic Theology cannot tolerably well expound thoſe places of Scripture, that ſpeak of our Saviour's deſcending from Heaven, becauſe they manifeſtly ſpeak of a local deſcending, have endeavour'd to infer from them (u) the Pre-exiſtence of the Soul of the Meſſiah, as ſuppoſing that they imply the local deſcending of our Saviour's Soul from Heaven. But although the Theory of the Præ-exiſtence of Souls is probable enough, yet the local deſcent of our Saviour's Soul from Heaven (as Præ-exiſtence implieth) is no more than the local deſcent of an Angel from Heaven; which is a trivial buſineſs in compariſon of our Saviour's coming down from Heaven, whereby he meaneth nothing leſs than his Meſſias-ſhip, his being by officiary Dignity the holy imperial Lord the Son, his coming to us with his divine Authority and his divine ſaving Office. For to be the true Bread that cometh down from Heaven and giveth Life to the World, what is it, but to be by officiary Dignity the Meſſias, the Saviour of the World and the Saviour-king of the holy Empire? His coming down from Heaven therefore importeth nothing leſs than his Divinity or Deity of Perſon as to officiary Dignity. (w) Veniendo enim inde, unde homo venire non poteſt, Deum ſe oſtendit veniſſe. So an ancient Writer argueth; and there had been no flaw in his Argument, if he had added this due Explication; by coming from thence, whence Man cannot come, he ſheweth himſelf, to be God that came, as being the imperial Son of God; ſo that he ought to be look'd upon as God manifeſt in the Fleſh. Not but that an Angel may come down from Heaven: But he cometh not down as an imperial Potentate. If any one cometh down from Heaven as an imperial Potentate, he must

(r) Dr. Ham. on Pſal. 78. Not. e.

(s) S. Cyr. in Joh. p. 353.

(t) Mr. Mede on 1 Cor. 10. 3, 4, 5.

(u) Dr. H. More Myſt. of Godl. B. 1. c. 8.

(w) Novatian. de Trin. c. 23.

muſt be a divine and heavenly imperial Potentate, of Creature-tranſcendent Condition and of the Godhead. Our Saviour's coming down from Heaven therefore ſignifieth nothing leſs than his Deity of Perſon, which is alſo ſignified by other Phraſes of like Nature. For he that is of God, Joh. 6. 46. He that is from above, Joh. 8. 23. He that came forth from the Father, Joh. 16. 28. He whom the Father hath ſanctify'd and ſent into the world, Joh. 10. 36. As the Lord Meſſiah, or as the Lord from Heaven, is neceſſarily of Creature-tranſcendent Condition. But ſeeing our Saviour came down from Heaven by a local deſcent and as the Lord Meſſiah in his officiary Dignity (as the Bread of Life to the World) therefore it was the Humane-divine Perſon of the Meſſiah, that came down from Heaven. And this is the true deſcenſus Dei venerabilis ad humanæ ſervationis (ἀνθρωπίνης σωτηρίας) rerumque mortalium gratiam, as Chalcidius ſpeaketh. In this ſenſe Arnobius might truly ſay of Chriſt (x) Deus ille ſublimis fuit, Deus radice ab intima, Deus ab incognitis regnis, & ab omnium principe Deus ſoſpitator eſt miſſus.

VIII. A Scholaſtic Divine of good Note ſaith of our Saviour (y) that by coming down from Heaven he meaneth that he undertook ſo long and laborious a Journey, not that he might do his own but his Fathers Will. If by deſcending from Heaven he meaneth a long and laborious Journey, then he meaneth by it a local deſcending, which is incompetible to an Abſtract Logos, who by any local deſcent that can be aſcrib'd to him is but where he was before; nor is it reaſonable, to ſuppoſe, that he can be out of Heaven any more than God the Father can be; nor can he be ſaid, to come forth from the Father, that is always alike inſeparate and indiſtant from the Father. Of thoſe Words of our Saviour that he came not to do his own Will, but the Will of him that ſent him; this Scholaſtic ſaith (z) Chriſt ſeemeth, to ſpeak as Man, when he ſaith, that he was ſent by the Father, and when he ſpeaketh of his not doing his own, which is the Humane Will, but that of the Father which is the Divine Will. Another eminent Scholaſtic Divine ſaith of theſe Words I came down from Heaven, not to do mine own Will, but the Will of him that ſent me (a) they belong to the Humane Nature. So the Alexandrian Cyril expoundeth theſe Words, and S. Auſtin (b) interpreteth them to ſignifie Chriſt's Humility and Obedience, which was the ſubjecting his own Will to the Will of his Father. The Words imply therefore, that in Chriſt when he deſcended from Heaven, there was a twofold Will, which cannot be in the Abſtract Logos or the Second Perſon of the Scholaſtic Trinity (c) who hath not any diſtinct Will from the Will of the Father, nor is he obedient to the Father, as the Scholaſtic Theology commonly ſuppoſeth. And ſo his Words (I came down from Heaven, not to do mine own Will, but the Will of him that ſent me) are by a Party of Scholaſtic Theologers expounded to ſignifie, I have no Will diſtinct from the Will of the Father. Which is a making our Saviour's Words not tolerable Senſe, a deſtroying the Emphaſis that is in theſe Words him that ſent me, a deſtroying our Saviour's Characters of his divine Humility, Obedience and Reſignation of his own Will; and theſe Expoſitors might as well expound at the ſame rate his Words at the time of his Paſſion (d) not my Will, but thine be done. Is it poſſible, that an ordinary Underſtanding can miſtake the Senſe of theſe plain Words, Joh. 5. 30. My judgment is juſt, becauſe I ſeek not mine own will, but the will of the Father which hath ſent me? (e) Our Saviour ſo apparently ſpeaketh, of his Humane Will, of his Divine Virtue, of the origin of Sin (our own Will) of the Rule of Righteouſneſs (the Will of God) and of the formal Nature of Sin (diſobedience to the Will of God,) that he cannot reaſonably be thought to mean (according to the Hypotheſis of the Scholaſtic Trinity) that he had no Will diſtinct from the Father. But thus the Scriptures are diſtorted, to ſerve an Hypotheſis. A like inſtance whereto we have in an Interpretation of our Saviour's coming forth from the Father, Joh. 16. 28. His coming forth from the Father muſt be anſwerable to his return to the Father (f) as ſome of the principal Scholaſtic Divines acknowledge. But the moſt that are of this Sentiment, thus deſtroy the Congruity of it. (g) Our Saviour in his aſcent was Man, but in his deſcent he was God only: Whence his aſcent was a change of place, but in his deſcent there was no change of place; which quite ſpoileth the Congruity between his coming forth from the Father and his return to the Father. If this is a groſs Incongruity, it muſt be ſuppos'd, that as his Humane-divine Perſon aſcended into Heaven, ſo it was his Humane-divine Perſon, that came down from Heaven. As it was the Perſon of the Meſſiah (not an Abſtract Logos) that return'd to God: So it was the Perſon of the Meſſiah, that came from God.

IX. Our Saviour's coming down from Heaven is the ſame thing with his coming into the World (Joh. 16. 28.) which was not his Bethlehemitical Nativity, but his manifeſtation to the World in his Office. Whence it appeareth, that it was the Perſon of Chriſt in his Office, that came down from Heaven, and that his coming down from Heaven was the ſame thing with his Miſſion. (h) De cœlo miſſus à Patre eſt. The Bread from Heaven (i) à ſolo Deo datus, id eſt, miſſus eſt. He was ſent from being in Heaven, and as every one that is ſent, is ſent in his Office, ſo the Lord Meſſiah was ſent in his ſaving Office, and this muſt neceſſarily be his meaning, when he ſaith, This is the Father's Will which hath ſent me, that of all which he hath given me I ſhould loſe nothing, but ſhould raiſe it up at the laſt day. He that heareth my word and believeth on him that ſent me, hath everlaſting life. The Father himſelf which hath ſent me, hath born witneſs of me. My doctrine is not mine, (x) Adv. Gent. l. 1. p. 32.

(y) Quod dicit ſe de cælo deſcendiſſe, hanc habet Emphaſin, ut ſignificet ſe tam longum & tam laborioſum ſibi iter non ſuſcepiſſe, ut ſuam ſed ut Patris faceret voluntatem. Maldonat. in Joh. 6. 38.

(z) Videtur ut homo loqui, cum ſe dicat à Patre miſſum. ——Chriſtum tanquam hominem locutum eſſe, cùm dixit, ſe non ſuam, id eſt humanam, ſed Patris, id eſt, divinam facere voluntatem. Idem ibid.

(a) Petav. de Trin. l. 2. c. 4. S. 9.

(b) In Joan Tr. 25. contr. Ser. Arian. c. 7.

(c) Petav. T. 4. l. 9. S. 3.

(d) Petav. T. 4. l. 9. c. 6 S. 8.

(e) Maldonat. in loc.

(f) Petav. de Trin. l. 8. c. 1. S. 3.

(g) Quod autem ait ſe de cælo deſcendiſſe, rectè intelligendum eſt. Neque enim ita deſcendit, ut cælum reliquerit, & locum mutârit: Sed ut in terra naturam humanam aſſumſerit, atque Deus in carne manifeſtatus ſit. Ubi obſervandum, aliam eſſe rationem aſcenſionis Domini in cælum. Etenim aſcendit in cælum ita ut mundum reliquerit, ac proinde locum mutârit ſecundum humanam naturam. Hujus diverſitatis ratio eſt diverſa ratio perſonæ, de qua utrumque dicitur. Nam quum illa de cælo deſcendit, tantum erat Deus: quum autem aſcendit, erat etiam homo. Piſcat. in Joh. 6. 33.

(h) Novatian. de Trin. c. 23.

(i) Maldonat. in Joh. 6. 32.

but his that ſent me. He that ſeeketh his Glory that ſent him, the ſame is true. My Meat is to do the Will of him that ſent me, and to finiſh his Work. I muſt work the Works of him that ſent me. Our Evangeliſt ſaith, 1 Joh. 4. 9, 14. God ſent his only begotten Son into the World, that we might live through him. We have ſeen and do teſtifie, that the Father ſent the Son, to be the Saviour of the World. It could be no other than the Perſon of Chriſt (which an Abſtract Logos is not) that was ſent in his ſaving Office, nor could any other be ſanctified and ſent into the World, Joh. 10. 36. For to be ſanctified (in this place) is to be made by officiary dignity the holy One of God (the Chriſt of God) which is incompetible to an Abſtract Logos. When our Saviour ſaith, Joh. 5. 22, 23. The Father judgeth no Man, but hath committed all Judgment to the Son: that all Men ſhould honour the Son even as they honour the Father. He that honoureth not the Son, honoureth not the Father which hath ſent him. His words imply, that when the Father ſent the Son, he committed all Judgment to him, and conſequently ſent him in his officiary dignity of the Meſſias-ſhip. So v. 26, 27. As the Father hath life in himſelf, ſo hath he given to the Son, to have life in himſelf; and hath given him authority, to execute Judgment, becauſe he is the Son of Man. Though many different Interpretations are made of theſe words, becauſe he is the Son of Man, yet the Son of Man muſt be ſuppos'd to ſignifie the Humane-divine Perſon of Chriſt, to whom God gave authority, to execute Judgment, and to have life in himſelf (the power of quickening Men to Life Immortal) and theſe Powers were given unto him, when God ſent him (as our Saviour's Diſcourſe implieth, v. 24.) therefore it was the Humane-divine Perſon of the Meſſiah in his officiary dignity, whom God ſent; and if he had his miſſion from being in Heaven, this was the Perſon that came down from Heaven, (k) veniens cum poteſtate planè divinâ. He that receiv'd his miſſion from being with God in Heaven, and therewith an authority, power and ſaving office plainly divine, can be no other than the Humane-divine Perſon of Chriſt ſent down from Heaven.

Agreeably whereto our Saviour ſometimes very plainly ſaith, that the Son of Man came down from Heaven, Joh. 3. 13. No Man hath aſcended up to Heaven, but he that came down from Heaven, even the Son of Man. Joh. 6. 62. What and if ye ſhall ſee the Son of Man aſcend up where he was before? Our Saviour ſpeaketh of his aſcending and deſcending in the ſame Senſe; therefore he ſpeaketh of the local deſcending of his whole Perſon; for in ſuch Senſe he ſpeaketh of his aſcending. Without diſtinction or limitation of Senſe the Son of Man aſcended; therefore without diſtinction or limitation of Senſe the Son of Man deſcended. Our Saviour ſaith, The Son of Man was there before, whither he aſcended; the Scholaſtic Theology ſaith, He was there before only according to his Deity; which is to ſay, he was there before, ſo as not to be there before; he was there before only in a mutilate and partial Senſe; he was there before, ſo as not to be there before as the Son of Man; and our Saviour's Propoſition is not more true than this contrary Propoſition, The Son of Man was not there before. Or rather, it muſt be ſaid, that our Saviour's Propoſition is not ſo true as the contrary; becauſe (according to this Theology) the Son of Man as the Son of Man was not there before. This cannot be the Senſe of our Saviour's words in fair conſtruction; the tenour of the New Teſtament refuteth this Interpretation; and S. Ambroſe thus explodeth it. (l) As if any one was ſent and deſcended except as the Son of Man, as Wiſdom it ſelf hath ſaid: No Man hath aſcended up to Heaven, but he that came down from Heaven, the Son of Man? Therefore, if as the Son of Man he was ſent and deſcended: ſo as the Son of Man he liveth becauſe of the Father. When our Saviour ſaid to his Diſciples, Joh. 16. 28. I came forth from the Father, and am come into the World: again, I leave the World, and go to the Father. The Diſciples ſaid to him again (in the next Verſe) Lo, now ſpeakeſt thou plainly, and ſpeakeſt no Proverb or Parable. They ſuppos'd therefore, that our Saviour's words were clearly and plainly expreſſive, not ſhaded with any obſcurity, no figurative Speech, and that they were to be underſtood in the plain, ordinary and literal Senſe. But they are not ſo to be underſtood, if our Saviour came forth from the Father and came into the World only according to his Scholaſtic Deity and as an Abſtract Logos. For in this conſtruction of them the former part of his words involve in them a grand Figure of the Scholaſtic kind. Whence this part of them muſt be ſuppos'd as dark as the Night, and the other part of them as clear as the Day.

X. Of our Saviour's deſcent from Heaven a Judgment may be made from his Humiliation and Incarnation; who being in the form of God thought it not robbery to be equal with God: but made himſelf of no reputation, and took upon him the form of a Servant, and was made in the likeneſs of Men; And being found in faſhion as a Man, he humbled himſelf, and became obedient unto death, even the death of the Croſs, Phil. 2. 6, 7, 8. From which illuſtrious Text we have proved by an Argument plainly demonſtrative, that the voluntary Humiliation of our Saviour (which was his Incarnation) is by the Apoſtle attributed, not to an Abſtract Logos (or the ſecond Perſon in the Scholaſtic Trinity) but to the Humane-divine Perſon of the Lord Jeſus; that antecedently to this voluntary Humiliation and Incarnation his Humane-divine Perſon was in the form of God; and conſequently this Humane-divine Perſon is the Logos that was with God and the Perſon that came down from Heaven. He leſſen'd himſelf, emptied himſelf, and being rich became poor, 2 Cor. 8. 9. But ſuch a Mutation and Diminution, an Humiliation, Exinanition, and becoming poor, a parting with his Glory and Beatitude (as alſo a properly local Mutation) are things utterly incompetible to the infinite and infinitely perfect, eternal, unchangeable, almighty and all-ſufficient eternal God, and conſequently to the Logos in the Scholaſtic Trinity. All the numerous Arguments whereby we have prov'd our Explication of the Incarnation and diſprov'd the Scholaſtic Notion of it, have place here, and prove, that it was the ſame Humane-divine Perſon of the Lord Jeſus, which aſcended and that deſcended according to that of the Apoſtle, Eph. 4. 10. He that deſcended, is the ſame alſo that aſcended up far above all Heavens.

(k) Grot. Not. in Joh. 3. 31. & c. 5. 33.

(l) Quaſi quis miſſus eſt, atque deſcendit, niſi quaſi Filius hominis, ſicut ipſa ſupra ſapientia dixit. Nemo aſcendit in cœlum, niſi qui de cœlo deſcendit filius hominis? Ergo ſi quaſi filius hominis miſſus eſt atque deſcendit: ita quaſi filius hominis vivit propter Patrem. De Fide l. 4. c. 5.

SECTION IV.

How the Word had his being with God and his being God.

I. ACcording to to the old Rule ἀρχομένȣ δ᾽ ἔργȣ πρόσωπον χρὴ θέμεν τηλαυγὲς, our Evangeliſt maketh the front of his Goſpel magnificent and glorious. For to ſay of the Evangelical Word, He was with God and was God, is in Senſe to ſay, that his Name is God the Word; and that in the ſame Senſe that he is God the Son, he is God the Word, which is our Evangeliſt's ſecond Perſon of the Chriſtian Trinity, 1 Joh. 5. 7. His being with God and his being God manifeſtly ſpeaketh his Divinity (or Deity) of Perſon and Creature-tranſcendency of Condition, which is not any thing leſs or more than his being the Imperial Son of God, which is the Idea of our Saviour. And this is that which the Evangeliſt deſign'd to ſignifie in the entrance of his Proem; for in ſaying, that the Word was with God and was God, he ſignifieth, that the Word was with God as a Perſon of the Godhead belonging to that Imperial Eſtate, of it and in it as the Imperial Son thereof. In ſaying that the Word was God, he deſigneth alſo to ſignifie his Deiformity (that he was in the form of God) which was his State oppoſite and antecedent to his being by voluntary Humiliation Humane Fleſh. The Evangeliſt alſo in the Front of the New Teſtament ſaith, that the Word was God, with deſign to ſignifie, that he is the Deity of the New Teſtament and of the New Teſtament-Creation. And his ſaying, that He was God, ſo as to be with God, implieth, that he is no Extrinſic Heterouſian (ſuch a Deity as the Arians imagin'd) but that his Deity conſiſteth in being a Perſon of his Father's Godhead. By the ſame means therefore and from the ſame origin he had his being with God and his being God in the Evangeliſt's Senſe.

His being with God and his being God muſt be conſider'd as a neceſſary Qualification for his Meſſias-ſhip. For without Divinity and Creature-tranſcendency of Perſon in his primary Capacity he could not be qualify'd for Divinity and Creature-tranſcendency in his officiary Capacity; not for the ſaving Office, the Lordſhip and Sovereignty, the Imperial Authority and Government of the Lord Meſſiah. If he had not been The Imperial Son (the Lord the Son) in his primary Capacity, he could not have been The Imperial Son in his officiary Capacity. Without being with God and being God he could not have been the Evangelical Word, the Life and Light of Men, not the Celeſtial Prophet, the great High Prieſt, the Divine Imperial Prince and Potentate. This being with God and being God in his primary Capacity was the neceſſary Qualification for his Meſſias-ſhip: but therefore it was not deſign'd, to be his permanent condition, but his being with God and his being God in his Meſſias-ſhip was deſign'd to be his permanent condition, and was accordingly the reward of his Obedience and Sufferings.

His being with God and his being God muſt be conſider'd as a neceſſary antecedent to his Miſſion, voluntary Humiliation and Incarnation, without which he could not have exercis'd and expreſs'd his ſtupendious Humility and Self-abaſement, Obedience and Patience, Self-denial and amazing Love to us (that ought at the deepeſt rate to affect, and at the higheſt rate to enraviſh and ingage our Souls) in parting with his Celeſtial Beatitude and Glory for the form of a Servant and the ignominy of the Croſs, the contradiction of Sinners and the heavieſt load of Sufferings. Nor without his being with God and being God, could God the Father have exercis'd and expreſs'd a marvellous immenſity of love to us in ſending his only begotten Son into the World, that we might live through him, 1 Joh. 4. 9, 10. Which ſending his only begotten Son into the World was not at our Saviour's Birth, but at his Miſſion, of which this Evangelical Proem is an Hiſtory.

II. Our Evangeliſt in writing his Proem deſign'd not to treat of our Saviour's Generation; for which reaſon he hath not taught nor related, whence or how the Word had his being with and his being God. But although he hath overlook'd that which he counted not his Buſineſs, yet he manifeſtly repreſenteth the Word's being with God and his being God as natively and generatively belonging to him; for the Senſe of his Proem is, that the Word was with God and was God, when his miſſive œconomy did commence; and the ſame Divine Perſon that in the entrance of his Proem he ſtileth The Word that was with God, within the compaſs of a few Verſes he ſtileth The only begotten Son of God that was in the Boſom of the Father. The Word therefore had his being with God and his being God natively and generatively, and conſequently not by the Arians Effection or Creation (which cannot be ſuppos'd a proper Generation) but either by the Scholaſtic Eternal Generation or by his Humane-Divine Generation. Of the Eternal Generation ſo many great things have been diſcours'd already, that it may ſeem unneceſſary to ſay any thing more of it: but for the winding up our Diſcourſes about it, we will annex an Argument (before diſcours'd of) that is plain and obvious, but of certitude plainly Mathematical.

> A Perſon that is eſſentially in his conſtitutive Nature and Eſſence, a complex Perſon, and a Perſon that is not eſſentially in his conſtitutive Nature and Eſſence a complex Perſon, are not the ſame Perſon. The Perſon of Chriſt is eſſentially in his conſtitutive Nature and Eſſence a complex Perſon: The Perſon of an Abſtract Eternal Logos is a Perſon, that is not eſſentially in his conſtitutive Nature and Eſſence a complex Perſon. Theſe therefore are not the ſame Perſon.

This Argument aſcertaineth our Idea of The Son of God, of his Incarnation, of his Creation, and our Interpretation of the Evangeliſt's Proem. And all theſe great things are alſo aſcertain'd by that Doctrine, which we have before called One demonſtrated Rule for the Interpretation of the New Teſtament: whereby it appeareth, that the Humane-divine Perſon of Chriſt was in the form of God antecedently to his voluntary Humiliation and Incarnation, which ought not to be attributed to any Abſtract Eternal Logos, but to the Humane-divine Perſon of the Lord Jeſus. In like manner, that being with God and being God which our Evangeliſt ſpeaketh of, is not to be attributed to any Abſtract Eternal Word, but to the Humane-divine Perſon of the Evangelical Word, who had his being with God and his being God natively and generatively (by his Humane-divine Generation) as the completion and termination of his generative and the beginning of his miſſive œconomy.

III. For in a Generation there is a Proceſs to the Completion and Termination thereof, which is the Being or Perſon generated in full Eſtate. As the generation of a young Lion or Eagle proceedeth to a Lion and Eagle in full Eſtate ſuch. In the generation of a Man-child or a Female there is a Proceſs to a Man and a Woman of full Eſtate ſuch. So the generation of a Child that is a Son and Heir proceedeth. And as in Nature ſo in Grace, there is the ſame Proceſs in the generation of a Regenerate Chriſtian, and in like manner in the generation of the Son of God there is a Proceſs to the Son of God in full Eſtate ſuch. Scholaſtic Divines ſay, that our Saviour's Humility and Exinanition is to be admir'd, (m) ſeeing in his aſſumed Nature, inſtantly from his Conception and Nativity, he could have ſhew'd a ſhining Divine Majeſty and Glory, as he did in his Transfiguration and after his Aſcenſion, ſo that he had been ſubject to no Infirmities. We may not ſubſcribe to ſuch Sayings as theſe, that are contrary to the nature of things; for he that is born The Son of God and the Son of Man (Deus-homo) muſt be ſo in various degrees (as we are Men in various degrees) in the degree of Inchoation, Progreſſion and Completion. But they that ſay ſuch things as theſe, will allow me, to ſay, that in the completion of his Generation (or generative œconomy) he could ſhew his Divine Majeſty and Glory, and therefore could ſubſiſt in the form of God (or the form of the Son of God) his exteriour Deiformity. This might be done; and if we conſider the Proceſs of things in Generation, we may pronounce, that this muſt be done; for being generated God-man, he muſt neceſſarily in the completion of his Generation be the Son of God in full Eſtate as well as the Son of Man in full Eſtate, and muſt ſubſiſt in the Form of God as well as in the Form of Man. He muſt as neceſſarily ſubſiſt in the form of God, as we ſubſiſt in the form of Men; or as ſince his aſcenſion he retaineth the Humane Nature, yet ſubſiſteth in the Form of God, carrieth the Name and Title, the Port, and State, and Majeſty of God, and is attended and ador'd as God. His generative œconomy (as to his Perſon) cannot be completed but by his ſubſiſting in the Form of God (ſo that his Body of Humane Fleſh muſt be chang'd into an Heavenly and Divine Body;) and if he ſo ſubſiſteth, he cannot be an Inhabitant of this lower World, but of the Kingdom of Glory and muſt be with God in Heaven. His Generation is of like nature with our Regeneration; and as when the œconomy of our Regeneration is completed and finiſh'd, we have our Deiformity (exteriour) and are removed from Earth to Heaven: So when his generative œconomy was completed and finiſh'd, he ſubſiſted in his Imperial-perſonal Deiformity (exteriour) and removed from Earth to Heaven. We cannot have the whole of our Regeneration, unleſs we have our exteriour Deiformity and aſcend into Heaven: nor could he have the whole of his Generation without ſubſiſting in his Deiformity and being with God in Heaven. His Generation in his primary Capacity may be illuſtrated from his Generation in his Officiary Capacity; for as his Generation in his Officiary Capacity was the raiſing him to his Heavenly Glory and Beatitude: So the completion and termination of his generative œconomy in his primary Capacity was his ſubſiſting in the form of God and his being in Heaven with God.

According to our Idea it is Deity of Perſon (a Filial Deity of Perſon) to be the Son of God; it is to be the Filial Lord, Prince and Potentate Creature-tranſcendent, the Filial Imperial Eſtate of the Kingdom of God. But his Deity of Perſon will be very mutilate and partial, and he will be but very mutilately and partially the Filial Lord, Prince and Potentate Creature-tranſcendent (or the Filial Imperial Eſtate of the Kingdom of God) unleſs he be with God as a Perſon of the Godhead. It is a Filial Deity of Perſon, ſo to be with God; and without being ſo with God much of Deity of Perſon, Place and Eſtate will be wanting to the Son of God. That the Son of God therefore may have his Deity of Perſon, that the Holy Imperial Son may not want much of his Imperial Sonſhip, he muſt be with God as a Perſon of the Godhead, and this muſt be the completion of his generative Oeconomy. The terminative Product of it was a Son, that was the image of the inviſible God. Col. 1. 15. The brightneſs of the glory of God and the expreſs character of his perſon. Heb. 1. 2.

IV. The Generation of the Perſon of our Saviour muſt be conſider'd as the Generation of a Man, the Generation of a Saint (a Saint of God-kind of Son) and the Generation of one that is infinitely more than a Saint the Holy Imperial Son of God. As it was the Generation of a Man the Holy Child Jeſus muſt be conſider'd as increaſing in wiſdom and ſtature. Luk. 2. 52. As it was the Generation of a Saint, it proceeded gradually, and could not have its Completion and Termination, till our Saviour arriv'd at the heavenly State. As it was the Generation of the Holy Imperial Son, it could not have its Completion, till our Saviour arriv'd at the Godhead, to be with God, and to be God as a Perſon of the Godhead. Every Saint of God-kind of Son muſt at length be with God, every Child of God (as we commonly ſuppoſe) goeth to God, when he dieth: But this great Child of God was not liable to Death; he muſt go to God by the Law of his Generation and Sonſhip, and (m) Cùm potuiſſet in aſſumptâ naturâ, ſtatim à conceptione & à nativitate oſtendere lucentem divinam majeſtatem & gloriam, ſicuti fecit in transfiguratione, & poſt aſcenſionem, ita ut nullis infirmitatibus ſubjectus fuiſſet. Chemnit. de 2. in Chriſt. Natur. c. 3. p. 12.

---

Death is not the time of his going to God, but when as an Heir it is fit, that he ſhould enter upon his Eſtate. Being the Son and Heir of the Godhead and of the Kingdom of God, he had the Rights and Dues of ſuch a Son, and muſt actually enjoy them. He was born to be actually of the Imperial Eſtate of the Godhead. The Holy Empire's Imperial Son muſt be actually a Perſon of the Holy Empire's Imperial Eſtate, although he never was the Meſſiah, nor had any ſuch regard to us lapſed Sinners, or to our Redemption, as his being the Meſſiah importeth. And becauſe he is born to this high and holy Eſtate, his generative Oeconomy cannot have its Completion without his actual Poſſeſſion of it. (n) Τί ἐπειδήγε ηὐξήθης, οὐ βασιλεύεις; when thou art grown up to be a Man, why do'ſt thou not Reign, ſaith the Profane Celſus to our Saviour. He ſuppos'd, that if our Saviour was the Son of God, when he was grown up and out of his Minority, he muſt enter upon his reigning Imperial Eſtate. If we ſuppoſe the Regial Son of an Immortal King, to be generated and born abroad afar off from Court, and to be nurs'd and educated where he was born, yet when he is grown to Man's Eſtate, the Father would have him at Court; for he was generated, to be of his Imperial Eſtate. This the great King will not fail to do; for the heavenly Imperial Eſtate is the place that he ought to be in, who is the Imperial Son of God Deus natus & genitus. And he and every one ought to be in his own place, as a Star ought to be in the Firmament, a Malefactor in Priſon, and Lazarus ought to be in Abraham's Boſom. It is not material, whether our Saviour was generated on Earth or in Heaven, if by his generative Oeconomy and the Law of his Generation and Sonſhip he muſt ſubſiſt as a Divine Imperial Perſon in the form of God and the Imperial Eſtate of God, till he diveſteth himſelf of it by a voluntary Humiliation, which he did not till his miſſive Oeconomy commenc'd. Till that time (which was about the Thirtieth Year of his Age) the Word continu'd with God. And that we may probably determine the time, when he began to have his Being with God, let us ſuppoſe, that one by his Generation is as much a Saint as he is a Man, and conſequently that he is fully a Man (in Years and Stature) and fully a Saint at the ſame Age. If ſo his terreſtrial Body at that Age muſt be chang'd into an etherial Conſiſtence, and become an αὐγοειδὲς σῶμα, luciform Body, that he may be fully a Saint, which he cannot be without being a glorious Saint. In like manner let it be ſuppos'd, that our Bleſſed Saviour was by his Generation as much God as he was Man, and therefore we may reaſonably ſuppoſe his being God and his being Man in the degree of Completion, to have been at the ſame Age. And if ſo, his terreſtrial Body, when he became a Man (in Years and Stature) was chang'd into an heavenly and divine Body, then he ſubſiſted in his Deiformity and was in Heaven with God.

V. But although our Saviour is ſuppos'd, to have had his being with God and his being God as the Completion and Termination of his generative and the beginning of his miſſive Oeconomy, yet this Hypotheſis implieth, that he could not have it without ſome ſort of Tranſlation or Aſcenſion to Heaven; againſt which Suppoſition it is commonly objected, that it wanteth the Teſtimony of Holy Scripture. Three Evangeliſts make no mention of it, thoſe Evangeliſts that are ſo diligent in deſcribing his Nativity, Circumciſion, Oblation in the Temple, Reception by Simeon (and the like Paſſages touching our Saviour) and is it likely, that theſe would have omitted his Aſcent into Heaven? Is it imaginable, that ſo divine an Action of ſo high concernment could have paſſed, and that none of theſe Evangeliſts ſhould ever make mention of it, and that a Fourth Evangeliſt, if he doth make mention of it, ſhould but ſlightly intimate it? If it was neceſſary, to be believ'd, why is it not more plainly reveal'd? Why not the time and place mention'd in Scripture, as well as of his Faſting and Temptation? When our Saviour was transfigur'd, he took care, that it ſhould be done in the preſence of Witneſſes: But of this ſuppos'd Aſcenſion (which is a matter of far greater concernment than his Transfiguration) there is no ſuch Evidence, no credible Witneſſes. And as it wanteth Teſtimony, ſo there is no pretence of reaſon for this ſuppos'd aſcent into Heaven, nor is any one upon any occaſion ever ſaid, to deſcend from Heaven, but ſuch an one as was there, before he appear'd on Earth. Nor is this ſuppos'd Aſcenſion agreeable to Religion; for Chriſt according to Rule did not enter into Heaven, till he was High Prieſt, nor then without Blood, nor more than once, agreeably to the Jewiſh High Prieſt's entring into the Holy of Holies. Heb. 9. 7, 12, 24. Theſe Objections are made againſt a party of the Socinians (who have a wild and pedantick Notion of our Saviour's aſcent into Heaven) and it muſt be acknowledg'd, that they have ſomething of difficulty in them, but not ſo much as ought to ſhake our Hypotheſis (abundantly prov'd and demonſtrated) that the Humane-divine Perſon of our Saviour came down from Heaven, and conſequently was with God in Heaven. For,

(1.) This diſputed Aſcent of our Saviour to Heaven is but a difficulty, and there is no Theory, which is not incumbred with difficulties, ſome of the moſt certain Theories are incumbred with ſuch difficulties, that poſe and baffle every one's Underſtanding. (o) A conſiderable number of theſe Verities there are in Geometry and Phyſiology, nor is Theology without ſome of them. But all intelligent Perſons think it a grand extravagance to disbelieve a certain Truth, becauſe it is attended with a difficulty, yea though it be an inſuperable difficulty. If therefore our Hypotheſis touching the Humane-divine Perſon of the Son of God (that as ſuch he came down from Heaven and was in Heaven) appeareth from the manifold and mighty Proofs of it, to be a certain Verity, it ought not to be disbeliev'd, becauſe it involveth ſuch an Aſcent to Heaven, which is a difficulty, not although this difficulty was greater than it is, inſoluble and inſuperable.

(2.) This objected difficulty is but a trifle in compariſon of thoſe vaſtly numerous and vaſtly inſuperable difficulties, which are involv'd in the Scholaſtic Trinity, Logos and Incarnation. To object a trivial difficulty, and yet to entertain theſe Scholaſtic Dogmata, that are

(n) Celſ. apud Orig. l. 1. p. 47.

(o) Mr. Boyle Diſc. of things above Reaſon.

are clogg'd with many mountainous difficulties, is to ſtrain at a Gnat, and to ſwallow a Camel. That is the beſt Hypotheſis (cæteris paribus) that is incumber'd with the feweſt difficulties, and that Hypotheſis is likely to be true and good, that is atttended but with one conſiderable difficulty.

(3.) The objected ſilence of Scripture touching this diſputed Aſcenſion is but Argumentum à teſtimonio negativè, which is none of the beſt ſort of Arguments. Suppoſe, that the Holy Writers are totally ſilent concerning it, themſelves ſay, that they are ſo touching many other Paſſages of our Saviour (Joh. 20. 30.) and they might be ſilent concerning this for Reaſons that we know not. But there is a reaſon very viſible, why they have not made an Hiſtorical Narrative of it. For there is but one Evangeliſt, that could relate it (as will appear preſently) and that one Evangeliſt beginneth his Goſpel from the beginning of our Saviour's miſſive Oeconomy, which is on this ſide the diſputed Aſcenſion, ſo that an Hiſtorical Narrative of it did not fall in his way of writing. He maketh not a Narrative of our Saviour's generative Oeconomy, and therefore maketh no Hiſtorical Narrative of our Saviour's going to God. And probably he thought it needleſs to make a particular Narrative of this diſputed Aſcenſion into Heaven, becauſe throughout the tenour of his Goſpel he inſiſteth upon that, which implieth and inferreth it, and in order to which only it is neceſſary to be believ'd, which is our Saviour's coming down from Heaven. For this is that which is neceſſary to Salvation, to be believ'd, his Divine Miſſion and Authority (his coming down from Heaven) his diſputed going up to Heaven is needful, to be believed only in order thereto; and they that believe his coming down from Heaven, may be ſound Chriſtian Believers, although they know or believe nothing of his diſputed Aſcent into Heaven. It is not therefore a matter of ſo high concernment and ſo neceſſary to Salvation, to be believ'd, as the Objectors ſpeak; but it is neceſſary to a right Explication of the Chriſtian Religion.

(4.) The Holy Writers are not ſo ſilent touching this diſputed Aſcenſion, as they are touching the Eternal Generation, which is not ſo much as once in the leaſt degree mention'd by any one of the Evangeliſt's or any other of the Holy Writers. I will retort therefore the Objectors Arguments upon themſelves. The Evangeliſts are very particular as to our Saviour's Birth, Baptiſm, Faſting, Preaching, Miracles, Suffering, Reſurrection and ſolemn Aſcenſion, but not one word amongſt them touching the Eternal Generation. They that are ſo diligent in the deſcription of his temporary Nativity, Adoration by the Wiſemen, Circumciſion, Oblation in the Temple, his deſcent into Egypt and reception by Simeon, would they have omitted his eternal Generation and Nativity, if there had been truth in it? Do they tell us ſo particularly all the Circumſtances of his Humane-divine Generation, and did they not think his eternal Generation worthy our knowledge? If it is an Article of Faith (and it is ſo in Creeds and Liturgies, in Confeſſions of Faith and in the Fathers) if the belief of it is neceſſary to Salvation (as Scholaſtic Divines ſuppoſe) why is it not revealed and plainly revealed? The Holy Writers that abound in laudatory Expreſſions concerning Chriſt, that have called the Holy Spirit the Eternal Spirit, and frequently ſtile God the Eternal God, whence is it that they have not ſo much as once ſtiled the Son, the Eternal Son? Either the Eternal Generation or this diſputed Aſcenſion muſt be ſuppos'd (for it is certain, that our Saviour was with God in Heaven, before he came down from Heaven in his Meſſias-ſhip) and if neither the one, nor the other is reveal'd, Divines and Chriſtians are at liberty, to believe either of them, as they ſee cauſe. And if they would uſe this their liberty, impartially making uſe of their Reaſon, and weighing the Contexture of their Religion, doubtleſs this diſputed Aſcenſion would carry their Aſſent againſt the Eternal Generation. If our Evangeliſt had not ſuppos'd the truth of the diſputed Aſcenſion, and that his Words plainly enough ſignified it, in all reaſon it muſt be ſuppos'd, that he would have mention'd the Eternal Generation, eſpecially when he ſaith, the only begotten Son was in the Boſom of the Father.

(5.) The Eternal Generation and this diſputed Aſcenſion being two Hypotheſes that ſtand in Competition, the one of which muſt neceſſarily be choſen, let that be accounted the true and beſt Hypotheſis, which beſt ſalveth the Phænomena, which giveth the beſt account of the Chriſtian Trinity, of our Saviour's Nativity and Generation and the Proprieties thereof, of his two Natures and his Offices, of his being with God (ſeeing God, hearing his Voice; receiving his Doctrine and Commandments from him, and the like) his Incarnation, Miſſion, coming down from Heaven. Let that be accounted the true and beſt Hypotheſis, which beſt expoundeth the Scripture, reconcileth the ſeeming Diſagreements of it, giveth ſuch an account of the Senſe of Scripture, which is moſt Divine and Chriſtian, moſt agreeable to Holy People and the Character of Holy Scripture, leaſt liable to Objections, moſt recommendable to Reaſon, and to them that are without, which hath leaſt of unholy Nugacity, of humane Sophiſtry in it and nauſeous Scholaſtic Subtilty (the Elements of this World) and let a Judgment be made (p) ὁ πότερα μᾶλλον πνεῖ τοῦ ἀληθινοῦ θεοῦ, ϗ τοῦ τρόπου τῆς εἰς αὐτὸν εὐσεβείας, which of them breaths moſt of the true God and the manner of Piety towards him. It is objected, that this diſputed Aſcenſion hath no pretence of Reaſon for it, but we have ſeen, that the Reaſon and Philoſophy of it is laudable, and it is manifeſt, that in reaſonableneſs and credibility it far tranſcendeth the Eternal Generation, which is clogg'd with vaſt Improbabilities and Impoſſibilities, and no better Reaſons are alledg'd for it than theſe following. (q) God was from Eternity actually a Father; therefore the Son was generated from Eternity. God was abſolutely perfect from Eternity; therefore he did generate from Eternity. If he did not generate from Eternity, but became actually generative in time, then he is mutable.

(6.) This diſputed Aſcenſion is one of thoſe many heavenly things, which could not be atteſted or related by three of the Evangeliſts, who knew nothing of them. S. Hierom ſaith, they knew nothing of the Eternal Generation: But he ought to have ſaid, that they knew nothing of the Completion of our Saviour's generative Oeconomy, nor of the heavenly part (but only the earthly part) of his miſſive Oeconomy. For in thoſe three Evangeliſts (S. Matthew, S. Mark and

S. Luke)

(p) Orig. c. Celſ. l. 8. p. 428.

(q) Petav. de Trin. l. 5. c. 9. S. 7, &c.

S. Luke) there is not one Syllable touching our Saviour's being with God, his being with the Father, and in the Boſom of the Father, his having heard and ſeen the things in Heaven, his having ſeen God, heard his Voice, receiving his Words and Doctrine from him, his being taught by him what he ſhould ſpeak, his being ſanctified and ſent by him into the World with Atteſtations of his Miſſion, his coming forth and proceeding from the Father, his going again to the Father and returning to him that ſent him, his receiving Mandates from the Father touching what he ſhould do, his being the Bread of Life, the Bread from Heaven, his coming down from Heaven and aſcending up where he was before. Of theſe matters which are in great degree the Body of our Evangeliſt's Goſpel, and which are the heavenly part of our Saviour's miſſive Oeconomy, there is not one Syllable in the other three Evangeliſts. Whence it appeareth, to be a grand Impertinence in learned Men, thus to argue ; Thoſe Evangeliſts that are ſo diligent in the deſcription of our Saviour's Nativity and Circumciſion, his Oblation in the Temple, his Reception by Simeon (and the like Paſſages) would they have omitted his aſcent into Heaven? For theſe Evangeliſts that are ſaid to be ſo diligent in their deſcriptions, are thoſe that knew nothing more than the earthly part of our Saviour's miſſive Oeconomy ; and can it be expected, that they ſhould ſay any thing of his aſcent into Heaven, that ſay not a Syllable touching his coming down from Heaven? What they are deficient in, our Evangeliſt hath ſupply'd ; and hence his Senſe hath been miſtaken ; for he hath been thought, to treat of the Eternal Generation, while he is treating only of the heavenly part of our Lord's miſſive Oeconomy, and that which is connex'd therewith the Completion of his generative Oeconomy.

(7.) There is nothing in this diſputed Aſcenſion, that claſheth with the Type of the Jewiſh High Prieſt's alone entring into the Holy of Holies. For it is perverſe arguing, to infer from thence, that the Son of God might not enter into Heaven, till he was High Prieſt (as if the Heir of Heaven might not enter upon his Eſtate, till he was made an High Prieſt) the Type inferreth no ſuch thing, nor hath the Apoſtle any ſuch meaning. But the High Prieſt alone enter'd into the Holy of Holies, to ſignifie, that as to any ſaving Religion for Sinners Heaven was ſhut to all ; and being ſo ſhut it was peculiar to our High Prieſt, to enter into it by his Blood (correſpondently to the Jewiſh High Prieſt) whereby the way into the Holieſt of all ſhould be made manifeſt. So the Apoſtle expoundeth it, Heb. 9. 7, 8. While the Earthly Tabernacle ſtood (the Law-religion and Miniſtration) the way into the Heavenly Sanctuary was not opened by a Saving Religion, whence it was the priviledge of our High Prieſt, to enter thither by his Blood, and thereby the Kingdom of Heaven is opened to all Believers, which was before repreſented as ſhut, there being no Saving Religion for Sinners but the Religion of the Son of God. Who as he compleated the buſineſs of offering by once offering (without any repeated Offering :) ſo he compleated the buſineſs of entring into Heaven by once entring (without any repeated entring) having obtained Eternal Redemption for us, Heb. 9. 12. And can it be inferr'd from this once ſufficient entring into Heaven (ſolemnly and as High Prieſt) that he never might, never did (in any Senſe) enter into Heaven before? not till he was made High Prieſt and had finiſh'd the work of our Redemption? Our Saviour's entring into Heaven is of the ſame conſtruction with his coming into the World, which the Apoſtle repreſenteth as but an once appearing, an once coming into the World, before his ſecond coming, Heb. 9. 28. Yet his once coming into the World is in different ſenſe a twofold coming. For his being born into the World was his coming into the World in his primary Capacity and in the Senſe of the Hebrew Doctors: and his public manifeſtation to the World was his coming into the World in his officiary Capacity and in the Senſe of the Holy Writers, who do not conſider his Birth as his coming into the World, but overlook it, when they ſpeak of his coming into the World. So our Saviour's entring into Heaven in his primary Capacity was a ſort of entring and aſcending into Heaven, but this the Holy Writers overlook (as not concerning the buſineſs in hand, nor needful to be taken notice of) when they ſpeak of his ſolemn entring and aſcending into Heaven in his officiary Capacity. His diſputed Aſcent hath nothing in it, that claſheth with Religion or the Type of the Jewiſh High Prieſt: Nor is there any thing in it, that claſheth with the Phraſe of Scripture, although a learned Man objecteth ; that never any Perſon upon any occaſion is ſaid to deſcend from Heaven, but ſuch as were really there before they appear'd on Earth. But in this little Objection there is an heedleſneſs or a defect of Memory. For the Humane-divine Perſon of Chriſt firſt appear'd on Earth, yet this Humane-divine Perſon (as this Author will grant) is ſaid to deſcend from Heaven. 1 Theſſ. 4. 16. So Moſes and Elias muſt be ſaid, to have come down from Heaven, but with this difference from our Saviour, they did not appear on Earth in an humane Body. The reaſon of which difference is very manifeſt ; for the buſineſs of an Incarnation was peculiar to our Saviour's Perſon ; whoſe Humane-divine Perſon was by his aſcent into Heaven and coming down from thence the more exact Antitype to Manna, which was firſt drawn up from the Earth, and then ſent down from Heaven.

(8.) This diſputed Aſcent into Heaven is well atteſted, although not atteſted by Eye-witneſſes. The Objectors explode it, becauſe they ſuppoſe, that if ſuch a thing had been, our Saviour would have taken care that there ſhould have been Eye-witneſſes of it, as he took care, that there ſhould be Eye-witneſſes of his Transfiguration (that could teſtifie of time and place) and they ask, Where are the Witneſſes of this ſuppos'd aſcending into Heaven? To which I Anſwer ; Where are the Witneſſes of our Saviour's deſcending from Heaven, the one being matter of Fact as well as the other? If you ſay (according to the Scholaſtic Theology) that his coming down from Heaven was a thing wholly inviſible, whence there could be no Witneſſes of it ; I reply, that his aſcending was alſo deſign'd to be ſo, no ſolemn Aſcenſion but only an aſcenſional remove and ſuch a going to God as was wholly inviſible (like Holy Men's going to God when they die ;) for otherwiſe the Son of God muſt have ſhew'd forth his Glory before the time of ſhewing forth his Glory. This ſuppos'd Aſcenſion therefore is of a very different Nature from the Transfiguration ; for the time of the Tranſfiguration was the time of our Saviour's ſhewing forth his Glory, he was then in his Meſſias-ſhip, then his Diſciples were about him, and his Tranſfiguration was deſign'd to be an Atteſtation to the Truth of his Meſſias-ſhip: But this ſuppos'd Aſcenſion could not be deſign'd, to be any Atteſtation to his Meſſias-ſhip (as being antecedent to it) and therefore it was not requiſite, that there ſhould be any Witneſſes of it. It was a matter properly belonging to the heavenly part of our Saviour's miſſive Oeconomy (of which there are no Witneſſes) and ought to ſymbolize with other things of the ſame Nature. But although there are no Eye-witneſſes of it, yet as a revealed Truth it is amply atteſted and demonſtrated (not only from the Nature and Philoſophy of it, but) by the numerous Arguments which we have us'd againſt an Abſtract Logos, by the Teſtimony of John Baptiſt, by the numerous Diſcourſes in our Evangeliſt touching our Saviour's Miſſion from Heaven (his having been with God, coming forth from the Father, coming into the World, coming down from Heaven and his return) and from the Apoſtle's account of his Deiformity. Have we ſuch abundance of demonſtrative Evidence for it, and ſhall it be thought to want the Teſtimony of Eye-witneſſes? If the Muhammedans had but the thouſandth part of ſuch Evidence for their great Prophet's Aſcenſion into Heaven, their belief of it would not be thought ill founded. In ancient times this was thought a very deſireable, but more than humane accompliſhment, to aſcend into Heaven and bring down Wiſdom from thence. Wiſd. 9. 16. The things that are in heaven, who hath ſearched out? Baruch 3. 29. Who hath gone up into heaven and taken her (Wiſdom) and brought her down from the clouds? If any one had been of this Character, he would have been thought the greateſt of Prophets and the wiſeſt of Men. Our Saviour therefore being a Perſon of the deſirable and more than humane accompliſhments, the greateſt of Prophets and wiſeſt of Men, it is but reaſonable, to ſuppoſe, that he is the perſon, who hath gone up into Heaven, and brought Wiſdom down from above the Clouds. Accordingly our Evangeliſt ſtileth him the Word of Life that was with the Father, and ſaith of him the Word was with God, and the only begotten Son which was in the Boſom of the Father, he hath declared him. Theſe things the Evangeliſt ſaith, without giving us the leaſt Syllable of notice touching his Eternal Generation; therefore he would have us, to conceive, that our Saviour did go up into Heaven and ſo was with God. The Phraſe which he uſeth, is that which is uſual amongſt all pious People, who ſay of Holy Men departed, they are now with God (whereby they mean, that they are gone up to Heaven) this is the Phraſe that our Evangeliſt uſeth, and he muſt be underſtood to uſe it in the Senſe, that pious People uſe it. Hereby he expoundeth the Senſe of his own Saying, Joh. 1. 18. No man hath ſeen God at any time; from which general Rule our Saviour is ſuppos'd (by our Evangeliſt) to be an Exception; therefore his Humane-divine Perſon did ſee God. By ſaying the Word was with God, he expoundeth alſo the Senſe of our Saviour's Saying, What and if ye ſhall ſee the Son of Man aſcend up where he was before? Joh. 6. 62.

(9.) This diſputed Aſſent is atteſted by the beſt of Eye-witneſſes (more than a thouſand other Witneſſes) our Bl. Saviour himſelf. John 3. 11, 12, 13. Verily, verily, I ſay unto thee, we ſpeak that we do know, and teſtifie that we have ſeen; and ye receive not our witneſs. If I have told you earthly things, and ye believe not, how ſhall ye believe, if I tell you of heavenly things? And no man hath aſcended up to heaven, but he that came down from heaven, even the Son of Man which is in heaven. In this Perioche of Scripture our Saviour attributeth to himſelf a Prerogative tranſcending all other Prophets (Teachers of divine Things) he was a Prophet come down from Heaven. This is plain from his words; for he ſtileth himſelf he that came down from Heaven, he profeſſeth himſelf able to teach Nicodemus the heavenly things, and yet to ſpeak no more than he knew, nor to teſtifie any more than he had ſeen. Our Saviour's Senſe therefore is (as S. Chryſoſtom, Theophylact and Euthymius rightly expound his words) that Nicodemus ought not to look upon him meerly as a Prophet or Teacher come from God, a Prophet of the Earth, but as a Prophet deſcended from above (r) ἐξ οὐρανοῦ γὰρ πάρειμι νῦν, for I am now come from Heaven. This is one and but one part of our Saviour's Senſe, it is but one Branch of Prerogative, which our Saviour attributeth to himſelf beyond all Prophets; for it is connex'd with this other Branch of Prerogative and Tranſcendency above all Prophets, our Saviour and he alone had aſcended up into Heaven. As he was a Prophet come down from Heaven, ſo he had aſcended up into Heaven, which no meer Prophetic Man ever did or could do. No man hath aſcended up to Heaven, but he that came down from Heaven. So that our Saviour's Senſe is (s) τῶν μὲν προφητῶν οὐδεὶς ἀναβέβηκεν ἐκεῖ, none of the Prophets hath aſcended thither. (t) That he was diſcriminated from the other Prophets by a great Tranſcendency; for not any one of them aſcended into Heaven, ſo as that he could ſee the things that are done there; he only hath aſcended thither and is always there (mentally and as diſcerning the Arcana of Heaven) therefore Credence muſt be given to him more than to the other Prophets. (u) Heaven ſignifieth the inacceſſible Light which God inhabiteth, the revealed Splendor of the Divine Majeſty: To this no Man beſides the only begotten Son of God could any more aſcend, than any one beſides him could know the Father. A School-divine Becanus Sum. The. Par. 3. Tract. 1. C. 9. Quæſt. 2. as I find him cited (w) undertaketh to prove, that Chriſt according to his Humanity from the firſt moment of his Conception had the beatifical Viſion. And thus he proveth it. Joh. 3. 13. No man hath aſcended up to heaven, but he that came down from heaven, even the Son of Man which is in heaven. Where the Verb Aſcendit (ſaith he) is of the Preter-perfect Tenſe, whereby Chriſt ſignified, that he had now already aſcended into Heaven, which could not be true of a corporeal Aſcent, but of a ſpiritual, by the beatifical Viſion. Becauſe of his prejudice this Man could not underſtand our Saviour, to ſpeak of any other Aſcent but only the beatifical Viſion, and ſo far he is a bad Expoſitor of the Text: But he rightly obſerveth, that our Saviour's Words ſignifie, that he had now already aſcended into Heaven. Some would have the Greek Words ὁ ὢν ἐν τῷ οὐρανῷ, to be tranſlated he that was in Heaven;

(r) S. Chryſoſt. in loc.

(s) Idem ibid.

(t) Magno ſe diſcrimine cæteris antecellere Prophetis, neminem enim aliorum in cœlum aſcendiſſe, ut quæ illic geruntur videre poſſet; ſe ſolum aſcendiſſe, ſemperque illic eſſe, itaque magis ſibi, quàm cæteris Prophetis credendum eſſe. Maldonat. in loc.

(u) Cœlum ſignificat lucem inacceſſam quam Deus inhabitat, revelatum divinæ majeſtatis ſplendorem: Ad hunc tàm nemo potuit aſcendere præter unigenitum Dei, quàm nemo præter eum Patrem cognoſcere. Bucer. in loc.

(w) Mr. Jeanes of the Fulneſs of Chriſt. p. 345. Ed. An. 1656.

Heaven; and it muſt be acknowledg'd, that ὁ ὢν is often ſo rendred, and that an Enallage of Tenſe (a putting one Tenſe for another) is uſual in our Evangeliſt (as all Men obſerve:) but becauſe it cannot be proved, that ὁ ὢν ought to be ſo rendred in theſe words of our Saviour, it is not worth the while, to inſiſt upon that Verſion. But let none imagine, that this Text (which we have illuſtrated) is the only place, which clearly proveth our Hypotheſis touching our Saviour's aſcent into Heaven; for I do aſſirm (and it is proved already) that the Body of our Evangeliſt's Goſpel (which ſpeaketh of the Heavenly part of our Saviour's miſſive œconomy) manifeſtly implieth and inferreth it. They that expound our Saviour's aſcent up to Heaven figuratively, may do well, to try their faculty (as Grotius hath done) if they can ſo expound all the places, that ſpeak of his deſcent from Heaven. For by the rule of contraries his aſcent up to Heaven muſt be underſtood in the ſame ſenſe with his deſcent from Heaven, that is, literally and properly. As our Saviour's being with and receiving his Doctrine from God in Heaven, ſpeaketh him a Creature-tranſcendent Prophet: ſo it was reaſonable and agreeable, that a Creature-tranſcendent Prophet ſhould be with God in Heaven, and receive his Doctrine from him there. Beſides, the Meſſiah muſt be an Heavenly Prince and Potentate ſent down from above; and the Jews (with a great deal of truth) tell us of a certain Treaty between God and the Meſſiah (touching his Undertaking) which could not well be any where but in Heaven. (x) The bleſſed God brought forth the Soul of the Meſſiah, and ſaid to him, wilt thou heal and redeem my Sons after ſix thouſand Years? He made anſwer, I will. He ſaid unto him, wilt thou alſo bear Chaſtiſements, to wipe away their Iniquities, as it is written, ſurely he hath born our griefs? He made anſwer, I will bear them with gladneſs.

(10.) This diſputed Aſcenſion is an Hypotheſis, that is neceſſary, to give an account of our Saviour's Life, and to ſalve the Credit of our Evangeliſts, which cannot be ſalv'd by the Scholaſtic Theology. This Theology ſaith, (y) Of the whole time of the Childhood of Chriſt and his Youth till the thirtieth year of his Age, neither the other Evangeliſts nor Luke relate any thing, beſides what Luke alone relateth, that Chriſt when he was twelve years of age, came up to Jeruſalem with his Parents at the Feaſt, privily withdrew himſelf from them, and diſputed with the Doctors. What he did all the reſt of the time of that Age, he compriſeth in this one word, he increaſed in Body and Spirit, which afterwards he repeateth in other words, ſaying, he grew in Wiſdom and Age, and in favour with God and Man. The Evangeliſts in their Hiſtory of Chriſt are ſaid to relate nothing conſiderable touching above one half of the time of his Life (the ſpace of eighteen Years) and if they have written his Hiſtory at this rate, can they reaſonably be thought ſo diligent and particular in relating all paſſages touching our Saviour, as the Objectors againſt his diſputed Aſcenſion pretend? For what a lamentably defective Hiſtory of the Life of Chriſt have we from four Evangeliſts, if we ſuppoſe, that there is in it a vaſt chaſm of eighteen Years vacuity and ſilence? If they have overlook'd the main of his Life, the prime of his Years, and many of thoſe Years wherein he was (paſt growing in Body and Spirit) in the full age and ſtate of Man? Is it credible, that in theſe eighteen years of the Life of Chriſt nothing of great remark ſhould be done by him, nor that any thing of great remark ſhould befall him? that this long interval of time ſhould be like the Conſtellation Camelopardus, that hath not one bright Star in it? that in all this tract of time there ſhould be no going of him to God nor any ſending from God unto him? or is it poſſible, that four Evangeliſts (of which one wrote, to ſupply the defects of the other) ſhould make this more than half of our Saviour's Life-time one continu'd tempus ἄδηλον, unhiſtoriz'd time of Darkneſs and Silence? But this is not all that ought to be ſaid; for we muſt ask, if any one ſince the Creation writing a Book of the Hiſtory of any Perſon did ever leave out and omit more than one half of his Life-time? did ever any Man of Senſe write Hiſtory at ſuch a rate? and ſhall we ſay, that our Evangeliſts were not Men of common Sence? He that is not convinc'd by this Argument, that the Scholaſtic Theology in its Notices of our Saviour is very much amiſs, cannot have that worthy opinion of our Evangeliſts, that he ought to have. Something (doubtleſs) in our Saviour's Affairs great and extraordinary, and which is related by one Evangeliſt, but was unknown to the reſt, muſt be ſuppos'd to have happen'd in this great interval of eighteen Years of his Life-time; and this ſomething muſt be his removal from the Earth and his aſcent up into Heaven (for it can be nothing elſe) which our Evangeliſt relateth, when he ſaith, In the beginning the Word was with God. The ſame was in the beginning with God. Of John Baptiſt we read, that the Word of God came unto him, before he undertook his Prophetic imploy: but throughout the Goſpels we never read, that any ſuch word of God (any word of Miſſion or Commiſſion) came to our Saviour; therefore our Saviour went unto God, and thereby became God the Word. Of John Baptiſt we read, that that he was in the Wilderneſs, till the day of his ſhewing unto Iſrael, ſo that till he was thirty years of age, we know where to find him: but of our Saviour we never read, that he was at Nazareth till the day of his ſhewing unto Iſrael; which is an Indication, that for ſome conſiderable time before he was thirty years of age we muſt look for him elſewhere and not at Nazareth. At Nazareth (after his diſcourſe with the Doctors at twelve years of age) he liv'd in great privacy; for a ſtate of great privacy ought to be preparatory to his publick Prophetic Office; as John Baptiſt's Wilderneſs was preparatory to his publick Prophetic Office, and amongſt the Turks living in a Wilderneſs, (z) conciliateth veneration to their pretended Prophets. But our Saviour was no Wilderneſs kind of Man, he lived in Humane Society, yet in ſuch privacy, that we do not ſo much as once read of his going up to Jeruſalem, to thoſe Feaſts, to which all the Males were by Law oblig'd to reſort three times in a Year, for the ſpace of the abovesaid eighteen Years. Such was his privacy and latent condition (which is the cauſe, that his Hiſtory is written at ſuch an unparallel'd rate of deficiency) that John Baptiſt did not ſo much as perſonally know him, till our Saviour came to him, to be baptiz'd, Joh. 1. 31. Grotius ſaith, (a) that till the time the Baptiſt was ſent to baptize, he did not know (Meſſiam in terris eſſe) the Meſſias to be upon Earth. If ſo, it is but reaſonable, to think, that John ſuppos'd him about that time to come down from Heaven, as his words plainly ſignifie, Joh. 3. 31. This therefore was the great thing that occurr'd within the compaſs of the eighteen Years of our Saviour's privacy, his aſcenſional remove to Heaven and his coming down from Heaven. Of which great tranſaction none was capable of giving a good account but himſelf (and thoſe whom he inform'd) and he is not ſparing to publiſh it to the World in his Divine Diſcourſes recorded by our Evangeliſt, but not by any other Evangeliſt.

(x) Hulſ. Theol. Jud. p. 328.

(y) De tota Chriſti pueritia, & adoleſcentia uſque ad annum triceſimum, nihil neque alii Evangeliſtæ, nec Lucas narrant, præter id quod ſolus commemorat Lucas, Chriſtum cum duodecim eſſet annorum, & cum parentibus ad diem feſtum Jeroſolymam veniſſe, clam ſe ab illis ſubduxiſſe, & cum Doctoribus diſputaſſe. Quid reliqua fecerit ætate, hoc uno verbo comprehendit, creviſſe corpore & ſpiritu, quod aliis verbis poſtea repetit, dicens eum creviſſe ſapientia & ætate, & gratia apud Deum & homines. Maldonat. in Luc. 2. 40.

(z) V. Maldonat. in Matt. 4. 1.

(a) Not. in Joh. 1. 31.

(II.) It is commonly ſaid, that (b) from the Diſputation of Jeſus with the Doctors to the time of his manifeſtation to Iſrael, which was eighteen Years, the holy Child dwelt in Nazareth in great obedience to his Parents, in exemplar Modeſty, ſingular Humility, working with his Hands in his ſuppos'd Father's Trade, for the ſupport of his own and his Mother's Neceſſities, and that he might bear the curſe of Adam, that in the Sweat of his Brows he ſhould eat his Bread; all the while he increaſed in favour with God and Man. This ſmooth Story is deriv'd from J. Mart. from whom we have an unwritten Tradition, that our Saviour in the time of his privacy made mechanic works, Yokes and Ploughs; and this Tradition is thought probable (c) although Origen denieth it, and it is not without great improbability. It is thought probable, becauſe the Jewiſh wiſe men learn'd and exercis'd a Trade, and becauſe the Jews thought themſelves oblig'd, to teach their Children a Trade. But they alſo thought themſelves oblig'd to teach their Children Learning, yet our Saviour was not taught Learning, as the Jews ſaid, whoſe ſaying that he never learned, is of as good credit, as their ſaying that he was a Carpenter. There was no reaſon why our Saviour ſhould be taught Learning, and there was as little reaſon, why he ſhould be taught a Trade, who was not to live by a Trade, nor was concern'd in the curſe of Adam, nor did his Hands ever miniſter to his Neceſſities when he was a Preacher, as S. Paul's Hands miniſtred to his Neceſſities, and the Jewiſh wiſe mens Hands miniſtred to theirs, when there was occaſion. (d) Grotius thinketh, that the making theſe Mechanic Works was not repugnant to our Saviour's Dignity, becauſe when he made them, he was in the ſtate of Exinanition: but this is a great miſtake; both becauſe it appeareth from the Apoſtle, (e) that his ſtate of Exinanition and Humiliation did not commence till his miſſive œconomy and entrance upon his Meſſias-ſhip; and becauſe the ſtate of growth and improvement (of increaſing in Wiſdom and Stature and favour with God and Man) cannot be thought a ſtate of Diminution and therefore not of Humiliation and Exinanition. When he became of full eſtate a Man, and the time of his growth and improvement was at an end, it is not imaginable, how he could live upon Earth. For he could not live in meanneſs, privacy, and making mechanic works, but in his ſtate of Exinanition and Humiliation, which yet did not commence till his entrance upon his Meſſias-ſhip at the thirtieth year of his age. And becauſe when he became of full eſtate a Man, he was then the holy Imperial Lord the Son of full age, and ought to be actually a Perſon of the Imperial Eſtate of the Godhead, he ought not then to live any longer in a Subject-eſtate, the Subject-eſtate of an Heir in the time of his non-age (Gal. 4. 1.) or in Subject-eſtate to any Creatures although Parents really or reputatively. It is but reaſonable therefore, to ſuppoſe, that at that age he was remov'd from the Earth, and that the Hiſtory of our Evangeliſt muſt be thus connected and continu'd. S. Luke ſaith, that after our Lord's diſcourſe with the Doctors at twelve years of age, he went down with his Parents and came to Nazareth and was ſubject unto them. In this ſtate of ſubjection unto them he continu'd, ſo long as was fit for him, to be continu'd in it, and no longer. The primary words therefore of our Evangeliſt's Proem muſt be thus connected with thoſe words of S. Luke. He went down with his Parents to Nazareth, and was ſubject unto them, ſo long as was fit for him, to be continu'd in that ſubjection: but when it was no longer fit for him to be continu'd in that ſubjection, then the Word was with God as a Perſon of the Godhead. By thus connecting the words of theſe two Evangeliſts we make the Hiſtory of the Life-time of our Saviour a continu'd coherent Hiſtory (without a vaſt chaſm of Vacuity and Darkneſs in it) we ſalve the Credit of the Holy Evangeliſts, and rightly repreſent the Imperial Son of God as generatively raiſed to the Godhead.

(b) Biſhop Taylor's Great Exemplar, par. 1. Ad. ſect. 8.

(c) C. Celſ. p. 299. Spencer. Not. p. 81. vid. Baron. ad an. 12. n. 8, 9.

(d) Not. in Matth. 13. 55.

(e) Phil. 2. 6, 7, 8.

Luk. 2. 51.

SECTION V.

Of the Creation which the Evangeliſt's Proem attributeth to the Evangelical Word.

I. AGreeably to that Divinity and Creature-tranſcendence which the Evangeliſt attributeth to the Word or Logos (in his magnificent and glorious deſcription of his Perſon) he repreſenteth him as Creative, and twice in his Proem attributeth to him an univerſal Creation, v. 3. All things were made by him, and without him was not any thing made that was made. V. 10. He was in the World, and the World was made by him, and the World knew him not. This Branch of this illuſtrious Proem is ſhaded with ſuch obſcurity, that they who rightly interpret it, yet very much miſtake the Senſe of it; for they miſ-interpret their own Interpretation. Socinus and his followers rightly underſtand the Evangeliſt, to ſpeak of the Evangelical Creation, but (becauſe of the Pedantry of their Theology) they are far from underſtanding aright this Evangelical Creation. For when the Evangeliſt ſaith of our Saviour, that all things were made by him, he is ſaid to mean, that all things appertaining to the New Teſtament were made by him, which is a true Interpretation: but if the whole meaning of it be thus expounded; that all Men were renew'd and reform'd by him (as to their Morals) quantum in ipſo fuit, and that by effectually reforming ſome the Chriſtian Church was actually made by him; then this true Interpretation is miſ-interpreted and falſified; So when the Evangeliſt ſaith of our Saviour, that the World was made by him, he is ſaid to mean (not the mundus naturalis, but) the mundus humanus, and this is the true Interpretation. But to ſuppoſe, that the World of Mankind was made by him only as a Light, ſome being actually reform'd by him, and all being ſo quantum ad agentem attinet; this is to make the Evangeliſt guilty of the falſity of an undue appellation; for this is far from being juſtly called a making the World. As the Perſon of the Son of God is in this School of Socinus minorated into a meer Man as to his Eſſence: ſo his new Creation is dwindled into a diminutive, that is far from being proportionate to an univerſal Creation. They have rightly underſtood our Evangeliſt's Proem, to ſpeak of the new Creation, that are hugely deficient in underſtanding the new Creation. But if the New or Evangelical Creation be duely underſtood, if the ſeveral Senſes of it be rightly diſtinguiſh'd and ſetled (as is done before in this Diſcourſe) we may affirm with great aſſurance, that the Creation which our Evangeliſt ſpeaketh of in his Proem, is no other but the Evangelical Creation; for this Interpretation is a neceſſary conſequence of all our foregoing Explications and Arguments. So much evidence and certainty as there is in all our Explications of the Idea of the Son of God and the Arguments appertaining to them, that confront the Scholaſtic Theology (which ſurely is very great certainty) ſo much certainty there is, that theſe Texts of the Evangeliſt which ſpeak of a Creation, are meant of the Evangelical not of the Moſaical Creation. But the Senſe of them may be further illuſtrated and aſcertained by ſeveral Obſervations and Arguments yet remaining, which Obſervations and Arguments are certain Rules, that ought to be obſerv'd in expounding an ambiguous place of Scripture, without the obſervance whereof Men may diſpute and brangle to Eternity about the Interpretation of Scripture, having no rule or method, to fix and determine the Senſe of it.

II. There is one All things, that is certainly and unqueſtionably made by Chriſt: there is another All things, of which the queſtion is, whether they were made by Chriſt or not. When the Evangeliſt ſaith, that All things were made by him, he cannot mean leſs than That all things, which was certainly and unqueſtionably made by him; therefore he meaneth thereby The Evangelical all things. His Propoſitions are univerſal. All things that were made, were made by him. Not any thing that was made, was made without him. Which univerſal Propoſitions neceſſarily comprehend, ſpeak of and mean That all things which was certainly and unqueſtionably made by him; therefore they neceſſarily comprehend, ſpeak of and mean The All things of the Evangelical Creation; for this All things was certainly and unqueſtionably made by him. From whence it followeth, that the Evangeliſt doth not ſpeak of the Moſaical All things (the All things of the Moſaical Creation;) for the Evangeliſt's Beginning cannot ſignifie both the Moſaical and the Evangelical Beginning (it neceſſarily ſignifieth but one of them;) therefore if he ſpeaketh of the Evangelical All things, he doth not ſpeak of the Moſaical All things. As the true Life and Light cannot ſignifie both the Common, Natural and Moſaical Life and Light and the true Evangelical Life and Light: ſo the Evangeliſt's All things cannot ſignifie both the Moſaical and the Evangelical All things. To make this Argument (which hath the certitude of a demonſtration) eaſily intelligible, Let us ſuppoſe, that the Patriarch Abraham was the maker of the Religion and Commonwealth of Iſrael, and that at the ſame time he made the Univerſe of Rationals as to the Theopoliticals and ſo as to be the parts of a new conſtituted Univerſe: but that a party of Philoſophic Abrahamitæ are of Opinion, that he made alſo the Univerſe as to Phyſiologicals and in the Moſaic Creation. And let us ſuppoſe, that an inſpir'd Jewiſh Hiſtorian hath thus written his Hiſtory; In the beginning Abraham was, and was with God. All things that were made, were made by him. Not any thing that was made, was made without him. If the Philoſophic Abrahamitæ do interpret his Hiſtory to this Senſe; Abraham was and was with God in the Moſaic Beginning, and all things that were made in the Moſaical Coſmopœia were made by him; theſe Expoſitors may be thus confuted. What the inſpir'd Jewiſh Hiſtorian ſaith of All things that were made, cannot refer both to the Iſraelitical and the Moſaical Beginning, and therefore cannot mean both All things of the Iſraelitical and the Moſaical Creation. But it muſt neceſſarily mean the All things of the Iſraelitical Creation; for this inſpir'd Hiſtorian ſaith, All things that were made, were made by him. Which univerſal Propoſition neceſſarily comprehendeth, ſpeaketh of and meaneth what was unqueſtionably made by him (or the All things that were certainly and unqueſtionably made by him;) therefore it neceſſarily comprehendeth, ſpeaketh of and meaneth the All things of the Iſraelitical Creation; and conſequently, it doth not ſpeak of the All things of the Moſaical Creation. This Argument we will rely upon as demonſtrative of the Senſe of our Evangeliſt's Texts (for both of them ſpeak of the ſame Creation) to which we will add many Obſervations that are of great weight.

III. Our Evangeliſt's Text touching the Creation ſtanding in the Front of the New Teſtament may reaſonably be ſuppos'd, to carry a correſpondence to the beginning of the Old Teſtament. For the Holy Writers of the New Teſtament love to deſcribe the matters of the New Creation (the things Evangelical) analogically and anſwerably to the matters of the Old Creation (the things Moſaical) and there is a correſpondence between the Old and New Teſtament, as between Literal and Spiritual, Old and New. But this correſpondence is deſtroy'd, if we ſuppoſe the Evangeliſt's Creation, to be coincident and the ſame with the Moſaical; this is to make him an Hiſtoriographer of the Old Teſtament-creation, and the Old Teſtament-times and Affairs, inſtead of the New Teſtament-creation and the New Teſtament-times and Affairs. A Divine of our own therefore hath diſcarded theſe groſly incongruous Conceits, and thus he diſcourſeth touching our Evangeliſt's Proem and his Creation. (f) In the work of Redemption Chriſt indeed made a new World, we are wholly a new Creation, and we muſt be ſo: and therefore when S. John began the Narrative of the Goſpel, he began in a manner and ſtile very like to Moſes in his Hiſtory of the firſt Creation, In the beginning was the Word, &c. All things were made by him, and without him was not any thing made that was made. This Biſhop of the Church (although he underſtood the New Creation but partially and mutilately) interpreteth our Evangeliſt's Text, not to mean the Moſaical Creation, but the New and Evangelical Creation deſcrib'd analogically thereunto. And with this modern Biſhop we will conjoyn an ancient Biſhop, who (in good degree) ſymbolizeth with him in his Expoſition of our Evangeliſt's Text. (g) Cùm omnia per ipſum facta dicantur, ipſe conditur novi utique teſtamenti & veteris deſignatur. When all things are ſaid to be made by him, he is denoted to be the maker both of the New Teſtament and the Old. S. Ambroſe agreeth with our modern Biſhop, that our Evangeliſt's Narrative touching his Logos (All things were made by him) is to be underſtood touching his making the New Teſtament (the New Teſtament's All things:) but there are great Vitioſities in his Interpretation. For he doth not duely diſtinguiſh between the Old and New Teſtament, and he will have our Evangeliſt's words touching his Logos to ſignifie, that he is both the maker of the Old and the New Teſtament, which is a contradiction; for his words cannot relate to two ſuch beginnings. But notwithſtanding theſe Vitioſities his Interpretation conſiderably befriendeth the true Expoſition of our Evangeliſt's Text, and ſo doth Clemens, when he ſaith of the Grace of the Father; (b) οὐκέτι δίδοσθαι λέγεται ἀλλὰ διὰ Ἰησοῦ γίνεσθαι· οὗ χωρὶς ἐγένετο οὐδὲ ἕν. It is not ſaid to be given, but made by Jeſus, without whom not any thing was made. If our Evangeliſt's Text (that all things were made by him, and without him was not any thing made that was made) is meant of making the Grace of the Father, it muſt be meant of making the New Teſtament's All things. And what unprejudic'd Mind would not think it to be ſo meant, that obſerveth it to ſtand in the front of the New Teſtament?

(f) Biſhop Taylor of Confirmation, p. 1, 2.

(g) S. Ambroſ. de Fide, c. 5.

(h) Pædag. l. 1. c. 7.

IV. Our Evangeliſt's Texts (touching a Creation) muſt be conſider'd as a part of his Writings, and muſt be interpreted agreeably thereto; for he muſt be allow'd to be his own Interpreter. (i) The moſt certain way of expounding an Author is from other places of his Writings. I ſhould go on in the common track, and interpret our Evangeliſt's Texts, to be meant of the Moſaic Creation, if I did not read a Text in this ſame Evangeliſt, which I am certain, is meant of the New and Evangelical Creation (as is before diſcours'd.) Apoc. 3. 14. Theſe things ſaith the Amen, the faithful and true Witneſs, the beginning of the Creation of God. If we ask our Evangeliſt, what is his Creation? he anſwereth, The Creation of God. The Creation of God is certainly The Creation of the Theopoliticals, which are the Theologicals, whence a Divine of our own (k) hath called his Syſtem of Theology Theopolitica. I am certain, that the Creation of God ſignifieth another kind of Creation than the Creation of Naturals and Phyſiologicals, that it is the Saint of God-kind of Creation. And I am alike certain, that the Evangeliſt's creative Logos is a Saint of God-kind of creative Logos, and conſequently his Creation is the Saint of God-kind of Creation (the Creation of God) with reſpect whereunto it muſt be ſaid of him, All things were made by him, and without him was not any thing made, that was made. Which words are a deſcriptive notice of his Creation; for there is a Creation, wherein all things were made by him, and without him was not any thing made, that was made; and this is the Creation, that is his Creation. Our Evangeliſt hath given us alſo another deſcriptive Notice of his Creation by ſtiling him in his Apocalypſe ἡ ἀρχὴ, the beginning of the Creation of God, whereby he interpreteth his Goſpel. For although in the Proem of his Goſpel he doth not in expreſs words ſtile his Logos The beginning, yet in ſenſe and juſt conſtruction he ſo ſtileth him, when he ſaith, In the beginning the Word was with God, All things were made by him. His Senſe manifeſtly is, The Word was the beginning of all things. Agreeably whereto the ancient Scholaſtic Divines ſpeak of their Scholaſtic Logos. For Tatianus ſaith of him, (l) τοῦτον ἴσμεν τοῦ κόσμου τὴν ἀρχὴν, this we know, to be the (arche or) beginning of the World. Gr. Naz. ſtileth him, (m) ἀρχὴ τῶν ὅλων, the beginning of all things, whereby he meaneth, the archical cauſe of the Moſaic Creation of all things. But the New Teſtament hath no ſuch meaning; when it ſtileth our Saviour the Beginning and Alpha, it hath manifeſtly reſpect only to the Evangelical Creation and Affairs, Col. 1. 18. Apoc. 3. 14. and 22. 13. So the Fathers ſometimes ſtile him, (n) ἀρχὴ τῆς καινῆς κτίσεως, the beginning of the new Creation, (o) ἀρχὴ ὁδῶν εὐαγγελικῶν, the beginning of the Evangelical ways of God. And ſo our Evangeliſt in his Proem expounded according to his own Writings (as alſo according to other places of the New Teſtament and theſe Sayings of the Fathers) ſaith of his Logos, He was the beginning of the Evangelical Creation of all things (the beginning of the Creation of God) this he ſaith in ſaying, In the beginning was the Word, and the Word was with God, All things were made by him. Thus our Evangeliſt is his own Interpreter; which is ſuch an Argument of the truth of our Interpretation, as the Scholaſtic Theology cannot ſhew the like.

(i) Si nulla certior eſt Auctoris exponendi ratio quàm per ejuſdem verba, ſenſum hujus loci excipiemus ex aliis locis. Huet. Dem. Ev. pr. 7. p. 539. ed. 2.

(k) Mr. Lawſon.

It is not probable, that in his Apocalypſe he ſhould ſpeak of the Evangelical Creation, and overlook it in his Evangely, which is the proper place of it.

(l) Or. c. Græc. p. 145.

(m) Or. 29. p. 490.

(n) S. Athanaſ. c. Ar. or. 3. p. 237. Com.

(o) S. Baſil. Ep 141. p. 932.

V. The Text in our Evangeliſt's Proem which is under conſideration, muſt be conſider'd as parallel to ſome part of the Proem of his firſt Epiſtle, theſe places being parallel. For in both of them the Evangeliſt taketh the riſe of his Diſcourſe from the beginning. In both our Saviour is ſtiled The Word. In both he is ſtiled The Life. And in both theſe Proems our Evangeliſt reporteth, that he was with God or with the Father. After he hath ſaid, that the Word was with God, or the Life was with the Father, in the Proem of his firſt Epiſtle next and immediately he diſcourſeth of his Manifeſtation, which is his miſſive Oeconomy. In the Proem of his Goſpel therefore, after he hath ſaid, that the Word was in the beginning with God, he muſt be ſuppoſ'd next and immediately to diſcourſe of his Manifeſtation and miſſive Oeconomy, as both the nature of the thing and the paralleliſm between theſe two Proems inferreth. The Creation therefore which in the third Verſe of this Proem he attributeth to the Logos, belongeth to his Manifeſtation and miſſive Oeconomy, his Diſcourſe of it is part of his Diſcourſe touching the Manifeſtation of the Logos and his miſſive Oeconomy; and conſequently this Saying All things were made by him, is certainly meant of the Evangelical Creation of all things, which is the ſame thing with the Manifeſtation of the Logos and his miſſive Oeconomy. The whole of this Proem muſt be expounded and limited by his miſſive Oeconomy. V. 4. In him was Life, viz. in his miſſive Oeconomy. The Life was the Light of Men, viz. in his miſſive Oeconomy. V. 5. The Light ſhined in Darkneſs, viz. in his miſſive Oeconomy. So v. 3. muſt be expounded; All things were made by him, viz. in his Manifeſtation and miſſive Oeconomy.

This is fair, clear and certain reaſoning from Scripture-grounds and maketh the Senſe of Scripture as bright as the day. If any ſhould object (p) that according to our Interpretation the the Word did nothing in the beginning, whereas according to the Evangeliſt all things were made by him in the beginning; our Anſwer is, that this is not fair reaſoning, but captious and perverſe. For the beginning (as alſo the World) is a term, that may and muſt be underſtood in a leſſer or greater Latitude of Senſe; as appeareth from our foregoing Diſcourſes of it and our Saviour's Saying, the Devil ſinneth from the beginning. According to our Interpretation the Word's making all things began with his miſſive Oeconomy, and in the greater Latitude of Senſe the Evangelical beginning comprehendeth the whole of our Saviour's miſſive Oeconomy, in which the Chriſtians all things were made. Sometimes the Scholaſtic Divines allow themſelves to Diſcourſe at random and as they fancy, and this they call Reaſoning. As when one of them thus argueth; But how doth making all things ſignifie new making them? Eſpecially making all things in the beginning? Which one would think, ſhould rather ſignifie the firſt than the ſecond Creation. Do we need, to make anſwer to ſuch marvellous Argumentations as theſe, that know not the New Teſtament's making or creating all things, that ſuppoſe this Creation without a beginning, that know not the Evangelical beginning, an Evangeliſt's beginning, nor his Word of Life with his creative Manifeſtation, nor his all things that are of God (2 Cor. 5. 18.) that ſuppoſe none of theſe things to be taken notice of by an Evangeliſt, but will have his Evangely interpreted, as if he was only writing an Hiſtory of the Moſaic Coſmopœia? The Moſaic viſible Creation is (q) δηλωτικὸν, manifeſtative of him that createth, that external Moſaic Creation is not at all manifeſtative of the Evangeliſt's Logos; this therefore is not the Creation which the Evangeliſt ſpeaketh of. His Creation is the ſame with the creative Manifeſtation of the Son of God, which next and immediately ſucceedeth his being in the beginning with God both in the Proem of our Evangeliſt's Goſpel and his Firſt Epiſtle. So he is his own Interpreter.

(p) Biſhop Pearſon on the Creed, Art. 2. p. 231, ed. 1.

(q) S. Chryſoſt. in Joan. Hom. 4. p. 575. Grot. Not. in Rom. 1. 20.

VI. Our Evangeliſt's Creation in the Proem of his Goſpel muſt be conſider'd as a part of the New Teſtament, and as appertaining to the Logos of the New Teſtament, whereby his Senſe may be clearly determin'd. For ſuch as his creative Logos is, ſuch is his Creation. If the moſt proper Name of his Logos is Ens ex Ente, if in his Nature and Eſſence he is the intelligible World, the archetypal Idea and exemplar of the Univerſe of Creatures; if he is the divine Notion and his Proceſſion is by and from Intellect, if he is the Scholaſtic Art and Hand of the ſupreme Artificer, the demiurgic Reaſon, Skill and Power (celebrated by Philoſophers) if theſe are the Ingredients of his Character, we ought to pronounce, that he is of Kind and Quality, of Character and Deſcription the old Creation's creative Logos. But if none of theſe Ingredients are to be found in his true Character (nor any ſuch like) if all the Ingredients of it are quite of another nature, and are ſuch as muſt belong to him, as he is the Evangelical Word of Life and Salvation, then we ought to conclude, that he is not the old, but the new Creations creative Logos, and that this is the Evangeliſt's Creation. If it could be prov'd, that the Evangeliſt's Logos is an Abſtract Logos, his Creation muſt be ſuppos'd, to be the old Creation: But if it plainly appeareth, that all the Ideas of an Abſtract Logos which hitherto have been form'd, are nothing better than Unholy and Unchriſtian and Philoſophic-pagan kind of Vanities, then we ought to pronounce that his Logos is no other than the Chriſtian Logos of a Chriſtian Writer, the Evangelical Logos of an Evangeliſt (which one would think, is Self-evident) and that his Creation is no other than the Chriſtian and Evangelical Creation. The Chriſtian and Evangelical Creation is the Creation of all things by Jeſus Chriſt, as the Apoſtle defineth it, Eph. 3. 9. (meaning, that all things were created by him, as the making and founding the Chriſtian Religion implieth;) for it is certain and plainly demonſtrable, that the Apoſtle ſpeaketh of the New and Evangelical Creation of things, when he ſaith, that all things were created by Jeſus Chriſt; therefore our Evangeliſt ſpeaketh of the ſame Creation of all things, when he ſaith of Chriſt Jeſus, all things were made by him; for one part of the New Teſtament muſt be interpreted by another.

VII. Our Evangeliſt's Creation in the Proem of his Goſpel muſt be conſider'd as a part of Chriſt's Evangely, which ſpeaketh of the matters Evangelical, and muſt be underſtood Evangelically. For the Goſpel is not interpreted as the Goſpel, unleſs it be ſuppos'd, to ſpeak of things Evangelical, and not of quite diſſonant kind of things, ſuch as the Formation of the Bodies of Gnats and Fleas by a Philoſophic kind of demiurgic Logos, that is the great Opificer of mundane Nature and containeth the exemplar Idea's of all mundane things. It is not imaginable, that ſuch a Logos and his Creation ſhould have any place in Chriſt's Evangely, which is not concern'd about the Formation of a World of Animals, but the Sanctity and Salvation of a World of Sinners. It is no more than every man will do, to interpret a Book of Metaphyſicks or Mathematicks, to ſpeak of things Metaphyſical or Mathematical: Yet in Theology thus much will not be allowed to be done, to interpret a Chriſtian Evangeliſt writing the Hiſtory of Chriſt's Evangely to ſpeak of the things Evangelical, but his Sayings muſt be diſtorted to things Philoſophical or Moſaical, the matters of mundane Nature and common Providence. This Diſeaſe is hereditarily deriv'd from the ancient Writers of the Church; for ſuch Texts of the Old Teſtament that manifeſtly ſpeak of the matters of the old Creation, they uſually interpret, to ſpeak of the matters of the new Creation; and ſuch Texts of the New Teſtament that manifeſtly ſpeak of the matters of the new Creation, they uſually interpret, to ſpeak of the matters of the old Creation. So the Apoſtle's Texts (wherein he repreſenteth Chriſt as the mediate Cauſe of all things in the Chriſtian Religion) all things are of God by Jeſus Chriſt, 2 Cor. 5. 18. One Lord Jeſus Chriſt by whom are all things, and we by him. 1 Cor. 8. 6. are by theſe ancient Writers interpreted to mean (r) that all things in Nature and common Providence are by one Lord Jeſus Chriſt. And Proclus in his Epiſtle to the Armenians argueth (s) If the (old) Creation of all things was not by Chriſt, how is it, that Paul proclaimeth, one Lord Jeſus Chriſt by whom are all things? If all things are by Chriſt, it is manifeſt, that he is the Logos of the Evangeliſt, who proclaimeth, In the beginning the Logos was with God, all things were made by him. But if the old Moſaic Creation had been the Subject-matter of our Evangeliſt's Diſcourſe, he muſt have diſcours'd of the things of that Creation; to have diſcours'd pertinently of it, he muſt have made ſome mention of the matters of it, of Nature, the Law of Nature, natural Duties, governing Providence, an habitable World, the Lights of Heaven, the Dignity of Man, the Affairs of Humane Life, Society and Government; theſe things would have been in his Mind, and ſomething of them would have been in his Diſcourſe, if he had been converſant about the Moſaic Creation: But our divine Fiſher-man is as mute as a Fiſh touching all ſuch matters as theſe, and ſaith not a Syllable of them; all that he thinketh of, and treateth of in his Proem, is wholly heterogeneous, and that which meerly appertaineth to the Evangelical Creation. If he diſcourſeth of the Moſaic Creation and of an Abſtract Logos as the Author of it, the Life and Light which he immediately connecteth with his Creation, muſt be meant of natural Life and Light, and muſt be the Attributes of that Abſtract creative Logos: Whereas on the contrary, it is plainly demonſtrable, that they are not meant of natural Life and Light, and that they are not the Attributes of an Abſtract Logos, but only of the Humane-divine Perſon of the Meſſiah, who can be the Author of no other Creation but the Evangelical. Our Evangeliſt is celebrated (t) for ſounding forth Myſteries, eternal Myſteries, and every thing that he ſpeaketh is ſaid to be a Myſtery. But what Myſtery is natural Life and Reaſon and a demiurgic Reaſon? If an Abſtract demiurgic Logos was well known amongſt the Holy People in the Old Teſtament-times (as is commonly thought) this could not be in the Church any great Myſtery. And it was certainly no Myſtery to the ſublimer ſort of Heathen Philoſophers, that were of the Myſtic-metaphyſical Genius, to whoſe Diſciples alone ſuch a demiurgic Logos can be a very valuable Myſtery. But the Evangelical Word and Life and Light and the Evangelical Creation are great Myſteries indeed and infinitely valuable, and are celebrated by the Holy Writers as an eternal Myſtery. Rom. 16. 25, 26. Eph. 3. 9, 11. Col. 1. 26. 2 Tim. 1. 9.

(r) S. Hilar. de Trin. l. 4. S. Athanas. c. Arian. or. 3. p. 210. Com. S. Baſil. adv. Eunom. l. 5. p. 12?.

(s) Ap. Petav. de Trin. l. 3. c. 11. S. 7.

The New Teſtament muſt be interpreted by the New Teſtament. As S. Paul when he ſaith of Chriſt, by whom are all things, muſt be underſtood to mean the Evangelical or New Teſtament all things: So our Chriſtian Evangeliſt when he ſaith of Chriſt, all things are made by him, muſt be underſtood to mean all things of the Creation of God, the Evangelical Creation. And his other Text wherein he attributeth a Creation of the World to his Logos, will have no difficulty in it, if (agreeably to his Character and the Nature of his writing) we underſtand it to be meant of the Evangelical Creation of all things. For in this divine Creation of all things the World (Mundus Humanus) was made by him as to the Theopoliticals (or Chriſto-politicals) in greater or leſſer degree it was made by him (the believing part of it was made by him in greater degree, the other part of it in leſſer degree) it had a making by him and from him, who was the new Maker thereof. The Evangeliſt's Intention is not only to attribute a Creation to his Logos, but to deſcribe it, and to repreſent a magnifying Idea of it, as if he had ſaid, ſuch was his Creation, the World was made by him. And being a Chriſtian Evangeliſt writing an Evangely, he might juſtly ſuppoſe, that all Men would underſtand him, to mean Evangelically, eſpecially ſeeing the tenour of his Words plainly directeth ſo to interpret them. For when he ſaith of his Chriſtian Logos, he was in the World, and the World was made by him, the words imply, that he was in the World amongſt Men and in his miſſive Oeconomy, when the World was made by him. He was in the World and ſo the World was made by him. Beſides, the Evangeliſt's words cannot be ſuppos'd, to charge the World with Ingratitude, becauſe they did not acknowledge Chriſt, who was their Creator in the old Creation. For it is no Chriſtian Duty, to own Chriſt as our Maker in that Creation: Nor doth the Scripture ever demand of Mankind any Duty unto him upon account of that Creation. But they are juſtly chargeable with great Blindneſs, Wickedneſs and Worldlineſs, becauſe he was in the World, and (in his Divine Creation of all things) the World was made by him, and the World (as to the generality of it) knew him not. In making the new Kingdom of God the World was neceſſarily made by him (partly in a greater and partly in a leſſer degree) it was made by him as to the Theopoliticals, it was made his redeem'd World, of Right and by Obligation and in State his Subjects. And is not this Interpretation more agreeable to the Chriſtian Sentiment than a Philoſophic demiurgic Logos a Principle of the mundane Creation?

VIII. To unprejudic'd Reaſon it is not imaginable, that the Subject-matter of the Evangeliſt's Diſcourſe ſhould be the Moſaic Creation. For it is not imaginable, that the Evangeliſt diſcourſing of a Logos and of the Creation ſhould overlook and pretermit his own kind of Logos and Creation, the recent and proximate Creation, the far moſt excellent and divine Creation, and ſhould only inſiſt upon a foreign and exotick kind of Logos, a foreign and exotick kind of Creation, an hugely remote and diſtant Creation, a far meaner and leſs excellent Creation. The Humane-divine Perſon of Chriſt (the Evangelical Word) as he is the Saint of God-kind of Son, is ally'd to the Family of regenerate Chriſtians, he is the Founder of it and their kind of creative Logos, not the natural Man's kind of creative Logos, not a mundane kind of creative Logos, not a common kind of creative Logos, not an exotick; and is not this he, of whom the Evangeliſt ſaith, the World knew him not? His Creation as it is the Evangelical and Chriſtian, is the regenerate Chriſtians kind of Creation, not the natural Man's kind of Creation, not the mundane and common kind of Creation, not an exotick; and is not this the Creation wherein the Chriſtians all things were made? This Creation was recent and newly done, when the Evangeliſt wrote, and he could not but be highly affected with it; and can it be ſuppoſed, that he overlook'd and pretermitted this proximate Creation and his own kind of Creation, to treat of another kind of Creation, that was ſeveral Thouſand of Years remote, paſt and diſtant? He could not overlook the God-kind

(t) Omnes quidem ſancti Evangeliſtæ, omnes Apoſtoli præter proditorem, omnes ſancti. Tamen ſanctus Johannes, qui ultimus ſcripſit Evangelium, quaſi neceſſarius requiſitus & electus à Chriſto, majore quidem tuba fudit æterna myſteria. Quicquid locutus eſt, myſterium eſt. S. Ambroſ. de Sacram. l. 3. c. 2.

kind of creative Logos, nor the God-kind of Creation (the Creation of God) which far tranſcendeth the Moſaical Creation, that (in reſpect of the Goods and Excellencies of it) was but a Terreſtrial-animal and Humane kind of Creation. The Evangelical Creation was much more difficult and (u) much more divine than the Moſaical (w) for which reaſon Chriſtians call it the new Creation. So all Chriſtians ſpeak, they call our Redemption the new Creation. Whence an Anſwer may be made to an Objection, which concerneth our Interpretation of the Evangeliſt, although the Objection is made againſt that Interpretation of the Evangeliſt, which Socinus and his Followers have made. (x) Novam creationem ſtatuunt ſine nova creatura. They ſuppoſe a new Creation without any new Creature. But this is no valid Objection againſt our Interpretation of the Evangeliſt's Creation; for we ſuppoſe, that the great Work of our Redemption was the making the Chriſtian Religion, which is the new Conſtitution of all things conſtitutively made (after which it is executively introduc'd) that this is in great part the new Creation; and no Man of Senſe will think it an Abſurdity, to ſuppoſe, that there may be ſuch a new Creation before any new Creature be made. We are concern'd alſo to ſay ſomething to that, which ſome learned Men have diſcours'd touching the Socinians Interpretation of our Evangeliſt's Creation, againſt which they have objected, that the Firſt Chapter of Geneſis may as well be interpreted of the Creation of the Commonwealth of Iſrael, and not of the natural and material World. But what do theſe Objectors think of the Men of their Sentiment, who interpret the Firſt of Geneſis, literally to ſpeak of the great myſterious things of the new Creation, which is as abſurd and incongruous, as to interpret it of the Creation of the Commonwealth of Iſrael? If they acknowledge (with all Chriſtians) that the Redemption of the World is the new Creation, they may reaſonably ſuppoſe, that the World was made by the great Redeemer of it as ſuch, and they muſt ſuppoſe, that the Univerſe was made by him, ſo as to be a New and Chriſtiano-conſtituted Univerſe, and as it is ſuch an Univerſe. To interpret a Chriſtian Evangeliſt's making the World of this Creation of it, is not like the diſtorting the Firſt of Geneſis, to ſignifie the Creation of the Commonwealth of Iſrael. Is it poſſible, that a Chriſtian Evangeliſt writing the Hiſtory of the Redeemer of the World, ſhould be totally ſilent touching his Creation as ſuch, and in all his Elogies of him ſhould only mention an alien and heterogeneous Creation? It is not eaſie, to ſay, whether the Socinians Interpretation of our Evangeliſt's Creation be more abſurd, who ſuppoſe him by making the World, to mean only a morally reforming the manners of it; or theirs, who ſuppoſe a Chriſtian Evangely, to be an Hiſtory of the Geneſis of the natural and material World. The Firſt of Geneſis muſt be interpreted according to the Nature and Genius of ſuch a Chapter, which manifeſtly treateth of the natural and material World. The Book of the Apocalypſe muſt be interpreted according to the Nature and Genius of ſuch a Book, which myſtically treateth of the State of the Church of the New Teſtament. So our Evangeliſt's Proem muſt be interpreted according to the Nature and Genius of ſuch a Writing, which manifeſtly treateth of the Redeemer of the World and of his Creation as ſuch. His Logos is the Evangelical Word of Life, who as ſuch is by officiary Dignity the Redeemer and new Maker of the World, which is at leaſt ſo far Chriſtianiz'd by him, as to be made a redeemed World, and at leaſt in a leſſer degree of Right and in State Chriſt's Subjects. But many that ſpeak great things of the Myſteries of the Chriſtian Religion and the New Teſtament, yet will not otherwiſe be ſatisfied, but the terms of Chriſt's making all things and making the World in our Evangeliſt's Proem muſt be underſtood in the obvious Senſe (and accordingly they interpret other the like places of the New Teſtament) which is to ſay, that the terms of making and creating muſt be underſtood in ſuch a Senſe, as every Fool would imagine at the firſt hearing. But thus neither the Old nor New Teſtament muſt be underſtood.

IX. The Texts of our Evangeliſt touching a Creation deſign to attribute to our Saviour Deity of Perſon (for they repreſent him as Creator, not Creature:) But this his Deity is only as to the New Teſtament-times and Affairs. The New Teſtament is a great diſplay of his divine Nobilitations and Creature-tranſcendences, of which a principal is his Creatorſhip, which in our Evangeliſt's Proem muſt be underſtood in the ſame ſenſe as in other Texts of the New Teſtament. But thoſe other Texts (as is before prov'd) do not attribute to him Deity of the old Creation, nor as to our Naturals, nor as to mundane Nature and common Providence, nor as to the Old Teſtament-times and Affairs; therefore the Texts of our Evangeliſt touching a Creation muſt be underſtood of the New Teſtament-creation. He had no intention to indoctrinate us to believe an Abſtract Logos, that was the Deity of the old Creation, as to mundane Nature, common Providence and the Old Teſtament-times and Affairs: But his whole deſign was, to indoctrinate Men to believe, that Jeſus is the Chriſt (Ch. 20. 31.) whoſe Deity as ſuch is only as to the New Teſtament-times and Affairs. When he ſaith, that the Word was with God, his Senſe is, that the Word was with God to the purpoſe of becoming the Evangelical creative Logos; and therefore he immediately ſubjoineth, all things were made by him; which muſt be underſtood with this additional Explication; ſuch he was in his miſſive Oeconomy, and as to the New Teſtament-times and Affairs. So when he ſaith, The World was made by him, it muſt be underſtood with this additional Explication; ſuch he was in his miſſive Oeconomy and as to the New Teſtament-times and Affairs. But touching the former Text Expoſitors have alſo obſerv'd, that it is uſual in Scripture, to repeat the Senſe of an Affirmation by a Negation of the contrary. Iſa. 38. 1. and 39. 4. Jer. 42. 4. and 38. 25. Lam. 3. 2. Joh. 1. 20. 1 Joh. 1. 5. So our Evangeliſt is not content, meerly to ſay of his Chriſtian Logos, all things were made by him: But he maketh a Repetition of this branch of his Narrative in a negative form of Expreſſion, and addeth a limitaneous extenſive Explication of it, when he ſaith, without him was not any thing made that was made. Grotius thinketh, that theſe words were added by the Evangeliſt in oppoſition to the Gnoſticks, who phancied, that of ſeveral parts of the World there were ſeveral Creators: But this is an incongruous Suppoſition. For theſe Simonian Gnoſticks were (u) Grot. Not. in Eph. 3. 9.

(w) Idem Not. in Joh. 1. 4.

(x) Cloppenb. Compend. Socin. Confut. p. 53.

Anti-judaical (Adverſaries to the God of the Jews, the Law and the Prophets;) if therefore our Evangeliſt had written againſt them touching the Creation, he muſt have aſſerted in the firſt place, that the God of the Jews was the Maker of the things that were made, and not one of thoſe Angels (Principalities and Powers) by which the Gnoſtics ſuppos'd, that the ſeveral Parts of the World were made. But our Evangeliſt is only hiſtorically (and encomiaſtically) relating, not diſputing; and he is not relating Old Teſtament-hiſtory or teaching Old Teſtament-doctrine: But he introduceth a new Maker of all things, thereby ſignifying the Deity of Chriſt, who is only the Deity of the New Teſtament, and conſequently our Evangeliſt's Creation is the new Creation.

Of the Limitaneous-extenſive Explication and Repetition in our Evangeliſt's Text we may give another and a better Account, than that which the Scholaſtic Theology giveth. For it appeareth from our Interpretation, that the Evangeliſt addeth his Limitaneous-extenſive Explication (without him was not any thing made that was made) both to limit and confine his foregoing Words to the Creation which he ſpeaketh of, and to extend them to the Univerſality thereof. His Intention is not to ſay of his Chriſtian Logos, that abſolutely and unlimitedly without him was not any thing made: But that without him was not any thing made that was made in that making of Things, which he ſpeaketh of and contemplateth. His Repetition in the Negative form of ſpeaking is a dwelling and inſiſting upon his foregoing Affirmation, maketh it more full and ſenſibly affective, and he chuſeth to dwell upon it for theſe Reaſons. (1.) To repreſent our Bl. Saviour as the mediate Cauſe of all things in the Evangelical Diſpenſation, and not only actually, but neceſſarily ſuch. For being the procuring Cauſe of all, in this great Oeconomy of things without him nothing was made, and without him nothing could be made. In ſuch Senſe by him are all things, all things were made by him, nothing could be made without his mediate Cauſality. (2.) The Evangeliſt inſiſteth upon his Affirmation (all things were made by him) the more fully to repreſent our Saviour as Lord of the Evangelical all things. For he is ſo the mediate Cauſe of all things in the Chriſtian Religion, as to be a Sovereign Diſpoſer and Lord of Affairs; and he can be no leſs than ſo being (not Creature, but) Creator; for all things were made by him. He is the Lord of our Religion, of the Church and of the Univerſe, the Lord of our Wiſdom, Righteouſneſs, Life and Salvation, the Lord of the Vineyard and of the Harveſt, and our Religion is his Affair and Buſineſs. 1 Cor. 3. 5. (3.) The Evangeliſt inſiſteth upon his Affirmation (all things were made by him) to make all Men (and Chriſtians more eſpecially) ſenſible of the origin of their all things; that by and in Chriſt they have all things (as to Spirituals and Eternals) but out of him nothing. For as to the matters of Life and Salvation for a ſinful World without him nothing was made. Having now given a full account of our Evangeliſt's Proem, I will humbly bleſs God, that hath inabled me, to reſcue out of the Hands of the Scholaſtic Divines (Ancient and Modern) this choice and divine Portion of Scripture, the miſtaken Interpretation whereof was the Fountain of that Scholaſtic Theology, which prevail'd in the Church in ancient times (to the infinite prejudice of Chriſtianity) and ever ſince it hath been accounted the Caſtle and Fortreſs of the Scholaſtic Theology, whereby it hath been thought ſo ſtrongly defended, as to be impregnable. Many have thought, that departing from the Scholaſtic Theology it is impoſſible to make any good Sence of this divine Proem: But the contrary is moſt true; for without departing from the Scholaſtic Theology it is impoſſible to make any tolerable good Senſe of it. Some have ſaid, that it is a ſhameful thing, to ſuppoſe, that any thing which Chriſt hath done for the Redemption of Mankind, is a creating them (as if the ſame thing did not admit of different Notions and Conſiderations:) But who they are, that ought to be aſham'd of their Interpretation of this divine Proem, will beſt be underſtood by comparing the different Interpretations of it and the Reaſons on which they are founded; of which matters all Men may ſatisfie themſelves.

CHAP. XII.

1. An Idea of the new Creation in the uſual and ſtricter Acceptation, which is the Chriſtian Religion, conſider'd both as it is the new Conſtitution of all things conſtitutively made and executively introduc'd. 2. This importeth a Diſtribution of things into old and new. 3. And that all old things are paſt away. 4. And that if any Man is in Chriſt, he is a new Creature. 5. The Chriſtians new Creation is a great thing and a great change in the Univerſe and of Man. 6. The new Creation as it is the Chriſtian Religion executively introduc'd is an Evidence of our Saviour's Divinity and the Truth of his Meſſias-ſhip. 7. The Chriſtians new Creation is a great Obligation to Holineſs of Life.

I. TO repreſent an Idea of the new Creation in the uſual and ſtricter Acceptation, the Chriſtian Religion muſt be conſider'd as the new Conſtitution of all things, both as it is conſtitutively made, and as it is executively introduc'd. For the Idea of the new Creation (in the ſtricter Acceptation) compriſeth both theſe in conjunction, which therefore are uſually conjoyn'd by the ancient Writers in their Accounts of it. As in that of Tertullian before cited. (y) Touching the Meſſiah it is in the firſt place to be enquir'd, whether we muſt not expect the Inſtitutor of a new Law, and of a new Teſtament, and of new Sacrifices, and of a new Circumciſion, and of an eternal Sabbath: one that abrogateth the old Law, appointeth a new Teſtament and new Sacrifices, aboliſheth the old Ceremonies, and the old Circumciſion with its Sabbath, and preacheth a new Kingdom not to be deſtroy'd. From Teſtimonies of Scripture it appeareth (z) that the firſt Carnal Circumciſion was to be aboliſh'd, the former Moſaic Law, the old Yoke, the old Paſtors, the old Temple of God, the old Sacrifice and the old Prieſthood were to ceaſe. And a ſecond ſpiritual Circumciſion, a new Law, a new Teſtament, a new Yoke, new Paſtors, a new Sacrifice, and a new Prieſthood ſhould ſucceed; and that there are two People predicted, the old and the new. (a) In Chriſtianity there is a new Soul, (for it is cleans'd) and a new Body, a new Worſhip and new Promiſes, and Teſtament and Life, and Table and Veſtment, and abſolutely all things new. Inſtead of a Jeruſalem below, we have a Metropolis above; and a ſpiritual Temple inſtead of a ſenſible one, fleſhy Tables inſtead of Tables of Stone, Baptiſm inſtead of Circumciſion, the Body of the Lord inſtead of Manna, inſtead of Water out of the Rock Blood out of his Side, the Croſs inſtead of the Rod of Moſes or Aaron, the Kingdom of Heaven inſtead of the promiſed Land, one High-prieſt inſtead of Prieſts innumerable, and a ſpiritual Lamb inſtead of a brutal Lamb. In this new Creation of all things a principal thing that was made, was the State of Remiſſion of Sins, (or of Righteouſneſs) which was made and provided for the World of Sinners, but cannot be enjoy'd by them till they become Chriſtian Believers. Divines therefore conſider it as conſtitutively made and as executively introduc'd. (b) In the Death of Chriſt Reconciliation was made (a Settlement of the State of Reconciliation:) but it is by Faith that it is executively introduc'd. Chriſtians come out of their old Eſtate, (the State of Sin and Condemnation) and enter into their new Eſtate, (the State of Grace and Reconcilement and Citizenſhip in the Kingdom of God) by this new Conſtitution of all things, the executive Introduction whereof is the making regenerate Chriſtians, the new World of regenerate Believers, which is the Church. (c) God made the Iſraelitical People to himſelf by freeing them from the Thraldom of Egypt; the Chriſtian People he hath made to himſelf by freeing us from the Servitude of Vice. This is the new Creation, ſaith Grotius, who hath not diſtinctly enough repreſented the Extent and Amplitude of the new Creation in the ſtricter Acceptation.

II. The new Creation importeth a Diſtribution of all things into old and new, which Diſtribution is ſometimes made in a ſenſe of Indifference, without any reſpect to Praiſe or Diſparagement; as Matth. 13. 25. Every Scribe which is inſtructed into the Kingdom of Heaven, is like unto a Man that is an Houſholder, which bringeth forth out of his Treaſure (variety of Proviſions) things new and old. So 1 Joh. 2. 7. Brethren, I write no new Commandment unto you, but an old Commandment which ye had from the beginning; the old Commandment is the Word which ye have heard from the beginning. But uſually amongſt Chriſtians and by the holy Writers the old things are ſo denominated in a ſenſe of Vilipendency, and the new things are ſo denominated in a ſenſe of Excellency, as by καινὸς οἶνος, new Wine, is meant οἶνος ἔξοχος, eximious Wine. In this ſenſe the old and new Settlement of Religion are oppos'd, Heb. 8. 8, 9. Behold the days come, ſaith the Lord, when I will make a new Covenant with the Houſe of Iſrael and the Houſe of Judah. Not according to the Covenant that I made with their Fathers. The old and new Law, the old and new Worſhippers are oppos'd. (d) The moſt high God ſent from Heaven a Teacher of Righteouſneſs, that in or by him he might give a new Law to new Worſhippers. The Chriſtians call their new Law the Goſpel, (e) ſaith an Hebrew Doctor. The old and new Iſrael of God are oppos'd, for Chriſtians are the new Iſrael, novus Populus, as they are ſtiled in the Title or Argument before, Pſal. 114. in the Syriac Pſalter. (f) Utatur populus novus ad æternitatem vocatus Pater noſter. The old and new Eſtate are oppos'd, the one the State of Sin and of Death, the other the State of Grace and of Life. (g) For Chriſt by his Death hath ſav'd his People from the old Domination of Death, to which they were ſubjected in their old Eſtate; and by a new Commandment he maketh the new Man, to which the old Man is uſually oppos'd. (h) A new Man came into the World (who is the new Man in himſelf and to us) he gave new Precepts to the World, and to our old Life oppos'd the Contrariety of his newneſs. (i) He that introduc'd a new Eſtate of

(y) C. Jud. c. 6.

(z) S. Cypr. Teſtimon. l. 1. c. 8. &c.

(a) Ἀλλ' ἰδοὺ ϗ ψυχὴ καινὴ (ἐκαθάρθη γὰρ) ϗ σῶμα καινὸν, ϗ λατρεία καινὴ, ϗ ἐπαγγελίαι καιναὶ, ϗ διαθήκη ϗ ζωὴ, ϗ τράπεζα ϗ στολὴ, ϗ πάντα καινὰ ἁπλῶς. S. Chryſoſt. in 2 Cor. Hom. 11. p. 609.

(b) In morte Chriſti facta eſt reconciliatio, ſed non eſt executioni mandata: in morte Chriſti oblatum eſt ſacrificium reconciliationis, ſed reconciliatio ipſa non eſt applicata: ſed executio & applicatio reconciliationis obtentæ per mortem Chriſti fit per fidem. Cajetan. in 2 Cor. 5. 20.

(c) Grot. Not. in Eph. 2. 10.

(d) Summus Deus doctorem juſtitiæ miſit è cœlo, ut novis cultoribus novam legem in eo vel per eum daret. Lactant. l. 4. c. 13.

(e) Elias in Tiſb. p. 49.

(f) S. Aug. Ser. 182. de Temp.

(g) Ille enim qui venit per crucis irriſionem carnis perimere corruptionem, & vetuſtatem vinculi mortis noſtræ ſuæ mortis novitate diſſolvere: mandato novo fecit hominem novum. Res enim vetus erat ut homo moreretur. Quod ne ſemper valeret in homine, res nova facta eſt, ut Deus moreretur. S. Aug. de Temp. Ser. 39.

(h) Novus enim homo venit in mundum: nova præcepta dedit mundo: & vitæ noſtræ veteri novitatis ſuæ contrarietatem oppoſuit. Greg. M. Hom. 32. in Evangel.

(i) Qui contra mortis vetuſtatem attulit vitæ novitatem, ipſe contra vetus peccatum opponit novum mandatum. S. Aug. ubi ſupr.

Life againſt the old State of Death, he oppoſeth a new Commandment againſt old Sin and Corruption. The old things, to which Chriſtianity confronteth and oppoſeth its new things, (which are of a new Nature and Excellency) are the things of our Unregeneracy, (the things of the old Houſe) the Law-Religion, the State, Life, People, Religioniſts of Unregeneracy, the Vice and Virtue, Impiety and Piety, Unrighteouſneſs and Righteouſneſs of Unregeneracy, (which is proper thereto) and theſe Chriſtianity calleth old in a ſenſe of Vilipendency, making them either as nothing (in reſpect of Salvation) or as worſe than nothing. But there are ſome other things, which Chriſtians call old not without ſome degree of Diſparagement, yet not in a ſenſe of Vilipendency. (k) Such are the Books of the Old Teſtament, to which they prefer the new; and ſuch is the old Creation, to which they prefer the new Creation, of which the Apoſtle ſpeaketh, Eph. 2. 10. We are his Workmanſhip created in Chriſt Jeſus. (l) For in theſe Words St. Paul had not reſpect to the Creation, whereby we are made Men, as Oecumenius thought; but to the Grace in Chriſt, whereby we are made, not Creatures, but new Creatures. Chryſoſtom ſaith, the Apoſtle meaneth Regeneration, which is indeed another Creation; from not being we are produc'd into Being. What we were before (that is, the old Man) is dead; we are made what we were not before. The Buſineſs is a Creation, and a better than the former Creation. For by the former we live only, but by this we live well. Theodoret, Theophylact, Ambroſe, Chryſoſtom, Primaſius, Sedulius, Anſelm, Aquinas, all agree. So do the Papiſts at this day, Stapleton, Juſtinian; to ſay nothing of all ours. The thing is manifeſt therefore; we are created, that is, we are juſtified to good Works: therefore good Works follow Creation or Juſtification.

III. The new Creation according to the Apoſtle's account of it is of this Idea; It is the new Conſtitution of all things conſtitutively made and executively introduc'd, whereby all the old things (proper to Unregeneracy) are paſt away, and all things are become new, 2 Cor. 5. 17. In the Chriſtian Religion as conſtitutively made all things are jurally paſt away; and in Chriſtianity as executively introduc'd all the old things are both jurally and actually paſt away, all things are become new. For Chriſt died that his Liege-people might be in the holy and happy State of Regeneracy, wherein they are of the new and noble Birth, of a new and divine Family, have a new Father and Mother, (the Mother of all regenerate Chriſtians, Gal. 4. 26.) new Brethren and Relations, a new Lord and a new Law, a new Work and Buſineſs, a new City and Country, and a new Inheritance. (m) Omnia reſonant novitatem, All things that are in Chriſt, and conſequently the Types of them in the Old Teſtament, do reſound newneſs, that newneſs whereby thoſe umbratile Types are antiquated, and all the things of old Judaiſm (properly ſuch) are paſt away. The old Church conſiſting of thoſe that were born after the Fleſh only, (the Heirs of an earthly Canaan) her mundane Temple-Religion, outſide and pompous Worſhip, (ſuitable only to Unregeneracy) the old God-ſervice devoid of the Chriſtian newneſs is paſt away, (Rom. 7. 6.) and the Righteouſneſs that is in the Law, (the civil-religious Virtue and Piety of the carnal Jews and of ſuch as they were) is in Chriſtianity diſparag'd as ſpurious and illegitimate. All the τὰ ἐξωτερικὰ, the things on this ſide Chriſt and ſaving Chriſtianity, all the natural Man's Goods and Excellencies, (even thoſe of ſecular Learning and Philoſophy, of civil Virtue and human Morality) all the unregenerate Religioniſts gainful admired things, (ſuch as Paul's Judaical Advantages and Glories, Phil. 3. 7.) all the gay and ſpecious things of the World, (the worldly Man's gainful admired things) ſo far as they ſtand in Competition or come in Compariſon with the choice and ſaving and ſaint of God-kind of Goods and Excellencies, Chriſtianity at a great rate depreciateth and diſcardeth with all that is juſtly denominated the luſt of the fleſh, the luſt of the eyes and the pride of life. The old Differences between Man and Man are out of date in Chriſtianity, where there is neither Greek nor Jew, Circumciſion nor Uncircumciſion, Barbarian, Scythian, bond nor free, (theſe things are of no regard, Chriſt as he is Chriſtianiſm in himſelf and to us is only of regard) but Chriſt is all in all, Col. 3. 11.

As the State of God's People, the Manifeſtations, Appearances and Behaviour of God, and ſome of his Names and Titles in the Old Teſtament Times were hugely diſſonant from what they are in the New Teſtament, ſo the Chriſtian Spirit is hugely diſſonant from the old judaical legal Spirit, (properly ſuch) which as it was a judaical ſervile Spirit, judaically ſuperficial and external, cuſtomary and ritual in Matters of Religion, judaically ſecular and mundane, a judaical military and fighting Spirit, a judaical vindictive Spirit, a judaical zealotick kind of Spirit, a judaical curſing and anathematizing Spirit, a judaical hurtful and deſtructive Spirit, (judaically hurtful and deſtructive to our Enemies, or the Enemies of God and Religion) can have no place in genuin Chriſtianity. The things of old Gentiliſm alſo (properly ſuch) in like manner as the things of old Judaiſm; the old Heathen State, and whatever is of kind and quality Heatheniſm of Mind and Life, of Virtue and Religion, is all done away in Chriſt, and they that become Chriſtians muſt (n) τῶν παλαιῶν πατρῴων ἐθῶν ἐπιλαθέσθαι, forget their old Manners and Cuſtoms deriv'd from their Forefathers. (o) According to ancient Prophecy all things muſt be made new by Chriſt, ſo that we may ſeem to live as it were in a new World; for there will be a new religious Worſhip, a new Righteouſneſs of Practice, new Promiſes, new Beatitudes, new Men, new Laws.

In their new and divine Eſtate of Regeneracy Chriſtians are ſav'd from the Reign and Domination of their ghoſtly and ghaſtly Enemies, their old Thraldom and Slavery, their old Infamy and Beggary are paſt away, they are purged from their old Sins, their old execrable Villainy and foul Criminality is done away in Chriſt, upon account of whoſe Righteouſneſs ungodly Sinners are creatively made the Righteous. (p) For what elſe could cover our Sins but his Righteouſneſs? We the Wicked and Ungodly in whom could we be juſtified but in the Son of God only? ὢ τῆς γλυκείας ἀνταλλαγῆς, ὢ τῆς ἀνεξιχνιάστου δημιουργίας, ὢ τῶν ἀπροσδοκήτων εὐεργεσιῶν, ἵνα ἀνομία μὲν πολλῶν ἐν δικαίῳ ἑνὶ κρυβῇ, δικαιοσύνη δὲ ἑνὸς πολλοὺς ἀνόμους δικαιώσῃ. O ſweet Permutation!

(k) S. Aug. de C. D. l. 20. c. 4.

(l) Etenim his verbis Paulus, non ad creationem reſpexit qua facti ſumus homines, ut Oecumenius exiſtimavit; ſed ad gratiam in Chriſto, unde ſimus, non Creaturæ, ſed novæ Creaturæ. Chryſoſtomus, Τὴν ἀναγέννησιν ἐνταῦθα αἰνίττεται ὄντως κτίσις ἑτέρα ἐστίν· ἐκ τοῦ μὴ ὄντος εἰς τὸ εἶναι παρήχθημεν. ὅπερ ἦμεν πρότερον ἀπεθάνομεν, τουτέστιν ὁ παλαιὸς ἄνθρωπος, ὅπερ οὐκ ἦμεν πρότερον ἐγενόμεθα. ἄρα κτίσις τὸ πρᾶγμά ἐστιν, καὶ τῆς ἑτέρας τιμιωτέρα· ἐξ ἐκείνης γὰρ τὸ ζῆν, ἐκ δὲ ταύτης τὸ καλῶς ζῆν ἡμῖν περιγέγονεν Conſentiunt Theodoretus & Theophylactus, Ambroſius, Chryſoſtomus, Primaſius, Sedulius, Anſelmus, Thomas. Denique & hodierni Papiſtæ, Stapletonus, Juſtinianus, ut noſtros omnes miſſos faciam. Itaque manifeſta res eſt, creati ſumus, id eſt, juſtificati ſumus ad bona opera. Ergo bona opera conſequuntur Creationem, ſive Juſtificationem. Chamier. Panſtrat. T. 3. l. 21. c. 11.

(m) S. Aug. de C. D. l. 16. c. 26.

(n) J. Mart. Dial. cum Tryph. p. 287.

(o) Clarius in Iſa. 65. 17.

(p) J. Mart. Ep. ad Diognet. p. 500.

tation! O unſearchable Workmanſhip (or Creation!) O Benificences ſurmounting all Expectation! that the Iniquity of many is covered in one juſt one, and the Righteouſneſs of one juſtifieth many Unrighteous. By their ſaving Religion theſe are come out of the deadly criminal and penal State, and are in the uncriminal and uncondemnable State; their deadly Evils (criminal and penal) are paſt away, and they that were before of the alien and inimical, of the atheous, carnal, and mundane kind in Genius and Diſpoſition, Life and Practice (in vetuſtate corruptionis, in the oldneſs of their Corruption) are now become (q)
(q) Ibid. p. 494. καινὸν γένος, a new kind (of the Salutary and Saint of God-kind) and their old and vile Apprehenſions and Eſtimations, their old Sentiments and Reliſhes of things, their old Volitions and Affections, and their former unholy Converſation are now changed and paſt away. For they have put off the Body of the Sins of the Fleſh by the Circumciſion of Chriſt, Col. 2. 11. Such a
(r) S. Aug. de C. D. l. 16. c. 26. Change the old Circumciſion ſignified. (r) Quid enim aliud circumciſio ſignificat, quàm vetuſtate exuta naturam renovatam? For what elſe doth Circumciſion ſignifie, but a renew'd Nature, the Oldneſs being put off.

2 Cor. 5. 17. IV. The new Creation which Chriſtianity is, importeth, That if any Man be in Chriſt (in the plenary Senſe) he is a new Creature. To be really a Chriſtian, is to be a new Creature; in the Definitive Notion whereof Three things concur according to the Apoſtle. For by a new Creature he meaneth, one that is of the new Creation, one that is new made or created, and one that is made a new kind of Man according to Chriſtianity. He conſidereth a new Creature as one that is of the new Creation; for to be in Chriſt, is to be of that ſpecific Comprehenſion, which he is of, which is the new Creation as Executively introduced, the new World of regenerate Believers. The Apoſtle alſo having ſaid, If any Man be in Chriſt, he is a new Creature, immediately ſubjoineth a Deſcription of the new Creation (the true Idea of it) Old things are paſt away, behold all things are become new. The new Creation may be fitly expreſs'd in the Words of Seneca touching a
(s) Nat. Qu l. 3. c. ult. Revolution of the World, (s) Deo viſum, ordiri meliora, vetera finiri, God deſign'd to begin better Things, and that the old Things ſhould be ended. This was his Deſign in ſending his Son, and this Deſign he accompliſheth in him, and by him. In Chriſt there is a new Creation as conſtitutively made, and as executively introduced, and this demonſtrateth, that if any Man be in Chriſt, he is a new Creature. He is a new Creature, as being one of the new Creation, and he is one of the new Creation both real and perſonal. For he is one of the new Creation of Perſons (the new Church or People of God, the new Religioniſts;) and he is one of the new Creation of Things; for he is one that belongeth to the new Settlement or Diſpenſation of Things, one of the new Eſtate, the new Life and Practice, the new and Chriſtian Virtue and Righteouſneſs. Such a new Creature the Apoſtle conſidereth as one that is new made or created, when he ſaith, Eph. 2. 9, 10. By Grace are ye ſaved through Faith. Not by Works, leſt any Man ſhould boaſt. For we are his Workmanſhip, created in Chriſt Jeſus unto good Works. It is not the Counſel and Deſign of God, that we ſhould be ſaved in the Method of being the legal Self-ſaviours, by being righteous in our ſelves, by our own Works (good Deeds and Well-deſervings:) But his Counſel and Deſign of ſaving us is in a quite different method, by his Coſt and by his Sovereign Grace, and by being his new Creatures. For (according to this Deſign and Counſel of his) Chriſtian Believers are new made and created in Chriſt Jeſus unto good Works. They are creatively made the ſaved People and the Saints of God, both in reſpect of their State and their Nature; ſo entirely are they dependent upon God, and beholden to him for their new Being out of worſe than nothing, as for their firſt Being out of nothing. They are God's Workmanſhip (it is his Work to create them a ſaved holy People) his new Creation-Work. Which is not ſo to be underſtood, as if they were wholly paſſive, and did nothing in this Creative kind of Workmanſhip; for the Duty-part and the Benefit-part of Religion concur in their new Creation; whence they are ſaid to put on the new Man, and the Apoſtle requireth it as Duty, and the Summary of all Duty, to become a new Crea- Eph. 4. 24. Col 3. 10.
ture, Gal. 5. 15. The new Creature that he inſiſteth upon, is the Eſſence and Summary of Chriſtian Virtue and Duty, and denoteth one that is a new Creature, according to Chriſtianity, whom the Apoſtle defineth a new Man, new created, and created after God in Knowledge, Righteouſneſs, and true Holineſs. And this is one that is new made a new kind of Man, according to Chriſtianity. To be a Chriſtian indeed, is to be thus Chriſtianiz'd in Soul and in Practice; for when we were Chriſtianiz'd, as the Epiſtle of Barnabas ſaith, (t) having received the (t) P. 245.
Remiſſion of Sins, and hoping in the Name of the Lord, ἐγενόμεθα καινοὶ, πάλιν ἐξ ἀρχῆς κτιζόμενοι, we became new, being again created from a new Beginning, (u) Per Dei indulgentiam recreati ſpiritaliter (u) S. Cypr. de Orat. d min.
& renati, Created again ſpiritually, and renew'd by the Mercy of God. If Men are Chriſtianiz'd, the new Creation is executively introduc'd, and conſequently they are new Creatures. (w) And if any one be in Chriſt a new (w) Clem. Str. l. 3. p. m. 329.
Creature, οὐκ ἔτι ἁμαρτητική, he is no more of the ſinning Trade, (or the ſinning kind) Old Things are paſt away. We have put off the old Life, behold all things are become new. Chaſtity from Fornication, Continence from Incontinence, Juſtice from Injuſtice. (x) It is a new Creature that is in Chriſt, (x) Idem ibid. l. 5. p. m. 409.
which is, ἀφιλόνεικος ϗ ἀπλεονέκτητος ϗ ἰσότης δικαία, devoid of Contention and Avarice, and is a juſt Equality.

To be in Chriſt, is to be in Chriſtianiſm of Religion and Condition, (not in Naturaliſm and Unregeneracy) and nothing is ſo, but to be a new Creature. For in Chriſt Jeſus neither Cir- Gal. 5. 15 cumciſion availeth any thing, nor Uncircumciſion, but a new Creature. To be of the new and Chriſtian Creation, of the new and Chriſtian Birth, of the Chriſtian Family, of the Chriſtian State and Life, to belong to Chriſt (to conſort and ſymbolize with him, and be of his Affinity and Cognation) and to the new and Chriſtian Settlement of Things; to Chriſtianize in the main, and ſo as is eſſential to the true and legitimate People of Chriſt; to be of Kind and Quality Chriſtian (a Chriſtian kind of Believer, Liver, Lover, Worſhipper) is to be a new Creature. Yet in a mutilate and partial Senſe, ſome are ſaid to be in Chriſt, that are not new Creatures, Joh. 15. 2. They are ſo far his Intrinſicks, as to be his Subjects and Servants in a Political State and Relation, but not in a Senſe of Alliance and Friendſhip, they are not in the main in Chriſtianiſm of Religion and Condition, but are Aliens and extraneous (Chriſtiani ſine Chriſto) they are ſo in Chriſt, as in the main not to be in Chriſt. (y) For they are no Chriſtians, who profeſs to own Chriſt, but live not according to his Precepts. (z) We do not call him a Muſician (ſaith the Philoſopher) that doth not ſing well, nor him a Carpenter, that doth not uſe his Hatchet well; nor ought we to call him a Philoſopher, that doth not live according to his Profeſſion and Inſtitution. (a) All Men ſhould call themſelves by that Name, which denoteth what they are in Fact, and not call themſelves Stoicks, when they are in Fact Epicureans. As we call that the Statue of Phidias, which is formed according to the Art of Phidias: So he is a Stoick, that is formed according to that Inſtitution. And ſo they only are of Kind and Quality Chriſtian, that are form'd into new Creatures; and they that are form'd into new Creatures, are no further Chriſtian, than they are form'd according to their Inſtitution. (b) Why doſt thou deceive us, and being but a Vermin calleſt thy ſelf a Man? Being but a Caytiff, calleſt thy ſelf a Nobleman? (c) Ἄπιθι τ᾽ ὄνομα μετὰ τοῦ γένους. if you be of another kind, take to your ſelf another Name. Call not your ſelf a Greek, when you are in Qualities and Properties a Mede and Perſian. (d) All may bear Names according to their Profeſſions, but uſually they do it as inconſiſtently, as a cowardly Dog is called Lion, the Furies are called Eumenides, the Blind are called Seers, and a dull Fellow was called Noetus (as Epiphanius ſaith:) So a vaſt numerous Rabble call themſelves Chriſtians and Chriſtian Religioniſts, that as to the being really what thoſe Names ſignifie, are no ſuch Men. Their true Character is, They are Chriſtians no Chriſtians, worſe than none. Yet ſome diſpute, That theſe are the Members of Chriſt's Body and Spouſe, becauſe they are in Covenant with him as his Subjects and Diſciples. But this proveth no more, than that they are in a Political State and Relation of his Subjects and Servants, without being his Subjects and Diſciples, as thoſe Names are Names of Alliance and friendly Relation. In the Body of Chriſt, as it is a Polity, none but the faithful Covenanters can be ſaid to be his Members (his Citizens, the Members of his holy City) the reſt are Citizens, in the main no Citizens (being devoid of the Virtue and Duty of Members) worſe than none. (e) Can we conceive the City of God to be inhabited by Devils? Or is it poſſible, Chriſt's Members ſhould be thrown into Hell? Cives non Cives, Such Members of Chriſt's Church they are, as Traitors are of a Commonwealth, as Catiline and Cethegus were at Rome. In Chriſt's Body, as it is a vital Body, a dead Member is neceſſarily a Member no Member; for Naturaliſts ſay, that is not the part of a Man which is not animated, and fit to do its Office and Function. If the Eye hath loſt its Sight (ſaith Ariſtotle) it is no more an Eye, unleſs Equivocally, as an Eye of Stone, or a painted Eye. It is a monſtrous Paradox to ſuppoſe the Body of Chriſt to be conſtituted by the Limbs of Satan, and to call them, Bone of his Bone, and Fleſh of his Fleſh; which is to ſuppoſe them to be originated from him, and moſt nearly and intimately ally'd unto him. Such an Hypotheſis is not likely to make the Church viſible, unleſs Darkneſs and Wickedneſs maketh her viſible, which can make no Society viſible, ſave only the Kingdom of Darkneſs. But the Church is viſible by the viſible Chriſtianity of viſible Chriſtians. And as they that ſuppoſe all true Chriſtians to be inviſible (as to their being ſuch) do not mean, that there are no viſible Chriſtians: So they that ſuppoſe all true Members of the Church to be inviſible (as to their being ſuch) do not deny that there are viſible Members of the Church. And theſe viſible Chriſtians and viſible Members of the Church (which are, as to us, true Chriſtians, and true Members of the Church) conſtitute the viſible Church.

V. The Chriſtian's new Creation is a great thing, and a mighty Change in the Univerſe and of Man. For as it is the new Creation conſtitutively made, it is a great Change in the Univerſe; and, as it is the new Creation executively introduced, it is a great Change of ſinful Man. If it was not ſo great a Change, it would not be a Creation in that ſublime Senſe of Scripture, (f) wherein creare ſignifieth magnificè aliquid efficere, the making of ſomething new and wonderful. Numb. 16. 30. Creation properly denoteth ſuch Operation, which is Creature tranſcendent Agency (Agency proper to the Creator, which is ſupernatural and miraculous;) the new Creation therefore muſt be ſomething eximious and magnificent at a great rate. And it muſt be of great Amplitude and Magnificence, as being a Creation contradiſtinguiſh'd to the old Creation, analogous to it, and (in ſeveral reſpects) tranſcending it. And not only tranſcending the old Creation, but all other new Creations (ſo called in Prophetick Scripture, Iſa. 65. 17. 2 Pet. 3. 13. Apoc. 21. 1.) for the moſt eminent new Creation of Things poſſible or conceivable, was the founding the Chriſtian Church and Religion at the Death and Reſurrection of Chriſt, when the Kingdom of God, and the Settlement of all things appertaining to it, the Terms of Life and Death; the Worſhip, Service and People of God, were changed from old to new; the unchangeable God himſelf as the Deity of a Religion and Government, and as to his Diſpenſation of things, became a new Deity to us; a new Entrance into Heaven was open'd by a ſaving Religion for Sinners; Sin, Satan, Death and the Law were vanquiſh'd, and all old things (jurally) paſt away. Which ſtupendous Mutation of all things (g) was probably ſignified by the Earthquake and Eclipſe, that ſtupendous Mutation that was in Nature at our Saviour's Paſſion. Job 18. 4. Shall the Earth be forſaken for thee? And ſhall the Rock be removed out of his Place? Theſe are great Things (magnalia Dei) but far greater Things than theſe were done for us, when the new Creation of all Things was conſtitutively made. The Name of it, A new Creation, is enough to ſhame and baffle the little ſhrimpiſh Apprehenſions that Men are apt to have of the Undertaking of Chriſt, as if he came only (like a Perſon of little Deſigns) to die for the Elect, and to fulfil all Righteouſneſs for them; or (as ſome ſay) only to be a Teacher and a Lawgiver, an Example of an holy Life, and a Pattern of Patience in his Death, whereby he confirm'd the Truth of his Doctrine. Which Hypotheſis maketh him a Martyr, but not the Meſſiah; for the Meſſiah he could not be, unleſs he was by Officiary Dignity the holy Imperial Son of God, whoſe honourary Undertaking was the new making and founding the holy Empire (agreeably to the firſt Rank of Sovereign Honours, Fundatores Imperii) by the new Creation of all Things as conſtitutively made. This is the firſt and ſovereign Grandity of the new Creation, and the ſecond is like unto it, viz. The new Creation as (y) Grot. Not. in Matth. 7. 21. Gat. Not. in Ant. p. 36. 356.

(z) Ep Ct. Diſſ. l. 4. c. 8.

(a) Ibid. l. 2. c. 19.

(b) Ibid. l. 3. c. 26. p. 369.

(c) M. Tyr. Diſſ. 34.

(d) Tertull. ad Nation. l. 1. c. 5.

(e) Mr. Farindon Ser. 2. on Matth. 22. 11, 12.

(f) Voſſ. Theſ. Theol. p. 3.

(g) The reſt of our Creation our great Redeemer did remove with the ſame ſhake, which at his Paſſion did the Earth, and all things with it move. Mr. Herbert's Poems, Sunday.

executively introduced, that is nothing leſs than the making a new World of new and divine kind of Creatures, which ſpeaketh it a Work of vaſt Amplitude and Magnificence, and which in all the Parts of it, is a great Thing, a great Change, and a Buſineſs of Creature-tranſcendent Agency. For,

(1.) Such it is to be a new Creature (new created) in reſpect of the outward Man, as Sylla in Lycophron is ſaid, ἀνακτισθῆναι, to be created again by the Fire, and to be made immortal. Amongſt the Arabians, the Koreiſchites (who deny'd the Reſurrection) objected, (h) How ſhall we that are Bones and Duſt be raiſed into חליקא גרירא, a new Creature (to be a new Creature in reſpect of the outward Man, a glorious immortal Creature?) And if to be new and divine kind of Creatures in reſpect of the outward man, is a great Thing, a great Change, and a Buſineſs of Creature-tranſcendent Agency, It muſt be nothing leſs than ſo, to be a new and divine kind of Creature, in reſpect of the inward man. For both are a Reſurrection from the Dead, and a Reſurrection unto Life; the one conſiſteth in having a lucid, heavenly and divine Body, the other in having a lucid, heavenly and divine Soul; Grace is Glory begun, and Glory is Grace conſummate; they differ but gradually (as a Man and a Child) as the Schools ſay. A Reſurrection to an holy ſpiritual Life is analogous to, and of great Affinity with the Reſurrection to a glorious immortal Life, and is an Inchoation thereof. For he that hath wrought us for the ſelf-ſame thing is God, 2 Cor. 5. 5. (i) It is not Nature, but God, who (by his Creature-tranſcendent Agency) hath made us unto this very thing, to put on an Houſe from Heaven, to have a glorious Body. (k) By the Words hath wrought, the Apoſtle expreſſeth the Efficacy of Grace, whereby we, who were Aliens from an Heavenly Life, are made meet for Immortality. Whence we are ſaid, to be God's Building, and Creation, and Workmanſhip.

(2.) Such is the Change that this new Creation is in the ſtate of vile ungodly Sinners, and ſuch are the mighty Benefits and Privileges which they enjoy. For upon their ſerious Converſion to Chriſtianity and Godlineſs, they are in the ſtate of Nearneſs, Alliance and Acceptance, of Safety and Impunity, of Honour and Freedom, of Righteouſneſs and Bleſſedneſs, of Sonſhip and Inheritance; they emerge out of the oppoſite State, (l) and Vaſa iræ, the Veſſels of Wrath, become Vaſa miſericordiæ, the Veſſels of Mercy. By entring into Federal Society with God He becometh unto them a God, and they become unto Him a People (the People of his Holineſs) conſecrate, elect and peculiar, his ſpiritual Temple and holy Habitation, as God hath ſaid, I will dwell in them, and walk in them; and I will be their God, and they ſhall be my People, 2 Cor. 6. 16. They are not only pardon'd at the rate that human Governours ordinarily pardon penitent Criminals, that in ſome ſort pardon them yet do not receive them into Favour: But the Converts to Chriſtianity and Godlineſs are made Favourites, they are intereſs'd in the ſpecial ſaving Love of God (the ſame Love wherein Chriſt is inſtated, Joh. 17. 23.) in all the Divine Promiſes, and in all the vaſt Immunities, Rights and Privileges of his People. They are unſordified, dignified, ennobled, (that were before vile execrable Varlets, ſine re, ſine ſpe, without Inheritance, and without Hope) and are not only made the Servants of God (although a dutiful Servant, is humilis amicus, a lower ſort of Friend, as the Philoſopher ſaith;) but God is ſo kind to them, as to give them the neareſt and greateſt Degree of Kindred, to make them his Sons and Heirs, and Chriſt is not aſhamed to call them Brethren. (m) It is not only that we may live, that the Grace of God is given, that Sin is taken away, and the Puniſhment is taken away with it; but that we may be made the Sons of God, the Coheirs of Chriſt, and Heirs of the Father. They that were without Chriſt, are made the living Members of Chriſt; are joined to the Lord, and are one Spirit, derive Juice and Sap from him, as Branches from the Vine, and Life and Spirit, as Members from the Head; they have Communion with him in his divine Unction (n) in his Divine Offices (of Prophet, Prieſt and King,) in his Ignominy alſo, his Thorns and his Croſs, and ſhall have Communion with him in his Glory. (o) The Emperor Tiberius caſt Herod Agrippa into Priſon, and bound him with Chains: But afterwards Cajus Caligula (when he came to be Emperor) cauſed him to change his Garments, and to cut his Hair, placed a Crown upon his Head, and made him Tetrarch of Iturea and Trachonitis, and Governour of Judea, and inſtead of an Iron Chain he gave him a Chain of Gold, of equal weight with the Iron Chain. When this was done (ſaith the Hiſtorian) Men were ἐν ἀπιστίᾳ τῶν γεγονότων, in Incredulity of theſe Occurrences, they could not believe ſo great and marvellous a Change; which yet was but a trifling Mutation, in compariſon of that important Change that is made in the Condition of the Slaves of Sin, when in their new Creation they are releas'd from their ſpiritual Thraldom, the Priſon of Sin, the Dungeon of Hell, the Chains of their Luſts, of Darkneſs and eternal Death, are totally unſerviliz'd and unenſlav'd (as to Religion) cloath'd with the white Raiment, raiſed to be of regial, reigning Condition (their Head is deſign'd for a Diadem, as Tertullian ſpeaketh) and their Names are in the Book of Life.

(3.) Such is the Change which this new Creation is in the Nature of vile ungodly Sinners; for becoming Converts to Chriſtianity and Godlineſs, both in their State and in their Nature, they paſs from Death unto Life. (p) Thoſe that were dead, and ſuch as were no Partakers of the true Life, hearing the Word, ἀνεβίωσαν, lived again, as thoſe that are alive from the Dead. Such is the Chriſtians new Creation, which the Apoſtle often expreſſeth by being quickened (or made alive;) for both the old and the new Creation is the making living Creatures. Eph. 2. 1. And you hath he quickened, who were dead in Treſpaſſes and Sins. V. 5. Even when we were dead in Sins, hath quickened us together with Chriſt. Col. 2. 13. And you being dead in your Sins, and the Uncircumciſion of your Fleſh, hath he quickened together with him, having forgiven you all Treſpaſſes. God in quickening Chriſt, made a Donation of the State of Life (the State of Remiſſion of Sins) to his Believers; ſuch a Vivification they have (together with Chriſt) in reſpect of their State; but they have alſo, in conſort with Chriſt, a Vivification in reſpect of their Nature; for they are made alive (from the dead) ſo as to have and live a new and ſpiritual Life. The Chriſtian

(h) Hotting. Hiſt. or. l. 1. c. 7. ed. 1.

(i) Non natura, ſed Deus eſt, qui effecit nos ad hoc ipſum, ſcilicet ad induendum ſeu ſuperinduendum domicilium Cœleſte, ad habendum corpus glorioſum Cajetan. in loc.

(k) Camero in loc.

(l) Gregor. Mag. Pſal. 101. v 11.

(m) Οὐ μόνον ἵνα ζήσωμεν, ἐδόθη, ἡ χάρις τοῦ θεοῦ, ϗ ἡ ἁμαρτία ἀνῃρέθη, ϗ ἡ κόλασις συναναιρέθη ἀλλ' ἵνα ϗ υἱοὶ θεοῦ γινώμεθα ϗ συγκληρονόμοι Χριστοῦ ϗ κληρονόμοι πατρός Oecumen. ap. Chamier. Panſtrat. T. 3. l. 21. c. 2.

(n) S. Chryſoſt. in Cor. Hom. 3. in fine.

(o) Joſeph Antiqu. l. 18. c. 18

(p) Clem. παιδαγ. p. 3.

Religioniſts alſo proteſs riſing, and being riſen with Chriſt (whence the Apoſtle exhorteth them to ſeek the things above, and to walk in newneſs of Life) in their Baptiſm ritually and by their undertaking, they are riſen with him (by being his Believers, which is the Faith of the Operation of God, Col. 2. 12.) and if they are his genuine Believers, they are riſen with him into a new and divine State (given them at his Reſurrection) and alſo in reſpect of their Nature, they are are ſo riſen with him, that they are Chriſtianly alive, and live ſpiritually and divinely. They are born of the Spirit, which is Life, and are of a Religion, which is the Diſpenſation of Life, and whereby the Soul recovereth her Life; the old natural Man ſpringeth again, and the withered Branches of old Adam being tranſplanted, ſprout and flouriſh. (q) The Soul, grown old in the old Age of Sin, is made new, ὡσανεὶ ἀνακτισθεῖσα πάλιν, being as it were created again. (r) She regaineth (by this renewing Religion) her ancient Pulchritude, which is her Deiformity. And as the Ancients call the Son of God, (s) ἔμψυχον θεῖον εἰκόνα, The living Image of God, ſuch the Soul becometh by her new Creation. Origen thus deſcants upon the Pſalmiſt's Prayer, Create in me a clean Heart. (t) Our προαίρεσις, Purpoſe and Endeavour is not ſufficient for us to have our Heart altogether clean, but we need God to create it ſuch. Such a new Creation is (as it were) a new Heaven, and a new Earth, wherein dwelleth Righteouſneſs. (u) For from a clean Heart evil Cogitations do not iſſue any more, nor Murders, nor Adulteries, nor Fornications, nor Thefts, nor falſe Witneſs, nor Blaſphemies, nor an evil Eye, nor any other of the filthy things, (w) purgatio animæ, (which the Philoſophers were inquiſitive about) is a principal Deſign in this new Creation, which is not meerly a cleanſing Souls from their vicious Qualities, but an implanting in them the Divine Vertues; Nature is changed (which is extremely difficult) and they have in Chriſt a new Nature, together with the Inhabitation of a Divine Spirit, whereby they are guided and animated, ſtrengthen'd and comforted, and raiſed to an holy Magnanimity. (x) For they that receive the Word preach'd with Power, are filled with Power, which they ſhew in their Diſpoſition and Life, being prepar'd to ſtrive for the Truth unto the Death.

(4.) Such is the Change which this new Creation is in the Converſation of ungodly Sinners. (y) We that formerly took pleaſure in Fornications, now embrace Chaſtity only: We that did uſe Magick-Arts, have conſecrated our ſelves unto God: We that loved our Money and Poſſeſſions above all things, now bring what we have into a common Collection, and communicate to every one that needeth: We that hated and killed one another, and would not live with them that were not of our own Tribe, have now, ſince the Appearance of Chriſt, Familiarity with them, praying for our Enemies, and endeavouring to perſwade thoſe who unjuſtly hate us, to be of good Hope, that living according to the excellent Precepts of Chriſt, they will obtain the ſame things with us from God, the Lord of all. (z) So great a Mutation of things there was in the primitive Times, and ſo God changed them that were of the Satanical Brood, introducing (a) καινὴν καὶ οὐρανίαν πολιτείαν, a new and Heavenly Converſation, of unlikeneſs to the World, of depreciating and diſaffecting the World (its Treaſures and Pleaſures, Proſperities and Preferments) of reſtraining and ſubduing ſenſitive Nature, of warring the good Warfare (for Victory and a Crown) of departing from all Iniquity (not living in the habitual practice of any Sin, nor doing any Act of heinous Sin) and doing all good Works (as there is Ability and Opportunity;) ſo bringing forth Fruit unto God, and gathering Fruit unto Life eternal. Such is the Converſation of the ſerious Converts to Chriſtianity and Godlineſs, and ſuch is their Change and Amendment of Life. Thoſe Eyes that were before full of Adultery, are now turn'd away from beholding Vanity; and thoſe Hands which were before employ'd in wanton Touches and Dalliances, or in lifting up Cups of ſtrong Drink, are now lifted up in Prayer. He that before was a Swearer, now feareth an Oath; and he that before ſpake Blaſphemy and Profaneneſs, now ſpeaketh Holineſs and Godlineſs. He that before could not endure the Strictneſs of the Divine Laws, now couneth Piety his reaſonable Service, and all things Vanity, but Piety.

(5.) Such is the Change which this new Creation is in the Politick Capacity of ungodly Sinners. For Strangers and Foreigners, and ſuch as were of the Kingdom of Darkneſs, upon their ſerious Converſion to Chriſtianity and Godlineſs, are made Citizens of the Kingdom of God, and of the Heavenly Jeruſalem, (the City of God and his Saints) and Collegues with the holy Angels. The holy Angels above, and all the Saints of God of all Times and Places, are the Liege-People of God and Chriſt (the People of the holy League) and are link'd and combin'd as Fellow-Subjects and Fellow-Citizens into one holy City and Commonwealth. But Mankind are revolted from being the Subjects of the Kingdom of God, in their Unregeneracy they are Aliens (as in every Kingdom and Commonwealth, he that is not a Citizen and a Deniſon is an Alien) they have no Freedoms, nor any Rights or Privileges there. (b) For not any one that mindeth the Things of the Fleſh can be found ἐν ταύτῃ τῇ μεγάλῃ πόλει, in this great City. The Sons of Carnality and Wickedneſs are ſuch as belong to another Kingdom: But upon their Entrance into Chriſtianity and Godlineſs, they are creatively made Citizens of the ſupernal City, which is their new Creation, and a great Change. (c) Magnum Beneficium, ut de ſervitute Diaboli tranſlati ſimus in regnum Filii, A great Benefit it is, to be tranſlated from the Servitude of Satan into the Kingdom of the Son of God. Of regenerate Chriſtians there is great Reaſon to ſay, ἐξ οἵων εἰς οἷα, From what heavy things, to what high and holy things are they raiſed! And it appeareth from this Account of their new Creation, that (as St. Hierom ſaith) Grande eſt eſſe Chriſtianum, It is a great thing to be a Chriſtian. Which as it importeth a Change from being old, to be made new; from being far off, to be made nigh; from living in Sin to dying unto Sin: So from being vile Earth and miſerable Sinners, to be Cœleſtial Citizens.

VI. The new Creation, as it is the Chriſtian Religion executively introduced, is a Threefold Evidence of our Saviour's Divinity, and the Truth of his Meſſias-ſhip. For if we conſider the new creative Character of his Religion, the prevalent Introduction of it into the World, and the new creative Virtue and Efficacy that is in it (atteſted by Obſervation and Experience) each one of theſe Conſiderations is of great weight to aſſure us, that Jeſus is

Col. 3. 1.
Rom. 6. 4.

(q) St. Chryſoſt in Gal. 6. 15.

(r) S. Cyr. in Eſai. l. 4. p. 563.

(s) Valeſ. Diſſ. 2. in loc. quæd. Conc. Nic.

(t) C. Celſ. l. 7. p. 354.

(u) Ibid.

(w) S. Aug. de C. D. l. 10. c 32.

(x) Orig. ſupr. l. 1. p. 49.

(y) J. Mart. Apol. l. 2. p. 61.

(z) Ὅση πραγμάτων γέγονε μεταβολὴ, καὶ πῶς ἅπαντα μετεῤῥύθμισε, καὶ ἀπὸ δαιμόνων ἀγγέλους τοὺς ἀνθρώπους εἰργάσατο; S. Chryſoſt. c. Judæos, or. 4.

(a) Idem in Gal. 6. 15.

(b) S. Athanaſ. in illud profect. in peregrin. p. 778 Com.

(c) Cajetan. in Col. 1. 13.

is the true Meſſias, and his Religion is of God.

(1.) The creative Character of his Religion is of Affinity with an ancient Opinion among the Rabbins, touching the Renovation of the material World in the Days of the Meſſiah. A Party amongſt them there hath been, that have oppoſed this ancient Opinion, and have affirm'd, (d) That between the preſent ſtate of the World and the times of the Meſſiah there is no Difference, but only the Bondage under the Kingdoms of the Gentiles, or the Subjugation of thoſe Kingdoms; That there will be no Mutation in Nature, nothing new in the Works of the Creation. This was the Opinion of the famous Maimonides (whoſe Maxim was, Quod mundus retinet & ſequitur conſuetudinem ſuam:) But he is oppoſed by ſeveral other Rabbins, who diſpute for the Renovation of the material World (the more refin'd State of it) which, according to the ancient Opinion, muſt commence with the Days of the Meſſiah. But touching the Days of the Meſſiah, there is great Diverſity of Opinion among theſe Hebrew Doctors. (e) For the more ancient Rabbins expected, that their Meſſiah would ſuddenly appear (with whoſe coming their Reduction from Captivity, the Re-edification of their City and Temple, and the Subjugation of the World are connex'd) and that his Coming would be long before the End of the World. But becauſe of the long Delay of his Coming, the modern Rabbins have entertain'd another Opinion; for they ſuppoſe, that his Coming will not be till the Reſurrection, and the End of the World; by which End of the World they do not mean the Deſtruction, but the Renovation of it. Theſe modern Rabbins therefore ſo far agree with the ancient Opinion, they connect with the Coming of the Meſſiah, the Renovation of the World (a new World:) and this their Opinion touching the Renovation of the World they ground upon ancient Prophecy, which predicteth new Heavens and a new Earth. By the renovation of the World therefore, they mean that which ancient Prophecy calleth, The new Creation; which new Creation (with great Reaſon) they connect with the Coming of the Meſſiah, and conſequently they ſuppoſe, That at the Coming of the Meſſiah there muſt be a new Creation and a new World. From which Character of the Meſſiah it appeareth, that the Chriſtian Meſſiah is the true Meſſiah; for his Religion is a new Creation, his Church and Kingdom is a new World, and his Renovation of the World is the Genuine, Legitimate and Saving; whereas the Rabbins dream only of a Renovation of the material World. The many Predictions, Promiſes, Types and mighty Expectations of the Meſſiah, and the promiſed Salvation by him (together with the Reaſon of the thing) plainly demonſtrate, that his coming cannot be deferr'd till the End of the World. This Rabinical Suppoſition ſpeaketh the deſperate Obſtinacy and Deliration of the Jews, and that they are quite out of Hopes of ſeeing their (formerly) long expected Meſſiah. The firſt Coming of the Meſſiah muſt be long before the End of the World (as the ancient Rabbins ſuppoſed) therefore he is already come. And ſeeing a new Creation is connex'd with his Coming, this new Creation (that muſt be long before the End of the World) cannot be the End of the World, nor any thing elſe imaginable, but (agreeably to the ſpiritual Nature of the Kingdom of the Meſſiah) the Chriſtians new Creation.

(d) Mr. Mede on 2 Pet. 3. 1, 2, &c. L'Emper. Col. Med. præfat.

(e) Hulſ. Theol. Jud. p. 175. Hoornbeek, c. Jud. l. 2. c. 1. & l. 5. c. 6.

(2.) The prevalent Introduction of the Chriſtian Religion (or the new Creation) into the World, proveth the Truth of it, and the Divinity of its Original. For it came into the World naked and unaſſiſted by any ſecular Learning, or any Hman Power, expoſed to all manner of Force and Violence, could not be convicted of Falſhood, nor born down by Power. It had not prevail'd in the World, if the Jews, who were infinitely concern'd to do it, and eagerly intent upon it, could have diſcover'd any Fraud in it (which they might eaſily have done, if there had been any;) or if the penal Laws of Heathen States and Princes, and their direful Executions, could have ſuppreſs'd it; or if all the Machinations of Earth and Hell (for none of theſe were wanting) could have put a ſtop to the Progreſs of it. It ſeem'd not at the Riſe of it a Religion likely to prevail in the World; for Men were apt to be ſtumbled at the Difficulties of Faith that are in it (as to the Jews it ſeem'd abſurd, that this Man ſhould give us his Fleſh to eat) at the Plainneſs and Simplicity of the Chriſtian Worſhip (which is not, like the Judaical and Pagan, a ſtately Mode of God-Service) at the Severity of Chriſt's Precepts, and the Chriſtians Portion in this World (the hard things which he requireth of us, and bringeth upon us;) and more-eſpecially they were apt to be ſtumbled at the external Meanneſs of Chriſt's Perſon, a Meſſiah of ſuch a Guiſe ſeem'd contemptible and odious in their Eyes. He recommended not himſelf by any thing that is plauſible to Fleſh and Blood; he brought his Followers no ſecular Advantages, but great Diſadvantages, (for to be a Chriſtian, was to give up a man's ſelf to Scorn and Deriſion, his Eſtate to Rapine, and his Body to Racks and Flames;) his Religion was oppoſite to the World (to what the World lik'd and lov'd, and counted their Happineſs, to their Life, their Laws, their Cuſtoms, their Philoſophy, their ſacred admir'd things of Religion) and the World was as oppoſite to his Religion. No Impoſtor would attempt to introduce ſuch a Religion, not at all ſuited to the mundane Genius, nor any Worldly Deſign, and which was far more likely to enrage the World (as it did effectually) than to gain Entertainment in the World. They that introduced it were, in all reſpects, poor and mean perſons, not likely of their own heads to contrive this new Religion, not likely to baffle all the Wit, and Learning, and Power, and ancient Religion of the World; not likely of themſelves to undertake ſo great an Atchievement (againſt the mightieſt Impediments) as to make a new World of Converts. But by their Teſtimony the World was induced to entertain it; for they were perſons not to be ſuſpected, that with great Zeal, Diligence and Confidence, as Eye-witneſſes, teſtified matters of fact, of which they had full aſſurance by their Senſes. They were perſons not to be ſuſpected of any thing, that might invalidate their Teſtimony; for they were manifeſtly perſons of ſound Underſtanding, not ſo fooliſh as to be impoſed upon themſelves by palpable Deceits, nor ſo mad and extravagant, as to go about to alarm the World for nothing, and worſe than nothing; to undergo all manner of Hardſhips and Contumelies, only to make themſelves miſerable, or to abuſe others and miſchief themſelves to no end. They were men of common Honeſty, and more than ſuch, not liable to the ſuſpicion of horrible Impiety, that might render them liable to be ſuſpected of Impoſture; for as their Religion is utterly oppoſite to all Evil, ſo they are not chargeable with any Wickedneſs in their Lives. They could not be ſuſpected of any worldly Deſign in teſtifying to this new Religion, for they got nothing in the World by it, but loſt their earthly All, (their Livelihood and their Life) by it, which they might have ſav'd, if they would have been ſilent and have ſaid nothing of it. They muſt be ſtrangely in love with Priſons and Contumelies, and a Deluge of Sufferings, if theſe could induce them to go about the World to tell a known Lie. Nothing therefore but their great aſſurance of the Truth of their Teſtimony, nothing but the Senſe of their Duty and Hope of eternal Rewards, nothing but their Deſire of the Converſion and Salvation of Men, could prevail with them ſedulouſly and induſtriouſly to preach Chriſt throughout the World, and to expoſe themſelves to all manner of Hardſhips, and to Death for his ſake. No Man of Senſe can doubt but that in their Hearts and Souls they were the fervent Lovers of Chriſt, and therefore thought themſelves abundantly aſſur'd of the Truth of their Teſtimony concerning him. They were invincible and immovable in their Belief of it, no Threats nor Perſecutions could ſhake their Steddineſs and Conſtancy, they would ſuffer for it and die for it. They publiſh'd their Teſtimony of Chriſt on the wide Theater of the World, in the Face of his Murderers, in the moſt publick Places and greateſt Cities, (where the moſt inquiſitive Men were) and dar'd all the World to diſprove their Teſtimony, or to diſcover any Flaw in it. Which irrefutable and uncontrollable Teſtimony of the Apoſtolick Planters of the Goſpel is a great aſſurance of the Truth of it, and muſt neceſſarily ſignify conſiderably towards the gaining the World to Chriſtianity. But ſuch a Cauſe had been extremely inſufficient to produce ſo great an Effect (to prevail with Men to forſake their Forefathers, the Religion wherein they had been educated, to contemn their ancient Wiſdom and Virtue, and to make ſo great a Change, as to embrace Chriſtianity with all its Hardſhips and Incumbrances) if the interior Operations of the Grace of God upon the Souls of Men had not accompany'd the Apoſtle's Preaching, if God had not endow'd the Apoſtles with ſupernatural Graces (a marvellous irreſiſtible Wiſdom and Power of Speech, an unconquerable Fortitude, an admirable Patience, Meekneſs and Humility, with all other Graces which ſhone in the Converſation of theſe divine Men, and ſhew'd them to be Men of God;) and if God had not born Witneſs to theſe Witneſſes of Chriſt by plain and evident, numerous and uncontrollable Miracles. (f) For the Men illiterate and poor, and indigent and abject, had not overcome the World, if they had not been aſſiſted by Miracles. (g) Without Powers and Miracles they had not moved the hearers of new Diſcourſes and new Doctrines to relinquiſh their Forefathers Inſtitutes, and to embrace with Dangers and unto the Death their Doctrines.

V. S. Chryſoſt. Hom. 7. in 1 Cor.

(3.) The new creative Virtue and Efficacy that is in this new creative Religion, (atteſted by Obſervation and Experience) proveth the Truth of it and the Divinity of its Original. For when by the Preaching of the Apoſtles it was introduc'd into the World, it made a marvellous Alteration in Men for the better, they were chang'd by it (h) from their old Converſation, their Laſciviouſneſſes, Injuſtices, and inordinate Luſts, to an eximious Purity and the love of it, which he that conſidereth will ſee, that Jeſus attempted what is above human Nature, and what he attempted he hath performed. Philoſophy reclaim'd one Phædon and one Polemo, but by Jeſus Multitudes become σωφρόνων χορὸς, the Chorus of the Soberiz'd, that ſay of their former Life, we were ſometimes fooliſh, diſobedient, deceiv'd. (i) Do we not deſervedly admire the Power of the Word, that like an Incantation impelleth People by Multitudes to a well compoſed Life from a looſe, to a good from being unjuſt, and from being timid to ſuch firmitude of Mind, as to contemn Death for Piety? The Perſuaſiveneſs of their Word that firſt labour'd in conſtituting the Churches is not like that of Plato or other Philoſophers, that have nothing more than human Nature, but their Word ran very ſwiftly, or rather that of God by their Miniſtry, changing Multitudes that were by Nature and Cuſtom addicted to Sin, ſo as no Puniſhments of Men could change them, but his Word changed them, forming and faſhioning them according to his Will. Miracles of Grace were uſual in the Primitive Times, and theſe prov'd that a divine Power was the Author of them, as well as thoſe that were wrought in external Matter. Nor is Chriſtianity yet effete, it hath not loſt its new creative Virtue and Efficacy; for although the Chriſtian Church is extremely degenerate, pretending Chriſtians in vaſt Numbers tranſcend the Heathen in Vice and Wickedneſs, and the Miracles of Grace are now greater Rarities than in ancient Times, (Recedente diſciplina receſſit & gratia, S. Cypr.) yet at this day there are Multitudes of truly ſanctified and regenerate Chriſtians, who find in themſelves that this Doctrine of Chriſtianity is true, that there is a regenerate and divine Family, and having in themſelves a fore-taſte of the heavenly Felicity, they have as great Reaſon to believe the Reality of it as others have to believe the World's Vanity. They find that there is in Chriſtianity a Spirit of Illumination, whereby their Minds are enlightned (to diſcern the things that differ, and approve the things that are excellent) which ſometimes were ſo blind, that they were the World's Admirers and Lovers, counted the Matters of Chriſtianity and Godlineſs mean, abſurd and fooliſh, thought Sin a ſmall matter, a Life of Senſuality better than an Holy, and ſaw not the Turpitude of their flagitious Practices, nor their tremendous Iſſue. Their Minds were filled with dark heatheniſh Conceits, which are now diſpell'd by that Light of Life, which Chriſt hath promiſed to his Followers, and how can I doubt of his Divinity, ſeeing he hath opened mine Eyes? They find that there is in Chriſtianity a Spirit of Adoption, which giveth them a ſenſe of the Paternal Love and Favour of God towards them, (whereby they ſerve him with a filial Affection, and are the filial, not the baſe and ſervile kind of Religioniſts;) and they find that there is in it a Spirit of Life, for they feel themſelves ſpiritually alive, that were ſometimes dead as to God and the Life of living to him. They find alſo a living Law in themſelves and a new Nature which anſwereth to the written divine Law, and therefore is manifeſtly of a divine Original, and carrieth the Print of a divine Hand. For as the Law of Chriſt enjoyneth them to abhor that which is evil, to love God and Man, and the Children of God with an eſpecial Love, ſo their new Nature hath a deadly Antipathy againſt Sin, and a lively univerſal Charity is the Pulſe and Conſtitution

---

(f) Οὐ γὰρ ἂν τ̃ οἰκουμένης ἐκράτησαν οἱ ἀγράμματοι ϗ πτωχοὶ ϗ πένητες ϗ εὐτελεῖς, εἰ μὴ τ̃ σημείων εἶχον βοήθειαν. S. Chryſoſt. T. 6. p. 713.

(g) Orig. c. Celſ. l. 1. p. 34.

(h) Ibid. p. 21, 50.

(i) Ibid. l. 3. p. 152.

tution of their Soul. As they are infinitely bound to love their Saviour, ſo the Love of him is their vigorous vital Principle, (and as their Life and their Breath) and for them to deny Chriſt and Chriſtianity is as Death to their inmoſt Life and Nature. They find in themſelves a ſupernatural kind of Spirit, whereby they are inclin'd and inabl'd to live a Life of delightful devotional Converſe with God, of doing Good to Men, to forgive Injuries, to love Enemies, and to deny and vanquiſh their fleſhly Luſts and Appetites, whereby the reſt of the World are carry'd Captive. And as in the Primitive Times Chriſtian Believers had the Holy Spirit with the ſupernatural Gifts of it, whereby their Religion was atteſted to be from God, ſo in all Times they have the Holy Spirit with the ſupernatural Graces of it, which is the like Atteſtation to their Religion; for none can give the Holy Spirit but God only. If any one ſhould ſend forth ſuch a Spirit into all the Brutes in a Country as turneth them all to be rational, and maketh them all to underſtand and diſcourſe like Men, all that ſaw it would acknowledge, that he who can do ſuch a wondrous Work is of God and of divine Power. So the divine Power of the Saviour of Souls muſt be acknowledg'd that doth theſe wondrous Works in the Souls of Men, by his divine Spirit he turneth Sinners into Saints of God, and changeth Souls from the Love of Sin and the World to the Love of God and of Holineſs. Which is as great a Miracle, (being done againſt the greateſt Oppoſition and Impediments) as if one ſhould change all the Brutes in a Country into Rational Creatures. His renewing Souls ſheweth him to be the true Saviour and Phyſician of Souls, for none can do ſuch Works as he doth in the Souls of Believers. If he was not of God he could do nothing.

VII. The Chriſtians new Creation is a great Obligation upon them to all Holineſs of Life. The Rabbins ſay, (k) that Water is us'd in purifying a leprous Perſon to admoniſh him to look upon himſelf after that Ablution as in that very Hour created, (becauſe before the Creation of Man all the World was Water) and as he is renew'd in his Body to renew his Actions to Good, to rectify his Doings, and attentively obſerve the ways of God. They ſuppoſe alſo, that the ſhaving the Hair of a leprous perſon is deſign'd to admoniſh him (l) to look upon himſelf as created that day, ſo to renew his Works unto Good on that day when his Hair beginneth to grow. All are obliged to renew their Works unto Good, but they that are new created are minded of it and more eſpecially oblig'd to it by their new Creation. The Chriſtians new Creation is ſo great a Mercy, ſo high a Favour, and ſo coſtly unto God, that they are infinitely obliged to him for it, and infinitely oblig'd by it to ſerve him in a Life of Righteouſneſs and true Holineſs. And as in the old Creation all Creatures are made for ſome Work, ſome End and Uſe, ſo theſe new Creatures are made (in their new Creation) for an Office, Calling and Employment, and are deſign'd for this End and Uſe, to live a Life of doing all good Works. By their new Creation they are qualify'd to do them, and it is the Ordination and Appointment of God that they ſhould walk in them, Eph. 2. 10. He that would be at the vaſteſt Coſt and Expence to new create them that they might do the truly good Works ſheweth, that theſe are no Trifles in his Eyes. And as every Man that planteth an Orchard of Trees expecteth to gather Fruit from them, and the great Ones of the World expect no little Service from them that are called their Creatures, (becauſe they have raiſed them) ſo with great Reaſon God enjoyneth his new Plantation of the Trees of Righteouſneſs to bring forth Fruit, and demandeth a great deal of Service from his new Creatures, whom he hath ſaved from being Slaves of Sin and Satan, and made them his Servants, of Caitiffs Kings, of Sons of Perdition the Sons of God. His Servants in State and Relation muſt be his Servants in Fact, doing all the Duty that is eſſentially requiſite in ſuch Servants, ſerving him faithfully, and making it their chief and only Care and Buſineſs to be his Servants, who requireth abundance of Work and Buſineſs to be done by his Servants. The Citizens of his Kingdom muſt be the dutiful and loyal Subjects of their divine Sovereign Lord, which they cannot be that are Rebel-Sinners againſt him. His holy People muſt live as thoſe that are appropriated and dedicated to him and his Service, and therefore muſt not alienate, prophane or pollute themſelves, nor live to themſelves, but to his Service; and their Behaviour muſt be ſuch as becometh the Profeſſion of Sanctity, Eph. 5. 3. (m) We ought to act as the Sons of God, and to have our Converſation as his Temples. (n) If we are the Sons of God, if we have begun to be his Temples, if having received the Holy Spirit we are alive holily and ſpiritually, if we have lifted up our Eyes from Earth to Heaven, if we have erected our Breaſt (full of God and Chriſt) to the ſupernal and divine things, let us do no other things but thoſe that are worthy of God and Chriſt. To Chriſtians it is always ſeaſonable to inculcate this Exhortation, Recedant vetera, nova ſint omnia, corda, voces, opera: Away with old things, let all things be new, Hearts, Words and Works. They are new Creatures by a Law which obligeth them to become new Creatures, and by that Law they are oblig'd to be God-like in Soul and Practice; for the new Creatures of God are (initially at leaſt) created after the divine Image. But becauſe they are at firſt but initially new Creatures, (Cœleſtes & ſpirituales eſſe cæpimus, (o) we have begun to be heavenly and ſpiritual) they are oblig'd by that Law to be by degrees more entirely and perfectly new Creatures, (p) νέους ἀντὶ παλαιῶν ἀεὶ γίνεσθαι, of old always to be becoming new. They may not judaize or heathenize in Religion, Life and Practice, becauſe they are new Creatures according to Chriſtianity. (q) μεταπλαττόμεθα γὰρ πρὸς καινότητα ζωῆς εὐαγγελικῆς, for we are changed into the newneſs of the Evangelical Life.

(k) Hottin. de jur. Hebr. Lex 173. p. 250.

(l) Ibid. Lex 174.

(m) S. Cypr. de orat. dom.

(n) Idem de Zelo & Liv.

(o) S. Cypr. de orat. dom.

(p) Gr. Naz. or. 3. in fine.

(q) S. Cyr. c. Jul. l. 10. p. 346.

CHAP. XIII.

An Introduction to the Contents of this Chapter, wherein our Idea of the Chriſtian Trinity is conſider'd and recommended. 1. Our Idea of the Trinity is of a good appearance. 2. It is ſufficiently intelligible. 3. It is of kind and quality Chriſtian. 4. It combineth the main Article of Chriſtianity with the main Article of Judaiſm. 5. It aſſerteth the ſcriptural Unity of God, which is largely proved. 6. It ſuppoſeth that no Trinity is to be admitted which deſtroyeth this Scriptural Unity of God. How far it is deſtroy'd by a Scholaſtic Coeternal Trinity. 7. Our Idea of the Trinity ſuppoſeth the Son and the Holy Ghoſt to exiſt in the Unity of God and in the way of his Monothe-iſm. 8. The Unity of God as imperial in his new Kingdom is our Idea of the Trinity, which voideth the Anti-Trinitarians Objections. 9. Our Idea of the Trinity is a golden Mean between two Extremes, that are two oppoſite extravagant Hypotheſes. 10. Our Idea of the Trinity ſheweth ſuch an Unity of Trinity as the Scholaſtic Theology cannot ſhew. 11. Our Idea of the Trinity ſheweth, that the Church may for the better change her Hypotheſis of the Trinity and the Myſteries connex'd therewith, and that according to common Prudence ſhe ought ſo to do.

ALthough the Chriſtian Church is manifeſtly founded upon the Faith of a Trinity in the Godhead, yet from her eldeſt Times ſhe hath had her Anti-Trinitarian Adverſaries, as well as her Trinitarian Adherents, and ſo ſhe continueth to have unto this day. Both Parties have ſtrenuous Arguments on their ſide, which is a certain ſign that they have Truth on their ſide, and the Hypotheſis of both Parties is incumbred with unanſwerable Objections, which is a certain ſign that both Parties are in Error. And the Error on both ſides is momentous, whence both Parties are not without cauſe zealous in their way. For the Anti-Trinitarians are palpably at an hideous rate injurious to the Honour of the only Lord and Saviour, yet they have great reaſon to charge the Trinitarians that they are very injurious to the Honour of the only true God. There is a mixture therefore of Piety and Impiety in both Parties, and there is a mixture alſo of Agreement and Diſagreement amongſt themſelves. For the Anti-Trinitarians have their ſeveral diſagreeing Hypotheſes both touching the Son and the Holy Ghoſt; the Trinitarians have their ſeveral Schemes and Explications of the Trinity; and ſome (Declaimers againſt new Theories) ſecurely deride and ſcorn all Schemes and Explications of it, as being of Card. Cajetan's Mind, In ſolâ ignorantiâ quietem invenio, Ignorance affordeth Reſt to the Mind, and freeth from the Anxiety that is in Enquiries after Knowledge. But this beſt Effect of it is accompany'd with innumerable very bad Effects. For Pride (a proud Ignorance) is the Product of it, (r) ἐξ ἀγνοίας τὸ τῆς ἀλαζονείας ἐπιγίνεται πάθημα, there is a Pride that cometh from Ignorance. Ordinarily it begetteth a fooliſh and ſinful Confidence, ἡ ἀμάθεια φέρει θράσος, A Fruit of Ignorance is Confidence. It begetteth a Contempt of the moſt valuable things. Omnia quæ neſcit dicit ſpernenda colonus. And it commonly begetteth a Contempt of the Wiſe and their Wiſdom, as Jul. Scaliger obſerveth. Nullam utique majorem ignaris inſcitia parit voluptatem quàm expeditum faſtidioſumque contemptum. Ignorance bringeth no greater Pleaſure to the Poſſeſſors of it than an expedite and diſdainful Contempt. Such is the Treatment which new Theories muſt expect (from the ignorant and unwiſe) and which hath been given (amongſt other new Theories) to ſome new Theories of the Trinity, which yet in Subſtance were not new Theories, but the ſame that were in the elder Times of the Church, which upon Examination have not been found genuin and legitimate, nor effectual to cure, but rather to increaſe the Evils of the Church. It was but needful therefore that a truly new Theory of the Trinity ſhould be thought of, and ſuch a Theory which neither violateth Truth nor Goodneſs, neither Philoſophy nor the Science of Sanctity, which is agreeable both to Reaſon and to divine Revelation, ſolveth the Difficulties and Objections of all Parties, and which all the contending Parties may agree in without any great Receſſion from their own Principles. Of this Character is our Idea of the Chriſtian Trinity, and with theſe due Recommendations of it commix'd with ſome needful Explications we will conclude our Theory.

(r) Theodoret. θεραπ. Ser. 1. p. 6.

I. Our Idea of the Trinity of divine Perſons is of a good Appearance and a comely Aſpect, it is not without due Concinnity and Pulchritude, for there is nothing in it manifeſtly abſurd and incongruous, or that may be juſtly called a monſtrous and prodigious Imagination. The Intellect that is the Diſcerner and Judge of Order and Decor, of Regularity and Proportion, can diſcern nothing miſ-ſhapen, nothing of extravagant Conceit, nothing of enormous Apprehenſion, nothing but what is beauteous and graceful in the Aſpect of our Idea of the Trinity, which muſt be contemplated both as it is an Imperial Eſtate (or Sovereignty) and as it is a Nature or Eſſence, and alſo as it is in part unoriginate, and in part originated.

1. As an imperial Eſtate, or The divine Regality.

It conſiſteth of

- The imperial Eſtate of God, (the imperial Eſtate of the Kingdom of God) the filial imperial Eſtate of Chriſt, (the filial imperial Eſtate of the new Kingdom of God) and of the Holy Ghoſt the Inſpiration-virtue of this holy Government.
- The political imperial Perſon of the Father, the political imperial Perſon of the Son, and the Holy Ghoſt an Agent-virtual kind of Perſon.
- The Father as the imperial Eſtate of the Godhead the Perſon of the Almighty God, and the Perſon of his Son and his Spirit as his Perſons in and of his Godhead, appertaining to his being God as an imperial Eſtate, the imperial Eſtate of his Government and Kingdom.

2. As a Nature or Eſſence.

It is of this Idea.

The one divine Eſſence of God is a Subſtance, that Subſtance is a vital Subſtance and the divine vital Subſtance (or Eſſence) which is vital Sanctity.

The one divine vital Eſſence of God, which is vital Sanctity, is both the vital Sanctity which is the meerly Conſtitutive, and the vital Sanctity which is the Communicative, (the Holy Ghoſt) the former he is as his conſtitutive Nature, the other eſſentially belongeth to him as to his Place, which alſo belongeth to the Imperial Son as to his Place, but with this difference, he hath it derivatively from God.

So the vital Sanctity which the Imperial Son is as his conſtitutive Nature, is that which the one divine vital Eſſence of God is derivatively, (which as this Derivative is the Son's divine vital Eſſence) as to the Father it is vital Sanctity the Primitive and his conſtitutive Nature, as to the Son it is vital Sanctity the Derivative and his conſtitutive Nature.

That Derivative vital Sanctity which the Imperial Son is as his conſtitutive Nature, and that which belongeth to him as to his Place, is no other than that which the one divine vital Eſſence of God is in the Comprehenſion of it, and conſequently it is that (that vital Sanctity) which is his divine vital Eſſence in the larger Notion and Comprehenſion.

3. As in part unoriginate in part originated.

This we ſay of it,

That God was neceſſarily and from Eternity the Imperial Eſtate of God, to whom the Holy Spirit (the Inſpiration-virtue of the Godhead and of the Church) eſſentially belong'd (as to his Place) which therefore is unoriginate.

The Imperial Son is originated, as being generatively introduc'd into the Godhead.

We know no Imperial Son but the Perſon of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, (an human-divine Perſon) the Head of the Church and Sovereign of Men and Angels.

God as in Chriſt is the Chriſtian Trinity. For God is the Father, Chriſt is the Son, God in Chriſt is to him derivatively that vital Sanctity, which is his conſtitutive Nature, and that which belongeth to him as to his Place, which is the Holy Ghoſt. My Senſe is, God is ſo in Chriſt that his divine vital Eſſence in reſpect of the vital Sanctity, which it is derivatively, is Chriſt's conſtitutive Eſſence.

Of the Scholaſtic Trinity the Anti-Trinitarians ſay, that at firſt ſight it appeareth monſtrous, contrary to Reaſon and common Senſe. But in our Chriſtian Trinity, or the Chriſtian Godhead, (Si non me fallat imago) there is nothing that is not agreeable and elegant, regular and orderly, the whole of it is a beauteous Idea.

II. The Myſtery of the Trinity according to our Idea is clearly intelligible, ſo far as is needful and as it ought to be. It ought to be intelligible in the ſame degree with our Creed, (for the Doctrine of the Trinity contained in the Form of Baptiſm is our moſt ancient Creed) and no Man will endure to have his Creed counted unintelligible, for every intelligent Believer underſtandeth both what he believeth and why he believeth it. And although the Matters of his Faith are incumbred with Difficulties, (as almoſt all things are) yet he hath an intelligible Notion of them, and can intelligibly notice them unto others, whom he is bound to inſtruct. The Doctrine of the Trinity therefore can be no Creed, unleſs it be of an intelligible Idea. Our Creed is our Catechiſm, the Doctrine of the Trinity therefore muſt be as intelligible as our Catechiſm ought to be, and therefore muſt be intelligible to the mean Capacities of the generality of Mankind in order to Life and Salvation. For a Chriſtian Catechiſm is Nonſenſe without the Myſtery of the Trinity, which ought to be repreſented in clear Terms, underſtood in a popular Senſe, that ſignify Matters, of which the generality of concerned Men and Chriſtians may form a competently clear and intelligible Notion and Conception. Such a Notion they may form of the Chriſtian Trinity according to our Idea, and the Anti-Trinitarians will not ſay of it, It is a falſe Myſtery, we have no Conception of it, no more than of Words without Senſe, and that we are like the Samaritans, who worſhipp'd they knew not what. But they have too much cauſe thus to reproach the Scholaſtic Trinity, which is not a Matter fit for any to be converſant about ſave only Metaphyſicians and Scholaſticks, and they find it impoſſible to form any tolerable Conception of it. (s) The Doctrine of the Trinity is ſo far above natural Reaſon improved to the higheſt pitch, that the greateſt Wits in the World have been confounded in the ſearch thereof. (t) The eternal and bleſſed Trinity which I underſtand not, I believe, and hold that by Faith which my Mind as intelligent is incapable of, ſaith a devout Abbot. A late Schoolman in the Entrance of his Contemplation of this Trinity maketh an Exclamation, which the Egyptians are ſaid to have made when they ſacrific'd, (u) ô tenebræ. ô tenebræ. ô tenebræ. Such is the Scholaſtic Trinity, (Darkneſs unknowable and inexpreſſible) which therefore cannot be an Inſtitution of the Chriſtian Religion, the light of the glorious Goſpel of Chriſt. Of the Words of our Saviour to Peter touching St. John the Evangeliſt, If I will, that he tarry till I come, St. Auſtin maketh an allegorical Expoſition to this Senſe, (w) My Will is, that what John hath preached in his Goſpel touching the Equality and Incommutability of the Three Perſons and the Incarnation, be a Secret and a Myſtery unknown unto Men till I come. Agreeably to which Scholaſtic Conceit it is now become popular Diſcourſe, that God will have the Myſtery of the Trinity inexplicable. Which cannot be ſaid without a foul Reflexion upon the holy Writers of our Religion, that have written copiouſly of this Myſtery. For it implieth, that either they did not underſtand what they wrote, or that they have not written intelligibly.

III. Our Idea of the Trinity is of Kind and Quality Chriſtian (not Scholaſtical, Philoſophical and Unholy) all the Divine Perſons of it are of a Character truly Divine and Chriſtian, agreeable to the only Fountain of the Doctrine of the Trinity; for they are Perſons of the New Teſtament's Notion and Deſcription. If we aſk, Who is the firſt Perſon of the Chriſtian Trinity? The Style of the New Teſtament reſolveth us, It is the God and Father of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt as ſuch. Rom. 15. 6. That ye may with one Mind and one Mouth glorifie God, even the Father of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt. (x) This is Stylo novo, never found in the Old Teſtament, but very often in the New. For this cauſe I bow my Knees to the Father of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt. Eph. 3. The God and Father of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt knoweth that I lye not. 2 Cor. 11. Bleſſed be God, even the Father of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt. 1 Pet. 1. As the old Covenant ceaſed upon the bringing in a new and better Covenant : So there was a Ceſſation of the old Style upon the bringing in this new and better Style. It is the Evangelical Style.---- To us Chriſtians there is but one God the Father, and one Lord Jeſus Chriſt his Son. This is Deus Chriſtianorum. If either you hope as Chriſtians to receive Grace from that God, that alone can give it; or mean as Chriſtians to give Glory to that God, that alone ought to have it: This, this is He, and none other; God even the Father of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt. It is a Style of Diſtinction. By this Style of Diſtinction (the Evangelical Style) we Chriſtian Religioniſts are diſcriminated from Jews and Pagans, Deus Chriſti eſt Deus Chriſtianorum, The God and Father of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt as ſuch is our God. This, this is He, whom in the Form of Baptiſm (the Doctrine of the Trinity, and the Creed of it) we acknowledge and profeſs to believe in; and this, this is He, who is the firſt Perſon of our Trinity. So the Expoſitors of the Creed aſſure us; for thus they diſcourſe. (y) Seeing nothing can be more clear than that, when it is ſaid, In the Name of the Father and of the Son, the Notion of Father hath in this Particular no other Relation but to that Son, whoſe Name is join'd with his; and as we are baptized into no other Son of that Father, but that only begotten Chriſt Jeſus, ſo into no other Father but the Father of that only Begotten : It followeth, that the proper Explication of the firſt Words of the Creed is this; I believe in God, the Father of Chriſt Jeſus. (z) Cultu Evangelii Deum ut Patrem Chriſti colimus, In the Evangelical Worſhip we worſhip God as the Father of Chriſt. Having thus inveſtigated the firſt Perſon of our Trinity, we will call this certainty The Foundation of God that ſtandeth ſure, from which all the Scholaſtic Theology in the World cannot remove us. We may imagine a Scholaſtic Co-eternal Trinity, wherein an Abſtract Logos, or Scholaſtic Verbum, is the ſecond Perſon, and the firſt Perſon is the Father of that Abſtract Son, and this is the Trinity of the Scholaſtic Theology, both the Platonic and Ariſtotelian : But becauſe in our Trinity the firſt Perſon is the God and Father of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt as ſuch, in that Scholaſtic Trinity the firſt Perſon is not the God and Father of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt as ſuch; therefore that Scholaſtic Trinity is not our Trinity. No Trinity can be our Trinity, which is not the Trinity of the Chriſtian Religion and Diſpenſation as ſuch, (this Trinity as ſuch is our Trinity, our only Trinity:) Whence it is eaſie to make a Judgment, how far Chriſtians are unconcern'd in the Scholaſtic kind of Trinities. For we ought to look upon them as Aliens and Foreigners, of an exotick (and illegitimate) kind, as being of kind and quality Unpopular and Unchriſtian. Our Trinity is the Saint of God-kind of Trinity, but ſuch is not the Metaphyſicians kind of Trinity. Our Trinity is the Summary and Rule of the Chriſtian Faith; but ſuch is not a Co-eternal Trinity as it is ſuch; for it is an Alien from the Chriſtian Faith, which is the Faith of Chriſt. Our Trinity is Chriſt's kind of Trinity: But the Co-eternal Trinity of the Scholaſtic Theology as it is ſuch, is none of Chriſt's; for Chriſt is not in it, nor the God and Father of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt as ſuch. Our Trinity is the Trinity of Chriſt's People as ſuch; the Acknowledgment of it conſtituteth, diſtinguiſheth, denominateth them, and is to them peculiar and appropriate : But a Platonic, Ariſtotelian, or other Scholaſtic Co-eternal Trinity, wherein the God and Father of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt is not as ſuch, may be acknowledged by Jews and Heathens, that yet remain Jews and Heathens ſtill.

(s) Mr. Lawſon Theopolit. B. 1. c. 7.

(t) Æternam beatamque Trinitatem, quam non intelligo, credo, & fide teneo, quam non capio Mente. S. Bernard. Ser. 16. ſuper Cant.

(u) Genet Clyp. T. 5. p. 1.

(w) Volo ſecretum illud & ignotum hominibus eſſe myſterium, quod Joannes in Evangelio prædicavit, de trium perſonarum æqualitate & incommutabilitate, & de proprietate, qua maxime diſtat à ceteris homo ille, quem Deus ſuſcepit. Petav. T. 4. l. 11 c. 4. S. 6.

If we ask, Who is the Second Perſon of the Trinity? Some Scholaſticks anſwer, The Metaphyſical Ens of the Platoniſts, others the Stoicks Logos, or the great God Pan; others the Jewiſh Logos (that of the Chaldee Paraphraſts or Targumiſts;) others the Moſaic Logos; ſome ſay, Reaſon, or a Rational Power; others ſay ἔννοια, a Notion of the Mind. Such a Variety of ſtrange Sons of God the Scholaſtic Theology furniſheth, to conſtitute a Co-eternal Trinity: But Chriſt in his Baptiſmal Doctrine of the Trinity, knoweth no Son of God, but the Perſon of the Chriſt of God, in whoſe Name we are baptized, and by the Acknowledgment of whom we are Chriſtianiz'd. The Chriſtians Chriſt of God as ſuch, (or the Lord Chriſt as ſuch) is the Second Perſon of our Saviour's Trinity; therefore no Perſon (real or imaginary) that is not the Perſon of the Lord Chriſt, is the Second Perſon of our Saviour's Trinity: Elſe we might have a Chriſtian Sovereignty and a Chriſtian Creed, wherein the Perſon of Chriſt is wanting: Elſe our Saviour's Inſtitution of Baptiſm would not compriſe that Profeſſion of Faith which is neceſſary to Chriſtianize us, and to qualifie us for Baptiſm. For in the Apoſtles times they that were baptized were obliged antecedently thereto to profeſs the Faith of Chriſt, which was their Belief, that Jeſus is the Son of God, or that Jeſus Chriſt is Lord. Our Saviour's Words at the Inſtitution of Baptiſm ſhew, what Perſon he meant by the Son in his Form of Baptiſm (his Doctrine of the Trinity;) for immediately before his Aſcenſion, he ſaid to his Apoſtles, All Power is given unto me in Heaven and Earth. Go ye therefore (becauſe all Power is given unto me) and teach all Nations, baptizing them in the Name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghoſt. The Son in our Saviour's Trinity is none other but the Perſon of Chriſt, to whom all Power in Heaven and Earth was given. They that were baptized according to his Inſtitution, were baptized in the Name of Chriſt, whom they ſuppos'd as ſuch, to be the Son of God; (This, this alone is the Son in our Saviour's Trinity;) for theſe Two Names, Chriſt, and The Son of God, are in Senſe the ſame Name, as to believe, that Jeſus is the Chriſt, and that he is the Son of God, is the ſame thing. (a) Theſe Two Names were by the Jews accounted equivalent. So they are in Nathaniel's Confeſſion, that Jeſus was the Chriſt, Joh. 1. 49. Rabbi, thou art the Son of God, thou art the King of Iſrael. Such they are in Martha's Expreſſion of her Faith, Joh. 11. 27. I believe, that thou art the Chriſt the Son of God, which ſhould come into the World. So in Peter's Confeſſion of his Faith (in the Name of himſelf and the other Apoſtles) Matth. 16. 16. Joh. 6. 69. We believe, and are ſure, that thou art that Chriſt, the Son of the living God. So in John the Baptiſt's Teſtimony concerning Jeſus.

(x) Bp. Sanderſon's Serm. on Rom. 15. 6.

(y) Bp. Pearſon on the Creed, Art. 1. p. 59. ed. 1.

(z) Tolet. in Rom. 15. 6.

Matth. 28. 18, 19.

(a) Bp. Pearſon on the Creed, Art. 2. p. 208. ed. 1.

Jeſus. Joh. 1. 34. I ſaw and bare record, that this is the Son of God. So in the High Prieſt's Examination, Matth. 26. 63. Art thou the Chriſt, the Son of the Bleſſed? So in the Expoſtulation of the Devils, (who learn'd it from the Jews) Matth. 8. 29. What have we to do with thee, Jeſus thou Son of God? As the Devils, ſo the holy Scriptures ſpeak of the Son of God, in the ſenſe of the Jews (as is ſelf-evident and the Learned agree;) therefore as according to the ſenſe of the Jews, ſo according to the ſenſe of the Scriptures, to be the perſon of the Son of God, and to be the perſon of Chriſt, is the ſame thing. Our Saviour himſelf counteth it the ſame thing to be the perſon of the Meſſiah, and the perſon of the Son of God. Joh. 10. 36. Say ye of him whom the Father hath ſanctified, and ſent into the World, thou blaſphemeſt, becauſe I ſaid, I am the Son of God? We have therefore abundant, plain and demonſtrative evidence, that as the Father (the firſt Perſon) in our Trinity is the God and Father of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt as ſuch, ſo the Son (the ſecond perſon) in our Trinity is the perſon of Chriſt as ſuch (and this none can deny, that underſtand our Religion;) from whence it followeth, that our Trinity is meerly Evangelical, and the Chriſtian kind of Trinity, and that the Scholaſtic co-eternal Trinity (Platonic or Ariſtotelian) is not our Trinity, not our kind of Trinity, but is of kind and quality exotick and illegitimate. That is not Chriſt's Trinity, wherein the Perſon of Chriſt is wanting.

IV. Our Idea of the Trinity combineth our Saviour's Meſſias-ſhip, the main Article of Chriſtianity, with the main Article of Judaiſm, The Unity of God; and ſo doth our Saviour's Trinity and the whole New Teſtament. God in the firſt Commandment (Thou ſhalt have no other Gods before me) took care to impreſs upon the minds of the Jews, next to the belief of his Exiſtence, the belief of his Unity; for this firſt Commandment is (b) περὶ μοναρχίας, touching the Empire of one, is καθαίρεσις τῆς πολυθείας, the deſtruction of Polytheiſm, (c) and is the Foundation (ſaith Maimonides) on which all the reſt depend. A great part of the Old Teſtament therefore is employ'd in inculcating upon the Minds of the Jews the Oneneſs of God. Hear, O Iſrael, the Lord our God is One Lord. The Lord he is God, there is none elſe beſides him. I am He, and there is no God with me. I am the Lord, and there is none elſe, there is no God beſides me; that they may know from the riſing of the Son and from the Weſt, that there is none beſides me; I am the Lord, and there is none elſe. Is there a God beſides me? Yea there is no God. I know not any. The Jews uſually inculcate his Oneneſs and Singularity in their devotional Aſcriptions to God. Thou art great, and do'ſt wondrous things, thou art God alone. That all the Kingdoms of the Earth may know, that thou art the Lord God, even thou only. Thou art the God, even thou alone, of all the Kingdoms of the Earth; thou haſt made Heaven and Earth. The New Teſtament, as well as the Old, inculcateth the Unity of God, and in Chriſtianity, as well as Judaiſm, it is a great Article: But Chriſtianity hath a great Article peculiar and appropriate to it ſelf, which is, That Jeſus is the Lord Meſſiah, the Chriſt and Son of God. Theſe things are written, that ye might believe, that Jeſus is the Chriſt the Son of God. Whoſoever believeth, that Jeſus is the Chriſt is born of God. If thou ſhalt confeſs with thy Mouth the Lord Jeſus, and ſhalt believe in thy Heart, that God hath raiſed him from the dead, thou ſhalt be ſaved. Other foundation can no man lay, than that which is laid, which is Jeſus Chriſt. Which foundation is expreſs'd by the Eunuch in his profeſſion of Faith antecedent to his Baptiſm; I believe that Jeſus Chriſt is the Son of God. This main Article of Chriſtianity is uſually in the New Teſtament, combin'd with the main Article of Judaiſm, ſometimes with changing the Old Teſtament Name of God into a New Teſtament Name, and ſometimes without changing it; as, Joh. 17. 3. This is Life eternal, that they might know thee the only true God, and Jeſus Chriſt whom thou haſt ſent. 1 Tim. 2. 5. There is one God, and one Mediator between God and Men, the Man Chriſt Jeſus. Jude 4. Denying the only Lord God and our Lord Jeſus Chriſt. But oftentimes the main Article of Chriſtianity is in the New Teſtament, combin'd with the main Article of Judaiſm, with changing the Old Teſtament Name of God into a New Teſtament Name; as, 1 Cor. 8. 6. To us there is but one God the Father, of whom are all things; and one Lord Jeſus Chriſt, by whom are all things. Eph. 4. 5, 6. One Lord, one Faith, one Baptiſm, one God and Father of all. 2 Joh. 3. Grace be with you, mercy and peace from God the Father, and from the Lord Jeſus Chriſt the Son of the Father. 2 Theſſ. 2. 10. Our Lord Jeſus Chriſt himſelf, and God, even our Father, comfort your hearts. Eph. 6. 23. Peace be to the Brethren, and love with faith from God the Father, and the Lord Jeſus Chriſt. In this ſtyle St. Paul's Salutations run in the beginning of his Epiſtles; Grace be unto you, and Peace from God our Father, and from the Lord Jeſus Chriſt. Our Religion is manifeſtly a combination of theſe two main Articles of Judaiſm and Chriſtianity; ſuch is our Saviour's Doctrine and Creed of the Trinity, which is therefore our Creed, and the ſummary of our Faith, becauſe it is a combination of theſe two main Articles, and theſe two political imperial perſons, the one true God and the true Meſſiah, the one true God become an Evangelical Father, and the the Evangelical Son of the Father. Who is not combin'd with God meerly as the Muhammedans combine their Prophet with God (there is one God, and Muhammed his Meſſenger;) but he is combin'd with God as the divine imperial Son, with the divine imperial Father, ſo as to be a divine imperial perſon of the divine imperial eſtate, our Saviour's Meſſias-ſhip (the main Article of Chriſtianity) is therefore duly combin'd with the Unity of God (the main Article of Judaiſm) becauſe Chriſt Jeſus is combin'd with God the Father, as the holy Imperial Lord the Son, of whom that Text of the Pſalmiſt, which ſpeaketh of his being begotten into the divine imperial eſtate by his Reſurrection, is three times expounded in the New Teſtament; Thou art my Son, this day have I begotten thee. This divine Evangelical Son as ſuch combin'd with the divine Evangelical Father as ſuch in conjunction with the Holy Spirit of this holy Government is the Trinity of our Faith and Religion, which knoweth no other Trinity. A Scholaſtic co-eternal Trinity wherein there is no combination of the main Article of Judaiſm with the main Article of Chriſtianity, is not the Trinity of our Religion, nor is it the Trinity of any Religion, and conſequently it is no genuine or legitimate Trinity. But touching the Name Father in our Trinity, it muſt be further remark'd, that it ſignifieth not only God's Paternity to our Lord Chriſt, but to the Chriſtian Family; for ſo it ſignifieth in

(b) Grot. Explic. Decal.

(c) Maim. de Fund. Leg. c. 3.

Deut. 4. 35. and 6. 4. and 32. 39. Iſa. 44. 8. and 45. 5, 6.

Pſal. 86. 10.

2 King. 19. 19.

Iſa. 37. 16.

Joh. 20. 31.

1 Joh. 5. 1.

Rom. 10. 9.

1 Cor. 3. 11.

Act. 8. 37.

the New Teſtament, ſo it is always expounded to ſignifie in our Creed (commonly called the Apoſtles Creed) and ſo it muſt be ſuppoſed to ſignifie in our Saviour's Creed of the Trinity, agreeably to what the Apoſtle ſaith of God, Eph. 3. 15. Of whom the whole Family in Heaven and Earth is named. So Clemens Romanus ſaith of God, (d) Who choſe the Lord Jeſus Chriſt, and us by him, to be a peculiar People. He ſaith no more than the Scripture ſaith, That Chriſt and Chriſtians are the Choſen of God, and to both he is a Father, according to the new Covenant, (e) Which changeth the Name of God, a Name of greater diſtance and terrour, into the Name of Father, a Name of more nearneſs and indulgence.

(d) Ep. 1. ad Corinth. p. 73. ed. ann. 1633.

(e) Bp. Sanderſon ſupr.

V. Our Idea of the Trinity ſuppoſeth, that the one God inſiſted on in the Scriptures, both of Judaiſm and Chriſtianity, doth not mean one eſſential God Trine in perſons (a Triune God) but that there is one that is the one ſole perſon of the Almighty God (God definitively and abſolutely) and the Father is this One. This is the Scriptural Unity of God, which hath been before diſcourſed of: But becauſe it is a matter of greateſt Importance, that is extremely miſtaken in the Scholaſtic Theology, and the conſequence of it is as much miſtaken by the Anti-Trinitarians, we will reſume, illuſtrate and ſtrengthen this Argument; which we muſt enter upon by repreſenting this common acknowledg'd Notion of the Father, That He is one ſingular perſon. For ſo he is repreſented in the Apoſtles Creed, in our Saviour's Trinity, and in all other accounts of the Trinity in the New Teſtament. 1 Joh. 5. 7. The Father, the Word, and the Holy Ghoſt. Eph. 4. 4, 5, 6. There is one Spirit, one Lord, one God and Father of all. Eph. 2. 18. Through him (Chriſt Jeſus) we have an acceſs by one Spirit unto the Father. Joh. 14. 16, 26. I will pray the Father, and he ſhall give you another Comforter, the Holy Ghoſt, whom the Father will ſend in my name. The Father in the Trinity is one perſon and is the only perſon, that can be called, The God and Father of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt. And the only perſon that can be called his Father, is the only perſon that is called our Father in the New Teſtament, (who is firſt his Father, then our Father;) therefore throughout the New Teſtament (that uſually ſpeaketh of his Father and our Father) this name, The Father, ſignifieth one (no more than one) perſon. And in reaſon it muſt ſo ſignifie; for this name, The Father, denoteth the abſolutely independent and firſt Cauſe, which are Attributes not competible to any more than one divine perſon. This is plain indiſputable Reaſon, and with the ſame plain indiſputable Reaſon we affirm, That there is one, that is the one ſole perſon of the Almighty God, and the Father is this one. For,

(1.) The New Teſtament's Enumerations of the perſons of the Trinity plainly ſhew, That one of them is the one perſon of God, and that the Father alone is he. 2 Cor. 13. 14. The grace of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, and the love of God, and the communion of the Holy Ghoſt be with you all. The Apoſtle here enumerateth the three perſons of the Trinity, which are, God, the Lord Jeſus Chriſt, and the Holy Ghoſt. The name God therefore here is the name of a perſon of one of the Trinity of perſons; it denoteth one divine perſon, diſtinct from the other divine perſons. One only Perſon of the Trinity therefore is the perſon of God; and conſequently is the ſole one perſon of the Almighty God; and it is manifeſt, that the Father is this one, as in our Saviour's Trinity God is the ſame with the Father. Eph. 4. 4, 5, 6. There is one Spirit, one Lord, one God and Father of all. One God is in this place the Name of one of the perſons of the Trinity, diſtinct from the other divine perſons. And as this Name, One Spirit, denoteth one that is the one perſon of the Holy Ghoſt; this Name, One Lord, denoteth one that is the one perſon of Chriſt the Lord; ſo this Name, One God, denoteth one that is the one perſon of God, who is ſtyled Father of all, and therefore the Father alone is He. 1 Cor. 12. 4, 5, 6. There are diverſities of gifts, but the ſame Spirit. And there are differences of adminiſtrations, but the ſame Lord. And there are diverſities of operations, but it is the ſame God which worketh all in all. In this place the Apoſtle ſaith, (f) There is the ſame Spirit, the ſame Lord, and the ſame God. He enumerateth therefore the perſons of the Chriſtian Trinity, of which one is the perſon of the Holy Spirit, another is the perſon of our Lord, and another is the perſon of God; one that is alone the one perſon of God; and who that is cannot be unknown to the Readers of St. Paul; for as Eraſmus obſerveth, (g) Suo more patrem appellat Deum, uſually he calleth the Father God, as being alone the one perſon of God.

(f) S. Chryſoſt. in loc.

(g) In 2 Cor. 13. 14.

(2.) The ordinary Notices of two of the perſons of the Trinity plainly ſhew, that there is one that is the one perſon of God, and that the Father alone is He. For all Chriſtians know, that Chriſt is the Son of God, and that the Holy Spirit is the Spirit of God, in which definitive Notices of the divine perſons this name God is the name of a perſon (of ſuch a perſon, that is the perſon of the one Almighty God;) it denoteth one, that is the one perſon of God, and the perſon of the Father; there is one therefore, that is the one perſon of God, and the Father alone is He. This alſo is manifeſtly imply'd in the Exiſtence of God in order of nature antecedent to a Trinity. For it is ſelf-evident, that God did in order of nature exiſt before he generated, and was a perſon (the imperial divine perſon of God) antecedently to his being a Father. So conſider'd, he appeareth to have been the one ſole perſon of the Almighty God from Eternity, and ſo he continueth to Eternity, according to that of the Apoſtle, Gal. 3. 20. θεὸς εἷς ἐστι, God is one perſon, becauſe one perſon only is the perſon of God.

(3.) The divine Attributes, peculiar and appropriate to the firſt perſon of the Trinity, plainly ſhew, that there is one that is the one perſon of God, and that the Father alone is He. For to this firſt perſon belongeth Self-Exiſtence, Innaſcibility, abſolute Self-Perfection and Self-fulneſs, abſolute Supremacy, Liberty and Independence, Ownerſhip, abſolutely univerſal, abſolutely the fulleſt height of Dominion and Power, peerleſs Supereminence, and to be abſolutely the firſt Cauſe and the laſt End. The firſt perſon therefore is ſuch an one perſon, as is the one perſon of the Almighty God peculiarly and appropriately as the one God. The ſame Inference may be drawn from the uſual Idea of God, A Being abſolutely perfect. For Self-exiſtence belongeth to the firſt perſon of the Trinity, meerly upon this account, becauſe He is a Being abſolutely perfect. This firſt perſon therefore (the firſt one) is ſuch an one, that is a Being abſolutly perfect, and therefore is one that is the one and ſole perſon of the Almighty God, the one only God, beſides whom there is no other.

(4.) The holy popular Idea of God plainly ſheweth, that there is one, who is the one ſingular perſon of God, and that the Father alone is He. For (according to this Idea) God is the Lord, King or Potentate, Creature-tranſcendent. Which Names ſignifie a perſon, one ſingular imperial perſon, who is the one imperial perſon of God, of whom the Apoſtle ſaith, 1 Tim. 1. 17. Unto the King eternal, immortal, inviſible, the only wiſe God, be Honour and Glory for ever and ever. Rom. 16. 27. To God only wiſe be Glory, through Jeſus Chriſt for ever. 1 Tim. 6. 15, 16. Who is the bleſſed and only Potentate, the King of Kings, and Lord of Lords; who only hath Immortality, dwelling in the light which no man can approach unto, whom no man hath ſeen, nor can ſee, to whom be Honour and Power everlaſting, Amen. So the one Lawgiver, God the Judge of all, the Lord God omnipotent, the God of Gods, the moſt high God, the God of Glory, the Father of Glory, the Father of Lights, the Father of Spirits, the Father of Mercies, God the Father (of whom the whole Family in Heaven and Earth is named) are names that plainly ſignifie the one perſon of one Almighty God, and that the Father alone is He.

(5.) The notices of God, and of his Unity, in the Old Teſtament, plainly ſhew, that there is one, who is the one (imperial) perſon of God, and that the Father alone is He. For it is God the Father only that ſpeaketh, and is ſpoken to as God in the Old Teſtament, as is plain from Pſal. 110. 1. The Lord ſaid unto my Lord. Heb. 1. 2. Who in theſe laſt Days hath ſpoken to us by his Son. Act. 3. 13. The God of our Fathers hath glorified his Son Jeſus. This is He, whoſe Voice is throughout the Old Teſtament, I am God, and there is none elſe. Exod. 20. 3. Deut. 32. 39. Iſa. 45. 5, 6. 21, 22. and 44. 6. and 46. 9. and 43. 10, 11. Hoſ. 13. 4. This is He, who throughout that holy Volume is ſtyled, Our Lord, The Lord, the Name of the Lord, The Lord of Lords, The Lord of Hoſts, The Lord the King, The Lord of Heaven and Earth; all which Titles of Honour plainly denote one imperial perſon. The Saying of Moſes therefore, Deut. 6. 4. The Lord our God is one Lord, plainly ſignifieth, that God is one (or no more than one) not only as to Eſſence, but that He is one ſingular (political) imperial perſon. So God being a name of perſonal Nobilitation, and the Godhead of eſtate being the Kingdom-eſtate Creature-tranſcendent, this name, The one God, muſt neceſſarily ſignifie, The one imperial perſon of God. And ſo God, the divine Majeſty, or the great King (as our Saviour ſtyleth him) is every where repreſented and deſcribed in the Old Teſtament as The one imperial perſon of God. Jer. 10. 10. The Lord is the true God, he is the living God, and an everlaſting King. Pſal. 20. 9. Save, Lord, let the King hear us when we call. Pſal. 84. 3. O Lord of Hoſts, my King and my God. Pſal. 103. 19. The Lord hath prepared his Throne in Heaven, and his Kingdom ruleth over all. As an imperial perſon he hath his Dues and Rights of Sovereignty, his Kingdom, his Throne, his Palace, his Court, his Hoſts, his Attendants, his imperial Chariot, Kings as ſuch are his Sons, are called Gods, and Artabanus the Perſian, in his Diſcourſe with Themiſtocles, (h) calleth the King, εἰκόνα θεοῦ, The Image of God. His name God ſignifieth an imperial perſon; therefore this great Article, One God, meaneth this his Oneneſs, Singularity and Solitareity, He is the one only imperial perſon of God. His uſual Name is, The Omni-imperial one (παντοκράτωρ) the ſole Monarch of the Univerſe, and the ſole Founder of it, as himſelf ſaith. Iſa. 44. 24. I am the Lord that maketh all things, that ſtretcheth forth the Heavens alone, that ſpreadeth abroad the Earth by my ſelf. Nehem. 9. 6, 7. Thou even thou art Lord alone, thou haſt made Heaven, the Heaven of Heavens with all their Hoſts, the Earth and all things that are therein, and thou preſerveſt them all, and the Hoſt of Heaven worſhippeth thee. Thou art the Lord the God, who didſt chuſe Abram, and broughtſt him forth out of Ur of the Chaldees, and gaveſt him the name of Abraham. From theſe places of the Old Teſtament it appeareth, that the Son of God was not the Creator of univerſal Nature, but only God the Father Almighty, as our Creed ſaith. For the God of Abraham was the ſole Creator of univerſal Nature; the God of Abraham is no other than the imperial perſon of God the Father, Act. 3. 13. therefore there is one, that is the one and ſole imperial perſon of God, the ſole Creator of univerſal Nature, that ſtretcheth forth the Heavens alone, that ſpreadeth abroad the Earth by himſelf, Iſa. 44. 24.

(h) Plutarch. in Themiſtocl.

(6.) The Unity of God in Judaiſm plainly ſheweth, that there is one, that is the one (imperial) perſon of God, and that the Father alone is He. The one God in the Jews Religion was not a Trinity in Unity; for a Trinity (our Saviour's Trinity) is the Chriſtian Religion properly ſuch; which could not be in the times of Judaiſm; for it ſucceeded Judaiſm, and aboliſhed it. As the Gentiles worſhipped the reputed imperial Perſon of that God or Goddeſs, who was their imperial eſtate of Religion: So the Jews were Worſhippers of the one imperial perſon of the God of Iſrael, who was to them an imperial eſtate of Religion. Their Theocracy was ſtrictly a Monarchy, the Government of a ſingle, political, imperial perſon; they had not (as Chriſtians have) a Mediatory Sovereign in their Religion; a principal Deſign of their Law was the cure of Polytheiſm and Idolatry, and to make them the Worſhippers of their own Jehovah alone, who was the holy one of Iſrael, and reſided amongſt them as a political King, a ſingle, political, imperial Perſon. Their Devotions are Celebrations of the Monothe-iſm of one ſingle imperial perſon. There is none holy as the Lord, for there is none beſides thee. 1 Sam. 2. 2. O Lord of Hoſts, God of Iſrael, thou art the God, even thou alone. Iſa. 37. 16 Neither is there any God beſides thee. So 1 King. 8. 60. It is not any ſort of Unity of the Godhead which we may imagine, but it is this Anti-polytheiſm, the Monothe-iſm of God the Father (that he alone is the perſon of God) which is the Scriptural Unity of God, and which was the grand Fundamental of the Jews Religion. Deut. 6. 4. So the Scribe ſpeaketh of one ſingular imperial perſon, when he ſaith, Marc. 12. 32. Well, Maſter, thou haſt ſaid the truth; for there is one God, and there is none other but He. The Style of their holy Books ſheweth, what their Religion meant by one God; namely, That there is one imperial perſon of God, and no other. Deut. 4. 35. Unto thee it was ſhewed, that thou mighteſt know, that the Lord he is God, and there is none elſe beſide him. The God of the Jews was only He, that for a great while ſent only his Servants into his Vineyard, but at laſt ſent his Son. Matth. 21. 37. He only was their one God, that juſtifieth both Jews and Gentiles by the faith of Chriſt, to whom the legal Sacrifices were offer'd, and to whom Chriſt's Sacrifice (typified by the legal Sacrifices) was offer'd upon the Croſs. Rom. 3 30. He whom the Jews called their God, our Saviour calleth his Father. Joh. 8. 54. The Temple of their God he calleth his Father's Houſe. Joh. 2. 16. and he repreſenteth them as (illegitimate) Worſhippers of the Father. Joh. 4. 21. Their one God therefore was the one imperial perſon of God, and they never did, never could underſtand the firſt Commandment otherwiſe, or Hoſ. 13. 4. Thou ſhalt know no God but me.

(7.) In the Religion of the New Teſtament this Unity of God (the Monothe-iſm of God the Father) is aſſerted and celebrated as the grand Fundamental at the ſame rate as in the Old Teſtament. For there is one God (beſides whom there is no other) and this one God is the Father. Eph. 4. 6. 1 Tim. 2. 5. Rom. 3. 30. To us there is but one God, and if a Chriſtian be ask'd, Who this one God is? he muſt anſwer, The Father. 1 Cor. 8. 4, 6. He who is God, and the Father. Eph. 5. 20. who is God and the Father of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt. Col. 1. 3. Who is God and our Father. Gal. 1. 4. Who is the only Lord God. Jude 4. God only wiſe. Rom. 16. 27. Who ſtandeth at the Head of our renowned Syſtem and Republick, and is the imperial Head thereof; for ſuch is God the Judge of all conjoin'd with Jeſus the Mediator of the new Covenant. Heb. 12. 23, 24. The Scripture doth not ſpeak of God in the ſtyle of the Scholaſtic Theology, calling him Hic Deus, but Deus ſimply and without Addition; and He muſt be no leſs than ſo, whom our Saviour calleth, My God. Joh. 20. 17. My God, my God. Matth. 27. 46. The only true God. Joh. 17. 3. Throughout the New Teſtament the name God, in hundreds of places (almoſt always) is put abſolutely (without any thing to limit it, and muſt be underſtood without Limitation) and when it is ſo put abſolutely, it neceſſarily ſignifieth the one ſole imperial perſon of God, that can be no other but the Father. So we read of the God of all grace, God who is rich in mercy, that God ſo lov'd us, that the Son of God is come, that God gave his Son, God ſent his Son, God teſtified of his Son, He which is of God, the Son of the living God, the Lamb of God, the Choſen of God, the holy One of God, the Gift of God, the Bread of God, the Image of the inviſible God, the Power of God, the Wiſdom of God, who is made unto us of God Wiſdom, who was with God, came forth from God, did go to God, ſpake the Words of God, the Teſtimony of God, which he heard of God, increaſed in favour with God, was approved of God, anointed by God, caſt out Devils by the Finger of God, was ordained by God, was delivered by the Fore-knowledge of God (for God ſpar'd not his own Son) who offered himſelf without ſpot to God, to bring us to God, to reconcile us to God, to redeem us to God; who hath introduced the Goſpel of God, the Salvation of God, the Righteouſneſs of God, the Myſtery of God, the Church of God. the Kingdom of God, hath made us the People of God, the Elect of God, the Heirs of God, the Habitation of God, Kings and Prieſts unto God and his Father, who now appeareth in the Preſence of God, ſitteth on the Throne of God, is at the Right-hand of God, by whom we draw nigh unto God (that is, the Father) who in that he liveth, he liveth unto God, and will deliver up the Kingdom to God even the Father, unto God who is one, and the one God, the living and true God, of whom our Saviour ſaith, οὐδεὶς ἀγαθὸς, εἰμὴ εἷς ὁ θεὸς, (no perſon is good but one, that is God) who is his Head, his God, and his Owner, the God of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, the God and Father of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, the Father of Glory, God even the Father of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, God our Father and his Father, God of whom are all things, God by him hath created all things, God by him hath given us the Victory, God by him wrought Miracles, God giveth the Spirit without meaſure to him, God appointed him to be the Heir, God called him to be an High Prieſt, God gave him the Throne, God ſet him at his own Right-hand, God highly exalted him, God made him both Lord and Chriſt, God ſet him forth to be a Propitiation, God hath called us to his eternal glory by Jeſus Chriſt, God in Chriſt, God for Chriſt's ſake hath forgiven us, God hath choſen us in him, God gave him the Apocalypſe, God gave us unto him, who by him do believe on God, that raiſed him from the dead, and gave him glory, that our faith and hope might be in God. Ye believe in God, believe alſo in me, ſaith our Saviour. In all which innumerable places (and ſuch more) the name God undeniably ſignifieth one perſon, one imperial perſon of God, whoſe name (i) in the New Teſtament is uſually ſynonymous with the Father, who is αὐτὸς ὁ θεὸς, God himſelf. 1 Theſſ. 3. 11. the perſon of God. Job 13. 7. Hebr. 1. 3.

Quamvis ſit & Deus, unum tamen Deum patrem de obedientia ſua oſtendit, ex quo & originem traxit. Novatian. de Trin. c. 31.

(i) Rom. 15. 6. 1 Cor. 8. 6. and 15. 14. 2 Cor. 1. 3. Jam. 1. 27. and 3. 9.

(8.) Throughout the Bible God always ſpeaketh, is ſpoken to, and ſpoken of by Perſonal Pronouns of the ſingular Number, (I, Thou, He, Me, Him, Himſelf;) which plainly ſheweth, that there is one that is the one ſole perſon of the Almighty God, and as ſuch the one only God. The Alexandr. Cyril affirmeth, (k) that the three men which appear'd to Abraham in the Plain of Mamre, were a Type (or Repreſentation) of the holy conſubſtantial Trinity. And this he ſuppoſeth to be the reaſon, why Abraham ſpeaking to them, did not ſpeak in the Plural, but (becauſe of the Unity in Trinity) in the Singular Number, οὐχὶ κύριοι, κύριε δὲ μοναδικῶς, not Lords, but Lord ſingularly. But there is nothing of ſolidity in this Conceit; for Expoſitors generally agree, that as in the proceſs of his Diſcourſe, ſo in his firſt Salutation of the three men, he ſpake only to one of them, that ſeem'd to be of greater Eminency than the other, therefore he ſpake in the Singular Number; whence ſome Divines infer, (l) that this one more eminent than the reſt was Jehovah, one of the perſons of the Trinity. According to their Senſe therefore, if we ſpeak only to one perſon of the Trinity, we ought to ſpeak in the Singular Number: But if we ſpeak to the three perſons of the Trinity together, the laws and ſenſe of Language, and the nature of the thing require, that we ſpeak in the Plural Number. But ſo the Bible never ſpeaketh unto God, nor doth God ever ſo ſpeak of Himſelf, but always in the Singular Number; which is a plain Indication, that there is no ſuch Trinity in the Godhead, as the Scholaſtic Theology ſuppoſeth, namely, A Trinity of Divine Perſons, co-eternal, co-eſſential and co-equal. Each one of which Trinity of perſons is the perſon of the Almighty God, (becauſe of the Unity of Eſſence) the Scholaſtic Divine Eſſence, which is a thing, not a perſon, is primarily the one God, but not a perſonal God (or Divine Majeſty;) and the three coeternal Perſons, as having or being this one Divine Eſſence, are the one God: But neither are theſe one perſonal God, or divine Majeſty. So that, according to this Theology, there is no ſuch thing as The one ſole perſon of the Almighty God, who as ſuch is the one only God beſides whom there is no other. According to this Theology, it may be ſaid of God the Father, that He is the alone ingenit and unoriginated God, the fountain of the Deity: But this is ſo far from excluding Polytheiſm, that it implieth it.

(k) C. Jul. l. 8. p. 268.

(l) Hoornbeek c. Jud. l. 5. c. 2. p. 395.

It is commonly ſaid (in this Theology) that he is alone God, (m) becauſe he alone is ingenit and the Fountain of the Deity. But this is ſo far from excluding Polytheiſm, that it is no more than may be ſaid of the Supreme Deity in Paganiſm. This doth not make him The one ſole Perſon of the Almighty God, or The one only God ſimply and abſolutely, but only ſo far as to be the ingenit Perſon and the Fountain of the Deity. Nor doth this make him any thing more than Hic Deus, (this Perſon of God) a Perſon that is one of thoſe Perſons, each of which is the Perſon of the Almighty God. There are other Perſons, each of which is ſuppos'd to be the Perſon of the Almighty God as well as He; and therefore to make our Prayers, Praiſes and religious Expreſſions moſt agreeable to this Theology, they muſt be (as the Devotions of ſome blind Romaniſts are) of the Plural Number, and run in a Stile of Polytheiſm, (not thou art God, thy Kingdom come, but you are God, your Kingdom come) and the whole Trinity muſt be our heavenly Father, as ſometimes this Theology ſaith.

(9.) Expoſitors uſually obſerve, that in Scripture Name ſignifieth Perſon, Names Perſons, a Number of Names a Number of Perſons, as Act. 1. 15. If therefore by God the Scripture meaneth a Number of Perſons, (as the uſual Scholaſtic Theology ſuppoſeth) it muſt mean thereby a Number of Names. But this is never the meaning of the Bible, by God it always meaneth not Names, but one ſingular Name, My Name, My great Name, My holy Name, Thy Name, His Name, this glorious and fearful Name The Lord thy God. The Bible therefore proclaimeth, that there is but one Name or Perſon, that is the Perſon of the Almighty God, called by the Jews השם, the Name, and by the Book of Wiſdom the incommunicable Name. As there is but one Perſon, that is the Perſon of the Almighty God, ſo there is but one Perſon, that is the Honour-perſon of the Almighty God, who alone muſt be feared as this glorious and fearful Name the Lord thy God; to whom Doxologies are made as to him that ſitteth upon the Throne, (with whom the Lamb is conjoyn'd;) and of whom alone it muſt be ſaid, of him and through him and to him are all things, to whom be Glory for ever, Amen. Who hath firſt given to him?

Rom. 11. 35, 36.

VI. Our Idea of the Trinity ſuppoſeth, that no Trinity ought to be admitted, which (more or leſs) deſtroyeth the Scriptural Unity of God, (the Scriptural Monothe-iſm of God the Father) which is the great important Unity in Trinity. They that undertake to explain the Trinity preſently diſcern that they have this great Difficulty to overcome, to ſhew that a Trinity of Perſons in the Godhead is conſiſtent with this great Principle, that there is but one God. But this Difficulty is really two Difficulties, for it is not enough to ſhew that a Trinity of Perſons is conſiſtent with any ſort of one God, (real or imaginary) but we ought to ſhew, that by our Trinity the Scriptural Unity of God is not violated, which is the Monothe-iſm of God the Father. For this is the only Unity of God that is inſiſted on or expreſs'd in the Holy Scriptures. (n) By one God they never mean three Perſons, nor do they ever ſay, that the three divine Perſons are one God; but this is their Senſe touching one God, that altho' there are three Perſons in the Godhead, the Monothe-iſm of God the Father is not violated thereby. To explicate the Trinity aright therefore is not meerly to ſhew an Unity in Trinity, but our principal Care muſt be to ſhew, that notwithſtanding the Trinity of Perſons the Father is the one and ſole Perſon of the Almighty God; for by this Method only the true Unity of God is ſecured. But ſo unhappily have theſe great things been manag'd in the Church, that little or no Care hath been taken of that, which ought to have been our principal Care. For in our uſual Scholaſtic Theology even this Principle is deſtroy'd, that one is the one ſole Perſon of the Almighty God, (every one of the divine Perſons is ſuppos'd to be the Perſon of the Almighty God, of the only true God) and conſequently the Being or Exiſtence of the one Perſon that is the one and ſole Perſon of the Almighty God is deſtroy'd. Which are ſuch marvellous Impieties, that if the Church had fram'd the main of her Prayers and religious Worſhip according to this Hypotheſis, her Communion would not have been tolerable to a Chriſtian. But notwithſtanding that the Scholaſtic Theology is a Miſt of Darkneſs, which hath invelop'd the Church, this illuſtrious Principle, that the Father is the one ſole Perſon of the Almighty God, hath in all Times caſt ſo much Light and Splendor into her Eyes, that the main of her Religious Worſhip hath been addreſs'd to the Father, and in her Prayers as well as in her Creed The Father Almighty and The one Imperial Perſon of God have been repreſented as Terms convertible. But for this her Piety ſhe is not beholden to her Scholaſtic Theology, which hath taught her otherwiſe, and which hath ſo much miſtaken this divine Myſtery, A Chriſtian Trinity in Unity, that her Anti-Trinitarian Adverſaries with great Reaſon have always charg'd it, and continue to charge it with the Crime of Polytheiſm; nor is it poſſible to vindicate it from ſo foul an Imputation. This is a certain mark of a true and genuin Trinity, if the Scriptural Unity of God is not violated thereby; but this will infer, that there can be no Scholaſtic Coeternal Trinity. For

(1.) We have ſeen, that in the uſual Trinity of the Scholaſtic Theology, (which may be called the Ariſtotelian) the Scriptural Unity of God is many ways deſtroy'd. Its Trinity of Perſons are ſaid to be one God, but it cannot be pretended that they are the Scriptural one God. The one ſole Perſon of the Almighty God is made to be only Hic Deus, (one of the three Coequals, Creators and Governors of the Univerſe, every one of which Perſons is the Perſon of the Almighty God as well as He;) three Perſons one in Eſſence are ſuppos'd to be The one God, which this great Article one God meaneth, which certainly meaneth, that there is one only God in a perfect and plenary Senſe, (but if God is one, not in Perſon, but in Eſſence only, as being the three Perſons, then He is one, not in a perfect and plenary, but only in a mutilate and partial Senſe;) inſtead of one that is of Perſonal Nobilitation God Almighty, and the only one of that Perſonal Nobilitation, one Eſſence is ſubſtituted, which is of no Perſonal Nobilitation. This Scholaſtic Antipolytheiſm therefore is not the Scriptural Antipolytheiſm; and ſo far this Theology befriendeth Polytheiſm, it cannot be clear'd of an Inconſiſtence with the Scriptural Theiſm and Antipolytheiſm. Nor can it be clear'd of an extra- vagant deifying the Holy Ghoſt, and the ſecond Perſon of the Trinity alſo, (though not ſo groſly) it maketh them God in an unlawful Senſe, which extravagant and ſinful deifying them is not without Polytheiſm. But the Trinity of this Theology will appear liable to the Charge of Polytheiſm from the Tenour of the Athanaſian Creed, which prohibiteth the ſaying three Eternals, three Incomprehenſibles, three uncreated, three Almighties, three Gods and three Lords. For it is manifeſt, that notwithſtanding this Prohibition of the Creed, yet according to the Theology of it we may and muſt ſay, that there are three Eternals, and three Almighties, as the Creed it ſelf ſaith, that there are three Coeternals and Coequals, and the three Perſons are ordinarily ſaid to be Equals and Conſubſtantials. (o) The Creed only meaneth, that we ſhould not uſe this Language in the Senſe of the Arians, (ſo as to make the three Perſons three diſtinct Eſſences) and it would not have us to uſe this Language for fear of giving Advantage to the Arians. But if there was no ſuch Fear (ſaith Petavius) we might as well ſay three Eternals and three Almighties as three Coeternals. Some doubt not to ſay three Eternals and three Almighties. The Fathers and ancient Writers ſay, (as ſuppoſing every one of the Perſons to be the Perſon of the Almighty God) three Goods, three Supremes, (tria ſumma) three Holies, and not only ſo, but uſing Abſtract Terms they ſay three Lights, three Splendors, three Sanctities, three Lives, and three Glories. But their meaning is, that as to Eſſence they are only one Light and Life, one Sanctity and Glory; but as to Perſon they are three Lights and Lives, three Sanctities and Glories. According to which Senſe of the Scholaſtic Theology, (which is the Senſe of the beſt Authors of it) we muſt ſay, The three Perſons are only one Almighty as to Eſſence, but as to Perſon they are three Almighties: They are only one God as to Eſſence, but as to Perſon they are three Gods. (p) Tres ſunt habentes æternitatem & omnipotentiam, there are three that have Eternity and Omnipotency, and theſe may be called as to Perſon three Eternals and three Almighties. In like manner Tres ſunt habentes Divinitatem vel Deitatem, there are three that have the Divinity or Deity, and theſe may be called as to Perſon three Gods. Let us ſuppoſe that three coequal Perſons have the Sovereignty of our Nation, and that theſe are one in Eſſence (in the Senſe of the Scholaſtic Theology) yet being three Sovereign Perſons they are neceſſarily three Sovereigns as to Perſon; and ſo far the three Perſons in the Scholaſtic Trinity (coeternal and coequal) muſt be ſuppos'd to be three Gods. And they muſt be ſuppos'd to be ſuch, becauſe the Buſineſs of being a Sovereign and of being a God is a Buſineſs of Perſonal Honour and Nobilitation. Three Sovereign Perſons are neceſſarily three Sovereigns as to Perſon both in an Human and in the Scholaſtic Divine Sovereignty. But this Polytheiſm will yet be more evident, if we conſider that the three Perſons of this Scholaſtic Trinity exiſt in the Godhead, (the one eſſential God) each one in the Perſon of God, the diſtinct Perſon of God, (the Almighty God) each one in the diſtinct Perſon of a God; and three diſtinct Perſons that ſo exiſt are neceſſarily three diſtinct Gods as to Perſon.

(m) Ὅτι μόνος ἀγέννητος, ϗ μόνος πηγὴ θεότητος. S. Athanaſ. orat. c. Sabell. Gregal. authoritate innaſcibilitatis Deus unus eſt. S. Hilar. de Synod. ob id unus Deus, quia ex ſe Deus. Idem de Trin. l. 4.

(n) Ne ſemel autem toto Novo Teſt. τὸ Deus expreſſo textu, ad Patrem, Filium & Spiritum Sanctum ſimul determinatur, cum unus Deus appellatur, ut iſta tria unum illum Deum eſſe dicatur. Henr. Nicol. ap. Curcell. diſſ. de voc. Trin. n. 60.

(2.) If this Theology would clearly expreſs its Trinity, it ought to ſay, that three divine Perſons are God, yet ſo as to be but one God; and then it ought to ſay how far and in what ſenſe theſe are God and but one God. But the Athanaſian Creed contenteth it ſelf to ſay, as we are commanded by the Chriſtian Verity, to acknowledge every Perſon by himſelf to be God and Lord; ſo we are forbidden by the Catholick Religion to ſay there be three Gods or three Lords. We may not ſay ſo becauſe of their Unity of Eſſence, yet every one of them is ſaid to be by himſelf God, and he muſt be ſuppos'd to be but one God. And if every Perſon is by himſelf one God, how ſhall we avoid this Conſequence, The three Perſons being each of them one God, are one God three times number'd, which is three Gods? This Scholaſtic Trinity manifeſtly multiplieth that God that neither is nor can be multiplied. For there is and can be but one Perſon that is the Perſon of the Almighty God, God definitively and abſolutely ſo: but this one Perſon in this Scholaſtic Trinity is multiplied into three Perſons, every one of which is ſuppos'd to be Perſonally the one Almighty God, or God definitively and abſolutely ſo. Whence ariſeth another Mode of Polytheiſm; for the one Perſon of the Almighty God, (or God definitively and abſolutely ſo) is as ſuch The one Godhead; to introduce therefore three Perſons, every one of which is the one Perſon of the Almighty God, (or God definitively and abſolutely ſo) is to introduce three Godheads. Of God (the Father) we may not ſay, there is another Perſon that is Almighty, All-wiſe, of infinite Perfection, King of Kings and Lord of Lords, as a ſelf-owner as well as He. Nor may we ſay, that there is another Perſon who is God as a ſelf-owner as well as He. For this Æquiparantia (if I may ſo call it) claſheth with the Unity and Solitareity of his Godhead, his being the one ſole Perſon of the Almighty God. But according to this Scholaſtic Theology we muſt ſay, there is another Perſon and a third Perſon alſo who is God as well as He without any Difference or Inequality, which cannot be excus'd from Polytheiſm. It is a vain Palliation of this Impiety to ſay, that we ſuppoſe theſe three divine Perſons as being one God to have the ſame Scholaſtic divine Eſſence; for this is our Crime, we communicate the Scholaſtic divine Eſſence with all the infinite Perfections thereof to others beſide the one and ſole imperial Perſon of God in the way of Polytheiſm. For although we do not ſuppoſe the Scholaſtic divine Eſſence to be triplify'd, yet we ſuppoſe it to be communicated in the triplify'd and triplifying way of Polytheiſm, ſo that three divine Perſons are conſtituted, and every one of them is the Perſon of the Almighty God without any Difference or Inequality. And what can theſe three Perſons be but three Gods as to Perſon? Three Perſons may be conceiv'd to exiſt in the Godhead, either in the way of the Father's Monothe-iſm, or in the way of Polytheiſm. According to this Scholaſtic Theology three divine Perſons are not in the Godhead in the way of the Father's Monothe-iſm, (which it deſtroyeth) but in the way of Polytheiſm. Not in the way of conſtituting a true Monarchy, but in the way of conſtituting a Polyarchy, that is ſomewhat Monarchical.

(3.) Polytheiſm is not ſo conſpicuous and apparent in the uſual Scholaſtic Trinity as it is in the Platonic, which is three diſtinct Scholaſtic divine Eſſences, or three diſtinct infinite intellectual Subſtances, Minds and Spirits, (every one of which is a diſtinct Scholaſtic infinite intelligent Being and Perſon) exiſting in the way of Polytheiſm. Of this ſort of Trinity there are two different Schemes, (the Aſſerters of it are of two different Opinions;) for ſome ſuppoſe that theſe three diſtinct Scholaſtic divine Eſſences and Perſons are co-ordinate and coequal: Others ſuppoſe that they are gradually

(o) Petav. de Trin. l. 3. c. 9. S. 8, 9. & l. 8. c. 9. S. 8, 9, 10, 14.

(p) Ibid. l. 3. c. 9. S. 9, 10.

gradually ſubordinate and dependent, as the three archical Hypoſtaſes are in Plato's Triad, which is thought by ſeveral of the ancient Writers of the Church (q) to be the ſame with our Trinity. This was the Senſe of the beſt learned of the Ante-Nicene Fathers, ſeveral of which make the Son, not to be of the (numerically) ſame Scholaſtic divine Subſtance with the Father, but a different inferior intellectual Subſtance, as Clemens ſaith. (r) The Nature of the Son is next to the ſole Almighty. This is the greateſt Preheminence, which ordereth all things according to the Will of the Father, and governeth the Univerſe in the beſt manner, operating all things by an indefatigable Power, in thoſe things that it operateth reſpecting the arcane Notions. This place is rightly rendred by Petavius, and is ſtrangely perverted by a learned Man of our own, (s) who is not aware that Clemens ſpeaketh as a Platoniſt. Nor is he aware that he ſpeaketh as a Platoniſt when he ſaith, (t) God doth not fall under Demonſtration, and therefore not under Science. But the Son is Wiſdom, Science and Truth, and whatever is cognate to theſe, and therefore hath Demonſtration and Enarration. This place is interpreted in a Goſpel-ſenſe (as meaning, that no Man knoweth the Father but the Son, and he to whom the Son will reveal him) but doubtleſs we are very careleſs Readers either of the Goſpel or of Clemens's Stromata, if we can think them very Evangelical. His Logos or Son of God is no other than that which pervadeth Origen's Book againſt Celſus, which is the ſame with the Platonic Logos, but with this difference, Clemens and Origen do not ſuppoſe that the ſecond and third Hypoſtaſes of the Trinity are neceſſary Emanations from the Firſt, as the Platoniſts ſuppos'd. For not meaning as the Arians, but taking the Word making in a large ſenſe, (ſo as to comprehend generating) Clemens ſaith (u) there is one God, ὃς ἀρχὴν τῶν ἁπάντων ἐποίησεν, τὸν πρωτόγονον υἱόν, who made the beginning (or Principle) of all things his firſt begotten Son. So Origen calleth his Son of God, (w) πρεσβύτατον πάντων τῶν δημιουργημάτων, the oldeſt of all the Works of God. Theſe Fathers therefore entertain'd not the Platoniſts Conceit touching the neceſſary Emanation of the Hypoſtaſes of their Triad, (who alſo, as to the later ſort of them at leaſt, ſuppos'd that the World iſſu'd from the Maker of it, and from the Goodneſs of God by neceſſary Emanation, as Light and Heat iſſue from the Sun and Fire) and indeed it is marvellous that any Chriſtian Divines ſhould entertain ſo unphiloſophical and irreligious a Conceit. For to ſuppoſe with a late Philoſopher, (x) that a ſecondary Subſtance of the Soul of Man exiſteth by immediate Emanation from its primary Subſtance, is ſufficiently unphiloſophical, (for the ſecond Subſtance muſt be produc'd by the Operation of the primary, or elſe muſt be in it before it emaned from it:) but to ſuppoſe that from a living Soul, (which emitteth no Effluvia) from a living Body, from a living Perſon, another living Soul, living Body, living Perſon, iſſueth into Exiſtence meerly by immediate Emanation; that two living Perſons iſſue into Exiſtence meerly by immediate Emanation from one of the ſame Species, whoſe Subſtance is not at all leſſen'd by his Emanations; that one infinite omnipotent Subſtance and Perſon exiſteth by immediate Emanation from one of the ſame Character (who can loſe nothing of his Subſtance;) that two infinite omnipotent Subſtances and Perſons exiſt meerly by immediate Emanation from but one infinite omnipotent Subſtance and Perſon; that after the neceſſary Exiſtence of God the Father (whereby he hath his intire Eſſence) there is a neceſſary Exiſtence of two emanatory divine Perſons (præter-eſſential to his Godhead;) theſe are prodigiouſly unphiloſophical Imaginations. Nor are they leſs irreligious. For they are inconſiſtent with God's being Owner and Maſter of himſelf, (his own Nature) they make the Son and the Holy Spirit alike his Sons, they bereave him of giving Exiſtence to either of them, they make him no Owner of them, nor the God and Father of his Son; they make him to be no Father, his Son to be no Son, (in the ſenſe of Law and Morality) no Saint of God-kind of Son; they make his Generation to be no proper natural Generation, they allow him no conſiſtent but only a tranſient kind of Subſtance that is always in fieri (from Eternity to Eternity;) and though he is called a Dependent on the Father, yet they make him really no Dependent, as not being at all beholden to the Father for his Exiſtence. So that the Self-exiſtence and Independence of the Father ſignifieth nothing as to the giving him a Preheminence above the other Perſons. There are many and great Reaſons therefore why the Platonic Ante-Nicene Fathers ſhould diſcard the neceſſary eternal Emanations of the Platonic Triad, (moſt of which are Reaſons alſo againſt the neceſſary Emanation of the Perſons of the Scholaſtic Ariſtotelian Trinity;) but they were not ſo happy as to diſcard the Polytheiſm thereof.

(4.) As the Platoniſts call the Hypoſtaſes of their Triad three Kings and three Gods, The firſt, ſecond and third God, and they muſt be called three diſtinct Gods; ſo the firſt Perſon in his Platonic Trinity is called by Origen (y) πρῶτος θεὸς, the firſt God, and the Son he calleth τὸν δεύτερον θεὸν, the ſecond God. And this muſt be ſuppos'd to be the Senſe of Clemens, when having cited Plato's Deſcription of his Triad he ſubjoyneth (z) I do not underſtand it otherwiſe, ἢ τὴν ἁγίαν τριάδα μηνύεσθαι, but that the Holy Trinity is ſignified thereby. Agreeably whereto he ſcrupleth not to ſpeak the Language of a Pagan Polytheiſt. (a) A Diſciple being according to the Similitude of God received into the place of a Son and Friend of God, κατὰ τὴν συγκληρονομίαν τῶν κυρίων καὶ θεῶν γίνεται, is a Coheir of the Lords and Gods. (b) Juſt. M. ſpeaketh of two Gods, calling the Son τὴν μετὰ τὸν πρῶτον θεὸν δύναμιν, and θεὸν ὑπηρέτην, A Power after the firſt God, the God that miniſtreth to him. (c) In ſeveral places he calleth the God that appeared to Abraham and Moſes (the Son) θεὸν ἕτερον, another God. He ſpeaketh indeed inconſiſtently with himſelf; for ſometimes he ſaith, there is not ἄλλος θεός, another God beſides the Maker of the Univerſe; but this ſelf-inconſiſtence demonſtrateth, that although ſuch Holy Men believ'd their Creed, that there is but one God, yet they miſunderſtood the Trinity; for when they come to explicit Notions of it, they muſt have at leaſt a firſt and a ſecond God, that is, θεὸν ἕτερον, another God. Such is Origen's ſecond God; for we have ſeen from his own plain words (d) that his Logos or Son of God is the very ſame with the Platonic, a Philoſophic-Pagan Deity, inferior to T'Agathon, or the ſupreme Deity. This therefore cannot be his Senſe touching

One ſaith of the Hypoſtaſes of the Platoniſts Triad, The firſt though it be look'd on as the Fountain of the Godhead, yet in all other reſpects is no more independent than the ſecond and third; for as much as it can no more be or act without them than they without it Mr. Wiſe ag. Atheiſm, Introd. p. 92, 93.

(q) Dr. Cudw. Intell. Syſt. p. 622, 625.

(r) Ἡ τοῦ υἱοῦ φύσις ἡ τῷ μόνῳ παντοκράτορι προσεχεστάτη· αὕτη ἡ μεγίστη ὑπεροχή, ἣ τὰ πάντα διατάσσεται κατὰ τὸ θέλημα τοῦ πατρός, καὶ τὸ πᾶν ἄριστα οἰακίζει, ἀκαμάτῳ καὶ ἀτρύτῳ δυνάμει πάντα ἐργαζομένη, δι' ὧν ἐνεργεῖ τὰς ἀποκρύφους ἐννοίας ἐπιβλέπουσα. Strom. l. 7. p. m. 504, 505.

(s) Dr. Bull Def. Fid. Nic. p. 89, 90. ed. an. 1703.

(t) Ὁ μὲν οὖν θεὸς ἀναπόδεικτος ὤν, οὐκ ἔστιν ἐπιστημονικός. ὁ δὲ υἱὸς σοφία τε ἐστὶ, ἐπιστήμη καὶ ἀλήθεια, καὶ ὅσα ἄλλα τούτῳ συγγενῆ, καὶ δὴ καὶ ἀπόδειξιν ἔχει καὶ διέξοδον.

(u) Strom. l. 6. p. m. 464.

(w) C. Celſ. l. 5. p. 257.

(x) Dr. H. More Immort. of the Soul l. 1. c. 6.

(y) C. Celſ. l. 6. p. 308, 318. & l. 5. p. 258.

(z) Strom. l. 5. p. m. 436.

(a) Ibid. l. 6. p. m. 483.

(b) P. 93. & 279.

(c) Annot. in D. Bull. ſupr. p. 75.

(d) C. Celſ. l. 5. p. 247 l. 6. p. 308.

touching the Son, (e) that he is the moſt very God himſelf, not in any Perfection of Divinity inferior to him that is called the ſupreme God. On this account therefore only the Son is called by him the ſecond God, becauſe he is God of God, and had his origin from God the Father. In a word, Origen calleth the Son the ſecond God only for the ſame Reaſon that he is called by St. Baſil the ſecond in order from the Father. But it is one thing to ſay he is in order the ſecond Perſon, another thing to call him the ſecond God. There is no Order but inter diverſa; if we have an Order and Subordination of Gods, we have divers Gods, and therefore are Polytheiſts. Polytheiſm with great Reaſon is by the Athanaſian Creed and the uſual Scholaſtic Theology charg'd upon this Platonic kind of Trinity, wherein there are three Eternals, three Increates, three Infinites, three Almighties, Eſſences and Perſons that are ſuch) exiſting in the triplify'd and triplifying way of Polytheiſm. Each of theſe thus ſubſiſteth in the diſtinct Eſſence and Perſon of a God, and therefore they are three diſtinct Gods. Every Hypoſtaſis is manifeſtly one diſtinct eſſential and perſonal God, therefore they are three Gods. Such eſſential Gods they are, as being diſtinct infinite ſcholaſtic intelligent Subſtances; or as being diſtinct infinite ſcholaſtic Eſſences of infinite Wiſdom, Goodneſs and Power; or as being diſtinct infinite ſcholaſtick almighty Minds and Spirits; for every ſuch Being hath the Scholaſtic Divine Eſſence as its own Eſſence, which as neceſſarily conſtituteth an eſſential God, (a God as to Eſſence) as the Scholaſtic Human Eſſence conſtituteth an eſſential Man. And as this Name Man is the Name of a Species, which comprehendeth the individual Men; ſo (according to this Trinity) the Name God is the Name of a Species, which comprehendeth under it three individual Gods. The Hypoſtaſes of this Trinity are (doubtleſs) no other than three Individuals of the ſame Species.

(5.) In this Trinity there is by way of Propagation a twofold Repetition and Multiplication of the infinite Scholaſtic Divine Eſſence (and Attributes) which plainly deſtroyeth the Singularity and Solitareity of one only God, and muſt neceſſarily conſtitute three Gods, as the like Repetition and Multiplication of a Scholaſtic Human Eſſence muſt neceſſarily conſtitute three Men. If the divine Sovereignty is ſo repeated and multiply'd there muſt neceſſarily be three Gods (diſtinct divine Sovereignties) and it cannot be otherwiſe, if the Scholaſtic divine Eſſence is ſo repeated and multiply'd: nor can this divine Eſſence be ſo repeated and multiply'd without a Repetition and Multiplication of divine Sovereignties (the infinite imperial Perſon of one, a ſecond and third God) for ſuch they muſt be, although we ſhould ſuppoſe ſuch a Subordination and Dependence of one upon another as is in Plato's Triad, the loweſt Hypoſtaſis whereof is Creator, Providential Governor and King of the Univerſe, not leſs Almighty to the World, (or ad extra) nor leſs a God to the World than the firſt Hypoſtaſis. But this Subordination and Dependence of the ſecond and third Hypoſtaſis in this Platonic Trinity is deſtroy'd by the Hypotheſis of their neceſſary Exiſtence from Eternity by Emanation; and therefore they muſt be ſuppos'd his Equals (in juſt Computation) Gods at as high a rate as He, and may be worſhipp'd at the ſame rate with him (ultimately without ſubordinate Relation to him) and for the ſame Reaſon that he is one God each of them is alſo one God, which is to ſay, they are three Gods. They are three ſuch diſtinct Infinites and Almighties as the one Infinite and Almighty is, and therefore are three ſuch diſtinct Gods; as three ſuch diſtinct Scholaſtick Eſſences and Beings as a Man and an Angel is are neceſſarily three Men and three Angels. It is reaſonable to ſuppoſe that God can beget Children, and propagate his divine vital Nature; but to ſuppoſe that he can produce and propagate ſuch an infinite Scholaſtic Almighty Subſtance, two ſuch infinite Scholaſtic Almighty Subſtances as himſelf is, that taken together are twice as great and good as himſelf, (and by the ſame Reaſon he may produce an hundred ſuch) this is a monſtrous Suppoſition, an accumulating infinite Scholaſtic Subſtances upon infinite, All-ſufficients upon All-ſufficient, a compounding one God of three infinite Scholaſtic Almighty Eſſences, (an horrible Bungle in the Deity and in the Univerſe) a making God but the third part of the Deity, and (if we ſuppoſe this Trinity to conſiſt of Equals) it is a making three Supreme Beings, which is not Senſe. But if we ſuppoſe an Inequality in this Trinity, and that it conſiſteth of ſubordinate Hypoſtaſes, (as the Platoniſts did) yet ſeeing each one of them is a God, it muſt conſiſt of one greater and two leſſer Gods, which are three Gods. Each of them is conſtitutively and diſtinctly in himſelf one infinite Scholaſtic divine Eſſence (with the Attributes) one God, one diſtinct God; therefore they are one God thrice number'd, which is three Gods. This Platonic kind of Trinity abateth ſome of the Evils of the uſual Scholaſtic Trinity, but tranſcendeth it in the Evil of Polytheiſm. For the three Hypoſtaſes of the uſual Scholaſtic Trinity are as to numerically one Eſſence numerically one God; but the three Hypoſtaſes of this Trinity are not in any reſpect one ſuch God. They are three infinite diſtinct Scholaſtic Subſtances, Eſſences and eſſential Gods, and ſo they will continue, although we ſuppoſe their ſpecifical Coeſſentiality or Conſubſtantiality, the Inſeparableneſs of their Subſtances, (compar'd to the Sun and his Rays, the Fountain and the Stream) their περιχώρησις, Permeation or mutual In-being, their concurring to all the ſame Actions ad extrà, their concurrent making up one intire τὸ θεῖον, Divinity, (as the Root, the Stock and the Branches make one intire Tree;) for the Reſult and Upſhot of all theſe little Scholaſtic Devices (and ſuch more) is not one God numerically ſuch, but only a Collective or little Syſtem of diſtinct yet conjoyned Gods, one of which is Divinitatis Caput, (the Head of this Divinity) as Arnobius ſpeaketh. That one τὸ θεῖον, or Divinity, which they are ſuppos'd concurrently to make up, is ſaid to be one intire thing, (whereas God is a Name of Perſonal Honour and Nobilitation;) but they ſtill remain diſtinct eſſential ſcholaſtic Gods; and it is a Vanity, an Impoſſibility, and a Self-contradiction, to pretend to unite them into a numerically one God.

VII. According to our Idea of the Trinity, the Son and the Holy Spirit exiſt in the Unity of God, of his imperial Eſtate and his divine Eſſence, (who is the imperial Eſtate of Government in his Kingdom) and in the way of his Monothe-iſm. As the Scholaſtic Trinities are prejudicial to the Unity of God, and introduce Polytheiſm:

(e) Ut ipſe Deus ſit ipſiſſimus, neque ullâ divinitatis perfectione illo minor, qui ſummus Deus dicitur, nempe Deo Patre. Proinde hâc tantum ratione ſecundum Deum dici Filium, quòd Deus ſit de Deo, hoc eſt à Deo Patre originem ſuam habeat. Verbo dicam, Origines Filium non aliâ ratione ſecundum Deum appellavit, quàm eundem τάξει δεύτερον τοῦ πατρὸς, ordine ſecundum à Patre dixit Baſilius. Dr. Bull ſupra p. 263.

So our Idea of the Trinity is deſtructive to that Polytheiſm, which they introduce. They have their Origin from this fundamental Miſcarriage, The not contemplating the Godhead as an Imperial Eſtate regularly conſtituted. For no rational man would conſtitute an Imperial Eſtate of three co-eternal, co-equal, omniſcient and almighty Sovereigns, each of which is the Perſon of the Eternal Almighty God, and conſequently every one of them is by himſelf (as the Athanaſian Creed ſpeaketh) a ſort of imperial Eſtate. But all men muſt acknowledge, that an holy Sovereignty or imperial Eſtate, which conſiſteth of an holy imperial Father, an holy imperial Son and an holy Spirit of the Government is a regularly conſtituted Imperial Eſtate; and it may be underſtood and illuſtrated by imagining and ſuppoſing a like imperial Eſtate amongſt men. For we may ſuppoſe the Papal Sovereignty or Imperial Eſtate (an imperial Eſtate of Religion) to conſiſt of the holy imperial Father, the imperial Son of the Papacy, and of the Spirit of Popery; which imaginary Papal Sovereignty or Imperial Eſtate, is an imperfect Image and Reſemblance of that divine Sovereignty or imperial Eſtate which God is in his Kingdom. In the Unity of which imperial Eſtate, together with his divine Eſſence, the Son and the Holy Spirit exiſt, and ſo exiſt, that the Father only is the imperial Eſtate of God, the one ſole Perſon of the Almighty God, and therefore they are ſaid to exiſt in the Unity of God in the way of his Monothe-iſm. By this Idea of the Trinity the Unity of God and Unity in Trinity, or three perſons and one God, (which is the Faith of Chriſtians) are duely ſecured, as will appear from theſe following Obſervables concerning it.

(1.) This Trinity is no more than God imperial, or God as an imperial Eſtate. For God as ſuch in the larger notion and comprehenſion, is three divine Perſons. The Son and the Holy Spirit exiſt in that imperial Eſtate, which He is, exiſt in the Unity of it, are comprehended in it; ſo that God in the comprehenſion of that imperial Eſtate which He is, is three divine Perſons; the Son and the Holy Spirit belong to this imperial Eſtate which He is, belong to the Unity of it; they appertain to his being God, the one God as an imperial Eſtate. And ſeeing one God as imperial is three Perſons, the three Perſons are neceſſarily one God; for one God is the comprehenſion of them, they are comprehended in the Unity of God as an imperial Eſtate, and in ſuch ſenſe they are one God, and in ſuch ſenſe that there is no Polytheiſm in the Godhead.

(2.) The divine vital Eſſence of God in the larger notion and comprehenſion is that vital Sanctity, which the Son is as his conſtitutive nature, and this vital Sanctity is the divine vital Eſſence of God. The divine vital Eſſence of God alſo is that vital Sanctity, which the Holy Spirit is (the communicative) and this is the divine vital Eſſence of God. So that the Son and the Holy Ghoſt exiſt in the Unity of the divine vital Eſſence which God is, as well as in the Unity of that imperial Eſtate which God is. Their Divinity or Deity of Perſon conſiſteth in being perſons of his Sovereignty and of his Eſſence; this their Divinity or Deity of perſon therefore (both as to Sovereignty and as to Eſſence) is that which is His, ſuch is his Monotheiſm. They are not God in the triplify'd and triplifying way of Polytheiſm; but they are God only as appertaining to God, the one as the imperial Son, the other as the Holy Spirit of his imperial Eſtate and Government, to whom his Sovereignty and his Eſſence appertaineth as ſuch. As ſuch they exiſt undividedly from God, and as one with him (appertaining to him indiviſively) the imperial Son being one with him in his Sovereignty, one with him in his Eſſence, one with him in Reality and due Perſonality (the Son being the Father's Repreſentative) and ſo far he is God; but not ſo as to imply or infer Ditheiſm (two Gods) the Unity of God is not prejudic'd thereby: But on the contrary the one only God, as in the comprehenſion of his Imperial Eſtate, ſo in the comprehenſion of his divine vital Nature and Eſſence is three Perſons, three Perſons belong to his Unity, and are comprehended in it, not only as He is the Sanctity imperial, but as He is the Sanctity vital, and conſequently the three Perſons are one God. The Holy Ghoſt is ſo one with God, as to be the great Eſſentiality belonging to his Godhead, that of himſelf and his divine vital Eſſence which is the Communicative, who therefore is far from being another God beſides himſelf.

(3.) The Son and the Holy Ghoſt exiſt in the Godhead in their proper Character (as the Son and the Holy Ghoſt;) for although they are God with due diſtinction and limitation of ſenſe, as being perſons and ſuch perſons of the Godhead, yet neither of them doth exiſt in the Godhead in the perſon of a God, or in the Perſon of God definitively and abſolutely ſo, the perſon of the Almighty God (or as the imperial Eſtate of God;) nor can the imperial Son be another or a different God from the Father. He that is of the Godhead, ſo as to be only the imperial Son of it, is not of the Godhead, ſo as to be another or a different God for this reaſon, becauſe he is of the Godhead, ſo as to be only the imperial Son of it: As he that is of the Papacy, ſo as to be only the imperial Son of it, is not of the Papacy, ſo as to be another Pope. Agreeably whereto the Names which the ancient Writers have given to the Son, may and ought to be underſtood; they uſed them as terms to eſtabliſh their own ſenſe, but they ought to be underſtood in another ſenſe, of which they are capable. For the Son ought to be called God of God (Deus de Deo) Light of Light, very God of very God with this limitation, ſo as is competible to the divine imperial Son, and not otherwiſe. The Holy Ghoſt is not in ſuch ſenſe God, as to be ſtrictly the divine Sovereignty, but is only the divine Inſpiration-virtue and Agent of the Divine Sovereignty and Government, and he that is of the Godhead as ſuch, and only as ſuch, cannot be ſuppoſed to be another God.

(4.) Touching the Scholaſtic divine Eſſence and Attributes there is great difference between our Chriſtian Trinity and the Scholaſtic Trinities. For in theſe Trinities every divine Perſon is a perſon, that is his own diſtinct comprehenſion of the Scholaſtic divine Eſſence and Attributes as well as the Father, and thereby is in and by himſelf God, and a God as well as the Father, agreeably to what the Athanaſian Creed ſaith, Each Perſon is by himſelf God (the Perſon of the Almighty God, omniſcient, omnipotent, omni-imperial) which muſt be thought an heinous violation both of the Honour and of the Unity of God. There is indeed in theſe Trinities an ἐμπεριχώρησις, a mutual Inexiſtence and Immeation of the three divine Perſons; they are ſuppoſed not only to be inſeparably conjoin'd, but intimately to penetrate and pervade one another. But this their Inexiſtence ſignifieth nothing to the abating the heinous violation of the Honour of God, becauſe it is a mutual ἐμπεριχώρησις, Inexiſtence, that is as broad as it is long. Nor doth it ſignifie any thing to the abating the heinous violation of the Unity of God; ſor notwithſtanding this Scholaſtic Inexiſtence, the Son and the Holy Ghoſt are Perſons, that are their own diſtinct comprehenſion of the Scholaſtic divine Eſſence and Attributes as well as the Father, and thereby each of them is in and by himſelf God, and a God as well as the Father. But things are quite otherwiſe in our Chriſtian Trinity, in which there is none but the Father's one ſole Comprehenſion of the Scholaſtic divine Eſſence and Attributes, (which cannot be multiply'd, nor Scholaſtically communicated) to which Comprehenſion (the Father's Godhead) the Son and the Holy Ghoſt belong, therein they have their Inexiſtence, they are Perſons of it, and they are God, ſo as that all their Divinity or Deity is the Father's, as comprehended in his Monothe-iſm, and belonging to the Comprehenſion thereof. Whatever Omniſcience, Omnipotence, or Omni-imperial Authority the imperial Son or the Holy Spirit have, it is the Father's, as comprehended in his Monothe-iſm, and belonging to the Comprehenſion thereof. Each of theſe divine Perſons hath ſuch an Omniſcience, Omnipotence and Omni-imperial Authority, as belongeth to one of his Idea? But this will not infer, that they are abſolutely omniſcient, omnipotent and omni-imperial. Some Scholaſtic Trinitarians ſay, (f) The Son is not able to beget the Father, nor the Holy Ghoſt to produce either Father or Son; theſe Hypoſtaſes are not omnipotent ad intra (inwards or within the Deity:) When the Father is ſaid to be omnipotent, the Son omnipotent, the Holy Ghoſt omnipotent, the term Omnipotent is not of the ſame ſenſe. We may not argue with the Fathers touching the Holy Spirit, (g) Quid eſt quod neſciat, qui novit omnia quæ Dei ſunt? Spiritus enim etiam alta Dei ſcrutatur. What is there, that he doth not know, who knoweth all the things of God? For the Spirit ſearcheth even the deep things of God, becauſe the Holy Spirit hath the Omniſcience of the Spirit of Revelation, hence it is inferr'd. But by no good conſequence, that he is abſolutely omniſcient. Theſe are conſiderable matters of difference touching the Scholaſtic divine Eſſence and Attributes.

(5.) If every divine Perſon is neceſſarily and eternally a Perſon, that is his own diſtinct Comprehenſion of the Scholaſtic divine Eſſence and Attributes as well as the Father, and thereby is in and by himſelf God, and a God as well as the Father, every divine Perſon (notwithſtanding his Origination from the Father) muſt be ſuppoſed a Self-Owner as well as the Father, and the conſequence is Patri non eſt auctoritas, which is deſtructive to the Honour and to the Being of one only God: But if the Son and the Holy Ghoſt exiſt in the Father's Godhead as his imperial Son and his Holy Spirit, and if they are God, ſo as that all their Divinity or Deity is the Father's as comprehended in his Monothe-iſm, and belonging to the Comprehenſion thereof, then we may ſay with St. Auſtin, and with far better reaſon than he, (h) Deus ſummus & verus cum Verbo ſuo & Spiritu ſancto, quæ tria unum ſunt, unus Deus. The ſupreme and true God with his Word and Holy Spirit, which three are one, one God. For all that the imperial Son and the Holy Spirit is as to Divinity or Deity, belongeth to the Monothe-iſm of the one God, and is comprehended in it.

VIII. Our Chriſtian Trinity is nothing more than the Unity of God as imperial in his new Kingdom which voideth the Unitarians Objections againſt the Trinity. The Unity of God as it offereth it ſelf to our Contemplation, is of two ſorts (not conſidering his Unity in the typical Jewiſh Church:) The one is a Coſmical-providential; the other is his divine Theopolitical Unity. In natural Religion, in Deiſm and Pagan Theiſm there is an Unity of God; for the Pagan Theiſts were generally of this Perſwaſion, That the Univerſe is a Monarchy, and they believ'd, as the Stoicks argued, that there is but one Jove and Providence, one Coſmical Regent and governing Providence, whereby the Univerſe was conſtituted and is govern'd. But beſides this Coſmical-providential Unity of God, there is a divine Theopolitical Unity; for God muſt be contemplated as the imperial Eſtate of Sanctity imperial (which is an obligation upon us, to become his Liege-Subjects in the Comprehenſion of Sanctity imperial) which is the only Comprehenſion, that himſelf and his People are of, the City of God, his Church and his Kingdom. In his new Kingdom God is the imperial Eſtate and ſole imperial Perſon of God: But ſo that his imperial Son as ſuch is God as a Perſon of his divine Sovereignty and Godhead, the filial imperial Eſtate of Chriſtianity imperial, the filial imperial Lord of all, our (mediatory) divine Sovereign Lord, and the Saviour-King of the holy Empire. Which holy Empire is made holy by the God-agency and Operation of the Holy Spirit, who is ſuch an Agent-virtual kind of Perſon, that as ſuch ought to be in this divine Sovereignty and Government, is eſſential to the imperial Head of the Church and to the holy Empire, is of ſuch immenſe vital Sanctity, ſo many Creature-tranſcendencies, and is ſo almoſt God himſelf (as being that of God, that of himſelf his Holy Spirit) that he muſt be thought an Intrinſick of the one imperial Eſtate of the Godhead, which is the imperial Eſtate of the Kingdom of God. And becauſe this Holy Spirit and the imperial Son are comprehended in the Unity of God, as he is the imperial Eſtate of his now Kingdom, therefore the Chriſtian Trinity may be juſtly ſaid to be nothing more than the Unity of God as imperial in his new Kingdom.

This goeth a great way to facilitate the Belief of the Chriſtian Trinity; for the Unitarians Objections and Arguments againſt the Scholaſtic Trinities are chiefly founded upon the Unity of God, which is their κυρία δόξα, capital Article. For this they contend and diſpute, for this they expreſs the greateſt Zeal and Concern, for this they incur the Averſation and Deteſtation of all parties, for this (as they profeſs) they are ready to part with their Eſtates and Lives, and from this their principal Article they denominate themſelves Unitarians. They are not ſatisfy'd with that Unity of the divine Nature (or Eſſence) which the uſual Scholaſtic Theology acknowledgeth (which cannot clear it from introducing a Plurality of Gods) they diſpute for another ſort of Unity of God, namely, That God is but one Perſon, (or that there is but one divine Perſon) and this is τὸ κρινόμενον, the matter in Controverſie, between them and their Adverſaries. Our Hypotheſis inter-

(f) Dr. Cudw. Intell. Syſt. p. 598. Dr. H. More Myſt. of Godl. B. 9. c. 2.

(g) S. Ambroſ. de ſp. ſanct. l. 2. c 12.

(h) De C. D. l. 5. c. 11.

interpoſeth between them as a Mediator, it granteth an unanſwerable Firmitude in the Anti-Trinitarians Objections of Polytheiſm againſt the Scholaſtic Trinities, and in their Arguments for the Unity of God, as they aſſert it againſt them: It ſaith as they ſay, it diſputeth as they diſpute, that God is but one Perſon; yet our Hypotheſis is Chriſtian-Trinitarian, and theirs is Unchriſtian-Unitarian. Notwithſtanding our Agreement in terms, and (in good degree) in ſenſe, and although we both alike zealouſly aſſert the Unity of God, yet we differ in ſomething, and in ſomething very conſiderable, which is eſſential to Chriſtianity; for their Doctrine of the Unity of God as it is Anti-Trinitarian (excluſive of the Son and the Holy Ghoſt from being Perſons of the Godhead) is deſtructive of Chriſtianity in ſome main and principal parts of it. They inſiſt upon ſuch an Unity of God, as appeareth in Nature and common Providence, as is found in Deiſm, literal Judaiſm, Muhammediſm and Pagan Theiſm, (The Coſmical-providential Unity of God) and this they recommend, ſo to exterminate the Chriſtian Trinity: But they might as well and by the ſame reaſon inſiſt upon ſuch a Kingdom, or City of God, as is in Nature and common Providence, in Deiſm, Judaiſm and Paganiſm, ſo to exterminate the only true Kingdom of God, which is not to be found in Deiſm or Judaiſm, in Nature or common Providence. There is no ſaving Religion but that of the Kingdom of God (out of which the Life and State of Holineſs and of Alliance to God is not to be found;) how little therefore doth ſuch an Unity of God ſignifie, which is on this ſide the Kingdom of God? How little doth it ſignifie, to be a Pagan, a Judaical, or a Muhammedan Unitarian? And if the Unitarians will be Chriſtian Unitarians, they muſt acknowledge the Unity of God as imperial in his new Kingdom, in which Unity of his Godhead there are manifeſtly three divine Perſons, and therefore they muſt embrace the Chriſtian Trinity, which is nothing but pure Chriſtianity, is in all reſpects truly divine, agreeable in great degree to their own Notions, and of ſo unexceptionable a Make and Character, that it is not liable to any of their Objections and Arguments againſt the Trinity, which plainly confute their own Hypotheſis, do not affect our Hypotheſis, but all of them vaniſh before it as a Miſt before the Sun.

(1.) One ſort of their Arguments is drawn from thoſe Texts, which expreſs the Unity of God. For to prove, that Chriſt is not a Perſon of the one ſupreme Godhead their prime Allegation is, Joh. 17. 3. This is life eternal, that they might know thee, the only true God. Whence they argue, that all other perſons beſides the Father are excluded from being the true or ſupreme God. But this illuſtrious Text really proveth the Chriſtian Trinitarian, not the Unitarian Hypotheſis. For the Words do not exclude, but manifeſtly include our Saviour as to the being a Perſon of the ſupreme Godhead. His Words cannot exclude, what they manifeſtly include, imply and infer. Becauſe God the Father is the only true and ſupreme God, therefore the holy imperial Lord the Son is neceſſarily a Perſon of the only true and ſupreme Godhead, (this our Saviour's words include and imply) as becauſe a King is the only true and ſupreme King, therefore his regial Son is neceſſarily a Perſon of the only true and ſupreme Regality. This prime Allegation therefore is againſt themſelves, and ſo are theſe other Texts, which are their principal Allegations. 1 Cor. 8. 6. To us there is but one God the Father; of whom are all things, and one Lord Jeſus Chriſt, by whom are all things. Eph. 4. 5, 6. There is one Lord; one Faith; one Baptiſm, one God and Father of all. 1 Cor. 12. 4, 5, 6. There are diverſities of Gifts, but the ſame Spirit. And there are differences of Adminiſtrations, but the ſame Lord. And there are diverſities of Operations, but it is the ſame God which worketh all in all. Rom. 3. 30. It is one God which ſhall juſtifie the Circumciſion by faith, and Uncircumciſion through faith. From ſuch places the Unitarians argue, that God the Father is peculiarly and appropriately The one God and the only ſupreme God, and Chriſt is diſtinguiſh'd from him as The Lord (which denoteth Inferiority;) therefore Chriſt is not the ſupreme God. Meaning (as in part they do) that Chriſt is not a Perſon of the one ſupreme Godhead. And as this is their Meaning, I ſay, that their Premiſſes deſtroy their Concluſion: For no man can attentively read theſe Texts and compare them, but he will plainly diſcern that the ſenſe of them is our Chriſtian Trinitarian Hypotheſis, viz. That God the Father is the one and ſole imperial Eſtate of God, and that the Son and the Holy Ghoſt are Perſons of his imperial Eſtate, the one as the imperial Son, the other as the divine Ghoſtly Agent of his Sovereignty. God the Father muſt be acknowledged peculiarly and appropriately The one God: But becauſe Chriſt is The Lord (the imperial Son, who is neceſſarily of the ſame imperial Eſtate with the Father) therefore Chriſt is neceſſarily a Perſon of the one true and ſupreme Godhead. But againſt this the Unitarians argue from 1 Tim. 2 5. that there is one God (beſides whom there is no other) and Chriſt is only the Mediator between God and Men. To which I anſwer, That to be the Mediator, is nothing elſe, but to be by Officiary Dignity The holy imperial Lord the Son (our mediatory divine ſovereign Lord) who is neceſſarily a Perſon of the one ſupreme Godhead. Nor is it tolerable in Religion, to make him a Mediator of a more inferior quality (not tranſcending a Creature) an Heterouſian Extrinſick to the Godhead. He that underſtandeth theſe Anſwers to the principal Allegations of the Unitarians, needeth not to be taught what Anſwer to make to the reſt of the multitude of their Allegations, that God (the Father) is the only Lord God, God only wiſe, and there is no other true God but the God of Iſrael; that God is greater than Chriſt, his Head, God and Father, and none is good ſave one, that is God; that Chriſt is diſtinguiſh'd from God, and is only The Son of God The Word of God, The Image of God, The Bread of God, and is ſaid to have been with God, in the form of God, to be equal with God, to come forth from God, to ſit at the Right-hand of God, and to be ordain'd of God the Judge of quick and dead. All which ſort of Texts do not confute, but confirm our Chriſtian Trinitarian Hypotheſis touching the Unity of God, but the Anti-Trinitarians are not ſatisfied with any other Unity of God, than that which deſtroyeth the divine Perſonality of the Son and the Holy Ghoſt, and conjoineth into a Trinity two Creatures and one God (things that are far worſe than the worſt of Scholaſtic Trinities) they inſiſt and urge, That God is but one Perſon; there is no other God but one; the Lord thy God, the Lord is one; God is one. This the whole Bible atteſteth, and till they can remove the firſt Commandment out of the way (ſaith an Unitarian Diſputant) it will be impoſſible for Men of ſenſe to be of the Trinitarian Perſwaſion. To which Argumentation a Chriſtian Trinitarian maketh anſwer, That God definitively ſo called is but one Perſon. He will not ſay in the ſenſe of the uſual Scholaſtic Trinity, or in the ſenſe of the Platonic Trinities, that God is three Perſons: Nor will he allow himſelf at all, ſimply to ſay, that God is three Perſons; for this is to ſay, that one is three, and it cannot be ſaid without the Fallacy à dicto ſecundum quid ad dictum ſimpliciter. Yet it muſt be ſaid of God, that in the Comprehenſion and Unity of his Godhead there are three Perſons, ſo that in ſome ſenſe and reſpect God (definitively ſo called) is three Perſons, and three Perſons are one God, as belonging to the Unity of his Godhead. As to the firſt Commandment the ſenſe of it may be thus explain'd and illuſtrated. Let us ſuppoſe, that we are Roman Catholicks, and that the legitimate Pope giveth us this Commandment, Ye ſhall have no other Pope but me. This Commandment expreſly excludeth all illegitimate Popes: But it doth not hinder an imperial Son and the Spirit of the Roman Catholic Religion and Government from being in the Papacy; nor can it be ſuppos'd to exclude what it manifeſtly implieth, includeth and inferreth. It manifeſtly implieth, that we muſt have the legitimate Pope for our Pope, and conſequently (ſuppoſing ſuch Perſons to be in the Papacy) that we muſt acknowledge his imperial Son and the Spirit of his Religion in the quality of his imperial Son and Spirit. The Application of this to the Godhead is eaſie and obvious; nor is it hard to ſatisfie this Argumentation of the Unitarians. Who ſeeth not, that one almighty, moſt wiſe and good God is ſufficient? In the viſible World or created Nature there is nothing in vain, much leſs is there or can there be in the divine Nature any thing uſeleſs, needleſs and ſuperfluous. If a Being is infinite in all Perfections, there is no need that it ſhould be multiply'd, or be more than one. This Objection hath its riſe from their unacquaintedneſs with the true and Chriſtian method of contemplating God. For that which they look at, is the Coſmical-providential Unity of God, (whence they conſider him only as one infinite Spirit and all-ſufficient Mind) not knowing, that God muſt be contemplated as an imperial Eſtate, as the imperial Eſtate of Sanctity imperial, of his own Kingdom and of his new Kingdom. In reſpect of his Imperial Eſtate, Headſhip, Government and Kingdom of Sanctity imperial (although God may not, nor can be multiply'd, yet) the Exiſtence of his Holy Spirit in his Godhead is indiſpenſably neceſſary. And as he is the imperial Eſtate of God in his new Kingdom, there muſt be in his Godhead both his divine imperial Son (the Lord Meſſiah) and his divine Spirit, as every man that is acquainted with the Affairs of the Kingdom of God will not fail to acknowledge. Tertullian thus diſputeth againſt the Unitarians of his time, the Monarchiani, Noetians or Sabellians, that called themſelves Unius Dei cultores. (i) The very Rule of Faith removeth us from the Polytheiſm of the World to one only and the true God, who indeed is only one, but whom we muſt believe with his Oeconomy. The Chriſtian Trinity is God with his Oeconomy, which is in Chriſtianity of neceſſary Exiſtence, and neceſſary to be believed. And now every one may diſcern, that theſe Queſtions of an Unitarian Writer do not at all concern our Hypotheſis. Qu. 1. Whether one infinitely wiſe, powerful and good Perſon be not as ſufficient to all purpoſes and intents, as three, or even three thouſand ſuch Perſons? Qu. 2. If three Perſons are neceſſary towards compleating the Nature and Notion of God, would not ſeven ſuch Perſons be a more compleat God than three?

(2.) A ſecond ſort of Arguments in great plenty the Unitarians raiſe from thoſe many Texts of Scripture, that ſpeak of our Saviour's Meſſias-ſhip. Crellius in the firſt and ſecond Section of his firſt Book, De uno Deo, hath multiply'd his Scriptural Arguments to the number of ſeven and forty: But of this huge number ſcarce one Argument doth affect our Hypotheſis. All that he hath diſcourſed touching the Unity of God, the Diſtinction of God from the Son of God, his miſſive Oeconomy, his Neſcience of the Day of Judgment, his Aſcription of Goodneſs, Greatneſs and Superiority to the Father, his receiving his All from him, his aſcribing his All to him, his praying to him, and delivering up the Kingdom to him, his Generation, Incarnation, Prieſthood, Mediatorſhip, of his Equality to the Father, his being his, and his Image, of the Father's being his God and his Head, and of his being tempted by Satan, ſignifieth juſt nothing to the prejudice of our Hypotheſis touching the Deity of our Saviour. But becauſe the numerous Texts which he hath cited touching our Saviour's miſſive Oeconomy, may ſeem (more eſpecially) to countenance his vile Unitarian Hypotheſis of creaturizing the Son of God, therefore I will briefly explain them, and ſet the ſenſe of them in clear light. I ſay therefore, that all of them amount to nothing more than this, to ſignifie, That our Saviour is not his own, but God's Meſſiah; which is to ſay, that he is not the imperial Perſon of God definitively ſo called, but the imperial Son of God; and the ſenſe of that is, that he is a Perſon of the Godhead, but not otherwiſe than as the imperial Son of God. They are therefore no Prejudice to, but a great Confirmation of our Hypotheſis; for any one that underſtandeth the ſenſe of Language, may be ſatisfied, that this is the whole import of our Saviour's Language, I am not mine own, but God's Meſſiah, when he ſaith, I am not come of my ſelf, but he that ſent me, is true. I am come in my Father's Name. I proceeded forth and came from God; neither came I of my ſelf, but he ſent me. My Judgment is true; for I am not alone, but I and the Father that ſent me. He that ſent me is with me: The Father hath not left me alone: For I do always thoſe things that pleaſe him. I have not ſpoken of my ſelf; but the Father which ſent me, he gave me a Commandment, what I ſhould ſay, and what I ſhould ſpeak. I ſpeak therefore even as the Father ſaid unto me. My doctrine is not mine, but his that ſent me. If any man will do his will, he ſhall know of the doctrine, whether it be of God, or whether I ſpeak of my ſelf. He that ſpeaketh of himſelf, ſeeketh his own glory: But he that ſeeketh his glory that ſent him, the ſame is true, and no unrighteouſneſs is in him. When ye have lift up the Son of Man, then ſhall ye know that I am he, and that I do nothing of my ſelf; but as the Father hath taught me, I ſpeak theſe things. The words that I ſpeak unto you, I ſpeak not of my ſelf; but the Father that dwelleth in me, he doeth the works. The word which you hear is not mine, but the Father's which

Joh. 5.19, 20, 26, 27, 30, 36, 43. and 6. 37, 38. and 7. 16, 17, 18, 28. and 8. 16, 28, 29, 40, 42, 50, 54. and 10. 25, 29, 37, 38. and 12. 44, 49, 50. and 14.10, 14, 31. and 15. 10. and 17. 2, 6, 8, 22, 24. and 18.11. Matth. 11. 27. and 26. 39. and 28. 18. Luc. 22.29. Apoc. 2.26, 27.

(i) Ipſa regula Fidei à pluribus Deis ſeculi ad unicum & verum Deum transfert, unicum quidem, ſed cum ſuâ οἰκονομία, credendum. Adv. Prax. c. 3.

ſent me. I told you the truth, which I have heard of God. All things that I have heard of my Father, I have made known unto you. I have given them the words which thou gaveſt me (ſaith Chriſt to his Father) and they have received them, and have known ſurely, that I came out from thee, and they have believed, that thou didſt ſend me. He that believeth on me, believeth not on me, but on him that ſent me. The Son can do nothing of himſelf, but what he ſeeth the Father do; for the Father loveth the Son, and ſheweth him all things that himſelf doeth. I can of mine own ſelf do nothing; as I hear, I judge, and my judgment is juſt, becauſe I ſeek not mine own will, but the will of the Father which hath ſent me. I came down from Heaven, not to do mine own will, but the will of him that ſent me. I ſeek not mine own glory: There is one that ſeeketh and judgeth. If I honour my ſelf, my honour is nothing: It is my Father that honoureth me. To ſit on my right hand and on my left is not mine to give, but it ſhall be given to them for whom it is prepared of my Father. As the Father gave me commandment, ſo I do. I have kept my Father's commandment, and abide in his love. The works which the Father hath given me to finiſh, the ſame works that I doe bear witneſs of me, that the Father hath ſent me. Believe the works, that ye may know and believe, that the Father is in me, and I in him. My Father which gave them me, is greater than all. All that the Father giveth me, ſhall come to me. As the Father hath life in himſelf; ſo hath he given to the Son, to have life in himſelf; and hath given him authority to execute Judgment. As thou haſt given him power over all fleſh (ſaith Chriſt to his Father) that he ſhould give eternal life to as many as thou haſt given him. I have manifeſted thy name unto the men which thou gaveſt me out of the World: Thine they were, and thou gaveſt them me. The glory which thou gaveſt me, I have given them. That they may behold my glory, which thou haſt given me. All things are delivered to me of my Father. All power is given unto me in Heaven and in Earth. The cup which my Father hath given me, ſhall I not drink it? Not as I will, but as thou wilt. I appoint unto you a Kingdom, as my Father hath appointed unto me. He that overcometh, to him will I give power, even as I received of my Father.

The holy Writers of the New Teſtament ſpeak of our Saviour agreeably to the tenor of his own divine Diſcourſes, and repreſent him not as his own, but as God's Meſſiah. For this is their meaning and the whole of their ſenſe, when they ſay, that he was fore-ordain'd (by God) before the foundation of the World; that God gave him and ſent him in the likeneſs of ſinful fleſh; anointed him with the Holy Ghoſt and with Power; gave not the Spirit by meaſure unto him; made him Sin for us, and deliver'd him to death for us all. Of God he is made unto us wiſdom and righteouſneſs and ſanctification and redemption. He glorified not himſelf to be made an High Prieſt; but he that ſaid unto him, Thou art my Son, to day have I begotten thee. In the days of his fleſh he offered up prayers and ſupplications with ſtrong crying and tears, unto him that was able to ſave him from death. Called of God an High Prieſt. Conſider the Apoſtle and High Prieſt of our profeſſion Chriſt Jeſus, who was faithful to him that appointed him. Who by him hath reconciled us to himſelf, by him giveth us the victory, by him hath created all things, who raiſed him from the dead, exalted him by his right hand, gave him the promiſed Holy Spirit, put all things under him, all principality and power, and every name that is named, gave him the throne of his Father David, gave him to be Head over all things to the Church, ordained him to be the Judge of quick and dead, committed (gave) all judgment unto the Son, made him both Lord and Chriſt, and gave him the name above every name. For the Father loveth the Son, and hath given all things into his hand. A vaſt number of Texts of this nature are produc'd by Crellius, to deſtroy the Scholaſtic Trinitarian Divinity of our Saviour, and to eſtabliſh his own Hypotheſis, which creaturizeth the Son of God. And it muſt be acknowledged, that they effectually deſtroy the Scholaſtic Trinitarian Divinity of our Saviour; for the Language which he ſpeaketh (that he came from God, in his Name, was ſent, taught and commanded by God) is not agreeable to one, that is the Perſon of the Almighty God; innumerable things in theſe Texts are affirm'd and deny'd of our Saviour, which are utterly incompetible to ſuch a Perſon; and it is groſs Self-contradiction to ſuppoſe, that He, who is not his own, but God's Meſſiah, is the Perſon of the Eternal Almighty God, of the moſt High God, the Jehovah in the ſtrict ſenſe. But on the other hand, I do affirm, that theſe numerous Texts which Crellius hath produc'd, do as effectually and fully deſtroy his own vile Hypotheſis (touching the Perſon of our Saviour) as they do the Scholaſtic Trinitarian. And this may eaſily be made evident to any capable Underſtanding. For the Name Meſſiah denoteth an imperial or regial Perſon; and the ſame Perſon that is the Meſſiah, is the perſon of the Son of God; this therefore is his definitive Notion or Idea; He is the imperial Son of God, of the great King, who cannot be one of the Creature-party, the Subject-party, but is neceſſarily one of the Creature-tranſcendent, the imperial Party. Again, the Name of God's Meſſiah (of whom he ſaith, I have ſet my King upon my holy hill of Sion) manifeſtly denoteth A divine imperial Perſon; it denoteth therefore one that is of the divine imperial Eſtate, which is the Godhead. He is ſo as the Son and Heir of this imperial Eſtate (not meerly by an abſurd and arbitrary Gift of God to a Creature;) he is ſo by Birth-nobilitation, and in the way of Generation (both in his primary and officiary Capacity;) and he is ſo as the imperial Saint of God-kind of Son, which he cannot be, if as to his Eſſence, he is but a Creature. If any one with Judgment readeth theſe numerous Texts, that are ſet before his Eyes, he cannot but diſcern, that our Saviour's Character and Deſcription (both in his own and the holy Writers Diſcourſes) conſiſteth of manifold Creature-tranſcendencies, (His being with God, ſo as to be in the Boſom of the Father, to have intimate converſe with him and from him, is manifeſt Creature-tranſcendence; ſuch are his Offices of divine High-Prieſt, univerſal King, Judge and Saviour; and his Exaltation is full of Creature-tranſcendencies) throughout his divine Diſcourſes and the holy Writers he is repreſented as ſo nearly ally'd to God, and ſo dear to him, as is enough to ſatisfie any unprejudic'd mind, that there is no other Diſtance between them but that of divine imperial Father and Son, not that of God and Creature. The creaturizing Hypotheſis of the Unitarians is ſo far from being proved by the numerous Texts which they cite, that they are all of them Proofs of Chriſt's true Divinity, which is his Creature-tranſcendence (ſo far are they from doing prejudice to it) and are really argumentative againſt

1 Pet. 1.
20. Joh. 3.
16, 17, 34,
35. and 5.
22. Luc. 1.
32. Act. 2.
33, 36. and
3. 26. and
10. 38, 42.
Rom. 8. 3,
32. 1 Cor.
1. 30. and
15. 27, 57.
2 Cor. 5.
18, 21.
Eph. 1. 21,
22. and 3.
9. Phil. 2.
9. Heb. 5.
7, 10. and
3. 1, 2.

themſelves. For what can be more expreſſive of Creature-tranſcendence than this illuſtrious Text which they cite, Joh. 5. 36. As the Father hath life in himſelf, ſo hath he given to the Son to have life in himſelf. What can be more expreſſive of Creature-tranſcendence than his very Name, The Son of God? The Unitarians diſpute, (k) that Chriſt is ſaid to be equal with God; which ought not to be ſaid, if he is one of the Creatures. That he is ſaid to be the Mediator (our mediatory divine Sovereign) and that is Creature-tranſcendence. That he is the Image of the inviſible God (peculiarly and appropriately) which is to be the imperial Son, and that is Creature-tranſcendence. And how abſurd an Impertinence would it be in our Saviour to tell his Diſciples, The Father is greater than I, if he was but a Creature? So they object the former part of this following Text as a mighty Argument for their Hypotheſis, Joh. 5. 19. The Son can do nothing of himſelf, but what he ſeeth the Father do: For what things ſoever he doeth, theſe alſo doeth the Son likewiſe. But the former part of this Text doth not at all befriend the Unitarian Hypotheſis (it only importeth, that as to his Meſſias-ſhip our Saviour could do nothing of himſelf, as not being his own, but God's Meſſiah:) And the latter part of the Text plainly deſtroyeth it. For this is an high Strain of Creature-tranſcendence, What things ſoever the Father doeth, theſe alſo doeth the Son likewiſe. It is a great reproach to the Underſtanding of Crellius, that he hath filled his Book with Texts of Scripture, which proclaim our Saviour's Creature-tranſcendence, yet himſelf and his Aſſociates make this contradictious Inference from them, That He is one of the Creatures. For the Proof whereof he citeth the Apoſtles divine Panegyrick of our Saviour (every Branch whereof proclaimeth his Creature-tranſcendence) wherein he is ſtyled The Primogenit of every Creature; which is ſuppos'd to imply, that he is one of the number of the Creatures. But doubtleſs this is an honourary Attribute, which denoteth this Creature-tranſcendence, that he is (as being the Heir) the Lord of all Creatures, as the following Words ſhew.

(3.) A third ſort of the Unitarians Arguments (in their late Pamphlets) is heavy Criminations of the Trinity. For they charge it with Polytheiſm, Idolatry and Inconſiſtence with Piety towards God in the main Branches of it. To prove the Charge of Polytheiſm, thus they argue. If this Concluſion is right and neceſſary, The Father is a divine Perſon, the Son is a divine Perſon, the Holy Ghoſt is a divine Perſon; therefore there are three divine Perſons: This muſt likewiſe be ſo; The Father is God, the Son is God, the Holy Ghoſt is God, therefore there are three Gods. As three Angelical Perſons are three Angels, and three human Perſons are three Men, ſo three divine Perſons are the ſame with three Gods. But if they thus argue touching our Idea of the Trinity, they will deceive themſelves by Equivocation of Words. For let us imagine, that in the Regality of a Nation there are three ſuch Perſons, as I have deſcrib'd to be in the Godhead, then we muſt ſay, there are three regal Perſons, each of which is ſo far King as to be of the Regality, yet there are not three Kings, but only one King; for one of them is the only one King. An Unitarian will object, that Regal Perſons and Kings are the ſame: But in the matter ſpoken of they are not the ſame. Having no fitter terms, we call thoſe Regal Perſons, that are only ſo far Regal Perſons, and ſo far King, as to be of the Regality: And in the ſame ſenſe we ſay, (l) Tres Divini; we call thoſe Divine Perſons that are only ſo far divine Perſons, and ſo far God, as to be of the Godhead. But as in the forementioned Regality there is only one King, which is the Father, neither of the other Regal Perſons being another King, nor exiſting in his Regality in the Perſon of the King, or of a King: So in the Godhead there is only one God, which is the Father, neither of the other divine Perſons being another God, nor exiſting in his Godhead in the Perſon of the Almighty God, or of a God, otherwiſe than as his imperial Son and his holy Spirit. But the Unitarians further inſiſt and argue; It is impoſſible that there ſhould be three Almighty and All-knowing Perſons, and yet but one God, ſeeing every Almighty and All-knowing Perſon is a God, a moſt perfect God, to whom nothing can be added. To which a Chriſtian Trinitarian anſwereth, that the Son and the Holy Spirit have not Almightineſs and Omniſcience otherwiſe than in God the Father, as his imperial Son and his holy Spirit; nor have they any other Almightineſs or Omniſcience, than that which belongeth to his imperial Son and his holy Spirit as ſuch; ſo that their Almightineſs and Omniſcience is the Father's, as comprehended in his Monothe-iſm, and belonging to the Comprehenſion thereof. Such an Almightineſs and Omniſcience doth not conſtitute either of them the Perſon of God, or of a God, or of another God; ſo that here is no Shadow of Polytheiſm in the Chriſtian Trinity. But with reſpect thereto it may be juſtly ſaid, That as there is but one, that is the Perſon of God, ſo there is but one, that is the Perſon of the Almighty and All-knowing; as there is but one, that is abſolutely and in himſelf God, ſo there is but one that is abſolutely and in himſelf Almighty and All-knowing.

The Unitarians ſometimes expreſs their Deſire that the Scholaſtic Trinitarians ſhould own them for Chriſtian Brethren, as not differing in matters neceſſary to Salvation. But in another Humour they cenſure them as denying the fundamental Article of Religion, (the Unity of God in their Senſe) and as breaking Covenant with God by Polytheiſm. As if their ſinful Scholaſtic Polytheiſm (which is alleviated by the Abſtruſeneſs of the Myſtery, by excuſable Ignorance, by the good Deſign of it, by holding faithfully in Mind and Meaning, and in the main at leaſt, the Article of one God both in Doctrine and Worſhip, and which is only a polytheizing God's own Son and Holy Spirit, with whom we are in Covenant) was like the ſetting up a Competitor-King in a Monarchic Government, a Paganical or an Heretical ſort of Polytheiſm, (like that of the Gnoſticks) which maketh them the People of a ſtrange God. At the ſame criminal rate of Cenſuring they count the Trinitarianiſm of the Chriſtian Church from the eldeſt Times no better than Idolatry; as if this was the early Fruit of Chriſt's coming, inſtead of aboliſhing Idolatry he only rais'd up a new World of Idolaters. But Men are not made Holy or Wicked by their Speculative Underſtandings. Clemens and Origen ſpeculatively idoliz'd a Platonic Logos, Athenagoras an Idea, Theophil. Antioch. an internal Speech of God, Tertullian and Lactantius a prolatitious Speech of God, all of them ſpeculatively idoliz'd an Abſtract kind of Logos, yet they were not Idolaters, if they did not terminate their Religious Worſhip upon their Philoſophic Crotchets, but upon the ſecond Perſon of the Chriſtian Trinity, the Perſon of our Bl. Saviour, to whom (k) Crellius de uno Deo, l. 1. S. 2. c. 1, 3, 14, 18, 27, 30, 35.

---

Col. 1. 15.

(l) Petav. de Trin. l. 3. c. 11. S. 9.

11

our Unitarians profeſs to pay a Religious Worſhip, but not the ſupreme Worſhip, not equal to the Father. For as they ſuppoſe, He that worſhippeth another Perſon beſides him with equal Worſhip, doth not worſhip the Lord his God and ſerve him only, but worſhippeth him and another, ſerving them together, (tranſgreſſing the great Law of Religious Worſhip) and giving his Glory to another. We ought to have but one Object of ſupreme Worſhip, whoever hath more deſtroyeth that Unity, and is guilty of Idolatry. If the having one Object of ſupreme Worſhip is the adoring one God, the having three ſuch Objects and the adoring each ſingly and by himſelf is the Worſhip of three Gods. But although legitimate Trinitarians muſt be ſaid to have more Objects than one of their Soveraign (or Supreme) Worſhip in a meer Logical Senſe, yet it muſt be ſaid that the Object is not more than one in juſt legal Conſtruction, nor is it more than one in the culpable Senſe of Law and Religion. In juſt legal Conſtruction the Object of their Soveraign Worſhip is not more than one. For as the having God for our King includeth the having his Imperial Son for our King, and his Holy Spirit for our ſanctifying Regent, ſo the making God the Object of our Soveraign Honour and Worſhip includeth the making his Imperial Son and his Holy Spirit the Object of our Soveraign Honour and Worſhip, (each one agreeably to his Idea;) and the making them the Object of our Soveraign Honour and Worſhip as ſuch, includeth the making him the primary Object of our Worſhip. They are ſo one and undivided, ſo comprehended and included in one, that in juſt Computation and legal Conſtruction they are but one Object of our Soveraign Worſhip, which one Object is The one God (the Father) in reſpect of what he is in the Unity and Comprehenſion of his Eſſence and Sovereignty. If it may be juſtly ſaid that our Trinity is no more than the Unity of God in his new Kingdom, it muſt be ſaid to be (in juſt legal Conſtruction) but one Object of our Soveraign Worſhip. Nor have we more than one Object of Soveraign Worſhip in the culpable Senſe of Law and Religion, which importeth Vice and Crime, the Crime of making that God which is not God, by giving it the Soveraign Worſhip that is proper to God. This Sin, as it is the Sin of Polytheiſm, is the meaning of having ſeveral Objects, (or more than one) of our Religious Worſhip in the culpable Senſe of Law and Religion. For the Senſe of the Law is, Thou ſhalt worſhip the Lord thy God, and him only ſhalt thou ſerve, ſo as not to have any idoliz'd Not-God, Matth. 4. 10. And this is the Senſe of the Prohibition in the Prophet, I will vot permit my Glory to be communicated to any idoliz'd Not-God. (This is that Another which the Text meaneth) Iſa. 42. 8. Theſe Texts rightly interpreted are not Arguments againſt, but for the divine Worſhip of the Perſons of the Chriſtian Trinity. For becauſe the Religious Worſhip muſt be given unto God, it muſt be given to his Imperial Son (as ſuch and agreeably to his Idea;) for this God accounteth a giving it to himſelf. His Godhead and his appropriate Worſhip and God-ſervice muſt be reſerv'd intire to himſelf (without communicating it to that which is not God, ſo making an Idol, a falſe Competitor-God;) as the ſole Regality of an earthly King and his peculiar Soveraign Honour muſt be reſerved to himſelf intire. It muſt not be alienated from him, the Religious Worſhip muſt be done to God without doing it to any thing that is not God; but muſt it therefore be alienated from his Son, who is certainly one of the Imperial Eſtate of his Godhead? Is this to be undutiful, diſloyal and traiterous to his Sovereignty? In communicating his Godhead regularly to his Imperial Son there can be nothing more of Evil than in communicating regularly the Regality of an earthly King to his imperial Son. We can eaſily conceive that both theſe may be done without multiplying Kings or making more Gods than one; and that the regular ſerving the imperial Son of an earthly King and alſo of the moſt high God in conſort with the Father is ſuch a ſerving them as is a ſerving him (the Father) and a ſerving him only in the Senſe of the Law. But to underſtand theſe Texts, to prohibit ſuch ſerving another, which is only ſerving another in a meer Logical Senſe, is the Property of brangling Sophiſters, not of ſerious Religioniſts. And we ſhall be of that Character, if we raiſe needleſs Squabbles about the Terms of an equal, ſupreme or ſoveraign Worſhip, which are to be underſtood in a due Latitude of Senſe. But to the Unitarians it ſeemeth evident, that if the having one Object of ſupreme Worſhip is the adoring one God, the having three ſuch Objects and the adoring each ſingly and by himſelf is the Worſhip of three Gods. But this is no neceſſary Conſequence, for theſe three Objects (Logically ſuch) may be only three Perſons of one regularly conſtituted Regality. And if there was ſuch a Sovereignty on Earth (as there is in Heaven) the honouring the ſeveral Perſons of it each ſingly and by himſelf, (that is, with particular reſpect to each of them at ſome time more than another) with a regularly Soveraign Honour would not be a making them three Kings, but only three Perſons of one Sovereignty. So if we argue (as the Unitarians might argue with more Honeſty) If the having one Object of Religious Worſhip, (which is the Supreme and Soveraign) is the having one God, the having three ſuch Objects and adoring them each ſingly and by himſelf is the Worſhip of three Gods; this Conſequence muſt be deny'd, (and the Argument is ruinous to thoſe Unitarians that profeſs to worſhip Chriſt with the divine Worſhip) for a legitimate Trinitarian doth not give Religious Worſhip to the divine Perſons to each ſingly and by himſelf, as if he was worſhipping three Sovereignties, but as to the Perſons of one regularly conſtituted Sovereignty, making them no more nor other than what they really are, duly obſerving their Order, Relation and their Unity, and making (as he ought) the Father the uſual ſtated Object of his Solemn Religious Worſhip. And he that doth ſo doth not by giving them the Religious Worſhip make them three Gods, but only three Perſons of one Godhead.

A third Unitarian Crimination of Trinitarianiſm is the Inconſiſtence thereof with Piety towards God in ſeveral main Branches of it. For the Son and the Holy Ghoſt are ſuppos'd to be Competitor-Gods, that rob the Father of that Honour, Power, Dominion, Glory, Praiſe, Adoration and Love, which without them he would wholly enjoy to himſelf, and which he can now only ſhare with two others. How can we love the true God with all the Heart and all the Soul, if we have as much Love for two other Perſons as for him? we thereby aſcribe to them his Excellence, we impute to them his Merit, we pay to them his Dues. But in the Chriſtian Trinity theſe Criminations can have no place, unleſs they be underſtood in ſuch a ſenſe as deſerveth not Crimination, but Commendation. For it is well-doing to think them reſplendent with his Excellence, to count their meritorious Doings his Doings by them, to pay them honourary

Dues as Dues to thoſe that are his and his Dues. The Father is not the leſs lov'd by our loving the Son with a (regularly) Soveraign Love, but on the contrary, he is therefore duly lov'd, becauſe the Son is ſo lov'd, (who ought to have our Soveraign Eſtimation and Affection out of reſpect to the Father, for his Sake and to his Glory) and the ſo loving the Father implieth and inferreth the ſo loving and honouring the Son. As it is not a godly thing, ſo it is not the Mind of God to have the Divine Honour and Worſhip appropriated to his own Perſon, and ſo to enjoy it wholly to himſelf, but to have it in (regular) Conſort with his divine imperial Son, Apoc. 5. 13. This he doth not count a Violation of his Excellence, Merit, Dues, nor a robbing him of Honour, Power, Dominion, Glory, Praiſe, Adoration and Love, (but the due giving them to him) nor only a going Share with others. Which are the groſs carnal Conceits of the Unitarians, that proceed from a bad Spirit, and demonſtrate that they are not φερώνυμοι, (as Irenæus was) thoſe that duly anſwer to their Name; but that in reſpect of the Unity and Concord of Chriſtians they are Contra-Unitarians. Otherwiſe they would commend the Scholaſtic Trinitarians Piety, although they condemn their Scholaſtic Theology. Which muſt be acknowledg'd to do this Prejudice to Piety, (amongſt many other) it rendreth the indubitable Maxims of it of a doubtful ſenſe, and not certainly intelligible. For when our uſual Books of Piety teach us our Duties unto God (to believe in him, to fear him, to love him, to call upon him, to honour his holy Name, and ſuch more) who can certainly ſay what they mean by God? Do they mean the coeternal Trinity or three Perſons? So they muſt mean, if they ſpeak conſiſtently with their own Theology. But ſo they do not mean, for they ſpeak ſo conſtantly and ſo emphatically in the Singular Number, as plainly ſheweth that they mean by God one ſingular Perſon; and in teaching us to call upon God they always teach us to cry Abba Father, which doth not mean a Trinity. Our Practical Divinity therefore is on this account laudable, it agreeth not with the Scholaſtic, but rightly teacheth Piety towards him who is the one ſole Perſon of the Almighty God, God definitively and abſolutely and our God. Who maketh but a very ſlender appearance in the uſual Scholaſtic Trinity, but appeareth like himſelf as the only true God in our Chriſtian Trinity. Which therefore is a Cure for the Evils of the Scholaſtic Trinity, and is not liable to the Anti-Trinitarians Charge of an Inconſiſtence with Piety, which is a Charge to which their own way is moſt liable, for there are greater Evils in it than in the Scholaſtic Trinity, and their Remedy is worſe than the Diſeaſe.

IX. For a marvellous irreligious Extravagance is viſible in their Hypotheſis, their Interpretations of Scripture, and in the Anſwers which they make to good Arguments. (1.) Their Hypotheſis is an hideous Minoration and Diſparagement of the Perſon of our Saviour, an hominizing, creaturizing and undeifying him, whom yet they call The Son of God, and they cannot deny that he is of Creature-tranſcendent Generation and Birth-Nobilitation; therefore according to his Idea he is the Creature-tranſcendent Son of God. Such he is in his primary and ſuch he is in his officiary Capacity, for themſelves call him The great Spiritual King, the Meſſias or Chriſt. He is therefore according to his Idea The great Spiritual King the Son of the great Spiritual King the Father, which is to be the imperial Son of God, who is neceſſarily A divine imperial Perſon, of the imperial Party in Religion, and one of the imperial Eſtate in the Kingdom of God, which is the Godhead. Is he the Creature-tranſcendent King and Potentate, to whom all the Branches of the Meſſias-ſhip, (even the Soul-Sovereignty) do belong, and muſt he not be thought the Creature-tranſcendent Son of God both in his primary and his officiary Capacity? Being made (ſaith the Apoſtle) ſo much better than the Angels, as he hath by Inheritance obtained a more excellent Name than they. Upon which words an intelligent Unitarian Writer thus gloſſeth. (m) The Greek Word which we tranſlate obtained by Inheritance, ſignifieth no more than barely obtained; the Words by Inheritance are uſeleſs and dangerous and falſe two; for the Name Chriſt hath obtained, came to him by free Donation, not by Inheritance. And therefore it is that the moſt famous Criticks render κεκληρονόμηκεν by obtinuit, ſortitus eſt, he gained or obtained. But this is not fair dealing; for the famous Criticks upon the place with great Conſent render the Greek Word Hæreditavit, jure hæreditario conſecutus eſt, jure naturalis & unigeniti Filii Dei. And this they have done with great Reaſon, not only becauſe the Greek Word properly ſo ſignifieth, but becauſe meer Donation (an Act of meer Beneficence) is a very different thing from the Donation of a Father as ſuch, who hath reſpect to natural Relation, Right and Due in giving his Patrimony to his primogenit Son, who is properly his Heir. But all the Children of God are ſtiled his Heirs, and have Right to inherit Titulo Filiationis in Conjunction with Chriſt the principal Heir, which ſpeaketh him The imperial Son, the Lord of the Family, (not a Servant in it) the Lord of all, as the eldeſt Son and Heir of a Family is Dominus rerum Paternarum & Herus minor. It is a great thing therefore, and importeth Deity or Creature-tranſcendence, to be the Son of God in ſuch ſenſe as our Saviour was, or to be the Perſon of the Meſſiah. Our Saviour counted it a divine Sentiment in Nathanael and Peter to acknowledge his divine Sonſhip. Both himſelf and the blind Man thought his being the Son of God was ſome great thing; for our Saviour ask'd him, Doſt thou believe on the Son of God? And being told by our Saviour that he was a Perſon of that Character, thereupon the Man anſwered, Lord, I believe, and he worſhipp'd him*. The Jews and their High-Prieſt thought it Blaſphemy in our Saviour to call himſelf The Son of God, and their Sanhedrin put him to Death, (n) as guilty of an affected Divinity or Deity of Perſon, rent their Cloaths, and cry'd out of the Blaſphemy, becauſe he made himſelf The Son of God, Joh. 19. 7. But ſay our Unitarians, He never ſaid of himſelf any higher thing than this, which is true of every good Man, I am the Son of God. Thus they degrade him and bring him down to the common Level, (which is a ſecond Humiliation of the Son of God) they raiſe him to the pitch of an exalted Man and a dignify'd Creature, but in that beſt Eſtate make him as mean and abject as thoſe Terms can be underſtood to ſignify. For (as themſelves ſay) they aſcribe to him none of the Attributes of the divine Nature, Omnipreſence, Omniſcience, Omnipotence. They only ſay theſe two things, that he is the Interceſſor between God and Men, which Interceſſion is only in general for all the Churches and for all Mankind, not for particular Perſons from a particular knowledge of their Wants, Deſires or Prayers, which are known to God only, or if to others only by

Heb. 1. 4.

Rom. 8. 17. Matth. 21. 38. Heb. 1. 2. Col. 1. 15.

Joh. 9. 35. Joh. 10. 36. Matth. 26. 63.

(m) Def. of the Hiſt. of the Unitar. c. 7.

(n) Petav. T. 4. l. 7. c. 1. S. 7.

by God's Revelation to them, which otherwiſe cannot be known to a Man in Heaven. He is alſo made Head of the Church, which he protecteth and directeth, as it pleaſeth God to order from time to time by the Miniſtry of the holy Angels. Thus our reigning Saviour-King is brought down much-what to the ſame level with one of the reigning Popiſh Saints and Interceſſors, every one of which could he ſend the holy Angels would be (as to us at leaſt) as good a Man in Heaven as our Bl. Saviour. They call him The great Spiritual King, but they make him a Mock-King, a Cypher-King, that is good for little or nothing. In his heavenly Condition is he the Meſſiah the Saviour-King to the World, that cannot authoritatively diſpenſe the ſaving Goods and Bleſſings, (the Remiſſion of Sins, the Holy Spirit and Eternal Life) that cannot ſave us from our Criminal and Penal Evils, or from our deadly ghoſtly Enemies, or give us Grace and Peace, or aſſiſt us in Temptations, or feed his Flock like a Shepherd, or receive our departing Souls, or deliver us from our great Wants and Woes? Is he qualify'd to be ſuch a Saviour-King, or to be King of the Univerſal Church, or to have the Soul-Sovereignty, or to be Judge of the Quick and Dead, that cannot know his Subjects, nor our Concerns and Affairs particularly, nor otherwiſe than as a Prophet may know them (by particular Revelation) nor can otherwiſe ſearch the Heart and Reins, (which is not to be called a ſearching them, but an having them revealed to him) nor can be an Inſpector of our inward and outward Converſation, nor can know our Sins and Duties, Virtues and Vices, Wants and Diſtreſſes, nor what is done for his Service, nor can take particular effectual Care for our Safety and Welfare?

They clear themſelves of Idolatry in doing divine Worſhip to Chriſt, for our Unitarians allow him no ſuch Worſhip. But by this means they deſtroy the Religion of Chriſtianity, (o) which conſiſteth in ſerving the Lord Chriſt, in doing the Duties of Subjects to him as to our divine imperial Lord, and in living a Life of doing him Service. But although they are willing at the coſt of loſing their Religion to clear themſelves of Idolatry, yet their Hypotheſis unavoidably intangleth them in it. For the better ſort of Unitarians (Socinus and his Followers ſtrictly ſo called) diſpute vehemently, that the divine Worſhip ought to be given to the Lord Chriſt (a Creature) becauſe God hath commanded it. But this is giving to a Creature that which no Creature can be worthy of, and which is incongruous to any Creature; it is that which God cannot command, which no Command can juſtifie; in the nature of the thing it is downright Idolatry, a giving God's Glory to a Not-God. Our Unitarians therefore refuſe to give unto Chriſt the divine Worſhip, and allow him only an inferior Honour and Worſhip agreeable to his Dignity. But this inferior Honour and Service, whether it be inferior in kind or only in degree, whether it be the Abſolute or the Relative, yet if it is the due Worſhip of Chriſt it is the Chriſtians Religion and God-Service, and conſequently is the Religious Worſhip, (the Worſhip proper to God) which if communicated to any Creature is of the ſame Nature with the Pagans and the Papiſts Creature-Worſhip, and is Idolatry for the ſame Reaſons. To worſhip a Being of the other World is neceſſarily deifying to it, (for it is an aſcribing to it the divine Perfections) whence that Worſhip is neceſſarily the Religious Worſhip. And ſuch muſt be the Worſhip that is given unto Chriſt, (who is not worſhipp'd unleſs he is worſhipp'd as Chriſt) no other inferior Worſhip is competible to him, what is not Creature-tranſcendent Honour and Worſhip is not worſhipping and honouring him, but diſhonouring and diſparaging him, as our Unitarians diſparage him, that allow him no other Acts of Worſhip but ſuch as may be pay'd to a Civil Power, to a Perſon in high Dignity and Office, or to Prophets and Holy Men and glorified Saints. And is this a making him The great Spiritual King, King of Kings and Lord of Lords? But at the ſame rate their Hypotheſis (which is Pelagian as well as Unitarian) diſparageth Chriſt's whole Undertaking for our Salvation, the great Love of God in ſending and not ſparing his own Son, his marvellous Love to us in dying for us, his ſtupendious Humiliation, his dreadful Paſſion, and his expiatory Sacrifice on the Croſs. All which great things are ſo dwindled and minorated in Unitarianiſm, that no Man needeth any other Preſervative againſt it than to have a faithful Eſteem and Love for his Saviour, which is ſo neceſſary in every pretending Chriſtian, that without it he is ſubjected to an Anathema Maranatha, 1 Cor. 16. 22. Nor are theſe great things only diſparag'd in Unitarianiſm, but of ſeveral of them it muſt be ſaid, that according to that Hypotheſis (which doth not acknowledge any thing like an Incarnation) there could be no ſuch things. For what good Senſe can be made of God's giving and ſending his only begotten Son into the World according to Unitarianiſm? Why ſhould he be called his only begotten Son, ſeeing God might have begotten many as good Sons as Unitarianiſm ſuppoſeth our Saviour to have been? What can thoſe Words ſignify according to this Hypotheſis, Chriſt Jeſus came into the World to ſave Sinners? Or thoſe other Words of the ſame Apoſtle, though he was rich, yet for your ſakes he became poor? being in the form of God he took upon him the form of a Servant? If he was not in a magnificent and ſublime Condition antecedently to his Humiliation he never was rich, never was in the form of God. And how could he take upon him the form of a Servant if this was the beſt Eſtate that ever he was in? The Senſe is, ſaith an Unitarian Interpreter, (p) Tho' Chriſt was rich and glorious by reaſon of the Authority and Power conferred on him, yet he was willing to lead a poor Life, that by his Poverty we might obtain eternal Riches and Glory. But this Expoſition of the Apoſtle's Senſe is not tolerable Senſe, unleſs Chriſt was in a State of Authority and Power, and condeſcended to part with it, and to live a poor Life. But the Authority and Power which this Expoſitor ſpeaketh of, (our Saviour's officiary Dignity of the Meſſias-ſhip) was connex'd with his poor Life and commenc'd with it; and could ſuch Authority and Power make him more rich and glorious than he was in his Poverty and Meanneſs? Of our Saviour's Agony in the Garden this mean and trivial Account is given by an Unitarian. He conflicted then with great Temptations, the Devil was very buſy to fill his Mind with horrid Idea's and Repreſentations. Which is as wiſe a Notion as this of Chriſt's Sacrifice, that it was an Oblation and Application, as all former Sacrifices under the Law were, (not to the Juſtice of God, but) to the Mercy of God by way of humble Suit and Deprecation. Unita-

(o) Rom. 14. 7, 8. Col. 3. 24. Phil. 1. 21. 2 Cor. 5. 15. Matth. 10. 37. Apoc. 2. 3.

(p) Def. of the H. ſt. of the Unit. p. 51.

rianiſm is not the great Myſtery of Godlineſs, it bereaveth us of a wonderful Saviour and of his Love-miracles, and Chriſtianity of its great tranſcendent things; it deſpoileth his Paſſion of the mighty Efficacy that is in it for the Cure of Sin, for wounding and warming and carrying captive the Soul; it is no School of deep Humility (from the Example of a deeply humbled Saviour) no mighty vaſt Obligation to Gratitude, no great Incentive of raiſed divine Affections; but the whole of it is a low and dead Flat, and a dry Morſel, not ſavoury Meat.

(2.) Their vile ignoble Hypotheſis putteth them upon a levelling way of interpreting Scripture, that is a manifeſt Diſtortion of the Sacred Text, (ſometimes ſelf-inconſiſtent) and an abſurd, jejune and empty account of things. For ſuch is the Account which our Unitarian Interpreters give of the Reaſon of Chriſt's Sufferings. The Lord Chriſt (ſay they) did not freely offer himſelf for us, to undergo Puniſhment due to us: Neither could he do it, nor could God accept of it or allow it. We content our ſelves to teach, that our Bl. Saviour being to confirm his Goſpel by his Death, and to be made perfect by Sufferings, did alſo offer himſelf as a Sacrifice, and as a ſort of Ranſom and Price for us, to the Mercy and Benignity of God. A like enormouſly defective and falſe Account they give of the Form of Baptiſm. To be baptized in the Name of a Perſon or Perſons is a Rite by which one delivereth himſelf to the Inſtitution, Inſtruction and Obedience of ſuch Perſon or Perſons. But it is in vain pretended that a Perſon or thing is God becauſe we are baptized unto it or in the Name of it. Becauſe as Chriſtians are now baptized unto the Father, Son and Holy Ghoſt, ſo the Jews were baptized unto Moſes, and John's Diſciples unto John. But the Chriſtians Baptiſm ought to be diſtinguiſh'd from all other Baptiſms, becauſe it is the Baptiſm of the Kingdom, (the Door or Entrance into the Kingdom of Heaven) whereby they become (q) ἰσοπολῖται τοῖς ἀγγέλοις, Conſorts in Citizenſhip with the holy Angels. Themſelves and the holy Angels are the Creature or Subject-Party in the Kingdom of God, but it would be madneſs to ſuppoſe that the imperial Son and the Holy Spirit are of the Creature-Party; therefore the Chriſtians Baptiſm (which is a federal Rite) is a confederating Allegiance with the three divine Perſons of their divine Sovereignty, which is the Godhead. The Name of one of theſe divine Perſons is The Word of Life (in the Perſonal Acceptation;) but according to our late Unitarian Interpreters The Word of Life which was with the Father ſignifieth (imperſonally) The Goſpel that was in the Mind and Decree of the Father. So The Word that was with God, (the only begotten Son that was in the Boſom of the Father) according to theſe Interpreters ſignifieth two divine Attributes, The Wiſdom and Power of God. So in their Interpretation of the Word's being made Fleſh, they make Fleſh to ſignify, not the Subſtance ſo called, but barely Meanneſs and Infirmity. The Scripture ſaith; For as much as the Children are partakers of Fleſh and Blood, he alſo took part of the ſame. Their Interpretation is, The Soul of Chriſt took part in Fleſh and Blood, (as if the Soul had free Election before its Union with the Body) that is, was incarnate, (as every other Man's Soul is.) And this is all that they ſuppoſe is meant by his coming in the Fleſh, he was clothed with a Body of real Fleſh. The Text is, When he cometh into the World he ſaith; A Body haſt thou prepared me. Their Interpretation is, God prepared a Body for the Soul of Chriſt. When the Apoſtles ſaid to him, Lord increaſe our Faith, they meant only (according to theſe Interpreters) by thy Prayers to God. So when he commanded his Diſciples that Repentance and Remiſſion of Sins ſhould be preached in his Name, they ſay the Senſe is, He commanded them to require Men to repent, and on their ſo doing to aſſure them in his Name, (as might be done in any honeſt Man's Name) that God would forgive them. If he is definitively Chriſt the great ſpiritual King, thoſe places of Scripture that ſpeak of him muſt be meant of him as ſuch, and he muſt be underſtood to ſpeak of himſelf as ſuch when he ſaith, I and the Father are one, I am in the Father and the Father in me, (ſo as to be one in Reality and due Perſonality;) he muſt be ſuppos'd as ſuch to give Reſt to Souls, to remit Sins, to ſhed forth the Spirit on his Apoſtles, and to deliver them from the Gentiles; Miracles muſt be ſuppos'd to have been wrought in his Name, and we muſt be ſuppos'd to be ſanctify'd by Faith in him as ſuch. But all theſe Sayings of Scripture are Unitarianly interpreted to mean only an Oneneſs of Deſign and Love, an In-being by Obedience and Love on the part of the Lord Chriſt and Believers, and of Protection and Love on the part of God. He gave Reſt to Souls by his Doctrine, which every Goſpel-Preacher may do. Our Saviour never claimed any higher Authority or Power (for remitting Sins) than the Apoſtles were veſted with. The Lord Chriſt was no more than the Inſtrument, Miniſter and Mediator, by whom and at whoſe Inſtance God ſhed forth the Spirit. He delivered the Apoſtle from many Machinations of the Jews and Gentiles, but all this as Mediator, (by his Interceſſion) not as God. The Miracles done in his Name prove that he is a moſt powerful and effectual Mediator with God, not that he is the true and proper Author of them. Such as ſincerely believe the Lord Chriſt and the Doctrine by him delivered do ſanctify themſelves (by abſtaining from Sin) and this is the only meaning of our being ſanctify'd by Faith in Chriſt. But are not theſe Interpretations of Scripture in great degree a denying his Name and an Apoſtacy from Chriſtianity? Of the ſame nature are theſe following Interpretations. The Dead ſhall hear the Voice of the Son of God, for he would call divers from the Dead, as former Prophets had done. All Men ſhould honour the Son as they honour the Father, becauſe the Ambaſſador repreſenting the Majeſty of him that ſendeth him his Perſon is ſacroſanct, and in divers reſpects to be honoured as his principal is. But is this the Honour due to the great Spiritual King, to honour him only as an Ambaſſador? He is brought down to the common Level of Saints by this following Interpretation. We ſay the Lord Chriſt was in Heaven while he was upon Earth, in the ſame Senſe that St. Paul ſaith the like of himſelf, our Converſation is in Heaven. The Apoſtle ſaith of Chriſt, In him dwelleth the fulneſs of the Godhead bodily. But the Unitarians Interpretation attributeth little more to Chriſt than to Believers. The fulneſs of God or of the Godhead here is the fulneſs of the Knowledge of God, this dwelt in Chriſt, and with this he hath filled or compleated us Chriſtians. Their Interpretation of this Saying, He that hath ſeen me hath ſeen the Father, attributeth little more to Chriſt than to other Miniſters of God. The meaning only is, that in ſeeing and hearing Chriſt and his true Miniſters revealing to us the Nature and Will of God, we ſee and hear him. They ſo interpret this Saying of Chriſt, No man hath aſcended up to Heaven, but he that came down from Heaven, as to attribute little more to Chriſt than to Moſes. He was taken up into Heaven (before he entred upon his Office) to be inſtructed in the Mind and Will of God, as Moſes was into the Mount. Our Saviour ſaith, Before Abraham was, I am. Their Interpretation is, That Chriſt was before Abraham in the Decree and Ordination of God; which may be ſaid of any ordinary Man. To be in the form of God (ſay they) is common to our Saviour with all other Men: But he was more in the form or likeneſs of God than any other Man or Men, becauſe he had a more perfect Holineſs, and a miraculous Power and Authority. (But thus the Prophets were in the form of God, nor did Chriſt ever diveſt himſelf of this form, and the Apoſtle here oppoſeth the likeneſs of Men to the form of God, which therefore is not common to Men;) yet though he was in a greater likeneſs to God than ever any other Creature, non rapuit æqualitatem cum Deo, He was far from imitating the Pride and Ambition of Lucifer. This ſurely was no very wonderful Humility, for a Creature to come ſhort very much of the Pride of Lucifer: But it is very wonderful, that Men who call themſelves Chriſtians, ſhould at this rate debaſe and diſgrace their Saviour, and expound the Scriptures to his Diſparagement. His Blood (whereby he purchaſed a Church) they account no more than human Blood. By the Spirit of Chriſt they underſtand not that Spirit, of which he is the Owner and Donor, but the ſame Spirit of Prophecy that was in Chriſt. They call him, The Lord Chriſt, but they make him one of the Subject-party. And according to theſe Interpreters, the holy Founders of our Religion (throughout the New Teſtament) make their devotional Precationary Addreſſes for Grace and Peace and other Bleſſings, to one that cannot hear Prayers, nor grant and beſtow Bleſſings, to one that is conſtantly join'd with God as undivided from him, of the God-eminency and the God-agency, yet is as far diſtant from him as the Creature from the Creator; that is conſtantly join'd with God as the Lord, as a divine imperial Perſon of the imperial Party in Religion, yet is far from having a divine imperial Power, and from being of the Lordly Regency and Agency in our principal Concerns; that is ſaid to give Gifts unto Men, yet cannot give Grace; that is a Man in Heaven, whoſe Grace cannot reach from Heaven to Earth, nor be with us, or our Spirits (much leſs with Millions of People in all parts of the World;) that is no Fountain of Grace, (yet of his Fulneſs we receive it;) whoſe Grace muſt be ſuppos'd ſufficient for us, yet he can beſtow no Grace, (only he is better at Petitioning than we;) and whoſe Power is ſaid to reſt upon his Servants, but by this Power is not meant the Power of a Sovereign, but only the Power of a Petitioner for Grace. Such is the deadly Theology of our Unitarians, who will be counted Chriſtians, although they own not Chriſt for their divine Sovereign Lord, nor will they allow him thoſe Attributes which alone can render him capable of being ſuch an Omniſcience and Omnipreſence. But the Angels (ſay they) ſignifie to him our State and Condition, which are miniſtring Spirits ſent forth into all the Earth as his Eyes, to ſee and relate the State of things: For what other Reaſon can they be called his Eyes? But this blind Conceit argueth, that the Authors of it want their Eye-ſight. For can he need the Reports of Angels for his Information, that is capable of judging the Secrets of Men? Rom. 2. 16. And do they not know, that theſe Eyes of Providence (the Seven Arch-Angels) are attributed to the omniſcient God, as well as to the Son of God? Of whoſe Omnipreſence they give this Account. The Lord Chriſt is in the midſt of, and is with his People; not as God is, by an immediate Preſence, but by his moſt powerful Aid and Help, which he affordeth, partly by his continual and ſucceſsful Mediation for them all in general, partly by the Angels which are under his Directions.

(q) S. Baſil. Hom. 13. p. 479.

(3.) Uſually they anſwer thoſe Texts of Scripture, that are alledged againſt them on behalf of the Deity of Chriſt, by expounding them in their method of irreligious Extravagance. Heb. 1. 6. The Apoſtle declareth the Decree of God touching the ſubjecting the Angels to Chriſt, citing the Pſalmiſt's Words, Worſhip him all ye Gods. Of which Apoſtolic Citation theſe Interpreters give this Account, That the holy Writer affecteth to ſpeak in Scripture-Language, and therefore uſeth thoſe Words ſpoken upon another occaſion, and not of Chriſt. And thus they make the Apoſtle's Citation of Scripture altogether-impertinent to his purpoſe. Whereas they ought to have ſaid, That the Father's bringing his firſt Begotten into the (upper) World, and his ſetting him over the Angels, was an expounding the Decree in the Pſalmiſt (that all the Gods ſhould worſhip him) not only to concern the Worſhipping his own Perſon, but the Perſon of his imperial Son. This ſurely is the ſenſe of the divine Author, which implieth, that there is ſuch an Undividedneſs and almoſt Identity of God and his Son, as would be utterly incompetible to him, if he was but a Man and a Creature. Which almoſt Identity appeareth alſo from another place uſually alledged, to prove the Deity of Chriſt, 1. Joh. 3. 16. Hereby perceive we the love of God, becauſe he laid down his life for us. The Unitarian Interpreters object, that God cannot lay down his Life; nor do we ſuppoſe, that he can lay it down in his own Perſon: But he did lay it down in the Perſon of his Son, and this was equivalent to the laying it down in his own Perſon. But of this his amazing Love to us in laying down his Life for us, the Unitarian Hypotheſis can give no Account, but what is miſerably lame and mutilate, abſurd, jejune and empty. Such as our Unitarian Interpreters give of this honourary Name of our Saviour Alpha and Omega, The Firſt and the Laſt. Againſt which they firſt make this Exception, That it is wanting in good Greek Bibles (which ſheweth, that they have no great Good-will towards it;) and then they tell us, That both Almighty God and our Lord Chriſt are the Firſt and the Laſt, but in different ſenſes. What theſe different ſenſes are, they do not ſay, nor can they ſay (with any tolerable good ſenſe) without aſcribing Deity (the Deity of the New Teſtament) to our Saviour; Who is King of Kings and Lord of Lords as the Imperial (or Creature-tranſcendent) Son, and only as the Imperial Son: And in like manner he is Alpha and Omega, The Firſt and the Laſt, as the divine Imperial Son in Regency (the Regency of Affairs) and only as the divine Imperial Son; but this is no prejudice to his true Divinity; on the contrary, it ſpeaketh him a divine Imperial Perſon. Such he appeareth to be by his New Teſtament-Creation, of which our Unitarian Interpreters can give no Account, but what is abſurd, jejune and empty. For ſome of them learnedly diſpute, that the Apoſtle's Diſcourſe touching Chriſt's Creation of Angels and of Men, Col. 1. 16. is to be underſtood of his New Teſtament-Creation: But from their Unitarian Hypotheſis they are not able to ſay, how or in what ſenſe Angels and Men had a New Teſtament-Creation by Chriſt. For this is all that they have to ſay; Chriſt is the Lord of every Creature; for by him are all, both viſible and inviſible Creatures, even all Men and Angels, modelled or diſpoſed into a new Order, being ſubjected to him and his Commands. This would be good ſenſe, if it was Chriſt's doing: But according to theſe Unitarians this was none of Chriſt's doing, it was only the Father's doing in ſubjecting to him Men and Angels; ſo that this New Teſtament-Creation was purely his doing, and it cannot be thought Chriſt's Creation, unleſs we will call his meer taking Poſſeſſion of his given Lordſhip and Sovereignty his Creation of all things. Touching his Creatorſhip they contradict one another: For ſome of them (particularly, that vile Book, The Hiſtory of the Unitarians) will not acknowledge, That either the old or new Creation is aſcribed to our Bleſſed Saviour, and what the Apoſtle ſaith, Col. 1. 15, 16. Who is the image of the inviſible God, the Firſt-born of every Creature; for by him were all things created that are in Heaven, &c. they thus interpret. Theſe words, For by him were all things created, are not ſpoken of Chriſt, but of God. Which is a ſhutting their Eyes againſt the Light, an outfacing the Sun, a contradicting the whole tenour of the Apoſtle's Diſcourſe, which is a Panegyric (not of God, but) of the Perſon of Chriſt; a Contradiction to the Apoſtle's Buſineſs, which was to teach the Coloſſians the Goſpel, and to magnifie it, and not to teach them what they needed not to be taught, and what none of thoſe that endeavour'd to ſeduce them from Chriſt and Chriſtianity did oppoſe, That the World was a World of God's Creatures. This therefore is an Inſtance of their marvellous Diſtortions and Transformations of the Sacred Text. And ſo they diſtort v. 16. of this Firſt to the Coloſſians, not reading with our Engliſh Tranſlation, All things were created by him and for him: But all things were created for him and to him. So making δι᾽ αὐτοῦ ϗ εἰς αὐτὸν, of the ſame Signification; whereas the Apoſtle always uſeth them in a different Senſe, the one to expreſs the efficient, the other the final Cauſe. Rom. 11. 36. 1 Cor. 8. 6. Heb. 2. 10. So they diſtort Joh. 1. 3. For when they pleaſe, they will have it read, All things were made (not by him, but) for him. And in like manner they pervert Heb. 1. 2. not rendring it by whom, but for whom he made the Worlds. It is but rendring δι᾽ οὗ ſo as it never ſignifieth in the New Teſtament, and pulling down a main Pillar of their own Cauſe, which is, that Chriſt is the mediate Cauſe of all things in Chriſtianity, and is of Character, He by whom are all things, and then theſe Texts will ſay, as they would have them. So by foul dealing and mutilating the the Apoſtle's Text, Eph. 3. 9. Who created all things by Jeſus Chriſt (leaving out the words by Jeſus Chriſt, which Beza found in all Greek Copies) theſe turn the New Creator into No Creator. And by a like Artifice they transform him into a Creature. For inſtead of the Beginning of the Creation, Apoc. 3. 14. they ſubſtitute the Chief of the Creation. And ſo (to bereave our Saviour of Divinity and divine Worſhip) they have ſubſtituted O Lord Jeſus (a Phraſe never uſed in Scripture) inſtead of Lord Jeſus. Act. 7. 59. Inſtead of Thy Throne, O God, they have ſubſtituted, God is thy Throne, Heb. 1. 8. And the words of Thomas to our Saviour they dichotomize, allotting one half of them to Chriſt, and the other half to God, rendring them thus, O my Lord, and O my God. Inſtead of The Word was with God, they ſubſtitute, The Word was with the God. Inſtead of, To bind all that call upon thy Name, they ſubſtitute, To bind all that are called by thy Name, Act. 9. 14. Inſtead of, He that deſtroy'd them, which called on this Name, Act. 9. 21. they ſubſtitute, He that deſtroy'd them, who are called by this Name. So the Apoſtle's magnificent Elogy of our Saviour, Rom. 9. 5. Who is over all God bleſſed for ever, Amen, they (with ſome others) have turn'd into a Thankſgiving, thus reading the words, God who is over all, be bleſſed for ever, Amen. But ſuch a Thankſgiving for the Exaltation of Chriſt the Greek words cannot ſignifie, unleſs there is in them an Ellipſis (of a Verb) which is not to be ſuppos'd and ſupply'd without Neceſſity: But there is no Neceſſity of ſuppoſing it, no likelihood that there is ſuch an Ellipſis in them; and therefore the ſupplying it is a perverting the words from their genuine ſenſe. There is no Indication in the Text or Context of any Deſign in them, ſave only to ſet forth the Dignity of Chriſt, thereby to ſet forth the Eminence of the Jewiſh Nation, of whom Chriſt came. The Relative ὁ ὢν manifeſtly referreth to the Antecedent Chriſt, and therefore the words admit not this Unitarian Verſion, the running whereof is not agreeable to the ſtyle of Religion, and the ſenſe of it introduced into the Text is a forced unnatural thing. Nor is the Term εὐλογητὸς (bleſſed) when it is uſed in Thankſgivings in the New Teſtament, poſtpon'd to the Perſon to whom it is apyly'd (as it is in this Text) but is put before him, as Socinus obſerveth. As for the annex'd Amen, it doth not argue, that this Text is a Thankſgiving; for it is uſed in meer laudatory devotional forms of Speech. Rom. 1. 25. But the plaineſt places in the Bible may be eluded, if we will allow our ſelves to accuſe the Original of Falſification, and the beſt Tranſlations of Corruption; to make bold ſacrilegious Attempts upon ſacred Texts, and to affix to them a forced unnatural ſenſe. By theſe methods of maintaining irreligious Extravagances the holy Books of our Religion may be rendred inſignificant for the proving almoſt any divine Truth.

(4.) But on the other hand, the Scholaſtic Theology is not without extravagant Aſcriptions of Deity to our Saviour, extravagant Allegations for the proof of it, and extravagant Anſwers which it maketh to the Anti-Trinitarians Arguments againſt it. For when they argue, Thou ſhalt worſhip the Lord thy God, and him only ſhalt thou ſerve. The Scholaſtic Trinitarians anſwer, (r) That the Name God is ſometimes taken ὑποστατικῶς, perſonally, and ſometimes ὐσιωδῶς, eſſentially, and that in this Acceptation it is taken in this place. Whereas the Name God is always taken ὑποστατικῶς, perſonally, (r) Zanch. de 3. Eloh. l. 3. c. 11. S. 16.

nally, and is always a Name of perſonal Honour and Nobilitation. But in the ſame manner they expound that in the Prophet, My Glory will I not give to another (s) to be the Saying of the Father, the Son and the Holy Ghoſt. And ſo they expound the Apoſtle's words, To us there is but one God the Father, (t) Unus tantum eſt Deus, nempe οὐσία, Hanc ſolent Apoſtoli vocare Deum unum. There is but one God as to Eſſence, this the Apoſtles are wont to call one God. Whereas the Apoſtle's meaning is plainly otherwiſe, namely, that there is but one Perſon, that is the Perſon of God, not three Perſons that are ſo, as the Scholaſtic Trinitarians ſuppoſe. So they anſwer the words of our Saviour to his Father, This is life eternal, that they might know thee the only true God. The Anti-Trinitarians argue, That by the Word only (whether it belongeth to the Subject or the Predicate) every other Perſon but the Father is excluded from being the true God; and the Anſwer of the Scholaſtic Trinitarians ſaith, (u) Pater eſt habens ſolam veram Deitatem, igitur & Pater eſt ſolus verus Deus, & Filius eſt ſolus verus Deus. The Father is he that hath the only true Deity, therefore the Father is the only true God, and the Son is the only true God. Which Anſwer is a downright Contradiction to the words of our Saviour. The Anti-Trinitarians argue, that the ſupreme (or moſt High) God, neceſſarily and from Eternity ſuch, muſt continue in all reſpects ſuch to Eternity (as a ſupreme King neceſſarily and from Eternity ſuch, muſt continue in all reſpects ſuch to Eternity) his Perſon cannot become a Servant, an Embaſſador, nor have the Office of a Mediator and Interceſſor, nor be made the Apoſtle and High-Prieſt of our Profeſſion (much leſs become poor, ſick and die;) therefore the Dignity of Chriſt's Perſon could not be ſo degraded and minorated, if he was the ſupreme God. To this Difficulty the Scholaſtic Theology ſaith, (w) That the Function of Mediator belongeth to Chriſt according to his Human Nature, yet as conjoin'd with his Divine, which retaineth its Perfections. But this Anſwer leaveth the Difficulty where it was. For although we ſuppoſe our Saviour to continue the ſupreme God ſtill in reſpect of the inherent eſſential Perfections of his divine Nature, yet ſeeing he is not only a divine Nature, but a divine Perſon, and but one Perſon, and this one Perſon is the Perſon of the Supreme God, his high Dignity of Perſon is neceſſarily in ſeveral reſpects loſt by the Scholaſtic Incarnation, and by his taking upon him the Perſon and Office, the State and Relation of a Mediator. As the atoning Mediator his Buſineſs properly was, only to reconcile us to God (the Father) not to himſelf, or to the Holy Ghoſt: But if himſelf and the Holy Ghoſt had been the ſupreme God equally with the Father, it muſt have been as properly and as much his Buſineſs to reconcile us to himſelf and to the Holy Ghoſt, as unto God (the Father;) ſo the Anti-Trinitarian argueth. To which the Scholaſtic Trinitarian anſwereth, (x) That himſelf and the Holy Ghoſt did receive us into Favour through his Satisfaction. But ſuppoſing that they did ſo, yet he was not the Mediator between himſelf and us, or between us and the Holy Ghoſt; nor was his Sacrifice an Oblation to himſelf, or to the Holy Ghoſt; nor was their Reconcilement to us an immediate Effect of it, or any thing more than a Conſequent of the Father's Reconcilement. This Anſwer therefore being unſatisfactory, ſome ſay, that in this Diſpenſation (wherein the Son was the atoning Mediator) the Father ſuſtained the Perſon of the ſupreme offended Lawgiver. But if the Father only ſuſtain'd the Perſon of the ſupreme offended Lawgiver, He only ſuſtain'd the Perſon of the ſupreme God, and He alone is ſo; which is the thing that the Anti-Trinitarians diſpute for. The Supreme God, or God in the higheſt and moſt perfect ſenſe (ſay they) hath none to command him, there is none greater than He; He doth all things in his own Name, and by his own Authority, ever doth his own Will, and ſeeketh his own Glory; He declareth himſelf to be the prime Object of Faith and Worſhip, needeth not the Concurrence of any other to aſſure him, that he judgeth right; needeth not to be tried by Temptation; He giveth what and to whom he pleaſeth, needeth not the Aid of any other; is not the Miniſter or Prieſt of any other, doth not mediate or intercede with any for his People, much leſs for himſelf, he cannot die, and he deriveth his Power from none beſides himſelf. But in our Lord Chriſt all things are contrary; the Father is greater than he, ſent him, gave him Commandment (what to ſay and do) he did not publiſh a Doctrine of his own, nor aſcribe his Miracles to himſelf, but to the Father and the Holy Ghoſt dwelling in him; He came not in his own Name or Authority, nor to do his own Will, or to ſeek his own Glory, nor did he propound himſelf as the principal Object of our Faith and Worſhip; He was tried by great Temptations, aſcrib'd the Certainty of his Judgment to his Father's Preſence with him, placed his Safety in his Preſence and Help, pray'd often and fervently not only for his Diſciples, but for himſelf; is the Miniſter and Mediator of God and Men, was obedient to the Father's Commandment, by whom all things were given him (even his Divinity;) declared, that he could do nothing of himſelf; that to ſit on his Right-hand was not his to give; He died, and was raiſed from the Dead by the Father. Theſe many things (and ſuch more) are ſaid of Chriſt, which could not be ſaid, if he was God in the Senſe of the Scholaſtic Theology; for their being ſaid of him, is as much as to ſay, That he is not in ſuch ſenſe God. To which this Theology anſwereth, that they are ſaid of him either in reſpect of his human Nature, or in reſpect of his eternal Generation of the Father, or chiefly (δ) as he is the Mediator, in which Quality, Relation and Office (by voluntary Condeſcention) he is inferior to the Father, and was to execute it according to his Will and to his Glory. But this Anſwer is extremely inſufficient; becauſe human Nature, an Humiliation, the Perſon and Office of a Mediator are incompetible to one, that is the Perſon of the Almighty God; becauſe theſe many things that are ſaid of our Saviour, plainly expreſs the Relation and Duty of a Son to a Father (the Duty of Obedience and Piety, not meer voluntary Condeſcention;) becauſe they plainly denote, that God was Chriſt's Owner and his God, and that he was not his own, but God's Meſſiah; and whereas in all his Sayings and Doings he repreſenteth himſelf not as his own, but God's Meſſiah, if he had been the Second Perſon of

(s) Ibid. c. 8.

(t) Ibid. c. 11. S. 3.

(u) Idem Ibid. Petav. de Trin. l. 3. c. 1. S. 2.

(w) Petav. Ibid. c. 2. S. 6.

(x) Zanch. ſupr. c. 11. S. 1.

(δ) Idem ſupr. c. 9. S. 1. c. 10. S. 3, 8, 11, 12, 15.

the Scholaſtic Trinity, according to right and due he ought always to have been joined in Co-equality with the Father. The Anti-Trinitarians argue, that our Saviour's Dominion and Power is wholly delegated and deriv'd, is the Gift of the Father, as the Reward of his Obedience; which therefore did not belong to him eſſentially and originally, becauſe of his (ſuppoſed) divine Eſſence. To which Argument the Anſwer is, (y) That by the Gift of the Father the Son acquir'd no Authority, which did not originally belong to his divine Nature, (in Conjunction with the Father) only the Exerciſe of this original Power (the Father for a time ſuſpending his own Right) is ſolely entruſted in his Hands, and this Privilege is all that is given him by the Father. But this is an extravagant Evaſion directly contrary to the Scripture in both parts of it. For God hath not ſuſpended his own Right, ſeeing Chriſt is Advocate with the Father, and God is ſtill the Judge of all. And the Scripture is expreſs, that the Son is the Heir of all things, that his Glory and his Kingdom was given him, (and not only the ſolitary Exerciſe of a Power which he had before, but) All Power was given him, and the Name above every Name, the Father hath given him Authority, and made him Lord of all. The Apoſtle ſtileth our Saviour, The Image of the inviſible God, and becauſe the Epithet inviſible is not uſeleſs, hence the Anti-Trinitarians infer, that He is the viſible Image of the inviſible God. To which Argument this Anſwer is made, (z) That this is a fond Suppoſition; for the Son is ſaid to be the Image of the Father meerly becauſe being generated by the Father, he is all (the Deity) that the Father is. At this rate of Extravagance the Scholaſtic Theology anſwereth our Saviour's Neſcience of the Day of Judgment, his having God for his Head, his giving up the Kingdom to the Father, and ſeveral other Texts of Scripture.

(5.) Our Idea of the Trinity therefore is a Golden Mean between Two Extremes; it ſecureth the Honour and Unity of God and the true Honour and Divinity of his Son from two oppoſite extravagant Hypotheſes and the Scriptural Arguments, whereby they impugn each other; for it voideth thoſe Arguments on both ſides, and they ſignifie nothing againſt it. The true Honour and Divinity of the Son of God is well noticed by Tertullian, who would not ſay two Gods, or two Lords, but ſaith he, (a) If the Father and the Son are to be named together, I will follow the Apoſtle, and call the Father God, and Jeſus Chriſt the Lord. But if Chriſt is to be named alone, I may call him God with the ſame Apoſtle; of whom Chriſt came, who is over all God bleſſed for ever. There is a Paſſage of the ſame nature in Gr. Naz. which would be hard to be underſtood, if this of Tertullian did not expound it. (b) Define our Piety (ſaith he to Maximus the Cynic) teaching us to know one ingenit God the Father, and one generated Lord the Son; called God when named by himſelf, but Lord when named with the Father; That becauſe of his Nature, this becauſe of the Monarchy. Elias Cretenſis having made a long Commentary on this place to no purpoſe, (c) Petavius undertaketh the Expoſition of it, (with a mighty confidence that he hath found out the true meaning of it) but to as little purpoſe as the other. For he ſuppoſeth this to be the intended ſenſe of it, that Chriſt is not only σχετικῶς, relatively God, conſider'd as conjunct with the Father, as the Image of the King is called the King (as the Arrians ſuppos'd) but καθ' ἑαυτὸν, is by himſelf (or abſolutely conſider'd) God, as having the Scholaſtic divine Nature or Eſſence. And that he is the Lord, not as being of inferior Condition to the Father (as the Arrians ſuppos'd) but διὰ τὴν μοναρχίαν, as being of one and the ſame Potentacy and Principality with the Father in the ſenſe of the Scholaſtic Theology. But this is not the meaning of the Monarchy (which in this and other ancient Writers of the Church ſignifieth that Unity of Principle, which God the Father is) nor is this Expoſition agreeable to the Scope of the place, which is deſign'd to ſhew, what Language Chriſtians ſhould uſe, when they ſpeak of the Father and the Son; as appeareth from theſe Words, ὅταν λέγηται, προσαγορευόμενος, ὅταν ὀνομάζηται. The ſenſe of Gr. Naz. therefore is the ſame with Tertullian's, and both agree, that in Imitation of the Apoſtle we ſhould not call the Son God, as naming him ſo together with the Father (although at other times we may call him God;) and there is great reaſon, that this Rule ſhould have the Force of a Law, and be carefully obſerv'd in the Chriſtian Church, that ſo both real ſinful Polytheiſm, and the Scandal and Appearance of it may be avoided. The Guides of the Church therefore are concern'd to conſider, whether they can juſtifie the uſual Language of our Liturgy and Litany, which is God the Father, God the Son, God the Holy Ghoſt. Which uſual Language ſpeaketh the Senſe and Doctrine of the uſual Scholaſtic Theology and Trinity, it repreſenteth God the Father as no more than one of the Perſons of the Godhead (as the Son and the Holy Ghoſt are) and it is not agreeable to the tenour of the Scriptures, as Tertullian and Gr. Naz. obſerve. Whoſe Rule was a Mean that eſchew'd Extremes on both hands, and was wiſe with Sobriety. Καπνοῦ καὶ κύματος ἐκτὸς ἔεργε Νῆα, It ſteer'd the Ship, keeping it at a diſtance both from the Smoke and Waves. And ſuch is our Idea of the Chriſtian Trinity, a moderate Hypotheſis between the Anti-Trinitarian and the Scholaſtic Trinitarian Hypotheſes, which muſt be denominated, An Extravagance combating with an Extravagance.

X. Our Idea of the Trinity ſheweth ſuch an Unity of Trinity as the Scholaſtic Theology cannot ſhew. For it ſheweth an eſſential Union of the three divine Perſons, and it ſheweth an Unity of Eſſence, with a due Diverſity of Eſſence, in both which reſpects the Scholaſtic Theology is extremely defective. For in the uſual Scholaſtic Trinity there is Unity of Eſſence (and conſequently an eſſential Union of the Three divine Perſons) but due Diverſity of Eſſence is wanting. In the other Hypotheſis of three Scholaſtic divine Eſſences, both Unity of Eſſence is wanting, and an Eſſential Union of the three divine Perſons, as appeareth from the Account which a learned Scholaſtic Divine of our own hath given of this Hypotheſis from the Fathers. For to explain the Unity of his Scholaſtic Triune God, theſe three things he ſheweth from the Fathers. (d) Firſt, That if they held two or more Principles, that would be the holding two or more Gods (Ditheiſm or Tritheiſm:) But therefore they held only one God, becauſe they held but one Fountain of the Divinity, which is the Father, from whom the Son and the Holy Spirit have their Origination. The Fathers expatiate in this Plea, and ſuppoſe it to ſignifie very much to free them from Polytheiſm; although it is manifeſt, that three Men are not the leſs three Men, becauſe two of them iſſue from the third. He ſheweth therefore, Secondly, That the Father, Son and Holy Ghoſt are not a Triune God, meerly becauſe the two latter have their Origination from the former (for Creatures alſo have their Origination from God:) But that the Son and the Holy Ghoſt may be one God with the Father, they muſt be ὁμογενῆ & ὁμοούσια, co-eſſential and conſubſtantial, as having the Scholaſtic divine incommutable Eſſence and Attributes. But as three Men, whereof one is the Father, the other are Sons, are three Men, although they have the ſame ſpecific human Nature, and are in ſuch ſenſe co-eſſential and conſubſtantial: So the three divine Perſons, notwithſtanding their (ſpecific) Conſubſtantiality, will yet be three Gods. Thirdly therefore he ſheweth, That the Son and Holy Ghoſt may be one God with the Father, it is requiſite, that they be propagated from him interiori productione non externâ, not by an external Production, but by an interiour, ſo as to be inſeparably in the Father, and the Father in them; which Mode of Union the Greeks call περιχώρησιν, the Latin Scholaſticks call it Circumince ſſion, which is their mutual Inexiſtence or Immeation. So Athanaſius ſaith, (e) ἐξ αὐτοῦ ἀμέριστον, καὶ ἀδιαίρετον, καὶ ἀχώριστον εἶναι τὸν λόγον ἀπὸ τοῦ πατρός The Logos which is from the Father, is indiviſible and impartible and inſeparable from him, and therefore they are one God. An ancient Confeſſion of Faith made by certain Eaſtern Biſhops ſaith, (f) Affirming, that the Son is, liveth and ſubſiſteth in like manner as the Father by himſelf, we do not therefore ſeparate him from the Father, conceiting corporeally Places and Diſtances between the Conjunction of them. For we believe them to be immediately and indiſtantly conjoin'd, and to be inſeparable from each other. The whole Father embracing the Son, and the whole Son being as appendent and a connatural Adherent to the Father, and reſting alone in the Boſom of the Father perpetually. (g) If they had ſeparate Exiſtence, as human Perſons have, the three Hypoſtaſes would be three Gods, and they that aſſert ſuch three Hypoſtaſes, deſerve the Name of Tritheites, ſuch as the Roman Dionyſius complaineth of, τρεῖς θεοὺς τρόπον τινὰ κηρύττουσιν, εἰς τρεῖς ὑποστάσεις ξένας ἀλλήλων παντάπασι κεχωρισμένας, διαιροῦντες τὴν ἁγίαν μονάδα. They preach in ſome ſort three Gods, dividing the ſacred Monad into three Hypoſtaſes alien from one another, and plainly ſeparate. For the divine Logos muſt be united to the God of all, and the Holy Spirit muſt remain and inhabit in God. And the divine Triad muſt be gathered together, and collected into one, as into a certain Head or Summity, the God of all the Almighty. (h) We ſay the Father and Son are one God, becauſe the Father is in the Son, and the Son in the Father. We ſay, thoſe three are one, becauſe two of them are ſo from one, as that they are not ſeparated from him. Againſt this Hypotheſis of our Scholaſtic Divine one of his Adverſaries hath made this Objection, Either by this mutual Inexiſtence, Immeation and Inſeparateneſs of the three Hypoſtaſes their Subſtances become continuous, (as the Parts of the ſame Angel or Soul are continuous and indiſcerpible:) Or they are only contiguous, there is only a Contact of their Subſtances, not a Continuity, whereby their Subſtances and Perſons would be identified. If there is only a Contact of their Subſtances, they are as much three Gods, as three Men embracing one another are three diſtinct Men, not one Man. The Parts of the ſame numerical Subſtance are continuous: If the Subſtances of the three Hypoſtaſes are only contiguous, this will never make them to be one God, becauſe meer Contact is only a Juxta-poſition, not a real Union. Theſe are really great Objections, and they were not unknown to this learned Scholaſtic Divine; yet he hath not vouchſafed to give any Anſwer to them, but hath paſs'd them over ſicco pede without taking any notice of them. Which I know not how to reconcile with Sincerity and fair Dealing; for all faithful Enquirers after Truth look on both ſides their Hypotheſis. And what ſignifieth it to diſpute for an Hypotheſis from the Authority of Fathers and Councils, if upon Examination it is found irreconcileable with Reaſon and Religion? What can the ancient Tradition of ſuch an Hypotheſis be, but an ancient Miſtake, that for many Ages hath led us out of the way? Let us ſuppoſe with the ancient Writers, (i) that the Father is the Fountain of the Divinity (by neceſſary Emanation) as the Sun is of emitted Light, or as a Fountain is of Water; that the Son hath the Scholaſtic divine Eſſence and Attributes as well as the Father, (being generated of his Eſſence as Light floweth from Light) and that he cannot be inferior to the Father in thoſe things that belong to him quâ Deus, (k) as we ſee in the Propagation of Animals and of Men. Let us ſuppoſe alſo, that the Son hath not a ſeparated and divided Exiſtence from the Father, as the Ray is not disjoin'd from the Sun. If we grant all theſe Scholaſtic Suppoſitions, yet it will remain a neceſſary, demonſtrative and eternal Truth, That three diſtinct Scholaſtic divine Eſſences are three diſtinct eſſential and perſonal Gods, that can never be united into one God. (l) J. Damaſcen. is ſo far from uniting them into one God, that he compareth the Trinity to three contiguous Suns. There is no Appearance of an Union by Eſſentiality in this Scholaſtic Trinity. Men do but talk of the Inſeparableneſs of three infinite Subſtances and Hypoſtaſes, and talk againſt their ſeparate Exiſtence, but cannot ſhew, that they have any Union by Eſſentiality. But in our Idea of the Trinity the Holy Ghoſt is eſſential to the Imperial Eſtate of God, (that Eſtate of Headſhip and Government) which is an Union by Eſſentiality. The divine vital Eſſence as it is vital Sanctity the Derivative, is the Eſſence of the Son, which is another Union by Eſſentiality. The three Hypoſtaſes of our Chriſtian Trinity are (in this State of the Univerſe) neceſſary in the Godhead, they belong to one imperial Eſtate of Government, and one of them is the one only true God: But the three Hypoſtaſes of the Scholaſtic Co-eternal and

---

(y) Mr. Boyſe Vindicat. of the true Deity of our Sav. p. 92, 117, 118 but vid. p. 39, 43.

(z) Petav. de Trin. l. 5. c. 6. S. 7.

(c) T. 4. l. 15. c. 15. S. 10.

(a) Apoſtolum ſequar, ut ſi pariter nominandi fuerint Pater & Filius, Deum Patrem appellem, & Jeſum Chriſtum Dominum nominem. Solum autem Chriſtum potero Deum dicere, ſicut idem Apoſtolus, Ex quibus Chriſtus qui eſt Deus ſuper omnia benedictus in ævum omne. Adv. Prax. c. 13.

(b) Ὅριζε δὲ καὶ τὴν ἡμετέραν εὐσέβειαν, διδάσκων· ἕνα μὲν εἰδέναι Θεὸν ἀγέννητον τὸν πατέρα· ἕνα δὲ γέννητον κύριον, τὸν υἱόν, Θεὸν μὲν ὅταν καθ' ἑαυτὸν λέγηται προσαγορευόμενον· κύριον δὲ, ὅταν μετὰ πατρὸς ὀνομάζηται. Τὸ μὲν διὰ τὴν φύσιν, τὸ δὲ διὰ τὴν μοναρχίαν. Orat. 23. p. 420.

(d) Dr Bull Def. Fid. Nic. S. 4. c. 4. vid. p. 130, & 154. ed. an. 1703.

(e) Ibid. p. 287.

(f) Ibid. p. 285.

(g) Ibid. p. 285. & Sect. 2. c. 11. n. 1.

(h) Unum Deum dicimus, & ambos unum Deum, quòd & Pater ſit in Filio, & Filius in Patre. Illa tria ideo unum, quia ſic ſunt ex uno illa duo, ut tamen ab eo non ſint ſeparata. Ibid. p. 289.

(i) Ibid. Sect. 2. c. 9. n. 4. & p. 282.

(k) Petav. de Trin. l. 3. c. 3. S. 3.

(l) Dr Bull ſupr. p. 288.

and Conſubſtantial Trinities cannot be ſhew'd to be neceſſary in the Godhead; nor can it be pretended, that they belong to one imperial Eſtate of Government; they are collected indeed into one Almighty God, and (as is commonly ſaid) make together unum ſummum Ens, but a very ſtrange one.

XI. Our Idea of the Trinity ſheweth, that the Church may for the better change her Hypotheſis touching the Trinity, and the Myſteries connex'd therewith; and that according to common Prudence ſhe ought ſo to do. The Church ought to obſerve certain Rules in explaining her Faith (touching the Trinity and Incarnation) to which Rules our Idea of the Trinity is agreeable, but the Scholaſtic Trinities are not agreeable. Nor can it be expected, that the Scholaſtic Theology ſhould cure her Evils, which in all times hath been the cauſe of them. This therefore, with its exotic Myſteries, ſhe ought to relinquiſh, ſubſtituting in its ſtead a better ſort of Theology, which will introduce a better kind of Trinity than thoſe which the Scholaſtic Theology furniſheth. For,

(1.) The Church ought to explain her Faith of the Trinity and the Incarnation, as is moſt agreeable to the New Teſtament, which is the proper and the only Seat of thoſe Doctrines. But who can find in the New Teſtament a Trinity, that is devoid of Chriſtianity, and hath not the Perſon of Chriſt in it? Let any Man of Senſe take a New Teſtament into his Hand, and carefully read it, and he cannot chuſe but obſerve, that throughout the tenor of the Apoſtles Writings this is the Name of God, The God and Father of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, which is his New Teſtament and Evangelical Name. Whence in all Reaſon he ought to infer, that the firſt Perſon of our New Teſtament and Evangelical Trinity is the Father, in the New Teſtament and Evangelical Senſe, that is, The Father of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt as ſuch, who is not the firſt Perſon in the Scholaſtic Trinities; for he is (m) ἅμα τῷ εἶναι πατὴρ, not exiſtent before he was a Father. Such a Father is no where to be found either in the Old or the New Teſtament. But when a Man hath found out and ſatisfied himſelf who it is that is the firſt Perſon in our Goſpel-Trinity (The Father) he may eaſily ſatisfy himſelf who is the ſecond Perſon of it, (namely The Son) for the ſame Evangelical Name of God, The God and Father of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, ſheweth who is both the Evangelical Father and Evangelical Son, who can be no other but the Perſon of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt. This is the only Evangelical Son of the Evangelical Father, and this only (this human divine Perſon) is the ſecond Perſon or The Son in our Goſpel-Trinity. And this any Man may be further aſſur'd of who conſidereth what is meant by the Son, on whoſe Name Chriſtians believe, and in whoſe Name they are baptized, and that this Name The Son (the ſecond Perſon in our Goſpel-Trinity) The Son of God, The Son of the Father, always throughout the New Teſtament ſignifieth in the Jews Notion the Perſon of the Meſſiah, and never ſignifieth an Abſtract Logos or Scholaſtic Verbum, which is the ſecond Perſon of the Scholaſtic Trinity. It is by fallacious Reaſonings that the Scholaſtic Theology hath excogitated ſuch a Son of God, which is not the Perſon of Chriſt Jeſus (the only Evangelical Son of God) for if our Saviour was not an Abſtract Son, (or Spiritus Dei, as the ancient Writers call him) that had from Eternity the Scholaſtic divine Eſſence and Attributes, and was the Maker and Providential Governor of the viſible Univerſe, it was ſuppos'd that he could be no better than a made-God, a Creature-God, a God of Yeſterday, or a God meerly by Deputation and Office; and that this Text of the Prophet would be applicable to him, Jer. 10. 11. The Gods that have not made the Heavens and the Earth, even they ſhall periſh from the Earth and from under theſe Heavens. As if the Son and the Holy Spirit did not belong to the God of Iſrael, (as comprehended in his Monothe-iſm, and belonging to the Comprehenſion thereof) who ſpake theſe Words, and who is the one only true God, that as the Maker of Heaven and Earth is oppos'd to all the idoliz'd Not-Gods. Or as if his Son or his Holy Spirit did belong to that Party of Gods to which he is oppos'd, and who are therefore falſe Gods, becauſe they are Aliens from and Oppoſites to him that is the only true God, the Oppoſite to the new Gods, (Deut. 32. 17.) to which Party of Gods neither his Holy Spirit nor his Imperial Son can be ſuppos'd to belong. His being the only true God excludeth any other from being the Perſon of the Eternal Almighty God. It excludeth therefore any other from being God, as being the Perſon that is The Maker of Heaven and Earth. And it excludeth any one from exiſting in and of his Godhead in the Perſon of a God, for ſuch an one muſt be another God. But his being the only true God includeth, implieth and inferreth, that his imperial Son exiſting as ſuch in and of his Godhead is as ſuch ſo far and in ſuch ſenſe God as being a Perſon of the Godhead. Whom we do affirm, (n) non eſſe creatum, ſed genitum, not to have been created, but begotten.

(2.) The Church ought to explain her Faith of the Trinity and the Incarnation as is moſt agreeable to the Reaſon and Underſtanding, the Wiſdom and divine Affections of the Holy People, that are of a ſound Mind, to whom it is given to underſtand the Myſteries of the Kingdom of God, and of whom Acoſta ſaith, I have ſeen ſome People, that ſcarce underſtood Latine, yet knew ſo much of the Scriptures, that I ſtood amazed at them: all the great Profeſſors of Theology with all their continual Study could ſcarce teach any thing the like. There is a Sanctity of Mind which maketh Men of quick Underſtanding in the Matters of the Saint of God-kind of Learning, and which is requiſite for the Underſtanding them: But doth Sanctity of Mind contribute any thing to the Underſtanding the Scholaſtic Trinity and Incarnation? Doth divine Illumination ſignifie any thing? Not a jot; for it is they only that are learned in uncouth Crotchets and crooked Spinoſities (ſuch as ſubſtantial Modes, ſubſiſting Relations, Suppoſitality, Subſiſtentiæ, Perſeity, Notionalia, Perichoreſis, Dictio interna, Spiratio) that are the Maſters in theſe Scholaſtic Arcana; for in theſe they conſiſt. And are theſe abſurd and unholy Futilities the great Myſtery of Godlineſs, or the Myſteries of the Kingdom of God? Are theſe the matters of the Saint of God-kind of Learning and Wiſdom, or are they ſavoury Meat, ſuch as they love, who ſavour the things that are of God? The Doctrine of the Chriſtian Trinity, the Divinity and Incarnation of the Meſſiah rightly repreſented are the Depths of the Chriſtian Wiſdom and divine Philoſophy: But ſince the Scholaſtic Theology was introduc'd into the Church, each of them hath been turn'd into ſuch a Syſtem of unholy exotic Trifles, that a regenerate Chriſtian cannot but diſguſt as not agreeable either to his Reaſon or his Religion. For what holy Man is not diſguſted to find his divine Saviour turn'd into a Stoical Logos by J. Martyr? Into a Logical Logos by Athenagoras? Into a ſubſiſting Sound by Theophilus, Tertullian and Lactantius? Nor are the Scholaſtic Trinity and Incarnation leſs diſagreeable to the intellectual Nature of Mankind in general, than they are to the divine Nature of a Chriſtian. (o) All the Diſpute that the Schools can have (ſaith a Scholaſtic Divine) of the holy Trinity and Incarnation of our Lord Chriſt, cannot advance us in the Underſtanding of thoſe Myſteries; but only teach us, by what Terms we may expreſs our ſelves in them according to the Faith of the Church. (p) All diſpute about Eſſence and Perſons and Natures, and all the Terms whereby, either the Scriptures expreſs themſelves in this Point (the Trinity) or the Church excludeth the Importunities of Hereſies from the true Senſe of the Chriſtian Faith, improveth no Man's Underſtanding an Inch in this Myſtery. The Service it doth, is to teach Men the Language of the Church, by diſtinguiſhing that Senſe of ſeveral Sayings, which is, and that which is not conſiſtent with the Faith. If this is the true State of Things, if no Terms Scriptural or Eccleſiaſtical do at all improve our Underſtanding in this Myſtery of the Church's Faith, it is certain, that her Myſtery of Faith is of a Character repugnant to the Myſtery of the Chriſtian Faith, which is a Knowledge and Wiſdom (our Science of Sanctity) the Knowledge of God and of the Son of God. If the Schools cannot underſtand or expound the Church's Myſteries of Faith, it muſt be ſuppos'd, that the Church her ſelf doth not underſtand them; whence it is marvellous, that ſhe ſhould make the moſt nice and ſubtil Determinations about them, expecting to be believ'd in as infallible by an implicit Faith. If her Scholaſtic Theology ſerveth only to teach us the Language of the Church, it ſerveth for little better uſe than to teach us (as Parrots) to ſay by rote the Articles of our Faith, without teaching us any (tolerably) clear Underſtanding of them. So that if the Church perſiſteth in following the Track of the Scholaſtic Theology, the great Eſſentials of our Faith muſt for ever remain, like the Egyptians firſt Deity, σκότος ἄγνωστον, unknown Darkneſs. No Emendation of things can be expected from this Theology.

(m) Petav. de Trin. l. 5. c. 4.

(n) Zanch. de 3. Elch. l. 3. c. 12. S. 4.

(3.) The Church ought to explain her Faith of the Trinity and the Incarnation as is moſt agreeable to the nature of things. (q) Rerum naturæ aſſentior, The nature of things muſt rule our Opinions, and muſt not be perverted to ſerve an Hypotheſis, which hereby appeareth to be falſe, if the nature of things is ſo perverted by it, as they cannot or may not be perverted. As if the Nature of the Soul of Chriſt is ſo perverted that it is made to be but as an Accident and Hang-by of his Perſon. If his Human Nature is allow'd to have an Exiſtence of its own, but to want Subſiſtence. If his Generation is ſuppos'd to be but a Notion or mental Conception, or (as ſome ſay) a neceſſary Emanation. So the Nature of Sonſhip is perverted, for neither a mental Conception nor a neceſſary Emanation can be a Son. So the Nature of a ſingular conſtitutive Eſſence is perverted when it is made to be a common Eſſence, as a ſpecific Nature is. The Nature of Relation is perverted, for it can be nothing more than a relative Notion, (Ens rationis ratiocinatæ;) but the divine Perſons are ſuppos'd to be conſtituted Perſons by their Relations, and in God Relation is ſaid to be Subſtance. (r) As the Notion of Relation in God hath ſomething peculiar, of which there is no Example in created things; ſo alſo hath the Notion of a Perſon. For ſuch Relation which is in created things, is counted by the moſt Philoſophers a certain Mode, an Accident of the Subject, whereby it is compar'd to another thing, which it confrontingly reſpecteth. But Relation in God, even as by our Reaſon and mental Conception it is diſtinguiſh'd from the Eſſence, is a Relation ſubſiſting by it ſelf, and by it the Eſſence it ſelf ſubſiſteth. In the ſame manner in created things the Word Perſon ſignifieth ſomething abſolute, in God ſomething relative; but ſuch a Relative which is peculiar to himſelf, that is, ſubſiſtent. Whence it is, that whereas Perſon in every Nature ſignifieth that which is diſtinct in it the whole Diſtinction (of Perſons) in God is taken from the Relations of Origination; a divine Perſon properly and directly ſignifieth the Relation. At this rate the Nature and Notion of Relation and Perſon is diſtorted in the Scholaſtic Trinity. And it muſt be ſaid, that a late learned Divine of our own writing in Defence of it hath (in ſome degree) diſtorted the Notion of a Perſon, the better to accommodate it to his Scholaſtic Trinity. (s) A Perſon (ſaith he) is a compleat intelligent Subſtance with a peculiar manner of Subſiſtence. (t) Here lieth the true Idea of a Perſon, which ariſeth from that manner of Subſiſtence which is in one individual, and is not communicable to another. An individual intelligent Subſtance is rather ſuppoſed to the making of a Perſon, than the proper Definition of it; for a Perſon relateth to ſomething which doth diſtinguiſh it from another intelligent Subſtance in the ſame Nature; and therefore the Foundation of it lieth in the peculiar manner of Subſiſtence, which agreeth to one and to none elſe of the kind; and this is it which is called Perſonality. This is oftentimes repeated (u) that the proper Reaſon of Perſonality is the peculiar manner of Subſiſtence, which lieth in ſuch Properties as are incommunicable to any other. But there is much of Miſtake in theſe repeated Affirmations, as will appear from a twofold Conſideration of a Perſon. For a Perſon may be conſider'd as of Kind and Quality ſuch; and ſo the intellectual Nature (added to a Suppoſitum) is his proximate ſpecific Form and Difference, that which conſtituteth, diſtinguiſheth and denominateth him; and therefore is the proper Reaſon of his Perſonality. And a Perſon may be conſider'd as A Singular or Individual, (diſtinguiſh'd from another intelligent Subſtance in the ſame Nature) and ſo this Mode of Subſiſtence (which this Author ſpeaketh of) or thoſe his individuating Properties incommunicable to any other, may be ſaid to be the Reaſon of his Perſonality, or rather of his Individuality. But if an individual Subſtance is in our Definition of a Perſon, what need is there of adding the peculiar manner of Subſiſtence?

(o) Mr. Thorndike Epil. B. 2. c. 17. p. 132.

(p) Ibid. p. 131.

(q) Sen. de vit. beat. c. 3.

(r) Ut relationis in Deo notio peculiare quiddam habet, cujus nullum creatis in rebus exemplum cernimus; ita etiam & perſonæ. Nam relatio, qualem in rerum natura cognoſcimus, modus quidam à pleriſque philoſophis conſtituitur rei ſubjectæ accidens, per quam illa comparatur ad alteram, quam ex adverſo reſpicit. At in Deo, etiam quatenus ab eſſentia, ratione & ἐπινοίᾳ, diſtinguitur, per ſe ſubſiſtens eſt relatio, per eamque eſſentia ipſa ſubſiſtit. Eodem modo perſonæ vox creatis in rebus abſolutum aliquid ſignificat, in Deo, relativum; ſed ejuſmodi, quale privatim illi convenire diximus, hoc eſt, ſubſiſtens. Proinde cùm perſona in quacunque natura id quod in ea diſtinctum eſt ſignificet: in divinis tota diſtinguendi ratio ſumatur ex relationibus originis; perſona divina propriè ac directè relationem ſignificat. Petav. de Trin. l. 4. c. 11. S. 11.

(s) Bp. Stillingfleet of the Trin. p. 261.

(t) Ibid. p. 260.

(u) Ibid. p. 72. and Pref. p. 14.

(4.) The Church ought to explain her Faith of the Trinity and Incarnation as is agreeable to the certain Principles and Maxims of Human Arts and Sciences, Truths Logical, Phyſiological, Mathematical, Moral and Political, which the Pagan Sages had in ſo high Eſteem, that they deſpis'd Wealth, Kindred and Country, and trudg'd into foreign Countries to learn the Knowledge of the Truth. They have extoll'd it to the Heavens and rais'd it to the Skies. (w) They have ſaid, that God hath Light for his Body and Truth for his Soul; that it is the beginning of all Good to the Gods, and leadeth to all Good; that it is the greateſt of the Gods, and a Citizen with the Gods; that as a Queen it ſhould rule and reign; and ſome of them built Altars to the Truth. Which high and rapturous Elogies of the Truth, (although ſavouring of Heatheniſm) ſhould excite in us an high and raiſed Eſteem of it, and ſo great a Regard for it, as not to violate, not to ſlight or trample on the Truths that are in Human Sciences, upon a Pretence that the Teachers of them were Naturaliſts, and we are Supernaturaliſts, that being back'd by Divine Revelation may venture to contradict all the Sciences in the Circle. But ſuch Pretenſions are very vain and inconſiſtent with themſelves; for Truth always agreeth with Truth, (as Ariſtotle ſaith) and that cannot be Divine Revelation which contradicteth any of the Maxims of Truth in the Human Sciences. Of which one of the moſt conſiderable, (the great Fundamental of our Reaſonings) is that Logical Maxim, Quæ ſunt eadem uni tertio, etiam inter ſe ſunt eadem. They that are the ſame with ſome third thing wherewith they are compar'd, are the ſame with one another. But this great ſelf evident Maxim is expreſly contradicted by the Scholaſtic Trinity; and therefore the Scholaſtic Divines ſay of it, (x) It doth not hold univerſally true. (y) Although in things finite and created it is repugnant that two things ſhould be really the ſame with a third, and yet really differ from one another, yet in an infinite Being this is not repugnant. The Perſons in this Scholaſtic Trinity are ſuppos'd to be really the ſame with the Eſſence, yet to differ really from one another; which is an expreſs Contradiction to this Logical Maxim, that is of the ſame Nature and Certainty with this Mathematical Maxim; Thoſe that are equal to a third thing, are equal to one another. And as it is a Contradiction to affirm that Thoſe which are equal to a third, are not equal to one another; ſo (doubtleſs) it is a multiply'd Contradiction to affirm that The Perſons, who (without Limitation) are really the ſame with the Eſſence, yet really differ from one another; that the Eſſence which is but one thing and differeth not from it ſelf, yet is really the ſame with three things really diſtinct, and conſequently really differeth from it ſelf; that this Scholaſtic divine Eſſence is ſingular and individual, yet is common and communicable, (the whole of it being in each of the three Perſons) as a ſpecific Nature. For this is one of the Scholaſtic Trinity's Contradictions to the Maxims of Human Science. The ancient Logick affirmeth, that a ſingular Nature or Subſtance is not common to more or communicable; but the Scholaſtic Trinity, (that is not to be convicted of Error by Demonſtration) will have it otherwiſe. So the ancient Logick ſuppoſeth, that if any ſingular Nature is perfect nothing more is requiſite to make it an Hypoſtaſis; that every individual Nature, (ſuch as the Nature of Man) hath its proper Subſiſtence; but with this Maxim the Scholaſtic Incarnation cannot conſiſt. According to Human Science, if our Saviour hath two Intellects and two Wills he muſt be two Perſons; but this the Scholaſtic Incarnation, (which is not like the Union of Soul and Body, wherein there is but one Intellect and Will) expreſly contradicteth.

(5.) The Church ought to prefer that Explication of the Trinity and Incarnation which is moſt free from Abſurdities, leaſt incumber'd with Difficulties and rational Objections. All poſſible Explications of theſe great Articles, (as all great Theories) are incumber'd with Difficulties and Objections, our own Hypotheſis is not exempt from them. For againſt our Idea of the Holy Spirit it will be objected, that we ſuppoſe the divine vital Eſſence (in reſpect of the vital Sanctity which it is) to be both the meerly conſtitutive and the communicative, ſo diſtinguiſhing it and making a ſort of Duplicity in it, that muſt be thought an Injury to a divine Attribute The Simplicity of God. Which the Schools ſuppoſe to be abſolute and omnimodous, (z) whereby all διπλόν, Duplicity or Binality, (the joyning together divers things) is excluded, ſo that the divine Intellect, Will, Attributes, Operations and the divine Perſons, muſt be all one. But it would be great Weakneſs to be determined in theſe Matters by the Deciſions of the Schools. And if we make uſe of our own Reaſon, we cannot but ſuppoſe that the Holy Spirit belongeth to and is in the imperial Eſtate of God infinitely and eſſentially, and throughout his Character he appeareth to be a communicative Agent of the Godhead. A Duplicity therefore muſt be admitted there, but ſuch as is a Perfection, not any Imperfection. The Schools themſelves, that declaim againſt all Duplicity in God, (a) yet ſuppoſe in the Deity a Triplicity, (which is more than a Duplicity) they allow us to ſay triplex Deus and triplex Deitas, a triple Deity and a threefold God. Another Objection will probably be made againſt our Idea of the conſtitutive Nature and Eſſence of the divine imperial Perſon of the Son of God, who is the Human Nature in Conjunction with the divine vital Eſſence, as it is vital Sanctity the Derivative. For againſt this Idea, (which is neceſſarily the Idea of the imperial Saint of God-kind of Son) ſome will ſay that it ſuppoſeth an Union between finite and infinite. Which cannot be ſuppoſed without admitting one of theſe two things; either that finite and infinite are commenſurate and equal, or that the finite is united only to ſome part of the infinite, and is disjoyned from the reſt of it. But to this Argument it may be anſwer'd, that a finite Subſtance may be united to the whole of an infinite Subſtance, as it is a vital Principle, (an infinitely vital Principle) without being commenſurate thereto. And this Union is as eaſily conceivable as the Union of Soul and Body, or of any finite Subſtances. Theſe Objections to which our Idea of the Trinity is liable, as they are not many in number, ſo they are not great in weight, they are but Trifles in compariſon of thoſe vaſtly great and numerous Objections both from Scripture and Reaſon which incumber the Scholaſtic Trinity. Of the latter ſort of which Objections a Divine of our own ſaith, (b) What the Light of Reaſon argueth againſt

(w) Gothofr. exerc. in 1 Tim. 3. 15. p. 3766.

(x) Negetur univerſè id eſſe verum. Petav. de Trin. l. 3. c. 9. S. 14.

(y) Quamvis repugnet in rebus finitis & creatis aliqua duo eſſe idem cum tertio ſecundum rem, & inter ſe realiter differre; id tamen non repugnat in ente infinito. Vaſqu. in Th. 1. Par. T. 2. Diſp. 122. c. 2.

(z) Petav. T. 1. l. 2. c. 2. S. 4.

(a) Idem de Trin. l. 8. c. 9. S. 7.

(b) Mr. Thorndike Epil. B. 2. c. 17. p. 129.

againſt the Myſtery of the Trinity I acknowledge to ſeem ſo ſtrong, that it ſeemeth to forbid all uſe of Reaſon in them that admit the Chriſtian Faith. Againſt the Scholaſtic Incarnation the uſual Objections are, that it is incongruous, needleſs and impoſſible, and that the Father and the Holy Ghoſt muſt be incarnate if the Son is ſo. But nothing of this nature can be objected againſt our Explication of the Incarnation.

(6.) The Church ought to prefer that Explication of the Trinity and Incarnation which moſt ſubſerveth theſe Intereſts of Chriſtianity, to promote Piety and the Peace of the Church, tendeth moſt effectually not to cauſe but to cure Infidelity, and to propagate the Chriſtian Religion. And ſuch is our Explication of theſe great Articles, which riddeth our Hands of the Scholaſtic Theology, (that Peſt of the Chriſtian Theology) wholly conſiſteth of Piety, in great part of ſavoury ſaving Piety, (for ſuch is vital Sanctity) this it tendeth to promote together with the due Honour of God (the Father) which is heinouſly violated by the Scholaſtic Trinity. It hath a mighty Tendency to the Peace of the Church, for which the Unitarians ſometimes expreſs a great Concern. And if they are really ſo well minded to the Peace of the Church as they profeſs, they cannot be unwilling to ſacrifice thereto their erroneous Unitarianiſm, wherein they cannot find any good Settlement, any clear Satisfaction, but they may eaſily find themſelves bewildred by it in Mazes and Labyrinths of Difficulty and Uncertainty. For like ſome of the ancient Pneumatomachi (that were at ſuch Uncertainty about the Holy Ghoſt, that they neither dar'd to call him God nor Creature) ſo the Unitarians are bewildred; they know not what to make of the Holy Ghoſt; ſome of them ſuppoſe him a created Angel, others the Power and Energy of God. They are bewildred and crumbled into Parties about the Invocation and Adoration of Chriſt, ſeveral of them oppoſing it, and others of them vehemently diſputing for it, and counting them no Chriſtians that deny it. They are bewildred in their Account of Chriſt's Sufferings, as appeareth from the Alterations that they have made in their Racovian Catechiſm. For Time was when they would not acknowledge his Death an expiatory and propitiatory Sacrifice for our Sins, which they now acknowledge in Words, but they ſo ſophiſticate it and pervert it from the true Nature and Notion of ſuch a Sacrifice, as plainly ſheweth that they are not well reſolved in their Minds what to make of it. They are alſo bewildred in their Interpretation of the Proem of St. John's Goſpel, (and ſeveral other places of Scripture) for ſome of them follow the Interpretations of Socinus, others excogitate Interpretations of their own. And ſeeing there is no ſure Footing, no ſolid Satisfaction to be found in their School, this ſhould be a great Reaſon to diſpoſe them to relinquiſh their Contra-unitive Unitarianiſm, and to advance thus far towards Unity and Concord with the generality of Chriſtians as to become genuin Chriſtian Trinitarians. Upon theſe Terms Chriſtians may unite, and the Church may recover her Peace by the Hypotheſis of a Goſpel-Trinity, which can never be free from Schiſms ſo long as ſhe retaineth her Scholaſtic Trinity, for as of old, ſo it will be to the end of the World, the Seed of perpetual Feuds and Schiſms. The State of the Church will be as in ancient Times, when the main Body of Chriſtians were Scholaſtic Trinitarians, that were oppos'd by a Party of Unitarians. For ſuch were the Ebionites, Nazarens, Elceſaitæ; the Sabellians were a ſort of Unitarians; the Followers alſo of Theodotus Byzantinus, Artemon, Paulus Samoſatenus, and the Arians were ſeveral ſorts of Unitarians. The Re-union of ſuch to the Church ought to be endeavour'd by all due Means. And there are others (whoſe Recovery ought to be endeavour'd) that in ſome degree hold Communion with the Church, but are really laps'd into groſs Infidelity. To which (ſo far as appeareth) they are ſtrongly tempted by the Hypotheſis of the Scholaſtic Trinity; for this is their uſual and ſtrongeſt Objection againſt the Faith of Chriſt. Of which a Scholaſtic Divine ſaith, (c) Were it not to be ador'd as a Myſtery it would be exploded as a Contradiction. But all that are well diſpos'd towards Divine Myſteries are not diſpos'd to adore Scholaſtic Myſteries, but rather to explode them as Contradictions. So they are exploded by Jews and Muhammedans. And it appeareth from the ſad Experience of many Ages that they have been the grand Impediment both of receiving and retaining the Chriſtian Faith, and have in great degree deſtroy'd it out of the World. If when the Turks firſt took Conſtantinople, (d) and demanded of the Chriſtians an Account of their Faith, the Patriarch of Conſtantinople had repreſented to them the Chriſtian Trinity, and not a Scholaſtic, Co-eternal, Co-eſſential and Co-equal Trinity, and ſuch a Triune God, (illuſtrated by very frivolous and improper, yet ordinary Similitudes) the Turks would have had other Thoughts of the Chriſtian Religion than they then had, or have had ſince that time. In the Chriſtian Church the Scholaſtic Trinity and Incarnation are but overly conſider'd by the moſt, and ſo conſider'd they are of no very frightful appearance, few ſee into the Bowels of them, and if they do, they know not how to remedy the Evils of them but by a worſer Evil, (that of Unitarianiſm) therefore they paſs ſomewhat currant in the Church. But they involve in them Multitudes of Propoſitions, which are ſo incredible, that I am often prone to think it is not poſſible for any one of tolerable Underſtanding explicitly to believe them. Is it poſſible to believe that three diſtinct Perſons have but (numerically) one and the ſame Intellect, Will and Power of Action? that the divine Perſons are conſtituted Perſons by their Relations, whereas they muſt be divine Perſons antecedently to thoſe Relations? that a Perſon is begotten, yet nothing but a Mode is produc'd into Exiſtence? If theſe Propoſitions, and multitudes of like nature, (involv'd in the Scholaſtic Trinity and Incarnation) were form'd into diſtinct Articles, and every Member of the Church was oblig'd to believe them diſtinctly and expreſly, as Articles of his Faith, I am perſuaded that not one of a Thouſand would give aſſent to them. What then remaineth, but that we bid adieu to profane Scholaſticiſm, and univerſally entertain a truly Chriſtian Explication of the great Articles of our Chriſtian Faith, that ſo there may be Glory to God on high, Faith, Holineſs and Peace on Earth, and the Kingdoms of this World may much more illuſtriouſly become the Kingdoms of our Lord and of his Chriſt. Amen.

FINIS.

(c) Dr. South. 3. Vol. of Ser. p. 316.

(d) Mart. Cruc. Turco-Græc. l. 2. p. 111.

The INDEX.

A.

ABEL, a Type of Chriſt and a Prophet, Page 731. was perſecuted and a Martyr, p. 735. How his Sacrifice appear'd to be accepted, p. 734.

Abraham, a Grand Senior, p. 742, 767. Of Chriſt's Exiſtence before him, p. 767. Of his ſuppos'd ſecular Learning, p. 12. Of his Inſtitution of Religion, p. 741, 742. Of his Faith, p. 722, 724.

Of Acmonides, p. 104. Of the Acroamatical Theology and its Deities, p. 132. How God is ſaid to be a pure Act, p. 365.

Of Adam and his Paradiſe, p. 455, 456. Of his Creation and the Proviſion that was made for him, p. 459, 461. Of the extravagant Elogies of him, p. 464. How accommodate the Paradiſaical Oeconomy was to our Firſt Parents, p. 469. Of the Adamical Inſtitution, p. 737.

Of Adad, p. 109. Of Adrammelech and Anammelech, p. 107.

Of Affirmative Attributes of God, p. 362.

Of the Afflictions of the Saints of the Old Teſtament, p. 735.

Of Aglibelus and Malachbelus, p. 109, 137.

Of the Air-Jupiter, p. 104.

Of Alcalam, p. 109.

Of the Jews Allegorical Interpretations of Scripture, p. 10. Homer turn'd into Allegory, p. 492. The Chriſtians are blam'd for Allegorizing, p. 469.

Of the Name Alpha and Omega, p. 356, 877.

Of the Name Altar and of bowing to it, p. 429, 430, 433.

Of Ananias, p. 568, 576.

Of Anaxagoras, p. 2, 147.

Our Angels anſwer not to the Pagan Gods, p. 6, 113. The ancient Pagans knew not the Name, nor Pythagoras and Plato, p. 6, 10. The Holy Angels are ill confounded with the Pagan Gods and Demons, p. 38. Of the Polity and Government of the Univerſe by perfect tutelar Angels according to the Pagans, p. 35. According to the Jews, p. 36. According to many Chriſtian Theologers, p. 37, 38. The Holy Angels are providential Superintendents and Meſſengers, but have not a Pagan-like mundane Magiſtracy, p. 40, 93. A Diſcourſe againſt that Magiſtracy and the Guardian Angel, p. 41, 42. Of God's appearance by Angels in ancient times, p. 490, 491. Of the Angel of his Name and Preſence, p. 42, 490, 492. Of the time when the Angels were created, p. 437, 493. Their Creation not mention'd by Moſes, p. 459, 494. A deſcription of the divine Angelical Family, p. 442. They may be ſaid, to be regenerated, p. 390. They belong to the Church, p. 447, 448. Of Prayers made to Angels and of the Angelitæ, p. 47, 48, 53, 54, 131. The Patriarchs are ſuppos'd, to have been taught Learning by Angels, p. 12.

Of noxious Animals and their Creation, p. 503.

Of our Saviour's being the Anointed, p. 889. All his Offices compris'd therein, p. 891.

Of Antiquity and Newneſs, p. 765, 766. A diſtribution of things into Old and New, p. 767, 768, 1027.

Of Apathy, p. 168, 260. Of the Name Apollyon, p. 316.

What ſort of Witneſſes the Apoſtles were, p. 986, 1006.

Of the Apthardocites, p. 937.

Of the Apoſtate Angels their Lapſe and their Region, p. 32, 215, 216, 494, 503.

Apoſtacy of the ſame Nature with the Sin againſt the Holy Ghoſt, p. 567.

Of our Saviour's Apotheoſis, p. 206, 207.

The Arians and other Anti-Trinitarians Objections from Scripture, p. 882, 883, &c.

Arimanius ſuppoſed to be the Holy Ghoſt, p. 133, 134.

Of Ariſtotle's Converſe with the Jews, p. 12, 14. Of his Moral Virtue, p. 266, 816. Of his Magnanimity, p. 261. Of his Acroaticks and Exotericks, p. 595, 596. His Character, p. 129.

Of our Saviour's diſputed Aſcent into Heaven, p. 1015, &c.

Of the Philoſophic-pagan Aſceticks, p. 597.

Of Aſmodeus, p. 31. Of the Aſſideans, p. 11.

Of Aſtarte and Atergatis, p. 109, 110.

Of the Gentiles Aſtrolatry ſuppos'd to be permitted to them, p. 105, 106.

Of Aſtrology complicated with Magick, p. 80. Much of the Pagans Learning and Religion was Aſtrology, p. 93, 94, 96. Much of Aſtrological Myſtery in Paganiſm, p. 97. The Jews are great Aſtrologians, p. 95, 97, 105, 106. Of the Egyptians Genethliacal Aſtrology, p. 35.

Atheiſm confuted by the Pagan Theiſts and by the Light of Nature, p. 161, 163, 180, 189, 437, 495, 656. Juſt Atheiſts, p. 270.

Of Athe-iſts and Anti The-iſts, p. 213, 219.

Atheling the Name of our Engliſh Princes, p. 837.

Athens the Head of Pagan Piety, p. 225.

Of Atheous Ignorance, p. 243. Of Atheizing the Godhead, p. 392.

Of Azazel the Scape-goat, p. 23, 24.

B.

Of Baal, Belus, Beelſamen, p. 106, 108, 109.

Of the various Notions of the Oriental Baal, p. 108, 109.

Of the Barbarians and Greeks, p. 266, 600.

Of Bar Jeſus, p. 320.

Babylon called a Perſian City, p. 82. Of the Babylonians Antiquity, p. 95.

Baptiſm (external) not of avail without Sanctification, p. 774.

Of the Form of Baptiſm as it concerneth our Saviour's Deity, p. 877.

Beaſts of the Field a Name of Unclean Spirits, p. 486.

Of Bætulia, p. 20, 109. Of Bethel, p. 119.

Our Beatitude is the ſame thing with the Kingdom of God, p. 449.

Of the Beauty wherein Virtue conſiſteth, p. 645, 646, 651.

The Name Beelzebub interpreted, p. 31.

Of the Beginning in the Proem of S. John's Goſpel, p. 994, &c.

Of Believers (God's Believers) the Nature and Nobleneſs of their Faith, p. 721, 722, &c. How far the ancient Saints of the Old Teſtament-times were Chriſtian Believers, p. 732, 733.

What kind of Benefits they are, that we have by Chriſt, p. 948.

Of the Birth-nobilitation of the Son of God, as he was Born Chriſt the Lord, p. 843, 850, 855. He was Deus natus ac genitus, and the meaning of that Name, p. 861. His Scholaſtic Birth-humiliation is a miſtake, p. 851, 921.

Of the Birth-nobilitation of the regenerate and divine Family, p. 850.

Of two Birds in the Purgation of a Leprous Perſon, p. 25.

Of Biſhops wanting in Humility, p. 782, 783.

The Bleſſedneſs of God how to be underſtood, p. 207.

Blood ſuppos'd to be the Food of Demons, p. 28, 30.

The eating of Blood was forbidden becauſe of the Sacredneſs of Life, p. 977.

By Blood Covenants were anciently made, p. 743.

Bravo's an accommodate Name of the Philoſophers, p. 260, 261.

Of

Of the Bread of Life and Bread from Heaven, the Names of our Saviour, p. 983, 1010.

Of Burning the Dead for Purgation, p. 90.

C.

Of Cabala, p. 13. The Cabala of a Luciform Body, p. 18. Of the Platonic Triad, p. 136, 137, 141, 143. Of the Cabaliſts Emanations, p. 47. Of their Enſoph, p. 237.

Of the Cauſality ordinative, executive, ſubordinative, p. 517.

Of the Chaos, p, 112, 497, 498, 531.

The Chaldeans Wiſdom Senior to the Egyptians, p. 82, 95. Their Wiſdom Aſtrological, p. 100. In the Chalday Oracles there is much of ancient Perſian Theology, p. 96.

Of Divine Charity, p. 415, 777, 813, 819, 821.

How ornamental Chaſtity is, p. 672.

Of Chius and Chronos, p. 106. Of expoſing Children, p. 670, 671.

Of the Name Chriſt, p. 889. He is called the Spirit of God, p. 532, 905. Confounded with the Pagan Jove, p. 150. Was typify'd in Paradiſe, p. 454, 455, 501. Whether he had come, if Man had not ſinned, Ibid. It is a great thing to like the Life of Chriſt, p. 823. His Virtue not the mundane, p. 818. He is arcane and wonderful, ſuperlative and tranſcendent, p. 807, 818, 819. Chriſt and Chriſtians the Objects of the World's hatred, p. 819, 823, 824. His Idea as he is called The Son of God, p. 836, 837. His Idea as he is called The Chriſt, p. 888. His Names are God the Word, God the Image, God the Son (Deus natus & genitus,) p. 844, 865. But becauſe he is eſſentially the Perſon of The Word, of the viſible Image of the inviſible God, of the Imperial Saint of God-kind of Son, of the mediatory King of the Holy Empire, of the Chriſt of God, this demonſtrateth, that he is eſſentially an Humane-divine Perſon according to his Generation, which was Humane-divine, p. 845, 851. He is God's and God is his God, p. 883. Of his Sonſhip to God as he is politically and in place the Divine Imperial Son, p. 895. Of his Humiliation, p. 819, 876, 915. Of his Exaltation, p. 885. Of S. Paul's Panegyrick of Chriſt, p. 956. Of the neceſſity of Chriſt's coming and of his Sacrifice, p. 705, 706. Of our Evangeliſt's Hiſtory of his Life, p. 1019. Of a Fanatick Notion that the World is Chriſt's Body, p. 158, 159.

The Chriſtian Religion muſt be conſider'd under Four Notions, as The new Settlement of Saving Grace, The new Kingdom of God, The great Myſtery of Godlineſs, and the new Creation, p. 761. It conſiſteth of things Superlative and Tranſcendent, p. 819. Is in all reſpects the Diſcipline of univeral Sanctity and Godlineſs, p. 808, 810, 813. The only efficacious Diſcipline of Godlineſs, p. 815. Of Initial Chriſtianiſm, p. 737.

Chriſtians are Chriſt's People, the Holy Covenanters, p. 769, 809, 813. They are oblig'd to great Sanctity, p. 799, 813, 814, 1035. Their Virtue is Chriſtlike, p. 811. Their State is tranſcendent, and ſuch is their Virtue and Piety, p. 820. The World called Chriſtian in great part conſiſteth of Impietiſts, p. 246, 825. Theſe are Chriſtians no Chriſtians worſe than none, p. 809. They live worſe than the worſt of Men, p. 246.

The Church is the Holy Popular Syſtem, p. 211, 212, 218, 609, 610, 611, 613, 446, 447. A City and a Family, p. 610, 611. The City of God and his Saints, p. 447. The City of the Regenerate, p. 390. The wicked are not true Members thereof, p. 219, 788, 1030. The Univerſe of Rationals, is one City according to the Pagans, p. 3, 9. Our Churches of the nature of Synagogues, p. 424.

Circumciſion is of a ſanctificative Notion and was a federal Mark of the Holy Seed, p. 742, 743.

Of our Firſt Parents Coats of Skins, p. 472, 473, 501.

Of the Firſt and Second Commandment and the Idolatry which they forbid, p. 123.

Of ſpeaking in the Computative Senſe, p. 637, 638.

Of a Combat between the upper and lower Soul, p. 688, 708. Of Concupiſcence, p. 250.

Of Conſcience what it is, p. 674. It witneſſeth the Exiſtence of God, p. 661. Noticeth the Law of Nature, p. 635, 664, 668, 674.

Of the Conſent of Nations touching the Exiſtence of God, and the Laws of Nature, p. 662, 667.

Of the word Conſubſtantial, p. 853, 868, 869, 906.

Of Contracts whence accrue Rights and Dues, p. 651, 652.

Of a Covenant, p. 762, 763, 764. The Firſt Duty in Chriſtianity is to enter into Covenant, p. 788. 769.

Of the Moſaic Covenant as oppoſite to the Covenant of Grace, p. 745, 746. It was not an expreſs Covenant touching future Rewards and Puniſhments, p. 747, 748. Of the difference between the old and new Covenant, p. 417, 769, 770.

Our primitive Country is Heaven, p. 506.

The Chriſtians Religion only is an Inſtitution to the Croſs, p. 825. Their account of it, and how they have entertain'd and endured it, p. 826, 827.

Of the definitive Notion of a Creature, p. 907. Of the Nature of the Moſaic Creation, p. 459. It was not the original Creation, p. 493. By the original Creation the original Kingdom of God was made, p. 444, 445. Creation was out of Societive deſign, p. 446. The holy imperial Goodneſs of Will was the cauſe of the Creation, p. 523. God is the final cauſe of it as Religion and Godlineſs requireth, p. 517, 525.

Chriſt is Creator, but is not the Deity of the old Creation, the Creator and providential Governour of the World: But the Creation which is attributed to him in the New Teſtament is the new Creation, p. 944, 951, 954, 1021, &c. The new Creation underſtood and conſider'd in ſeveral Notions, p. 958, 1027, 1028. How all old things are paſt away, all things are become new, p. 1028. How great a change this new Creation is, p. 1030. Renenerate Chriſtians are the new Creatures, p. 1029. The new creative Nature of Chriſt's Religion is an Evidence of the Divinity of it, p. 1032.

D.

Of Darkneſs and Light in the Theology of the ancient Magi, p. 84. In the Perſian Ditheiſm, p. 21, 22. Of the Darkneſs which Heatheniſm is, and the State of Unregeneracy, p. 243, 244, 245 395, 990. Of the Darkneſs which Wickedneſs is, p. 249, 250.

Of Chriſt as the Son of David, p. 843, 890, 891.

Mankind antecedently to the State and Life of true and ſaving Religion muſt be look'd upon as Dead, p. 277, 282. The State of Death deſcrib'd, p. 280, 281. How Death was introduc'd by Adam, p. 471, 472, 686. Of the Death threatned to him, p. 464. Every deadly thing is called Death, p. 979. They that die in their Sins muſt be put to Death, p. 977, 978. There is no tolerable living in the Region of the Second Death, p. 976, 977, 979.

Of the Decani in Aſtrology, p. 95, 97.

Deities defin'd according to the Senſe of the Pagans, p. 6, 8, 71. Whence they had the Notion of a Deity, p. 71, 104. They acknowledge a ſupreme Deity, p. 7, 146. Their ſupreme Deity was politically imperial and animatively vital to the World, p. 2, 161. The ſupreme Deity of their exoterical Theology, p. 102, 103. The ſupreme Deity was with them a term of Polytheiſm, p. 147, 225. Who was really their ſupreme Deity, p. 290, 291. Of the Stoicks ſupreme Deity, p. 149, 151. Of the Platoniſts ſupreme Deity, p. 136, 137, 220, 221, 230, &c. Their Grandiloquies concerning him, p. 236. His uncouth Worſhip, p. 148, 231, 234, 235. Therewith the Rabbins agree, p. 362. This ſupreme Deity was no Deity of Religion and Laws, p. 148. But unknown to Mankind, p. 77, 83. Every ſupreme Deity is not the true God, p. 221, 232. Of the various Acceptations of the Pagans Deities, p. 107. Of theſe various ſorts of Deities, Sempiternal, Deiformities, Mythical and Symbolical, p. 115, 116, 117, 119. The Pagano-Chriſtians Superi are one Chorus or Syſtem reſembling the Pagan, p. 63, 147. They are of different Graduality as the Pagan, p. 60, 69, 254. What the Pagans thought of our God, p. 229, 241. He was not the Deity of a Religion amongſt them, nor one of the Deities of their Theopolity, p. 221, &c. He is not therefore the Imperial Eſtate of the mundane Empire, p. 210, 217.

The Name Demon interpreted, p. 36, 63. Of the Pagan Demons from whom they had their Sacra, Religion and Virtue, p. 6, 8, 80, 81, 288, 306. They appertain to the original Conſtitution of the Univerſe (according to the Pagans) are not purely Incorporeal, are chang'd into Gods, p. 7, 8, 27, 28. They were incorporated in their Statues and there reſided, p. 120, 305, 323. Of the Vices and Temptations of evil Demons, p. 29. The Pagans Demonology greatly befriendeth Chriſtianity, p. 32. The Jews Doctrine of evil Demons, p. 30, 31. They are ſometimes in the Abyſs, p. 33.

Of Demoniacks, p. 286.

Of Demonolatry, p. 36, 288, 305. Of Church-demonolatry and the Ground of it, p. 49, 62.

Of the Den of the Magi, Pythagoras and the Sibylls, p. 84, 310, 328.

Of the Deſcent and Re-aſcent of Souls, p. 84. The Cauſes and Conſequences of their Deſcent, p. 86, 87.

Of Devotion, p. 400. Of devotional Idolatry, p. 405.

Of the Name Diabolus, p. 215. What Notions the ancient Writers have of the Devil, p. 29, 38.

Men ſhould not be ſcandaliz'd at the Diviſions of Chriſtians, p. 801.

Of Divination, vid. Magick.

Of Dominion and Property amongſt Men, p. 652. Of the Ground of God's Dominion and Sovereignty, p. 372, 641, 642.

Of Drunkenneſs, p. 177, 280, 672.

E.

When the Earth was created, p. 493.

Of an Egg in the Coſmogony, p. 531, 533.

Egypt a Fountain of Literature, p. 95. The Wiſdom thereof arcane, p. 77.

The Platoniſts Notion of Ἔιδωλον, p. 138.

Of Elias and his Zeal, p. 735.

Of the Eloquence that is in Holy Scripture, p. 621, 622.

The Elements ſuppos'd to have Souls, p. 113.

An Holy Popular Empire the deſign of Chriſtianity, p. 634, 635.

Of the End, vid. Final Cauſe.

Of the Name Ens, p. 345, 346, 354, 350.

Of a marvellous Equality of the Divine Perſons, p. 571, 573, 586. Of their inequality as to Honour and Worſhip, p. 586. And as to Glory, p. 589.

Of the Senſe of Equipollence, p. 627. Of the Eſſens, p. 94, 312.

Of the Divine vital Eſſence, which is vital Sanctity, p. 378, 865, 866. Of the Eſſence of God in the larger and ſtricter Notion and Comprehenſion, p. 865. Of a different conſideration of the Divine Eſſence, which the Scholaſtic Theology doth not acknowledge, p. 870. It cannot explicate, that ſeveral Perſons are of one ſingular Scholaſtic Eſſence, p. 860, 870. Nor that ſeveral Perſons are God, and yet there is but One God, p. 870. A Plurality of Divine Eſſences conſtituteth a Plurality of Gods, p. 869.

The Diſcipline of Ethicks natural, p. 175, 675.

The Evils of this terreſtrial Life according to the Pagan Theologers, p. 86, 87. Of our Evangeliſts, p. 1019.

Of an imaginary Preſence of Chriſt in the Euchariſt, p. 427. The Bread and Wine are Symbols of Equivalence, p. 629.

Of our Exile from Heaven. p. 506, 507.

Of the Example of the Old Teſtament Saints, p. 734.

An Expiation of Sin is in Chriſtianity, p. 810.

Of the Platoniſts Divine Eye, p. 75.

Mankind are born without their Eye-ſight, and ſo continue while in their Graceleſneſs and Wickedneſs, p. 244, 245. The Divine Knowledge is our Spiritual Eye-ſight, p. 395.

Ἐφ᾽ ᾧ, what it ſignifieth, p. 687.

F.

Of the Platonic Faith, p. 78. Of the Faith of Jews and Pagans, p. 698. Of the Faith of God's Believers, p. 721, 734, 742. Of the Law of Faith, p. 452, 718, 719, 770. Of the Life of Faith, p. 821. Of the Faithful and their Faithfulneſs, p. 275, 276, 725, 726, 821. Of Infidels as to Saving Faith, p. 825.

Of two oppoſite Families of Men, p. 250, 274, &c. Of the Angelical Family, p. 442, &c.

A Father defin'd, p. 181, 773. God is a Father in Nine Reſpects, yet none but the regenerate Family may ſay Our Father, p. 444, 580. The whole Scholaſtic Trinity ſuppos'd to be Our Father, p. 951.

Of the Stoicks Fate, p. 162. Of the Aſtrological Fate, p. 94, 95.

Of Feudal Law and Cuſtoms and of Fideles, p. 725, 726.

Of Fervour in Piety, p. 402, 403, 404, 418, 789, 822.

Of the Final Cauſe, and the Final Cauſe of the Creation, p. 514, 519. There can be no Final Cauſe of God, but all things are for him and to him as Religion and Godlineſs requireth, p. 517. How they are for and not for his Glory, p. 515, 525. Self is not the end of Man, p. 515, 524. Nor is a Syſtem of Selves the only ultimate end, p. 638, 640.

Of the Pagans Fire-Worſhip and their Fire-Theology, p. 112, 113, 115. Of Purgation by Fire, p. 90, 91.

Of Chriſt as the Firſt-born, p. 955. And as he is the Food of Life to us, p. 528, 983, 1010.

Of the meaning of Fleſh and Spirit, p. 420, 421, 528, 771. Of Sin in the Fleſh, p. 253.

To Men in their Graceleſneſs and Wickedneſs the matters of the Chriſtian Life ſeem fooliſhneſs, p. 245. Of the Sin of Forgetting God, p. 629.

Of the Form of God and Form of a Servant attributed to Chriſt, p. 876, 915, 916. Fornication conſider'd as a ſin againſt our own Body, p. 672. Of the Frænum of our Firſt Parents, p. 472.

Of Chriſt's Fulneſs, p. 868, 870, 896, 897, 940.

G.

Of Gad and Meni, p. 106.

The Generation of the Son of God is not the Scholaſtic Generation of an Abſtract Son, p. 847. The Scholaſtic Theology miſtaketh in that Binary of Generations, which it attributeth to him, p, 845, 919, 927. The account which the Fathers have given of the Generation and Nativity of an Abſtract Son, p. 848, 940. Our Saviour's Scriptural Generation is of ſuch Properties, as ſhew it to be a true and proper and natural Generation, p. 852. The Scholaſtic unſcriptural Generation is not true and proper, natural and agreeable to Scripture, p. 847, 856, 857, 920. It maketh the Son no Son, the Father no Father, p. 858. The incommunicable Perfection which his Paternity implieth, is deſtroy'd by it, p. 859. There can be no Production of a diſtinct Perſon in Divinis according to this Theology, p. 859, 860. Of that Similitude of Nature which conſtituteth a generated Son of God, p. 853. Whether the Son of God is ſuch only upon account of his Eternal Generation, p. (907.) His Generation and Exiſtence from Eternity cannot be prov'd from the Old Teſtament, p. 879. Nor from the New Teſtament, p. 880. A Diſcourſe againſt the Scholaſtic Eternal Generation, p. 889. Of the difference between Generation and Creation, p. 853, 900, 908. Of the Natural and Political Generation of a King, p. 856.

Of the Guardian Genii, p. 33, 36. Reaſons againſt them, p. 41, 42, &c.

Of the Jews Contempt of the Gentiles, p. 600. Of the Gentiles Σεϐόμενοι, p. 213.

Of the Scape-Goat, p. 23, 24.

The Fathers call the Saints Gods, p. 375, 376. Of the Exiſtence of God as notic'd by Nature, p. 657. Which is a Law of Religion, p. 682, 683. Of the innate Idea of God, p. 671. God is a Name of Honour and Nobilitation, p. 342. It denoteth an Imperial Eſtate, p. 197, 198, 337, 338. An Imperial rial Eſtate Creature-tranſcendent, p. 339. How it is a Proper Name, p. 344. The plenary Idea of God belongeth to the Science of Sanctity, p. 357. He is not duely notic'd without noticing the Sovereignty that he is, p. 366. We may have a true definitive Notion of God, p. 367. God was Lord and King from Eternity, whence the Ground of his Dominion and Sovereignty may be underſtood, p. 368, 372. Of his Dominion and Sovereignty, p. 372, 517, 641. The Pagan and Chriſtian Theology agree in attributing to governing Providence the Name of Lord and King, p. 193, 194. Theſe Theologies agree touching a Supreme Potentate and many Divine Attributes, p. 197. This great King and Potentate is reſembled by the Kingdom-eſtate of Secular Sovereign Princes, p. 199, 200. God is King and Monarch of the Univerſe in a limited Senſe, p. 208, 209. He is not ſubordinate to the common Good, p. 372, 517, 523, 642. God is of all Creature-tranſcendent Nobilitation and Perfection, whether it be of State or of Nature, of Degree or Kind, p. 373, 374. He is politically and of kind the holy Empire's Imperial Eſtate, p. 377. As to what he is of proper kind therefore he is The Sanctity Imperial, Vital and Imperial-perſonal, p. 378, 379, 380. God muſt be conſider'd as within the comprehenſion of Sanctity Imperial, p. 389, 390. He muſt be notic'd as of the God-kind, p. 391. Such Honour and Service is owing to him, which is proper to his degree, p. 399, 400, 402. Our Religion and Piety muſt be of his Kind and Quality, p. 406. God doth not demand Honour and Service from us meerly with reſpect to our Benefit, p. 388, 389. Of a Fanatic Notion that God is all things, p. 158. Of knowing God, p. 361, 362, 391.

Godlineſs (the Godily Man's kind of Virtue) is Sanctity of Virtue and of Tranſcendence Divine, p. 815. It is beyond all things, that are on this ſide Godlineſs, p. 817, 818. The Chriſtians good Life is their new Life, p. 821. A tranſcendent Care of the Soul and a tranſcendent Regard for God and his Service, p. 822. A tranſcendent Goodneſs and Meekneſs towards Men, p. 722, 822. It had a tranſcendent bad Entertainment in the World, p. 823. The Tranſcendence of the Chriſtians Virtue and Godlineſs appear'd in the Primitive Chriſtians Sufferings, p. 826. Chriſtians ſhould be intent upon Godlineſs, p. 813. The Good that Godlineſs is, p. 812.

Good definitively notic'd, p. 636, 637. The good Life and Practice, p. 645, 646. Bonum honeſtum denoteth a ſpecific Nature and is not of arbitrary Determination, p. 649, 650. Of the rule and meaſure of what is Good and Evil, p. 648, 649. Bonum honeſtum is that which is Righteouſneſs, p. 647. The common Good how far it is and is not the end, p. 638, 639, 641. The common Good twofold, p. 642.

Of Goodneſs communicative and of Well-doing and the holy kind of Goodneſs, p. 516, 518. Of a bad kind of Goodneſs attributed to God, p. 516. Goodneſs is operative, p. 522. Of the Pagans good Men, p. 761, 817.

The Goſpel what it ſignifieth, p. 993. Of the Goſpel-ſettlement, p. 769. Holy Ghoſt. See Holy Spirit.

Glory is the thing that God is, p. 589, 590. How his Glory is to be underſtood, p. 526, 793. What Glory we are to give to him, p. 591, 592. How the Glory of God is his and our End, p. 515, 525. Of the Hymn called Gloria Patri, p. 592. 593. His Holy Spirit is the Spirit of Glory, p. 535. Of the Glory that Chriſt had with him before the World, p. 880.

Of Clemens's Gnoſtick, p. 17. Of two ſorts of Gnoſticks, p. 46, 47. Of their Theology and ſupreme Deity, p. 136, 144, 236.

Grace defin'd, p. 711, 712. Why the Chriſtian Religion is the Religion of Saving Grace, p. 712, 718, 719. Of the Grace of Chriſt's Perſon, p. 939.

Of Greatneſs the notion and diſtribution thereof, p. 790, 791. Of the Greatneſs of God and the Aſcriptions thereof, p. 793, 794. Why the Myſtery of Godlineſs is called Great, p. 794. Of the Pride of the Greeks, p. 600.

H.

Of Hades, p. 457. Of two Scholaſtic Hands of God, the Son and Holy Spirit, p. 579. Wherein all Men ſhould place their Happineſs, p. 814.

How far the Heathen did and did not know God, p. 239, 240, 241. Of the Heathen State, p. 212. The deadlineſs thereof, p. 273, 274, 281. Of the Heathens Salvation, Ibid. and p. 737. The Heathen were Aliens from being God's Religioniſts, p. 223, 225. Of their atheous Ignorance, p. 243. Of their atheous Life, p. 246, 248. Of their Virtue and Well-doing, p. 272. Mankind are natively Heathen Religioniſts, p. 225. The Heathen World Satan's mundane Empire, p. 285. Several ſorts of Heatheniſm, p. 92.

Heaven when made, p. 436, 498. Of the Heaven of Beatitude and Immortality, p. 438, 439. Heaven a Temple reſembled by the Jewiſh Sanctuary, p. 440, 441. Heaven a City, p. 446, 447. Heaven our Primitive Home, p. 506, 507. Heaven and Earth Pagan Deities, p. 104. Heaven their Supreme Deity, p. 102, 147, 152. The felicity of Heaven, p. 978. Holineſs is an Heaveniſm of Mind and Life, p. 980.

Of the Hebrews and the Traduction of Learning from them, p. 12, 796. They make Traductions from the Pagans, p. 18, 19, 237.

Of Hecate and the Hecatine Circle, p. 92, 98, 133, 143.

Of the Hegemonicon of the World, p. 161.

Of the Heroes, p. 6.

Of an Heir, p. 761, 762.

Of Hell and the Situation of it, p. 504.

Of Heliogabalus's Deity, p. 109.

Of Hen or T'Agathon, p. 71, 73, 76, 134, 136, 148, 230.

Of Hereſies, p. 219. Of Heretical-pagan Deities, p. 221, 236.

Of Hieratici, p. 84. Of the Schools Hierarchies, p. 145.

Of this great Attribute of God that All is His (as Religion and Godlineſs requireth) p. 183. The various Illuſtrations of this Attribute, p. 183, 372.

Of Holy and Holineſs, vid. Sanctity.

Of the Honour and Service we owe unto God, and why he demandeth it, p. 388, 399, 405.

Chriſt (as being eſſentially the Son of David) is an Humane-divine Perſon, and the Humane Nature is his Eſſentiality, p. 836, 839, 922, 924, 925, 932. His Humane Nature is ſuppos'd, to be Deify'd by his Incarnation, p. 939. Yet it is deny'd to be a Suppoſitum and is made no Subſtance, p. 930, 931.

Humility is found in Paganiſm, p. 262, 263.

Of Hyle, p 29. Of Hypocriſie, p. 407, 408. Hypoſtaſis defin'd, p. 928, 929.

I.

Of S. James and S. Paul's ſeeming difference, p. 720, 721, 729.

Of the Platonic Ideas as ſuppos'd to be the Realities, p. 73, 140, 141.

Idolatry what it is and how diſtinguiſh'd, p. 339, 405. The proneneſs of Mankind to the Religion of Idolatry, and the inducements to it, p. 253, 254, 356, 357. The Idolatry of Jeroboam, p. 124. The Idolatry that is in Marianolatry, and Saint-worſhip, p. 57, 68, 69. Groſs Idolatry is againſt Man's Dignity, p. 122, 672.

The Jews Anti-Trinitarian Objections, p. 887. The Wickedneſs of the preſent Jews, p. 690, 700. Of their God, p. 361, 362, 364, 391, 392. Of their Book Jezirah, p. 13.

Of the Name Jehovah, p. 346, &c. How far Chriſt is Jehovah, p. 873.

Of Atheous Ignorance, p. 243. Ignorance and Vice how connex'd, p. 247. None can be innocently ignorant of what is the Law of Nature, p. 666, 668.

Images and Symbols of the Gods for what they were chiefly deſign'd, p. 119. How far the Heathen made them Gods, p. 120, 121. How their Image-worſhip violateth the Second Commandment, p. 123. Man the Image of God, p. 466.

Immortality how brought to Light by the Goſpel, p. 736.

A fond Immaterialiſm of the Pagan Theologers and the Rabbins, p. 87, 88, 598, 608.

Of the Immutability of God, p. 365, 366, 922, 926.

Of Imputing Righteouſneſs, p. 695, 696.

A Diſcourſe againſt the Scholaſtic Incarnation, p. 911. There are marvellous Incongruities in it, p. 898, 919, 927, 933. Like the Scholaſtic Trinity it is a Riddle of Philoſophy, p. 923. The true Incarnation was not an aſſuming the Humane Nature in the Scholaſtic Senſe, p. 851, 921. Of a monſtrous Scholaſtic Incarnation, whereby Deus eſt Aſinus, Diabolu[illegible]Hinibilis, p. 938.

Of Inceſt, p. 654, 667. Of Inchantments of Things and Perſons, part of the Pagans Pharmacy, p. 299, 300.

Infidelity is from Ungodlineſs, p. 814. Of the Infidelity of Hypocrites, p. 728.

Of the Platoniſts Theologizing by Inſpiration, p. 75.

Of the Inſtincts in Nature, p. 660, 661, 673.

Of the Platoniſts Firſt Intellect and Abſtract Intellects, p. 71, 73, 138, 139, 140, 141. Their Intellectual Form of Life, p. 79, 608. Of two Intellects in the Soul, p. 79, 139, 608. Of Intellectus agens, p. 361, 546, 547.

Of the due Intelligibleneſs of the Chriſtian Religion, and how far it is deſtroy'd by the Scholaſtic Theology, p. 803, 806.

Of Iſis, p. 102, 157, 158.

The Iſraelitical Theiſm involv'd a Faith of Chriſt, p. 732, 733.

Judaiſm was from the beginning of the World, p. 729.

Neither Jews nor Chriſtians acknowledge Jupiter to be God, p. 222, 226, 229. Of the Pagan Jupiter, p. 2, 102, 107, 108.

Goodneſs muſt not be devoid of Juſtice, p. 522, 523. Juſtice ſignifieth univerſal Righteouſneſs and jural Practice, p. 647, 651, 656. Whether Juſtice is for Society, p. 639.

Of Juſtifying and Juſtification, p. 719, 720. Of Juſtifying Sinners in the humble and noble way, p. 704, 705.

K.

Of the Name and Aſcriptions of King and Kingdom, p. 194, 195.

The Holy Ghoſt is not the King of a Kingdom, p. 548, 549, 577.

The Kingdom of God is the ſame with the City of God and denoteth the illuſtrious Properties thereof, p. 447, 448. As real it is the Summum Bonum, p. 449. Of the original Kingdom of God, and how it is differenc'd from his new Kingdom, p. 450. Of the Law of this original Kingdom, which ought to be counted the original Law, p. 450, 451, 452.

Of the new Kingdom of God and the various Acceptations of it, p. 779, 780. The Kingdom of Chriſtianity is rightly called The Kingdom of Heaven, yet the mundane Spirit hath prevailed in the Chriſtian Church, p. 782.

Old Iſrael was not the Kingdom of God, p. 611, 784. Our prime Duty is to become Citizens of the Kingdom of God, which ought to be taken with an holy Violence, p. 788, 789.

Of the Egyptian God Kneph, p. 134.

Of Knowing, κτ᾽ γνῶσιν, p. 242. Of Knowing God, p. 238, 239.

Of the excellency of the Knowledge of Chriſt, p. 801. God is repreſented as unknowable (as the Trinity is) who is only unknowable by the Sons of Carnality, p. 361, 362, 391. He is made unknowable by the Scholaſtic Theology, p. 803, 806. The Theology of the Godhead is Philoſophic-paganiz'd by Jews and Chriſtians, p. 360, 361. Knowledge is inſtitutive and conſtitutive, p. 343, 393. Knowledge difficult to attain, p. 860. Of the worth aud weight of it, p. 247, 803. It is Light and is in the Soul as the Eye in the Body, p. 243, 248.

The Knowledge of God belongeth to the Science of Sanctity, p, 357, 358. The Tranſcendence of that Learning and Knowledge which this Science is, p. 358, 359. God is in himſelf and to us a Divine kind of Knowledge, which is the Light of Life, p. 393, 398. In unholy Mankind there is a great ineptitude for knowing and judging of Things Divine, p. 398.

L.

Of Law or Obligation, p. 204, 650. The Law of Nature defin'd, p. 635, 656. It is of a larger and narrower Notion, p. 667. The Obligation of it is not meerly Politic and Prudential, p. 643, 644. That which is in its own Nature Righteous and Unrighteous muſt be antecedent to a made Law, p. 649. The Laws of Nature are of Self-obligation, p. 339, 649, 650, 665. They have the Sanction of Laws, p. 664, 665. The great certainty of the Law of Nature, p. 666. How it is written in the Heart, p. 664, 668. How the Law of Nature is notic'd, p. 663, 666, 672. The Maxims of it are Self-evident, p. 669. The Firſt Law of Nature is Subjection to the Law-giver, p. 643. The Law of Nature cannot be diſpens'd with, p. 654. Of the Eternal Law, p. 655. The Law of Nature is an univerſal Law, p. 655, 656. Of the Law of the World according to the Stoicks, p. 162. Of the great Laws of duely equal Love to our Neighbour and the like doing to others, p. 651, 661. The Decalogue is the Law of Nature, p. 678. The Law of Nature muſt be conſider'd as Civil-religious and as Spiritual-religious, p. 678, 679. How it hath a Legiſlation from God, p. 665.

Of the Original Law, p. 450, 451. Of the Law of Innocence, p. 469, 470.

Of the Moſaic Law, p. 408, 745. Of the Chriſtian Religion as it is a Law, p. 763, 765. The Moſaic Law muſt be conſider'd as it is no more than the Law-religioniſts Religion, and as it is the Chriſtian Religion initially introduc'd, p. 408, 745. In the former Notion it is a Civil-religious Law and the Settlement of the Holy Spiritual Law, p. 746, 748. As it is a Civil-religious Law it is a Covenant of Civil-religious Repentance and Remiſſion of Sins, and of Civil-religious Truth of Piety, p. 409, 411. As it is the Chriſtian Religion initially introduced, it is an Inſtitution of Spiritual-religious Righteouſneſs (the Righteouſneſs of the Saints of the Old Teſtament) and alſo a Prophetic and Typical Inſtitution to the Chriſtian Religion, p. 750, 752, 830. The Ceremonial Law was not chiefly inſtituted for remedying Idolatry, p. 750, 760.

Who they are that belong to the Law, p. 682, 683. Righteouſneſs and true Holineſs is not attainable by Nature and the Law, p. 688. Nor the State of Righteouſneſs, p. 451, 629, 694, 702, 747, 770. The Law is to its Religioniſts Law-form and Form of Law, p. 702. The diſpenſation of the Letter, p. 417, 542, 619, 682, 706, 745, 771. The Law is the Religion of Man's Unregeneracy, and of his Spiritual Servitude, p. 706, 771. How the Motions of Sin are by the Law, p. 689, 690.

Of Secular Learning, p. 359. The Apoſtles were without it, the Arts and Terms of it, p. 619, 620.

Of the Epheſian Letters, p. 299.

Of Humane Liberty of Will, p. 94, 95.

Of Lights in Churches, p. 431. Of an ancient rituality of Lights, p. 991. Chriſtians the Lights of the World, p. 821. Of the primigenial Light in the Moſaic Creation, p. 499, 500. Of the relative Creation of the Celeſtial Lights, p. 496, 497. Of the Affinity of Light with God, p. 590. Of Light and Darkneſs in the Scripture-Theology, p. 243, 244, 250, 378, 393, 395, 396, 783, 784. What our Saviour's Name The Light and The true Light importeth, p. 988.

Of the worth and weight of Life, p. 976, &c. Of our Saviour's Name The Life, p. 982, 983, &c. Of Life brought to Light, p. 736.

Of his Name The Logos, p. 961. It denoteth not an Abſtract Logos, p. 994. Why he is called by the Evangeliſt Logos rather than Filius, p. 1002. The Logos that was with God, was not an Abſtract Logos, p. 1004. Of the Platonic Logos, p. 965. Of the the Stoical Logos, p. Ibid. Of the Targumic Logos, p. 966. Of the Moſaic Logos, p. 967. Of the Logical Logos, p. 969. Of the uſual Scholaſtic Logos, p. 971. The Evangeliſt's Logos is The Word of Life, p. 982, 986. All in ſome ſort have good Life, p. 818. Of the Seat of Life, p. 485.

7

Of the Name Lord, p. 193, 194. God is Lord and Owner of all, p. 183, 184. The Holy Ghoſt is not the Honour-perſon of the Lord, but Chriſt is, p. 576, 872.

Of the Love that God is, p. 379, 864. The new Society-Love is peculiar to the new Law, p. 770. The Love-practice is the Societive, p. 653. Of the Pagans Love-deity, p. 111, 531. Of their Love of Boys, p. 177, 312.

Againſt Lukewarmneſs, p. 401, 402, 418.

M.

Of the Madneſs of unholy Mankind, p. 246.

Magick defin'd and diſtinguiſh'd into Goety and Theurgy, p. 79, 80. Into that of interiour and the more remote Dealing and Correſpondence, p. 301, 302. Chriſt and Chriſtians accus'd of Magick, p. 294. The Magick of the Jews and Muhammedans and that which is amongſt profeſſed Chriſtians, p. 307, 308. The Pagans high Eſteem of it, p. 295, 297, 300, 301. Of Natural Magick ſo accounted by the Pagans, p. 98, 154, 155. Of the Perſians, Indians, Egyptians and Chaldeans Magick, p. 81, 82, 295, 296, 297. In Paganiſm Magick was every where in Domination, p. 294. Of the Hail-magicians, Inchantments, Spells and Charms, p. 297, 298, 299, 300. The Pagans Religion was a Religion of Divination, p. 300, 301. Of their Divination by Signs, by familiar Spirits and other Methods, p. 301, 302, 303, 304. Of the Divination that was in their Oracles, p. 324, 325. Of their Perſonal Oracles, p. 320, 325, 328. Their Religion was Magick, p. 305, 306. The Platoniſts Supreme Deity was Magical, p. 237. Of the Pagans that were Magical Saintiſts, of which number M. Antoninus was one, p. 309, 310.

Of the Marianolatriſts Mother of God, p. 63, 64. Minerva her Parallel, p. 67.

The Martyrs and Saints departed were made to ſucceed the Pagans tutelar Spirits, p. 48, 49.

Of the Marriage of Brother and Siſter, Polygamy and Divorce, p. 654.

Of the Materiarii, p 498.

Of our Saviour's Manifeſtation when it was, p. 918, 1005.

Of his Miſſive Oeconomy, p. 1000.

His Meſſias-ſhip is incompetible to the Second Perſon of the Scholaſtic Trinity, p. 887, 898.

In great variety of Notion he is Mediator, p. 892, 893.

Of Melchizedek's Order of Prieſthood, p. 881,

Of Chriſtian Meekneſs and Goodneſs, p. 772, 822.

Of the Word Merachepheth, p. 531, 533.

Merit diſtinguiſh'd and explain'd, p. 704.

Of Merodach, p. 106.

Of Mendes and Mendeſians, p. 28. It is not enough to live like Men, p. 815, 821.

The Meſſiah in his primary Notion is a King, p. 889.

Of Micah and his Teraphim, p. 99.

Of the Flower of the Mind, p. 79.

Of Miraculous Magical doings in Paganiſm and by Oracles, p. 322, 323.

Of Miracles that introduc'd Church-Demonolatry, p. 59, 60, 62, &c. Of Miracles by Reliques and Saints departed, p. 50, 54, 54. Of the Miracles of S. Thecla, p. 60. Of Miracles by Images, p. 129.

Of Mithras and his Sacra and the Triplicate Mithras, p. 96, 133, 135, 403.

Reaſon for Modeſty and Moderation, p. 801.

Of Monadiſts, Dyadiſts, Triadiſts, p. 153.

How far God is Monarch of the Univerſe, p. 208, 209. Of the Scholaſtic Monarchy, p. 572.

Of Morality, p. 816. The great Rules of Morality Self-evident, p. 669. Of civil Moralities, p. 820. Of Moral Impotency, p. 693.

Fond Conceits of Moſes, p. 12, 16, 69. Whence he had his Learning, p. 17.

Of the Muhammedans and their God, p. 391, 393, 693.

Of the Mundus Moſaicus, p. 497.

Of the Mundane Spirit in the Church, p. 782.

Of Church Muſick, p. 431.

What a Mount ſignifieth, with an account of what Virtue and Righteouſneſs the Sermon on the Mount requireth, p. 680, 828, 832.

Of the Philoſophic-pagans Theology Myſtic-metaphyſical, p. 75, 234. Myſteries of the Egyptian Theology, p. 77. Of the Platonic Myſticks, p. 235. Of the Myſticks in the Church, p. 83, 84. Of the Heathens Popular-religious Myſteries, p. 794, 795.

Of Chriſtianity as it is a Myſtery, and what that Name implieth, p. 798, 799. It is an Holy-popular kind of Myſtery, p. 796. Of a mean outſide, p. 800. Abſtruſe and Obſcure yet a Science, p. 801, 803.

Of the Stone Mnizurin, p. 28.

N.

Of the Nakedneſs of our Firſt Parents, p. 469, 473.

Of Name what it ſignifieth, p. 383, 384.

Of the Native State of Mankind, p. 214.

Of Nature what it ſignifieth, p. 656, 673, 681, 682, 776, 777.

Nature the Cure of Diſeaſes, p. 813.

Of God as denominated Nature, p. 151.

Of a Theological State of Nature, p. 190.

Generable corruptible Nature diſparag'd, p. 74.

The Life of Grace is a Nature, p. 775, 776.

It is a Divine good Nature, p. 777.

Of a live Sin-Nature in Man, p. 251.

Of common good Nature, p. 777, 779, 817, 818, 823.

Of Natural Affection, p. 660, 271.

Degrees of Neceſſity, p. 977. Neceſſity of Virtue is not meerly from common good, p. 640.

Of Necromancy, p. 302.

Of Nemeſis, p. 665.

Of Newneſs as an Attribute of the Chriſtian Religion, p. 768, 774.

Of a New God, p. 910. Of the New Creation, p. 951, 952, 958, 1021, 1027.

Of the New Kingdom of God, p. 785. Of the New Life, p. 821. Of the Righteouſneſs of the New Man, p. 820, 828. Of the New Eye, p. 395. Of the New Covenant and Inſtitution, p. 772, 785, 828, 830, 832. Of New Duties, p. 833. Of the New Creatures, p. 1029. The New Things only ought to take place, p. 765, 768, 774, 1028.

Chriſt the Deity of the New Teſtament, p. 953.

Of Nibchaz and Nergal, p. 107.

Of the Inſtitution of Noah and of his Deluge, p. 739, 741.

Of Eſtates of Honour and Nobilitation, p. 201. Of the Creature-tranſcendent Nobilitation, p. 343, 373.

Of the Platonic Noes, p. 138.

Of the Number kind of Theology, p. 75, 76, 231.

O.

Of Ob in Scripture, p. 302.

No Oblations or Sacrifices are made to the Holy Ghoſt, p. 587, 588.

The Obligation of Laws is not only from the Sanction of them, p. 643, 644.

Of Occupancy, p. 652.

Of Chriſt's Offices, p. 890.

Of Ophion and Ophioneus, p. 27, 31, 292, 454.

Opinion what it is, p. 141.

Of the Pagans Oracles, p. 316. Of ſeveral ſorts of them, p. 320. Of their Ceſſation, p. 328. Of the Sibylline Oracles, p. 328, 331. Of the Chalday Oracles, p. 83, 96. The Oracle the Eſſential part of a Temple, p. 427.

Of Original Sin in ſome ſignifications of it, p. 240. The Article explain'd, p. 467, 468, 509, 510, 511, 684, 688.

Of Orders in the Pagans Univerſe of Rationals, p. 5, 6, 7. Order in their and the Pagano-Chriſtians Religious Worſhip, p. 60, 69.

Order is in Virtue, Vices are inordinate, p. 400, 645, 650, 672.

Of the Origin of the Soul, p. 505, 510, 512.

Of Oromaſdes and Arimanius, p. 133, 135.

Orpheus's mode of Theologizing, p. 75, 112.

Of an Owner or Proprietor, p. 183, 184.

The INDEX.

P.

At what a rate unreform'd Chriſtendom Paganizeth, p. 254, 255. And reform'd Chriſtendom alſo, p. 813.
Of the God Pan, p. 966.
The Holy Ghoſt the Paraclet, p. 539.
Of Paradiſe, p. 441, 456, 458. Of the Paradiſaical Oeconomy, p. 463, 469.
Of that Pardon of Sin wherewith the Law-religioniſts content themſelves, p. 701, 702.
Of Chriſt's Paſſion how great it was and why, p. 943. How greatly it is deſtroy'd by the Scholaſtic Incarnation, p. 934, 935, 937.
Of the Philoſophers Patience, the Stoicks Patience and Paſſive Obedience, p. 171, 172, 264. The Saints departed are ſuppos'd to be our Patron-ſuperiorities. p. 48, 49.
Of the Peace made by Chriſt, p. 787, 893. Peace connex'd with Life, p. 979.
Of the Perichoreſis of Divine Perſons, p. 870. And of two Natures in Chriſt, p. 926.
Of Pelagius, p. 252, 611, 635, 685, 693.
Of the Notion of a Perſon, p. 929, 1063.
Of the Perſian Magi and their Learning, p. 82, 83, 95.
Of Perfection, p. 693. The Chriſtians way of good Practice the Perfect way, p 811, 829. How the Law is Perfect, p. 751. Perfect the ſame with Upright, p. 466.
Of the Perſecution of God's People in the Old Teſtament-times, p. 735, 736. Of the Primitive Chriſtians, p. 333.
Of Piety, p. 400. The Truth of it, p. 406. The Truth of it according to the Religion of Soul-intereſts, p. 408. The true and genuin kind of Piety, p. 412, 414, 418, &c.
Of Polygamy, p. 735.
Of the Polyonymy of one God, p. 159, 160.
A meerly Politic and prudential Inſtitution of Piety and Morality not Legitimate, p. 639.
Of the Pope's Magnificence, p. 374. Of extravagant Church-pomp, p. 434, 435.
Of the various ſignification of Populus, p. 598. A diſtribution of Things and Perſons into Popular and Philoſophical, p. 595. Of the common People, p. 599. They were the firſt that entertain'd Chriſtianity, p. 602, 603. Their Good is the great Good, and if they are Holy, they are truly Noble, p. 603, 604. The Holy Scriptures are Popular in a large Senſe, p. 604. They are in all reſpects Popular, p. 613. The Popular formal way of ſpeaking, p. 631.
In the Virtuous there is ſomething pure, p. 650. Of the Pagans regard for Purity, p. 258, 259. And for Purgation of the Soul, p. 90, 91. Of the Jews Purgatory, p. 669.
Of Puniſhment which is Subjection to the courſe of Nature as diſtinct from that which is Subjecton to courſe of Law, p. 513.
The diſtribution of Philoſophy, p. 2. The deſcription of a Philoſopher, p. 73, 141, 596, 597. Of the Philoſophers addictedneſs to the Heathen Religion, p. 255. Whether all the Agenda of Chriſtianity are ſuitable to their Reaſon, p. 267.
Of the Philoſophic-pagan Theology, p. 70, 72. Inſtances of criminal Philoſophic-paganizing, p. 4, 16, 17, 26, 29, 34, 38, 39, 48, 74, 87, 148, 151, 280.
Of Philo, p. 4, 10, 19, 38, 93, 96, 105, 114, 146, 156, 176, 277, 279, 281, 346, 350, 364, 395, 405, 437, 453, 456, 516, 517, 634, &c.
Of the Religion of Holy Places, p. 431, 432.
Of Plato and his Parmenides, p. 76. Of his Divine Similitude, p. 265. Of his Amours, p. 178. Of his Ignorance of what is Righteouſneſs, p. 266. Himſelf and his Followers great admirers of the Oracles, p. 319. His Senſe touching evil Demons, p. 26. And touching the Cauſe of the Univerſe, p. 515, 516. Of an extravagant Eſteem of him, p. 18. Stories of his Salvation, p. 283. He was in good earneſt a Pagan Religioniſt, p. 93, 147. But in conſort with Pythagoras is ſuppos'd to have deriv'd his Wiſdom from the Jews, p. 10, 19. Whence they had their Theology, p. 75, 83, 85. The origin of the Platoniſts Theologizing, p. 71. Their various modes of Theologizing, p. 75. Platonic Language not eaſily underſtood, p. 74.
Of a Placable Providence, p. 410. Of governing Parental Providence, p. 180, 182. Of a juſt governing Providence, p. 664, 667.
Of Πνεῦμα & Πνευματικὸς, p, 245, 421.
Of Prædeſtination as the Object of it is real and perſonal, p. 312, 313. How much of perſonal Prædeſtination ſtrictly ſo called is certain, p. 714, 715. Of a ſtrange Prædeſtination of Chriſt, p. 941.
Of Prayers of Imprecation, p. 831.
Of Præ-exiſtence rightly repreſented, p. 512.
Of the Preſidentiary Spirits according to the Pagans, p. 8, 9, 35. According to the Jews, p. 37. According to ſome Chriſtian Theologers, p. 37, 38.
Of the Pride of the Philoſophic Pagans, p. 169, 171, 261.
Of Chriſt's Prieſtly Office and of his being a Prieſt to himſelf, p. 890, 893, 887, 894, 898.
Of the productive Proceſſion of the Holy Ghoſt, p. 555, 562.
Our Saviour was ſent (and came down) from Heaven as a Prophet, p. 1005, 1007. The Saints in the ancient times of the Old Teſtament were Prophets, p. 731. Who the Prophets were, p. 304, 618. The ancient Prophecies prove the Truth of Chriſtianity, p. 456, 753. The ancient Prophecies of Chriſt are complicated with Types, p. 754.

R.

Of ſpeaking in the Raiſed Senſe, p. 631, 632.
There is ſomething better than Reaſon, p. 318. Of right Reaſon, p. 394. Of right Reaſon as the ſuppoſed meaſure of Good and Evil, p. 648, 655. How it is Law, p. 664. What is right Reaſon in Morality, p. 667. They that live according to Reaſon, are ſaid to be Chriſtians, p. 282. The Reaſonableneſs and Congruity of the Chriſtian Religion is ſpoiled in the Scholaſtic Theology, p. 806.
Notices of Regeneration, p. 772. It compriſeth a Regeneration of State and of Nature, both the Fact of Man and the Grace of God, p. 773, 774. The method of Chriſtianity in bringing Men to good Life is by renewing their Souls into it, p. 775. It deſigneth to change Nature, p. 775, 1031. Two oppoſite Families of Men and Religioniſts, thoſe that are born after the Fleſh and thoſe that are born of the Spirit, p. 250, 417. The Divine Family is originated by Regeneration, p. 390. The genuin kind of Virtue is that of the Regenerate, p. 414. Regeneration is a Recovery and Reſtauration, p. 508. S. Paul, Rom. 7. doth not ſpeak of the Regenerate Man, p. 707. The Tranſcendence of a Regenerate State, p. 820. Our Reformation was a dutiful Ἀνανέωσις, renewing our ſelves, p. 776.
Of Reigning, p. 194.
Religion conſider'd as an Inſtinct and as an Inſtitution, p. 340. It is the ſame with Sanctity, p. 358. Wherein Men ſhould place their Religion, p. 814. Religious Worſhip muſt be the Spiritual-religious, p. 419, 420.
Of Reliques and their Worſhip, p. 49, 132.
Remarks upon the Platonic T'Agathon, p. 230.
Of Remphan and Rimmon, p. 106.
Of abſolute Reprobation, p. 162, 189, 526.
Of Reverence for Churches and the Religion of Holy Places, p. 432, 433.
Of Rewards and Puniſhments in this and another Life, p. 664, 665, 666, 697, 698.
The Righteous deſcrib'd and confronted to the wicked, p. 274. The Law-religioniſts cannot define, who are the Righteous and the Wicked, p. 699. Of Righteouſneſs of Life and Practice, p. 647, 648, 651. Of Righteouſneſs and true Holineſs (the Righteouſneſs of the Kingdom of God) p. 415. Of terrene, carnal and mundane Righteouſneſs, and a ſhadow of Righteouſneſs, p. 413, 688, 812. Of the Righteouſneſs of the Scribes and Phariſees, p. 415, 829. In Chriſtianity is the perfect rule of Righteouſneſs, p. 810.
Righteouſneſs is Honour, p. 694. Of Righteouſneſs as it is the ſame with Salvation, p. 695. Of the State of Righteouſneſs (the Righteouſneſs of Juſtification) p. 694, 695, 701. Of a creative making Sinners the Righteous, p. 696. Of the Law-religioniſts way of attaining Righteouſneſs with God, p. 697.

The

The INDEX.

The New Settlement was made by Chriſt's Reſurrection, p. 720.

S.

Of the Patriarchs Sabbatizing, p. 730, 731.

Of the Divine Inſtitution of Sacrifice, p. 737, 738. Of Humane Sacrifices, p. 293, 326.

Of the Philoſophic methods for the Salvation of the Soul, p. 85, 90, 91, 93. There is but one way to Salvation, p. 787.

Of the Samaritans, p. 692.

Of the Samothracian Deities, p. 795, 796.

Of the Saints departed, vid. Church-Demonolatry.

The Notion of Sanctity or Holineſs, p. 375. 612. Of the Sanctity Imperial that God is, p. 378. Of the Sanctity Vital, p. 379. Of the Sanctity Imperial Perſonal, p. 380. His Sanctity Imperial-perſonal explain'd, p. 384, &c. Of Sanctity of Purity and Sanctity of Dignity, p. 382. God muſt be contemplated as within the comprehenſion of Sanctity Imperial, p. 390. Of Sanctus Sanctorum, p. 385. Of the Sanctum Sanctorum, p. 427.

The Chriſtian Religion is an Inſtitution of Sanctification as well as of Sanctity, p. 786. The Holy Spirit may be called our Sanctifier, p. 543. Of the Science of Sanctity and the Tranſcendence thereof, p. 357, 358.

Of Satan and his Kingdom, p. 215, 285. How many ways Mankind are ſubjected to his Kingdom, p. 286, 287, 289.

Of Satisfactions for Sin, p. 700, 702.

Of Saturn, p. 106, 108, 225. How honourary it is to be a Saviour, p. 891, 892. Whether Chriſt was a Servant to his Father, p. 841.

Of Sehirim, p. 28, 31, 125.

Of Self-denial, p. 822.

Of inordinate Self-love, p. 251, 273.

Of Serpents and their Worſhip, p. 291. Their remarkable Properties, p. 475. The Serpent conſider'd as that eminent Species of ſubtiliſt, p. 479, &c. Of the Serpent that tempted our firſt Parents, p. 479, 480. Of the Doom of the Serpent, p. 482. Of the Seed of the Serpent, p. 488. Of the fiery flying Serpent, p. 477, 481. Of the Seed that is in the Regenerate, p. 854.

Servitude defin'd and deſcrib'd, p. 191, 192, 418. Of Servitude to Sin, p. 250, 252, 419, 689, 707, 709. Of the Religion of our Servitude, p. 707. Of the Servile Religioniſts, p. 418, 419, 706, 707. Of Servile Fear, p. 419, 707, 710. The Pagans Seventh Day no Traduction from the Hebrews, p. 14, 15.

Of the Sibylls, p. 328.

Simplicius deſtroyeth the Platonic Triad, p. 272. Of the Simplicity of God, p. 364. Of the Pythagoric Silence, p. 77. By Silence T'Agathon muſt be worſhipped, p. 235. This the Jews applaud, p. 362. Of the Valentinians Sige, p. 145.

Sin the greateſt Evil, p. 642. God's Children will not Sin upon any terms, p. 725, 821. Of one that thought there was no ſuch thing as Sin, p. 177. The whole of Virtue and Religion is not to Sin, p. 812. The Servant of the Lord a Title of Honour, p. 589.

Of the Sincere, p. 275. Of the Societive Diſpoſition and Practice, p. 164, 271, 652, 661.

Of the Sophiſts and Vitaliſts, p. 608.

Of what worth and weight the Soul is of, p. 509. The Souls of Men are in a lapſed Condition, p. 787. They were not created without Grace, nor out of the State of Grace, p. 186, 502, 508. Of the Souls Liberation and Reduction, p. 91, 92. The Univerſe of Minds and Souls produc'd in the original Creation, p. 437. Their origin whence deriv'd, p. 505. A living Soul what, p. 459. The univerſal mundane Soul a Fundamental in Paganiſm, p. 147. This the Supreme Deity of the Pagans Religion and Laws, p. 148, 149. Chriſtian Writers Symbolize with the Pagan touching the mundane Soul. p. 150, 151, 356. There are not two Souls of the World, p. 134, 154. Of the Science of the Soul of Chriſt, p. 941.

Of Symbolical Deities, p. 119. Of the Symbolical Idolatry of Chriſtendom, p. 125, 126, 130. 131.

A Prayer to the Sun, p. 93. The Platoniſts pray'd peculiarly to the Sun, p. 98. Of Sun-leſs Day-light, p. 499, 500. The Hegemonicon of the World was ſuppos'd to be in the Sun, p. 161. Of the Sun as a Magical Deity, p. 97, 133. Of what eminency his Deity was, p. 108, 110, 135.

The Scripture is of kind the Holy-popular Book (the Book of the Church or Holy People) as being the Book of Religion, of the Chriſtian Religion, the Book of the Law, and the Book of Life, accommodate to the Univerſality of God's People, p. 595, 604, 607, 609, 622, 624. Agreeably whereto the Terms of it ought to be underſtood, p. 621, 622. Which inferreth, that the genuin Trinitarians muſt not be the Scholaſtic, but the Holy Popular Trinitarians, p. 796, 797.

Of Sheſhack, p. 106. Of the Egyptian Sphinges, p. 77.

The Holy Spirit is of difficult Contemplation, p. 527. Of the various ſignification of Spirit and of the Spirit of God, p. 527, 531. How far the Holy Spirit is the Schecinah, p. 534, 537. A definitive Notion of the Holy Spirit, p. 535, 563. The Holy Spirit is confounded with the Spirit of the World, p. 151, 536. Of the Holy Spirit's Perſonality, p. 539. Of his Perſonating, p. 538, 539. The Holy Spirit is the Supereminent Good to us, p. 545. He is no Political kind of Perſon, p. 546. Is an unoriginated Eſſentiality of God Imperial, 555, 562. Of the Sin againſt the Holy Ghoſt, p. 567, 568. Of multifarious extravagant Deifyings of the Holy Spirit, p. 569. He is not Zeus Pater, p. 580, 581. He is not the Imperial Eſtate of a Religion or God-ſervice, p. 588. Of the Religious Worſhip that is and is not competible to the Holy Ghoſt, p. 583, 586, 594. Of the Seat of the Holy Spirit, p. 577. Our Saviour is called that Spirit, p. 576.

Of the Stoicks Polytheiſm, p. 160, 161. Of their Inſtitution of Virtue, p. 163.

Of Subſiſtence and a Suppoſitum, p. 928.

Of the Philoſophic Pagans Swearing, p. 178. Of ſtanding upon Swords, p. 28. Of the Flaming Sword at the Eaſt of Eden, p. 471.

T.

Of Tartak, p. 107. Of Tartarus, p. 217.

Of Teleſms and Teraphim, p. 99, 316. Of Teletæ, p. 85.

A Temple defin'd, p. 424. Of the Throne of God, p. 427. No mundane Temple in Chriſtianity, p. 424. Temples may be without Images, p. 428. What the Chriſtian Apologiſts meant by denying, that they had any Temples or Altars, p. 428. Mundane Temple-religion is the Soul of Popery, p. 427, 428. The Church is a Temple, p. 567. S. Auſtin miſtaketh in his Inference from thence, p. 588.

Τεταγμένος, p. 717. Of a Teſtament, p. 761, 763. The Old Teſtament of a different Nature from the New, p. 749, 750. The Old Teſtament enormouſly miſinterpreted, p. 968.

Of Tutelar Spirits or Patron-Ghoſts, p. 33, 37.

Of Types in Paradiſe and the Moſaic Creation, p. 451, 501. Types look backward and forward, p. 510. Various ſorts of Types in the Moſaic Inſtitution, p. 754, 755, &c.

Of the Platonic Theamatiſts, p. 78.

Of Theiſm of Religion and Condition, p. 217, 218.

Of the Firſt Theory in Theology, p. 1. Of the genuin Theology, p. 358, 359. Of the Scholaſtic Theology touching the Godhead and certain Propoſitions of that Theology, p. 361, 366. A Character of this Theology, p. 634, 797. The Notions of it are Unpopular and Unholy; for all Holy Things are the Popular, p. 613. It diſtorteth the Scriptures from a Popular-religious to a School-philoſophic Senſe, p. 622, 634, 881, 974. It ſpoileth the due Intelligibleneſs of the Chriſtian Religion, p. 803, 805, 807. No Scholaſtic Learning is in the Holy Scriptures, p. 615, 619, 620.

Of the Pagans Theurgy, p. 80. 81. Of the Pontificians Theurgy, p. 130.

Of the Tranſmigration of Souls, p. 19, 88.

Of Tranſubſtantiation, p. 806.

Of the Tree of Knowledge of Good and Evil, p. 469.

Of the Triad Zoroaſtrian, Platonic, Egyptian, p. 18, 83, 133, 134.

The Chriſtian Theology is the Science of the Chriſtian Trinity, p. 805. Which therefore is a Popular-religious Myſtery, not a myſterious Riddle of School-philoſophy, as the Scholaſtic Trinity is, p. 797, 860, 888, 922, 948, 1037, (907.) So our Idea of the Trinity is as intelligible as the Chriſtian Faith, p. 1037. Is of Kind and Quality Chriſtian, agreeable to the New Teſtament and the Underſtanding of Holy People, p. 1037, 1062. Is agreeable to the Nature of Things and the certain Maxims of Humane Sciences, p. 1063, 1064. It claſheth not with the Scriptural Unity of God, but combineth the main Article of Judaiſm with the main Article of Chriſtianity, p. 1039. It is no more than God Imperial or God as an Imperial Eſtate in his new Kingdom, p. 1047, 1048. It is a Golden Mean between two Extremes, p. 1060. It ſubſerveth the Intereſts of Chriſtianity, p. 1065. Our Idea of the Trinity ſummarily repreſented, p. 865, 867, 1036, 1037. The Trinity is not notic'd in the Old Teſtament, nor by natural Light, p. 948, 951.

Of the great Excellency of Truth, p. 802, 808. Of Eternal Truths, p. 655 Of the Truth of God which the Pagans chang'd, p. 118.

U.

Of Vago-Theiſts, p. 392. Againſt Vain-Glory, p. 262.

The Incorporeal Subſtance is the Vital, p. 528. The Chriſtian Religion is The Vital, and Regenerate Chriſtians are the Holy Vitaliſts (the Holy Vital Religioniſts) p. 417, 541, 542, 607, 608.

Some ſort of Virtue and Religion is in Unregenerate Mankind, p. 269, 684.

The Chriſtians Virtue is Divine, p. 816. The difference between the Heathen Virtue and the Chriſtian, p. 412, 413, 688, 689, 826, 829, 830. How our Saviour's Inſtitution of Virtue is higher than that of the Moſaic Law, p. 830, 831. The genuin kind of Virtue and Piety deſcrib'd, p. 414, 419.

Virtue defin'd, p. 259, 412, 645. Of the Philoſophic-pagan Virtue, p. 260, 261, 816. Pride a grand Ingredient of it and their temper of Mind Gigantic, p. 260. Of the Platoniſts and Ariſtotle's Divine Virtue, p. 265, 266. Whether all Chriſtian Virtues and Duties were taught by the Philoſophers, p. 267. Virtue Self-amiable, p. 639. It is the Rule and Meaſure of endeavouring the Publick Good, p. 640. It is not a meer Subſervient to pleaſure, nor is it to be deriv'd meerly from neceſſity of Publick Good, p. 640, 641. Of the Utility wherein Virtue conſiſteth, p. 646.

Ulyſſes's choice of a private Life, p. 34. Of the Uncleanneſs of Paganiſm and of the Philoſophic Pagans, p. 177, 256.

Of Unexactneſs in Holy Scripture, p. 624. Ungodlineſs the Adverſary to Chriſtianity, p. 814.

An Unite ſuppoſed to be the Principle, p. 71, 76.

Ipſum Unum, p. 71, 73, 134, 231.

Of the Unity and Undividedneſs that is in the Univerſe according to the Pagans, p. 2, 3, 4, 5, 9, 132, 154, &c.

Of the Scriptural Unity of God, which is The Mono-Theiſm of God the Father, viz. That he is the One Perſon of the Almighty God beſides whom there is no other, p. 871, 883, 1040, 1043, 1049. No Trinity ought to be admitted, which more or leſs deſtroyeth the Scriptural Unity of God, p. 1043, 1044. Our Chriſtian Trinity is nothing more than The One God in reſpect of what he is in the Unity and Comprehenſion of his Eſſence and Sovereignty, p. 1046, 1048, 1053. Our Idea of the Trinity ſheweth ſuch an Unity of Trinity, as the Scholaſtic Theology cannot ſhew, p. 1060, 1061. The multitude of Pagan Deities reduc'd to one, p. 159.

Of the Unknown God at Athens, p. 225.

What Upright ſignifieth, p. 466.

W.

The Holy Angels called The Watchers, p. 39.

War the Father of all things according to Heraclitus, p. 86.

Wiſdom notic'd, p. 615, 616. Of being Wiſe in the main, p. 394. Of Wiſdom celebrated in the Book of Proverbs, p. 878.

Of forming a Rib into a Woman, p. 463.

The Origin of Women according to Plato, p. 85.

Womaniſh tenderneſs aſcrib'd to the Bleſſed Virgin, p. 102, 103.

The Woman and her Seed explain'd, p. 488, 489.

The matters of the Chriſtian Religion are Wonderful, p. 807.

What thoſe Idle Words are, of which we muſt give account, p. 629.

Works and the Works of the Law explain'd, p. 703.

Of the good Works of the Gentiles, p. 268, &c.

Of the Law of Works, p, 452, 770.

What the World ſignifieth, p. 823.

Of the Syſtem of the viſible World as repreſented in Scripture, p. 496. 617. Three Worlds according to the Hebrews, p. 439. Of the World as Sinful, p. 252. Of the Rudiments of the World, p. 430. How far Chriſtians renounce the World, p. 434, 435.

According to the Pagans the World is a God and a World of Gods, p. 71, 74. It is their Supreme God, yet according to a certain ſtating of things it is ſometimes called the Firſt, ſometimes the Second, and ſometimes the Third God, p. 155.

Of the Platoniſts Intelligible World, p. 74.

Of the Pagans Sovereign and Subordinate Worſhip, p. 7, 60, 69.

Of the Worſhip of T'Agathon, p. 235.

The main Body of the Duties of Religious Honour and Worſhip, p. 400, 586, 587. Of our Saviour's Rule of Religious Worſhip, p. 421, 422. Of our Sovereign Soul-honour and Worſhip, p. 402.

Of Duty to the Whole, p. 164, 230, 334.

Z.

Of the Ancient and Modern Zabii, p. 100. Their anomalous Rites, p. 331.

Of Zaratus, p. 14, 71, 135.

Of Zeal and Diligence, p. 822.

Of Zeus, p. 181, 228. Zeus the mundane Soul ſuppoſed by ſome to be the Son of God, by others the Holy Spirit, p. 82, 149, 150. The Zeus of Aratus, p. 181, 226. 227, 229.

Of Zoroaſter and his Antiquity, p. 83. His Theology, p. 83, 132. Of his Deity, p. 292, 294, 298, 305. He invented T'Agathon, p. 135. Of his Kebla, p. 431.

MVSEVM
BRITAN
NICVM

The END.